Student body to decide ASASU president's fate

BY TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

After two arrests and an unsuccessful impeachment by the senate, ASASU President Chris Weber's political fate will now be decided by the student body.

The Associated Students of ASU Business Office staff completed verification of recall petition signatures Thursday. According to ASASU adviser Becca Stout, exactly 2,500 verified signatures calling for Weber's removal were collected — more than enough to force a recall election.

WEBER

The exact date for the election will be determined by the executive committee when they meet next week. Stout said the election will probably be held the week following the Thanksgiving break.

Weber refused to speculate on the outcome of the election.

"This is just another step in the process," he said. "I just hope that students make educated decisions when the time comes."

Weber was arrested in September for allegedly hitting a female student during a barroom brawl and again in October for trespassing and disorderly conduct at Palo Verde Main. Both incidents involved members from Weber's fraternity, Pi Kappa Alpha.

Weber maintains his innocence in both cases.

Woman threatens contractor with lawsuit over fumes injury

BY KELLY WENDEL
STATE PRESS

A former ASU student is threatening to sue a Scottsdale construction firm, claiming she was "permanently injured" by chemicals the firm used during a recent remodeling of the Matthews Center.

Coreene Lane, who was a senior religious studies major and employee at the Disabled Student Resource Center, alleges that Morris Building and Management workers "irresponsibly" sprayed Decolac Lacquer during remodeling in the Matthews Center Sept. 12 and 13. She said the toxic lacquer was used without proper ventilation and that workers failed to warn people inside the building.

But Randy Morris, of Morris Building and Management, denies any wrongdoing.

"We believe these claims to be unsubstantiated," he said.

Lane and Morris's insurance company are currently negotiating an out-of-court settlement, Lane said.

Workers for Al Brown Painting, subcontracted by Morris Building and Management for the Matthews Center project, began spraying the lacquer on the evening of Sept. 13 while students and employees still occupied the building.

After numerous complaints by people in the building to the ASU Department of Public Safety, Risk Management services dispatched ASU Fire Marshal Jim Gibbs to the site.

Residence Hall Association proposes 2.9 percent rate hike

BY RAY STERN
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

Residence Hall Association representatives voted Thursday to recommend a 2.9 percent increase in dorm fees to the Arizona Board of Regents.

The proposed increase would be the largest in five years, but it must be finalized by an ABOR vote in January or February, said Wendell Brierly, senior business operations manager for Residential Life. He said the recommendation was spurred by a high inflation rate.

"You have to realize where the inflation rate was for the last five years," Brierly said. "Last year (it) was about 5.1 percent. It's been in excess of 3 percent each year ... in Maricopa County.

"Each one of us looks at costs for the coming year and bases (the budget) on that."

If passed, two-bedroom rooms at Cholla would increase by $100 a year, Best and Hayden Hall rates would go up by $50 and all other hall rates would be raised by $75.

Alexis Cox, vice president of campus affairs for RHA, said this year's high-occupancy rates were another factor contributing to the increase.

"We're about 98 percent full," she said. "We basically had no room left on campus on opening day."

Cox said she thinks the majority of residents back the recommendation.

"People are supportive because this money goes to improvements and getting extra things in the halls," she said.

Nevertheless, there were some dissidents at the meeting.

Becca Lakin, president of Palo Verde Main's hall council, cast two "no" votes for her delegation.

She said her hall hasn't seen any kind of improvements in years, and items like showerheads "by our bellybuttons," an air-conditioning unit that's always broken, and 30-year-old stained carpets are basic things that need to be fixed.

"We decided that if they raised room rates, we'd better see something out of it," she said.

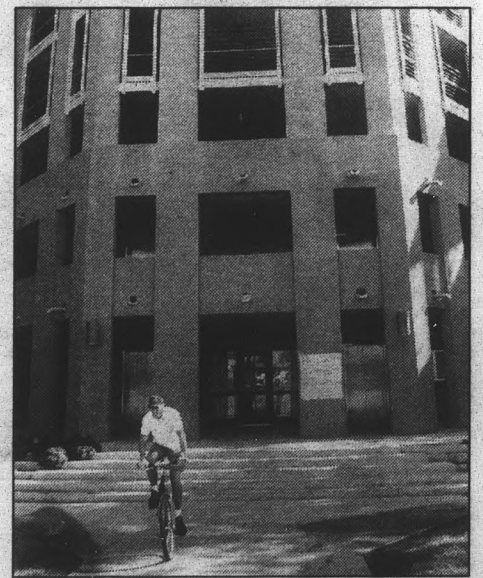

Jim Barrett, graduate assistant hall director at Sahuaro Hall, said he's heard both sides from students.

"There's always some students who are being financially thrifty," he said. "We empathize with them and we try to be fair. I think to stay below the rate of inflation, the board is doing a good job."

Cox said the increase is low enough to meet the monetary concerns of students and still provide adequate service.

She said Best and Hayden halls have lower recommended increases because RHA didn't want to price the dorms beyond the reach of lower-income students.

"We wanted an area of low-cost housing on campus," she said. "Even with financial aid and loans and stuff it's still hard."

Paul Basing/State Press

Students living at Sahuaro Hall and other campus residences may experience an increase in dorm fees next semester. The Residence Hall Association recommended the increase due to a high inflation rate and high-occupancy rates.

Recall

The senate impeached Weber Oct. 17, but fell short of the required votes to remove him from office, prompting the recall drive.

Recall organizer Kevin Bielfelt submitted 2,530 signatures to the executive committee on Tuesday. He said that he was pleased with the outcome of the recall drive.

"It was a lot of work, but it was worth it," Bielfelt said. "This has made it fairly evident that 2,500 people are not happy with the situation and are willing to do something about it."

Bielfelt, a senior religious studies major, said that the low amount of invalidated signatures adds to the legitimacy of the recall. Only 1.8 percent of the signatures collected were deemed invalid.

"I think that this could be the largest election that ASASU has seen in some time," he said.

In an advisory ruling made Tuesday, the ASASU supreme court said that students from the East and West campuses are considered members of ASASU. Because the extended campuses are included, the number of signatures required to force the recall election was raised from 2,102 to 2,297.

Elisa Hagins, president of the Associated Students of ASU West, said in an interview Wednesday that she was unaware that West students had voting privileges in ASASU.

"Campus issues should be handled by students on that campus," she said. "The students that elected Chris Weber should be responsible for removing him from office."

However, polling sites for elections are not located on the extended campuses, Stout said.

The vote, according to the ASASU constitution, will not address any other issue but the recall. Stout said that the elections coordinator has estimated the cost of the election at $1,900.

According to ASASU bylaws, a minimum of 750 votes, or three-fourths of the votes cast in the last ASASU election, need to be cast for the recall election to be valid. A simple majority is needed for Weber to be removed from office.

If Weber is removed from office, Executive Vice President Angelo DeSimone will assume the presidency.

Gibbs said he ordered the workers to stop spraying the lacquer. The workers complied that night, but apparently returned the next morning to finish the job, ignoring the cease and desist order Gibbs issued.

"They weren't supposed to be spraying in an occupied structure," Gibbs said.

Decolac Lacquer is a highly flammable, toxic chemical used to coat painted surfaces, said Tom Jones, an environmental engineer with Dunn-Edwards, the manufacturer of the lacquer. Although the lacquer is classified as a "moderate" health risk, Jones said prolonged exposure could cause health problems.

Lane, who has a previously existing respiratory condition, said the fumes from the lacquer hit her quickly.

"I noticed immediately, and I started having major respiratory distress," she said.

Since the incident, Lane says she has struggled with her health, and is currently receiving workman's compensation from the State of Arizona. She added that the decline in her health has forced her to drop out of school.

Jones also said the building should have been well-ventilated for at least a day before people returned. He said people who may have been in the building while the workers were spraying should get a medical check.

Symptoms of exposure include irritated mucous membranes and respiratory tract. Continued overexposure can cause central nervous system depression, and eventually death.

"It was an improper usage (of the lacquer)," Jones said. "It shouldn't have been sprayed inside the building with people there. The contractor should have evacuated the building prior to spraying."

Perot's new party gains broad support in state

PHOENIX (AP) — Ross Perot's campaign to qualify a new, independent political party for next year's presidential elections is drawing support from voters in Arizona, according to a statewide poll released Thursday.

And this week's shutdown of federal government service probably will add fuel to the Texas billionaire's political fire, said pollster Earl de Berge of the Phoenix-based Behavior Research Center.

De Berge said Perot's party already has a solid following in Arizona. Two-fifths of those surveyed said they "definitely" would consider supporting the independent party ticket and another 38 percent said they "probably" would give the ticket serious consideration.

"The favorable reaction of Arizona voters to a new party undoubtedly reflects their growing dissatisfaction with the two major political parties and perhaps with the two party system itself, a frustration that may be exacerbated by this week's logerhead between the Republican controlled Congress and the Democrat White House that has resulted in a shut down of many federal government operations and the furlough of 800,000 workers," de Berge said in a commentary accompanying the poll.

Bill would strengthen property revitalization

PHOENIX (AP) — A revitalization proposal released Thursday would permit absentee landlords to be fined if they allow drugs, prostitution and other criminal activity to overrun their property.

The plan would also give neighborhoods more say in which businesses get state liquor licenses.

The revitalization plan "gives teeth" to current public safety and abatement laws and lets residents reclaim their communities, said Sen. Chris Cummiskey, D-Phoenix, the bill's sponsor.

Flanked by members of Phoenix-area neighborhood associations at a news conference, Cummiskey said the bill is also backed by the Attorney General's Office, several county prosecutors and the Phoenix police department.

