Former regent donates $250,000 for scholarships

BY MELODY McDONALD
STATE PRESS

Kenneth Bentson wanted to repay those who gave him so much during his life.

So in December, he personally delivered a $250,000 check to the ASU Foundation to be awarded to outstanding Mexican-American high school students.

"The Mexican people contributed to my well-being," said Bentson, 90. "I'm just trying to reciprocate."

Bentson said Mexican-American employees at Bentson's Union Rock and Materials Co. were outstanding workers and were with him until he sold the company in 1968.

"I have very fond feelings for them," said the former Arizona Board of Regents member.

Araceli Lupercio, director of scholarship support for the ASU Foundation, said the first three scholarships will be awarded this year to Arizona high school seniors of Mexican-American heritage who graduate with a minimum 3.0 grade point average.

The scholarships are for about $8,000 a year per student and cover tuition, fees, room and board and cost of living. Scholarships are renewable if students maintain a 3.0 GPA.

"We're going to have some very happy graduating high school seniors this year," Lupercio said.

Bentson said he hopes the money will go to underprivileged Mexican-Americans who would not otherwise have the opportunity to attend college.

"Education is very expensive, and I wanted to do all I could for the Mexican people," he said.

Pedro Cons, president of El Movimiento Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlan (MEChA), said Bentson is doing a wonderful thing for Mexican-Americans.

"It seems like this man has a lot of care and concern for the Mexican people," he said. "He's providing an opportunity for three individuals to become successful at the university level."

Bentson said he would like to meet the students who receive the scholarships.

"I would like to follow their time through school," he said. "I would encourage them and give them advice about my experience in life if they ask me."

IN WITH THE NEW

DeSimone vows to 'restore integrity' of ASASU presidency

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

As the Associated Students of ASU's new president, Angelo DeSimone said one of his first goals will be to "restore the integrity of the office."

DeSimone's first job, however, may be some housecleaning because most of former president Chris Weber's staffers have resigned, he said.

Effective today, DeSimone replaces Weber as ASASU president. He will fill the position until April's general elections.

Weber was ousted by a 2-1 vote in last week's recall election.

One Weber staffer who resigned is Buddy Early, Weber's chief of staff. Although Early said DeSimone has good intentions, he expressed some concern about DeSimone's ability to jump into the office.

"It's no fault of his that he was thrust into the position, but I think many people will find out he's not prepared," he said.

Others in ASASU disagreed. Graduate college senator Daran Wastchak said he had no qualms with DeSimone's late entry into the job.

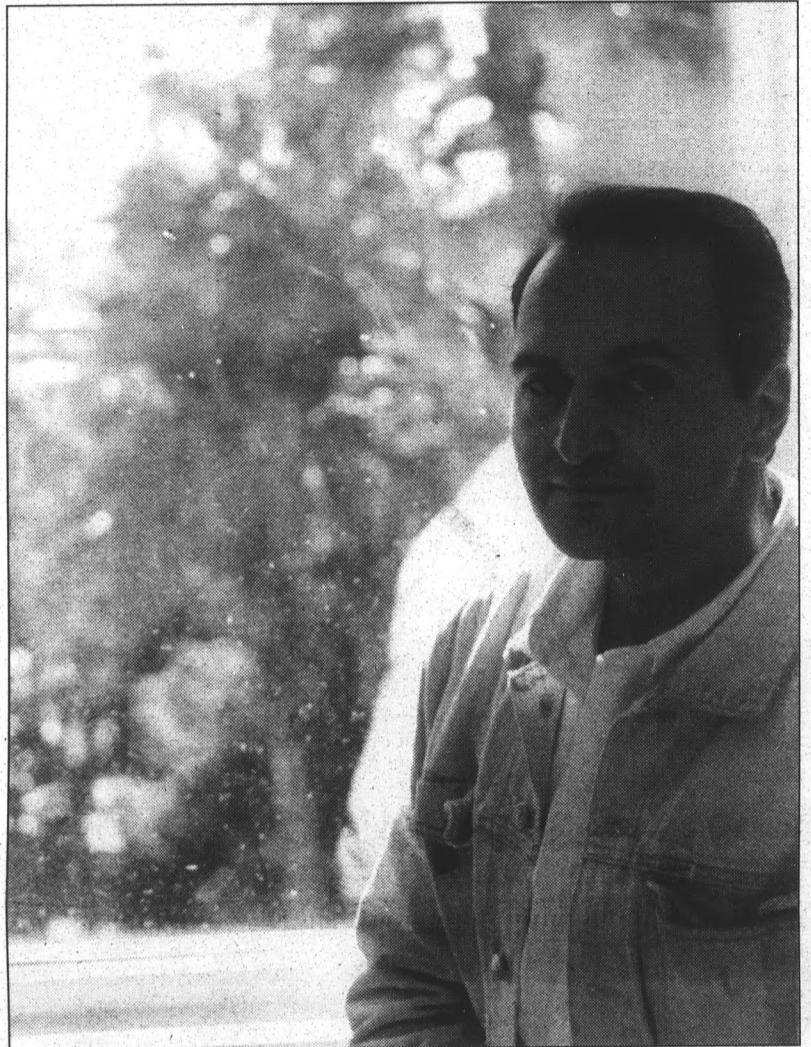

"Angelo is going to do a good job of getting us through to May, and that's a big enough job," he said, adding that any staffers who remain have to adjust to DeSimone's managerial methods.

"The people who worked for Chris understood how Chris worked, and they're going to have to adjust because it's a completely new style," he said.

DeSimone said he was not concerned about taking over the job so late in the year.

"I'm going to delegate my office duties to competent people," he said.

He said he hopes to take advantage of the surge of student interest in ASASU.

Pat Shannah/State Press
Angelo DeSimone, ASASU's executive vice president, will be sworn in this morning as the association's new president following the removal of former president Chris Weber. DeSimone vowed to "restore the integrity" of the student body presidency.

"I consider that large voter turnout (in the recall election) something positive and I want to keep them involved in the association," DeSimone said.

A selection committee will take applications through Friday to fill DeSimone's former position as ASASU executive vice president. DeSimone said it should be filled by Monday.

Pro-active stance keeps ASU police on lookout for trouble

BY MELODY McDONALD
STATE PRESS

It was 11 p.m. Saturday when Officer Ron Kelley spotted a suspicious vehicle in a dark alley behind ASU's Animal Care Program, 2325 E. Rio Salado Parkway.

Alarmed because of a recent surge of armed animal activists in the area, Kelley, an ASU Department of Public Safety officer, flipped on the sirens, called for backup and prepared for the worst.

