Super Bowl leads to vendor, scalper crackdown

BY KELLY WENDEL
STATE PRESS

Ticket scalpers and unlicensed vendors operating in the vicinity of Sun Devil Stadium during the Super Bowl may have some unwelcome customers — Tempe police officers.

The Tempe City Council announced Thursday that city ordinances restricting sales and vending, such as ticket sales, will be actively enforced during the festivities surrounding the game. A state law that prohibits ticket scalpers from transacting business within 200 feet of an entrance or adjacent driveway to an event will also be enforced.

"We will actively be enforcing the laws with regard to selling in the roadway or selling alongside of the roadway," said Lt. Steve Graehling of the Tempe Police Department. "I have a group of officers that, that will be part of their responsibility."

Graehling also said it was a possibility there would be plainclothes police aiding in the crackdown.

Tempe City code prohibits use of public rights-of-way for soliciting, merchandising, vending or selling of any nature, except where allowed by other city ordinances. The law also prohibits sidewalk vending, peddling, selling or displaying from a pushcart any item of tangible personal property on any public sidewalk or right of way. But Tempe has licensed vendors who have paid a $400 special permit fee.

Graehling said Tempe Police would start identifying illegal vendors this weekend, and start the enforcement next week.

Although hot dog vendor Mike Campione already has a deal inked to provide food for the fraternities during the event and will not have to worry about special permits, he still doesn't like the crackdown on vendors.

"I don't agree with it, but you can't fight city hall," he said. "Never could."

Mike Campione already has a deal cooked up to supply the fraternities with his product during the Super Bowl, but many other vendors won't get to relish in the profits. Tempe police plan to actively crack down on unlicensed vendors and ticket scalpers operating in the vicinity of the Super Bowl.

Symington's cuts killing universities, lobbyist says

BY RAY STERN
STATE PRESS

Anticipating an ugly battle for dollars during the upcoming legislative session, the director of a student lobbying group said Thursday that recent state budget cuts are killing the universities.

"They're not giving enough money to account for inflation," said Paul Allvin, executive director of the Arizona Students Association. "There's a real anti-education environment down there."

Allvin said controversy over Gov. Fife Symington's university budget recommendations has overshadowed low increases planned by the Legislature.

"The universities have to convince both (the legislature and the governor) to raise funding," he said.

Under Symington's plan, university monies coming from the state's general fund would increase only .5 percent to $612.5 million for fiscal 1997 over the $609.3 million appropriated for fiscal 1996.

The Legislature's recommended increase of $11.6 million for fiscal 1997 is less than 2 percent over 1996 appropriations.

Rep. Mike Gardner, R-Dist. 27 and vice-chairman of the Public Institutions and Universities Committee, said he is trying to gather support for an even bigger increase.

Gardner said the extra funds are needed not just to get by, but to keep the schools competitive.

"It doesn't come cheap," he said. "We can't just sell sunshine forever. We actually have to give professors something to put in their pockets."

Allvin echoed ASU Provost Milton Glick's statement that if funds are not found, students will soon be looking at either fewer services or increased tuition.

"There's just no way around it," Allvin said.

Safety Escort Service often taken for a ride by students

BY TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

Kevin Kolb is not a taxi driver. But the Safety Escort Service director said between 5 and 6 percent of the SES service calls each night are people looking for a chauffeur.

"Many people want us to be a taxi service, but we can't provide it," he said.

Safeway, IGA, Staples and local bookstores are popular requests for the escort service — destinations for which late-night shoppers will have to find alternate transportation.

"Both the student body and the escorts have become lazy and want to drive carts all the time," he said. "When we have this many people that all want carts, it will slow our service down."

Kolb said policies need to be established to rely less on the electric carts — which only have limited range — and increase use of bikes and walking.

Former base manager Risha Vohra said it is common to find people who do not need escorts requesting them anyway.

"I'm concerned about safety, but the service is abused," he said. "People use us to get from one place to another."

However, Vohra said there is really nothing the SES can do to curb the problem without discriminating against those who need the service.

"We waste a lot of time escorting people that don't need it, but we can't discriminate," he said.

Base Manager Emily Smith agreed people sometimes use the SES merely to get from point to point when safety is not their concern.

TODAY

The Today Section is a daily calendar of events printed as a service to the ASU community. Requests are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis and are printed as space permits.

Campus clubs and organizations may submit written entries to the State Press in the basement of Matthews Center. Requests will not be taken over the phone or via fax.

Entries must contain the full name of the club or organization, a description of the event, date, time and the full address of the location. All requests are subject to editing for content, space and clarity. Incomplete or illegible entries will be discarded.

Deadline for requests is noon the day before publication and entries will not be accepted more than three working days before publication. Only one entry per organization per day is permitted.

- 4X: Native American Architecture and Design Students — General meeting. All majors and new faces welcome. All Conference Room; 4 p.m.
- Alcoholics Anonymous — Daily campus meeting. Newman Center, Aquinas Hall in the basement; noon to 1:15 p.m.

Scalpers can be arrested if they attempt to sell a ticket for more than the face value, and if it can be proven the scalper bought the ticket with the intent to resell it. Graehling said all three criteria must be met before an officer can make an arrest.

Violation of the law is punishable by a $2,500 fine and six months in prison.

Although a city attorney said the ordinances haven't been actively enforced, the high profile nature of the Super Bowl necessitates active enforcement.

"Especially with the bigger games, like the Super Bowl and Fiesta Bowl, the volume of cash that is involved is a very high number, and that tends to lead to all kinds of vice concerns," attorney Jill Kennedy said. "When you are dealing with each transaction in the $1,000 to $2,000 range, you get theft by both purchaser and seller, and also counterfeit tickets."

Kennedy said public safety was a major concern in actively enforcing the ordinances.

