Symington OKs $21M increase for universities

BY KELLY WENDEL AND RAY STERN
STATE PRESS

In a surprise move, Gov. Fife Symington approved the Arizona 1997 Fiscal Year budget as written by the state Legislature, leaving in an additional $21 million earmarked for higher education.

Out of the extra $21 million, ASU will receive $4.5 million.

The $21 million increase over last year's budget pushes funding for ASU, UofA and NAU to $630.5 million out of a total $4.8 billion state budget. State employees are stuck with a 1 percent raise, plus $500 for each employee. But they won't feel the extra jingle in their pockets until April 1997.

"We are just glad that the governor is signing the budget, because we think it is the right thing to do," said Blake Anderson, lobbyist for the Alumni Legislative Network, an ASU lobbying organization.

Symington had indicated earlier in the week that he would use his line-item veto power to kill the extra university funding, but a diverse coalition of business leaders and rebel Republicans apparently forced the governor to back down.

Early reports had Symington aides counting heads in the House to establish if Symington's veto would withstand an override by the Legislature. Although it appears that Symington had the numbers for an override-proof veto in the Senate, the governor lacked the necessary votes in the House of Representatives, said Sen. Gary Richardson, R-Tempe.

"There was a very real threat of a veto," he said.

The governor signed the bill after he received a commitment from the Arizona Board of Regents and the University Presidents Council to work on streamlining university budgets and rooting out inefficiency.

"We (ABOR members Kurt Davis and John Munger) took the lead on this (and) prepared a letter which said to the governor that the process this year has not been good," said Regent John Munger. "It has been too adversarial. We need to be more collaborative."

The commitment by ABOR and the UPC stipulates that they will work to limit waste in the university systems and sit down in May to begin the budget process, rather than schedule budget talks in the new year and create a budget in a vacuum. Munger said the latter leads to an adversarial relationship.

"(Symington) still thinks universities are over-funded and need to economize and right size, but he figured that this is what he should do in hopes of reaching a compromise and consensus with everybody," Richardson said.

Unity Rally draws 400

NAACP's Tillman praises students for stand against racism

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

A campus student group is addressing an important issue by taking a stand against discrimination, the president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's Arizona chapter said at a rally Thursday.

"Whenever you take a stand about what is right, the rest will take care of itself," said NAACP Arizona chapter president Oscar Tillman. "We will support these students in what they are doing because they are trying to combat racism on campus."

Tillman spoke to a group of about 400 people at Unity Rally '96 in front of the Memorial Union. Students Against Discrimination sponsored the rally that provided people the opportunity to listen to a diverse group of speakers express their concerns relating to racism and other forms of discrimination both on and off campus.

A group of drummers representing the American Indian Movement Arizona chapter kicked off the rally with a traditional drum-beating demonstration and melodic chant.

SAD spokesman Dondrell Swanson said the rally's purpose was to unify many different organizations in the fight against discrimination.

"We have support for what we are doing here today from groups all over Arizona as well as nationwide," he said.

Vernon Fuster, an AIMA member, said students' time would be much better spent in libraries and classrooms rather than on Orange Mall protesting discrimination.

Denise Trimble, president of the Panhellenic Council, speaks out against discrimination during Unity Rally '96, sponsored by the Students Against Discrimination. The rally, which drew nearly 400 students, featured a variety of speakers focusing on ways to combat discrimination at ASU.

"It's sad that the students that we send here to educate to become our future leaders ... have to take time out of their studies and their lives to form an organization to

IFC president Eckel previously accused of sexual assault

County attorney's office declined prosecution in '94 case

BY GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS

The president of ASU's Interfraternity Council, now in a Mexican jail awaiting trial on a rape charge, was accused of sexually assaulting an ASU student in 1994.

Mike Eckel, a 24-year-old senior marketing major, was never arrested or charged, said Chief of ASU Police Lanny Standridge.

The allegations came from an 18-year-old student who told police in January 1994 that Eckel sexually assaulted her in a fraternity house after a party, according to University police documents.