With his hand on his .45-caliber gun, Kelley approached the vehicle.

Thirty minutes later, two 14-year-old females were in the back seat of Kelley's police car on their way home. Although they were not the criminals for which he was prepared, they were out past curfew with two men twice their age.

Police brought no charges against them. Kelley, one of 24 officers working for ASU DPS, said he would never have found the girls if ASU was not a pro-active police force.

"We're looking for criminal activity before it happens," he said.

In pro-active policing, officers anticipate future problems by going out and finding the action, he said.

Kelley said ASU's mainly pro-active, community-based police force differentiates the University from most other Valley police agencies. Others are more reactive and spend a majority of their time responding to calls in which crimes or activities are already in progress, he said.

Toby Dyas, public information officer for the Tempe police department, said in the past few years Tempe police have tried to cut down time spent handling calls such as false alarms and parties so the department can be more pro-active.

"If we can cut down on mundane calls, we can spend more time doing other things," he said.

DPS Police Cpl. Mark Charest said community-based policing is the most important part of the job.

"We would like to get away from the 'us vs. them' mentality," he said. "We get out, walk through dorms, see what's going on and help them (students) with whatever."

Kelley did just that earlier in the evening as he strolled through Manzanita Hall. As he walked through each floor, students poked their heads out to greet him.

"Hey, Officer R. Kelley," they shouted as he passed through the building.

ASU Chief of Police Lanny Standridge said this is the type of student/police interaction for which the DPS strives.

"It's important for students to be able to approach officers," he said. "They're human, too. They just have a very tough job."

Standridge agreed that keeping in touch with the community is crucial.

"I believe greatly in community policing," he said. "Without community support and understanding, we're not as effective."

East continues to endure record cold

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arctic cold spread misery in the East and the Deep South on Monday, shattering low-temperature records that had stood for more than a century, imperiling Florida oranges, bursting pipes in New Orleans and freezing fishing boats to their moorings in North Carolina.

Temperatures dropped into the single digits as far south as Huntsville, Ala., at 4 degrees, Chattanooga, Tenn., at 2, and Meridian, Miss., at 8.

Thousands of people still had no electricity to help keep them warm after weekend ice storms snapped power lines. Seven people died at Newton, Miss., in a house fire believed caused by a kerosene heater that was fired up because the electricity failed.

That made a total of 80 deaths blamed on the weather across the nation since the cold wave burst onto the northern Plains last week and dropped temperatures as low as 60 below zero in Tower, Minn.

The Plains and upper Midwest began to warm slightly, but the morning lows in the South rewrote cold-weather records that had been on the books since 1886, including 20 at New Orleans and minus 10 at Lynchburg, Va.

Atlanta posted a non-record low of just 6 degrees. Savannah, on the Georgia shore, shivered at 19. Baton Rouge, La., hit a record 15 degrees; Hollywood, Fla., reached 34, also a record for the date.

Cape Hatteras was North Carolina's warmest spot overnight — and it had a low of 14. One fisherman at Wanchese, N.C., was seen using a crowbar to chip his boat free of the ice that formed along Croatan Sound.

"Ice storms are disastrous for some folks in the north, but here we've never learned culturally how to deal with them because it's only been in our experience about every 10 years," said Orville Cunningham, sociology professor at Mississippi's Jackson State University.

Pipes burst in New Orleans, where houses are mounted on piers to protect them against flooding, a design that exposes the plumbing to the cold. Southerners let water trickle from the tap to keep the pipes from freezing.

Debbie Janssen said she remembered to open all her spigots except for those in a bathroom — where the pipes burst. The real problem was trying to get a plumber. "They said they had 25 to 30 calls prior to mine and that was at a quarter till eight this morning," she said.

Temperatures fell as low as 23 degrees in Florida's citrus groves. Farmers rushed to spray a protective layer of water and ice, and picked juice oranges imperiled by ice crystals. Even freeze-damaged oranges can be used for juice if they get to the processing plant before they spoil.

Citrus growers said it will be several days before they know how much damage occurred. But they believe temperatures did not stay low enough long enough to cause serious losses to an industry that brings growers an estimated $821 million and contributes $8 billion to the state economy.

Florida blueberry patches were just flowering when the ice arrived, destroying the blossoms "They will probably have a very, very small crop or none at all," said Betty Jones, county extension director for Alachua County.

People who went south expecting a break from the cold were really surprised.

"It's too cold," English tourist Barry Alston said after dipping his toe in the water at Miami Beach, which had a record low of 37. Alston, braving the chill in shorts and a T-shirt, and his wife, Pat, were the only people in sight on the sand.

In the North — where the temperature fell to a record 7 degrees in New York City — the icy temperatures taxed the endurance of office workers who aren't allowed to smoke inside.

"I don't plan on smoking the whole thing. I'm just going to be out here for a second," Charles Coleman said between puffs outside a building in Trenton, N.J.

"My cigarette won't even light," said Sheryl Worth.

Power lines broken by the weekend ice storms still kept more than 175,000 customers from switching on electricity Monday in North Carolina, and about 20,000 had no power in Virginia. Nearly 9,000 were in the dark in South Carolina, and about 4,000 customers lost power in West Virginia because demand was too high.

Among the victims of the weather, two boys, 8 and 11, died at hospitals in Tulsa, Okla. Gerar McClure and Brendon James had been pulled from the Arkansas River after falling through thin ice on Sunday.

Cold, ice and snow delayed funerals in Chattanooga. Families couldn't reach the Lane Funeral Home, graves could not be dug, suppliers were unable to deliver vaults and it was too cold for graveside services.

"We have worked with the families and they have worked with us," said the funeral home's David Cummings. Everyone "has been real understanding."

Trouble looms over Pakistani-Indian frontier

POONCH, India (AP) — After two weeks of intense gun battles across one of the world's most dangerous frontiers, Maj. Gen. G.K. Duggal was in a foul mood.

Pointing toward a Pakistani outpost on a nearby mountain peak, Duggal said the soldiers there had fired three small rockets at his base along the Kashmir cease-fire line.

"The Pakistanis plan to target our posts again," probably with heavier anti-tank missiles, he said. "If that happens, it will be an act of escalation."

Pakistan and India have fought two wars over Kashmir, which was divided between the two countries when they were formed at the end of British colonial rule in 1947. The Indian part of Kashmir, Jammu-Kashmir state, is the only majority Muslim state in India.

But the recent fighting was some of the worst in years, and it comes at a time of rising tensions between the two archenemies.