"Our main concern isn't people selling on the street, but congestion," she said. "With the crowds and street closures, we are not wanting to add any more congestion because people are stopping on the street to buy something."

Budget

The ASA would also like to defeat at least two bills this session.

One is a proposal that makes students pay out-of-state tuition if they earn more than 32 credits above the minimum required for their degree.

Allvin said once you take out the acceptable explanations for having a large number of credits like changing majors or transferring from a community college, only about 100 students would be affected by the bill.

"That would be like killing a fly with a cannon," he added.

The other bill Allvin would like to see shot down gives National Guardsmen first pick at empty classroom seats during registration.

"There's a question of equity here," he said. "Why not give it to ROTC or someone else?"

The ASA is backing a three-bill program that includes:

- A state-based work study program that gives need and merit-based career-related internships.
- A tuition prepayment plan for middle-income families. In this self-supporting program, families would make monthly payments into a fund that is then invested, tax-free and made available years later when it is time to start college.
- Finding funds for the Arizona Students Program Investing Resources in Education. ASPIRE gives at-risk high school students scholarship money if they swear off drugs, alcohol and cigarettes and maintain a B average.

All three measures failed in the Legislature last year, but Allvin said the tuition prepayment bill has a good chance at passing this year.

"This is the best way we can think of to keep kids going to school," he said.

On the issue of authorizing ASU to sell another $245 million in bonds for construction projects, Allvin said the ASA is not taking an official position.

"I would hope that the Legislature and universities use that bond authority very cautiously," he said, adding that the bonds would have to be repaid in the form of tuition increases at a later date.

"People will use us when they are not really concerned about their safety," she said, citing three or four friends going to the same place as an example.

However, Smith said she understands why people use the SES as a taxi service.

"People like to use the path of least resistance," she said. "It's human nature."

Party-goers seeking an easy way to trek from party to party also call on the SES.

"We have had some drunk individuals that have harassed escorts in the past," Kolb said. "The escorts volunteer not to be harassed."

Harassing a volunteer will result in a walking escort rather than a cart ride, he warned.

Abuse of the SES also abounds when it rains.

"When it rains, we get major abuse,"

Kolb said. "Fifty percent of the calls are people who don't want to walk in the rain."

Vohra, a senior finance major, said when some callers to the SES are informed that carts are unavailable, the caller no longer needs the escort.

"They are too dependent on carts," he said. "When we don't have the carts, they don't need us anymore."

Aide raises suspicions over billing records

WASHINGTON (AP) — The aide who discovered Hillary Rodham Clinton's long-sought law firm billing records testified Thursday the documents suddenly appeared on a table in the White House two years after investigators first subpoenaed them.

Carolyn Huber told the Senate Whitewater Committee that she went to the book room in the White House residential quarters every two or three days and that she unexpectedly found the records there early last August.

She said they were folded but in plain view on a pile of books on the corner of a table in the center of the room, where they hadn't been just days before when she was last in the room.

"They appeared there," Huber testified. "I thought it had been left there for me to take down to put in the file. You know, to file in the filing that I do."

She said she did not unfold and look at the records until January, when they were finally turned over to investigators.

She said she is certain the records had not been on the table before she discovered them in August. "I don't think I would have missed them," she said.

Senate Whitewater Committee chairman Alfonse D'Amato, who has previously rejected calls to bring Mrs. Clinton before the committee, said the new revelations may prompt him to submit written questions to the first lady.

The new details about how Huber discovered the records in a room frequented by President and Mrs. Clinton added new intrigue to the controversial documents.

White House lawyer Jane Sherburne said she is checking to see whether the Clintons were in the White House at the time Huber found the documents but insisted there was no attempt to hide them.

"If we had found these documents two years ago we would have turned them over, no question," she said.

The records describe Mrs. Clinton's legal work in the mid-1980s for a failed Arkansas savings and loan owned by the first family's Whitewater business partner.

At the time Huber found them, criminal prosecutors and government regulators had subpoenas dating back two years for the records. The White House had claimed they could not be found and that the originals had disappeared from Mrs. Clinton's law firm.

Even after Huber found the records, they were not turned over for another five months because she put them in a box and forgot about them until she reopened the box this month.

When asked whether she believed someone had left the records deliberately, Huber answered, "Someone did." But when pressed whether she believed the president or Mrs. Clinton had left them, she added: "I just did not know who left them there."

Huber testified the book room was mainly for the Clintons and their guests, but was accessible to herself and some other White House aides. The room is next door to Mrs. Clinton's office in the residence.

Reversing 10-year trend, some schools reduce tuition

BOSTON (AP) — Knowledge may be getting cheaper. After increasing at more than double the rate of inflation for a decade, tuition at some universities and colleges is coming down.

Massachusetts public colleges cut tuition 5 percent to 10 percent on Wednesday, one day after North Country Community College, part of the State University of New York, lowered part-time tuition 12 percent.

Last week, North Carolina Wesleyan College said it would cut tuition 23 percent. And in November, Muskingum College in Ohio decided to reduce the cost of an education 29 percent.

The schools say they have dropped their prices in response to public anger over escalating costs, and to attract more students. Muskingum already is seeing what it described as a significant increase in applications.

"Education is becoming regarded more and more as a commodity," said the college's president, Samuel W. Speck Jr. "Colleges and universities have been increasing tuition and fees faster than inflation and family income, and each time you do that you're pricing more people out of the market."

For years, colleges have blamed tuition increases on the cost of giving scholarships to students who cannot afford an education. But whenever tuition went up, more students found themselves in need, and the additional revenue would go toward financial aid.

Colleges were like dogs chasing their tails.

"Like many parents in America, we just had to ask, 'When is this going to stop?'" said Linda Stallone, vice president for development at North Carolina Wesleyan.

