Life after ASASU rosy for some Valley leaders

BY RAY STERN
STATE PRESS

For some Associated Students of ASU presidents, the experience gathered from the office can be much more than a simple introduction to politics.

It might be the first step in a successful political career.

"It can be a springboard if you learn from your mistakes and are diligent," said Tempe Mayor Neil Giuliano, the 1982-83 student body president. "It's like anything in life. If you set patterns for behavior and patterns for how you're going to interact with people for the rest of your life, it's a great opportunity."

Giuliano is one of three local politicians who got their start as an ASASU president. So did state Sen. Chris Cummiskey, D-Phoenix, and Phoenix City Councilman Craig Tribken.

Although they differed on the value of the position as a first step to a higher office, all agreed that it can provide invaluable experience.

"There's a lot of the give-and-take and interpersonal skills that you learn with student government that can be applied to politics and the community at large," Giuliano said. "But ultimately, it's an opportunity to hone those skills. It helped me a great deal. It challenged me to work with a variety of different people and viewpoints."

Giuliano added that ex-presidents often go on to important positions of community leadership, if not politics.

Tribken was ASASU president from 1975-76 and has been on the Phoenix City Council since 1990. He is also a commercial real estate broker who has served on

Student's musical piece makes symphonic debut tonight

BY TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

Although Peter Spande won $1,000, the other part of his award has him more excited — the chance to hear his composition performed by the ASU Symphony Orchestra.

"The opportunity to hear my piece is quite an award in itself," said the music composition graduate who composed the piece as his graduate thesis. "It is really exciting to hear nearly 100 people playing something that I worked on alone."

Spande won the North American Artists Foundation's Grant Fletcher Award for Music Composition. It is the first composition award for ASU. Spande's A Winter Privacy Palace, based on a series of poems by Robert Bly, was selected over four other ASU student compositions by a panel of composition department staff.

The ASU Symphony Orchestra will perform the winning composition at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Gammage Auditorium, when Spande receives the award.

Spande, a Minnesota native, said the transition from the personal experience of composition to public performance is odd.

"In a strange way, when you hear it performed it is strangely public," he said. "It is no longer your very personal idea."

Randall Shinn, Spande's mentor for the composition, said the first time a composer hears his music is the most memorable.

"This is his first time," said Shinn, a professor of music composition. "He may

Tempe considers adding waterfall to Rio Salado Project

BY KELLY WENDEL
STATE PRESS

It won't be Niagara Falls, but the Tempe City Council approved design changes to the Rio Salado Project Thursday that may add a 19-foot waterfall and pump house to the future commercial and recreation site.

The council approved an amendment to provide an additional $176,000 to study the proposed changes.

A rubber dam was originally designed to stretch across the bed of the Salt River, backing up the flow of water to form a lake with a 208-acre surface area. The new modifications will not change the size of the lake.

After visiting several rubber dams throughout the United States, city engineers recommended adding the waterfall, primarily for aesthetic reasons.

"It (the waterfall) is more attractive than a rubber sausage," said Steve Nielson, Rio Salado Project manager.

Nielson added that the waterfall would make the dam inaccessible, cutting down on vandalism.

The addition of the waterfall might also increase the dam's life, but there are no hard statistics to that effect, he said.

"There are unknowns on how long rubber dams will hold up under our sun," he said. "It looks like the water flowing over the rubber dam will help, but it's not quantifiable."

Because Tempe has a limited water supply for the lake, the new plans call for a pump house that will reclaim water after it spills over the dam.

Although bidding has not commenced for the project, city engineers estimate the added cost at $750,000 to $1.1 million. The water recirculation system's annual operating cost is estimated at $150,000 to $300,000 a year.

Construction costs will be offset by other modifications to the project. These include decreasing the upstream rubber bladder's size by increasing the concrete foundation's height, said Howard Hargis, assistant city engineer. Hargis said the smaller rubber bladder would save the city $500,000.

Businesses that locate to the project area will pay a prorated amount for project construction and will be directly assessed for its annual operating costs.

The Tempe City Council approved the Rio Salado Project in 1987. Since then, the city has moved forward with planning and development. The $40 million project's design is currently at the 90 percent completion stage, with construction concluding sometime in mid-1998. The dam will be placed near Center Parkway and will back the river up approximately five miles.

Paul Besing/State Press

The now dry portion of the Salt River is the future site of The Rio Salado Project, which will entail a 208-acre lake. The original plans have been altered to include a waterfall over the rubber dam.

numerous city boards and commissions.

The student body presidency is not necessarily a launching pad for aspiring politicians, Tribken said, but probably attracts the type of person who might end up in politics anyway.

Nevertheless, he said if the president has what it takes to be in politics, the position may push them further in that direction. The level of commitment is what makes the difference.

"Is the person someone sincerely interested in activism and politics, or are they just looking to add something to their resumé?" he said.

Cummiskey, who served as president from 1986-87, also said the position's importance to a politician's future depends on the individual.

"It's a good chance to work with the governor's office and Board of Regents to push some student agendas," he said.

Cummiskey was elected to the Arizona House of Representatives in 1990, won a second term in 1992 and became a state senator in 1994.

ASASU presidents, he said, walk a fine line between being an elected official and just a student.

"There's some dichotomy there," Cummiskey said. "Students are looking for you to be one of them, so it's not the ivory tower that has existed at some times. But you can't go off and exceed the limits by being a regular student, such as breaking the code of conduct, or, obviously, the laws of the state. People do look to you for a higher standard, and the State Press looks to you for a higher standard."

Tribken said mistakes made during the president's term could have ramifications in the future.

"Everything you do in your life stays with you to some extent, like whether you inhaled or not," he said.

Giuliano said being held to a higher standard is a reality ASASU presidents have to deal with.

"Hopefully, this can be the end of the controversial days for Associated Students, and student leaders can get things going in a positive direction," he said.

never have the same type of thrill again."

The award designed for ASU music students provides a needed boost to the composition department, said Marc Parella, Artists Foundation managing director.

"This award is for a department with very little money and little interest," he said. "This is a great venture for us."

The award is the first outside money the composition department has received, Parella said.