"We investigated the case and forwarded it to the county attorney's office, but it declined to prosecute,"

Standridge said. "They said there was no reasonable chance of prosecution."

Police had no physical evidence of rape, according to the report.

Eckel was arrested in San Felipe last week after a 19-year-old American woman accused him of sexual assault during spring break. Eckel told police the woman consented to sex.

Today is the last day of Eckel's three-day defense presentation in a Mexicali, Baja California, courtroom. If convicted, he faces eight to 12 years in prison.

Even though race is the most common element of discrimination, it is not exclusive to the problem, according to Lambda League member Greg Marzullo.

"A lot of times when we talk about minorities, the gay, lesbian and bisexual community is not included," he said. "I don't think that people recognize the intense discrimina-

All totaled, 22 individuals and representatives from various organizations spoke, read poetry, preached, laughed and cheered.

MEChA President-elect José Malvido summed up the day's events.

"I think it's good that people are just coming to see what it's about," he said. "It's an ongoing process. We're just going to see where it goes from here."

Suspected mass grave found in Bosnia

LUSCI PALANKA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — A suspected mass grave has been found in a deep cave in northwestern Bosnia near one of the worst Serb death camps. Investigators say it could contain the remains of up to 120 Muslims and Croats.

In an apparent attempt to conceal the grave, someone threw the bodies of animals and rubbish on top of the human remains and set off an explosion at the cave, a Bosnian war crimes researcher says.

The Bosnian government war crimes committee, which found the site near the village of Lusci Palanka, claimed the animal remains were a ploy by the Serbs to mask the cave's true horrors.

The committee gave Associated Press Television a videotape showing the inside of a deep cave containing piles of bones. One of the researchers was shown holding what he said was part of a human spine.

Another Bosnian war crimes researcher, Refik Hodzic, spoke to APTV last weekend from the site.

"The problem is that the site of the cave has been ruined by a big detonation ... by whoever tried to cover the traces of this crime," he said.

"On top of it they have thrown bodies of animals and rubbish, so it would be very hard to find the remains of the bodies under all that stuff," Hodzic said. He estimates there are up to 120 bodies in the cave.

The cave is near Omarska, one of the most notorious Serb-run camps. The detention camp was closed in late 1992 following international outrage over pictures of emaciated inmates.

Experts say 11,500 people are missing from Omarska. Survivors of the camp claim prisoners were brutally killed on a daily basis.

Bosnian authorities believe that two busloads of men who disappeared from the Omarska camp on the eve of its closure could be buried in Lusci Palanka.

Jadranka Cigelj, a Bosnian Croat lawyer who survived Omarska and now lives in Zagreb, Croatia, gathers evidence to help war crimes investigators.

She said large trucks would drive away bodies daily "in Many Serbs consider Albright the symbol of what they see as Western hostility toward their country.

a direction unknown to us at the time ... those who died during the day of their injuries, and at night those who were killed."

"On average there were 20 to 30 bodies every day," she said.

Cigelj accused two Bosnian Serbs of being directly responsible for the deaths: Mirko Babic, who was in charge of the Omarska mine at the time and Zeljko Mejacic, commander of security at the camp.

Both are among the 53 people indicted by an international war crimes tribunal based in The Hague.

"They often sent us to clean ... the blood. The walls, the furniture, the floors — everything was sprayed with blood," Cigelj recalled.

Bosnian authorities said they had known for some time of the existence of the suspected grave site near Lusci Palanka from a man who claimed to have survived a shooting there.

Artificial flood to restore the Grand Canyon ecology

PHOENIX (AP) — After 33 years of wreaking havoc on the Grand Canyon, the government wants to make amends. So it's staging a flood.

The four, 8-foot-wide jet tubes at Glen Canyon Dam will be opened on Tuesday, sending water rushing into the Colorado River and through the Grand Canyon at a rate fast enough to fill Chicago's Sears Tower in 17 minutes.

The purpose is to restore the Grand Canyon beaches and wildlife that have vanished because of micromanagement of the flow of water through the dam.

