Vietnam vets urge turnout for Veterans' Day parade

BY ANGELA MULL
STATE PRESS

When Richard Wade's doctor told him an injury would send him home after 2 1/2 years in Vietnam, he could hardly contain his disappointment.

"The only thing I could say to him was, 'Obviously, you haven't been home,'" said the 46-year-old veteran, who spent 17 years in the Army. "I saw some very bad things (in Vietnam), but what hurt the most was coming home."

Wade, ASU Veterans' Services supervisor, said his return to the United States was full of paranoia, fear and confusion.

"You could not be identified as a veteran because you'd get singled out, ridiculed, harassed and beaten up," he said.

Wade said this kind of homecoming is a good reason to have Tempe's Veterans' Day Parade on Friday.

"If we wish to continue drawing off that pool of young men and women that will need to stand in harm's way, then they'll need to believe that we'll support them when they come home," he said.

The parade starts at 10 a.m. Friday with six groups of veterans marching from Grady Gammage Auditorium up Mill Avenue to Fifth Street. It ends with a ceremony honoring veterans at Tempe City Hall, followed by a free picnic.

About 1,800 people turned out for last year's parade, and attendance this year should be about the same, said Jim Grone, a Vietnam vet who served in the Army for three years and is coordinating parade marchers.

Mayor Neil Giuliano, who is serving as the parade's grand marshal, said it is important to acknowledge veterans for their efforts.

"Veterans of our community are people who've gone out there and defended our freedom," he said. "If we have the opportunity to recognize that and honor them, we should do so."

Grone said the event also promotes patriotism.

"We should look back and take a minute and look at what our veterans have done for us in the past and what they've sacrificed," he said.

Wade agreed.

"It's really important that this country realizes that freedom is not free and that there are a lot of people that make major sacrifices to ensure our freedom," he said.

Legislators study voucher plan to ease enrollment growth

BY CODY V. AYCOCK
STATE PRESS

Student enrollment in Arizona universities is expected to skyrocket over the next decade — a forecast that has state officials scrambling for ways to disperse the future fiscal strain.

State legislators think they may have found a solution by funneling students away from public higher education and into private schooling.

Legislators are studying a plan that would entice in-state students away from public universities and into private institutions by offering vouchers to the more expensive schools. These supplements could range from $500 to $1,500, depending on the method used to distribute the money.

Currently, more than 103,000 students attend Arizona's three state universities. By the year 2005, that number is projected to top 149,000.

To meet the growth explosion, the state would have to build a minimum of two new university campuses, according to a voucher feasibility report presented to the Joint Legislative Budget Committee on Wednesday. Campuses limited to undergraduates and designed to enroll 10,000 students would cost $115 million each to build, the report said.

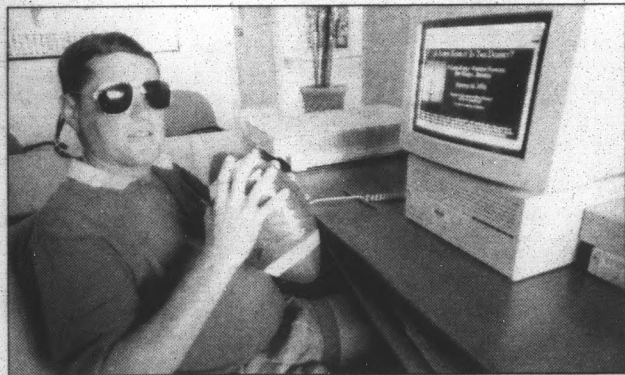

The additional capital costs would be passed on to either the taxpayer or to students in the form of tuition increases.

"(The legislature's) goal is not to build buildings and not to increase the public's commitment to higher education because it is expensive to the taxpayer," said Paul Allvin, executive director of the Arizona Students' Association. "The goal is to push (the educational costs) into the private sector, so the private sector can assume the expense of enrollment increases."

Funding for the voucher program would be drawn from state universities' budgets. Supporters of the plan said vouchers would save the state money because giving students supplements and directing them toward other institu-

ASU's Super forecast: Sunny and warm for Super Bowl XXX

Robert Anderson/State Press

Office of Climatology Director Robert Ballard is predicting great Super Bowl weather — a high of about 70°, sunshine, light winds and no rain. Ballard also predicts a Dallas Cowboys victory over the Kansas City Chiefs.

BY ANGELA MULL
STATE PRESS

Some plans for the Super Bowl are still up in the air, but one thing is clear — the weather.

According to Robert Balling, director of ASU's climatology lab, skies for the Jan. 28 game should be clear and sunny, with an afternoon high of around 70 degrees. Balling and his staff predicted the football forecast after compiling daily temperature records for every Jan. 28 from 1898 to 1995.

"We're always looking to provide climate services to the state," he said of the climatology lab.

Although Balling initiated the project, he sent the results to the Super Bowl XXX Host Committee. The host committee was especially excited about the less than 8 percent chance of rain Balling predicted, because it is perfect weather for entertaining large corporations, said Brent DeRaad, the host committee media relations manager.

"We were enthused to see that the chances for rain that day are minimal," he said. "That's exactly what we're looking for."

Even if it rains during the Super Bowl, Balling said it doesn't mean the forecast was sacked.

"If it happens, I'm not wrong," he said. "It's just that the 8 percent (chance for rain) came up."

