Mill merchants mixed on Super Bowl

Bars, restaurants biggest winners over weekend

BY KELLY WENDEL
STATE PRESS

Super Bowl weekend left many Mill Avenue merchants dancing like Deion Sanders in the end zone, but like any game, there were winners and losers.

"There were parts of this event that were definitely a mixed bag, but this is typical of any special event," said Rod Keeling, executive director of Downtown Tempe Community Inc., a non-profit organization that markets Mill Avenue. "Certain special events benefit certain segments of the downtown merchant economy more than others. Overall I would say business was pretty good. Some sectors did poorly, but others did OK."

Big winners in the race for tourist dollars were downtown bars and restaurants, many of which reported phenomenal business over the weekend.

"We did extremely well, it was the best two days we ever had," said Matt Maurel, manager of the Mill Avenue Cue Club, 607 S. Mill Ave. "We had lines outside the door, and we were filled to capacity most of the time from Friday on."

Maurel said any merchant in downtown Tempe selling alcohol did really well.

However, merchants selling products with less of a kick reported mediocre business.

"Unfortunately, we sell coffee, and football fans like to drink beer," said Alex Stephans, manager of Java Road, 11 E. Seventh St. "The game scared away a lot of local customers, and many businesses did not get the return they expected."

Gayle Shanks, co-owner of Changing Hands Bookstore, 414 S. Mill Ave., said she is just glad the whole thing is over.

"We did not do well during the Super Bowl and wish to never have another one," she said.

Shanks said media reports of crowded streets and lack of parking kept people away.

"It was crazy," she said. "Our customers essentially stayed far away, so we didn't see any of our regular customers for two weeks, and (we) lost thousands of dollars."

Weber recall vote set to begin today

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

Chris Weber's day of reckoning has arrived — again.

The recall election to decide the fate of the Associated Students of ASU president will be held today and Thursday. The election was originally scheduled for Nov. 28 and 29 but was postponed after complaints concerning the election's timing.

Election results should be available Monday.

Two polling sites — one in front of the Memorial Union and another at the intersection of Palm Walk and Tyler Mall — will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. An additional two — at the Business Administration building and at Neeb Hall — will be open from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Weber said he felt confident he will not be recalled if people are concerned with his job performance rather than personal difficulties.

"If the core issue is doing your job and doing your job well, then I'm going to win this election in a landslide," he said. "If people want to worry about political cartoons and people's accusations and allegations ... then I'm going to have a real problem."

Kevin Bielfelt, the recall drive's leader, said he is glad the election is here but will be relieved when it is over.

"I'll be there, and I hope everyone else will be," he said. "I'll be glad when I can become just a student again. I'm really tired."

Angelo DeSimone, ASASU executive vice president, said he is prepared to step into the job if Weber is recalled.

"That's part of my job — the possibility of that happening anytime," he said. "That's part of the package."

Manzanita's parties hurting residents' GPAs, study claims

BY TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

Living among Manzanita Hall's party-like atmosphere can spell academic trouble, according to an ASU student researcher.

According to researcher Cameron Kerner, freshmen living in Manzanita have generally lower grade point averages than students living in other dorms.

In a study completed last semester, Kerner said the large number of "disturbances" at Manzanita contribute to the poor study conditions.

"It was hypothesized that students living in a disruptive atmosphere would have a lower grade point average," said Kerner, a former Manzanita resident. "The police calls, the party atmosphere — that is what we attributed it to."

The participants for Kerner's study included 659 freshmen who lived in Manzanita, Sonora, Palo Verde Main, East and West, Best or Cholla Halls during the 1994-95 academic year. Grade point averages of all freshmen living in the targeted dorms were collected from ASU computer databases. A random sampling from the GPAs was taken for each dorm.

Kerner found that the average GPA at Manzanita was 1.67 while the average for all other halls was 2.14.

According to the report, the average GPAs for Palo Verde East and West were close to Manzanita's at 1.8 and 1.7, respectively. Kerner attributed the similarities to the location of the Palo Verde complex.

"Due to their close proximity to Manzanita Hall, their behavior patterns may be similar," he said in the report.

Dean of Student Life Jim Rund said a hall the size of Manzanita will be "problematic."

"It is too large. There are too many people, too many floors," he said. "One-fifth of the students living on campus live in Manzanita."

The dorm has 15 floors and houses approximately 980 residents.

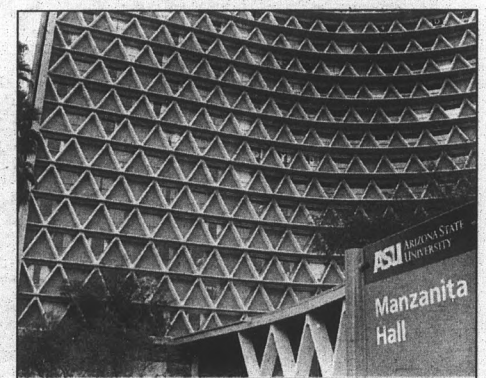

Rund said efforts are being made to make the hall more academic.

"The reputation of Manzanita was earned at one time," he said. "That is not true today."

However, Kerner said students living in Manzanita are not provided with equal academic opportunities.

"It seems unfair that different dormitories

Manzanita's party-like atmosphere may be hurting residents' GPAs, a recent study suggests. The average GPA of a Manzanita resident for the last academic year was 1.67, compared with 2.14 for all halls used in the study.

Other downtown businesses also reported slower-than-average store traffic.

"Our patrons felt that downtown Tempe was going to be very crowded, so they stayed away," said Martha Raisanen, owner of Babahatchie Beads, 411 S. Mill Ave. "The people that were here for the game tended to be really focused on the game and not on the type of products we sell."

Raisanen added that most fans were interested in Super Bowl memorabilia such as T-shirts and commemorative items.

Despite the problems, most Mill Avenue merchants welcomed the national exposure.

"This will be a showcase for a lot of corporate people to look at the Valley," said Jake Nelson, owner of the Shoe Mill, 398 S. Mill Ave.

"Although there were some slight drawbacks ... it was a good trade-off for the amount of advertising and exposure, and I think the payoff will be in the next weeks and in the future years," he said.

on campus provide completely different academic experiences for students," he wrote.

Although Rund did not know if Kerner's findings were correct, Denise Schoenherr, teaching assistant for the Research Methods in Psychology class that Kerner was enrolled in, said the data and results are sound.

