RAPE: THE ROAD TO RECOVERY

Medical treatment difficult first step for rape victims

BY RUTHANN HOGUE
STATE PRESS

No one expects to get raped, but it will happen to one in four adult women at some point in their lives.

For at least 23 ASU women, it happened last year.

Mary Melendez is one of several nurses at Tempe St. Luke's Hospital's emergency room who provide care for rape victims immediately after an assault. About 10 women are treated at the hospital each month for rape.

"Usually when you first come in, you do need to stop and take some time with the person," Melendez said. "They are traumatized and you need to listen and let them tell you in their own words what occurred."

Agreeing to be medically examined after a rape is often the first step in what can be a long, hard road to recovery.

"I tell them, 'We're trying to help you in prosecuting the assailant,'" Melendez said. "It is intrusive, and we as women who deal with them, we think, 'You poor thing.'"

Women who have been raped are usually escorted to the emergency room by police officers. They are examined in a private room. One nurse follows the procedure through from start to finish — not only is this required by law, but it makes the one- to two-hour process less traumatic for the woman.

"That way, you're not having to repeat your story," Melendez said.

A doctor uses a speculum — a stainless-steel instrument gynecologists use to open the vagina — to complete a pelvic exam. The victim is also checked for any other injuries.

After that, a nurse uses a standard rape kit to collect evidence. The nurse uses a paper napkin to collect debris such as grass or dirt which might be on a woman's body or clothes. A comb is used to collect pubic hairs. A variety of swabs and aspirators collect rectal, oral and vaginal samples of saliva, blood and semen. The woman's underwear is placed in a plastic bag.

ed directly into the vagina. An HIV test can be done at the hospital, or later at a local clinic.

The rest of the time is taken up by police detectives who ask questions during the exam.

"It's a real hard job when you're working with them," Melendez said.

Not all women who have been raped react the same when they arrive at the hospital.

"It varies," Melendez said. "Sometimes you see someone who is out of control, hysterical. Sometimes they are at the other extreme — quiet, not verbalizing anything. You really need to get them talking. They are in their own little world, they are so traumatized sometimes."

Although all rape cases are difficult to deal with, Melendez recalls one woman who was particularly brutalized.

"They actually used a knife in her vagina. It just brings to mind how women are victims to such horrendous crimes," Melendez said. "That was really horrible to deal with because not only was she traumatized from the rape, but she had to recuperate physically, as well."

All women are advised to seek follow-up care through their gynecologist. They are also encouraged to consider attending counseling sessions through the Center Against Sexual Abuse. The hope is that women will eventually be able to heal physically and emotionally and get on with their lives.

Safety Tips:

- Walk in lighted areas.
- When in doubt, follow your intuition and act immediately.
- Walk with confidence and poise.
- Have your keys ready and drive away immediately after getting into your car.
- Realize that it is easier to let your guard down in your own home and respect your residence hall room as your home. That means being careful about who you invite inside.
- If you arrive on campus early in the day but don't anticipate leaving until after dark, re-position your car sometime during the day to a location near your last class.
- Use the Safety Escort Service.
- Use an emergency phone.
- Be aware of your surroundings.
- Practice saying "no."
- Never leave a friend alone with someone she barely knows.
- Be careful who you drink with.

Trauma of assault tries best of friends

BY RUTHANN HOGUE

It's easy to give advice to a friend who has lost a boyfriend, failed an important test or had a bad hair day.

But there are some things that even the best of friends may not be prepared to deal with. Just ask "Karen."

One of her friends was raped.

Karen, a 20-year-old general studies student, agreed to share her story, asking that her real name not be used.

"Lisa," who had been out drinking, didn't want to walk home in the rain, so she accepted a ride home with someone she had just met. He seemed nice enough when he offered to walk her to her room, and the last thing Lisa expected was for such a nice guy to refuse to leave her room so he could beat and rape her.

Lisa was "crying and screaming and shaking hysterically," Karen said, recalling the night early this semester when Lisa's roommate called to say that their mutual friend had been raped.

Karen and a few others gathered in Lisa's room at the Towers Apartments to show their support. They wrapped her in a blanket to keep her from going into shock.

"I sat there hugging her and (telling) her 'It's going to be OK,'" Karen said, explaining that she wasn't quite sure what to do. "All I knew was where to send her."

She sent her to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital. At first, Lisa didn't want to go.

"She was afraid people would think bad things of her and call her names," Karen said. "I said, 'The only way you are going to be able to get back at him is to get proof,' — and she went."

The experience changed both girls.

Karen said Lisa has become giggly, hyperactive and more talkative than usual.

"If you didn't know what happened, you would think she was just an outgoing wild child," she said.

"I'm not doing a very good job of dealing

Memories still haunt victim 14 years later

Ilene Steins had every reason to feel safe while keeping house.

Her employer lived in an elite neighborhood on Mummy Mountain in Phoenix. During the four years she worked there, Steins occasionally ran into a handyman who did odd jobs at the house.

"I was never scared of him," Steins said. One day 14 years ago, both of them were asked to do some work for their employer's daughter. Steins didn't think much of it when the handyman commented on her figure and how much fun she and her husband must have in bed. She told him that he shouldn't say things like that and that she was a widow.

Still, Steins didn't worry. The handyman usually worked with a partner. And she thought the woman of the house was at home.

But the handyman had sent his partner out on errands. And the woman who owned the home had stepped out.

Steins found herself in the living room, but she wasn't alone.

"Before I knew it, he grabbed me from behind, threw me on the couch and he raped me," Steins said.

She went into the master bedroom, locked the door, laid on the bed and cried.

"That's how I did react," she said. "I can't believe somebody has done this."

Rape

"You just think about people who you have taken care of," Melendez said. "You wonder how they are doing, this poor person."

How well individuals recover depends, in part, on the support they receive after the assault. That may be why women who report being raped — to anyone — recover more quickly than women who deny what happened by bottling their feelings inside, said Melissa Lavitt, assistant professor of social work at ASU West.

Lenna Nieboer-Erickson, victim assistance coordinator for Student Life, said women who choose not to deal with the emotions surrounding their rape immediately may end up dealing with it when their memories surface years later.

How difficult it is to deal with rape trauma after the fact, Nieboer-Erickson said, "depends on how successful the victim can be at putting it away."

When memories do surface, "it's often a surprise," she said. "When it happens, it's like, 'Where did this come from?' We have the ability as human beings to bury hurt feelings pretty deeply."

Lavitt agreed.

"Women who fare better are women who are heard at various levels, from a friend to a loved one. And those who are most likely to have difficulties are those who blame themselves," Lavitt said. "It affects their sense of security and the ability to form relationships. To form relationships, the basic ingredient is trust. And that is sort of shot."

Women who were raped by someone they know may also suffer more emotionally than those who are attacked by a stranger. According to statistics published by CASA, victims of acquaintance rape feel less recovered for up to three years longer than women who were raped by strangers.

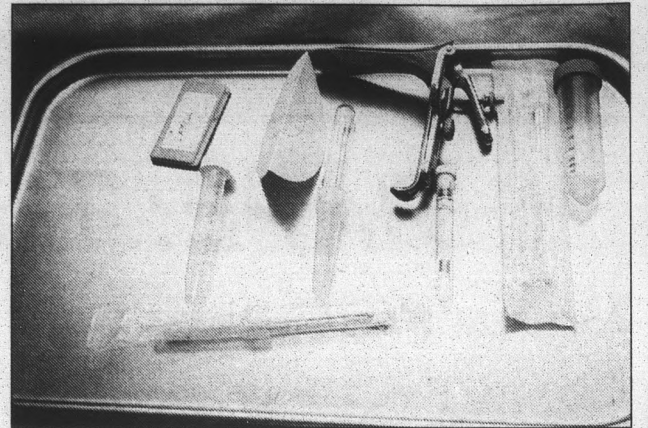

Part of the reason is that most people don't expect someone they know to hurt them. So, not only were they raped physically, but the trust between them and their attacker was also broken, CASA prevention specialist Katie Tenerelli explained.

Rape victims may turn to alcohol or drugs to seek relief from the pain. They may become involved in abusive relationships, develop eating disorders or have low self-esteem. And some women develop difficulty expressing their anger.

For students, grades may suffer. Some drop out of school.

Other short- or long-term troubles, Lavitt said, may include illnesses such as stomach-aches or headaches which don't have a clear-cut cause.