Shinn said this award will ultimately help the department attract additional students.

"Students know that they have a shot at getting their work performed," he said. "Having the opportunity for an orchestra to perform your piece is a rare thing today."

The Grant Fletcher Award is named for the former composition department director who served from 1956-1978. Fletcher will present the award.

An injured American soldier lays on the ground in Bosnia before being airlifted to a Mobile Army Surgical Hospital Thursday. He was injured while trying to pick up two injured soldiers from the remote American outpost on Mount Vis during a heavy snowstorm. His Humvee spun out of control on the icy roads and flipped over, injuring two men.

Bosnian peace strained, Serbs cut NATO ties

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — In the strongest blow yet to the peace process, the Bosnian Serb army severed contacts with the NATO-led force Thursday and blocked civilians from moving freely to show its fury over the arrest of two senior officers on suspicion of war crimes.

Gen. Djordje Djukic and Col. Aleksa Krsmanovic were arrested Jan. 30 when they made a wrong turn around Sarajevo and entered government-controlled territory. Further angering the Serbs, the arrests were endorsed by the international war crimes court, which asked that the two men be held until it decided whether they should be indicted.

Serb commander Gen. Ratko Mladic, who has been indicted for war crimes, on Thursday banned civilians in Serb territory from crossing into other parts of Bosnia. The Serbs already had suspended all contact with the Muslim-led government to protest the arrests.

Relatively free movement of civilians and steady dialogue among NATO commanders and the rival sides were two of the main achievements of the peace accord thus far.

The Serbs' heated reaction to the arrests has placed the entire delicate process in limbo, prompting Richard Holbrooke, the chief U.S. mediator, to head back to the Balkans on Thursday to try to head off the crisis.

Insurance to pay part of Clinton's growing legal bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A huge chunk of President Clinton's legal bills in a sexual harassment lawsuit will be paid from old insurance policies he bought in Arkansas and then forgot, aides said Thursday.

But the president is still going broke over legal troubles, they said.

Two insurance companies paid Washington lawyer Bob Bennett $891,880.42 in December for his defense of the president in a 1994 suit filed by former Arkansas state employee Paula Jones.

Clinton's staggering Whitewater bills are not covered.

The insurance payment, first reported in The Wall Street Journal, was revealed less than a month after Clinton bemoaned his mounting legal bills at a news conference. "I feel badly that 20 years of our hard effort in savings may go away," he said.

At the time, Clinton knew about the insurance payoff but did not mention it, one official close to his defense said. The president's aides said there was no inconsistency: Legal bills are eating up his savings — even with the insurance check and a large legal defense fund.

"He's worried about Bosnia. He's not worried about what I'm doing in representing him about details like this," Bennett said.

Spokesman Mike McCurry said the president and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton are "facing the possibility of a very dire financial picture, financial insolvency."

Legal fees for the president and his wife are running about $2 million a year, according to people involved in their defense.

Bennett and Clinton aides described two separate $1 million insurance plans as umbrella policies that covered a variety of circumstances, including liability claims.

Bennett said an insurance man who did business with the Clintons in Arkansas told the president's lawyers about the broad policies. "Neither the president nor the first lady were aware of the existence of these old policies and their applicability" to legal fees, Bennett said.

Border patrol gets budget boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that Congress has provided more money, the Clinton administration can fully implement a plan developed three years ago for controlling illegal immigration, Attorney General Janet Reno said Thursday.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service had laid out a comprehensive strategy "to reverse years of neglect" and control illegal immigration, Reno said. "Now, we are putting it to work."

Reno and INS Commissioner Doris Meissner called the news conference to discuss the agency's 1996 budget, most of which was funded in a stopgap spending bill approved earlier this year by Congress.

Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary immigration subcommittee R-Texas, bridled at the claim that the administration's strategy has been in place for three years, lacking only congressional funding for full implementation.

"Significant increases in the INS budget for border enforcement coincide with Republican majorities in Congress, not the arrival of the Clinton administration," Smith said.

Congress has set aside a record $2.6 billion for the INS this year, up nearly a quarter from last year — and nearly three-quarters from the $1.6 billion allocated in 1993.

The $511 million in new funds this year will go largely for new border enforcement efforts, including the addition of 1,000 Border Patrol agents on the Southwest border this year, as well as new money for detention and deportation of criminal and deportable aliens.

The agency also will use its new resources to inspect more workplaces to ensure illegal aliens aren't being employed, improve legal immigration services and speed up legal entries and improve its border-control technologies.

"It gives us for the first time a truly balanced border approach, one that allows us to continue to deter illegal immigration, but at the same time support legal entry," Meissner said.

The added resources given to date have translated into some successes.

Total apprehensions of undocumented aliens — predominantly along the U.S.-Mexico border — rose from just over 1 million in fiscal 1994 to 1.3 million last year. Seizures of cocaine rose from 37,000 pounds in 1994 to 44,000 pounds last year, according to INS figures. Immigration officers, meanwhile, completed adjudication of 110,000 asylum cases last year, up from 53,400 the year before.

Northwest soaked by heavy floods

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A mountainside moaned, then gave way in a rush of mud. Highways vanished beneath stinking, caramel-colored floodwaters swirling with uprooted trees and raw sewage. One girl was dead, a woman was missing, and thousands of Oregonians were driven from their homes.

And the rain kept falling. As the state's worst flooding in more than three decades threatened to swamp downtown

Portland, sandbags and concrete highway dividers formed a thin defense Thursday against the wide Willamette River.

"Water's going everywhere," said Trase Myers, as he and others hurried to stack 40-pound sandbags against a building downtown. "I can't believe the destruction the water has caused."

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

BOO — To UofA player Joe McLean for his stupid remarks before Wednesday's ASU-UofA basketball game.

First of all, let's examine McLean's original statement: "Students that go to ASU are stupid and people that go to Arizona are more smarter."

Incredible grammar, Mr. McLean. Is that how they teach you to speak at the UofA?

Any fourth-grader knows that the proper wording is "more intelligent." Are we to assume now that all UofA students are ignorant morons, because of the bone-headed remark of one Wildcat hoopster?

Basketball is a game. Sports activities and sports rivalries are games.