Twenty-five people were killed before the fighting tapered off last week, including 20 who died when a rocket hit a village mosque across the border. Each side says the other fired the rocket; U.N. observers are investigating.

The conflict is especially significant because each country is believed to have a well-developed nuclear weapons program — and each is building up its arsenal.

Ignoring warnings from the United States, India test-fired its new Prithvi ballistic missile on Jan. 27. The missile, with a range of 155 miles, is capable of carrying a nuclear bomb to Pakistan.

U.S. spy satellites reportedly picked up signs in late December that India was planning an underground nuclear test blast, and President Clinton warned that if that happened the United States would cut off virtually all aid and urge other donors to do the same.

India denied that it was planning a nuclear test, but the main opposition party, which has been gaining ground in state elections, is pro-nuclear and polls indicate that most Indians would approve of a nuclear test.

Indian troops scan a section of the Indian-Pakistani border known as the "chicken neck" in Kashmir. Two weeks of gun battles across one of the world's most dangerous frontiers has left at least 25 people dead and threaten to escalate the conflict. Associated Press

Pakistan is believed to be capable of building nuclear weapons. India accuses China of helping Pakistan develop nuclear capability.

At about the same time as the missile test, Indian Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao proudly displayed the nation's new Arjun tank. Pakistan, meanwhile, is developing a battle tank with help from the Chinese.

The tensions in Kashmir make the arms race all the more ominous.

At a V-shaped section of the frontier known as "the chicken neck," Border Security Force officer K.S. Vohra warned that fighting could resume at any moment because talks last week failed to reach an agreement.

At the talks, he said, Pakistan demanded that India drop a plan to build a fence along the entire front line. When India refused, he said, Pakistani negotiators warned: "If you put up a single picket, we will open fire."

In Pakistan, Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto called a one-day strike Monday in support of separatist rebels in the Indian part of Kashmir. Stores and financial institutions were closed, and city buses stayed off the streets. Government and opposition politicians held rallies in major cities, and in Islamabad, the capital, demonstrators burned effigies of Rao.

In a televised address Sunday, Bhutto offered — as she has in the past — to meet with Indian officials to discuss how to end the war.

But India considers the Kashmiri rebel uprising — in which 12,000 people have died since 1989 — to be an internal affair, and sees Pakistan as an aggressor for supporting the rebels. In the past, India has refused to meet with Pakistani officials if Kashmir is on the agenda.

Clinton subpoenaed in McDougal's Whitewater trial

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — President Clinton was ordered Monday to testify at next month's Whitewater trial for James and Susan McDougal, his partners in a failed northern Arkansas land deal. The White House said it wants the president to testify by videotape rather than in person.

Mrs. McDougal is accused of receiving a $300,000 loan that a former Little Rock businessman and municipal judge, David Hale, says Clinton pressured him to make. Clinton, who has not been charged, has denied the accusation.

U.S. District Judge George Howard Jr. approved the subpoena on behalf of both the McDougals, directing their lawyers to proceed in a way that does not interfere with the president's official duties, perhaps by using videotape or satellite.

The White House and McDougals' lawyers are likely to skirmish over whether Clinton will appear in the Little Rock courthouse, testify from a remote location by satellite or offer his testimony on videotape, which would be replayed in the courthouse.

A White House source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said "we expect that ... discussions with Mrs. McDougal's lawyers will result in the president providing videotaped testimony."

Mrs. McDougal's lead attorney, Bobby McDaniel, said he wants the president to testify in person because that is "the best way to evaluate the credibility of the witness."

The government's chief witness, former judge Hale, "is going to testify in person and the president should too," McDaniel said.

The McDougals and Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, who had other business dealings with the McDougals, face trial March 4 on conspiracy and fraud charges.

Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr says the three concocted $3 million in loans from federally backed lenders to benefit themselves illegally.

"This is an extraordinary turn of events and underscores once again the need to get all the facts," said Republican Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, chairman of the Senate Whitewater Committee.

Just last month, Hillary Rodham Clinton became the first presidential spouse to be subpoenaed to testify before a federal grand jury.

The first lady appeared before the Whitewater grand jury in Washington to answer questions about billing documents from her former Little Rock law firm that showed up in the White House two years after Whitewater prosecutors first subpoenaed them.

The records from Rose Law Firm showed how much the first lady worked on land transactions on behalf of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, which failed in 1989 at a cost to taxpayers of $65 million. Mrs. McDougal's ex-husband James ran the failed savings and loan.

If Clinton appears in person as Mrs. McDougal's lawyer wants, he would be subject to cross-examination by Starr, who was appointed to investigate Clinton's land deal and campaign finances. Prosecutors would be allowed to introduce evidence or testimony to challenge the president's veracity.

The appearance would also afford Clinton an opportunity to confront under oath the single most serious allegation made against him — that he pressured Hale to make the improper federally backed loan to Mrs. McDougal.

Archaeologists find Buddha's birthplace in Nepal

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Beneath the garden and under a temple more than 2,000 years old, archaeologists have uncovered the site where they believe Buddha was born.

A team of archaeologists from six countries has excavated rooms where an Indian prince named Siddhartha was born, the government said Monday.

Siddhartha renounced the material world to become a traveling monk in the 6th Century B.C., and became known as "Buddha" — the enlightened one.

Ancient inscriptions on a pillar above the excavated chambers claimed Buddha was born there. The discovery of the rooms confirmed the ancient claims, said Babu Krishna Rijal, one of the two Nepali archaeologists on the team.

There was no independent confirmation of the findings. The ancient Indian state where Siddhartha is believed to have been born now straddles southern Nepal and the modern Indian state of Bihar.

Some Indian historians have maintained that Buddha was probably born in India. But archaeologists in Nepal said the latest excavation in Lumbini, near the India-Nepal border 145 miles southwest of the Nepalese capital, Katmandu, should end the controversy.

More than 200 workers dug for more than two years to uncover the rooms.

The area they excavated is spread over three square miles of gardens, including a pond where Buddha's mother, Maya Devi, is believed to have bathed before he was born.

Archaeologists discovered Buddha's birthplace nine months ago under an ancient temple honoring Maya Devi, the government said. The announcement was not made until the studies were complete.

The pillar with the ancient inscriptions was built by Ashoka, an Indian king who converted from Hinduism to Buddhism and is believed to have spread the religion to East Asian nations. The gardens were created around an ancient temple built to mark Buddha's birthplace.

The project to find the site where Buddha was born was started in 1967 by the U.N. secretary-general at that time, U Thant, a Burmese Buddhist. The U.N.-funded project sought to preserve the birthplace as a center for world peace.