And, "relaxing enough to enjoy sex becomes problematic. It's sort of the source of the trauma."

Paul Besing/State Press

Hospitals prepared to handle rape cases keep "rape kits" available to gather the necessary medical evidence to help prosecute the suspect.

Lavitt said another danger is that women may blame themselves for the attack.

"All the warning signs were there, and you didn't do anything about it, you got what you deserve," victims may tell themselves.

She blames such thinking on a society which tolerates rape.

"There needs to be more of an outcry at looking at the ways violence against women in our society is sometimes valorized," Lavitt said.

Her message to women who have been raped is simple: report it and get emotional support.

"It still becomes part of your history," Lavitt said. "It doesn't have to cripple you, but it will have its effects. The extent of the damage has to do with the immediate consequences — if people listened to you and how you were treated."

To women who aren't sure if they were raped, Lavitt offers this advice:

"It's the nature of the criminal system. If you said you were robbed, you would know, wouldn't you? When it comes to rape, we get confused. Not because we don't know what happened, but we say, 'Maybe I had a part in that.' But if you can say, 'I was frightened, he used force,' you were raped."

Tenerelli takes the definition one step further.

"Rape is anyone forcing you to do anything sexually that you don't want to do."

Jewish leaders hopeful peace will follow killing

PHOENIX (AP) — Arizona Jewish leaders agonizing over the death of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin say they hope the tragedy of his assassination will spur calls for unity in the Middle East.

Benjamin Brooke of Tucson said he believes Rabin's death may inspire Israelis to carry on Rabin's goal of peace.

"This will strengthen their commitment," said Brooke, who was the executive director of the Jewish Federation of Southern Arizona when Rabin visited the state in 1971.

"They will see peace as something essential, as a reminder of this great man, a great political and military leader. I am fully convinced the peace efforts will go on."

Other Jewish leaders also were optimistic that Rabin's death would aid peace efforts.

"Hopefully this will bolster the moderates who have been pushing for peace to do it quicker and more effectively," said Rabbi Tom Louchheim of the Congregation Or Chadash in Tucson.

Many fears still revolve around Israeli right-wing terrorism, however, said Rabbi Kenneth Segel of Temple Beth Israel, the oldest Jewish congregation in the Phoenix metropolitan area. Segel said the Israeli Labor government still worries that right-wing extremists could do more damage to the peace process than could Arab extremists, said Rabbi Robert Kravitz, area director of the American Jewish Committee, said he shared that fear.

The "verbal invectives" flying between the right and the left in Israel have created a volatile situation, Kravitz said. He pleaded with all sides to turn down the heat, saying that the assassination reveals how serious the divisions in Israeli society have become.

Voters embrace Powell to make presidential bid

PHOENIX (AP) — A statewide poll indicates that 58 percent of Arizona voters believe Colin Powell should step into the presidential race — and 54 percent of those say he should do so as a Republican.

In a hypothetical matchup with President Clinton, 54 percent of those surveyed gave their vote to Powell, while 27 percent gave it to Clinton.

Powell also picked up the most votes — even running as an independent — in a three-way race with Clinton and Republican front-runner, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas.

By contrast, a contest between Clinton and Dole ended up in a dead heat: 45 percent surveyed in the poll picked Clinton, and 43 percent named Dole.

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, who has gained numerous endorsements from state GOP heavyweights including Gov. Fife Symington and Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., picked up only 31 percent support.

The Arizona Poll was commissioned by The Arizona Republic and The Phoenix Gazette. It was based on telephone interviews conducted by Innovative Query Inc., with 800 registered voters from Oct. 18 through Oct. 22. The poll has an overall margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points.

LOSING A LEADER

Israelis mourn slain statesman; funeral today

RABIN

JERUSALEM (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Israelis, many weeping, many bearing flowers, silently filed past the simple wooden coffin of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin on Sunday, in a final salute to the assassinated soldier, statesman and man of peace.

The parade of mourners came from all over the shocked and saddened country to a courtyard in front of the Israeli parliament. The procession was expected to continue all night until the start of a state funeral today attended by dozens of world leaders, including President Clinton.

Even as Israelis mourned, they tried to grasp the enormity of the upheaval thrust upon their country when a Jewish opponent of Rabin's peacemaking gunned him down.

Under a bright, warm Jerusalem sun, many gently placed bouquets of flowers on stone tiles near the flag-draped coffin in which the 73-year-old slain leader lay. Others saluted the former army chief of staff who became Israel's standard-bearer for peace.

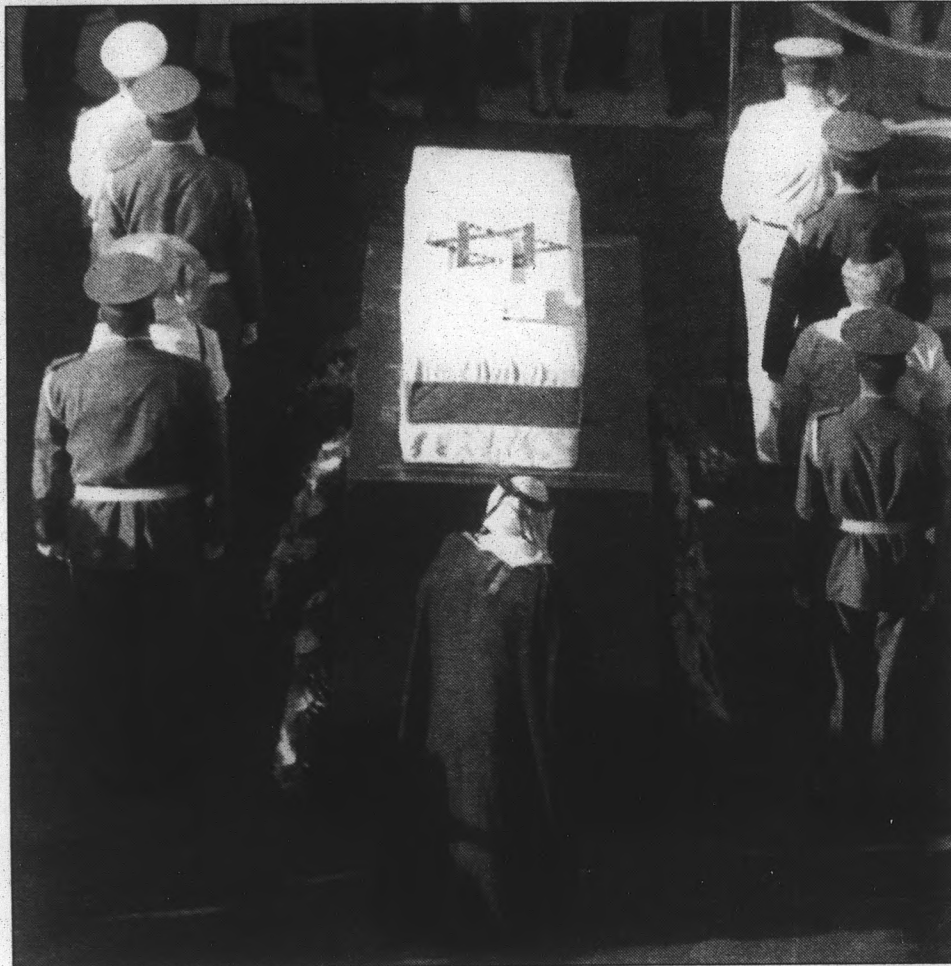

"I feel that half the country has died," high school student Pini Cohen said as he and a group of friends huddled and lighted candles in parliament's courtyard on a hill overlooking Jerusalem.

A Jewish settler from New York, Yaakov Geneck, quietly sat in a corner, with a sign announcing he was on a hunger strike to protest growing violence.

Geneck said he opposed Rabin's peace policies, but could not condone the behavior of Rabin's opponents. "I am here to say that the hatred of so many people led to this. I have encountered this hatred and I did not speak out," said Geneck, who moved to Israel two years ago.

Rabin's assassination at a peace rally in Tel Aviv on Saturday night stunned a nation that, despite increasingly bitter divisions over peacemaking with the Arabs, had somehow denied that such violence could happen to them.

The suspect, Yigal Amir, a 27-year-old law student with links to the Jewish extremist fringe, told interrogators he wanted to stop Rabin's peace policies. He reportedly said his actions were based on rabbinical rulings that permit Jews to kill people who gave away parts of the biblical Land of Israel.