The missions of the two universities are the same — to educate the future generation of Arizonans. Bashing one another academically is idiotic. We shouldn't be rivals in academia.

Coach Lute Olsen shouldn't be bashing ASU fans for their lack of class. It is already painfully apparent that certain members of his team are sorely lacking in class themselves.

BRAVO — To the passage of the much-misunderstood Telecommunications Reform Act.

This act is probably more misunderstood than any piece of legislation that has passed in years.

First of all, the only speech it bans outright is "obscene" speech — something that has never been protected as free speech, anyway. The Supreme Court has ruled time and again that such speech can be restricted. This act merely restricts obscene speech through a new medium.

Is indecent speech banned? Not at all. The only restriction on indecent speech is transmission to minors. Consenting adults are free to exchange indecent materials over the Internet at any time.

Indecent materials, such as pornography, are already kept out of the hands of minors (at least theoretically). This act merely extends that to the Internet. It won't keep minors from getting the materials, and it shouldn't be used to prevent everyone from transmitting these materials through cyberspace. But with the software technology available, there really isn't a reason we shouldn't try keeping indecent materials from the children of this nation.

The only people that deserve a BOO in this instance are those who are waxing righteous about protecting free speech in cyberspace.

Free speech is still protected. Don't blow up about an act that seeks merely to protect the children of this country.

BOO — To the state Senate Committee on Natural Resources for shutting out critics opposing a bill that would allow companies to self-audit their pollution.

Environmentalists showed up to speak against the bill, but were denied a chance to speak to the committee when Sen. Stan Barnes, committee chairman, righteously declared that he had "heard enough."

The right to voice grievances before legislators is a precious right. Sen. Barnes' act, which we can only call an attempt to ram through a bill that will protect polluters, was disgusting and wrong.

We hope Barnes chokes on his polluter-friendly bill — literally.

Current news unpleasant but necessary

Has anybody else heard of olestra?

Although it wasn't the primary focus of my column, last week I mentioned the newly-approved fat substitute to make a point about the loss of the work ethic in society. Of the dozen or so people with whom I've discussed last week's column, not one knew what olestra was right off the bat. A handful admitted having heard of it when I went into more detail about the potential side effects and health risks associated with olestra, but they knew more about the diarrhea and vitamin depletion linked to use of the product than they knew of the product itself.

I didn't expect everybody to know all about olestra, but I expected that some people would have some knowledge of it and that most would have (at the very least) heard of it. I talked to people of all ages, backgrounds and education levels, and I was met by blank stares every time I asked about olestra.

As I became more frustrated (and more determined to find somebody who knew what I was talking about), I became more adamant. It's been in the news — magazines, newspapers, local and national broadcasts — for months now, I would say. How could you have missed it?

And the overwhelming response to that has been, "I stay away from the news."

Stay away from the news? Why?

"It's just too depressing. I don't want to hear about rapes and robberies and murders all the time."

I think there's more to the news than that, but even if it was only rapes and robberies and murders, wouldn't you still want to know what's going on around you before the police are knocking on your door?

"But the media focus only on the bad things that are going on."

As much as we like to blame the media for showing only the unpleasant happenings, the news is a reflection of reality. If we're hearing about crime, war and government waste in the news all the time, isn't that an indication of our sad state of affairs? Ignoring the problems by not staying informed isn't going to make them go away.

On the contrary, problems that go unnoticed and unchecked will only get worse.

"I just want to hear some good news once in awhile."

I don't know about you, but I'd much rather know what's going on in the Balkans or what new trouble our governor has gotten himself into than find out who won the local spelling bee. The news may not be enjoyable, but it's our duty to be aware of current events so that we're able to make informed decisions.

We're in an election year, and candidates have been subtly campaigning for over a year now. Has anybody been paying attention to what the candidates are saying and doing now, or will most people wait until the weeks before the election and tune in for the sound bites that are in the news then?

If events at ASU are any indication, people will either not bother to vote or not bother to make informed voting decisions. If more students had become involved in campus elections in the first place perhaps a better president would have been elected. On the other hand, perhaps more people would have thought Chris Weber was a competent leader despite his flaws and stood by him when things got rough. Either way, the recall election might not have been necessary, and time, money and faith in the student government might not have been lost. The fact remains, however, that people didn't want to take the time to be informed and things got ugly.

I'm in no way claiming to know about everything that's happening in the world and our community, but I make the effort to pick up the newspaper or tune into the evening news. I want to know what's going on. People are quick to point out the lessons that history teaches us, but what about the lessons that current events can teach us? Much of our world history is unpleasant, but we study it anyway. Had people paid more attention to the developments leading up to World War II or Desert Storm, perhaps the situations would not have gotten out of hand.

Don't we owe it to ourselves to read and watch the news, to know what is happening around us, to stay involved and keep our situations from getting out of hand again?

Women voters yet to find message worth hearing

I don't believe that Republicans are from Mars and Democrats are from Venus. But when I focus my telescope on the presidential campaign, there's enough of a gender gap to make anyone wonder whether men and women inhabit the same political planet.

The respective stars in the party firmaments seem to be beaming their message at one sex or the other. The Democrats are wishing for a rerun of The Year of The Woman, while the Republicans want a sequel to The Year of the Angry White Man.

The first suggestions that we could be facing a gender gap of, well, cosmic proportions in 1996 started appearing last fall when the Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press reported "extraordinary" differences between how men and women evaluated the issues. The men were more attentive to GOP budget cutting plans. The women were more concerned about Medicare and education. As the center's Andrew Kohut said, "It was almost as if men and women were choosing sides between financial issues versus caring issues."

At the widest point in the gap last month, The Wall Street Journal/NBC polls found support for Clinton and Dole equally divided among men. But women favored Clinton 54 percent to 36 percent. Again the men were thinking about cutting government spending, while the women were thinking about social problems.

Now, as if following some extraterrestrial plan, we have the president talking about teen-age pregnancy this week while the furor over Republican candidates in New Hampshire is about taxes — flat and otherwise.