Under the proposal, landlords who neglect property that has been overrun with criminal activity could be charged fees. The city now shoulders the cost of cleaning up abandoned properties. If the owner fails to pay, a lien would be placed against the property.

Panel concludes 1 in 3 child deaths preventable

PHOENIX (AP) — A state panel has determined that at least one in three child deaths in Arizona could be prevented by keeping guns away from kids, using seat belts, installing smoke alarms and fencing in swimming pools.

The Arizona Child Fatality Review Team issued its initial report Wednesday. It was based on a study of 611 deaths that occurred between June 1994 and August 1995.

"Prevention is very simple if we can get the word out and get people involved," said Robert Schackner, who manages the review program for the state Department of Health Services.

Trevor Dunbar of Sydney, Australia, takes advantage of an almost deserted Mather Point overlook to get a picture of the Grand Canyon. Dunbar entered the park before it was closed to the public at 8 a.m. Thursday because of the federal budget impasse. It was the first time the park has closed since its opening in 1919.

Gov. offers money for canyon

Symington proposes funds, troops to keep popular park open during shutdown

GRAND CANYON NATIONAL PARK (AP) — Gov. Fife Symington offered state money Thursday to keep the Grand Canyon open through the federal budget shutdown, saying he'd even deploy National Guard troops to work in the "crown jewel" of the state's tourist economy.

A U.S. Park Service spokesman said agency lawyers were studying the offer but hadn't made a decision.

The Republican governor proposed using state funds to pay a skeleton staff of federal park employees until President Clinton and congressional Republicans resolve the budget impasse. Park fees would be collected and split equally between the state and the federal government, he said.

"I'm also prepared to make additional personnel, including furloughed National Guardsmen, available in an effort to restore some of the services that park guests have come to expect," Symington said.

Meanwhile, travelers from around the world were turned away from the park's gates, hikers were sent home from backcountry cabins and campgrounds and guests at motels in the park were given one last night to stay.

It was the first time the park closed since it first opened in 1949. Essential employees were on the job, and motorists were allowed to use one of the main highways through the park to connect with a state highway on the other side.

"It's vindictive and unnecessary, I don't think there's any justification for this," spat Plaehn Juergen, a San Diego retiree who brought visitors from Korea to Arizona for their first time. "If they can put rangers up there to tell us to go away, then they can keep the rangers there to allow us to hike."

More understanding of the shutdown was Peter Mellema, who traveled thousands

Clinton renews veto threat on budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Refusing to bend in a test of wills, President Clinton threatened anew Thursday to veto the latest Republican offer to end a three-day partial government shutdown. He said he was recalling furloughed workers to process claims for Social Security benefits.

Rebutted Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole: "He doesn't want a balanced budget.... That's the issue."

With the two sides seemingly at gridlock, Democrats savaged House Speaker Newt Gingrich for claiming Clinton had snubbed him recently aboard Air Force One, and that he had toughened his terms on the budget battle as a result.

Several lawmakers trooped to the House floor with oversized copies of the front page of the New York Daily News. It bore a huge headline of "Cry Baby" and a cartoon depicting Gingrich in a diaper, holding a baby bottle and throwing a tantrum.

The Republican leaders repeatedly expressed a willingness to reopen talks with Clinton on ending the impasse that has forced huge sections of the government to remain closed since Monday and disrupted normal treasury borrowing. Gingrich, R-Ga., offered to meet Thursday night.

At the same time, the Republican-controlled Senate ignored Clinton's veto threat. It labored to pass legislation that would reopen the government through Dec. 5 on condition Clinton agree to work out a seven-year balanced budget, based on Congressional Budget Office economic assumptions.

The House approved the measure early Thursday, 277-151, with 48 Democrats in favor. Democratic lawmakers said Clinton had lobbied them by telephone shortly before the vote to make sure the margin of support wasn't big enough to override his threatened veto.

U.N. indicts top Bosnian Serbs leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The two top Bosnian Serb leaders were indicted by a U.N. war crimes tribunal Thursday as directly responsible for "unimaginable savagery" against Muslims in a fallen safe haven last summer.

The chief prosecutor, Richard Goldstone, said he was cautiously optimistic they would be placed on trial. Goldstone said warrants would be sought in Belgrade, Sarajevo and Pale, the Bosnian Serbs' administrative capital.

He also urged all countries where refugees or other sources of evidence may reside to cooperate with the tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands.

After two days of talks with CIA Director John Deutch and other senior Clinton administration officials, Goldstone also announced the indictment of a Bosnian Muslim in the deaths of several Bosnian Serbs in southern Bosnia. The prosecutor said the unidentified suspect was in a Bosnian Croat unit when the crimes were committed.

More than 50 Serbs and Croats have been indicted by the U.N. tribunal. Goldstone praised the United States and the Netherlands for cooperating, implying other nations may not have been so forthcoming.

The State Department, in turn, pledged full U.S. support and said no quarter would be given to any suspected war criminals in order to facilitate an agreement to end the war in Bosnia.

"We believe justice is every bit as important as peace," Nicholas Burns, the department spokesman, said. "If we had

Opinion

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

BOO — To the continued shutdown of the federal government.

When the government shut down a few days ago, we were concerned. When Treasury Secretary Rubin warned that a default could occur if the shutdown dragged on too long, we became worried.

But when the Grand Canyon was shut off to visitors, we became pissed.

This nonsense has gone on long enough. Both sides are obviously in agreement that a balanced budget is in order — the only note of disagreement is the number of years to achieve that goal.

Newt wants seven years, Clinton 10. Both men are refusing to budge an inch.

Hopefully, before the government crashes completely, they'll agree to compromise. Why not split the difference, and balance the budget in eight or nine years?

End this shutdown — now.

BRAVO — To the pending death of federal highway speed limits.

The National Highway System Bill, which could become law as early as next week, would repeal the federal speed limit of 55/65 mph, leaving states to set their own limits.

Speed limits are something that should be left up to the states, anyway. Appropriate speeds vary greatly, depending on the region.

On a heavily-congested freeway in Los Angeles, a speed limit of 55 is necessary for safety. But on a desolate stretch of freeway through Wyoming or Montana, there's really no reason why the driver shouldn't drive faster.

If the bill passes, Montana already has plans to become North America's version of the autobahn. The state doesn't want to even bother with a maximum limit.

Say goodbye to speeding tickets forever. By this time next year, it might only take a little over an hour to get to Tucson.

BOO — To the Hooters restaurant chain, for its constant adventures in doubletalk.

When Hooters wanted to open in downtown Tempe, protesters lashed out against the plan. Hooters sells sex and objectifies women, they said.

No, no, Hooters claimed. We're a restaurant. We don't sell sex, we sell food.

Then, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission calls for the chain to begin hiring male servers. Hiring women only was discriminatory, the EEOC said.

Again, Hooters refused. Why?

"The Hooters girls, with their charm and all-American sex appeal, are what customers come for," said Mike McNeil, a Hooters vice president.

Seems they're now saying that they, well, sell sex.

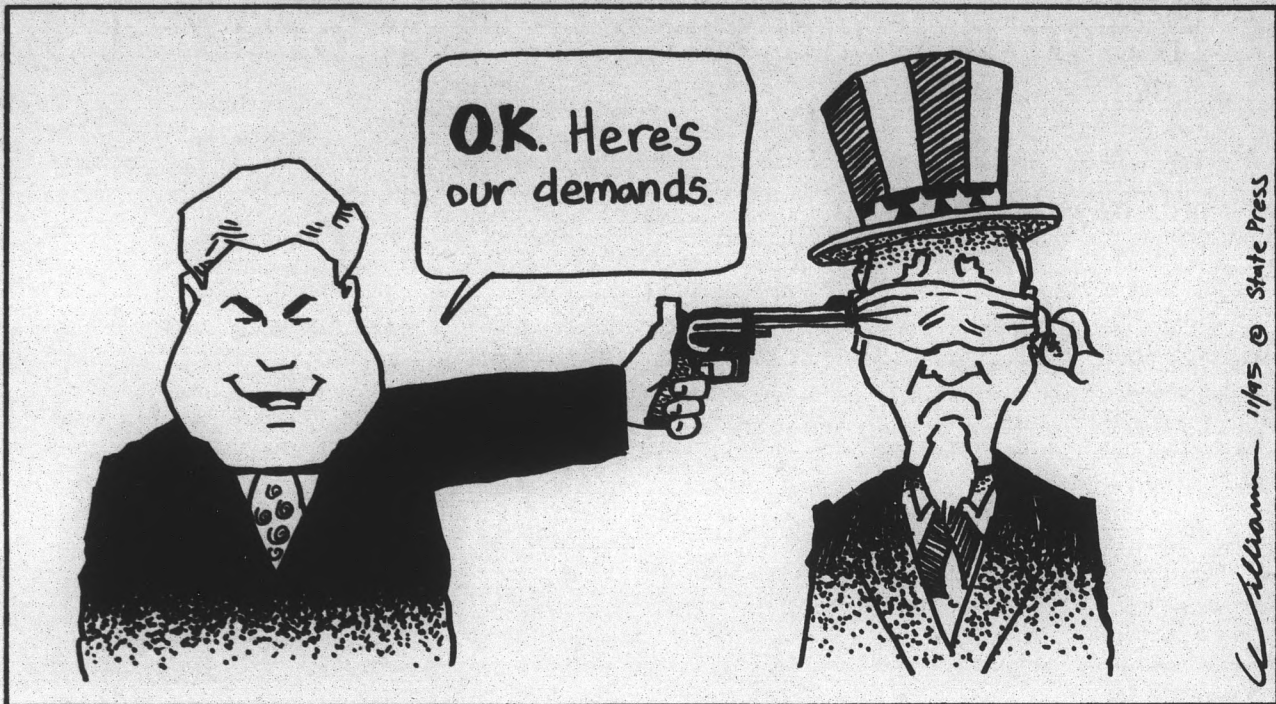

Make up your minds. You're obviously in the business of making money from hungry men with raging libidos. You might as well admit that fact — even when picketers are trying to stop you from moving in.