An Arab man walks toward Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's coffin to pay his last respects outside the Knesset in Jerusalem. Rabin, who was assassinated in Tel Aviv Saturday, will be buried in a state funeral today.

Israel radio reported that Yigal Amir's brother, Hagai, was one of an unspecified number of extremists rounded up for questioning.

"There were many writings on the wall, but still we felt this could not happen to us," said Chaim Ramon, chief of the powerful Histadrut Trade Union Federation.

Rabin's death raised immediate questions about the future of Middle East peacemaking, especially the Israel-PLO autonomy agreement on the withdrawal of Israeli troops from most West Bank towns and villages by the end of the year.

Some delays were possible as Rabin's successor, Shimon Peres, puts together a caretaker government.

Born in Jerusalem in 1922, Rabin was the nation's first native-born prime minister and at the center of its history for more than 50 years. He joined the elite Palmach unit of the Haganah Jewish underground in Palestine, and fought in the siege of Jerusalem during the 1948 war.

He was the military chief of staff when Israel defeated three Arab armies in the 1967 Mideast war, then Israel's ambassador to the United States, prime minister in the 1970s, and defense minister in the 1980s.

He was appointed prime minister again after his Labor party won the 1992 elections, and his peacemaking with the PLO earned him the 1994 Nobel Peace Prize, along with Peres and PLO chief Yasser Arafat.

Dubbed "Mr. Security," Rabin was the one politician Israelis trusted enough to take the risks involved along the rocky path toward peace.

But the political climate had turned unprecedentedly venomous in recent months over the planned West Bank withdrawal, and Rabin personally had become the target of increasing vitriol by Israel's right wing, which called him a traitor and compared him to a Nazi.

A stunned nation tried to come to grips with the killing Sunday. "Rabin Murdered, Israel is hurting and crying," read the head-

Dole says GOP, Clinton close on taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said Sunday he doesn't think President Clinton and congressional Republicans are that far apart on the tax cuts each could support.

"He's talking about a $300 per child tax credit, ours is $500 — that's 70-some percent of the whole tax package," Dole, R-Kansas, said on NBC's Meet the Press.

Dole said the president also has indicated a willingness to look at capital gains tax reductions.

"If you boil it all down, there's not that many differences in my view," he said.

But Dole sounded less sure the two sides can reach agreement on welfare reform or reductions in the growth of Medicare spending.

The White House, preparing for President Clinton's trip to Israel for the funeral of slain Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, had no immediate comment, said spokeswoman Ginny Terzano.

The House and Senate plans to balance the budget in seven years also contain $245 billion in tax cuts. Differences in the two versions still must be worked out between the House and Senate.

Clinton says he will veto the legislation unless Republicans agree to less severe reductions in education and Medicare spending.

Clinton and other Democrats also criticize the tax cut's size. Dole would not say whether Republicans would agree to less.

"It's safe to say it probably won't be more than ... $245 billion," Dole said. "But there's some very basic principles we believe in pretty strongly, and one is giving families and children tax relief."

Dole, also running for the GOP nomination for president, said he and House Speaker Newt Gingrich had a "pretty good discussion with the president last week on the budget — on the whole, not on tax cuts specifically."

But in recent days, Clinton aides have suggested he may yet oppose a Republican welfare overhaul bill he had previously indicated he would support. And Clinton and Democrats continue to criticize the Medicare changes as too severe.

"The Republican proposal will not be fair to our seniors," Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said Sunday on "Meet the Press."

But Dole said: "After 30 years, there ought to be some fundamental change. We ought to be able to reduce the cost of Medicare."

Shalom, Yitzhak Rabin

One of life's saddest ironies is the fact that those who love peace the most often die in acts of senseless violence.

Such was the fate of Yitzhak Rabin, prime minister of Israel.

In a hail of gunfire, a demented young Israeli law student tore the heart out of Israel's dreams of peace.

No one knew the cost of war more than Rabin — a warrior for his nation and his people during World War II, the War of 1948 and the Six-Day War of 1967. Some will say that Rabin's greatest moment came toward the end of the lightning war of 1967, when his forces swept triumphantly into the city in which King David ruled 3,000 years ago — a Jerusalem united.

Yet Rabin's greatest legacy was not accomplished by the sword.

Though Rabin was a mighty warrior, he was a man who loved peace. Shortly before hostilities erupted in 1967, Rabin's mind was not full of glories to be won — rather, it was full of thoughts of the young soldiers he commanded, soldiers who would be maimed and killed in the bloodbath ahead.

Rabin never forgot his slain comrades — and, as prime minister of Israel, reached out to his former enemies to ensure that past wars would not return.

A war-weary Israel would not easily accept a movement for peace. One of the few men they would follow was the conqueror of Jerusalem.

The hand that once wielded a sword extended an olive branch to Israel's long-time foes — and many of them grasped it.

It was Yitzhak Rabin, together with King Hussein of Jordan, who helped bring about peace between two nations who had been at a state of war for more than 40 years.

It was Rabin who reluctantly shook the hand of PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat at the White House in 1993 — and helped put into motion the making of peace between Palestinian and Israeli.

But in a world where many love war more than peace, being a peacemaker is a dangerous thing.

On Saturday, Rabin paid the ultimate price for peace — and became yet another martyr in the fight to bring peace to a war-torn world.

In death, Rabin joins a list of men of peace, men who gave their lives in the hopes that others might be spared.

Men like Abraham Lincoln, Martin Luther King, Anwar Sadat, Robert F. Kennedy, Mahatma Gandhi.

All died because they loved peace more than war. They must not die in vain.

The dream of peace will not die with Yitzhak Rabin.

Those who love the sword are deluding themselves. Killing the messenger will not kill the message.

As one man of peace falls, 10 more will rise up to take up the banner.

As we mourn for Rabin, we must fight even harder for his dream of peace — the dream he gave his life for.

"Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called sons of God."

Shalom, haver.
Goodbye, friend.

Health-care cuts betray U.S.-Indian treaties

An elderly woman is at home when she becomes sick and is taken to a hospital. When the doctors perform surgery on her to see what is wrong, they find a sponge inside of her — one that was left from a previous surgery.

Sounds like malpractice, doesn't it? Except for one problem ... the woman is a Native American and the hospital which performed the original surgery is an Indian hospital. Why does that make a difference? Because the hospital is a government office and can't be sued in a criminal case. A civil suit, perhaps? Sure, if the woman's family had the money for an attorney, which they don't.

There are many other instances of inadequate health care provided to Native Americans all around this country. They are treated with disrespect, used for experiments and often receive poor treatment if they manage to see a doctor at all. This is why there is such an outcry about the health care provided to the Native Americans.

Now, before we go any further, let me clear up a few things. Many people tell me that they feel we should not complain, because "after all, you are receiving free health care."

My answer to that is: It is not free! The price we paid for this is a price that most people will never understand.

But let me try to explain. The "free" health care is part of a treaty, or contract, with this country as payment for taking our land. Maybe it is easier to comprehend if I put it like this — it is part of the rent promised to us for our land.

Now, since this contract promises us this health care, shouldn't we expect decent health care? If a person signs a contract with another and agrees to pay for something, are they allowed to pay with counterfeit money? Of course not.

Now, to make matters worse, we have all of the budget cuts that will directly affect the Indian health care system. Instead of making it better, the government is now going to make things worse. Clinics and hospitals will become even more understaffed, and many will have to shut down.

TINA

Columnist

The health care is just part of what will be effected by these budget cuts. The tribes' ability to fight crime, provide sanitation and many other services will be endangered. The health care issue is probably one of the most important because, before the budget cuts, the care was inadequate. Now I shudder to think what the care will be like.

But that's OK according to Sen. Gorton, chairman of the Senate appropriations subcommittee overseeing the Interior Department funding. According to Sen. Gorton, "To give more to the BIA would, bluntly, have required us to give less to the national parks and cultural institutions which are our national heritage for everyone."

Excuse me?! National parks are more important than people?

I don't care how a person looks at this, it is just flat-out wrong! The BIA makes up 26 percent of the Interior Department's budget, yet it will absorb 45 percent of the reductions for that department. How can anyone think that is fair?

The government spends approximately $2,600 for the average American's health, except for the health of Native Americans. The average for them is only $1,300, and that is before the budget cuts. Doesn't sound quite fair, does it?