Maybe the most vivid moment for gap-watchers was the night of the State of the Union address. A careful Clinton tempered his message that "The era of big government is over" with the caveat "but we cannot go back to the time when our citizens were left to fend for themselves." A dour Dole countered with a 10-minute Republican rejoinder using the word "self-reliance" four times. Self-reliance was his all-purpose antidote to the evils of dependence, especially on government.

ELLEN GOODMAN
Columnist

I have been suspicious of men who extol pure self-reliance ever since I discovered that Henry David Thoreau brought his dirty laundry home from Walden Pond to mom. Now I wonder if it's a girl thing. Or perhaps a Venus thing.

Self-reliance resonates just a bit differently in the female ear. It often sounds like "fending for yourself." Self-reliance is what you get when your husband walks out the door. It's what you might trade a little of for a good day-care center.

Americans of both genders who walk this planet together share the age-old tension between the values of individualism and community. We pride ourselves on independence and connection. We believe in bootstraps and helping hands. We believe in personal responsibility and mutual responsibility.

But men who are (still) raised to cut the apron strings may balance these values a bit differently from women who are (still) raised to be caretakers. Women are more likely to see government as necessary than as evil, especially for helping the poor, the young, the old.

This may be particularly true for the people that the political astronomers identify as this year's "swing voters" — a group the Times Mirror Center called the New Economy

Independents. Mostly white and female, underemployed and middle-aged, these are high school graduates frustrated with both parties.

These swing voters — much too zippy a phrase for this struggling population — were down on Clinton in 1994 and down on Gingrich in 1995. And they are still up for grabs in 1996.

In the end, this campaign may rise and fall on an issue or sound byte yet to be heard. But there is a chance that it will be about big questions. How much must we rely on ourselves and how much on each other? What is the role of government in breeding dependency or providing support?

In the universe of politics, women won't gravitate to some distant planet but into the orbit of the candidate who speaks their language. They are listening for a message that's down to earth.

Methodology incorrect in Manzanita Hall study

In response to the recent article concerning the effect of Manzanita Hall's atmosphere on residents' academic success (Jan. 31), it should be noted that one of the fundamental errors of interpreting data may have been committed.

This error concerns the confusion of correlation and causation. My understanding is that ASU freshmen request residence halls for their first year, meaning that there is probably a self-selection bias underlying the random samples for which GPAs were analyzed. While the hypothesis suggested by the researcher stated that Manzanita's party atmosphere causes low resident GPAs, a rival hypothesis certainly worthy of consideration is that students more interested in partying and less interested in academics self-select into Manzanita. Lower GPAs and living in Manzanita may in fact correlate, but demonstrating that living in the hall causes low grades requires stronger methodology than was mentioned in the article.

Giving Cameron Kerner the benefit of the doubt, it is entirely possible that his methodology was not fully detailed in the article. In that case, this story should serve as yet another example of the care that must be taken in interpreting and reporting the results of research.

Sun Devils transcend rival coach's comments, attitude

So, UofA coach Lute Olsen didn't like the Frieder Fanatics and the Desert Heat too much, huh? Good, we "idiots," as he calls us, had a great time making Geary and McLean look bad.

Nothing pleases me more to know that Olsen doesn't like us and finds our house to be a rough place to play. But Olsen, don't go patting the backs of the fans down in Tucson, they weren't too friendly to us either. It's going to get much worse as the years pass and it won't be long until our house is one that is as widely known as New Mexico's — The Pit.

The Frieder Fanatics are great fans who support the Devils year in and year out and will never turn their backs on their team. Notice that they don't have those kind of fans down in Tucson. There are no Olsen's lunatics or anything of the like; instead the fan support looks more like a large meeting of Sun Lakes residents. Next year, Olsen, you and your fans will see the most awesome team to ever walk all over you. And when we are stomping you, we'll make sure we look down and smile.

Finally, I would like to say congrats to our basketball team who did an excellent job against Arizona. Way to go guys, you showed us the best game we've seen all year. Any way we can get you guys back into the gold uniforms again? Frieder, way to go, coach, we'll always be there for you. And to our fans, thank you for coming out and giving the Sun Devils a great turnout and the loudest crowd that's been there in years — keep it up.

Cornel West to talk at law college

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

A prestigious author and intellectual will present a free lecture emphasizing African-American self reliance and cultural interaction at 12:30 p.m. today in the College of Law Great Hall.

Cornel West, a Harvard University professor, will deliver a short speech followed by a question and answer session, said Christine Smith, assistant dean of the College of Law.

Smith said that although she has never attended a West lecture, his reputation precedes him.

"I understand that he is just fantastic and he draws hundreds of people to his lectures," she said. "We're just thrilled to have him."

When West presented an on-campus speech last year, organizers had to turn people away because the demand for seats was more than the hall accommodated.

Glendale man sues KNXV for slander

PHOENIX (AP) — A Glendale man has sued a television station for more than $3 million, claiming its reporter slandered his business and forced it to close.

Carl Nicholson filed the lawsuit Tuesday against KNXV-TV.

The lawsuit claims that the station purposely targeted Nicholson's electronics store, ServMart, after the father of a station employee complained about how his videocassette recorder was repaired.

The lawsuit filed in Maricopa County Superior Court charges that the station knew information in its report, which aired Feb. 7, 1995, was false and that it purposely ignored witness accounts and pertinent information.

Named as defendants were reporter Chris Heinbaugh, News Director Susan Sullivan, former station manager Robert Rowe, Scripps Howard Broadcasting Corp., ABC/Capitol Cities Communications and The Disney Corp.

The station referred phone calls from the Associated Press to its attorney, David Bodney. Bodney did not immediately return a phone message.

AIDS Week goal to save lives

BY ANDREA HEALEY
STATE PRESS

Helping people realize that AIDS does not discriminate and learn how they can save their lives is Henry Villareal's main goal for AIDS Awareness Week.

"It is not a gay disease, it is not a heterosexual disease, it is a disease that can afflict anyone," said Villareal, chief of staff for the MBA program and event co-chair. "We want to get the message across that individuals can prevent being inflicted by the disease."

The event runs from Jan. 12-16 and will include films, presentations and a candlelight vigil at 6 p.m. Thursday. All activities will take place in either the Memorial Union or on Hayden Lawn.