Tuition has climbed at double the rate of inflation for 10 years — including last fall, when prices rose an average of 6 percent. Tuition and fees — not including room and board — now average $2,860 at four-year public universities and $12,432 at four-year private colleges and universities, according to the College Board.

Other schools are now planning their tuition for the fall; the question for administrators like Speck and Stallone is whether those colleges and universities will follow suit in lowering the cost of an education.

Among those that have already started cutting prices is Pine Manor College in Massachusetts. Citing increased competition, it lowered tuition for in-state students 38 percent Thursday. United States International University in San Diego cut undergraduate tuition 13 percent this year.

Waldorf College in Forest City, Iowa, reduced its price by 8 percent and guaranteed the bill would not increase from one year to the next for students now enrolled.

Fire kills 10 in Germany

LUEBECK, Germany (AP) — A suspicious fire raced through a home for immigrants Thursday, killing at least 10 people including a woman who desperately leaped from an upper story while holding a child. Police detained three men suspected of setting the fire.

The child was severely injured, one of 35 people hurt in the fire which, if deliberate, would be Germany's deadliest anti-foreigner attack since World War II.

Three men were being investigated on suspicion of murder and arson, but authorities had not confirmed the cause of the fire. Luebeck prosecutor Michael Boeckenhauer said the fire started simultaneously in several places, indicating arson.

But police later said they were still probing and had not ruled out "a technical defect" as the cause.

The four-story building, which was reduced to a smoking shell, had housed asylum-seekers from Angola, Zaire, Lebanon, Syria and Poland.

Four children were among those killed, and hours after the blaze was extinguished firefighters were searching the rubble for more victims.

The fire horrified Germans who have been distressed by the anti-foreigner attacks erupted after unification in 1990.

The number of attacks has dropped since a peak in 1993, however. German authorities have arrested hundreds of neo-Nazis, banned several groups and infiltrated the movement. Germany also changed its asylum law, resulting in a sharp drop in the number of foreigners admitted.

Survivors of the blaze were in shock. Wearing just a thin coat and slippers against the bitter cold, Joao Bunga of Angola stood in front of the scorched shell of the house where he and his family lived while waiting for Germany to rule on their asylum request.

Some friends tried to lead him into a warm bus, but he pulled away, refusing to leave the smoking ruin where his wife had perished.

Bunga, who has been in Germany six years waiting for asylum, said he was awakened by his children crying "Fire! Fire!" They managed to get out, but his wife did not.

Residents of the area expressed shock at the attack, describing their relationship with the immigrants as good. Their children went to school and played soccer together.

"When they didn't come to school today, we cried," said 10-year-old Michelle, a classmate of the children in the house. "The brother of our friend is dead. We must do something to help them."

Firefighters try to extinguish a home set afire in the northern German town of Luebeck. The house, a residence for foreigners seeking asylum, was gutted and 10 people died in the blaze. German officials said the fire started in several places simultaneously and they suspect arson. At least two suspects were arrested on suspicion of murder and arson.

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

BRAVO — To the outpouring of student and staff response to a recent call for a student demonstration.

ASU has gained, fairly or not, a reputation for widespread apathy. So far, it appears that the march against the governor's proposed budget cut is gaining in momentum.

Seems even the Associated Students of ASU are going to help get Wednesday's march organized.

To all the students, faculty and staff planning to attend — bravo. With the budget bill facing a senate subcommittee hearing soon, it is vital that ASU makes its voice heard.

BOO — To the unending budget stalemate in Washington.

It is both sickening and unbelievable to think that House Speaker Gingrich may keep this country without a budget until November for the sole purpose of influencing the elections.

Voters will remember this, Newt. But we doubt that you or your followers will come out the heroes in this fight.

Get this country a budget. Now.

BRAVO — To US West's plan to help thwart unwanted telemarketing calls.

Thanks to a state mandate, US West will allow customers to designate their listings with a black dot. This dot, available for a quarter a month, will inform telemarketers that the resident does not wish to be on the receiving end of their annoying sales pitches.

Unfortunately, the designation has no force of law behind it. Telemarketers are bound only by "honor" to heed the request.

Everyone who has had dinner, sleep or a shower interrupted by a sales call will appreciate this new offer — but we wish that it was more than just an honor code. We doubt it will be very effective.

BOO — To the Russian army's violent offensive against a Chechen-held village in southern Russia.

Russia obviously has a right to maintain control within its borders. But leveling entire villages with rocket and artillery fire is going too far.

We also have to believe that negotiations are a better method when hostages are involved. Killing them along with their captors doesn't make much sense, even if you want to stand up to terrorism.

The eyes of the world are still focused on bloody Chechnya — and the world does not like what it is seeing. Communism might be dead, but the spirit of Stalin is apparently alive and well.

BRAVO — To the recent firings of Suns coach Paul Westphal and Cardinals coach Buddy Ryan.

We have nothing but cheers for Ryan's departure. His grating, fascistic, heartless coaching style might have been tolerable if the Cardinals were playing in Sun Devil Stadium next Sunday. But with a 4-12 record, there was no reason to put up with it.

Westphal's firing, by contrast, was no happy event. Westphal was a likeable coach, and under his tutelage, the team excelled for three years.

But with the Suns' recent plunge, there was no other choice. The Suns needed someone to shake them up and reorganize them. Westphal, with his laidback style, was not the man to pull them out of their tailspin.

Good luck, Paul. Buddy, don't let the door hit you in the butt on the way out.

THE UPSIDE OF A FLAT TAX.

Rapid-fire world inspires inefficient decisions

Lead negotiators in Congress reported on Wednesday, Jan. 10, that the chances they will not reach a budget agreement soon are better than ever. Speaker Newt Gingrich, Sen. Bob Dole and President Clinton all noted their differences and the difficulty they had in reaching a solution.