BRAVO — To plummeting gas prices Valley wide.

The average price of gas in the Phoenix area has hit a four-year low — down to $1.06 per gallon for unleaded.

Saving a couple of bucks a week may not be dramatic, but it is welcome.

Let's hope the gas prices stay low for awhile.

Middle East peace process faces long road ahead

This year I am staying at ASU "Middle East" with the help of the ASU International Programs Office and a Stafford loan. For the last three months I have been studying at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. In the first month there was a bus bombing within a mile of my dormitory that killed a teacher and injured several students. Now the assassination of the prime minister, Yitzhak Rabin, has turned the attention of the world to Israel and has shaken the internal structure of this small country. I would like to share the extremely ironic events before Rabin's death, the aftermath and an opinion about the future of the peace process.

BRUCE WOOLVERTON
Guest Columnist

The Peace Rally

On the evening of his assassination Yitzhak Rabin was a speaker and participant at a peace rally in Tel Aviv. During this rally he sang a song with the crowd, "Shira L'Shalom," roughly translated, "Sing to Peace." This song was written two years after the 1967 war and was anti-military and anti-government. This song was banned from radio airplay by the government. Rabin was a part of the military and the government against which the song was written. It is strange that he should sing this song at all, in particular on this night. He placed the folded paper on which the song was printed in his pocket, and later the assassin's bullet passed through it. You may have seen the bloodstained sheet at his funeral as the words of peace were read as part of his eulogy.

Minutes before his death, he was seated next to Shimon Peres and in an impromptu interview of the pair, Rabin commented that one of Israel's biggest problems at the moment was the violence prompted by extremist groups, eerily prophetic of the tragic event to come.

Finally, the very fact that Rabin should be killed by someone committed to "Greater Israel," as he once was, on the beginning of Rabin's commitment to peace based on the return of land and autonomy to the Palestinians, is also highly ironic.

The Event

I was in a tavern in the center of Jerusalem watching American football when the initial news of the prime minister being shot was reported. At this time, it was unknown whether Rabin was dead or alive. Reactions around me were mixed; some individuals were almost celebrating (obvious members of the extremist side of Israeli politics). The group I was with decided it would be better to return to the university. We stepped onto a bus and into the other side of Israeli society. The bus was somber and silent, tense and waiting for news of the prime minister's condition.

Although I understand enough Hebrew to know that "Rabin Mot" meant "Rabin is dead," no translation was necessary — the faces and reactions of the people around me told me all I needed to know.

The next day everyone was numb and dazed. I spent 4 1/2 hours in a crushing crowd of people waiting to pay their last respects to Rabin as he was lying in state at the Knesset. After standing in front of the simple pine box surrounded by flowers and candles, I quietly passed a crowd that seemed to have no end, and according to others I spoke with, did not abate even in the early morning hours. I was not born when John F. Kennedy was killed but now I know what it must have been like.

The Future

Those who celebrated at Rabin's assassination should be in mourning now as the prime minister's ultimate sacrifice means that the peace process now has the funeral pledges of the leaders of the world. It was very telling that the first speaker was the King of Jordan, an Arab, and that he was followed by the president of the United States. The message of the many speeches at Rabin's funeral was the same — "There must be peace, and we will continue to support this effort in Yitzhak Rabin's honor."

In several months, Israel will hold elections and Shimon Peres, another peacemaker, will be up for election. In the years to come the peace process will need international support — economic and political. Let us all hope that Israel and the world will remember their pledges of peace at that time.

Bruce Woolverton is a graduate of West Point, a Desert Storm veteran, and a graduate student in the School of Accountancy. He is currently studying Hebrew, Arabic and the economics of the peace process at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem through the International Programs Office at ASU.

Although I understand enough Hebrew to know that 'Rabin Mot' meant 'Rabin is dead,' no translation was necessary — the faces and reactions of the people around me told me all I needed to know.

Chill out, Bears fans — just pretend that you're cheeseheads

Here is some advice for those brooding fans in Cleveland and Los Angeles, whose football teams have been carried off by unscrupulous franchise owners.

And for those of us in Chicago who waste time worrying about what Michael "The Weenie" McCaskey might do with the Bears.

Forget it. Do as I have done and become an out-of-town fan of America's Team.

No, I'm not talking about the Dallas Cowboys, who falsely claim to be America's Team.

The truth is, Dallas became nationally popular only because they hired higher-class hussies to jiggle and bounce for the networks.

If there is one team that truly deserves to be called America's Team, it is in the most unlikely community to have a major league sports franchise of any kind.

Yes, I'm talking about little Green Bay, Wis., and its Packers.

Consider this: Los Angeles, the nation's second-biggest city, has recently lost two.

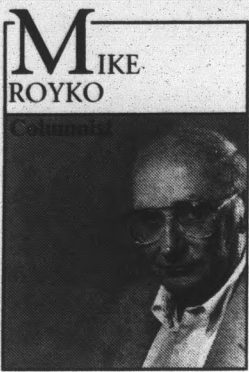

Yet there has never been even a hint that the Packers would leave Green Bay, a city with fewer residents than L.A. has rioters.

You don't hear the owners of the Green Bay team whining that they are not rich enough or trying to shake down the local taxpayers for new goodies that will make them even richer.

That's because the Packer franchise is owned by the kind of people who should own every football franchise.

Basically, it is owned by the people of Green Bay. And it would be almost impossible for the team to go anywhere else because no one individual owns a big enough piece to do it.

As Phil Pionek, executive assistant to the team president, explains the setup:

"There are 1,898 stockholders representing 4,634 shares. A good majority are Wisconsin residents. Most shareholders own one share. The bylaws indicate that no one shareholder can hold 200 shares.

"There are no dividends, no interest, no special season ticket privileges. Stockholders meet once a year at the annual meeting, and they elect the board of directors. It's a 45-person board, 15 elected each year.

"The board elects the executive committee and they operate the daily functions. It is seven people: the president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and three members at large.

"The president-CEO is the only person who is compensated. Everyone else sits gratis."

Isn't that sensible? It means that the Packers are truly Green Bay's team, the way the Rams and Raiders weren't L.A.'s team; and the Cardinals weren't Chicago's team or St. Louis' team and might not remain Phoenix's team; and the Browns weren't really Cleveland's team; and the Colts weren't really a Texas team or Baltimore's team; and the Raiders weren't Oakland's team when they moved to L.A., and stopped being L.A.'s team when they crept back to Oakland.

Who can keep track of all these comings and goings?

But you can keep track of the Packers because they have been in the same location since 1919, although most of the country doesn't know where Green Bay is. Even people in Green Bay aren't all sure where it is, but they don't have to know, since they are already there.

Those of us in Chicago sometimes poke affectionate fun at our rustic neighbors to the north.

We tease them for wearing red long underwear to weddings and other formal events as an outer garment.

We call them cheeseheads and chuckle at the way they chomp their bratwurst, drink their brandy-beer boilermakers and happily thump their distended tummies. The men, too.

But while Chicagoans worry about the Bears moving to Gary, where the players might be mugged on their way to the locker room, the Green Bay fans are free of such concerns.

This is the way it should be in every football-crazed city. They should own the teams, not some prissy bookkeeper like McCaskey, a double-talking hustler like the guy who dumped Cleveland, the blowhard who took the Colts to Indianapolis or the other megabuck strap-sniffers whose loyalty is comparable to that of a leech.

If the 1,898 Packers stockholders can renounce greed, envy, gluttony, the works of Satan and other vulgar cravings, why can't it be done in other cities? The Packers have managed to win championships with their homespun system.

At the very least, they always field teams that are just as capable of twanging an opponent's tendons and crunching his cartilage as anyone else's.