Opening ceremonies begin on Hayden Lawn around noon Monday and include an unveiling of a portion of the Names Project AIDS Memorial Quilt, a poetry reading and opening remarks by ASU President Lattie Coor.

One of the many organizations contributing to the weeklong events is ASU's Student Health.

"We're making what we call 'Condom Valentines' that have informational brochures and condoms and candy in them," said Karen Moses, assistant director for the health education and wellness department.

Student Health, which offers free anonymous HIV testing every Wednesday, will also offer of testing Feb. 22 and 23.

"We're hoping that students who become more aware of their risk behaviors during AIDS Awareness Week will want to be tested, and we'll have some extra days open for them," Moses said.

The Maricopa County Health Department provides anonymous testing. Students who want to make an appointment should call one week in advance.

Student Health also offers confidential testing that costs from $10 to $25 depending on the test selected.

"Confidential testing is an HIV test, but it goes in your medical chart," Moses said. "It's kept confidential. Only your medical provider knows about it, but a lot of people prefer the anonymous test."

PEOPLE

NEW YORK (AP) — David Letterman calls the upcoming TV movie about the time NBC and CBS were jockeying for his talents as "the single biggest waste of film since my wedding photos."

The Late Shift, Letterman said in an interview for this weekend's AI Roker show on CNBC, "is a horribly wasted, futile attempt" by HBO.

He scoffed, for example, at a scene of an actor playing Letterman out in the yard in a tennis sweater throwing softballs at an archery target.

"What kind of mutant does that? It's like a guy amused by shiny objects," Letterman said.

The movie will air Feb. 24.

NEW YORK (AP) — Danny Glover says he "got a great kick" out of playing private eye Philip Marlowe in the TV movie Red Wind, the kind of role more closely associated with Humphrey Bogart and Robert Mitchum.

In an interview in Sunday's Parade magazine, Glover, who is black, said he was a fan of 1940s films and relished the chance to "dispel some myths" that certain characters must be played by white or black actors.

The movie garnered some rave reviews for Glover last fall.

The Lethal Weapon star was also among the first in Hollywood to play a black cowboy, in Silverado.

As for Hollywood's racial progress, Glover called it "mostly cosmetic."

"Hollywood has always been a conservative place, because it doesn't consider itself art," he said. "It's about making money and getting people to buy something."

LONDON (AP) — Sir Simon Rattle, music director of Birmingham's symphony orchestra, will step down after the 1997-98 season.

Rattle was appointed to the Birmingham orchestra in 1980. He has conducted the Boston, Cleveland and Chicago orchestras and was guest conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic in 1981-82.

ATLANTA (AP) — Margaret Thatcher received the 1996 Nation's Honor Award from Sen. Paul Coverdell's Good Government Committee.

Thatcher "will be seen with Winston Churchill as the greatest British prime minister of the past 50 years," the senator said in a statement Wednesday.

"Lady Thatcher and her good friend and ally, President Reagan, each stood as a colossus on the world stage in the 1980s. Together, they were catalytic in the process of Soviet decline and collapse," the Georgia Republican said.

Previous recipients were former President Bush and House Speaker Newt Gingrich. The award honors an individual "who most protected, nurtured and fostered liberty, law and character for our nations and people."

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

- A student's 1988 Chevrolet pickup was stolen from Lot 59 and recovered the same day in Phoenix. The vehicle was driveable and the owner was notified.
- A mobile phone was stolen from the University Activity Center.
- A VCR and television were stolen from the University Activity Center. The items are valued at $2,150.
- An elevator panel in the Law Library was damaged.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A plumber was charged with theft for allegedly stealing a porcelain mask from a client's bathroom and two rings from a bedroom. Police searched the plumber's truck and found the mask on the front seat. The man admitted taking it, saying he did not want the owner to know he broke it. He denied taking the gold rings worth $950, saying he never entered the room in which they were.
- A woman reported her son stole her television. The man, upon being arrested by police, gave officers two different names, and is known by several aliases. When arrested, he said he knew where the TV was but would not reveal its location.
- A man who led police on a 1/4 mile chase in a stolen vehicle was charged with obstruction of justice and theft. When the man stopped driving, he bolted from the car, dropping a stolen pager. He was caught in a fenced backyard. Witnesses told police they saw the man go into two other vehicles and steal property.
- A woman was charged with assault when she scratched her husband after he refused to give her cigarettes.
- A transient was arrested for allegedly trying to steal a patio umbrella and umbrella stand from a Wal-Mart.

"The United States is sending a strong signal to all the parties that the United States wants the Dayton accords fully implemented," said U.S. State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns.

"The Muslims have jeopardized peace, and those who support them also support the option of war," Mladic's closest aide, Lt. Gen. Milan Gvero, said Thursday during a rare news conference at Serb military headquarters in the eastern town of Han Pijesak.

The NATO-led Implementation Force, buoyed by its success so far disengaging the combatants, now faces its sternest test yet: Trying to restore contact with the Serbs while upholding its duty to make war-crimes prosecutions possible.

Capt. Mark Van Dyke, a spokesman for the force commander, U.S. Adm. Leighton Smith, said the force was awaiting confirmation of Mladic's order from other Serb officials. "We do not recognize Gen. Mladic as a legitimate authority" because of his own war crimes indictment, Van Dyke said.

In the short term, Mladic's order halts everything from negotiations on prisoner releases to work on the demarcation of buffer zones. The Serbs say Djukic and Krsmanovic must be released before contacts are resumed.

The International Red Cross and members of an international police force have been allowed to see the detainees at their prison in Sarajevo. But Red Cross spokeswoman Anne-Sophie Bonefeld said her colleagues were denied permission to speak privately with Djukic or Krsmanovic, even though this is required by the Geneva convention on POWs.

extremes, hundreds of roads — including both of Oregon's cross-state freeways, Interstates 5 and 84 — were closed by high water or mudslides. Amtrak trains were halted. Gov. John Kitzhaber declared 14 counties disaster areas.

Amid the deluge, there were water shortages. Muddy floodwaters contaminated drinking-water supplies throughout the valley. Portland and Salem officials urged people to conserve water. Smaller towns shut down their water plants completely and told residents to buy bottled water.