"The information came from a reliable source," she said. "All he had to do was analyze the information."

Schoenherr said she saw no reason for Kerner's findings to be incorrect; however, she added that greater research is warranted.

"These findings are significant and important, but this is not the end-all," she said. "More research is needed."

Dr. Holley Belch, coordinator of student affairs research, said flaws or research method omissions can skew results.

Belch said the failure of the researchers to consider previous academic achievement and how the data was obtained could result in misleading results.

"You need to ask more questions," she said. "The level of expertise is different at different levels."

Kerner, however, stands by the integrity of his data and his conclusions.

"I think it is extremely accurate," he said. "If we did it again this semester, we would find the same thing."

Although students living in Manzanita admit the hall is a party palace, they said grades cannot be blamed on the atmosphere.

"I can see how people would think that," said Manzanita resident Kathleen Lopez. "It is hard to study here, but if you want to avoid it, you can."

Lopez said Manzanita's conditions are perpetuated by the dorm's reputation.

"This is the top party school, and this is the top party dorm," she said.

Hayley Schlessler, a freshman psychology major also living in Manzanita, said study conditions depend largely on the floor.

"Some floors are real, real quiet," she said. "I've visited other floors, and I would hate to live on them."

Schlessler attributed the differences between floors to residence assistants and how strictly they enforce quiet hours.

"If there is a party going on, you can find it in this dorm," she said.

California Casualty Rated #1 Auto Insurer in Nationwide Customer Survey

"Service, service and service" emerged as the three most important factors to customers in the 1995 Dalbar Ratings, a nationwide customer satisfaction survey.

California Casualty not only ranked #1 among the nationwide automobile insurance carriers surveyed, but also received a perfect 4.0 satisfaction rating from its customers.

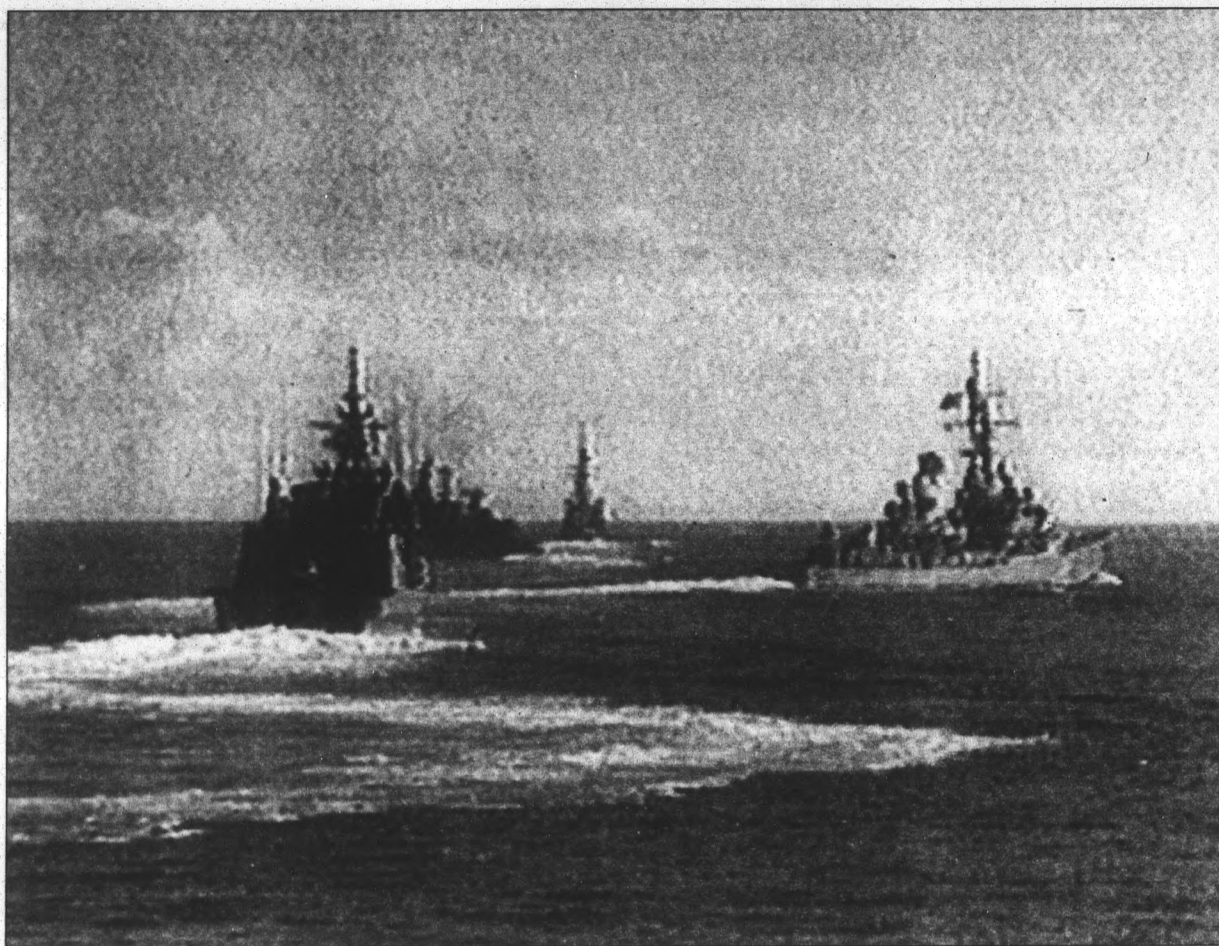

"The Dalbar Ratings confirm that our C.A.R.E.S. (Customers Always Receive Excellent Service) Program is working and that quality service and total value are the reasons our policyholders select California Casualty and stay with us year after year."

Associated Press
TV cameras capture a group of Greek warships on patrol Tuesday in the Aegean Sea. Naval forces of the two NATO allies shadowed each other as part of a dispute over a 10-acre islet, called Imia by Greece and Kardak by Turkey, claimed by both countries.

Allies face off over Aegean islet

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Warships massed in the eastern Aegean Sea on Tuesday, as Greece and Turkey threatened to do battle over the right to raise the flag on a rocky outcropping that is home only to a few goats.

The crisis, the worst since the NATO allies nearly went to war in 1987 over Aegean seabed mineral rights, has been fueled by news reports in both countries that make possession of the islet a matter of national honor.