How did the American public react? Well, the Dow Jones index lost about 100 points. It was the highest loss in points since Dec. 18 when the Dow lost about 100 points. Analysts and experts say that the investors on the market were getting scared of all of the uncertainty.

Motorola also announced on Wednesday that its earnings increase was not as high as it expected — certainly not as high as experts anticipated. The market immediately reacted with about a $3 price differential. The Arizona Republic reported that analysts were not sure if it was a drop in price or an increase in price because there is some confusion about last Friday's closing price. The reason why Motorola did not have earnings as high as expected is because they sold more cellular phones and communication equipment than microchips.

What is common in the above two news items? The commonality I see in the two is the impatience and lack of good judgment on the part of investors, in particular, and the American public in general. We, as Americans, suffer from impatience. We have what I call an "instant culture." We need to react immediately to things happening around us, regardless of whether or not a reaction is needed.

Take the example of the Phoenix Suns. The team is losing a high percentage of games because of the ill health of key players such as Kevin Johnson, Danny Manning and Charles Barkley. The team hasn't had more than eight or nine healthy players in the last month or so. But people want something to be done to turn the team around. There were calls for the firing of the coach. More recently, in the past week, there have been rumors of Barkley being on the trade block.

Is this reaction on the part of the public really called for? In this age of marketing and customer service, public perception and reaction is valued so much that the team owners and marketers of products are more than willing to listen to anything the people have to say. In fact, everyone is focusing so much attention on customer perception and service quality that they have failed to place their confidence in the quality of the product. People's perceptions are so skewed that they fail to see the lasting quality of a player like Barkley, a team like the Suns, a company like Motorola or even the U.S. government.

It seems to me that people are trigger-crazy and want to take quick action in response to things that happen, when all they are doing is reacting unwisely. I blame it on people's tendencies to want everything fast and now. People are more interested in a quick and efficient solution to problems, no matter whether it is the right solution or the most effective solution.

Does Motorola's status really warrant a sharp drop in price? Is the Suns situation really that bad that it calls for firing the coach or trading significant players? Is a major change required in the Suns' organization?

Along the same lines, does the fact that there may not be a budget agreement warrant a loss in the financial markets? We haven't had a balanced budget for a long time. We did not create the budget deficit overnight. Why do people expect to solve the budget crisis in a short period of time? Why don't we take our time in balancing the budget effectively rather than rushing through to a less than complete solution? When will people stop, take time off from their hectic schedules and find out how great life is?

Make sure you take time off and enjoy the beautiful things life has to offer. People are becoming too hyper and producing knee-jerk reactions to stimuli in their environment. By ignoring what we truly know and placing our values behind what every one else thinks, we are causing a vicious psychological circle of mass reaction. What happens at the aggregate level, across a population of people, does not truly reflect what a majority of the individuals in the population think. We are contributing to an event that we did not intend in the first place.

The only solution is for us to take more time and think through issues before we react. I would strongly recommend moving away from the instant culture of ours and place more trust in effective solutions rather than quick and efficient solutions.

And, remember, there is no hurry. Take it easy. After all, it's spring time. Smell the flowers ... and take your time doing it.

'Job' of first lady not necessarily enviable

Not long ago, Sandra Day O'Connor got a fan letter from a schoolboy. He wrote: "Dear Justice O'Connor. We read a book about you. You're the first woman on the Supreme Court. You learned to ride a horse. You must be the fairest judge in the U.S.A. I hope that someday you can become a president's wife. Love, Chris."

ELLEN GOODMAN
Syndicated Columnist

I don't know what they teach in school these days, but I'm guessing that Chris got this message from the culture. On paper, two Supreme Court justices may be the most powerful women in America. But in the public mind, the highest ranking woman is still a wife. It's the first lady who stands in the center of the stage — you might say, the target.

That does not mean that Justice O'Connor is looking for a promotion to the East Wing of the White House. Indeed, after watching what's happened to Hillary Clinton, Liddy Dole has decided that she'd be better off sticking with the Red Cross.

In the latest AK-47 attacks, Hillary has been accused of being "a congenital liar," a sleazy lawyer and a political liability. An all-around Gal Demon. At the rate things are going, she'll have to make her own videotape in self-defense.

A majority of Americans who don't know what, let alone where, Whitewater is, think she is hiding "something." Just half of the public in one poll now approves of the way she is handling the job of first lady. Although I doubt they could define the "job."

I suspect this too shall pass. There's barely enough "there" there to keep Al D'Amoto's famous adrenalin up. Sooner or later, the opposition will fail to meet their allegation-of-the-week quota. Not even Al can believe that she concealed papers so they would pop up — ta da — on the eve of her book tour.

But the tone of the attacks on this first lady and the cynicism about her character and motives from every Republican corner and media round table is unprecedented even in the history of Hillary in the Beltway.

I am not just talking about Bill Safire's "liar" column which disproved his own maxim about column-writing — better to be a jerk that kneels than a knee that jerks — by proving he could be both. More typical of what's going on was the follow-up column in which he tried to inoculate himself and other character assailants against charges of boorishness.

Why, he demurred, he would have been — blush — a sexist had he given Mrs. Clinton "a free pass." So attacking her was really a blow for women's equality. And conversely, anyone who defended this (first) lady must be a chivalrous, chauvinist pig.

Frankly, I have always loved it when men make a feminist argument for woman-bashing. It reminds me of men we have all known and loved whose first liberated act is "letting" a date pick up the check or allowing a pregnant woman to stand in the bus.