The archaeologists who participated in the excavation in Lumbini were from Japan, Nepal, India, Pakistan, Sri Lanka and Bangladesh.

There are an estimated 340,000,000 Buddhists worldwide. The religion spread from India to Nepal, Sri Lanka and Thailand and up to Japan and Tibet.

STATE PRESS Editorial Forbes' folly

The dramatic rise of GOP presidential hopeful Steve Forbes has certainly caught attention as of late. From out of nowhere, the multimillionaire heir to Malcolm Forbes' publishing fortune has skyrocketed upward, right into a neck-and-neck race with front-runner Bob Dole.

The cause of that rise is easy to see — an unwavering focus on the mantra of the flat tax, combined with an unending advertising blitz in the early primary states.

Forbes has certainly made this race one worth watching. But Forbes should be sending a chill down our spines, as well.

At first, both aspects of Forbes' campaign seem heartening. After all, simpler taxes are something we can all appreciate, right? (Especially when April 15 approaches.)

And a politician, willing to pay his own way rather than draw from the public coffers? Is this too good to be true?

Unfortunately, it is. Both points should be viewed with trepidation, rather than joy.

In our joy to save tax dollars, we're missing the inherent danger of the "pay-your-own-way" politician.

Running for any elected office is an expensive endeavor. Running for president, the highest office in the land, is naturally the most expensive — campaigns are known to spend millions upon millions of dollars in an attempt to win an election.

With such an expensive campaign bill, only a very, very few can afford to run for president using their own money. Ross Perot and Steve Forbes are two that come immediately to mind.

But does being rich automatically qualify one for the office of the presidency? Doubtful.

Yet, if we let ourselves fall prey to the Forbes siren, we will be starting off down that road — a road where only the richest of the rich can run for political office.

Despite your opinions of Bob Dole, Phil Gramm or President Clinton, it is clear that all of these men have experience in how Washington runs. Such experience and political know-how is essential for anyone who aspires to become president.

None of these men, however, could possibly run for president on their own funds.

Forget saving taxpayer money, even if the bill for matching campaign funds ranges in the millions. Shouldn't we be more concerned about electing a qualified commander-in-chief?

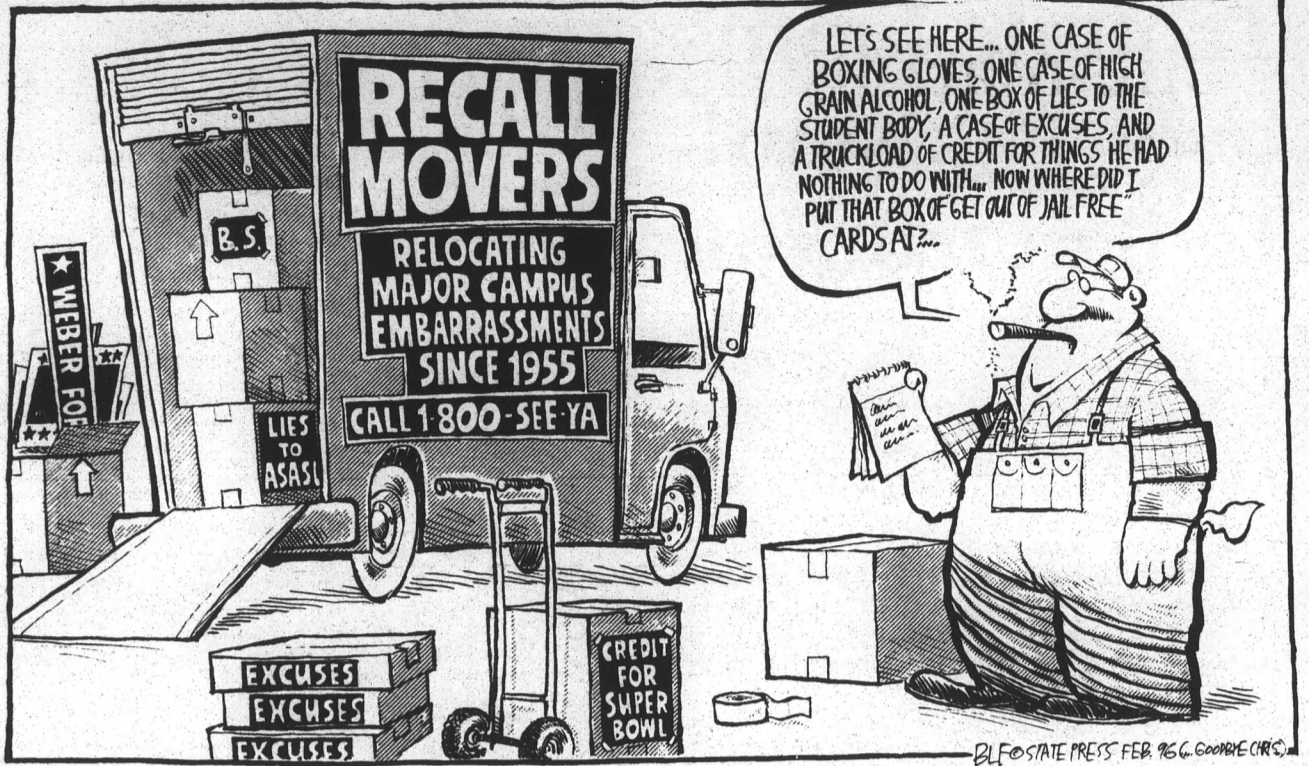

If Forbes is elected, he has already promised to eliminate taxpayer funding for political campaigns. If that happens, the presidency, along with every other high office, will remain firmly in the hands of the ultra-rich for a very long time. Such a development would effectively turn the United States into a modern-day aristocracy.

Of course, these ultra-rich are bound to get richer, if Forbes' flat-tax plan comes to fruition.

By taxing only wages and salaries, exempting capital gains and eliminating most deductions, the flat tax ensures that the rich will pay less taxes, while the middle and lower classes pay more. Doesn't sound like a very good deal.

So think twice before considering a "President Forbes."

Saturation bomb-style ad campaigns and flat-tax mantras might help Forbes fight his way into this race — but they certainly don't qualify him for the White House.

Time to dispel traditional marriage myth

I have a question. Why do many still consider the institution of marriage a necessary ingredient for a happy life?

I know what you're thinking: "What do you know, Liz? You've never been married. How can you write about something for which you have no personal frame of reference?"

Well, you're right. I'm single. And if things are as bad in the marriage world as they seem, I plan on staying that way for a very, very long time.