"The islet of Imia is Greek," Defense Minister Gerasimos Arsenis insisted Tuesday. "It is the responsibility of the armed forces to defend Greek territory, and they are in a position to defend it."

"We favor peace, but ... this country doesn't have a single piece of stone to cede to other countries," countered Premier Tansu Ciller of Turkey.

Greece has sent seven ships to shadow a seven-vessel Turkish force at the 10-acre islet inhabited only by a small herd of goats.

Turkish and Greek fighter jets skirmished in the sky over the rocks Tuesday, twice engaging in air duels meant to chase out the opponent, said Nikos Kouris, Greece's deputy defense minister.

Any actual armed conflict between the two neighbors could prove disastrous. They are the most heavily armed countries in the region.

The confrontation began last week, when a Greek television channel reported that a Turkish ship had run aground near the islet in December and refused assistance from the Greek coast guard, saying it was on Turkish territory.

On Saturday, Turkish journalists flew to the rocks by helicopter, took down the Greek flag and raised their national flag.

Greece sent in the navy, which brought down the Turkish flag.

In Ankara, Ciller was adamant the outcropping was Turkish. She demanded Greek troops on the islet leave, and take their flag with them.

The rocks jut out of the sea about 11 nautical miles from the Greek island of Kalimnos and just under four miles off the Turkish coast.

Greece calls the islet Imia; Turkey calls it Kardak.

The countries have a history of territorial disputes, narrowly escaping a clash in 1974 over Cyprus. Turkey has occupied the northern third of Cyprus since then.

Officials in Athens rejected calls for dialogue over the Aegean standoff, saying the rocks were Greek under a 1947 convention in which Italy ceded the Dodecanese islands to Greece.

Italy took them from Turkey under an agreement in 1932, and Greece said Turkey had never before questioned the agreement.

"I would advise the Turkish Foreign Ministry not to make itself more ridiculous," Foreign Minister Theodoros Pangalos told reporters as he held up a Turkish map of the area to back up his argument.

Turkish Deputy Foreign Minister Onur Oymen said the rocks belonged to Turkey under international law and said discussions could be held after Greek forces withdrew.

Greek officials suggested Ciller was using the crisis to bolster her political fortunes following her party's Dec. 24 electoral loss.

Greece has seen its own political upheavals of late, with the Socialist party forwarding a new premier this month to replace the ailing Andreas Papandreou.

Greek and Turkish news media both have been accused of blowing the dispute out of proportion to bolster ratings and circulation.

"I have the impression that what we have here is a media war more than anything else. It was started by irresponsible people," said former conservative Foreign Minister Michalis Papaconstantinou.

Congress to review secret satellite funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Intelligence Committee will consider making the nation's spy budgets public and giving the CIA chief greater authority following a report that a spy satellite agency kept $2 billion in unspent funds.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., the Intelligence Committee's chairman, said Tuesday he and the panel's vice chairman, Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., are considering legislation that would end the long practice of keeping the budgets of the CIA and other spy agencies secret. In addition, the panel will look at proposals by CIA Director John Deutch to increase the director's power over some of the various intelligence-gathering agencies.

"The more I see of this the more it becomes apparent that there is no solid reason for that secrecy," Specter said. "It is in the context of public disclosure and media attention that we really figure out what is going on."

"We're going to have to make some structural changes to give the director of central intelligence more authority over the whole intelligence community, including the NRO," Specter said. He referred to the National Reconnaissance Office, the nation's spy satellite agency, which was reported to have accumulated $2 billion in unspent funds.

It was reported early last year that the NRO had a large pool of unspent money. But a new audit by the CIA and the Defense Department turned up a larger sum than previously known — either publicly or within the secret agency, intelligence officials said Tuesday.

Deutch got personally involved in the investigation into the NRO's financial practices, crunching the numbers at his own computer, said administration and congressional officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity. Deutch created a new financial management position at the NRO and oversaw the review of the agency's finances, reporting the results to lawmakers.

"In the course of this work, it became apparent that the NRO's top managers themselves had no idea of the extent of the forward funding," said Specter and Kerrey.

Specter and Kerrey said $820 million of the unspent money will go toward U.S. operations in Bosnia. A congressional staffer who spoke on condition of anonymity said about $600 million of that will pay for the troop deployment, with the rest going toward aid to help reconstruct the country.

Congress last year took back $1.2 billion, using it largely for other Pentagon programs.

Early last year the amount of the NRO overrun was reported at about $1 billion. Later the figure escalated to $1.5 billion.

"Apparently no funds were lost to the government and no funds were spent on items different than those either the Congress or the administration intended," Specter and Kerrey said in a joint statement. "But as long as all this spending authority sat in NRO's accounts, it couldn't be used by other agencies of the government or to reduce the debt."

Deutch has made clear that although the more than $2 billion from the NRO's accounts is now going to other agencies for use in Bosnia and on weapons programs, the reconnaissance office will eventually need that money to buy satellites and other equipment. Beginning next year, the Pentagon will gradually increase funding to the NRO to make up for the diverted funds, according to an intelligence official.

Yen drives Japan's jobless rate to record high in '95

TOKYO (AP) — Unemployment hit an all-time high in Japan last year, hurting young workers the worst as firms cut hiring to deal with the high yen's restraint on exports.

The 3.2 percent unemployment rate announced today by the government marked the second year in a row of record unemployment in Japan. Overall, about 2.1 million workers were jobless last year, the first time the count has topped 2 million, the government said.

Many companies — including major manufacturers — have shifted much of their production overseas to cope with the yen's rise against the U.S. dollar in recent years.

At home, the companies have reduced their staff by encouraging early retirement and taking on fewer new graduates.

There were 63 job openings for every 100 workers seeking employment last year, the Labor Ministry said today, down from 64 openings in 1994.

The job outlook was particularly bleak for young people.

The jobless rate among workers between 15 and 24 was 6.1 percent, up from the previous year's 5.4 percent.

Unemployment stood at 3.8 percent for people between 25 and 34, and at 2.2 percent for mid-career job seekers between 35 and 44.

All were record levels.

Economists have said that if measured by the same standards used in Europe and America, Japan's overall jobless rate could be as high as 8 percent. The U.S. jobless rate stood at 5.3 percent last year.

Shusei Tanaka, chief of the Economic Planning Agency, said today he believed that job prospects will improve in coming months, a view supported in a recent quarterly survey by Japan's central bank that found that spending on public works and housing was increasing.