Although the forecast could be accurate, the fact that it is a winter prediction is not in its favor, said Doug Green, science and operations officer with the National Weather Service's Phoenix branch.

"The wintertime is more of a hazardous guess," he said, referring to the sudden storms that pop up. "If the Super Bowl is in the spring or fall, the odds are better that the forecast would be right."

Vouchers

tions costs less than educating them.

University President Lattie Coor said the legislature's first priority should be to educate the public and not to steer students from the state-run universities.

"The history of American public universities is such that the state assumes the responsibility to educate its citizens, and that, in my view, is the fundamental commitment the state has made and really has an important responsibility to continue that.

"(Legislatures) should certainly meet their obligations to the public institutions," he added.

State legislators could not be reached for comment.

Allvin said he is opposed to the voucher program because poorer students, even with additional money, would not be able to attend the higher priced private institutions.

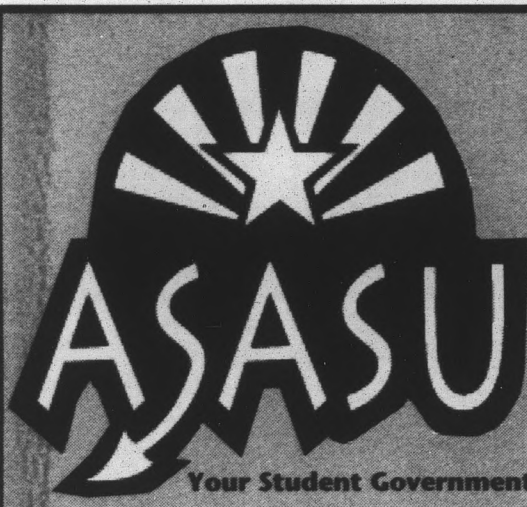

"It would be bad for lower-class students because ... they would not realistically be able to participate in this program," he said. "The kind of vouchers that they are talking about ... are not enough to bring private-school tuition into the range of affordability."

The cost of 12 credit hours at Grand Canyon University, a private university in Phoenix, is $2,976. A $1,000 state voucher would still leave $1,976 in tuition fees. ASU tuition is $99 per credit hour.

Senate ends moratorium on abortion legislation

PHOENIX (AP) — State senators have agreed to consider two abortion measures in the next legislative session, ending a two-year moratorium on abortion-related bills.

The proposals would link a parental-consent measure with funds for family planning and teen pregnancy prevention, Senate President John Greene said Tuesday.

Greene, R-Phoenix, said months of talks with Republican senators convinced him that the two proposals could be introduced without controversy during the 1996 session, which begins in January.

"I can't say it's going to be a slam dunk, but the issues are important enough to people in both caucuses that there will be the votes (for passage)," Greene said.

Under the proposed legislation, funds for family planning would go to a "notch group" — working poor people who do not qualify for the Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System, the state's alternative to Medicaid. Funds also would go to programs to prevent teen-age pregnancy.

Under the parental-consent measure, an abortion for a girl under 18 would require a parent's approval. The bill includes a provision allowing a judge's approval to substitute for the parent's.

The Senate banned the consideration of abortion-related legislation after such measures created rifts among the majority Republicans.

Senate Health Committee Chairwoman Ann Day, R-Tucson, called the agreement to proceed with the bills a victory, but said she was cautiously optimistic.

"It's a comprehensive effort to reduce teen pregnancies and reduce abortion at the same time," said Day, who has tried for years to get funds for family-planning programs.

Forbes struggling to get in presidential primary

PHOENIX (AP) — A spokeswoman for Steve Forbes' presidential campaign said Wednesday that the publisher is prepared to "do whatever it takes" to get on Arizona's presidential primary ballot in February.

Forbes has shot to near the top of the Republican heap in Arizona since launching his anti-tax presidential campaign earlier this year. But, because of a quirk in the state law, he may not be able to qualify for the Feb. 27 primary ballot.

The law allows only those candidates who qualify for federal campaign matching funds to be included on the Arizona ballot. That means only those candidates who have raised at least $5,000 in donations in at least 20 different states.

Forbes, who is spending his own money on his campaign, seems unlikely to meet that requirement and has said he doesn't intend to accept public money in any case.

Failure to qualify for the Arizona ballot would be a big setback for the Forbes campaign, spokeswoman Gretchen Morgensen said. She said the campaign has focused on Arizona because of the early GOP primary.

"Arizona is important to us," she said. "We are optimistic about getting on the ballot. Our lawyer is talking to the secretary of state and we're prepared to do whatever it takes to qualify."

'I'm sorry I disappointed you'

Powell bows out of 1996 race after 'prayerful consideration'

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of "prayerful consideration" that captivated the nation, Colin Powell awkwardly embraced the Republican Party on Wednesday but said he would not run for president in 1996 because it was "a calling that I do not yet hear."

Ending an extraordinary political mystery, Powell ruled out seeking any elected office next year. Instead, he said he would dedicate himself to restoring "the spirit of Lincoln" to a Republican Party he said was a lot more diverse than many conservatives would care to admit.

"I'm sorry I disappointed you," the retired general said in a poignant tribute to the thousands of everyday Americans who had urged him to run, in person, through letters and by joining draft Powell efforts.

"We're devastated," said James Lynch, a New York lawyer involved in the draft effort. Said Tim Bush, an organizer in New Hampshire: "I think really the country is the loser."