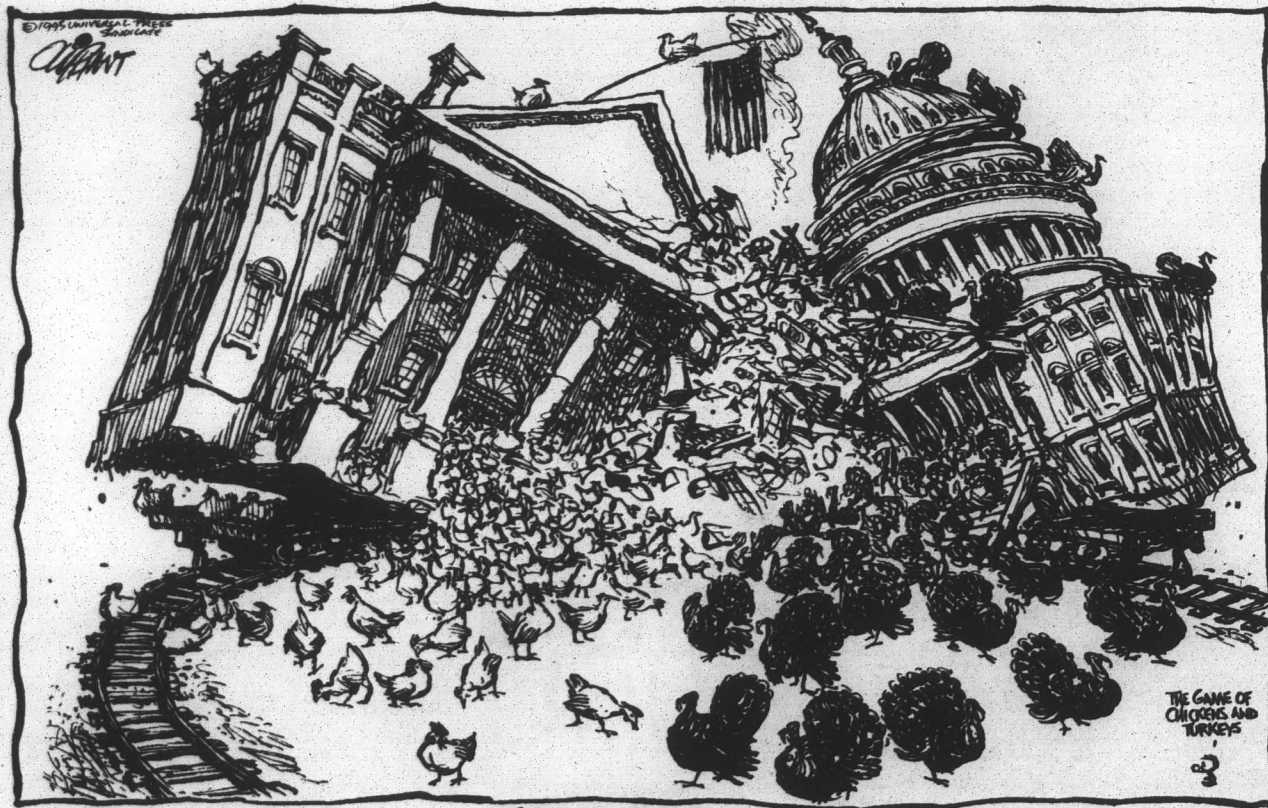

So until they get another team in Cleveland (maybe the Cleveland Bears) and L.A. (maybe the L.A. Cardinals), the fans of these cities should join me in eating a big brat, burping a big burp and cheering on America's Team.

You will become not only an honorary cheesehead but an even greater honor — an honorary Packerhead.

Anyone for a bumper sticker?

Mike Royko is a syndicated columnist with the Chicago Tribune.

You don't hear the owners of the Green Bay team whining that they are not rich enough or trying to shake down the local taxpayers for new goodies that will make them even richer.

Rabin's tragedy calls for peace

As a Lebanese-American who knows the price of war and can appreciate peace, the slaying of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin comes at a most inopportune time. The peace process has been long awaited by the people of the Middle East and the world alike. This area of traditions, world religions, national identities and sometimes lost identities is mostly recognized for its problems and differences. Once more this is the case, as was displayed by the assassination of Prime Minister Rabin.

This tragedy occurred at a time when peace was being drafted and neighbors were working together as they should toward economic and social advancement, when the borders of these neighboring countries are beginning to be crossed by business and tourists. These are borders that not so long ago armies only dared to cross. As tragic as this event is, may it not be a setback for peace, but let it be a recognition of the need for it. The assassination is a continued example for much-needed resolve of differences in this area of the world.

The importance of Rabin's role in the peace process will be missed. This was signified by the attendance of many of the world leaders at his funeral. May these leaders continue to see the importance of the peace in this region and work toward the completion of what has taken half a century to start. May the next time these leaders gather in Jerusalem be a gathering to celebrate the highlights of peace and not mourn the casualties of difference and war.

Peace to all of God's children.

Bike accommodations on campus inadequate for student safety

I consider myself an unusually conscientious cyclist, and I am continually exasperated by ASU's pathetic accommodations for bicycles. The bike lanes are interrupted by so many ridiculous "no-bike" zones. Some of these no-bike zones block the way to a bike rack, therefore making it hard not to ignore these zones.

Bike lanes also end abruptly for no apparent reason, which causes dangerous merging crises. Even though I ride as carefully as I can, I still have near misses. I think these bike routes need to be carefully redesigned and then rigorously enforced.

Local groups unite to keep Million Man March alive

By CODY V. AYCOCK
STATE PRESS

Nearly half a million African-American men attended the Million Man March on Oct. 16 in Washington, D.C.

They came together to unite against racism and discuss ways to deal with crime, drugs and violence in their communities.

Then they went home.

On the one-month anniversary of the event, local African Americans and other minorities are asking the question, "Now what?"

"If we don't stand up as the next generation of leaders, we collectively spit on the graves of those before us," said Ashahed X, a member of the Nation of Islam, Wednesday night in front of about 100 people in the Alumni Lounge of the Memorial Union.

The "Million Man March ... Now What?" forum was called to bring community groups together as a collective whole and keep the momentum of the Million Man March alive, he said.

"As a people we are turning inward, as a people, to solve our problems. Instead of turning to the government to solve our problems," Ashahed X said. "If everyone does a little, no one has to do a lot."

Together, the members of the groups represented at the forum are attempting to form committees that enhance the lives of minorities at ASU.

At the conclusion of the meeting, members branched off into separate committees to address political, social and economic problems facing minorities.

Vernon Foster, president of the American Indian Movement, attended the discussion to espouse his views on the direction of the American Indians.

"We are no longer in the era of civil rights," he said of his desire to unite minority groups in their fight against government mistreatment. "Everything that happens today is human rights."

Speakers said the press before and after the Million Man March did not portray it accurately.

Joel Muhammad, local representative of the Louis

Farrakhan, leader of the Nation of Islam, said attacks against Farrakhan were unfounded.

"(Farrakhan) is a kind, loving man," he said. "That is one of the most humble men I have met. He is full of humility."

The Nation of Islam leader, who organized the Million Man March, has been accused of insulting Jews, Catholics, gays and Asians.

One of the controversial aspects of the march was the fact that women were discouraged from participating. Speakers at the forum said African-American women were proud to have their men take control of the future of their families and people.

The groups planned future meetings to help them come together as a cohesive voice in the community.

Muhammad said it is the duty and responsibility of local members to carry on the spirit of the movement started by the march.

"For us to come together like that is miraculous," he said. "We can't let that spirit die."

ASU tutoring joins list of on-line opportunities

By DAWN M. PETERSON
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

ASU has become one of only 10 universities in the country to provide free on-line tutoring to all students.

Students used to have to come to campus between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. to get help. Now they can forward their papers by e-mail day or night and receive a reply within 24 hours.

"Students can e-mail their papers to writing tutors and get feedback on their assignments," said M. Clare Sweeney, executive coordinator of the Student Life Learning Resource Center, which offers the tutoring.

She said on-line tutoring will make the service more accessible, especially for commuter, part-time and non-traditional students. It will also appeal to international students who aren't comfortable with oral communication, but feel more at ease using the computer to communicate, Sweeney said.

"Tutors will guide students through the writing process by asking questions that will help the student develop the writing," Sweeney said. "In keeping with the tutoring philosophy, tutors will not proof read or edit papers. They will, however, comment on content, thesis development, organization, transitions and the like, working with students to clarify assignments."

Instructors can also download their syllabi, assignments, study guides and sample papers so they are available immediately with a modem and a computer.

The service has links to the World Wide Web and other schools' on-line services. Kristen Frizzell, an ASU senior and tutor at the LRC, said these on-line documents are good resources to help build writing skills and do research.

Lori Gardiner, a 34-year-old single mother and a sophomore in the nursing college, said the program will help ease her daily scheduling crunches.

"Getting to the Writing Center is difficult," she said. "Half the time, you have to find a baby-sitter or take your child with you. Just to be able to send my paper in and have them send a response to my home will be a great help."

Sweeney began planning for on-line tutoring more than a year ago by studying other universities with the program already in place and attended related conferences.

"We've done the testing," Frizzell said. "Now we're ready and waiting for students to use the program."

To use the tutoring service, send e-mail to tutors@asu.edu. The ASU World Wide Web page also provides access to the tutoring address and a variety of other sites. Contact <http://aspin.asu.edu/provider/SLLC> to access the Web page.

Frisbee event lands on ASU turf

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

Frisbee enthusiasts and competitors alike will float down to ASU's band field Saturday and Sunday to fling their hovering disks in the First Garlic Festival.

ASU's Ultimate Frisbee Club is hosting the event, which has attracted teams from the UofA, NAU, the University of Colorado at Boulder and the College of the Redlands in California, said David Mirlamposki, the club's co-captain.

He said flying-disk competitions are played on grassy areas about as large as a football field. Teams of seven must complete consecutive passes as they gallop toward the goal line. Games can last anywhere from 45 minutes to an hour and a half depending on whether team captains decide to play to 11, 13, 15 or 21 points.

This weekend's games, held at the northeast corner of Rural Road and Sixth Street, will be played in a round-robin format. Admission is free.

Mirlamposki, a senior photography major, said Frisbee competitions are exciting to play.

"It's a very intense sport," he said. "There's a lot of action. It's a really fun sport to watch."

Citizens can cite illegal disabled parkers

BY ANGELA MULL
STATE PRESS

The next time you park illegally in one of Tempe's parking spaces designated for disabled drivers, you may find a friendly warning tucked underneath your windshield wiper.

"We're calling it an informational citation," said Rich Nolan, chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Disability Concerns.

Concerned citizens can place the rectangular paper citations on windshields or in car doors of vehicles illegally parked in spaces for the disabled, the Tempe City Council was told Thursday. The informational citations use the wheelchair symbol to warn drivers not to park in these spaces unless they have license plates or placards with the symbol. The $70 fine for breaking the city and state law is also listed.

Councilwoman Carol Smith approved of the citations. "You see people parking (in disabled spaces) all of the time who aren't supposed to," she said.

About 3,000 citations are ready for distribution. Anyone interested in obtaining them can call Randy Gross, assistant to the mayor, at 350-8422. Citizens are advised not to approach occupied vehicles with the citations.