Nothing will return the canyon to its pristine pre-dam days, and the effects of the week-long flood may well be temporary. But when the experiment is over, scientists might get a better understanding of how much water to release, and at what time of day, to help protect the environment.

The flood is a departure for the government, which for most of the past three decades has manipulated the flow to suit the needs of power companies.

"This event is our first attempt to operate the dam for environmental purposes," said David Wegner, program manager for the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, the government's dam-managing agency.

Three million people in Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Utah, Colorado and Wyoming rely on the dam for power. The dam also provides drinking water for about 15 million people in those states, along with California and Mexico.

Since the dam was built in 1963, the river's every fluctuation, its color, its temperature, its beaches and even the fish have been meticulously managed. As a result, the river has evolved into something nature never intended.

Originally a warm, muddy red river, the Colorado now runs cold and clear green, its sediment left behind the dam in Lake Powell. Cold water has turned the area below the dam into one of the nation's premiere fishing spots for rainbow trout, a breed exotic to the area. Cottonwood trees, also foreign, have popped up in the canyon.

Until the mid-1980s, water was released in a torrent in the morning as power customers flicked on their lights, and was reduced to a trickle at night.

But environmentalists insisted that the canyon needs free-flowing water; no nutrient-rich sediment means no beaches and no plants for some endangered animals. And river guides complained that the unnatural releases of water made their jobs dangerous and washed away favorite beaches and wildlife.

"It was crazy. You'd have this totally schizophrenic river," said Brad Dimock, who has led wooden boats through the Grand Canyon since 1971. "The boat would get beached, or the river would wash away the boat and the camp kitchen if you weren't careful."

For about 10 years now, the government has toyed with water levels, hoping to find the right mix to keep everyone happy. But the power companies claim the fluctuations during the past decade have cost them as much as $100 million. And some of those costs, they say, are passed on to ratepayers.

"All over the West we're seeing a move to re-operate dams for environmental purposes," said Joe Hunter, executive director of the Colorado River Energy Distributors Association. "An economist would argue that someone else is getting the benefits in terms of protecting the Grand Canyon ... yet we're still paying the mortgage."

There has been only scattered opposition to the artificial flood, some from river guides who fear the loss of favorite beaches and some from people concerned about the fishing prospects.

Hunter's group and most of his colleagues welcome the experiment, saying it will end debate over how fluctuations affect the canyon.

Five U.N. aid workers kidnapped in Somalia

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Five U.N. aid workers, including one American, were kidnapped today at a regional airport in Somalia as they prepared to leave the anarchic country.

U.N. spokesman Ahmad Fawzi refused to release the captives' names. He said four of the captives work for UNICEF, and one works for the World Health Organization. One is from the United States, and the others are from Britain, Nepal, India and Sudan, Fawzi said.

"We are negotiating with their captors and we expect them to be released expeditiously and unharmed," Fawzi said.

U.N. sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the kidnapping occurred at the airbase in Ballidogle, 55 miles southwest of the capital, Mogadishu. The five were preparing to board a plane for Nairobi, Kenya.

The Mogadishu airport has not been in operation since March 1995, after U.N. peacekeepers withdrew.

The area around the Ballidogle airbase is controlled by Gen. Mohamed Farah Aidid, who has formed a government that has been widely rejected in the Horn of Africa nation. Somalia has had no real government since President Siad Barre was ousted in January 1991.

The area between Ballidogle and Mogadishu has been tense for the past few days because of confrontations between Aidid's forces and followers of a rival warlord.

Anti-death penalty lawyer dropped off murder case

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. George Pataki took the case of a murdered policeman out of the hands of the Bronx district attorney Thursday because of the prosecutor's reluctance to seek the death penalty.

"We cannot have different standards and different laws in different parts of this state," said the governor, a Republican who brought capital punishment back to New York last year soon after he was elected. "We cannot have the death penalty in New York State except for the Bronx."

Bronx District Attorney Robert Johnson, who opposes capital punishment, had angered Pataki by refusing to say whether he would seek the death penalty against 27-year-old Angel Diaz, the alleged triggerman in the slaying March 14 of Officer Kevin Gillespie.