Such support brought him to the brink of a candidacy, Powell said, but in the end he stepped back from elective politics — for now anyway.

To run for president, he said, would demand "a passion and commitment that, despite my every effort, I do not have for political life, because such a life requires a calling that I do not yet hear."

"For me to pretend otherwise would not be honest to myself, it would not be honest to the American people."

Powell also ruled out being the GOP's vice presidential nominee, but said he might consider an appointed government position. Many Republicans, even Powell critics, said the retired general still was almost certain to be considered for the No. 2 spot on the GOP ticket.

Retired Gen. Colin Powell announces he will not seek the presidency in 1996 during a news conference in Alexandria, Va. Powell's announcement opens the door for Sen. Bob Dole as front runner on the Republican ticket.

Dole, Clinton can breathe easier now

News analysis
By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidential race just got a little simpler and — perhaps — a lot less interesting. With Colin Powell's retreat, Sen. Bob Dole can reclaim his Republican front-runner label from cold storage.

President Clinton can breathe a little easier, too. The retired general's unequivocal announcement Wednesday that he will not seek the presidency in 1996 ends the autumn freeze that had descended on the GOP field.

And, unless House Speaker Newt Gingrich seeks a new opportunity for himself, Dole clearly gains the most with Powell out of the picture.

"Time is the friend of the front-runner and the enemy of the challenger," said Rich Bond, a Dole strategist. "And two more months have just run off the clock."

Dole's team confidently expected many fence-sitting Republicans who'd been holding out for Powell to now come their way. The other candidates were hopeful too.

"Everybody who is running is happy in the short run," said Steven Wayne, a political scientist at Georgetown University. "Dole gets the nomination, the Republicans presumably unify, Clinton does well one-on-one with Dole. All breathe a collective — and very private — sigh of relief."

But the race becomes far less fascinating. "You're back to the Clinton-Dole yawner," said New York pollster Lee Miringoff, director of Marist College's Institute for Public Opinion.

None of the contenders has been able to generate the kind of enthusiasm the popular retired general did as he crisscrossed the country in his 25-city book tour.

For his part, Dole voiced "great respect and admiration" for Powell.

Police arrest more suspects in Rabin murder

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The leader of an anti-Arab group and another suspect were arrested in the assassination of Yitzhak Rabin, police said Wednesday, reinforcing suspicions of a right-wing conspiracy to kill the prime minister.

Israel radio also reported the arrest of yet another suspect — bringing the total number detained to five — but the report was not immediately confirmed.

Police suspect the militant leader, Avishai Raviv, knew about the plan to kill Rabin and told a Tel Aviv court that they believed Raviv was "a catalyst in the murder."

Raviv heads Eyal, an offshoot of the Kach group founded by the slain American rabbi, Meir Kahane. He told the court, without specifying, that Rabin's confessed killer had made vague threats, but that he "never took him seriously."

The 28-year-old Raviv lives in Kiryat Arba outside Hebron, home to some of the most militant Jews on the West Bank and some of the most virulent anti-Rabin sentiment.

Wearing a blue knitted skullcap, blue T-shirt and jeans, Raviv was brought into the Tel Aviv Magistrate's Court this evening shouting, "This is a political investigation. This is a dictatorship."

He told the court that when Rabin was shot after a peace rally in Tel Aviv on Saturday, he was at a counter-demonstration there and did not know where the confessed gunman, Yigal Amir, was.

In an interview with the Yediot Ahronot newspaper shortly before his arrest Monday night, Raviv said the confessed gunman was very close to the members of Eyal — which has about two dozen members — but was not an active member of the group.

Suspected of conspiracy and failure to prevent a crime, he was ordered held for seven days.

Israel radio said that in addition to Raviv, two other new suspects, Eyal member Benny Aharoni, and West Bank seminary student Dror Adani, thought to be a friend of Amir, were also arrested.

Police have been investigating whether the confessed gunman, a 25-year-old law student, was part of a right-wing conspiracy. Police said they were also checking whether Amir's brother Hagai, 27, was a member of another Kach offshoot, the Kahane Chai group.

Opinion

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

We know that it's only Thursday, and that Friday is usually Boos and Bravos day. But since we won't be publishing for Veteran's Day, we figured we couldn't send you off on your three-day weekend without giving you your weekly dose ...

BRAVO — To ASASU President Chris Weber.

Yes, we know that we've been launching broadsides against Weber for the past month now. But he definitely deserves credit for his work to bring polling sites to campus.

Just think — during the 1996 general election, you might be able to vote in the Memorial Union. Or, with the arrival of early voting, you could have the option of voting several weeks in advance of Election Day.

Polling sites on campus are something that we've needed for a long time. For that, Weber deserves thanks for a job well done.

BOO — To the newest revelation in the Beebe Mouton-Moose saga.

Apparently, Mouton has claimed now that she set out the antifreeze-laced cat food in order to kill ants.

What, has she never heard of Raid?

BOO — To Colin Powell, for ducking out of a presidential bid.

After months of pseudo-campaigning, Powell had the nation wondering about the possibilities. Even we have to admit that we were intrigued by the prospect of the first-ever African-American president.

Powell could have made a good president. Now, it looks like the choice in '96 will be between Dole and Clinton — a choice we don't relish making.