During Japan's "bubble economy" in the late 1980s, the nation's official jobless rate stood at around 2.5 percent, but the employment situation has deteriorated steadily since the onset of a recession in 1991.

Last year's average jobless rate of 3.2 percent was up 0.3 percentage points from 1994.

The government began recording the jobless rate in 1953.

In Japan, anyone who has worked an hour or more in the last week of a given month is considered fully employed for that month, and military personnel are counted as employed.

Vote for removal

Chris Weber's Day of Judgment has arrived. Today and tomorrow, students will finally go to the polls to decide the student body president's ultimate political fate.

After months of delay tactics and stalling, the student body will finally make its voice heard.

We urge that they vote for removal.

On the surface, it may seem difficult to find reason to expel Weber from office.

After all, the Associated Students of ASU president was cleared of assault charges stemming from a Sept. 21 brawl outside of Dash Inn.

And, to hear Weber talk, he's been the greatest ASASU president since, well, ever.

Single-handedly, much like Superman, Weber rallied students, faculty and staff together for a historical protest march, brought several GOP candidates to campus for a forum and established polling sites on campus for the 1996 general election.

That's what Chris wants you to believe, anyway.

While performing for the masses at the budget march, Weber spoke nary a word about the real organizer of the march — sophomore Ed Baker.

Baker, not Weber, made the march a reality. Weber saw something good and took credit for it.

But then, taking credit for other people's work seems to be a hobby for Mr. Weber.

Is there anyone on this campus that really believes that Weber had the individual political clout to bring a GOP presidential primary event to ASU?

If you do believe that, we've got a bridge to sell you.

The presidential forum is definitely a big event — and Weber did help make it happen. But this was a team event. Many people made it happen — but Weber monopolized all of the glory.

Same goes for the polling sites. These sites were a long-term project by many people, working hard behind the scenes for years to make it easier for students to vote.

This, too, was a huge accomplishment. But while Weber did a fraction of the work on it, he took the lion's share of the credit.

Weber certainly is effective at taking credit for other people's work. We're surprised he didn't take sole credit for Super Bowl XXX.

But what about his effectiveness as ASASU president? What has Weber really accomplished, beyond promoting himself?

Part of Weber's job is serving as a representative of the student body. In that role, Weber is hardly a success.

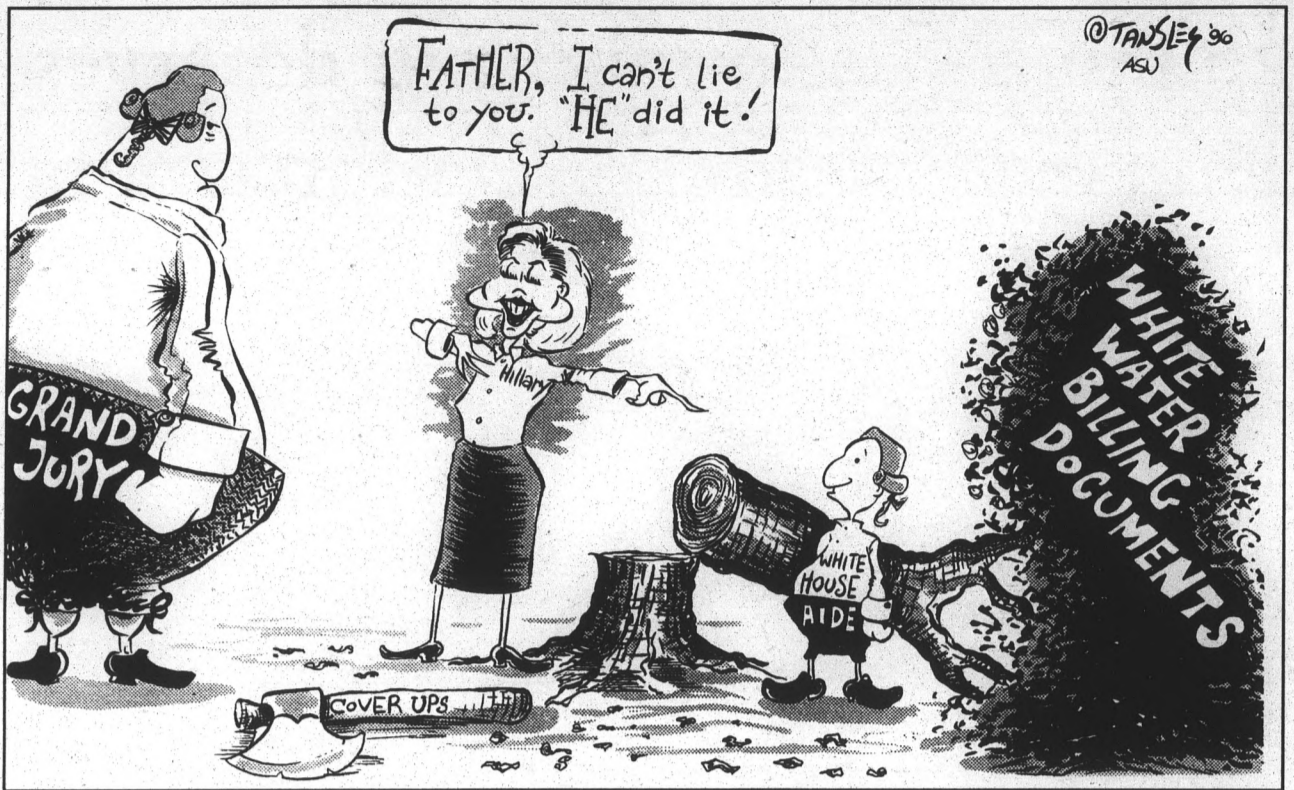

Weber's second arrest — in Palo Verde Main on a charge of disorderly conduct — showed extremely poor judgment. This poor judgment has destroyed Weber's ability to be taken seriously by those in power.

Whether Weber's actions in Palo Verde Main were criminal are not the issue today. Whether or not Weber is fit for office is.

Weber's "accomplishments" in office have largely been the work of others. Indeed, his greatest accomplishment has been self-promotion.

And as a student representative, Weber has not a shred of credibility left with the people in charge of this state.

Need any more reasons?
Vote for removal.

Newt's Iran plan ploy for self-motivation

Whether you like him or hate him, I think we can all agree on one thing about House Speaker Newt Gingrich — he is ambitious. He is renewing American civilization, enacting the contract with America and saving America from the Democrats. Apparently, however, saving America is not a big enough task to keep him busy. So, in an effort to share his unique talents with the world at large he has decided to save another nation as well. What nation is to be the next beneficiary of the Speaker's plans?