Well, call me Ms. Piggy. For the most part, the pack's pursuit of Hillary is an attempt to discredit the only member of the re-election team Clinton can't fire. But if you think that the gleeful attacks on Hillary Rodham Clinton are not also attacks on female uppityness, rerun the tapes of the 1992 Republican convention.

For the last three years, the first professional First Wife has tried to figure out — in public and under the minutest of scrutiny — a new role that would, literally, work. Has she stumbled? You bet. There's more lawyer than politician in her bones, too much fine print in the health care proposal, too much caution in her column, and her book is, well, earnest.

As for the "conflict" between law briefs and cookie-baking, independent woman and wife, policy work and hostess — sometimes we have to stop seeing parts of a whole woman as contradictions.

This is a complex, intense, serious, imperfect woman. She has a righteous side that strikes opponents as self-righteous. She believes in government more than is currently popular. There are people who don't like her husband, her politics or her style.

But in an era when we refuse to give anyone the benefit of any doubt, take a deep breath, pull the teeth out of her ankle and think about her. This not a person of bad character.

Oh, and about that letter from Chris. Justice O'Connor sent a copy to Hillary Clinton. But the justice reported, "I don't think she was as amused as I was." I wonder why.

U.S. role in Bosnian peacekeeping necessary

Has anybody else noticed that the events in Bosnia have slipped off the front pages of most newspapers since the signing of the peace agreement?

JENNIFER DODD
Columnist

That must be good news. There is nothing eventful happening in the Balkans now, right? Wrong.

Flip a few pages into the newspaper, and you'll most likely find a blurb describing the latest disappointment in the peacekeeping efforts there. The early withdrawal of Serbian and Croatian troops from the front lines to create buffer zones seemed promising, but an organized POW sway, a day later, was a bust as only a fraction of the more than 24,000 missing people were freed.

Today is the deadline for compliance with all of the terms of the U.S.-brokered Dayton peace agreement, but things don't look very promising.

Unfortunately, burying the bad news on Bosnia deeper in the paper isn't making the problem go away. The civil war in Bosnia rages on just as it has for years. Hostilities will not disappear overnight, and the combatants are not likely to put down arms when fighting has become a way of life for them. So the burden of ending the fighting is left to the NATO-led peacekeeping force.

There has been much debate as to whether U.S. troops belong in Bosnia. It is, after all, a civil war. Shouldn't the fate of the area be decided by the people in the area? As my boyfriend, a U.S. Marine, prepares to leave for cold-weather training tomorrow, I worry that he'll be one of the 12,000 Americans still to be deployed to the area, and I wonder why the weight of peacekeeping rests on American shoulders.

As much as I hate to say it, I do understand why intervention is necessary. The conflict obviously is not being resolved on its own, and probably cannot be solved by people with such fierce ethnic rivalries.