Pataki designated state Attorney General Dennis Vacco to take over the murder case.

Gillespie was killed in a gunfight with three men on parole who allegedly stole a car in the Bronx.

Pataki said that in his opinion, Gillespie's murder was precisely the type of crime in which the death penalty should be invoked.

The governor said that allowing Johnson to continue to refuse to seek the death penalty "would have jeopardized the law all across the state" by enabling other defendants to argue that the law is being applied unevenly.

Johnson, a Democrat who was elected to office, said he will challenge the governor's action in court. But Pataki said he has clear legal authority to remove a district attorney from a case.

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

BRAVO — To the passage of the 1997 state budget — with a $21.5 million hike for the university system intact.

Gov. Symington had threatened earlier to use a line-item veto on the university budget increase. But public pressure by the universities' legislative supporters — such as Sen. Gary Richardson of Tempe — won the day for the hike.

We appreciate these legislators' efforts on behalf of the cause of higher education. And we definitely feel that Symington deserves a big BOO for trying to kill the funding with a line-item veto.

Exactly what does Symington have against state universities, anyway? We can't all go to Harvard, Fife.

BOO — To the mess created by the Wednesday deadline on green card renewal.

After being told by the federal government that their cards were good for life, the feds changed their minds — and forced the country's resident aliens to renew their cards. The renewal wasn't free, either — resident aliens got stuck with a $75 fee to get the new, computer-coded cards.

We can see the need for a new card, one that would be harder to counterfeit. But putting such a stringent deadline on resident aliens to renew the cards was unfair. Having them pay $75 to get the new cards was only adding insult to injury.

We doubt the cards cost the government $75 apiece to produce. These people were soaked unnecessarily.

BRAVO — To the Students Against Discrimination for a successful and moralizing rally Thursday.

If this rally has an enduring image, it will certainly be diversity. Hundreds of students from every race, nationality and culture attended the rally. Speakers ranged from the Rev. Oscar Tillman, president of the Arizona NAACP, to Rabbi Barton Lee of Hillel.

Most importantly, the rally emphasized campus unity in the struggle against racism. It was precisely the message that ASU needed to hear.

We hope that this event will have positive effects for the rest of the semester.

BRAVO — To the conviction of the Menendez brothers on charges of first-degree murder.

Erik and Lyle Menendez claimed that they were acting in self-defense, fearful that their parents would kill them rather than let the family be torn by an incest scandal.

But the details of the case made this claim seem ludicrous. The brothers stood to inherit a fortune with their parents dead. They purchased the shotguns used in the murders the day before the slayings. Then, at the time of the murders, they fired 15 shotgun blasts into their parents.

These were the actions of cold-blooded murderers — not of someone defending themselves. These murders were brutal in the extreme. The Menendez brothers were adults — if they feared for their lives, they could have left home.

We're glad that the jury was able to see through their ridiculous argument and gave these two killers the sentence they richly deserved. Does anyone else hope these two get the death penalty?

"WELL, WELL. LOOK WHAT THE CAT DRAGGED IN."

Rally united diverse crowd for common cause

My heart is overfilled with joy. I have just come home from Unity Rally '96, an event that I will undoubtedly remember long after I leave ASU this summer.

Nearly a month ago about 50 students representing Students Against Racism (now Students Against Discrimination) including myself, protested at the Republican Presidential debate. What we were protesting was the onslaught of racist incidents that have occurred at ASU and the irony of candidate Pat Buchanan's presence (with his racist ideals). I was involved in the protest because I knew that what was going on was wrong and protesting (as they did in the '60s) was my way of showing it.

About three weeks ago, I was verbally assaulted by someone as I left the Student Services Building. My desire to bring about change was intensified because I knew the ASU community was better than that. I left that confrontation angry and confused. However, I was content with my decision not to physically retaliate to his threats.

Since then, many things have happened. Some of them have been bad and deserve no further attention. However, some wonderful things have also happened. One is the dialogue that has occurred between SAD and the senior administration of ASU. SAD has presented many suggestions to President Lattie Coor and Provost Milton Glick about ways to improve the University. The dialogue has been productive and vital to proving that the ASU community is better than the incidents we have been bombarded with recently.