From careful observation of those in my peer group who have done the deed, I can say with certainty that all too often, the proverbial "walking down the aisle" proves to be a huge mistake.

I've been discussing marriage a lot with some people I know lately.

They, unlike me, have lived through the experience. They are my age, 24, give or take a year or two.

And they are all either divorced or in the process of becoming that way.

Think about it. Only 23, 24 years old, and you give marriage, the institution that this society deems the ultimate goal, a try — but with little success.

Already one of the ideals society considers essential for a fulfilled life has been achieved — and lost.

Kind of disheartening isn't it? In a society where 50 percent of marriages are proven to end in divorce, why are people still in such an all-fired hurry to get married?

Why does everyone continue to buy into the myth, despite all indications that marriage isn't always the answer for everyone?

The answer is simple — we've been brainwashed. I asked the people I know, whose marriages failed, why they got married in the first place.

One told me it was because his religion believes staunchly in the old "living in sin" mentality.

One thought she married too hastily because she was young and intoxicated by the seduction of truly falling in love for the first time.

And, perhaps most sadly, one person thought the sacredness of the marriage ritual itself would inspire him to actually honor a commitment he was afraid he couldn't keep without some contractual obligation.

LIZ MONTALBANO
Columnist

None of these reasons are a solid basis for a lifelong commitment.

A society is shaped by its cultural mythology. For hundreds of years, the stories Western culture is based on have told us human beings are the sort of creatures who should mate for life and procreate the species within such a union.

This isn't necessarily true in all cultures, of course. According to Jamake Highwater's book Myth and Sexuality, in the culture of Hadza hunters in Tanzania, there is a complete separation between men and women as if they are members of two "hostile classes, each of which is capable of ... virulent attack against the other."

I don't think there's any hurry for a man and a woman to join in a loving union in that culture.

"So what?" you say. "This is America. We have absolutely no connection with such remote, uncivilized people. Their culture is completely foreign to our own and has absolutely no relevance to us."

And that's precisely the point. Because of the assumptions we've all been raised to believe are absolute truth, there's no question in our minds that marriage is anything but a social norm.

We couldn't even conceive of a culture without traditional marriage and family. It's one of the reasons people have such a terrible time accepting lifestyles that stray from this norm, like homosexuality and single motherhood.

Now, you might find this hard to believe but I don't think marriage itself is an evil thing.

I have seen happily married couples and know that there can be wonderful and fulfilling unions between people who truly love one another.

The problem lies in the obligation to marry — the pressure to find a significant other and make the relationship official for the sake of church and state.

Because modern marriage, while still obligatory, has also become disposable.

And even though I, unlike so many others, don't think marriage is the only key for a happy life, I do believe if two people make the vows, they should not be broken.

Marriage, while a valid institution, should not be used as a means to achieve a greater end.

It also should not be the end itself.

Bone-marrow transplant raises fears

It is after hours and the AIDS clinic at San Francisco General Hospital is almost empty. Just one patient remains, confused and emaciated, waiting for a ride home.

Dr. Steven Deeks, who works here, stops to help the man he calls "Dallas" with one of the smaller indignities of this disease. The doctor calls again for a cab to come to an address the drivers may know too well and avoid too often.

For three years, Deeks has kept a name-and-address book of 100 AIDS patients. Sixty have died and half the remaining 40 have moved on to late-stage disease. Just today, the 33-year-old doctor tells me, a patient his own age, a man just beginning his professional career, came in exhibiting the terrible, unmistakable first symptoms of AIDS-related dementia.

Working as he does, among patients with advanced disease, Deeks is not ashamed to describe himself as frustrated or even "a little" desperate.

"In an epidemic," he says calmly, "things can't always be done in a conservative manner."

So it is no wonder that the doctor took a risk. Last month, he became part of the most highly publicized — indeed sensationalized — AIDS research in memory. He performed a baboon bone-marrow transplant to see if cells from an animal that does not get HIV could boost the deteriorating immune system of a human with the disease. And, he said, "I had no qualms."

If Deeks' desire to try something was understandable, so surely was Jeff Getty's desire. Getty advocated for this experiment, pushed for FDA approval and volunteered to be the subject.

After all, Dr. Christiaan Barnard might have been writing about Getty when he described the state of mind of his first heart transplant patient this way: "If a lion chases you to the bank of a river filled with crocodiles, you will leap into the water convinced you have a chance to swim to the other side when you would never accept such odds if there were no lion."

With the lion of AIDS chasing Getty, the 38-year-old who told me to call him an AIDS "activist" and not a victim, was determined "not to just lie down and die." If nothing else, he would devote his body to search for a cure.

ELLEN GOODMAN
Columnist

Now, little more than a month and innumerable banana jokes since the transplant, Deeks doesn't yet know whether the baboon cells have had any effect. But Getty has become a star of print and video in a controversy that labels him either a hero or a threat to humanity.

Getty has become as well the poster boy in an ethical debate about front-line medicine. What risks should medicine take for what chance of a cure? What are the costs and benefits of research in a disease that has seen so many hopes raised and dashed?

Getty's claim to heroism comes from his role in the quest for the cure. But the threat in this xeno-transplant from baboon to man is that another devastating disease could "jump" from one species to another — as AIDS itself did. It's the fear that a transplant recipient's body could be the perfect halfway house.

The likelihood that Jeff Getty would provide such a halfway house is virtually nil. The FDA approved this procedure for one man, one baboon. It's easy to monitor a study of one. But you do not have to be a screenwriter to script the next scene with 50 clinics, 20 baboons, 1,000 patients — an impossible tracking job and a public health danger that, in a worst-case scenario, could outrank AIDS.

As ethicist Art Caplan at the University of Pennsylvania says, the baboon transplant "would be bad if it failed. It would be worse if it worked."

Optimistic researchers talk about a temporary boost to the immune system, not a cure for AIDS. It may be unpopular to put price tags on health care — or on life — but are we ready to pay some $200,000 or more for a "boost" when the Centers for Disease Control estimate there are between 750,000 and 1.2 million Americans with AIDS or HIV? Where would the hundreds of billions come from? And at the cost of pursuing what other avenues of AIDS research?

Every researcher holds some candle of promise, if only the elusive hope that "we will learn something." But the social risks and costs of baboon bone-marrow transplants are far too great for too small a promise, too vague a hope.

Here, in the busiest AIDS clinic in America, keenly aware of the devastation of this disease, it is possible to admire the bravery of an AIDS activist and the humanity of his doctor, and still believe they are going down the wrong path.