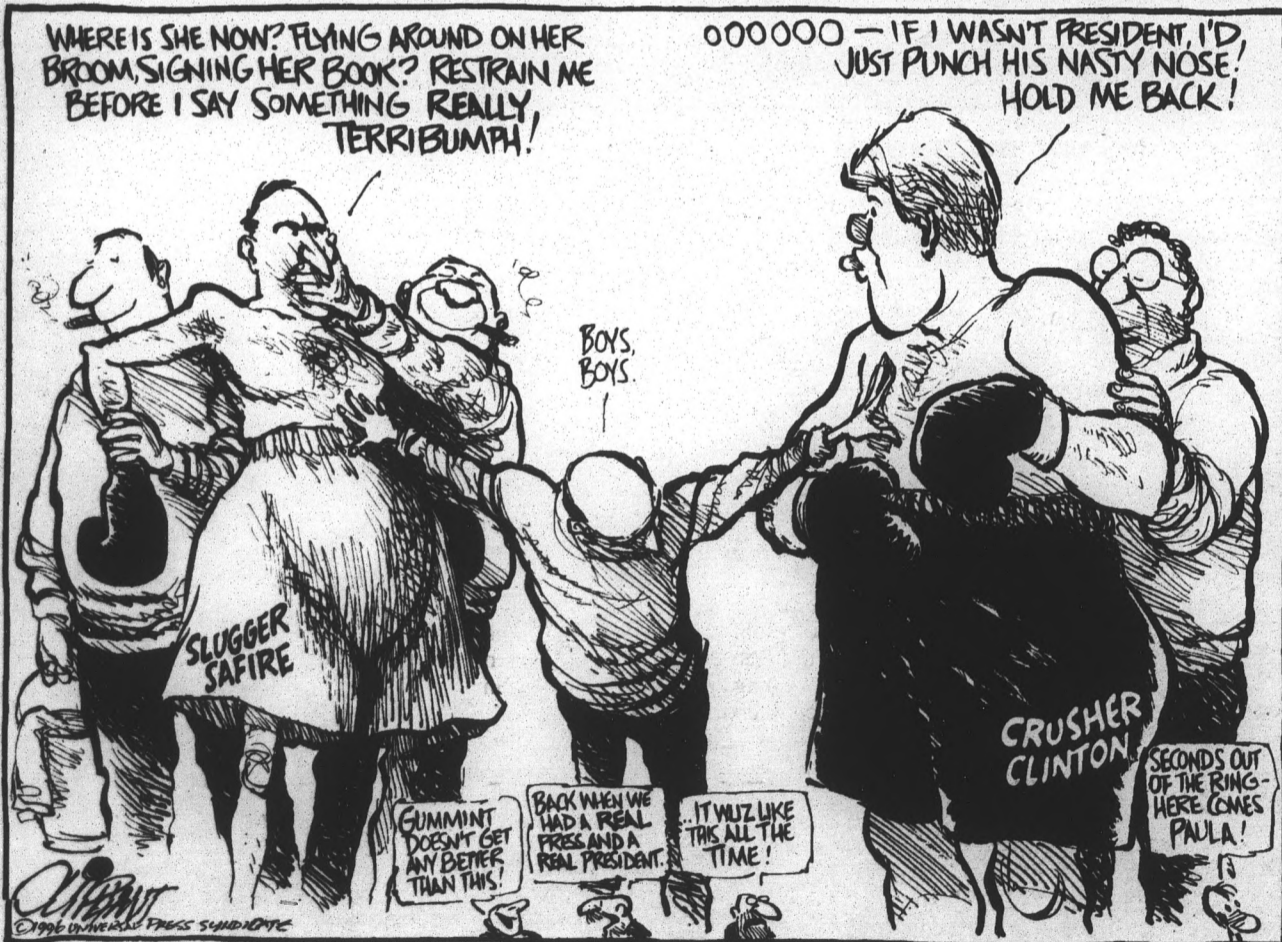

More pressing, though, is the moral obligations we should feel to intervene. We condemn the acts of genocide by the Nazis in World War II, so how can we possibly permit the ethnic cleansing so prevalent in this conflict to continue?

Thus, we would be derelict in our duty to humanity if we didn't try to create and maintain peace in the area. Unfortunately, U.S. forces are necessary to fulfill our moral obligation, to keep the peace, to do the right thing. With that obligation comes the danger inherent of any military operation.

I support them and applaud them for their efforts, and I pray for their safe return.

I just beg that it isn't my Marine that has to do the right thing.

Principal charged with indecent acts

BY GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS

Officials confirmed Thursday that a man charged with public sexual indecency at a Tempe park is a Phoenix elementary school principal.

Jesse Bass, Simpson Elementary principal for 6 1/2 years, was arrested at 5 p.m. Wednesday at Moeur Park, 714 N. Mill Ave., when he allegedly felt the crotch of an undercover Tempe police officer.

Tempe Officer Bob Johnson was doing routine undercover work in the park when Bass approached him and asked if he was a cop, said Tempe Officer Les Strickland. Bass next felt the officer, looking for a badge, Strickland said.

Bass reached for the officer's crotch, rubbing Johnson's penis through his pants. The officer then arrested Bass on charges of public sexual indecency.

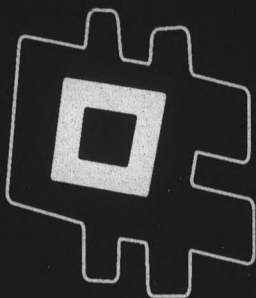

Moeur Park has long been known as a place where people have sex in public and pick others up for sexual encounters, Strickland said. While much of the activity is homosexual, Strickland said police are not targeting homosexuals.

"We don't care who's up there," he said. "If they're having any public sexual activity, we're going to arrest them."

District officials have not released a statement because they do not have all of the facts and are waiting to see the police report, said Linda Jeffries, community relations coordinator for the district.

Bass placed himself on personal leave for the rest of the week, she said.

Judge defends wrist slap sentence

STANTON, Mich. (AP) — Phone messages — most of them positive — piled up for a judge who literally slapped a man on the wrist for spousal abuse, a court administrator said Thursday.

At a trial earlier this month, District Court Judge Joel Gehrke suspended all fines and a maximum 90-day jail sentence against Stewart Marshall, then slapped Marshall's wrist with three fingers, saying, "Don't do that."

Marshall, 38, was convicted Jan. 4 of misdemeanor abuse for shoving his wife, Crystal, against the wall Oct. 31. Marshall acknowledged grabbing his wife by the shirt and pushing her against the wall. She fell to the floor.

"Any man in this county who deals violently with a woman should not expect a slap on the wrist. That is not what happened here," Gehrke said Thursday. "The whole thing was staged. ... Sometimes women lie. Sometimes women manipulate."

The altercation between the Marshalls stemmed from an affair that Mrs. Marshall had with her husband's brother that resulted in a pregnancy. Eventually, the couple reconciled, and Marshall said they agreed they would put the baby up for adoption.

Gehrke acknowledged that Marshall committed a criminal offense but added, "I don't have the moral authority to punish this man. ... In the eyes of Moses, the crime was not committed by the husband."

A former assistant prosecutor, Gehrke, 37, has been a judge since 1991. He denied any suggestion that he is soft on spousal abuse.

"Anybody who challenges the righteousness of a domestic violence case might as well step in front of a moving train," he said. "You have to do the right thing without fear of public clamor."

FLAT BROKE

Understaffed Bike Co-op labors to move cyclists

BY JEFF OWENS
STATE PRESS

Phil Thompson needs help.

He and his assistant, Shaun Stevens, are the only employees of ASU's Bike Co-op, and they're having a tough time keeping up with all of the business from campus cyclists.

"We're looking for volunteers and employees for help all over," Thompson said as he tended to a green Diamondback 10-speed in the small shop behind the registrar's office on Palm Walk.

The shop operates at a hectic pace despite its almost hidden location.

Freshman Carl Zaragoza said he found out about the shop during a visit to the registrar's office.

"I went to register and noticed the bike shop," he said as he waited in line for help with his black Ross Jefferson.

Thompson was alone in the shop Thursday morning as he faced a steady stream of students with flat tires, stripped gears, slippery brakes and loose handlebars. At any given time, half a dozen people waited for help with bikes in various states of disrepair. But Thompson, a senior sociology major, was a few hours away from closing early because he had to go to class.

Amid the hissing of air compressors and the smell of grease, Thompson talked about his shop's dire need for a larger staff.

"It's hard to get everything done with everybody banging on the door," he said. "You let somebody in for air and all of a sudden, everybody's in here."

Oentarto Wibowo, a public affairs major and Co-op client, said he sympathized with Thompson. Wibowo adjusted the brakes on his silver Schwinn Continental while he waited patiently.