The flooding is the result of a series of storms that marched in from the Pacific beginning two weeks ago. The first were cold, piling up snow in the mountains that form a scenic backdrop to Portland — the Cascades to the east, the rolling Coast Range to the west.

On Monday, a warmer storm stalled over the state, and the snow started melting, adding to the record rains — more than 5 inches a day in some areas.

Sparkling mountain streams, narrow enough to jump across two weeks ago, turned monstrous, tearing through the forest, ripping small bridges apart.

As the swollen streams converged in the Willamette River valley, evergreen trees were ripped out by their roots, bobbing and lunging downstream like huge battering rams.

An estimated 1,500 people were forced from their homes in Eugene, and 12,000 in the Salem area, where a parade of U-Hauls, horse trailers and pickup trucks streamed through the rain.

Bill and Connie Mellin grabbed a few valuables from their home in Keizer, near Salem, and headed for higher ground.

"We've stacked our furniture up on books that we don't like," Bill Mellin said. "We're going to grab some photos, kids' toys and clothes and get out of here."

Sun Devil men's basketball to face N.C. State

ASU-Wolfpack 1st game of 2 in 7Up Shootout in Phoenix

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The ASU men's basketball team (8-10) will face the Atlantic Coast Conference's North Carolina State (13-8) at 11:30 a.m. Sunday at Veteran's Memorial Coliseum in the 7Up Shootout.

The double-header will begin with the ASU-N.C. State game and will be followed with a showdown between fifth-ranked Cincinnati (18-1) and 16th-ranked UofA (17-4) at approximately 1:30 p.m. Both games will be televised live on ABC's channel 15.

The game will mark only the second meeting between the Sun Devils and the Wolfpack. Their last meeting was in the 1987-88 season, when the Wolfpack defeated the Sun Devils, 83-71, in the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu.

Frieder's only meeting vs. an ACC school since coming to Tempe was last year, when ASU topped then No. 7 Maryland, 97-90, to win the Maui Invitational. ASU is 2-3 all-time vs. the ACC.

N.C. State comes in averaging 82 points per game, which ranks 23rd overall among Division I schools. The Wolfpack is led by forward Todd Fuller, who averages 21.8 points per game and 10.4 rebounds.

Senior forward Ron Riley could become ASU's all-time leading scorer Sunday if he scores 28 points.

No. 13 wrestling team to battle Oregon, No. 1 Iowa

BY DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

After a month and a half of practically living out of suitcases, the 13th-ranked ASU wrestling team will finally get a chance to compete on its own turf this weekend.

The Sun Devils (7-6, 3-0 in the Pac-10) will host conference foe Oregon at 2 p.m. today at the University Activity Center before engaging top-ranked Iowa in a mammoth encounter at 3 p.m. Sunday.

"This weekend will definitely give us a chance to see where we are right now," said ASU Coach Lee Roy Smith. "Obviously Iowa is going to be a tremendous challenge. But we can't overlook Oregon. That's one that we have to get."

Both schools strengths lie in the lower weight classes. Two Sun Devils in particular will have tall orders in both matchups. ASU junior All-America 118-pounder Danny Felix will first tangle with Oregon's third-ranked Kevin Roberts. Then Felix, who is ranked 11th, will square off with No. 1-ranked Hawkeye Mike Mena, the defending NCAA champion.

Senior two-time All-America Steve St. John is also bracing for two formidable 134-pound encounters. St. John, who is 7-3 and already ranked No. 7 three weeks after returning from ACL surgery, will clash with fifth-ranked Duck Jeremy Ensrud today before scrapping with No. 1-ranked Hawkeye Mark Ironside, the reigning NCAA champion who is currently 24-0.

Sun Devil 158-pounder Matt Suter will revisit Iowa's top-ranked Joe Williams in a rematch of their bout in semifinals of the Midlands Championships. Williams beat Suter, who is ranked eighth in the country, 7-2.

ASU's three-time All-America Markus Mollica, who is ranked No. 1 in the country at 167 and has a team-best 25-2 record, will face Iowa's fifth-ranked Daryl Weber, whom he beat handily at the Midlands tourney. Mollica said he is relieved the travel has subsided.

"It's feels good just to wrestle at home," he said. "It gives you more time to train."

The Hawkeyes (14-0) have won 30 dual meets in a row dating back to 1994 and are on track for their 23rd consecutive Big Ten title. They have won four of the last five NCAA championships and 15 overall. They lead the all-time series with the Sun Devils, 13-1-1.

"They are one of the most dominant teams in the history of any sport," Smith said.

Wherever the Hawkeyes go, they traditionally bring a big following, and with the snowbird population in the Phoenix area, Sunday's match will likely be no different.

"It's nice to beat them in front of their people, whether it's here or there," Mollica said.

St. John added, "The pressure is all on them."

Women's hoops will tangle with UofA in Tucson

BY RON MATEJKO
STATE PRESS

The ASU women's basketball team will have something heading into its next game that it hasn't had for almost two months — momentum. The Sun Devils will need it when they play UofA at 7 p.m. Saturday at McKale Center in Tucson.

With the Sun Devil victory last Saturday against Washington, many streaks came to an end, including a nine-game losing streak. It was their first victory since Dec. 19 against Holy Cross.

Now, the hoopsters can start with a clean slate and not have the additional burden of the mounting losses in the back of their minds.

"We obviously want to stop them from running," Coach Jacquie Hullah said. "It'll be a plan of ours to slow down the pace."

UofA is currently ranked first in the Pac-10 in six categories. It also ranks

No. 11 ASU baseball clobbers BYU 17-10

BY DAMIAN SHAW
STATE PRESS

The 11th-ranked Sun Devil baseball squad defeated the BYU Cougars, 17-10, on a touchdown pass from sophomore Dan McKinley to junior Cody McKay. Robbie Kent added a field goal to solidify the lead.

Not really, but the ASU baseball squad did rack up big numbers against BYU Thursday at Packard Stadium, in what was the Cougars first game of the season. The Sun Devils scored in six of the eight innings that they were at bat, giving junior Kaipō Spenser his second win against no losses in the young season.