Even a society being chased by the lion of AIDS may have more to fear from the crocodiles in the river.

Campus of hypocrites experts at finger pointing

Congratulations ASU. You have succeeded in destroying our image as a university of apathy. We are now a university of hypocrisy.

I am referring to the recent recall election that has led to the dismissal of Associated Students of ASU President Chris Weber. I am disappointed and even a little outraged at the result. Having ASASU's largest voter turnout in years is something to be proud of ... usually. In this case, it's despicable. It's despicable that more than 2,000 people voted to dismiss a man when fewer than 500 put him in that position in the first place. What does that say about ASU? It says we only give a damn when we're told to give a damn. Where the hell were these 2,000 nay-sayers during the original election? They didn't seem to care then, so why should they care now?

And look at what brought about this recall election: questions of Weber's character brought on by two unrelated arrests. The first arrest was bogus, the result of a bar parking-lot brawl that Weber wasn't even involved in. He was a high profile scapegoat.

Consider this: Do any of you know the names of any of the people who were actually in the fight?

The other arrest was an over-blown charge of disturbing the peace. Is this really out of the ordinary for ASU? How many of us have had too much to drink at least once in our college lives? How many of us have been asked to keep the noise down? True, being hand-cuffed and hooded in the lobby of Palo Verde Main might be a little out of the ordinary, perhaps even stupid. The point is, everyone is guilty of some act of foolishness. Like it or not, it's a part of college life. Weber just had the misfortune of dealing with the police and the press.

And what about Kevin Bielfelt? What about the religious studies major in dire need of a hobby? What did he gain from spending three months defacing a man's character? Apart from his 15 minutes of fame, it's my guess that he has gained very little. Perhaps he has a story to tell his grandchildren: the tale of how he single-handedly judged and shamed a man he never met. Kevin, you're at 14:58. Wrap it up!

I have come to know Chris Weber as a man of good character. His successor, Angelo DeSimone, is also a good man and I expect he will serve the office of the presidency well; but consider this: DeSimone and Weber were elected by the same body of voters. Fortunately for the new president, it takes more than three months to kick someone out of office.

We are the nation of the outraged. We very rarely tell the world what we like or what we want, but we are very vocal when we are given what we don't like or don't want. Where will the 2,000 outraged be come the next election? If history is any indication, they'll be hooded and hand-cuffed in the lobby of Palo Verde Main.

AIDS media fallacies prompt false opinions

Michelle Carson made some excellent points in her Feb. 2 column on mandatory HIV testing for women and children. Such testing is a war on women and children. However, while I agree with her sentiments, I disagree with many of her reasons. Ultimately, I think this problem is much bigger than Carson or anyone else getting their AIDS/HIV information from the media understands.

A few points of clarification: Carson is right that a child retains the mother's antibodies up to 18 months after birth, and thus may test HIV-positive without being actively infected. But few realize that testing HIV-positive has very little to do with having a virus in one's blood. The widely-used ELISA and Western Blot HIV tests actually are supposed to detect one or more proteins.

These proteins are not unique to HIV, as has been demonstrated by Papadopoulos-Eleopoulos, E et al. (Bio/Technology 11, 696-707, 1993). In fact, exposure to tuberculosis, untyped blood (through unclean needles) and other antigens can cause someone to test HIV-positive on an ELISA and Western Blot test. Even a recent flu vaccination can lead to a positive ELISA HIV test, as reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association in 1992. One would hope that the campus testing facilities are aware of this.

Carson notes that "a study last year found that AZT can be effective in slowing AIDS progression among infants and pregnant women." In fact, after AZT was found in the 1993 European Concorde trials to have no benefit in treating AIDS patients, AZT-makers Burroughs-Wellcome (now Galaxo-Wellcome) spent millions on PR "damage control" and millions more funding research to resurrect their star drug.

Some of those studies, unsurprisingly, found benefits. Other studies found that babies exposed to AZT have higher death rates, retarded neurological and physical development, higher rates of infections, etc. For mothers, the fate is no less bitter. Even the Physician's Desk Reference reports that it may be difficult to distinguish between side-effects of the drug and symptoms of HIV. The drug was originally designed (in the 1960s) as a short-term cancer chemotherapy, but was discontinued due to its extreme toxicity. Now it is given long-term, often upon testing positive on a faulty test.

There are still other issues wrapped up in this matter. Women and children are the choice whipping-post of Democrats and Republicans alike these days. Carson notes that "instead of going after the disease, we launch an attack on its victims." Very true, and exactly on par with the rest of politics, from blaming women and children for the deficit (those damn welfare queens and their 13 children) to blaming them for crime and drug abuse (the single mothers who can't control their kids, can't teach values and don't deserve to have children).

I hope well-intentioned journalists such as Carson and other activists will start taking on the tedious task of reading the science behind the headlines. If individuals of both the political right and left continue to form opinions about HIV and AIDS based on what they read in the papers, then "Science-by-Headlines" will continue, and the real story will continue to be obscured from the public by the hallowed halls of science.

POLICE REPORT

ASU Police reported the following incidents Monday:

- Three men not affiliated with the University were arrested for possession of marijuana at the Tempe Center.
- An officer impounded an abandoned vehicle from Rio Salado Parkway and Rural Road.
- A forged Social Security card and illegally obtained Arizona driver's license and identification card were impounded at McAllister Avenue and University Drive.
- A candy machine in Gammage Auditorium was damaged.

Tempe Police reported the following incidents Monday:

- A man was charged with aggravated assault for allegedly hitting a man with his car while trying to make a U-turn. Alcohol was a factor.

- An ASU student was arrested while drinking in public. A records check revealed he had an outstanding warrant. He was arrested for failure to appear.
- A man was arrested for disorderly conduct, endangerment and aggravated assault for allegedly firing a gun while engaged in a fight. The man threatened his neighbors, saying "Get out or I'll shoot you." He also pointed the gun at one person and waved it at someone else.
- Officers arrested a man for possession of marijuana when they found him sleeping in his car with his pants down around his ankles. An officer saw drug paraphernalia in the car when he talked with the man.

- An ASU student was arrested for failure to appear in court on charges of driving under the influence of alcohol.
- A man was arrested for shoplifting at a grocery store. He attempted to carry two gallons of whiskey under his jacket.
- A man was arrested for aggravated assault after an investigation revealed he picked up his stepdaughter by the throat and threw her against a wall. He also grabbed his older stepchild by the throat, threw her against a bed and shoved his finger down her throat, choking her.

'Peach Lady' sues Letterman over U.S. Open photos

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — A tennis fan who became a running gag for David Letterman after she was caught on camera with peach juice running down her chin is suing the comedian for ridiculing her.