BRAVO — To Maine voters, who defeated an anti-gay rights measure Tuesday by a 54-46 percent vote.

Many Americans still believe, unfortunately, that homosexuality is a lifestyle choice, rather than an innate part of a person's being, much like race. As an extension of this deluded belief, some periodically try to ban laws that protect their civil and human rights from prejudicial or bigoted actions.

No one should be persecuted or discriminated against because of who they are. This is the entire point of civil and human rights laws. Gays and lesbians deserve such protection, just as much as any other human beings.

Luckily — at least in Maine — logic and tolerance have prevailed.

BRAVO — To America's veterans.

We often forget the sacrifices veterans have made to this nation. A stint in the armed forces is certainly no picnic — any veteran will be able to tell you horror stories of their time in boot camp.

Many other veterans experienced more than this — they defended their nation in war, the most horrible single experience a human being can go through. They fought, bled and died because they believed in their nation — and they believed in liberty.

Because of our veterans, America remains free — a fact we often forget. It is a shame that it takes Veteran's Day for us to remember them.

Bravo, veterans. We owe you our freedom — the most precious gift we could possibly ask for.

Kiss traditions good-bye as almighty dollar takes control

I'm spittin' mad. Does tradition mean anything to anyone anymore?

The audacity some people like Art Modell have is irritating. Yes, I speak of the recent decision to move a tradition-rich NFL team like the Cleveland Browns away from where they were born.

The 45-year-old team is making a move to Baltimore, Md., which used to have a team that left a nice little stadium which hasn't been used in 11 years. It just goes to show that everything, especially something considered fun and recreational, is all business.

One big problem I have with the move is that the city and the fans had no say in the decision. And that team had no problem in packing the "Dawg Pound" full of literally barking fans. I've always appreciated a bunch of spectators who acted like canines for their team.

When people live in a city with a professional sports franchise, unless they already follow another, they tend to root for the home team. Taking that away from them does matter. Aren't the fans supposed to be the reason that any sports team exists?

Actually, if that is the way things work, then the Cards should've been whisked away long ago to a city who cares enough not to have television blackouts. Are the Cleveland Cardinals in the near future? Don't laugh, it's very possible. Ten bucks says that Houston will make a move next season. Next thing you know the Vince Lombardi Super Bowl Trophy will be named after — heaven forbid — Mike Ditka or Jimmy Johnson. What a crime that would be.

The nickname Browns came from Coach Paul Brown, who coached in Cleveland in the 40s and 50s. To move the Browns — Brown's Browns — to Baltimore is just not right. Besides, I'm still getting over being used to saying the Baltimore Colts.

A. MARJORY KAMINSKI
Columnist

This also affects me because my favorite team, the Green Bay Packers, is also full of history and is the only NFL team that is owned by the town of Green Bay, Wis., not some rich jerk whose only goal in life is to become richer. So you could say I'm a bit biased. This town ownership luckily keeps the team in their home town — where they should be with their fans. They are practically the only team left in their original city. I think that's what makes me like them even more. Until the Packers make the move to Fargo, N.D., I'll stick with them — not that they ever will be moved. (Sorry, my bias kicked in again.)

This is not only happening in the National Football League. The NHL pretty much was spawned in Canada and moved in on America. Now, our neighboring country is on the move to losing their cities' teams to the United States, the most recent loss being the Quebec Nordiques to the Avalanche in Colorado. With the way some talk is going, we'll see a few more Canadian teams — not purposely — defecting. Negotiations for Winnipeg are occurring right now.

I do realize that some of the teams wouldn't exist if it weren't for these business moguls, but when they've got city support, why do they have to move away from it?

It seems if the cash isn't flowing in quickly enough, they're Casper — outta there. Teams do need a little time to mold in their new surroundings. (Yes, I speak of the Cardinals and Bidwill. Fans are slowly beginning to "warm up" to Arizona's team.)

I'm not sure anything can be done to stop these business deals from going on. Fans, citizens, team players and coaches can't stop the insta-whims of the mega-wealthy owners. They either don't have the money or the power.

With all the something-odd-year anniversaries going on, including the 75th anniversary of the NFL, you'd think traditions would mean something. It does to me. It doesn't to these businessmen. It just revolves around the ever-glorious almighty dollar.

Despite bad decision, Clinton not truly evil

To sit across the broad oak table from the 42nd president of the United States is to connect not so much with power as with naked policy.

William Jefferson Clinton is not evil. Evil had just walked out of the Oval Office in the person of Newt Gingrich. I caught only a glimpse of the blue serge back. Still, like gazing upon a cobra from the rear, the sensation was that his eyes burned even from the back. To appreciate fully the visage of this lecturer from Georgia, one must try watching one of his C-Span homilies with the audio turned down. If he was put on this earth to do good, then the gods, indeed, played dirty tricks with his eyes.

Were Newt not enough, Bob Dole darkened the White House corridor just behind him — sounding, and even looking, like Darth Vader without his helmet.

No, Bill Clinton is not evil. He is a man of considerable charm and smarts and even strength. The quality he steadily emits, though, and it takes a while to pick it up, is the need to be liked. He is not unctuous about it — say like O.J. Simpson was up until June 12, 1994. Instead, Clinton calibrates his impressive cerebral powers, it seems, not only to be understood and agreed with, but also to be liked. Presidents, and good ones, have had traits far worse. Still, this questing aspect of Clinton's is one you would rather see in an enemy. It must drive friends, close associates and, I imagine, Hillary to distraction.