There is another problem with these budget cuts and the inadequate health care, schooling, etc. They possibly may be illegal. The U.S. government signed many treaties with the various nations which obligates the government to maintain a reasonable level of education and health among the tribal members. I don't think the government has been keeping its end of the contract.

The bottom line is this: There is not enough in the budget as it is for the health care, education, housing, etc. for the reservations. These are basic needs that were promised in treaties and contracts made between the United States and the Native American people. By taking what little they have, they are sentencing many Native Americans to death.

No, my friends, this is not an exaggeration — this is hard-core fact!

Tina Holder is a senior justice studies major.

Getting car repaired no day at the beach

Betty Whitters, 71, of Oak Lawn, Ill., believes that because she is a grandmother, an auto-repair shop took advantage of her. And she wants me to sound the alarm to other grampses and grannies.

Here is her shocking story in her own words:

"This happened in August. But despite the time that has passed, I felt I must tell you about it to help other senior citizens.

"I was leaving home on a Friday morning when my car broke down. I had it towed to the shop where I normally take it for maintenance.

"I have been taking my car there for some years and thought I could trust them. How little I knew.

"Later that afternoon, they called me and said they had found the problem, but would be unable to finish it for me that day.

"They said they are closed on weekends, but that it would be ready on Monday.

"On Monday, I picked up my car. And paid $287.10 for a new computer module.

"Now, my car is a 1986 Olds Cutlass, but it had only 20,583 miles on it.

"I will tell you why I know exactly how much mileage I had.

"When I returned home, I noticed the mileage seemed to be a lot higher than when I had it towed.

"So I checked the towing bill. Sure enough, it was listed as 20,307 miles.

"But now it was 20,583 miles — 276 miles more than when I left it with them. Also, I had a full tank on Thursday, and now it was just half-full.

MIKE ROYKO

"I didn't know what to think. So I called the owner and I asked him how it could be that it had 276 miles more than when I left it with them.

"He told me it needed a road test.

"Well, 276 miles is quite a road test, don't you think?"

As road tests go, yes 276 miles seems more than adequate. That's about three trips from Chicago to Milwaukee. Or to the Mississippi River and back. Or one-way to Cincinnati. They must give very thorough road tests.

"So my daughter called the owner, and he said they don't have computers to check out problems, so they have to give road tests.

He said that if I was unhappy, I could come in for an oil change.

"And he said I had given them permission to take it for a road test, which I had not.

"But then I happened to open the trunk of my car, and do you know what I found?"

A dead body?

"No. I found sand."

Ah, sand in trunk. Very interesting. What does it mean? "I didn't know what it meant until I was cleaning out my car two days later. And do you know what I found?"

I'll try a dead body again.

"No, I found a receipt for the Indiana State Dunes."

Ah hah! Sand in trunk. Receipt for the Dunes. Now I get it.

"And the receipt was dated for the Sunday it was supposed to be in that garage. That must have been some road test."

You didn't find a bikini top did you?

"No, but since then I have talked to people at my church, and they have had similar experiences with that garage. I guess they think old folks won't notice or raise a stink. So I would like to you to warn others that this could happen to them."

And as the service manager said: "We specialize in electronic faults. We fix problems no one else can diagnose.

"This car had intermittent die-outs. Its problems mean loss of fuel, loss of spark, loss of injector or computer communication."

Yes, that's the way I see it.

"It takes awhile to diagnose this kind of problem.

My records show that it had a bad electronic module and pickup coil inside the distributor."

Boy, those electronic modules will do it to you every time. That's why I still prefer horses.

"Die-outs," he continued, "occur after three to four hours of run time or a hot resoaking. That's when the engine is warmed and it sits for an hour or two, then it won't start again.

"We stand by our work. And it was not 276 miles. Our records show that it was driven only 178 miles."

Well, 276 or 178, it took a courageous mechanic to drive that far while facing the threat of a "die out" at any moment.

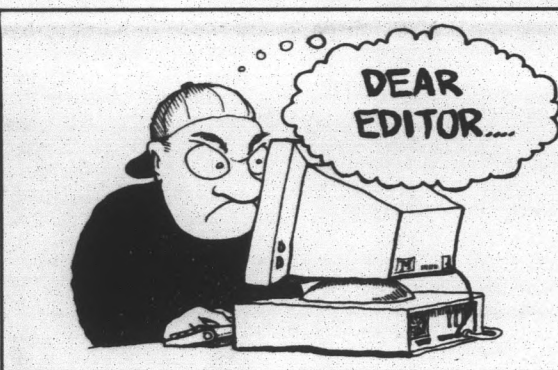

So as Mrs. Whitters requested — we are warning all senior citizens, and junior citizens as well, to check your mileage.

And look in the trunk, too. If you find sand, give me a call.

But a body really would be better.

Mike Royko is a syndicated columnist with the Chicago Tribune.

I didn't know what to think. So I called the owner and I asked him how it could be that it had 276 miles more than when I left it with them.

Organ transplantation matter of health not money

I am a nursing student at ASU and was recently involved in a lecture regarding the issue of organ transplantation.

There were many questions and strong opinions shared regarding Mickey Mantle's liver transplant. Many of my classmates expressed anger toward Mantle having been transplanted before others "due to his fame and fortune." My classmates also expressed they would not be involved in donation because the system "is not fair and equitable."

Instead of accepting people's guesses and opinions, I decided to do some research on the organ allocation system.

Before a patient is added to the national transplant waiting list, the transplanting surgeon evaluates the patient's medical condition based on specific standardized criteria. These criteria are categorized by the patient's medical need, resulting in the patient being listed as a status one, two, three or four.

A status one patient, the highest on the list, indicates a patient has less than one week to live. A status two patient, such as Mantle, indicates a patient whose condition requires hospitalization with no hopes of being discharged. When an organ becomes available, a national registry of patients needing organ transplants, better known as United Network of Organ Sharing (UNOS) is contacted.

UNOS generates a list of possible recipients in order of the patient's status. The donor organ is first offered to status one patients, followed by status two and three in that local service area. If no patients match size and blood type in that local service area, the organ is then offered nationally in the same order.

The service area where Mantle was registered has an average 3.3 day waiting period for patients in the status two category. In Mantle's case, there were no status one patients and only one status two patient — Mantle. His status two condition was not determined by his fame and fortune but unfortunately, by his critical medical condition.

More than 40,000 individuals are currently waiting for organ transplants across the United States. Eight to 10 of these individuals will die every day while waiting. For my nursing classmates: One of the fundamental principles of the nursing profession is to develop a helping relationship with the patient. The goal of this relationship is to prevent illness and promote health. I can't think of a better way to meet this goal than providing the gift of life to a dying person. To receive further information, contact the Donor Network of Arizona and ask about joining "Mickey's Team" to support organ and tissue donation.

Senators should act their ages

Have you been to Sesame Street?

If you haven't, you should visit an Associated Students of ASU Senate meeting sometime soon.

For a class assignment, I was required to sit through an ASASU Senate meeting. For some reason, I chose last Tuesday night's meeting only to walk away angered and fed up.

One of the topics of concern was the declining image of the ASASU government. The senators seem to think the students of ASU don't think they are doing a good job, or respect what they do for us in this government body.

Tuesday night, I could see why.

I found that I was sitting in a room full of people who acted more like fifth graders than college students. Senators were whispering to each other, giggling at comments and falling out of their chairs to amusement of everyone around them.

How are we, as a student body, supposed to respect and follow a government that can't seem to act its age?

What I found most interesting was the maturity and composure of President Chris Weber. For the one person who is in the most trouble in the senate, he was the most professional during the discussion.

The most ironic thing about it was, the senators who complained the most about the image of the senate were the senators who were acting the most immature and unhelpful during the discussion.

Physical reference unnecessary

I am concerned that the editorial staff uses physical traits in their descriptions of people. The Nov. 1 unsigned editorial characterized Rush Limbaugh as "a fat, overbearing, cocky, loud-mouthed, ultra-conservative windbag."

The same message would have been conveyed using the same line without the word "fat."

Either the State Press staff is guilty of discrimination against fat people or students can look forward to articles about well-hung males and flat-chested females. It is too bad everyone doesn't measure up to the paper's standards of beauty.