Spenser, who has been suffering some pain in his right arm, wasn't on top of his game, giving up six hits in five innings. But according to Coach Pat Murphy, his appearance on the field meant a lot to the team.

"His velocity was down," Murphy said. "He's at 87 (mph), top pitch 89, but the nice thing was that he hung in there for the team. He said he didn't feel any pain, he just felt like he had to work through it."

While Sun Devil pitching did surrender 10 runs on 11 hits, the game was never in question behind the offense of McKinley, Kent and McKay. McKinley, who only had one home run last year, already has three this season, including a grand slam off of an Eric Boyer change-up in the third inning. McKay scored everytime he took an at-bat.

McKinley, who has been nursing a sore left hamstring, said that hasn't slowed his bat speed any.

"It's pretty sore and tender, but I've been getting it iced every day and just trying to take care of it," McKinley said. "I feel real good at the plate. I don't feel bad rotating on it."

The Sun Devils will get a chance to improve on their 4-0 record again at 2:30 p.m. today at Packard Stadium in a rematch with the Cougars (0-1).

Senior third baseman Alyssa Johnson warms up in preparation for the ASU softball team's home opener against the Puerto Rico national team on Saturday at Sun Devil Club Stadium.

ASU softball to host Puerto Rico

By DAMIAN SHAW
STATE PRESS

The whole team is back, and for Sun Devil softball it could mean its first post-season appearance since 1993.

The Sun Devils, who will be taking on Puerto Rico at 1 p.m. Saturday in Sun Devil Club Stadium as a preseason warm-up, are placing the season's hopes on a large junior class. ASU returns every starter from last year and Coach Linda Wells just wants to keep the team healthy going into the regular season.

"We're for the most part healthy which is huge for us," said Wells, who lost her starting shortstop and catcher at the beginning of last season. "I remember last year when we had a scrimmage the week before the start of the season and lost a couple of people, so I'm still holding my breath."

Back this year is junior Tammy Lohmann, a talented shortstop and offensive player who redshirted with a broken hand before last season started. Also back is third base Alyssa Johnson, who led the Sun Devils with 28 RBIs and a batting average of .366. Johnson won the Honda Inspiration Award earlier this year in recognition of her recovery from brain surgery, and a subsequent All-Pac 10 season.

Wells said that Johnson could best be served this year by a stronger supporting cast.

"When I think about Alyssa's play, what I'm most looking forward to is our junior class stepping up and giving Alyssa a lot of support," she said.

Johnson will co-captain the squad along with second base Tanya Hermosillo, who will combine with senior first base Kerry Moloney to form a solid experienced infield.

"Those players, Moloney and Tonya (Hermosillo) in particular, look like their going to take it up another step for us this year," Wells said.

The team has been picked to finish sixth in the Pac-10 in a preseason coaches poll. Moloney, who is rarely shy with her opinion, said she expects the team to finish much higher.

"We're going to finish higher than sixth in the Pac-10," she said. "I can't believe we were picked to finish that low. There's only three of us seniors this year so we're going to have to lead by example."

The only new edition to the team is junior transfer Stacey Slick, who will step in at right field and add team speed on the bases. Junior Lisa Dacquisto, who holds the Sun Devils' all-time and single-season stolen base marks, will see time as the designated hitter and not in the outfield because of a displaced right throwing shoulder.

The Puerto Rican national team garnered a bronze medal at the Pan American games and the team the Sun Devils face this Saturday will be the same one they will field in the Olympics in Atlanta this summer.

among the top teams in the nation in field-goal percentage.

The game has the potential to be high-scoring since ASU is ranked third in the conference in shooting. The Sun Devils shot 54 percent in their last two games.

Hullah said there are two Wildcat players that ASU will be paying extra attention to.

"We will have to contain (Adia) Barnes, and (Brenda) Pantoja," Hullah said. "They have been playing very well lately."

Barnes ranks seventh in the conference in scoring and Pantoja is first in assists.

ASU holds a 29-12 advantage in the series, but UofA has won the last five, including the last meeting, 78-63, Jan. 13 in Tempe.

ROAD TO RECOVERY

Sophomore gymnast Courtney battles back from 2nd car wreck

By RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

It's been a tough two years for gymnast Carrie Courtney. Since arriving at ASU, she has begun each season the same way — getting injured in a car wreck.

However, the sophomore did get some great news on her 20th birthday Tuesday, when team doctors cleared her to resume practicing with the team.

"It definitely was a great present," she said. "I'm really excited to get back and practice."

In her first wreck, on Friday, Jan. 13, 1995, Courtney suffered a broken nose and a slight concussion.

The injuries sustained cost her only one meet, much less than is the case this season.

Two days shy of a year after the first accident, Courtney's car was hit by another vehicle running a red light at the intersection of Apache Boulevard and Price Road.

This time she suffered a bruised heart and a broken sternum.

When Coach John Spini received the call from the hospital, fear overcame him.

"The first thing I asked was 'Is she OK?'" he said. "Then I hopped in my truck and was there ... quickly as possible."

Upon arriving at the hospital, Spini sighed in relief.

"It was a big weight lifted off my back, when I saw she was all right," he said.

Through all the hardships, Courtney has kept a smile on her face and a fierce determination to return.

"It's been very frustrating," she said. "Two straight years (this has happened). But I'm happy for the girls in there, busting their butts...and that really motivates me to work to get back in there."

According to coaching assistant Kyle Jenne, that may be soon.

"She's got that fire in her eye," he said. Jenne believes

Courtney won't be out of action for long.

Being away from competition isn't fun, she said. A native of Garland, Texas, Courtney has been involved in gymnastics since 1979.

"My mom put me in to get rid of some of my extra energy," she said. "I was jumping around on couches. Walking on my hands in the hall ... and I've been competing ever since."

Spini said not having Courtney hurts, especially on vault and uneven bars.

While in high school, Courtney was an All-American for four years (1991-94) and a member of the Junior Olympic National team. She was also being counted on as one of four all-arounders for the Sun Devils.

However, Spini cautions against bringing her back too soon.

"Carie's a very competitive gymnast," he said. "But I don't want to rush her. I don't want her re-injured."