LES PAYNE

A dozen of us had come to the Cabinet Room Wednesday (Nov. 1) to interview Bill Clinton as Black columnists attuned to seismic rumblings of the race issues enlivening the national debate. The president bopped in like a quarterback and chatted away during the ensuing 90 minutes like the governor of a small state.

There is nothing small, however, about this president's grasp of the details of policy. Unlike other such wonks of the White House, say Jimmy Carter, he is also sentient and so very personable. No previous U.S. president, and few White men, could be so comfortable discussing race, or being around Black people, as Bill Clinton. His discourse on these issues went further down the road, his aides assure us, than previously, but this essay will hold for another day.

The highly-charged racial policy of the week had passed under Bill Clinton's pen Monday, much to the disappointment of African Americans. The bill keeps in place a system that mandates prison sentences 100 times greater for those convicted of crack cocaine offenses as opposed to those with powdered cocaine. The sad reality, of course, is that Blacks convicted speedily and given greater penalties in this republic even for the exact same offense.

But, since Blacks tend disproportionately to use and deal with crack, this great — and unjust — disparity in punishment is boldly and irrefutably racist in its application. It is as if the U.S. government, under a prohibition of alcohol, would, upon noticing that Blacks drink disproportionately more malt liquor, proceed to mandate a penalty 100 times greater for possessing Colt 45 than Coors.

We made the point to Clinton, however, that his drug-sentencing legislation is explosive because it continues to imprison for five years the first-time offender caught with five grams of crack while granting probation for the same amount of powdered cocaine.

"There's no question that the disparity is entirely too great in the sentencing," Clinton told us. "This bill does not provide any relief." In this election season, he got on his anti-crime high horse and emphasized the bill's penalty for drug-money laundering, trafficking — as opposed to the first-time, nonviolent possession offenders filling the prisons. On this potentially explosive issue, he indicated that he's planning to close the disparate sentencing gap by raising the penalty for powdered cocaine.

Miffed somewhat by answers, the columnists nonetheless went away with warm feelings about Clinton. What gloom they felt about the republic was stirred not by the president, but by Dole and Gingrich ambling out into the night on Pennsylvania Avenue.

Rape happens to men, too

I keep reading about the rapes that are happening to women out there. But women aren't the only ones who are raped. Though the percentage is lower, there are men out there that are also getting raped, by both men and women. And men are less likely to talk about it than women are. They are brought up in a society that shuns the thought of male rape.

I knew a man who had been raped. I would rather not say how I know him or reveal his name to respect his privacy, but he has allowed me to tell his story. When he was 13 years old, he and his best friend slept over a mutual friend's house. The boy's mother would not allow the boys to sleep in the same room with one another, for she believed they would be loud and obnoxious. So, they were separated.

Sometime during the middle of the night, the friend's brother came into the room my friend was in. From there, he started to touch him and proceeded to rape him. After that, my friend didn't trust staying at anyone's house or even being around other boys. He feared changing in the locker room, believing someone would be able to tell. He knew that if others found out they would call him a "fag" or "queer."

For five long years, he kept this secret inside until he revealed it to me. He has never gotten over this. He always felt that there was no one he could talk to or call. He never thought anyone would believe him because he thought that only women could get raped.

In today's society, all we ever talk about is the rape of women. But what about the men out there? How can they go on without the fear that people aren't going to believe them? Women receive sympathy for what they have been through, men do not.

The justice system does nothing to help these men. In its eyes, if a man gets an erection, then it was not rape. How can they let that happen? Most men won't ever talk about what happened to them and the ones that do must go on believing that because they didn't have control of their bodies, then it was their fault.

We need to start realizing that rape has no sexual preference. It can happen to anyone, men and women alike. We need to help all victims overcome the ordeal they have had to face.

To those men out there that have been through this, please don't remain silent any longer. You may help to prevent this from happening to another person.

Leader's death felt by all

As a Jewish student at ASU, I found Rabin's murder very sad. This man, who was present from the beginning of the state of Israel, did not deserve to die in such an awful way.

Rabin was going to finally make peace for Israel and hopefully put an end to all the hate going on in the Middle East. He was a great man who will not only be missed by people in Israel and by Jews, but by anyone willing to make a stand and fight for peace.

Editor's note:

Last weekend Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was assassinated after speaking at a peace rally in Tel Aviv. Rabin won a Nobel Peace Prize for trying to restore peace in the Middle East. The State Press would like to hear your opinions on this assassination, and on the life of Rabin.

Powell

Powell's decision left 10 declared Republican candidates and one GOP giant still sitting on the fence: House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

Gingrich said anew he was unlikely to run for president, but that he would talk it over with his wife after Republicans finished work on the budget.

As he bowed out of the presidential race, Powell for the first time pledged political allegiance — to a Republican Party he said was rightly dedicated to balancing the budget, cutting taxes and shrinking government.

"I believe they have ideas and energy at this time that I can align with," he said.

But he bluntly rebuked prominent conservatives for "ad hominem" attacks on his character. He also said the party would be wise to show more compassion as it reforms welfare and to welcome blacks and other minorities.

"I believe I can help the party of Lincoln move once again closer to the spirit of Lincoln," he said.