Simple guidelines help prevent sexual assault

By RUTHANN HOGUE
STATE PRESS

If you buckle your seat belt, don't drink and drive and obey the posted speed limit, chances are you will get where you are going safely.

Likewise, women who take precautions before dating someone new, avoid mixing alcohol and sex and strongly communicate their personal boundaries are less likely to become victims of rape.

The message may sound simplistic, but according to statistics published by the Center Against Sexual Abuse, a woman's chances of being raped are 10 times higher than being killed in a car accident.

At ASU, that translates into eight reported rapes this year. Of those, five rapes were reported within the past six weeks.

"Sex turns to rape when two people are in any type of contact and one person decides that it's enough, and the other person decides it's not enough, and 'That's not as far as I want to go,'" said Katie Tenerelli, a prevention specialist with CASA.

At that point, "it's about controlling that person and it has nothing to do with an expression of desire or emotional intimacy."

Tenerelli outlines four keys couples can use to avoid compromising situations: establish boundaries, communicate, treat each other as equals and nurture mutual self-esteem.

"If you are in a relationship with someone who uses put-downs, if they hit or slap you, if they blame you for things, make you feel humiliated or are controlling ... your behavior or feel jealous, that would be unhealthy," Tenerelli said.

And when a relationship is not healthy, there is a possibility of sexual assault.

"If they don't let you decide what movie you see on Friday night, what makes you think they would be any different about sex?" Tenerelli said.

Rape still haunting after 15 years of trying to forget it

BY RUTHANN HOGUE
STATE PRESS

Twinkling lights, brightly wrapped packages and college bowl football games remind "Jenny" of Christmas.

They also remind her of the day she was raped.

Jenny, then a senior in high school, had exchanged gifts with her fiancée a few days before Christmas. She gave Josh a blue sweater. In return, he gave her a diamond ring.

Jenny also planned to attend Christmas dinner with Josh and a few friends. Her parents said she couldn't go.

So Jenny did what she always did — she sneaked out the front door when she spied Josh and his roommates waiting for her outside. They drove away before anyone could stop them.

As usual, Josh turned on the TV to the football game when they got there. And, as usual, he and Jenny made out on the couch. When Josh suddenly got up and went into the bedroom, Jenny didn't think anything of it. He called to Jenny a few minutes later.

"Come here, I have something to show you," he said. She went in to find him lying naked on the bed, and he raped her.

Looking back, Jenny said she realizes that she should have left the apartment immediately. But she didn't.

Even so, she never intended to consummate their sexual relationship that day. She was still a virgin. She wanted to stay that way until she was married.

Josh did ask if he could take things further. In fact, he asked Jenny three times if he could have sex with her.

She always said, "No."

It didn't matter. Josh did it anyway.

Jenny was furious. She asked him to stop. After a few moments it was over. By then, it was time to walk next door where Josh's roommates and friends waited. She took off her engagement ring and stuffed it in her sock. They ate in silence.

The term "date rape" hadn't been invented yet. That, and a flood of emotions, prevented Jenny from doing anything about it.

If only she hadn't sneaked out, it wouldn't have happened. If only she hadn't walked into the bedroom. If only she hadn't stayed. The reasons to feel guilty seemed endless — so Jenny decided never to tell.

For 15 years, she didn't.

Meanwhile, Jenny experienced a tremendous sense of loss. She could never regain what Josh had stolen from her. Her sense of self-worth quickly deteriorated. She was afraid to ever break up with Josh because she thought no one else would want her.

Jenny dropped out of school within a few weeks. She tried to forget the incident ever happened. One week after her 18th birthday she and Josh were married.

Over the years, Jenny never gave much thought to the incident. Still, it affected her.

Jenny first associated the word "rape" with what happened to her sometime during the last year. She was shocked to find that feelings she had locked inside more than a decade earlier had come back to haunt her.

And she finally cried.

Little by little, Jenny is reclaiming her life.

She now attends school full-time at ASU. She often works long hours. And she is never satisfied with anything less than her best effort. Jenny said she is always trying to make up for past mistakes.

"For once," she said, "I just want to do something right."

POLICE REPORT

ASASU plans Web-site voting to increase turnout

Officials target spring elections for on-line balloting

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

The Associated Students of ASU has a high-tech plan to increase voter turnout — voting through the World Wide Web.

Voters would be able to access a Web page, provide identification and then vote for their ASASU senator and executive officers, said Alex Shivers, liberal arts senator and former elections coordinator.

"It looks like it's going to happen," he said. "We're going to try to implement it for the spring elections."

When Stanford University began running elections through the Web last year, voter turnout increased from 10 percent of the student body to 40 percent, Shivers said.

However, ensuring the accuracy and legitimacy of the votes could be a problem with Web voting.

"We don't have it completely worked out," Shivers said. "The main problem is verifying the votes."

ASU Webmaster Vince Salvato said there are precautions that will ensure accurate voting.

"We're going to have a database set up of student IDs," he said, adding that voters would have to log on with their student ID number. The system would then check the number against the database.

Salvato said the system would also check to see if the person had already voted. If anything is suspicious, the student would not be allowed past the screening page.

Shivers said the Web page would also provide a chance to look at each candidate's platform.

"You'll be able to view them on line," he said. "We're really excited by it."

Shivers added that the next plan is to allow voting through In-Touch — the University's telephone registration system.

Salvato said students would probably need a PINE account through the Computing Commons to access the page and would only be able to vote from on-campus sites.

"We haven't decided if students will be able to access from off-campus machines," he said.

Salvato added the new system would not replace the traditional voting booths, but would act as a supplement.

"(Voting) will be both on line and in the booths like before," he said. "The main goal is to get more people to vote."

Invitation to apply for

STATE PRESS EDITORSHIP

The ASU Student Publications Advisory Board is now soliciting applications for the STATE PRESS editorship for the Spring Semester 1996.

Applicants for the position of editor:
must be a full-time student at ASU in good standing (not on academic or disciplinary probation);
must have a cumulative grade index of 2.50 or better;
must have served two semesters on the staff of the STATE PRESS;
must have completed a minimum of 15 hours of journalism courses including news writing, reporting, editing and journalism law;
must not graduate prior to the completion of the term of appointment.

Applicants must also:
submit at least two letters of recommendation from university faculty members and/or professional journalists;
list on the application form the titles of all journalism courses completed and the grades earned in those courses;
submit at least two examples of a news story, feature story, or editorial written for the STATE PRESS or another newspaper; and describe on the application form the functions and responsibilities of previous positions held on the staff of the STATE PRESS or other newspapers.

Applicants must pick up application forms at the STATE PRESS office, Matthews Center north basement. The completed forms must be typewritten.

The deadline for receipt of applications will be noon, Thursday, November 9, 1995.

with the aftermath," Karen added. "I think I've kind of removed myself from the whole thing. I just don't understand how you can pretend it didn't happen, but I'm not her."

Lenna Nieboer-Erickson, victim assistance coordinator for Student Life, helps students like Lisa get on with their lives.

"Each one is very different," Nieboer-Erickson said. "We have some kind of belief that a victim ought to act in a certain way, but their reactions are as individual as they are."

Women who have been raped may feel shock, numbness, shame and fear.

"There is the whole notion of feeling damaged. There is anger. There is guilt. There is a feeling of hopelessness and helplessness because in this one circumstance in your life you did not feel like you had any control over what was happening to you," Nieboer-Erickson said.

"For me, that is the ugliness of it, that for whatever length of time it takes for the assault, the fact that you are a human being does not matter," she added.

Students who have been raped are encouraged to seek medical attention if they haven't already. Not everyone is ready to go to counseling right away, Nieboer-Erickson said, adding that those who would benefit from early counseling are referred to campus services.

"I see what I do as a major effort toward retention," Nieboer-Erickson said. "We really want the student to be able to salvage something academically from this semester if possible. The benefit to students reporting (rape) this fall is they are getting the consideration they need. When it is unreported, often the student disappears, and we don't know why they leave."

Faculty members may be asked to give special consideration to students who have been raped. Whether or not faculty members are told about any rape situation is up to the individual.

"When you have experienced any kind of trauma, sometimes the ability to concentrate is affected, and there can be symptoms of post-traumatic stress syndrome," Nieboer-Erickson said. "A student can be sitting in class, for example, and may hear a sentence or something that triggers a memory, and they lose their concentration for a few moments or longer."

Friends can help other students recover, too.