"He knows bikes very well," Wibowo said of Thompson.

ASU's bicycling club, the Cycling Devils, started the Bike Co-op in the '70s. Associated Students of ASU now runs the Co-op.

Thompson said the shop is not a heavily-funded enterprise — one of the Co-op's most invaluable tools is a bottle of White Rain hair spray.

"It's used to make sure foam handlebar grips don't slip," he said. "It turns to glue after a while."

Architecture major Stevens, who showed up at noon, said since other shops may charge up to $10 to patch up a flat, the Bike Co-op offers a pretty good deal. The shop needs help though, he added.

"It gets really busy — a lot of flat tires and loose parts," he said.

Thompson, hunched over a blue Night Shadow that had definitely seen better days, said most of the Co-op's services and parts are free to ASU students.

"Everything is free unless you need certain parts," he said.

Thompson said the Co-op also provides temporary bike storage for students who have misplaced or forgotten their locks.

Students interested in working at the Bike Co-op can apply in person or contact the shop at 965-4748.

UCLA too much for Sun Devils

BY DAMIAN SHAW
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's basketball team lost to No. 13 UCLA, 87-73, at the University Activity Center Thursday night.

The Sun Devils (5-7, 0-4 in the Pac-10) showed signs of life early with the defending Pac-10 and national champions. ASU led the Bruins for the first five minutes, but UCLA's depth proved too much as four players reached double figures in scoring.

The UCLA lead grew as large as 17 points and fluctuated to as low as seven, keeping the UAC crowd in the building until the final minute.

Senior wing Ron Riley led ASU in scoring with 29 points, followed by sophomore Jeremy Veal, who added 26.

However two Sun Devils versus five Bruins was not enough. UCLA (12-3, 5-0) outrebounded ASU, 45-35. Both teams committed 18 turnovers.

Jelani McCoy led the Bruins with 21 points, while J.R. Henderson and Toby Bailey both chipped in 15. Chris Johnson (10 points) also hit double digits.

ASU will get a chance to redeem itself at 4 p.m. Saturday against USC in the UAC.

UofA defeated the Trojans by a count of 93-81 Thursday night.

ASU junior Quincy Brewer, who returned to the point guard position after starting the season there, finished with seven points and six assists in 30 minutes.

ASU sophomore guard Quincy Brewer attempts a reverse layup during the Sun Devils' 87-73 loss to defending national champion UCLA Thursday night at the UAC.

Shorthanded ASU gymnasts battle Beavers

Courtney, Ellsberry out; senior Freeland limited

BY RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

The ASU women's gymnastics team will face a tough test Friday night when it takes on Oregon State at Gill Coliseum in Corvallis, Ore.

Due to injuries, the team will be without sophomore all-around performer Carie Courtney, top freshman Wendy Ellsberry and will have senior co-captain Katie Freeland only for the uneven bars.

Returning for the Sun Devils, who finished 10-4 in duals and second in the conference in 1995, are three of the top 10 all-around finishers in the Pac-10 last season. Sophomore Megan Wright, Freeland and sophomore Gina Holleran finished second, fifth and ninth, respectively.

"The key is getting past the first two events. We are running only five athletes instead of six in those events," Coach John Spini said. "Losing our two top all-arounders (Freeland and Courtney) hurts."

Spini said he is more annoyed by how the injuries occurred than the injuries themselves.

"I get frustrated most because the injuries didn't take place in the gym," he said.

Most recently, Courtney suffered a broken sternum in an auto accident. It occurred almost a year to the day after a similar accident sidelined her last year. Courtney competed in every meet last year.

Stanford hopes to leave ASU treading

BY ED ODEVEN
STATE PRESS

Stanford will be an incredible challenge for the ASU men's swimming team.

The Cardinal has captured 15 consecutive Pac-10 titles dating back to 1981. When visiting ASU faces Stanford at 1 p.m. today, the Sun Devils hope to be a formidable foe.

"They'll raise our level of competition," said ASU assistant swimming coach Sean Farrell. "They are some of the best swimmers in the country. It's very important that (ASU) sees that competition and strives to beat it."

ASU, which is ranked 13th in the nation, will rely on the duo of senior sprinter Felipe Delgado and newcomer Francisco Sanchez. Sanchez's first meet as a Sun Devil will be versus Stanford.

Farrell expects Sanchez to contribute immediately. "The combination of Felipe and Francisco is really going to strengthen our relay and sprint team events," Farrell said.

"Top guns Felipe and Francisco have a good chance to beat those guys," ASU assistant coach Brian Jones said.

"He's a very good sprinter. He should have a big meet," Farrell said of Delgado.

Delgado is a returning All-American and owns the second-best time in the nation in the 50-freestyle this season at 20.05 seconds.

Being a national powerhouse has been an asset for Stanford.

"Once you build a reputation that they have built, it's easy to recruit the best swimmers, like Notre Dame in football," Farrell said.

After facing Stanford, the Sun Devils head to

Freak accident creates hole in infield

BY DUSTIN KRUGEL
STATE PRESS

Last year's ASU baseball "Freshman of the Year" Richy Leon will not make his debut with the rest of the team on Feb. 2.

Leon suffered a broken left fibula during practice on Jan. 12 and his recovery time will likely take 6 to 8 weeks, according to Coach Pat Murphy.

Leon was expected to start at shortstop after playing every position except first base and catcher last spring. He started 42 of the 47 games he appeared in and batted .259 with 20 RBIs and six stolen bases. Murphy said his injury is a major loss.

"He's our most consistent infielder and also our most versatile infielder," he said. "He can play three of the infield positions. He played all year in the outfield last year. Losing Richy for the short part is going to be like losing two players or more. He's such a steady guy and a leader."