ASU teams up with NFL for career-oriented lectures

By TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

In searching for more ways to get students involved with the Super Bowl, ASU student government has teamed up with the NFL to bring speakers on campus to show students the other side of the big game.

According to Joe Kelly, Associated Students of ASU Super Bowl coordinator, speakers from public relations and marketing firms to ESPN will show students what goes on behind the scenes of the Super Bowl.

"We set up these lectures so students can see, first hand, what goes on behind the scenes," he said. "They could help some students make a career determination."

Kelly said the "career-oriented discussions" will be the most beneficial to public relations and marketing students, showing them how to get started in a career in the sports industry.

ASASU President Chris Weber said the lectures were developed jointly by ASASU and the NFL.

"This is another way that we are making the NFL benefit students," he said. "If we were to put these on ourselves, they would cost $50,000 per lecture."

The NFL, however, is picking up the cost to bring the speakers to campus. NFL Special Events Assistant Mary Briggs said all of the lecturers are donating their time because they "enjoy talking about their jobs."

Briggs said this is the first time the NFL has sponsored an event like this.

"We want to give students an understanding of the careers in sports," she said. "The Super Bowl is not just a game, it has a lot of facets."

Kelly said ASU is the first school to have a complete NFL experience in conjunction with the Super Bowl.

"Whatever we can get that will be a benefit to the students, we will work double time to get," he said.

Briggs said the lectures are a way to compensate for the inconveniences the Super Bowl will cause.

"We want to give something back to ASU," she said, "due to the sheer inconvenience."

The lecture schedule is as follows:

- Special Events and Public Relations in Sports, 6 to 8 p.m. tonight in BAC 116.
- Sports Marketing, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Nov. 16 in BAC 116.
- Making the Transition from the Field to the Office, 6 to 8 p.m. Nov. 29 in the MU Cinema.

Stephen Hawking takes Star Trek seriously, shouldn't you?

The writers of Star Trek ask many of the same questions as modern physicists:

- Can antimatter be used to power space flight?
- Are warp speed and time travel theoretically—and practically—possible?
- Will we ever be able to beam up?

Lawrence M. Krauss Professor of Physics at Case Western Reserve explores the fascinating possibilities suggested by the world's favorite science fiction series in a book that will forever change your definition of the impossible.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

- Someone broke into a Sun Devil Stadium sky box and stole two wine bottles and discharged a fire extinguisher.
- A male student reported that he was threatened by another man at 717 Alpha Drive.
- Someone broke into a woman's car parked in Lot 59 and stole stereo equipment.
- Someone stole $719 from 600 E. University Drive.
- Someone damaged the water fountain in the Technology Annex Building.
- Two bicycles were reported stolen.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

- An unknown man committed armed robbery at Checker Auto Parts, 1809 E. Baseline Road. The man entered the store, shopped around and then brought an item to the check-out counter. After he paid for the item and the cash register was open, the man pulled out a gun and told the clerk to give him all the money in the register. During this time, he made other store clerks and customers lay on the floor. After getting the money, he then fled. The suspect is described as a white man, 5 feet 10 inches to 6 feet tall, medium build, short brown hair with long sideburns.

- A 66-year-old man was arrested for trespassing after refusing to leave McDonald's, 3218 S. McClintock Drive. He was told to leave three times, but he refused, saying he was cold. He later told store employees to go ahead and have him arrested.

Total Product Support Engineer

Semiconductor chips are at the heart of the global digital revolution. And innovative wafer manufacturing systems, processes and services are core enablers of the chipmaking process. That's the world of Applied Materials. We're the world's largest supplier of these key semiconductor manufacturing process technologies. Technologies that enable the chips that drive advanced products from cellular phones and security systems, to automobiles and ATMs.

We're currently seeking candidates for the following:

In an intensive 9-month training program, you will gain hands-on experience within the Total Product Support (TPS) function. You will train with TPS engineers and learn how total product support fosters a close link between our customers in the field and the product-specific knowledge at the factory. In this exciting training program, you will develop hardware knowledge through a mentor-based manufacturing experience, and you will also gain product-specific process knowledge. Your business background will be heightened by a better understanding of organizational missions and strategies.

The program consists of orientation, professional development, and technical classes, as well as manufacturing, applications and field rotation assignments. Successful candidates will have great interpersonal and communications skills and a BSEET, BSEE or BSME with emphasis on hands-on electrical or mechanical technology. You must be a December graduate, ready to start the training program on January 15, 1996 and have a minimum 2.8 GPA. You must be extremely proficient with Windows and standard Microsoft products on the PC. Training is conducted in Santa Clara, CA.

Pre-Law Day to give law school info

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

Students and non-students alike will have the opportunity between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. tomorrow to check out law schools from coast to coast at Pre-Law Day in the Ventana Room of the Memorial Union.

Students attending the event, sponsored by the Western Association of Pre-Law Advisers, will be able to obtain information from 76 law schools, including Harvard University, Pepperdine University and ASU's own College of Law.

Jan Mundy, pre-law coordinator, said law school recruiters, admissions directors and former students will be present to provide free information about their schools and to answer any questions prospective law students might have.

"This is a case where the mountain comes to the mole hill," she said. "It's a chance to get additional information. All of the glossy brochures tell you lots of things, but they might not tell you negative things like high crime rates or being in the middle of a slum area."