Women who have been raped may experience a change in eating habits, have wide mood swings or feel confused. Friends should respond with patience and understanding, Nieboer-Erickson said.

Many women who have been sexually assaulted also develop a fear of being alone.

That may explain why Lisa hasn't been seen alone since the night she was raped — even when she's doing homework, Karen said.

Some rape victims need to talk about what happened, Nieboer-Erickson said. Those who do, need friends who will listen sensitively without asking probing questions, she said, adding that if they trust you enough to volunteer haunting details, you shouldn't turn away.

Others, like Lisa, seem to prefer to keep things inside. "I don't know if she blocked it out of her head or what, but she never talks about it," Karen said. "It's like it never happened."

For Karen, dealing with Lisa's reaction is frustrating. She would like to encourage Lisa to deal more openly with the assault.

"I'm not close enough to do that," Karen said. "I just don't know what to do."

Katie Tenerelli, a prevention specialist with the Center Against Sexual Abuse, said Lisa's response is not unusual.

"It is a common response to deal with it (rape) by burying it, thinking it will go away," Tenerelli said. "But the best way to deal with it is to talk about it. When you talk about it, you get it out of your inner system and you are eventually able to deal with the rest of your life. That may take weeks or months or years."

She then pulled herself together long enough to finish her work and go home.

The two saw each other one other time. Steins was working while standing on a ladder when the handyman sneaked up behind and grabbed her.

"I turned around and kicked him in the face," she said, explaining that his face wasn't her first target of choice.

Steins never reported the assault.

Looking back, she wishes she had.

"I should have called the cops," Steins said. "If it ever happens again, I know I'll call the cops. But even 14 years ago, it wasn't like it is now."

Her biggest fear at the time was that she might get pregnant because she wasn't on birth-control pills.

She also feared that the handyman may have tried to attack other women, maybe even the woman whose house she once cleaned. She said that may explain why the woman suddenly fired him in the middle of a major project.

The mother of three continued to support herself and her family by cleaning houses for about a year.

But the experience effected her work. At one house, at the top of a mountain in Paradise Valley, she became nervous when the man of the house started coming home while she was still cleaning.

"He was always coming home in the middle of the day and I was afraid he was coming home just for me," Steins said. "When something happens like that, you expect it. He probably didn't have any ideas of touching me at all, but you have it in your head — you really do."

"I shook like a leaf because I was afraid he would do it. Shortly after, I quit because I was afraid something was going to

I'm on guard constantly. I don't trust a man.

— Ilene Steins, on the effects of her rape 14 years ago happen to me."

Steins, now 57, is convinced the handyman wouldn't have touched her if she hadn't said she was single. So she blames herself for the attack.

"Once they find out you are a widow they think you are sex-craved or something," she said.

Fourteen years later, the attack still effects her daily life.

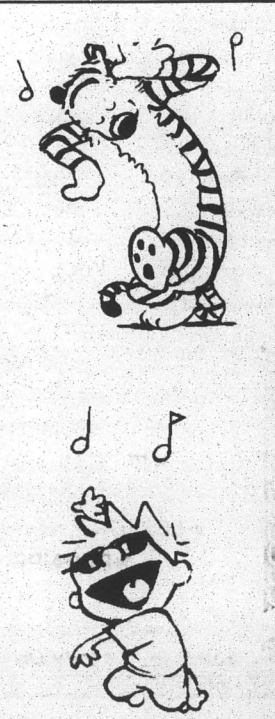

"You're always on guard after that," she said. "Even when you go out to a parking lot. Seeing a man out there, it scares me to death. I'm on guard constantly. I don't trust a man."

line in the Yediot Ahronot newspaper.

Tens of thousands stood silently Sunday at the site of the assassination. A sea of memorial candles, bouquets, handwritten prayers and Rabin photographs covered the spot where the prime minister was shot. A sign in Hebrew read, "Why?"

"Rabin was looking to the future. He was looking out for us, the younger generation," said Amir Shavir, an 18-year-old from Tel Aviv. "They killed him. They killed my hope."

Rabin's coffin, draped with the blue-and-white flag bearing the Star of David, was placed in an army truck Sunday morning and, accompanied by six army generals and two police chiefs, was driven slowly from Tel Aviv up to Jerusalem through the rocky, eternal hills. Thousands of cars were parked along the highway as Israelis strained to catch a glimpse.

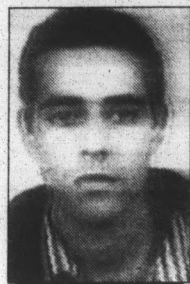

The coffin was placed on a black bier in the plaza outside the parliament. Rabin's widow, Leah, supported by her son, Yuval, and daughter Dalia, slowly walked toward the coffin. From time to time, she buried her tear-stained face in her hands, and slumped on Yuval's shoulder.

Yuval quietly recited the Kaddish, or prayer for the dead.

Hundreds of thousands of Israelis filled the Knesset plaza and spilled out into the streets for miles.

Parents brought their children, carrying them on their shoulders. One man hobbled along on crutches. There were soldiers in uniform, members of the Druse sect, an offshoot of Islam, in white headdress and long flowing robes.

Some 100,000 Israelis filed past the coffin in the first few hours. The plaza was to remain open all night, and Israel TV said it expected some 1 million people to pay last respects before the funeral today afternoon at Jerusalem's Mount Herzl cemetery.

More than 40 world leaders, including Clinton, former Presidents Bush and Carter, and U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, said they would attend.

Rabin's funeral also was to bring to Jerusalem Jordan's King Hussein and President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt — two Arab leaders who have not visited the disputed city, claimed by the Palestinians as a future capital. An official visit to Jerusalem is seen by the Arab world as recognition of the city as Israel's capital.

Arafat, Rabin's most important peace partner, said he would not come to Jerusalem for the service, citing the complicated security operation Israel would have to mount if he were there.

ASU's emotional triumph cause for optimism

Snyder says program 'healthy' with 2 games left; Cal up next

By DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

ASU Head Coach Bruce Snyder said he had never been more proud of a football team than after his Sun Devils' 37-33 shootout victory over No. 22 UCLA Saturday. Considering Snyder has directed 176 football games in his 15-year head coaching career, those were powerful words.

"This program is a very healthy program headed in the right direction," said Snyder, whose team (5-4, 3-3 in the Pac-10) next faces California Saturday in Berkeley. "We have kids in here that believe in what we're doing. ... Obviously we've got a lot of work left to do."

ASU, which upset Oregon last week and rallied from a 17-point halftime deficit against UCLA (6-3, 3-3) by scoring 24 unanswered points, enjoyed its first-ever win over the Bruins at Sun Devil Stadium in seven tries. With two games remaining against Cal and UofA, the Sun Devils' hopes for a post-season bowl berth are still alive.

"We could get used to this. We should make a habit out of it," said Snyder, whose Sun Devils have triumphed in three straight, a feat they haven't accomplished since late in 1993. "It's a great game from a coach's standpoint in terms of a football team hanging in there. I think you saw the real Sun Devils in the second half."

As time expired, much of the homecoming crowd of 48,000-plus stormed the field chanting, "A-S-U, A-S-U," while some of the more zealous fans attempted to tear down the goal posts. Many who joined the festivities just ran with the Sun Devil players off the field, wanting their own piece of the night's heroics.

"This is the sweetest feeling I've had since I've been here," said ASU's junior quarterback Jake Plummer, who had a career night completing 21 of 35 pass attempts for 312 yards and two touchdowns. "This team's coming

If at first you don't succeed, try, try again.

The Sun Devil football team, after being stymied in the first half, punctuated by a dropped pass in the end zone by freshman receiver Kenny Mitchell, watched UCLA jump to a 27-10 lead on the legs of senior tailback Karim Abdul-Jabbar and the arm of freshman quarterback Cade McNown.

According to Mitchell, though, there was never a doubt that the Sun Devils could back.

"Coach (Bruce Snyder) said I don't care what the score is," Mitchell said. "He said our defense was going to go out and stop them and that we were going to come back and win it."

After the game, Mitchell was still clutching a second-half, go-ahead touchdown catch, erasing all memory of the first-half miss.

"On the sideline they told me, 'Don't worry about it,'" Mitchell said. "Jake (Plummer) said when I throw the ball, it's going to be on the money, so if you drop it, it's all you."

It was all Mitchell, grabbing the fourth-quarter, 27-yard pass as part of his 42 yards on the day.