Iran.

If you are a little confused, you have a right to be. As most Americans probably know, it has been a long time since Iran has taken any advice from us. Even our best-intentioned constructive criticism is liable to be dismissed by the Iranians as "foam-spewing from the mouth of the Great Satan."

Gingrich has apparently decided that if we can't do anything constructive, then we might as well do something destructive. His original plan was "designed to force the replacement of the current regime in Iran." This leads to an obvious, yet often overlooked, question. Is the government that is to replace the current one going to be any better? Or could it be even worse? It would not be pleasant to repeat our experience in Vietnam, where we had Diem overthrown and replaced by people that made us wish that Diem were still around.

All of this assumes that we really could overthrow the government in Iran. It is not a likely prospect. Ever since the revolution back in 1979 there has been a never-ending stream of pundits and official types prognosticating the end of Islamic Iran. First it was to be displaced by military and Savak (secret police) officers staging a counter-coup. When that didn't turn out many were heartened by the Iran-Iraq war. Surely the Iranian government couldn't live through that, but it did. When Ayatollah Khomeini died, all the usual suspects turned up on TV, telling us how Iran would fall apart within months. It didn't. And then there was last year's "fiscal crisis," with predictions that Iran was nearly bankrupt and that the people would stage a revolt because of the bad economy. Hmmm. That never happened either. Do I detect a pattern here?

STEVE FORSBERG
Columnist

Our traditional wishful thinking about Iran seems to have infected Gingrich. How much money will this operation cost? A mere $20 million. Ah, yes, Iran is a nation making billions selling oil to the West, do you think that they will be impressed by a mere $20 million? With that much money you could probably buy a slew of U.S. politicians, but most of those in the Iranian government are true believers.

Of course, with a brilliant plan behind it, $20 million might just make a difference. If it is Gingrich who thought the plan up, it is not likely to be brilliant. Gingrich is not widely noted as being either an expert on Iran and the Middle East, nor is he an experienced covert operations kind of guy. If his plan reads like the plot from one of his works of fiction we are in real trouble. Of course, the national security establishment probably couldn't do any better. It would take up too much space to relate all of the foul ups they have had with relation to Iran.

Why is Gingrich pushing this plan so much? It is probably more related to domestic politics than to any coherent foreign policy. If the Gingrich plan goes through, and the Iranian government falls within the next 30 years (for any reason), he will be crowing about how "he" toppled their government. Newt may also be throwing a foreign policy bone to the right of the Republican party to take their minds off of the trouble he is having pushing through their domestic agenda. In addition, dabbling in foreign policy makes Gingrich look a little more presidential, and Newt is almost certainly entertaining thoughts of someday sitting in the White House.

In the end, this whole business smells of folly. The Iranian government has demonstrated great survival skills ever since its inception in 1979 and $20 million is not likely to topple or even substantially change it. Dribbling money into such a project seems contrary to the oft-stated Republican maxim that you should go in with overwhelming force or keep entirely out. The most likely outcome of this operation is a decline in U.S.-Iranian relations. They are bad enough as it is. And, at worst, it could prompt the Iranians into a more aggressive stance. After all, if we are trying to topple them isn't it only fair that they get to try and topple, or at least terrorize, us?

Gingrich's plan has good intentions. What was that old saying about the path to hell?

Steve Forsberg is a senior studying history.

Enough is enough: Iraq deserves leniency in embargo enforcement

Media attention was paid earlier this month to the fifth anniversary of the outbreak of the Persian Gulf War. Some of the reporting was time-wasting journalism, as on one CNN broadcast which replayed familiar footage of tracer bombs lighting the night sky over Baghdad and tapes of reporters describing the high-tech action.

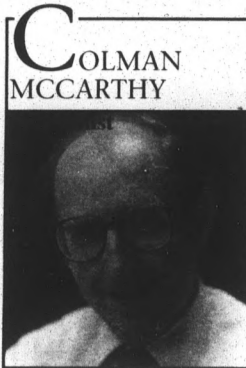

NBC asked Norman Schwarzkopf to reminisce, which he did in his usual self-congratulatory wasn't-I-something-else manner. CBS marked the anniversary by dispatching Dan Rather and production crews to Iraq and Kuwait for an hour-long special report.

As in coverage of the war in 1991, the U.S. media, if CNN, NBC and CBS are typical, focused this time around mostly on questions of strategy: Did George Bush end the war too soon? Should Saddam Hussein have been killed? Military analysts accused the Pentagon of failing to totally wipe out Iraqi forces and "finish the job."

Rather's script mentioned "the terrible cost" of the war — the 147 U.S. soldiers killed. How many Iraqi troops lost their lives? No word. An estimate of Iraqi civilians killed by American bombing raids was ignored also, as were the postwar deaths caused by diseases due to the effect of the bombing on water, sanitation and electric plants.

As is customary in these kinds of anniversary look-backs, the emphasis is on then, not now — as if the end of the war in 1991 meant also the end of enmity. The major story now is that United Nations economic sanctions against the Iraqi people continue. The rationale is that if Saddam Hussein is socked with enough pain, he will obey the demands of the United Nations to dismantle his programs in nuclear, biological and chemical weapons production. By an embargo of trade, the U.N. pressure is exerted mostly by the United States and its allies, including Britain and France, which in the 1980s, were among the major arms sellers profiteering off Saddam.

COLMAN MCCARTHY

It's a pleasing fiction that the economic sanctions on Iraq mean that its sadistic dictator is living on bread and water and running out of aspirin. He isn't. No evidence exists that Saddam is personally hurting, while facts continue to surface that Iraqi citizens are being devastated by this economic war as they were five years ago by the bombing war.

Last month, two independent social scientists, one from the Harvard School of Public Health, surveyed Iraq for the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization. They reported that as many as 567,000 Iraqi children have died since August 1990 as a result of economic sanctions. During the war and its immediate aftermath, early childhood mortality rates tripled. Now they have increased five-fold. Diarrheal deaths have tripled among children.

As a consequence of the economic war waged against the Iraqi people, the U.N. authors write: "Food prices are high, purchasing power is low, water and sanitation systems have deteriorated, hospitals are functioning at 40 percent capacity and the population is largely sustained by government rations which provide 1,000 calories per person a day."