She added that people who come to the convention will ultimately save money because they will not have to travel to every school they are interested in.

Wanda Decrow, admissions adviser for ASU's law school, said she is uncertain what effect the Veteran's Day holiday, which is also Friday, will have on attendance.

"We don't know what to expect," she said. "People might not come if they don't have to get up for class."

However, Mundy said it could be advantageous that Pre-Law Day will be held on the holiday because classes are not in session.

"It's wonderful, in a way, that it's on a holiday because there is free parking," she said. "Before, they (students) had to wait in line to talk to a person. This way, they can stay all that time and don't have to run off to class, leaving them more time to really visit with the schools."

ration for Colin Powell" and said he hoped the general would help his campaign in some way.

With no Powell factor, Dole continues to run strong among Republicans in polls, comfortably outdistancing his nearest competitor, Sen. Phil Gramm. While the lime-light shone on Powell Wednesday, Dole picked up the important endorsement of New Hampshire Gov. Steve Merrill.

Even rivals conceded Powell's withdrawal helps Dole the most. "Sure. From the standpoint of had Powell run, Dole would have been totally eclipsed in about 30 days," suggested Charlie Black, a Gramm strategist.

White House officials publicly contained their enthusiasm. "We were prepared to take our case to the country no matter what Colin Powell decided to do," said deputy chief of staff Harold Ickes.

But they privately rejoiced. Polls showed Powell would be a far more formidable opponent than Dole or any of the other GOP candidates.

"We've dodged the big bullet," said one Clinton aide.

Powell's withdrawal could present an opportunity for Gingrich, who has said he probably wouldn't run for president but hasn't ruled it out.

But Gingrich has always been plagued with high negatives. "He's too smart to run. He knows his numbers. But he also wants to be president. You can never read these guys," said Stuart Rothenberg, a political newsletter publisher.

Various Sun Devils kneel in prayer after last week's 37-33 win over the UCLA Bruins. ASU visits Cal Saturday in Berkeley in an effort to keep its post-season hopes alive.

Sun Devils prepare for brush with Bears

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

The formula seems simple enough. Win two more and wait.

But the ASU football team knows there is a mountain of work to be done if it wants a chance for its first post-season appearance since 1987.

First, the Sun Devils must hurdle their next major road block — the fourth in a series of must-win games — Saturday against California, a team which has assumed the role of spoilers.

"They're a team with nothing to lose," said ASU junior quarterback Jake Plummer, who, along with the rest of the Sun Devils, will square off at 1:30 p.m. at Memorial Stadium in Berkeley. "We're taking the attitude we had for the last three games. We're going there to outplay them and outphysical them."

ASU Head Coach Bruce Snyder said Cal's talent and its go-for-broke mentality could create a crisis.

"When you relieve the pressure off a team, I've seen more times than not that they play better," he said of the Golden Bears (3-6, 2-4 in the Pac-10), who have won two of their last three but still have no chance for a bowl bid. "My thinking is they may be just hitting their stride and that is really scary."

The Sun Devils (5-4, 3-3), who have the momentum of three-game winning streak which included triumphs over BYU, Oregon and UCLA, need to beat Cal and rival UofA on Nov. 24 to secure themselves a shot at a bowl invitation.

"It makes me nervous because they've got a good team, but it doesn't show in their record," admitted Sun Devil junior wideout Keith Poole, who added he doesn't care if he catches a pass all day as long as the Sun Devils win.

Snyder said his biggest mid-week injury concerns revolve around senior cornerback Lee Cole (groin), red-shirt-freshman linebacker Larry Johnson (hamstring) and sophomore tailbacks Michael Martin (ankle) and Terry Battle (knee). Both Martin and Battle have seen limited action in practice this week.

Senior tailback Chris Hopkins and redshirt-freshman Brian Singleton both took several reps with the first team Wednesday.

"I hope for all of them to be up and ready to go by Saturday," Snyder said.

ASU in midst of bowl race

BY DUSTIN KRUGEL
STATE PRESS

ASU's bowl hopes are anything but crystal clear.

The Sun Devils are currently tied for fourth place with three other teams in the Pac-10 conference with a 3-3 record. Pac-10 has arrangements to place four teams in bowls. They include the Rose Bowl, Cotton Bowl or Plymouth Holiday Bowl, Sun Bowl and the Jeep Eagle Aloha Bowl.

The Sun Devils' strongest bowl possibilities include the Sun Bowl and Jeep Eagle Aloha Bowl.

A Sun Bowl official confirmed earlier in the week that if ASU continues to win, it would be a strong candidate, while Aloha Bowl officials said it is still early.

"They have as good a chance as anyone," Marcia Klompus, executive director of the Jeep Eagle Aloha Bowl, said. "Do we have interest? Certainly, but we won't be making any real decisions until after the games this weekend."

Klompus said the Sun Devils' passing game would be attractive in the Honolulu-based bowl game.

"They're really a good team. They play the kind of football we like," she said, referring to ASU's passing game. "We like it up in the air like that."

Another bowl possibility is the Poulan/Weed Eater Independence Bowl, which is the only bowl with two at-large bids.

Glen Krupica, executive director of the Independence Bowl, said he is open to the idea of hosting a Pac-10 team if he can draw one local team. The Independence Bowl is in Shreveport, La.