According to junior receiver Keith Poole, the original Sun Devil game plan wasn't to put the ball in the air but to run the ball at the Bruins.

"We wanted to run the ball," Poole said. "We planned on pounding it to them to keep the ball out of the hands of Abdul-Jabbar, but when it came down to it and we had to pass, we did."

Snyder said the tandem of receivers fueled the second half turnaround for ASU.

"We're more confident going for the big play," Snyder said. "We felt we could go deep with Mitchell, and of course Keith Poole's been doing it all year."

Poole knew he had contributed heavily to the Sun Devil offense, scoring a rushing touchdown on a reverse and receiving 167 yards, but when told of his numbers Poole seemed surprised.

Volleyball slides against Oregon State, beats Oregon

FROM STAFF REPORTS

In its last regular season road trip, the No. 13 ASU volleyball team split a pair of games against two of the two worst teams in the Pac-10, Oregon and Oregon State.

On Friday, the Sun Devils 14-7 (8-7 Pac-10) traveled to Corvallis, Ore., where they suffered a defeat to the Beavers 3-1.

After jumping out to a one-game lead (15-10) early in the match, ASU proceeded to lose the next three games 15-4, 15-7, 15-11.

Sophomore outside hitter Terri Cox had a good night posting a team-high 15 kills and added 13 digs. Setter Tracy Heflin continued her strong play as the replacement setter for Jolynn Faatulu, having 42 assists in the four-game match-up.

The Beavers (10-13, 4-9) unleashed some of their own weapons, including Heather Lowe and Miya Malaulu.

Lowe, a sophomore outside hitter, had 19 kills for Oregon State adding four block assists. Sophomore setter Miya Malaulu had 51 assists and 11 digs for the win.

Despite the upset on Friday, the Sun Devils managed to sweep the Ducks in Eugene on Saturday 15-7, 15-11, 15-2.

Oregon, who is at the bottom of the Pac-10 rankings with a 8-17 (1-13) record, was pounded on by the Sun Devils, who combined for 49 team kills. The Ducks had 29.

Leading the Sun Devils was senior outside hitter Christine Garner with 15 kills and two service aces in the win. Also standing out for ASU was sophomore outside hitter Jenn Snyder, who had a team-high three service aces.

For Oregon, freshman middle blocker Allison White led the team with seven blocks and four digs.

The Sun Devils now return home for next weekend's match-up against UCLA and USC.

together. You can see it out there. The chemistry's there. This is one of the first game's all year where we've come back from that much of a deficit and put it away. It's a great feeling. We just have to keep it going."

The play that switched the momentum ASU's way for good came with UCLA clinging to a 27-24 lead with 59 seconds left in the third quarter. Sun Devil Lance Anderson booted a punt to Bruin Paul Guidry who then reversed the ball to Derek Ayers who was tackled by ASU's Lamont Morgan for a safety, making the score 27-26.

"I saw the guy start retreating and I started screaming," said Snyder. "We just kept our lanes and kept proper leverage. I'll bet (UCLA Head Coach) Terry (Donahue) wished he had that play back."

Three plays later, Plummer found freshman receiver Kenny Mitchell on a 39-yard scoring strike for the go-ahead touchdown. Earlier, Mitchell had dropped a sure touchdown in the end zone in the second quarter.

"It felt great. I knew I should have had that first (touchdown)," said Mitchell, who added Plummer had a man-to-man talk with him after that play. "Jake came up to me and said, 'I know you can make that catch. You've done it before and you've done it in practice.'"

"He said, 'Look, I'm going to throw you a ball that can win the game.' He still had faith in me and that's the good thing about him — he has faith in his players."

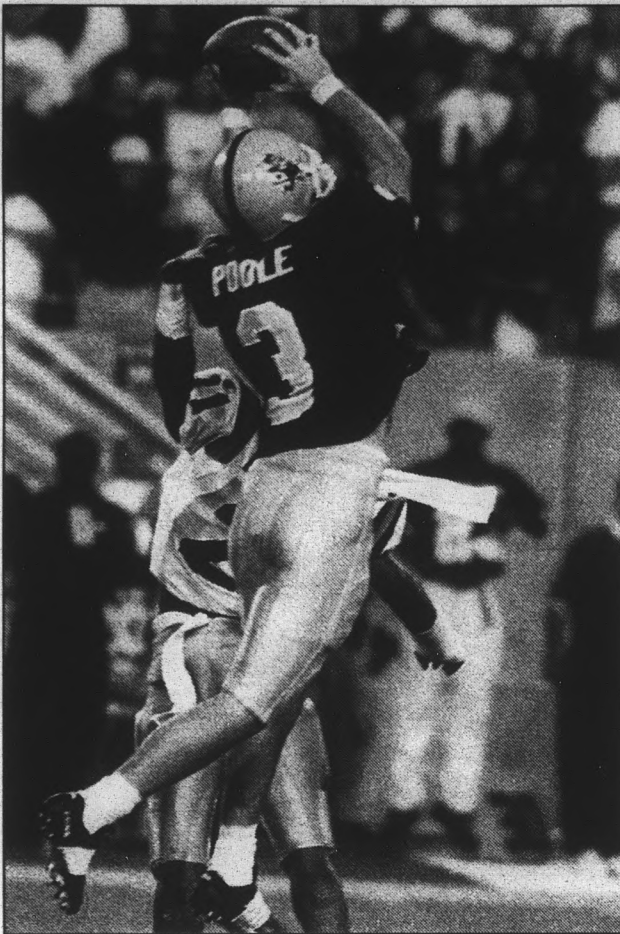

Said Plummer of Mitchell: "With a guy that young, sometimes he can just go in the tank, but that just shows his character. He made a great catch. The offense just played good but I credit the defense with getting us the ball. He's steppin' up. He's no longer a rookie."

Plummer's favorite target was junior wideout Keith Poole, who tied a career high with nine catches for 167 yards.

"It's a great feeling for me personally to know that I'm surrounded by warriors, guys that will fight through every situation," said Plummer, referring to Poole's penchant for coming through in the clutch.

Poole brought ASU to within 27-17 when he scored on a nine-yard reverse with 13:01 left in the third quarter. It was the second time he scored on the play this year.

"I love that play. I've loved it since high school," Poole said, adding Plummer's downfield block was the final spring past the goal line.

Robert Anderson/State Press
Junior wideout Keith Poole goes airborne to snare a Jake Plummer pass for one of his career-high nine catches Saturday against UCLA. Poole finished with 167 yards receiving.

The Bruins fumbled five times in the second half and lost four, while the Sun Devils remained turnover-free.

"When you turn the ball over that many times in a half, it's very difficult to win. Why we had them, I can't really tell you," said Donahue, who will have to wait another week to become the Pac 10's all-time winningest coach.

Receivers

"I did?" said Poole, who gave credit to junior quarterback Jake Plummer for getting the ball to him.

"Jake made some clutch throws," Poole said. "Jake's the type of person that if you're catching the ball, he'll throw it to you. I've been the decoy the last couple of weeks, and this week I got to get my hands on the ball."

Poole gave credit to Mitchell for taking away some of the defensive pressure and double teams that he had been drawing in the last couple of weeks.

Both receivers contributed to a career day for Plummer, who had 312 passing yards and two touchdowns.

Women's swimming streak alive

FROM STAFF REPORTS
STATE PRESS

The 15th ranked ASU women's swimming team (3-0) continues to win meets with the seniors leading the way. This was evident again in ASU's victories Saturday in a double dual meet against UNLV and the University of New Mexico.

Three-time All American senior Chris Jeffrey had another standout performance by posting winning times in the 1,000-yard freestyle, 400-yard individual medley and the 200-yard backstroke.

Jeffrey has won five events in three meets so far this season. Senior Joanne Currah also gave a good showing by winning the 200-yard freestyle and placing second in the 500-yard freestyle. Currah has won four events this season.

The diving team has had success this season with the co-captains leading the way. Michelle Carter (1-meter) and Jennifer Cnota (3-meter) each won events. Cnota won the 3-meter dive event for the second straight meet.

The ASU swimmers and divers continue to win their meets convincingly. The Sun Devils defeated UNLV, 82-29, and New Mexico, 67-28. The 39-point victory over the Lobos is the closest any opponent has come to ASU this season.

The Sun Devil women have now won seven of their last nine meets.