At the suggestion of Councilman Ben Arredondo, the citations may later be distributed to about 40,000 Tempe citizens through their utility bill.

"I don't think you should have to wait for people to come to you," Arredondo told Nolan.

Councilman Dennis Cahill said the citations could cause a problem if people substitute them for the state-issued placards in their vehicles.

"I can see minor felons like us putting them on the inside of the windshield," he joked.

But Nolan said police officers will be able to distinguish between the citations and placards.

Also on Thursday, the City of Tempe Water/Wastewater Department issued information declaring the Tempe water supply safe, despite its current musty taste and odor. Tom Gallier, Tempe water manager, said warm temperatures have caused dying algae in city lakes and canals to emit a chemical that changes the odor and taste of the water, especially in south Tempe.

However, he said the water is being treated with activated carbon and the supply should be back to normal Saturday or Sunday.

Reno: Parkinson's won't stop her

WASHINGTON (AP) — With medication controlling the shaking of her left hand, Attorney General Janet Reno says her newly diagnosed Parkinson's disease will neither force her from office nor cease her long weekend walks along the Potomac River.

RENO

"I feel fine now. I continue to take my long walks," the 57-year-old attorney general told her weekly news conference Thursday. "I don't feel like I have any impairment. I feel strong and feel like moving ahead."

She has "an excellent, long-term prognosis," her doctor, Jonathan Pincus, a neurology professor at Georgetown University Medical Center, said at a later news conference. "Her mild tremor was completely eliminated with modest doses," of medication, he said.

Reno disclosed that she was diagnosed three weeks ago with the progressive disease that undermines muscle control. Doctors assured her that, like hundreds of thousands of other Americans with Parkinson's, she could continue working without impairment.

For reporters, who previously had noted a tremor in her hand, Reno thrust out a steady left hand to demonstrate that medication has controlled her only symptom. She takes 1 1/2 Sinemet pills before each of her three daily meals.

Earlier in the morning, Reno had advised the White House. She said chief of staff Leon Panetta "was very supportive." President Clinton telephoned Reno later in the day.

"The president has complete confidence now, as he always did, that the attorney general will continue to pursue her job in the excellent manner she has in the past," said a statement issued by the White House press office.

Reno made clear she had no intention of resigning and said if Clinton won a second term and "if he wanted me back, this would be no reason not to do it."

"If I didn't think I could do the job, I'd be the first to tell President Clinton," Reno said. "Based on everything the doctors told me and what I know, there should be no reason why, if the president wanted me to come back in a second term, I wouldn't do so."

It is estimated that nearly one million Americans have Parkinson's, but only half have symptoms severe enough to have been diagnosed, said Dr. Stanley Fahn, a neurology professor at New York's Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

"Easily hundreds of thousands of them keep working," said Fahn, who is science director of the Parkinson Foundation. "If Reno's the average patient, she should be able to go through two terms without a problem."

Congressional GOP agree to cap student loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans in Congress agreed Thursday to limit the government's direct lending program for college students, a move Democrats contend will enrich bankers at the expense of 1.9 million students.

The agreement, which is part of the GOP bill that would balance the budget by 2002, would save $1.6 billion over seven years by limiting the program to 10 percent of all student loans. The House initially wanted to scrap the program altogether, while the Senate sought a 20 percent cap.

Nancy Kassebaum, a Kansas Republican who has led Senate negotiators, said Congress never intended for the direct lending program to supplant guaranteed student loans, which are made through banks and other lenders.

"I remain concerned about the risk the direct loan program poses to taxpayers and that is why I believe that Congress is being fiscally responsible by demanding to see how it works before expanding it," Kassebaum said.

This year, about 2.5 million students at 1,350 schools participate in the direct program, in which the Department of Education bypasses middlemen by making loans to the students.

Most students in direct lending programs would still be able to finance their educations through the guaranteed student loan program, but Democrats say that involves more delay and allows less flexible repayment terms.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said cutting down the size of the direct lending program is "a bonanza for big banks," potentially bringing them billions of dollars in new business.

Democrats said the cap would cut 1.9 million loans and force 1,000 schools from the program.

The proposal retains the six-month grace period during which interest is not charged after a student graduates and preserves the scheduled 1998 cut in student interest rates. Both of those provisions had been threatened in earlier versions.

Swiss Scientists Discover New Energy Product

Lugano, Switzerland—After 25 years of research Lightning 828 was developed with the help of Swiss Laboratories. After extensive testing with amazing results, Lightning 828 is now available in the United States. Scientists are amazed at Lightning 828's results on improved memory, attitude and athletic performance.

In a double blind cross-over trial on university students in Italy, Lightning 828 was given twice daily for 12 weeks. The results were astonishing. Students obtained higher scores in math, logic and physical education.

This new discovery has been a windfall for working and active people that seem to run short of energy around mid-afternoon and need a little extra lift. Lightning 828 when taken in the morning gives a sustained, balanced form of energy throughout the day.

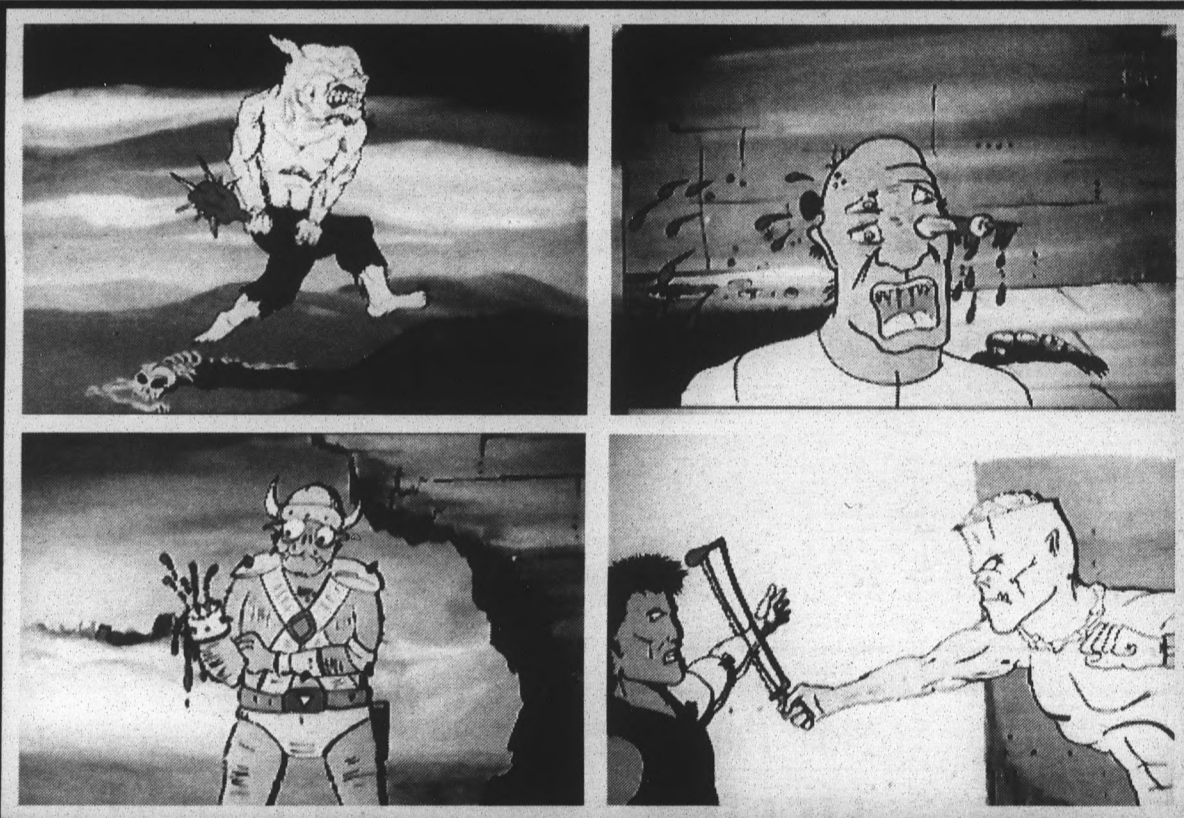

During an interview in Chicago, a beautician stated, "I used to go home exhausted after being on my feet all day. Now it's just incredible. I go home with extra energy and really enjoy my family more."

Lightning 828 is a necessary boost for students, professionals and senior citizens.

Look for a trial size of Lightning 828 at your local convenience store and 60 count bottles in most Kmart pharmacies including:

Shutdown

It wasn't, but only by a dozen votes. And Clinton was told in one conversation that the time had come to begin thinking about a "gracious exit" from the standoff, said one lawmaker who recounted the exchange on condition of anonymity.

With Republicans insisting on a seven-year time frame, both sides were dancing around the key issue of economic assumptions — estimates of growth, unemployment and inflation that have a major impact on government spending and revenue estimates.

Clinton made plain he would veto the GOP legislation. Signing it, he said, would be tantamount to accepting GOP plans for "crippling cuts in Medicare" and unacceptable reductions in Medicaid, education and environmental protection.

"Congress should act responsibly and pass straightforward legislation to open the government and enable it to meet its financial obligations," Clinton said. "It should do it right now."

"The American people should not be held hostage any more to the Republican budget priorities," said Clinton, repeating a veto threat he first made Wednesday night.

Gingrich expressed irritation at Clinton's customary charge that Republicans were seeking to cut Medicare: "There's just something profoundly wrong when the president of the United States ... uses information that is not factually correct."

Republicans propose sharply slowing the projected growth of Medicare over the next seven years, and insist that the $270 billion in savings over those years are needed to assure the program's solvency.