"We're wide open to who could come here," Krupica said. "We will be considering Stanford, the Arizona schools and maybe UCLA."

"They (ASU) could come here, but there are 20 or 25 teams we're looking at right now. But if they win their last two games they would probably be one of the hottest teams in nation."

Sun Devil volleyball hosts Pac-rivals UCLA, USC

By Dawn Wagner
STATE PRESS

Now that the ASU volleyball season is winding down, the remaining regular season games are crucial.

Each one will determine whether or not the Sun Devils can get a first-round bye in the NCAA tournament.

This weekend is ASU's first chance to try to secure a first-round bye when it takes on UCLA and USC at home.

The Bruins come to the University Activity Center at 7 p.m. Friday, while the Trojans visit at 7 p.m. Saturday.

From this point on, Coach Patti Snyder-Park said that will be their main concern, but they cannot let it take away from their fundamentals.

"We are going to try to end the season on a good note," Snyder-Park said. "but you still want to maintain your performance and play well."

With the team still struggling with consistency emotionally and physically, this weekend's match-ups will put them to the test, Snyder-Park added.

"We have to make sure we're efficient on our side of the net," she said.

Both teams are ranked in the top 20 with UCLA at the No. 8 spot and USC at the No. 16 spot. ASU is currently ranked 13th.

"This weekend, for us to pick off both teams is crucial to maintain our fourth place (standing in the region)," Snyder-Park said. "With the loss to Oregon State last weekend, we may have actually slipped to fifth place."

The top four spots in each region receive a first-round bye in post-season play.

Women's swimmers hit water

The ASU swimming team (3-0) takes on two Pac-10 opponents in separate meets this weekend. The Sun Devils will take on UCLA at 2 p.m. Friday at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center in Tempe. USC will be the team du jour for ASU at 2 p.m. Saturday, also in Tempe.

The Bruins lead the all-time series 8-5 in dual meets and won the last meeting in 1994 in Los Angeles.

The road doesn't get much easier for ASU when the Trojans march into town. Southern Cal is a formidable opponent after finishing third in last year's NCAA Championships, one spot ahead of ASU.

For the Sun Devils to be successful they will need to get strong performances from swimmers other than veterans Chris Jeffrey and Joanne Currah.

Men's swimmers on deck

The 12th-ranked men's swimming and diving team will take on USC at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center, a team ranked in the top 10 nationally.

The Sun Devils lost to the Trojans in a dual meet last season, but edged them at the Pac-10s, finishing second.

Ice Devils over the boards

The ASU Ice Devils (6-0) will take their undefeated record to Flagstaff to take on rival Northern Arizona University (0-5-1) at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Jay Lively Activity Center.

The Ice Devils are 2-0 against the Lumberjacks this season, outscoring them 20-1.

LETTER TO SANTA CONTEST!

HO. HO. HO.

It's that time of year again! Christmas is sneaking up on us ... before you know it, Santa will be wiggling down your chimney and filing your home with gifts of joy (if you've been good and you still believe in Santa Claus!).

Anyway, we are having our annual "Letters to Santa Contest." All you have to do is write a letter to Santa. It can be funny, creative, political, socially correct, sad, touching, senseless, inane, insane, colorful, vivid, cold ... you get the message.

There will be three winners. Judges will award a $25 dining gift certificate to the first place winner, $10 in "movie money" from Harkins Theatres to the second place winner and a State Press coffee mug to the third place winner.

All entries will be published in the December 5 State Press Final Edition. The three winners will have their letters published in large type, large enough to cut out and magnet to the fridge as a joyous reminder of the festive season, not to mention large enough to cut out extra copies to give to everyone they know.

Dust off your keyboards, sharpen your pencils and begin your letters today. This is your chance to (finally) tell your parents that you "got published." Bring your disk (Mac preferred) to the State Press, Matthews Center Basement, Room 47 by noon Thursday, Nov. 30. Include your name, phone number and ASU ID#. Students and staff are encouraged to enter.

ASU FOOTBALL FANS: IT'S WEEK 10

As a reminder, the State Press sports department is sponsoring the weekly "PICK IT AND WIN" contest for ASU football games. The final deadline for this week's contest is today at 5 p.m.

To win, contestants must correctly predict the winner and final score of the ASU football games on Saturday. The Sun Devils' next game is Saturday against California at 1:30 p.m. at Memorial Stadium in Berkeley.

The weekly winner receives: an ASU cap courtesy of The Cap Co. on 6th and Mill, an autographed Jake Plummer poster schedule of courtesy of ASU athletics, a headshot in Monday's State Press sports section, an ASU sports calendar and a bonus prize!

If none of the contestants in a given week predict the exact score, then the winner will be determined by which contestant comes closest.

In the event of a tie, the winner will be drawn out of a hat.

Entries must be either faxed to 602-965-8484, Attn: Sports Editor, or dropped off at the State Press offices in the basement of Matthews Center. Entries should include name, ID#, class, major and ph#.

MIDNIGHT DREARY

You're a Business Major cramming for an English Lit exam. It's late and you're cranky. You keep thinking, "How the heck is the damn 'Raven' gonna help me land a job on Wall Street?" You get angry. So you call Dad to vent. He helps you understand the importance of it all. Then he yells at you for dialing zero to call collect. Quoth the father, "Nevermore."