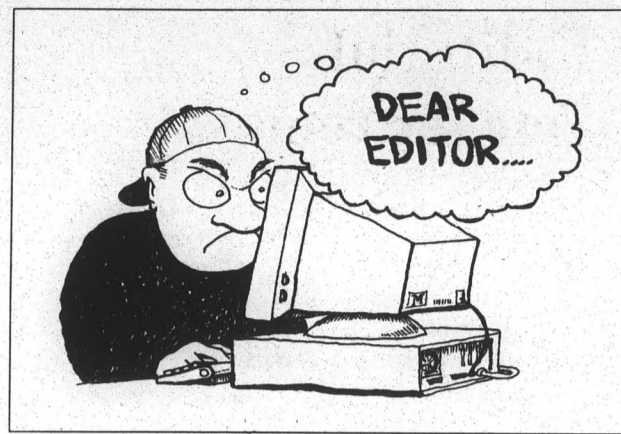

Iraqis are trapped as much by the boycotts of other governments as by the despotism of their own. Iraqi families aren't totally without friends in the outside world. In mid-January, a group of about 50 Americans — many of them leaders in the religious, pacifist and social-worker communities — informed the Department of Justice that it plans to violate U.S. law, as found in Treasury Department regulations, by soliciting and transporting medical supplies to the people of Iraq.

The Chicago-based organization — called Voices in the Wilderness — is in the best tradition of conscientious objection to unjust laws. Its members are ready for the consequences of fines and jail.

The U.S. law that forbids breaking the embargo ensures death and suffering to a people who have already had too much of it. The sooner that law is broken, and broken defiantly, the greater the chance that people-to-people reconciliation between Americans and Iraqis can begin.

Colman McCarthy is a syndicated columnist with the Washington Post Writers Group.

Obtuse opinion best ignored

I hope few people were influenced by Tina Holder's opinion column on Jan. 22.

Holder states that it would be wrong for a law to be passed requiring parental permission before a teenage girl is allowed an abortion. She believes that it would make every pregnant girl turn to illegal, "back-alley" abortions before turning to her parents.

Thank you, Holder, for ignoring the fact that there are quite a few teenagers out there who place their parents' opinions above their own. Please remember there is a reason why children are required to be under adult guidance until at least 18 years of age — to learn from their parents. It's not arrogant to expect children to seek a mother's or father's approval. It's something that I wouldn't want to be without.

I don't mean to attack Holder, but I don't understand why she dismisses the validity of values by calling them "morality, Christianity and all the rest of that junk."

Doesn't that statement take away from the greatest rights we possess in America — the freedoms of religion and speech?

If Holder believes that I'm "trying to push those beliefs down other people's throats," then she's ignoring the fact that the separation of church and state was originally meant to protect religious rights from the power of the government. In this day and age, it's sad to see religious rights placed on a back burner or never even considered.

Do me a favor, Ms. Holder: Find out when prayer was taken out of schools and then look at the rise of teen pregnancy.

NFL, ASU prove apathy again

After a long, hard day of classes on campus from 8:40 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., I hopped on the Rio Salado/Hardy shuttle for the exiled Lot 59 students, and upon reaching my destination what do you think I found?

There were no lights and no security guards watching over our cars! As I stumbled over rocks and potholes trying to find my car in the total darkness, I kept thinking to myself, "What if someone had stolen my car? Or, what if a mugger was waiting for me out there in the dark?"

I just want to say thank you very much to ASU officials and to the NFL for being so thoughtful and considerate of students once again. We know where your priorities are. We know how much you care about us.

'Roe' editorial open/shut case of flawed logic

Your editorial on Jan. 23, entitled "Happy Birthday Roe" was a textbook example of faulty reasoning. It is a display of the kind of attitude that has led to the victim mentality so prevalent in our society.

"There is no decision that requires more soul-searching than the decision to seek an abortion," you wrote. "No other decision is more personal than this ..."

I beg to differ. It is much more personal to decide when and with whom to engage in sexual activity. As a matter of fact, that very personal decision ultimately leads to the decision of whether or not to terminate a pregnancy. The "choice" is made even before a woman knows she is pregnant, because in choosing sexual activity, she accepts the risk of getting pregnant by default.

By conveniently ignoring the responsibility and impact of the first decision, society validates the very idea that there is a second "decision." Thus, the abortion debate is not an issue of "choice" but one of personal responsibility. It should be noted that a responsible position would allow for abortions in the cases of rape and incest or to save the life of the mother since these exceptions are not within the realm of personal responsibility.

You further wrote, "And does this nation wish to see more unwanted and uncared-for children? There are too many such children already alive — and their life stories tear at the hearts of every American. How many more tragedies will this nation endure, should we overturn Roe?"

Excuse me, but one of those "tragedies" was Thomas Edison, the man who brought us the light bulb and the phonograph. He was a severely neglected and unwanted child. Would we be better off if he had been aborted? Are we better off to abort 1.5 million babies, rather than our hearts be torn by those who are neglected? I shudder to think how many great leaders, inventors, doctors and educators we have lost because we didn't want to see uncared-for children.

Finally, one of the most ludicrous arguments in your editorial was, "Adoption sounds like a clean solution, sure — but are all women prepared to give up a child for all time, never to know what became of him or her?"

You're right. Just kill them. At least you know what became of them.

Escort service slow during Super Bowl

By TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

The Super Bowl meant less work for at least one ASU organization — the Safety Escort Service.

As of last Friday, the escort service had only 300 calls since school started Jan. 16. This is roughly half the normal 560 to 600 calls during that period, said SES director Kevin Kolb.

"Basically it's miserable," he said.

Kolb said he had a few ideas why the service received so few calls.

"People weren't showing up for night classes or their night classes were canceled," he said.

Escorts were available Thursday and Friday during the ASU Experience, but Kolb said they were not needed.

The service was closed Saturday and Sunday.

Kolb said he anticipated calls to jump back to normal this week.

"I expect it to go back up to 50 to 70 calls a night," he said.

Construction school nabs top honors

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

A crew from ASU Del E. Webb School of Construction nailed down top honors for developing a mock housing community plan at the National Association of Home Builders convention in Houston.

The team of six undergraduate construction students — five active members and one alternate — “blew the competition away,” said Pete Gasca, a senior construction major and team member.

Gasca attributed the team's success last Friday to the hundreds of hours of teamwork the students devoted to the six-week project.