By word and deed, Clinton sought the initiative in the seemingly intractable dispute with the Republican congressional majorities.

His plan to reopen Social Security offices on Monday pre-empts legislation that Gingrich had suggested to do the same thing.

However, Burns said he was not aware of "any information that would be a trail of evidence" linking Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, a key figure in ongoing peace talks near Dayton, Ohio, with Bosnian Serb atrocities.

Goldstone declined to say whether Milosevic was being investigated.

Negotiations to settle the nearly four-year war are bogged down over the territory to be controlled by proposed ethnic republics, whether Bosnian Serbs would share control of Sarajevo with the Muslim-led government and other core issues.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher will join the talks this weekend, cutting short a trip to Japan, where 18 Asian and Pacific nations are holding free-trade talks.

"It's the right time for him to be there," Burns said.

of miles from his home in the Netherlands and planned months in advance to hike into the canyon.

"I think Clinton is doing his job," Mellema said as he stood at the lip of Bright Angel trail — forbidden territory per order of the National Park Service. "I don't mind that they have to do this because I think it's good that he stands against all the other guys."

Barriers kept tourists off park roads and away from lookout points on the canyon rim. Rangers were sent into the canyon to tell hikers they had to come out. Businesses inside the park, including hotels, restaurants, bus tours and mule rides, were closed, reservations canceled and guests told they had until today to leave.

Symington said the Clinton administration had promised to respond to his offer by today.

A Park Service spokesman in Washington, David Barna, said the offer was being studied by Interior Department lawyers, but he didn't know when a decision would be made.

"How can you negotiate that, I mean we technically don't exist, we don't have appropriations," Barna said.

Suspect in multiple slayings slipped through legal crack

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Glen Rogers stood before a Municipal Court judge in September, he could have gotten a jail sentence of 2 1/2 years for beating a girlfriend and violating probation.

ROGERS

Instead, he got two days for the beating, was credited for the time he had already served and was immediately released. Apparently, nobody at the Van Nuys courthouse knew Rogers was on probation for a conviction in a courthouse just a few miles down the freeway.

Over the next two months, when he could have been in jail, Rogers is suspected of going on a cross-country killing spree, murdering four women in California, Mississippi, Florida and Louisiana.

He is wanted for questioning in a fifth slaying in Ohio in 1993. And police across the nation are scouring their files to see if Rogers could be a suspect in other murders.

Interviews and records show that before the murder rampage, Rogers was arrested dozens of times, convicted at least twice in California alone, and managed to spend little time behind bars.

Arrested Monday in Kentucky after a nationwide hunt, Rogers apparently benefited from overcrowded jails, jammed court dockets and police budget constraints.

"It's incredible," said Joan Burkart, daughter of the 71-year-old Ohio man Rogers is suspected of killing. "I just about believed that this man could get away with everything he did and they wouldn't do anything unless he killed somebody important — or a lot of people."

Rogers, 33, who had a long arrest record in his hometown of Hamilton, Ohio, on charges ranging from arson to aggravated assault, is due back in a Kentucky court Tuesday for an extradition hearing. Authorities in four states are trying to decide who will charge him first.

In August, Rogers allegedly attacked his girlfriend, Maria Gyore, in their apartment in suburban Van Nuys, in the San Fernando Valley. The attack was the latest of many, the girlfriend alleged, and Rogers was arrested on suspicion of spousal battery.

As part of an agreement, Rogers pleaded no contest before Municipal Court Commissioner Rebecca Omens, who could have revoked his probation from the June conviction.

If she had known about the probation.

Omens declined to comment on the Rogers case specifically. But she said that in her high-volume courtroom — where justice is dispensed in a minute or less — all she has to rely on is the defendant's file.

"The court relies very heavily on the supporting agencies to follow through and know what their respective responsibilities are," she said. "The court is not an investigative agency."

Municipal Court is so jammed, it takes up to 20 minutes just to get into the building through the lone metal detector in the morning. In Omens' courtroom alone, as many as 400 cases are heard a day.

Experimental drug combats AIDS in monkeys

WASHINGTON (AP) — An experimental drug prevented monkeys from catching the AIDS virus even when the virus was pumped directly into their bodies, prompting hope the medicine could one day protect people.

The monkeys were completely protected even when the virus floated in their blood for 24 hours before they got the drug, a discovery "too good to believe," said chief researcher Dr. Che-Chung Tsai of the University of Washington Regional Primate Center. But repeated tests came up with the same result.

It's a long way from a monkey drug to one that will help people, but in Friday's edition of the journal Science, Tsai calls PMPA the most promising candidate yet to help people ward off the AIDS virus. And its maker, Gilead Sciences Inc., hopes to begin testing the drug in people next year.

"Such complete protection with no toxicity is unprece-ented in the monkey model of AIDS and suggests a potential role for PMPA in health care workers or others accidentally exposed to the virus," agreed AIDS expert Dr. Anthony Fauci of the National Institutes of Health.

Health care workers are at risk of catching HIV, the AIDS virus, from accidental needle-sticks or tainted blood. Now when these people realize they were exposed to HIV, they take the drug AZT — but it often fails to protect them.

PMPA is a chemical very similar to AZT. Both attack the AIDS virus by blocking a key protein it needs to reproduce. But while AZT has to wait until a cell is totally infected to begin fighting the virus, PMPA can start waging war immediately.

This type of drug is called a nucleotide analog, and no such medicine is yet on the market.

To see how well it worked, Tsai gave 35 monkeys 100 percent infectious doses of SIV, the primate version of HIV. Fifteen monkeys got injections of PMPA 48 hours before they were exposed to AIDS, five got PMPA shots four hours after they were exposed and another five were treated 24 hours later. They all received PMPA intravenously for four weeks.

Eight months later, none of the treated animals is infected with SIV and none has experienced any side effects.

The 10 monkeys that didn't get PMPA shots became infected.

Total protection against the virus was such a striking finding the researchers did test after test to confirm the results, Tsai said. Yet PMPA not only worked, it was 100 times less toxic than AZT, he said.

"It's definitely an exciting finding," said Gilead chemist Norbert Bischofberger. "But what this ultimately means to AIDS patients in the clinic remains to be seen."

McVeigh defense lawyers will not use insanity plea

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Timothy McVeigh will not use an insanity defense when he goes on trial in the Oklahoma bombing, his lawyers said Thursday.

"The psychiatric and psychological evaluations aren't 100 percent completed, but from what we know at this point we have no reason to assert a mental defect," attorney Stephen Jones said. "He's as sane as any lawyer or reporter."

He said McVeigh has been pronounced competent by Dr. Seymour Halleck, a University of North Carolina psychiatrist who testified for the defense in Susan Smith's trial for drowning her two sons in South Carolina. Other experts also were examining McVeigh.

Jones has said McVeigh's defense will directly challenge the evidence against him in the April 19 bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building. McVeigh and Terry Nichols face the death penalty if convicted in the blast, which killed 169 people and injured more than 500.

McVeigh and Nichols go on trial May 17 in Lawton, about 90 miles southwest of Oklahoma City.

Federal officials have said the bombing was retaliation for the Waco, Texas, cult disaster exactly two years earlier.

Officials knew paint risk before housing project fire

NEW YORK (AP) — Rosa Kelly's apartment is getting a fresh coat of paint after a fire raced up 17 floors of her Harlem housing project and through her home. The paint may erase the soot, but not her anger.

City housing and fire officials knew for more than a year there might be a problem with the oil-based paint used in hundreds of projects.

But it took the deaths of two people Nov. 4 — and minor injuries to dozens in five similar fires since June — to spur them to repaint stairways and halls with a latex-based, flame-retardant paint.

"I could have died, and they knew about this. They knew about it for a long time," said Kelly, who was trapped in a smoke-filled hallway, unable to see her way to her door. "You bet I'm angry."

The old paint was federally tested and approved. Whether it is especially flammable has not been established; chemical tests have been inconclusive.

But "we can't wait any longer for answers," said Housing Authority spokesman John Hamill.

"I guess somebody always has to die before it becomes important," said Victor Roman, 21, a neighbor of Kelly's. He was away last Friday when the most recent stairwell fire barreled through a building in the General Grant houses. Kelly and 18 others suffered smoke inhalation.

Manhattan Borough President Ruth Messinger has urged the federal Housing Urban and Development Department to investigate why it took the city so long to act.

Hamill said housing officials theorize the stairwell fires were fueled by multiple layers of paint — the result of years of anti-graffiti campaigns — and fanned by chimney-like updrafts that occur in buildings more than 10 stories high.

Many other large cities switched to flame-retardant paint long ago.

Oil-based paint "may look better, like the difference between using semi-gloss or flat paint in your home," said Newark, N.J., Housing Authority spokesman Harry Robinson. "But it's not worth it."

Only three other cities — St. Louis, Philadelphia and Chicago — still use the old paint, Hamill said. None of those cities have reported fire problems.

New York is spending $4.5 million to repaint the 550 project buildings that have oil-based paint; some 2,450 others have flame-retardant paint. Although flame-retardant

A worker scrapes burned paint off the ceiling of a Harlem apartment projects hallway Wednesday following a fire in the New York building. Associated Press paint is more expensive — $40 a gallon compared with $7 for oil-based — Hamill said cost was never a factor.

The city used oil-based paint because it was more durable, he said.

There have been 30 flash fires in the city's 87 public housing developments since 1992. Fire investigators first notified housing officials of a potential paint problem in August 1994, Hamill said.

Housing officials asked the National Institute of Science and Technology in October 1994 if it knew of problems with the oil-based paint. The institute didn't but offered to perform tests to see if it was the paint or the layering that caused the flash fires, Hamill said.