The New York City woman was featured repeatedly on the Late Show with David Letterman in September after a CBS camera caught her relishing a peach at the U.S. Open tennis tournament.

Letterman showed the footage of 54-year-old Jane Bronstein at least a half-dozen times between Sept. 5 and Sept. 20.

Letterman also started a nationwide search for Bronstein, putting her picture on the Sony Jumbotron electronic billboard on Times Square.

In a punch line for his Top 10 List, Letterman referred to her as a "seductive temptress." Bronstein, a large woman, suffers from a thyroid condition and had childhood polio and two spinal fusions, her lawsuit said.

The lawsuit, filed in Stamford Superior Court near Letterman's suburban home, claims Letterman and Worldwide Pants Inc. — the company that produces the show — violated her right to privacy.

The lawsuit cites the New York state civil rights law, which prohibits the use of someone's name or picture for advertising or trade without first obtaining their written consent.

The lawsuit claims Bronstein, a professional bridge player, suffered mental and physical pain and suffering because of the ridicule. It seeks unspecified damages.

Bronstein's lawyer, Harvey Rothberg of Stamford, said she decided to sue after Letterman and Worldwide Pants rejected her request for a letter of apology from Letterman and a monetary settlement. Rothberg said the company did agree to their request to stop airing the peach-eating footage.

"People were laughing because she was not the most attractive individual in the world," Rothberg said.

"She feels that she's been wrongfully treated by a man who has ... a responsibility to act in a responsible manner, and she feels that he's violated her right to privacy, her right to be left alone," Rothberg said.

Rothberg said a lawyer for Worldwide Pants, in discussions last fall, cited a notice that appears on the back of U.S. Open tickets that says a spectator's image may be used "incidental to any live or recorded video display or other transmission or reproduction of the tournament."

Professor to lecture on race relations

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

A prestigious author on African-American issues will deliver two free lectures today about the American society's changing, and sometimes volatile, racial climate.

William Julius Wilson, a professor of sociology and public policy at the University of Chicago, will speak at 1:30 p.m. in Katzin Concert Hall and again at 7:30 p.m. at the College of Law's Great Hall. Tickets are required for the early afternoon speech but not for the evening lecture.

Naomi Goodell, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences director of development, said she distributed all of the tickets allotted to her department. But as of late afternoon Monday, a few free tickets were available at the Associated Students of ASU office on the third floor of the Memorial Union.

Goodell said Wilson's vast knowledge of racial issues was the motivating factor for inviting him to speak.

"He was selected because of his expertise in the field of race relations," she said. "We've had a great deal of community interest."

Men's swimmers pound UofA; women improving

BY ED ODEVEN
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's swimming team made its final dual meet of the season a memorable one.

Coach Ernie Maglischo said he was expecting "a close meet that would go down to the wire."

ASU exceeded all expectations by defeating UofA, 174-126, Saturday at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center. It was the Sun Devils' fourth consecutive dual meet win.

The meet was raced in long-course meters to help prepare the swimmers for the upcoming Olympics.

"I'm surprised in the sense that we beat them by so many points because it didn't look like we would on paper," Maglischo said. "We seemed to win every place where we could've won, and they didn't."

ASU (8-5) won the first four events of the meet and jumped to a 51-23 advantage. The ninth-ranked Wildcats never got closer than 27 points for the remainder of the meet. ASU's 400-meter relay team of Logi Kristjansson, Nolan Shifren, Francisco Sanchez and Felipe Delgado won the meet's first event.

"We got all pumped up after the first victory," Kristjansson said.

The Sun Devils' strategy worked.

"We were told to take it out from the very start and hit them hard from the beginning and see if we could get the first half of the points to win the meet," ASU senior Jason Harris said. "As soon as we did that we started to run away with it."

Other Sun Devil winners were Sanchez (50 freestyle and 100 butterfly), freshmen Thomas Hansen (400 freestyle) and Brian Hatelid (200 butterfly), senior Robert Smith (200 freestyle), Delgado (100 freestyle) and junior Mike Melley (800 freestyle).

"It was my final dual meet here, and it was awesome," said Kristjansson, a senior who won the 100 backstroke in 59.46 seconds.

Harris agreed.

"It's always nice to walk away from your last home dual meet with a victory," Harris said.

"We saved the best for last," added Delgado.

UofA coach Frank Busch said, "Arizona State's men looked very good today."

ASU defeated Loyola Marymount, 112-62, Friday at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center. Since the Lions are a club team, ASU rested several top swimmers.

Women's team loses to Wildcats

The UofA women's swimming team ended the season with a perfect record.

The Wildcats (8-0) defeated ASU, 187-95, Saturday at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.

All-America Laurie Kline won three events (200, 400 and 800 freestyle) for the fifth-ranked Wildcats. Senior All-America Joanne Currah was the lone winner for the Sun Devils. Currah won the 200 backstroke in 2:24.24.

"I don't want to downplay the undefeated season," said Busch, who serves as coach of

Track progressing after finishing 2nd in Colorado Springs

BY RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

With the third event of the season coming up, track and field interim coach Ken Lehman said the team is progressing nicely.

"We've shown improvements in almost all areas," said Lehman. "Now that we are starting to get out and compete, things are coming together. The athletes are starting to trim those tenths of seconds they need to."

The men's and women's squads both took second place behind Colorado at the U. S. West Collegiate Invitational in Colorado Springs, Colo., over the weekend.

The Buffaloes edged the ASU men, 64-49. On the women's side, ASU was defeated soundly, 91-34.

"We were a whole lot better," sprints coach Lynda

JACKSON

Tolbert-Goode said. "There were a lot of improvements."

Gaute Gunderson won the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 7.3 seconds. In his second meet at ASU, Gunderson recorded the second-best all-time performance in ASU history. He also took second in the 200.

"Gaute is going to be one of the greats here at ASU," Lehman said.

Other winners for the men's squad included Mika Laiho, who won for the second time in as many tries in the 35-pound weight throw (55-feet-4 3/4), recent transfer Mahasse Cornelius, who won the 55-meter dash in his first meet as a Sun Devil and sophomore All-America Vondre Armour, who won the 800 in 1:54.21.

Freshman Kenny Mitchell tied for first in the high jump, but placed second because of a fault on his first attempt. Mitchell leaped 6-10 3/4.

Mitchell, a wideout on the football team, is training with the squad to improve his speed.

ARMOUR

"I'm out here not only for my speed, but to compete," he said. "It felt real good to still jump a 6-10 my first time out."