Her teammates were all smiles with Courtney's return to the floor Wednesday.

"She's been coming to the gym and our meets giving us emotional support," said senior Katie Freeland. "It's going to be great getting her back."

After practice, Courtney said she could still feel the injury when she performed, but she expects to be back "maybe for the next home meet (Feb. 16), but I'd say the one a week after, for sure."

For now, Courtney must remain a cheerleader. At the Utah meet, Courtney offered her support and enthusiasm for the team, and it did not go unnoticed.

"Her being on the sidelines really helps us get motivated," said senior Jennifer McKenna. "But we want her out there, and I'm sure she wants to be there, too."

Until she returns, Courtney will keep it up.

"Doing this gives me a way to contribute ... to help the team out even though I can't be out there, yet," she said smiling.

Women's tennis to host San Diego

By DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

After playing two of the premier teams in the country last weekend in UCLA and USC, possibly the biggest thing ASU's 14th-ranked women's tennis team must guard against is a let-down.

The Sun Devils (1-2, 0-2 in the Pac-10 south), who lost both matches last weekend, will try to get back in the win column when they host the University of San Diego at noon on Saturday in a non-conference dual at Whiteman Tennis Center.

ASU beat a young San Diego team handily last year.

"They're pretty solid this year," said ASU Coach Sheila McInerney. "They have a lot of nationally-ranked kids. We're definitely going to have to play well to beat them."

Once again Sun Devil sophomore Reka Cseresnyes will be faced with a formidable foe at the No. 1 singles spot. Cseresnyes, who ranked 33rd in the country, is scheduled to face Yvonne Doyle of San Diego. Last weekend, Cseresnyes lost to UCLA's defending NCAA champion Keri Phebus in straight sets, but beat USC's Suzie Italiano in a three-set battle.

Fellow ASU sophomore No. 2 player Stephanie Lansdorp admitted she had an attack of the nerves last weekend.

"I was really nervous against UCLA and USC. I'm more prepared for it now," said Lansdorp, who added the conditioning drills McInerney administered in practice this week should help the whole team this weekend. "We've been doing tons of sprints."

ASU's probable lineup will include junior Anna Moll and freshmen Katy Propstra and Torey Pratt. McInerney said senior Julie Coppinger, who played No. 6 against USC, suffered an injury during Thursday's practice, but did not know the severity yet.

Freshman Alison Nash is also questionable for Saturday with a pulled stomach muscle.

Track team to enter double-dual meet

By RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

WEEKEND ROUND-UP

The ASU indoor track and field team travels to Flagstaff Saturday for a double-dual meet with in-state rivals UofA and NAU.

While the team usually doesn't emphasize indoor meets, the rivalries do exist.

"It's always great competition, the other schools really get up for this meet, and that can bring out more from many of our kids," said field events coach Steve Lemke.

This is the first of two consecutive indoor meets in Flagstaff. On Feb. 17 the Sun Devils go north again for the NAU Miller Lite Invitational.

Entering the mid-point of the indoor season, interim-coach Ken Lehman believes the team is beginning to get into a groove. Both the men's and women's squads placed second at the Air Force Invitational last week at Colorado Springs, Colo.

"Pretty much I think we're close to where we should be," he said.

The match should be closely contested in many events, said Lemke, singling out the shot-put.

"In that event alone there will be four athletes who have qualified for the NCAA Championships before, including our own Mark Landa ... and that's just amazing," he said.

Women's swim meet cancelled

The ASU women's swimming team will not compete in the USC Invite this weekend.

The Sun Devils planned to use the trip to Los Angeles (today through Sunday) as a tune-up for the Pac-10 Championships.

ASU coach Tim Hill said that the USC meet would have served as "long-course preparation for the Olympics."

But ASU swam in long-course meters against visiting UofA Saturday.

— Ed Odeven

Ice Devils take on No. 2 PSU

With the first post-season invitation under the belt of the ninth-ranked ASU hockey team, it now will prepare for its biggest challenge of the season.

The Ice Devils (16-5) will face second-ranked Penn State at the PSU-Ice Pavilion in University Park, Pa. tonight and Saturday. The meetings will be the first between the two schools.

"If we go in and lose two we're not supposed to beat them," Coach Gene Hammett said. "If we go in and beat them that will put us up in the top six and give us a bye in the first-round of the (ACHA) tournament. To me this is a bonus trip."

— Ron Matejko

Men's gymnastics travels west

The ASU men's gymnastics club will travel to the UCLA National Gilda Marx Invitational on Saturday.

The meet will mark the return of senior Rob Kjar, a NCAA All-American on the pommel horse. Kjar missed the last competition because of illness.

"Rob has really turned into a quality and clean all-arounder who will lift the scores on all the events," said men's gymnastics coach Scott Barclay.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST by Sydney Omarr

Friday, February 9, 1996

Happenings: Astrology has been sanctioned by the government of South Korea. News comes from Seoul that astrology has gained legal status to go along with the high esteem in which it is held by businessmen, artists, community leaders. Under the general heading of "fortune tellers," leading citizens line up for appointments—the fortune tellers being astrologers. Add South Korea to Britain, France, Russia and other nations where astrology is enjoying great popularity.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Break through red tape, make personal appearances, enjoy glow of romance. New love on horizon, accent style, courage, creativity. Emphasis on partnership, public relations, marital status.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Get things done! Focus on practical matters; sharpening of tools, correcting mechanical defects at home, in automobile. Relationship hot and heavy—marriage plays major role.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Moon position emphasizes style, creativity, sensuality, physical attraction, sex appeal. This will be one weekend you won't soon forget! Emphasis on diversity, versatility, entertainment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Obtain hint from Taurus message. Check signatures, references, be willing to rewrite, revise, to tear down in order to rebuild on more suitable base. Scorpio plays dynamic role.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If ever you write, it will be on this Friday! Focus on style, creativity, ability to blend humor with profundity. Relative, usually indifferent, is effusive with praise. Virgo represented.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Go slow, emphasize diplomacy, by praising your enemy you achieve stature. Might sound funny at first, but it will work. Domestic adjustment featured, also music. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take