Meanwhile, more stairwells went up in flames. Most injuries were minor until Nov. 4, when a man and a woman were killed in the stairwell of the Frederick Douglass projects.

Fire officials said each blaze was started by burning garbage or debris in hallways. Many were set, but officials don't suspect a serial arsonist.

"Somebody's always leaving something, a mattress, garbage in the stairwells, and kids always set them on fire," Roman said.

Kelly, 46, took little comfort in knowing that the city was finally using flame-retardant paint in the stairwells of her building. Housing officials still might use the old paint in her three-bedroom apartment on the 20th floor.

"Isn't that crazy?" she said, wiping her sooty hands again and again on her purple sweatpants. "It makes me very, very scared."

Sun Devil volleyball expects titanic battle with unranked 'Cats

BY DAWN WAGNER
STATE PRESS

Last time the two met, it went to five games.

The ASU volleyball team won but didn't take it for granted. After all, anything can happen when the Sun Devils play UofA.

"Every time we play Arizona we expect a five-game match," Coach Patti Snyder-Park said.

The unranked Wildcats travel to the University Activity Center at 7 p.m. tonight to test their skills against the No. 14 Sun Devils.

The game, which closes out

ASU's Pac-10 season, is also the traditional end-of-the-year game to honor the seniors on the team (Christine Garner, Holly Sones and Annette Monsen).

"It will be a good match, but I have every confidence we'll win," said sophomore outside hitter and current Pac-10 Player of the Week, Jenn Snyder. "It's a nice feeling."

The game also promises to be a showdown between conference leaders, Wildcat outside hitter Barb Bell and Pac-10 kills leader Christine Garner.

"Her skills have increased as the season has progressed," Snyder-Park said. "We will always have a double block on her and one-on-one the rest of the way."

Setter Mindi Larsen said the key to the match will be taking Bell out of the game.

"Recently she's been the majority of their sets," Larsen said. "We just need to find out where she'll be and shut her down."

"I expect us to go in and dominate."

"She's their big gun," Snyder said.

"More than likely we will use match-up blocking against her. She's been getting a lot of their sets lately."

However, ASU has some ideas of its own.

UofA is coming off of a three-game losing streak which Larsen said fits nicely into the Sun Devils' plans.

"They've had some really bad upsets and when we do well, they do awful," Larsen said. "They'll come in fired up for sure but I'm expecting us to win."

However, Snyder-Park isn't so confident.

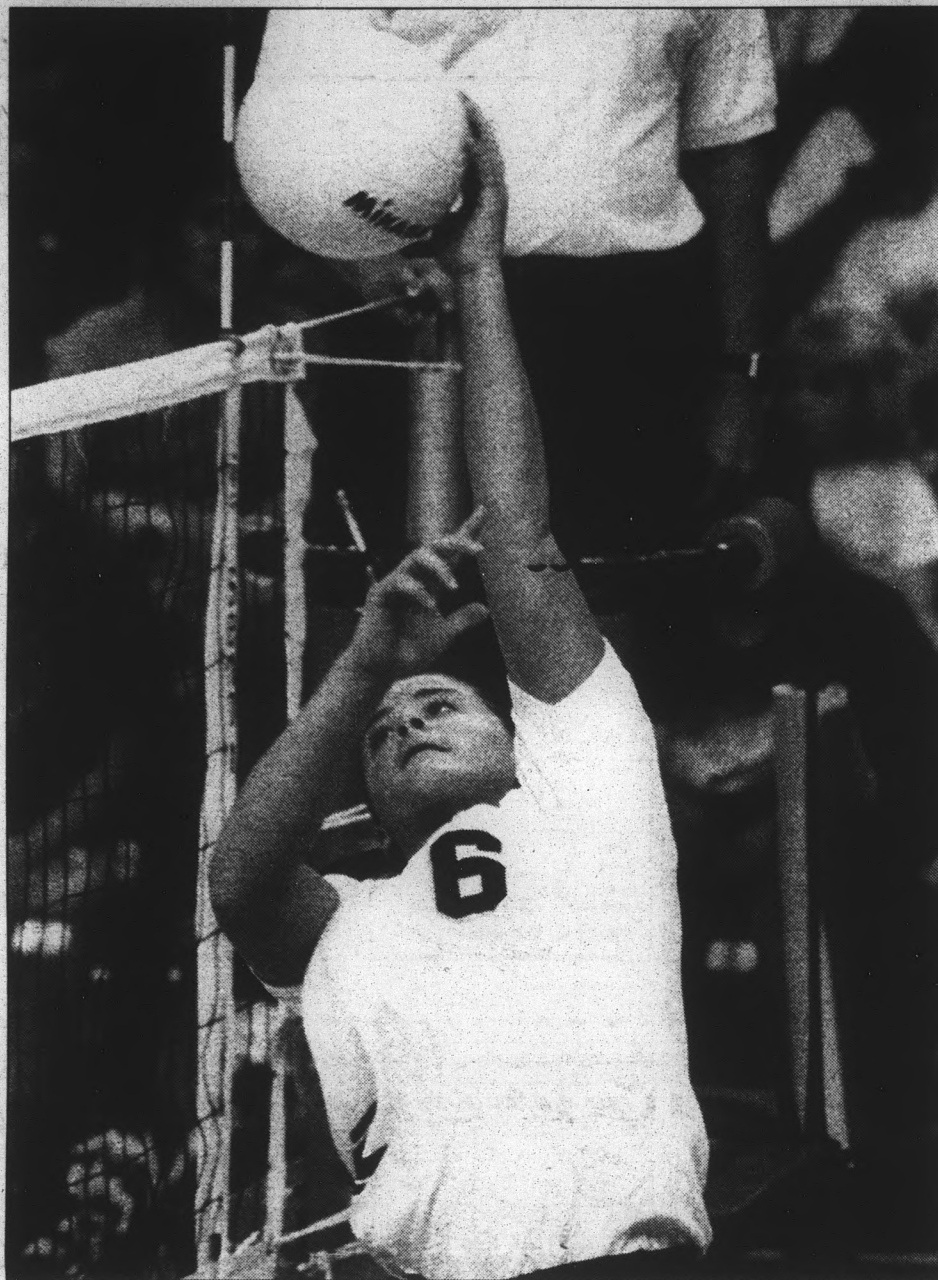

"They've lost their last three, but it's all in the Pac-10," she said. "We beat up on each other all of the time in the Pac-10. Their record is not indicative of their talent."

"We expect a battle."

The Sun Devils will finish up their regular season on Tuesday when they close it out at home against Northern Arizona University. The match will begin at 7 p.m.

They've had some really bad upsets and when we do well, they do awful.

ASU to encounter nation's best at Thunderbird Invite

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

Paul Reber is in the zone right now and frankly, he wouldn't mind demonstrating that in a couple of matches this weekend.

Reber, a senior who is the only returning three-year letterman on the ASU tennis team, not only has a competitive fire raging in his gut, but he is also feeling a tad sentimental about the start of the ASU/Thunderbird Collegiate Invitational tournament today. It will be his final tournament at Whiteman Tennis Center.

"I'd like to win it just because they're our home courts and this is my last home tournament of my career," said Reber, whose parents will travel all the way from Kamloops, British Columbia to watch their son's swan song.

Reber would also like to erase the memory of ASU's recent Fall Invitational. His 2-4 performance was nothing to write home about. Since then, however, Reber has been playing like a man possessed.

"The past two or three weeks I've been playing great," he admitted, adding he has only lost one set in practice during the span.

"If I can serve well the whole weekend, I don't know if I can be beat."

The inaugural event will feature a 16-man single elimination draw with consolation play for first-round losers. The fuzz will start to fly at 2 p.m. today, 9:30 a.m. Saturday and at 11:30 a.m. Sunday.

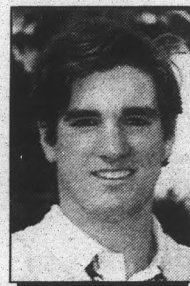

Players from the University of Minnesota, UofA and Texas-El Paso will battle the Sun Devils, who are ranked 23rd in the country in the Rolex Collegiate pre-season poll. The 21st-ranked Golden Gophers, who were 22-6 last year, have the won the Big Ten conference the last three years. The Wildcats, meanwhile, are led by senior Jan Anderson, currently the 46th-ranked player in the country. They also have the momentum of a successful showing at the ASU's Invitational last month.

"This is exactly what we needed for the Players select captains for UofA game

FROM STAFF REPORTS
STATE PRESS

ASU head football coach Bruce Snyder announced Thursday the captain selections for the ASU/UofA game next Saturday.

The captains are seniors Chris Hopkins (tailback), Ryan Wood (flyback) and Mike Langridge (defensive rush end). Also leading the Sun Devils will be graduate student Justin Dragoo (linebacker), who is in his sixth year of eligibility.

Hopkins leads the team in rushing with 617 yards and four touchdowns. His 187-yard, two-touchdown effort last week against California represented a career-high.

Wood is a vocal leader and one of the best blocking backs in the Pac-10 this season. Wood has 93 yards on 32 carries and one touchdown on the year.

Langridge, a former walk-on, has 31 tackles, four sacks, two forced fumbles and two fumble recoveries for the season. His memorable fumble return for a touchdown against Oregon was his most outstanding contribution this year.

Dragoo has 54 tackles on the season and by far the biggest heart on the team. Dragoo was granted a rare sixth season of eligibility by the NCAA this season. After being plagued by injuries early in his career, Dragoo has emerged as a physical and emotional leader for ASU in this, his first full healthy season since his freshman year.

The captains were voted on by the players and will not only be the captains for the UofA game next week, they are considered the captains for the season.