The next meet for the ASU women will take place Friday at 2 p.m. against UCLA at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center in Tempe. They will also host USC on Saturday at 1 p.m. in a dual meet.

Men's Swimming Loses

The men's swimming and diving team suffered its first loss of the season to Texas on Friday but came back for a strong win against UNLV and New Mexico in Saturday's competition.

ROUND-UP

The Longhorns defeated the 12th-ranked Sun Devils 130-111 at the Student Recreation Center, but the Sun Devils returned to their home pool at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center to defeat the Rebels, 82-29, and the Lobos, 67-28.

Senior co-captain Felipe Delgado won the 50-yard freestyle in 20.41 seconds, as well as the 100-free event. He swept both events again on Saturday.

Senior Robert Smith won the 200 free, as well as swimming the anchor leg of the winning 800-free relay team, which included freshmen Richard Greeves and Thomas Hansen and junior Mike Melley. Smith won the 200 and 500 free against UNLV and New Mexico.

In the diving competition, senior captain John Milander won the 1-meter event and placed second in the 3-meter against the Longhorns. UNLV and New Mexico didn't enter any divers; Milander swept both diving events competing against his teammates. Sophomore Justin Eck placed second in both events on Saturday.

Ice Devils Continue Steak

The ASU Ice Devils (6-0) showed they can play with the top teams in the country when they swept the University of Rhode Island (3-4-1) in a two-game series over the weekend.

Coach Gene Hammett was very happy with his team's play against URI.

"I'm really pleased because what we're working on in practice is paying off with the defensive game that we're playing," he said. "I didn't think we would hold them to one goal in the two games. It was huge."

URI Coach Joe Augustine fell victim to the frustration his team was feeling when he got himself ejected from the first game of the series for arguing with an official.

During its three-game win streak, ASU has forced 10 turnovers and only committed one. The Sun Devils are now a plus-4 in turnover ratio for the season and are plus-9 in the last three weeks.

ASU was down 27-10 at halftime, leaving one to wonder what the theme of the locker room session might have been. Snyder said it was nothing fancy.

"It may sound kind of silly, but I think the team listened to it. I told them how we were going to go out and win the ball game," he said. "We weren't in any kind of a panic. We said this is what we have to do; we were capable of doing it. It was very simple. It wasn't a very emotional thing."

Added Plummer of Snyder's halftime speech: "He wrote the script and it was almost like it was made to be."

NOTES:

- ASU wasn't able to stop UCLA's junior tailback Karim Abdul-Jabbar, who gained a game-high 207 yards on 35 carries and scored one touchdown. It was the third consecutive week Abdul-Jabbar rushed for more than 200 yards.

- Junior linebacker Scott Von der Ahe, who leads ASU in tackles with 77, was in a local hospital up until one hour before game time. Snyder said Von der Ahe was suffering from severe dehydration. Von der Ahe, who started and played nearly the entire game, incurred a shoulder stinger and a leg contusion during the battle. While most of the Sun Devil players were celebrating with fans on the field after the game, a visibly spent Von der Ahe was helped off the field by a few teammates.

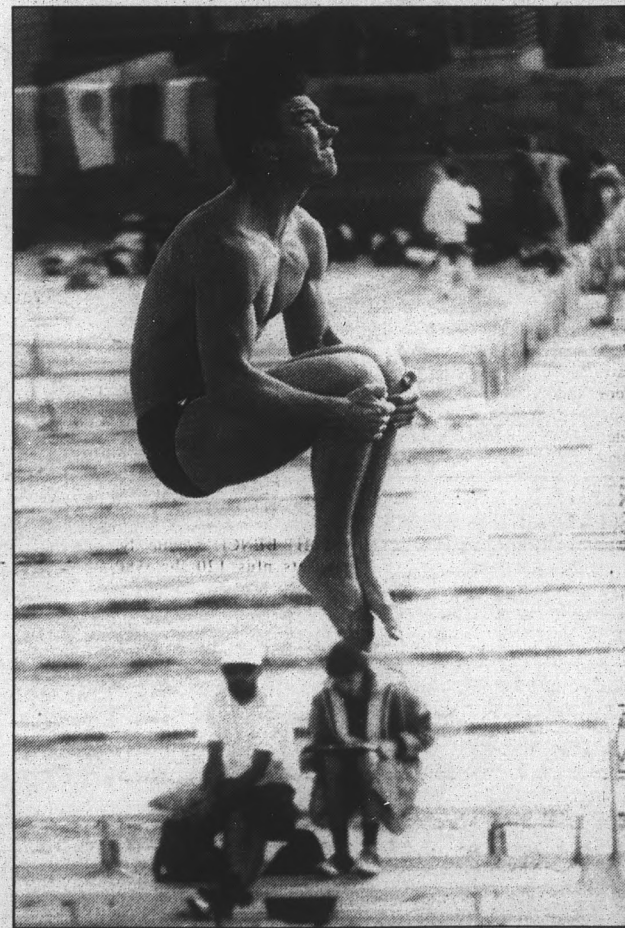

"It was very heroic effort by him," Snyder said.

- Right tackle Glen Gable, who also played at less than 100 percent, had to be given fluids intravenously on Friday.

- Snyder said after reviewing film of the game that he was especially impressed with the play of senior flyback Ryan Wood, whose contributions on the field are not always reflected in tangible statistics.

"He doesn't get any stats and he's really one of the unsung guys on this whole team," Snyder said.

Snyder also said junior left tackle Juan Roque, redshirt-freshman free safety Mitchell Freedman, sophomore strong safety Damien Richardson and sophomore cornerback Jason Simmons delivered standout games.

Notable Quotes: Financial giant, Arles J.F. Morzan: "Millionaires don't use astrology, billionaires do!" Joe Louis, one of boxing's greatest champions: "I was born a Taurus and I suppose I'll die a Taurus!" Angie Dickinson, Libra movie star: "I don't know what my life would have been like without astrology!" Larry King, television luminary: "I don't believe in astrology but remember I'm a Scorpio and we don't believe in anything!" Actress Meryl Streep: "I credit my Moon in Taurus for much of my success!"

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pennies from heaven! Everywhere, the sky appears to rain dollars — you could be in the money, big time! What was held back is revealed to your advantage. Marital status spotlighted.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Neptune keynote blends with your Venus to bring illusion, poetry, beauty, tender loving care. Cycle high, jump aboard bandwagon, sing your own praise. You're going places — with Libra!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Become aware of time in metaphysical and practical sense. Responsibility of deadline involved. You're trusted with confidential information. Don't break release date! Capricorn involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Highlight universal appeal, reach beyond the immediate, deal gingerly with Aries, Libra individuals. Let go of obligation belonging to someone else. Love will coincide with sea journey.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get ready to get set, go! Focus on initiative, originality, independence, fresh start in new direction. You'll be offered executive position. Love plays fascinating role, involves another Leo.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Transform indecision into extraordinary experience! The occult, arcane literature involved. Focus on philosophy, theology, spiritual affairs associated with celebrities. Get it on paper!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Fun and frolic! Burden removed, wardrobe fits fine, you'll be pleased with body image. Secret meeting provides knowledge you are regarded as special. Gemini, Sagittarius in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Another Scorpio helps in reaching legal agreement. Taurus also involved, you learn how the world regards you and what you can anticipate in conjunction with fame, fortune. Marital status involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Check Libra message. Focus on basic issues, care of pets, fitness, diet and nutrition. Trip involves relative who is in a jam. Accent perceptiveness, trust inner feelings. Gemini plays role.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Attention revolves around family, home, decision regarding marriage. Lunar position coincides with physical attraction, exciting experiences, sex appeal. Libra is in fascinating role.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some will tell you, "Come down to earth!" Those possibly are envious people wishing they had your insights. Your prediction fulfilled, you'll be talk of the town. Pisces plays key role.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Obtain hint from Aquarius message. Meet deadline, display ability to bring order out of chaos. Member of opposite sex declares, "I'm drawn to you, can hardly keep my hands off you!" Humor!

IF NOVEMBER 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are drawn to music, theater, drama, color coordination involved in painting. Although diplomatic, you will fight when cause is right. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play meaningful roles in your life. You are gentle but adversaries sense that you also are tough, will never abandon principles. Before November is finished, you'll learn truth about friend who is obsequious rather than loyal. December will be your most exciting month of 1995.