“We gave up our Christmas break and our social life for this project,” he said. “I thought other schools were going to do the same, but I was pretty surprised that (they) didn't put in as much time as we did.”

Gasca also credited the team's achievement to going “far and beyond the scope of the competition” by working on optional portions of the project that other schools did not.

ASU competed against 18 other schools including BYU and Purdue University, which placed second and third, respectively, and have dominated the competition in past years, said Don Mulligan, an ASU construction professor.

Mulligan added that competition from big name schools with similar construction programs was as stiff as a board.

“We have the best team of students in terms of being able to put together a total comprehensive package like this out of any other school in the country,” he said. “The real significance was that this was only the second time that we have participated.”

For its struggle to the top of the competition's ladder, the ASU team received $1,000 in cash that was given to the National Association of Home Builders local chapter. The team also received a rotating trophy that it will keep until next year's competition. In addition, each individual team member received a computer software package worth more than $1,000.

Bill Badger, director of the construction school, said the honor will help the school's reputation grow, which will ultimately make construction students more marketable.

“I think winning something like that and knocking out

Robert Hendricks/State Press

some of the supposed people that seemed to have been winning each year gives ASU a real boost where it counts,” he said. “Our guys and ladies are all getting many job offers.”

Gasca agreed.

“I got one offer, but I had to turn it down because it was back East,” he said. “We were able to get a lot of contacts in our resume books. I'm really excited for myself and more importantly the school.”

POLICE REPORT

ASU Police reported the following incidents Monday:

- Two minors not affiliated with the University were contacted at 200 E. University Drive while jumping onto moving vehicles. They were warned of disorderly conduct and left the area.
- Three people reported their cellular phones stolen from Sun Devil Stadium during the Super Bowl.
- A cellular phone was stolen from Alpha Drive and Sixth Street.
- A golf bag containing clubs and golf shoes was stolen from the Karsten Golf Course.
- A computer hard drive was stolen from Physical Education West.
- A CD player, 18 compact discs and a pair of sunglasses were stolen from Parking Structure 6.
- A CD player and one compact disc were stolen from Parking Structure 5.

Tempe police reported the following incidents over the weekend:

- A woman was arrested for allegedly pick pocketing a man's wallet containing $1,300.

- A woman was arrested for alleged disorderly conduct and resisting arrest at Fat Tuesday, 680 S. Mill Ave. She caused a disturbance and was asked to leave, but refused. When a security officer removed her, she fought and yelled racial remarks at the security guard. Officers had to mace her to detain her.
- A man was arrested for alleged misdemeanor theft and disorderly conduct. He was seen carrying an orange traffic cone at Mill Avenue and Sixth Street when an officer told him to put the cone down. The man refused to put the cone down and shouted obscenities. A crowd gathered until the officer removed the man.
- A man was charged with false reporting when he called police and claimed he was a victim of a hit and run. An investigation revealed he hit a cement marker in a parking garage while backing his car out.

Jim Poulin/State Press
Junior point guard Quincy Brewer had his hands full with UCLA and Bruins' guard Toby Bailey two weeks ago, but the Sun Devil basketball team is currently riding a two-game win streak.

Frieder excited about maturing Sun Devils

By Damian Shaw
State Press

ASU men's basketball coach Bill Frieder has spent half the season looking for maturity from his bench players, and he thinks with last weekend's sweep of the Oregon Schools, he got just that.

"That was one of the biggest things of all our meetings and discussions," Frieder said at his weekly press conference Tuesday. "We had to get more out of everybody and there were things they could do to help this team. The whole thing is we had to pick these kids up and have them become a part of this team again."

Frieder singled out junior Rodger Farrington, who recently stepped up his play with a winning basket over against Oregon in Eugene last week.

"Rodger got 15 rebounds in two games, so that was a big jump on what he's been doing," Frieder said. "Him making that winning basket, and also a basket right before that to keep us in the game, has got to help him a great deal."

Farrington and the rest of the Sun Devils have turned things around as of late, scoring their first Pac-10 wins of the season on the road. ASU will have a chance to continue the streak this week when it faces both Washington schools at home, starting with Washington State Thursday night.

Magical Comeback

Frieder had an opinion, as always, on the return of Magic Johnson to the NBA's Los Angeles Lakers Tuesday night.

"Magic's a good friend of mine," Frieder said. "I feel like everyone else, if that's what he feels he'd like to do, then that's fine. I think that even though he's played a lot of basketball since leaving the game...I think that all that time off will effect how he plays."

Frieder got to know Johnson quite well while coaching at Michigan. There were no NCAA rules on how much time a coach could spend with a prep recruit when Johnson was in high school, so Frieder said he spent almost every day with Johnson and saw every one of his high school games. In the end however, Frieder lost Johnson to Michigan State, which was in his hometown of East Lansing.

"Right now we can only go out 20 days from October 15 to March 15," Frieder said. "Then there was no restrictions, so I was with him almost every day. So we became very close. I was always there."

ASU gymnastics' club handles early-season adversity

By Randy Jones
State Press

Injuries and illness have kept the ASU men's gymnastics club from getting on track so far this season.

Paralleling the injury women's gymnast Carie Courtney incurred in an auto accident, freshman Rob Davis was unconscious for over 10 hours after he was hit by a car in the snow in Chicago over winter break. Davis suffered a severe concussion, and has lost some control of the right side of his body.

He has not been able to start exercising yet, as his condition doesn't allow him to raise his blood pressure.

"It's a shame," said coach Scott Barclay. "He trained extremely hard for this season, and then this happened."

Senior co-captain Marty Larson, the team's top all-around performer, fell sick on Jan. 19, the day before the team competed in the Rocky Mountain Open, hosted by Air Force.

Barclay admitted it is tough for the team. However, he did see some positives in its eighth-place finish.

"As an open meet it was an opportunity to see everybody's hand, to see where they were this early," he said.

Top returnees for the squad include the three remaining gymnasts on scholarship left from when the team was demoted to club status three years ago: Larson, Rob Kjar and Kirk Johnson. Kjar, an All-American as a freshman, is the two-time reigning national champion in the pommel horse.

Barclay also expects sophomore Jon Protillo to make significant contributions.

Up next for the team is the UCLA Invites on Feb. 10.

"This is a big meet for us," he said. "With the California schools, Illinois and some mid-western schools, this is an opportunity for us to compete with these schools that have funding."