Wells steps into familiar territory

Once, twice, five times a lady.

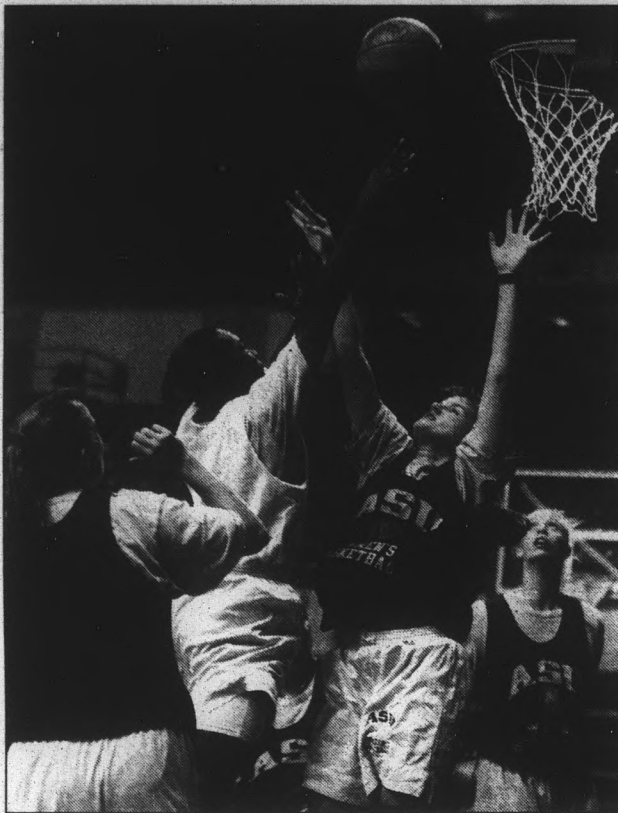

ASU softball coach Linda Wells, a former University of Minnesota coach, will be inducted into the University of Minnesota Women's Athletic Department Hall of Fame tonight in Minneapolis. For Wells, however, the pomp and ceremony will be old hat — it's her fifth induction into a hall of fame.

Wells is already a member of the University of Minnesota Volleyball Hall of Fame, University of Minnesota Softball Hall of Fame, the National

Swimmers hit heartland

The 3-2 women's swim team will be in Nebraska tonight and tomorrow for the Nike Sprint Classic and the Husker Shootout. The Sun Devils, who are ranked No. 15 in the nation, will compete against the likes of No. 9 Nebraska, No. 14 Alabama and No. 20 Kansas.

against college teams. Even though the players aren't from America, ASU will not have the luxury of underestimating them. Australia finished second in last season's World Championships.

Coach Jacquie Hullah said the talented Breakers will be a good challenge for the Sun Devils.

"Any time you get a group of veterans and experienced players that have had four years of college and time after that to develop, you're playing against good competition," she said.

The Breakers playing style will take some adjusting.

"They're real fast and don't dribble much," said ASU junior swing Molly Tuter. "They press the ball up the court. It will be a great challenge, but it'll be fun."

Hullah said that the Sun Devils' defensive play will be the aspect of the game she will be watching closest.

"I think teams that play good defense win games," she said. "My number one priority is to make the defense as good as they can be by the start of the season."

The starting five for ASU will be Julie Gledhill and La Toya Johnson at guard, Melissa Boyle and Emma Witkowski at forward and Marci Stilson in the middle. Gledhill, Johnson and Stilson are all new to the team this season.

Hullah said that the team's strength is its depth.

"We have ten people on our team, but we actually have two starting teams," she said. "There is little difference in talent between the starters and the players coming in for them."

fall season," ASU Coach Lou Belken said. "In the future we expect to bring in some of the best players in the country."

Belken said the Phoenix Thunderbirds' sponsorship of the event will help attract the nation's best to the tournament in the future.

"We anticipate that this will evolve into one of the premier collegiate events of the fall season," he said.

The Thunderbirds, who promote the city of Phoenix by sponsoring athletic events and providing financial assistance to amateur athletes and youth-oriented charities, already sponsor the ASU/Thunderbird Collegiate golf tournament held annually at Karsten Golf Course.

"We look forward to a long and successful relationship," Belken said. "The team and I sincerely thank them for their involvement."

Three other Sun Devils will join Reber in the main draw: Junior Sergio Elias, sophomore Tsolak Gevorkian and senior transfer Oscar Bustos, the No. 2 seed.

Bustos, the national junior college Athlete of the Year in 1995, is ranked 69th in the country.

"I think I definitely have a chance to win it," said Bustos, who will be playing in his first home event. "I'm pretty excited about it. It's going to be fun."

Gevorkian, who sat out of practice the last week and a half with back spasms, said he is back at full strength.

"It's going to be a good tournament," he said. "I'm looking forward to it."

ASU walk-on Hiroshi Nagoshima is in the final round of the qualifier today at 10 a.m. If he wins, he will gain an entry into the draw. There will also be doubles action after the singles each day. However, Belken is keeping the ASU pairings under his hat.

Reber, who indicated Thursday he's also in tremendous shape, said he may stray from his signature serve-and-volley game.

"I think you'll see me mix it up more than I ever have before," he revealed. "The way I'm hitting my groundstrokes right now, I'd like to try to grind it out with the guys."

Fans deserve bowl bid

On my mind

The ASU football team and bowl being used in the same sentence? It's an overdue treat to Sun Devil faithful and a school full of fans that have never seen their team go to a bowl game (unless you've been here eight years, Blutowski).

Head Coach Bruce Snyder has taken a team with virtually no All-Americans or NFL prospects and once again put together a string of wins late in the season. The Sun Devils, who still have a young team with a lot of playing experience, could come out smelling like roses next year (knock on wood, see below).

No one deserves to take a dip in a bowl more than Snyder, though. With a bowl visit at the end of this year, Snyder can show that his 10-2 season at Cal wasn't a fluke. More than that, though, Snyder would be doing it with his own personnel — not the Marmie leftovers. Snyder has the respect of his players and patience with the media that go well beyond giving necessary sound-bites. Advice for this week: Without getting into complicated explanations, here's what all Sun Devil fans need to do: cheer for LSU to win, and Stanford and UCLA to lose.

Knock on Wood

Junior quarterback Jake Plummer has started nearly every game of his three-year career and has never had a serious injury. Justin Dragoo, who had a college career plagued with injury, has had a successful senior, senior, senior campaign in this, his sixth year of college. Dragoo has 54 tackles on the season. No ASU running back has lost a fumble when running from the line of scrimmage all season. Plummer and junior Juan Roque have both promised Snyder they would return for their senior seasons. Keep your fingers crossed.

Cheerleaders ???

Cheerleaders are the epitome of school spirit, respected by all and most importantly, endowed with a working knowledge of football, right? Well, let's be honest.

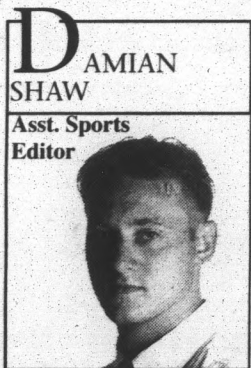

At the end of two recent home football games, I had the experience of standing on the sidelines during the fourth quarter.

Against Stanford, ASU was rallying late in the fourth quarter in almost an exact replay of last year's drama. ASU, needing a touchdown to go ahead, immediately converted two first downs but then stagnated. On the crucial fourth down, Plummer came to the line, the crowd silenced with anticipation.

Cheerleader: "Uh, excuse me, can you tell me what time it is?" The cheerleader already had a defeated look on his face. The game had gone longer than the three-hour average, and apparently he had somewhere better to be. I might have thought it an isolated incident, but he was the second cheerleader who asked me that question in the same five minute span. Are they on the clock or salaried?

Against UCLA, the Sun Devils seemed to have the upper hand in what turned into a homecoming shootout. After having recovered their third fumble of the fourth quarter, the Sun Devils needed two first downs to run out the clock. The first two plays from scrimmage resulted in nearing ASU to a first down, but no cigar. Once again a crucial down, this time third, the stadium hushed in anticipation of the play as Plummer came to center. A glance to my right saw a cheerleader playing leapfrog over several megaphones that had been set down end up. Why are they even there?

While appreciated by most for their superficial looks, cheerleaders hold little or no value. They are a carryover from the early days when cheerleaders' tumbling skills "other" skills were really accepted. Crowds nowadays don't need to be told when to cheer, and they certainly don't need cheerleaders without watches.

Softball Coaches Association Hall of Fame and the State of Minnesota Hall of Fame. Wells, though, is quick to defer her recognition.

"It's a recognition of all of the people I've worked with," Wells said. "I've been fortunate enough to have some really great teams and assistant coaches. I've been around an environment that has made me able to receive some of this personal recognition."

"I'm honored and thankful for all the people who have surrounded me and been helpful in helping me reach some of the achievements that I have."

Wells, who spent 18 years of her coaching career at Minnesota and still has a family of friends in the St. Paul area, said she is looking forward to reminiscing with longtime friends at the induction ceremony. During her tenure at the school, Wells taught female athletes the fundamentals of spiking volleyballs, going to the hoop and hitting a rising fastball. She coached women's basketball (1973-77), volleyball (1974-81), and softball (1974-88) while at Minnesota before coming to ASU.

In her seventh year at ASU, Wells said she originally labored over the decision to leave her niche at Minnesota and make the move to Tempe.

"It came down to, 'Do I stay with the known, or do I take a risk?' and I've always been a risk taker," Wells said. "In retrospect, I would have been happy with either decision, but I'm thankful for the opportunity I've had to come and coach here."