For the women's squad, redshirt freshman Fiona Daly took the high jump for the second consecutive meet with a jump of 5-8 3/4. Junior Tike Jackson won the 200 in 25.14 and sophomore Janne Antonsen won the shot put with a throw of 45-7 1/4.

"Even though I took first, I was not pleased with my performance," Jackson said. "It was my first meet so I know where I'm at, and what I've got to work on."

Sophomore Adra Hysong contributed with a fine all-around meet. She won the long jump (19-2 1/2), placed second in the triple jump and took third in the 55-meter hurdles.

Roadrunners set to host 'ASU Night'

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The Phoenix Roadrunners professional hockey team will host "ASU Night" tonight at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Coliseum. A portion of the ticket proceeds from tonight's game with the Indianapolis Ice will go to ASU Disabled Resources.

Members of the ASU band will perform and ASU's mascot, Sparky, is tentatively scheduled to appear. Roadrunners' officials said they hope this will start a yearly tradition.

Tickets may purchased at the Veterans Memorial Coliseum box office today. For groups of 20 or more, please contact Roadrunners Account Executive Jeff Orenstein a.s.a.p. at 340-0001.

Alumni Game

Packard Stadium will be the sight of the annual ASU baseball alumni game tonight at 7 p.m.

Sun Devil men's tennis wins easily

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

Junior Sergio Elias couldn't help but let his eyes wander to other courts at Whiteman Tennis Center during ASU's tennis dual with outmanned Utah Monday.

Elias, like the majority of his teammates, was comfortably in control of his No. 2 singles match with Magnus Hjalmarsen. It was just a matter of time — literally.

"I was thinking during the match, those guys are finishing (their matches) faster than I am," said Elias, whose rapid-fire 6-3, 6-4 victory helped the Sun Devils to a 5-2 win. "I wanted to be the first one done."

He wasn't.

That honor went to senior No. 4 Paul Reber, who took out his frustrations on Ben Coats, beating him 6-3, 6-1 in less than 45 minutes. For the record, Elias was a close second.

"Obviously we were the favorites for this match," Elias reasoned. "But we still had to come out here and do it. It's just nice to have the whole team playing and playing well."

Reber, whose first serve went into hibernation during his last two outings, broke out of his short slump in impressive fashion.

"I don't know what was happening before. I just wasn't confident with the way I was playing," Reber explained. "Today I served better, but I'm still not even close to where I was playing before."

Sophomore Tsolak Gevorkian (No. 3) and senior Dave Critchley (No. 5) also posted easy straight-set wins for ASU (3-0).

ASU senior Oscar Bustos, playing in his first dual of the season, was upended by 27th-ranked Christian Svensson, 3-6, 7-6, 7-5, at the top spot. Bustos, ranked 39th, was hampered by a strained muscle in his right arm.

the men and women's teams at UofA. "It's really a great accomplishment. I hope that is just a confidence builder and an indication that we'll do well at nationals."

Although ASU (5-5) lost, the score didn't tell the entire story.

"This is the second year we've lost to them in a row," said ASU women's swimming coach Tim Hill. "Last year we didn't swim as well and this year. We swam a lot better. They have a much better team this year. They've added some really good people."

"If you can look for some things in a loss, you have to look and say hey we are definitely making some good progress."

In diving competition, UofA won the four events.

Senior Wildcat Andre Sabbah won the 1-meter dive (323.33 points) and the 3-meter dive (324.15). ASU senior John Milander placed third in both events, while sophomore Justin Eck was fourth.

UofA women's diver Melanie Mabry was the one and 3-meter champ. ASU freshman Katrina Pfeuffer was third in the 1-meter dive, while senior Jennifer Cnota was fourth. Cnota also took third in the 3-meter dive, while Pfeuffer finished fourth.

Frieder pleased with Sun Devils' recent play

BY DAMIAN SHAW
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's basketball team has come a long way in the last two weeks, having won three of its last four games. After losing six in a row, including five Pac-10 contests, the huge turnaround has not been lost on Coach Bill Frieder.

"We're happy about where we are right this minute, as opposed to where we were a couple of weeks ago," Frieder said. "It was nice on Saturday to see us sustain the effort and get the victory because until it was over, you didn't know if they were going to get it done or not."

The Sun Devils have had successive wins over both Oregon schools, and then split with the two Washington schools. ASU lost to Washington State last Thursday but beat Washington on Saturday.

Frieder said that despite the slow start in the conference, the Sun Devils never gave up on themselves.

"The good news about this team is that they've continued to play hard, and they've been very coachable," Frieder said. "They've been very concerned about how they played all year, and that gives the coaching staff a lot of ammunition to get things accomplished as compared to if someone just flat out quits on you."

"You know when you lose five straight in the conference that can happen to you, but we haven't done that."

ASU won't have forever to savor its turn of fortune. This week the Sun Devils face their hated enemy, UofA, on Wednesday at the University Activity Center and then North Carolina State on Sunday at Veterans Memorial Coliseum as part of an ABC-doubleheader television package.

LAW ENFORCEMENT OPPORTUNITIES MEETING THE CHALLENGE

Looking for a challenging and exciting career working for one of the fastest growing law enforcement teams in the country? Then picture yourself as a member of The U.S. Border Patrol.

The U.S. Border Patrol is the mobile, uniformed, enforcement arm of the U.S. Department of the Justice, Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS). The Border Patrol detects and prevents the smuggling and unlawful entry of undocumented aliens into the U.S. and is also the primary drug interdicting agency along the U.S. land borders.

Border Patrol Agents enjoy one of the highest reputations among law enforcement agencies throughout the U.S. and are renowned for their intense loyalty, fine esprit de corps, and unmatched professionalism.

Necessary Qualifications:

- U.S. citizen
- Hold a valid driver's license
- Not have reached your 37th birthday by the time you are hired
- Be able to learn to speak and read Spanish
- Pass a background investigation
- Pass a drug test and medical exam
- Have one year of qualifying experience or a Bachelor's Degree

Sound Interesting?

If you think you can meet the challenge, apply by calling (912) 757-3001. This 24-hour-a-day telephone application system will be open from FEBRUARY 6-12, 1996 ONLY!

All qualified applicants will be scheduled to take a written test and an oral interview. All vacancies will be along the southwest border, with many vacancies anticipated in the southern California area. Applicants who wish, may be tested in the San Diego area in early March.

Selected candidates must successfully complete a rigorous 19-week basic training program. Starting salary range: $24,505-$28,929 per year, plus outstanding benefits.