Leon described the injury as a freak accident. "It was a ball hit in the hole, a high chopper. I was going to my right," he said. "The ball was deflected. The ball went to my left. I tried to stop and my cleat got caught in the grass. I just snapped it."

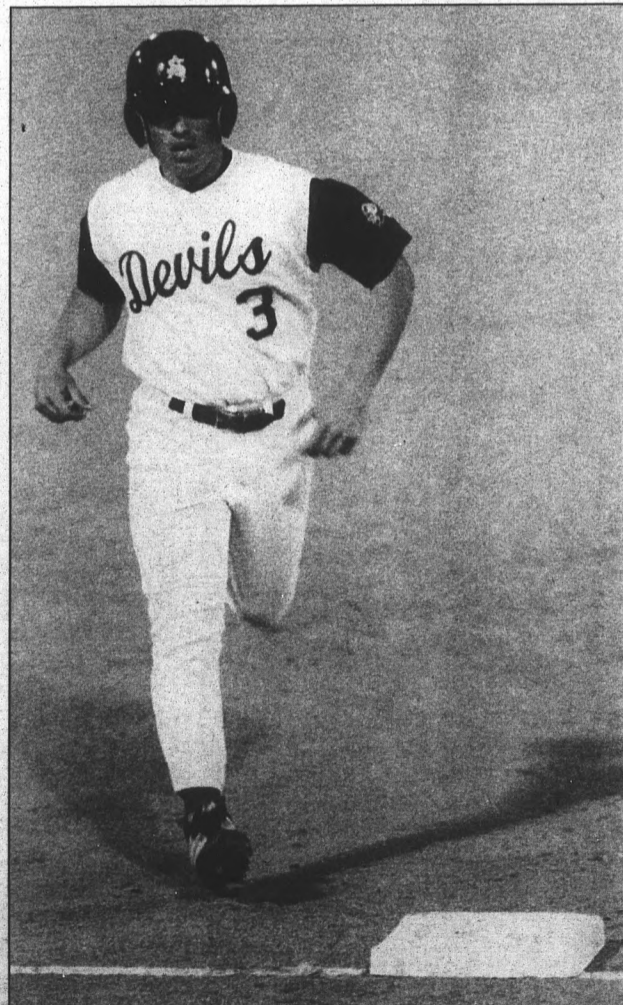

Although the injury will keep Leon on the sidelines initially, Leon is confident he will get back to normal.

"I won't be playing that first game," he said. "Hopefully I will get mentally strong. I will learn to appreciate more what I have and learn to appreciate the game a little more. You kind of take it for granted. Hopefully this won't set me back."

With Leon out of action, Murphy said junior Javier Fuentes and freshman Michael Collins will compete at shortstop. Fuentes appeared in 21 games last year with three starting assignments in the middle infield. Collins, who is a 1995 graduate of Mountain Pointe High School in Phoenix, owned a .402 batting average during his senior year.

"Fuentes and Collins will battle it out," Murphy said. "They each have different strengths. Collins is an awful good baseball player. I don't know how he tools out in terms of his major league baseball prospects, but he's an awful good baseball player."

Murphy said the rest of the team is relatively healthy, although freshman pitcher Phill Lowery is likely to miss the opener because he is still recovering from an elbow injury.

except for one.

Her comeback is currently up in the air. "Doctors have told me it could be all year or I could be back in six to eight weeks," she said. "Right now I'm just taking it day by day."

How well the team adjusts to these early adversities will tell a lot about the upcoming season, Spini said. He also admits that he is nervous going into Friday's meet.

"I am nervous. (However) I feel we can go in and surprise at a few spots," he said. "I'm really proud of what they are doing. We're very strong mentally from No. 1 down to No. 12."

Ellsberry, one of the nation's most sought-after recruits, agreed.

"We're kind of struggling right now with injuries. But we'll be in good shape later in the year," she said.

Ellsberry also said the relative youth of the squad, with only three seniors and one junior, could work as an advantage.

"It might be good," she said. "Younger (gymnasts) tend to have less injuries."

The Pac-10 will once again be strong from top to bottom. According to Spini, UofA had one of its best recruiting classes ever, while UCLA and Oregon State will remain strong.

"Any place in the top four in the Pac-10 should go to nationals," he said. "By the end of the year if things go well, we could surprise."

The goal for the team is to make it back to Nationals. Last season the Sun Devils failed to be represented for only the second time in Spini's 15 years as coach.

"(Nationals) is definitely our goal," Freeland said. "It was disappointing last year, especially for the seniors. I think we're just as good this year, even better in some areas."

No. 7 California for a 1 p.m. meet on Saturday.

"In the Cal meet, we might have a shot at 'em," Farrell said. "Cal's a very good team, but I do think we have a shot at beating them."

"Cal has a little more depth (than ASU)," said Jones. "But we are very close in terms of individual people. It should be a good meet."

Against both Stanford and Cal, the team will be accompanied by the men's diving team. The swimming and diving score will be tallied together.

"It's always important to swim against the best," Jones said. "It's an opportunity to

by Sydney Omarr

Friday, January 19, 1996

King Michael: The king of Romania is an October 25 Scorpio. King Michael will definitely change residence after 1997. Many Gypsies claiming to be psychic or fortune tellers emanate from Romania. Majority were born under Cancer, Scorpio, Pisces.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Forge ahead! Spotlight on career, initiative, business, possible encounter with soul mate. Leadership role bestowed, accept—even if you run you cannot hide. Leo figures prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Decision reached concerning direction, home, marital status. Cancer native declares, "You should settle issues and not place them on back burner!" Financial backing for project is assured.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message for valuable hint. Accent versatility, diversity, ability to arrange social evening. You're capable of attracting investors. An other Gemini offers help—accept!