When mentioning money, Barclay sighed. It's hard to compete at a team level with teams that have funding, he said, adding that a Dade County school in Miami recently added four Cubans to the squad.

"This instantly gives them four title contenders," he said.

Barclay insists, however, that ASU can compete for individual titles.

"We've got the talent (individually) to hang with the UCLA's and the Washington's," he said.

Baseball newcomers expected to see early action for Sun Devils

By Dustin Krugel
State Press

The ASU baseball team's game program from last year is all but useless now because the 1996 squad has 24 new faces. Friday's home opener against Loyola Marymount will be the debuts of several Sun Devils.

Robbie Kent, Jason Bond, Cody McKay, Kaipo Spenser, Ryan Bradley, Richy Leon, Mikel Moreno and Dan McKinley all had significant playing time last year, but the rest of the roster is made of newcomers and returnees who didn't see much action.

ASU baseball coach Pat Murphy said he's never had a team with so many new faces but he's not concerned.

"Our youth is incredible," he said. "I look at that as a positive."

The biggest change in ASU's lineup occurs in the infield where last year's third baseman, McKay, will move to catcher, and Kent will become the full-time starter at first base after splitting time between first and second last year. Murphy is very pleased to have University of Miami junior transfer Mike Torti at third base and the veteran senior Kent at first.

"Kent and Torti are real solid," Murphy said. "Kent's a winner in every sense of the word. Torti has really made some great adjustments. He's ready to have a tremendous season. There's just no doubt about that."

Kent said he doesn't care where he plays.

"I would definitely be willing to go anywhere," he said. "This is my last year and I've never been to a (College) World Series. I would do anything in my power to help us get there."

McKay, who returned for another year at ASU despite being select-

Roadrunners to host 'ASU Night' to help disabled

By Ron Matejko
State Press

The Phoenix Roadrunners hope to start something new when they join forces with ASU to help raise money for the Disabled Student Resource Center on campus.

The Roadrunners' game at 7 p.m. Saturday against the Indianapolis Ice has been tabbed "ASU Night." Portions of ticket proceeds will go to the ASU center.

Tedde Scharf, Associate Director, said some of the money will be used to repair transportation carts which were damaged just prior to the beginning of the semester. Damage on just one cart totalled almost $1,500, she said.

Jeff Orenstein, Account Executive for Roadrunner Ticket Programs, said this is something the team would like to do every season. He added that up to 30 members of ASU's band will be on hand and attempts to land ASU mascot, Sparky, are being made. Also, the Roadrunners plan to have a former ASU athletic standout in attendance for the game, possibly to drop the puck for the opening faceoff.

ed in the fifth round of amateur draft, has already played third base and shortstop during his career, but he has quickly taken to his new position.

"I'm going to do what I can as far as catching," he said. "I want to kind of pace the game by myself. I want to know my pitchers really well. I want them to really trust me if they throw the ball in the dirt that I'll block it. I want them to feel that they can throw whatever pitch they want."

McKay's backup probably won't see extensive playing time at catcher, but if an injury were to occur, the Sun Devils won't be left empty-handed, Murphy said.

"(Greg) Halvorson has worked very hard," Murphy said of his freshman backstop. "His work ethic has not gone unnoticed."

The Sun Devils' middle infield will also have two new faces.

Freshman Michael Collins from Mountain Pointe High School in Phoenix will start at second base and either junior Javier Fuentes or freshman Andrew Beinbrink from Scripps Ranch High School in San Diego are slated to see early action at shortstop. Leon was projected to start the opener at shortstop until he broke his ankle earlier this month.

Murphy said he is not worried about the possibility of starting two freshmen this early in the season.

"You never like to go into the season starting two freshmen I guess on paper," he said. "But again these are quality kids that are very capable."

The Sun Devil outfield will have two familiar faces in Moreno and McKinley, who are expected to make significant improvements during their sophomore seasons. Murphy reaped praises on Moreno, who is expected to see most of his action in center field this year.

"Moreno is the catalyst," he said. "He's a home grown Arizona native. Local product. Just tremendous character. He's a tremendous leader on the team. He made an impact on Arizona State baseball last year. (He) really made a positive impact on the team when there wasn't always a tremendous attitude on the team."

Mesa Community College transfer Jeff Cermak is ticketed to start in right field along with McKinley in left.

"Both are terrific baseball players, very capable," Murphy said.

Murphy has not named his starting rotation against LMU this weekend but he said several pitchers who haven't received much publicity are fighting for playing time.

"There's a lot of battles going on," he said. "Jason Bond, Gabe Molina, Ben Byrd, Widd Workman (and) Jon Wente have not read the press clippings of the other players. They have just decided that they are going to give this thing a whirl. Those guys are all going to contribute."

ASU's three highly-touted freshmen pitchers, Phill Lowery, Ryan Mills and Ron Marietta, and Olympic hopeful pitcher Kaipo Spenser, have all received significant media coverage this year.

Notes:

ASU received good and bad news this week. Pat Kelleher, a fall baseball recruit for the 1997 season, is attempting to play this spring.

Kelleher graduated from Chaparral High during the winter break and has enrolled in classes this spring, but Murphy said ASU is still waiting for word from the NCAA Clearinghouse about his eligibility.

By enrolling in classes, Kelleher has committed himself to ASU baseball for the next three years. Kelleher, who was listed as the 33rd-most-coveted high school recruit in the nation by Baseball America recently, is not eligible for the amateur baseball draft this June because he is already enrolled in college classes.

"I really respect his decision," Murphy said. "I think it shows that the young man had more than the accolades and the money in his mind. He was really committed to a college education."

Murphy added he has not had a case like this while he was coaching, but he said Kelleher, if eligible, would see playing time this year.

"He would be a contributor but he has to pay his dues and start from the bottom," Murphy said. "He's a Brett Butler type with a little more pop."

A little free advice on the MCAT

The Princeton Review is not affiliated with LSAS or Princeton University

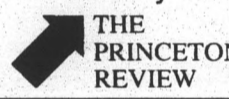

Many medical schools now recommend that applicants take the Spring MCAT and turn in their applications as early in the Fall as possible. Taking the Spring MCAT also gives you time to re-take it if you need to, and allows you to use the personal score release option.

Need more help? At The Princeton Review, our small classes utilize over 90 hours of personalized training, the most up-to date materials, and practice on 10 full-length MCATs.