Thursday, SAD hosted a rally. Not a protest, but a peaceful and positive rally. We had several goals, including the following: To raise the consciousness of our community about the cross-cultural effects of discrimination and to unite our community. We wanted to show everyone with the common goal of unity and productive change what we could accomplish. Furthermore, we wanted to share with the community the results of our meeting with the administration.

What we accomplished was not something that can be quantified. When I reminisce on this rally, I will remember many things. However, most importantly, I will remember what kind of day it was:

- It was a day when we showed a great deal of respect for the similarities that exist within all cultures.

- It was a day when more than 300 students listened to the messages of many different people ranging from the Nation of Islam to the Lambda League to the Hillel Jewish Community.

- It was a day when we listened to the editorial of a very concerned student and the plight of the distinguished American Indian Movement.

- It was a day where I looked into the crowd and saw international students, Muslim students, Chicano/Chicana students, White students, Asian students, Christian students, Gay and Lesbian students and many others and a song with the theme of freedom continually ran through my mind.

- It was a day when my decision to walk away from an idiot was applauded and the dreams of a group of emotionally committed students became a reality.

Yes, it was wonderful and worthy of praise and we are overjoyed at the rally's success and our progress with the administration. Now, we must recognize the work we as a community must do.

It is time for us to build upon the positive emotions of the rally within ourselves and our social circles.

It is time for us to hold the administration responsible for everything they have said they would provide us. To ensure they aid our community in restoring an environment where education can live and discrimination can be put to rest.

I want to take the time to thank everyone who delivered a message at the rally Thursday. I want to thank everyone who attended the rally, even those who just stopped by for a minute. I want to thank the people behind the scene who worked hard helping SAD host a productive rally, specifically, Jesus Trevino and Lanny Standridge. The rest of you know who you are. In addition, I want to thank the more than 200 caring ASU students who signed up to be new members of SAD. I also want to thank the current members of SAD for sticking to our principles and doing what we said we could do. However, most of all, I want to thank all the people who intensified our passion for change through hate mail, jokes and threats. Specifically, the idiot who verbally assaulted me.

Greek life begins with party

In my short career here at ASU one aspect has continued to fascinate me — a group of students that have constantly annoyed and baffled my senses.

These people are very selective in who they consider their friends, and extremely open to any type of microbrew, ale or malt liquor. The universal greeting from one to another is, "Hey, were you at happy hour last night?"

They adorn themselves with symbols of wealth, prosperity and the American Way. It is inevitable that they are the bankers, lawyers and politicians of tomorrow. But for today, they are concerned only with formals, vacations and happy hours.

Any milestone of daily life is reason to have a T-shirt made. They have a barbeque or a volleyball game or a party, they have T-shirts to celebrate. It wouldn't surprise me if they had T-shirts made just for getting up in the morning, showering, eating, etc.

They are the Greeks of ASU. And you should be scared.

I have always felt that fraternities and sororities looked really good on paper. As the ASU General Catalog states, "Programs are coordinated by the Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Council to foster communication between chapters, to reward scholastic achievement and to promote University and community service projects." Sounds great, doesn't it?

But to actually see the enormous service that Greek Life has brought to the community, you'll have to look for awhile. With the exception of a few coin or food drives held once or twice a year, Greeks on campus haven't been putting down the longneck to help their fellow man.

I know that many fraternities and sororities do try to help the community, but be honest. When you think of a typical Greek here at ASU, I can bet the image isn't someone serving food to the poor.

In writing, ASU may hold to the belief that the Greek community is composed of hard-working, selfless men and women. There is nothing wrong with an environment that stresses friendship, confidence and learning. But after seeing the Greeks here at ASU, it's not hard to see them for what they really are.

I had my first glimpse of the underbelly of Greek life when I mistakenly picked up a copy of the Greek Review Newspaper. At first, I thought it must be a joke, surely Greeks wouldn't do anything to tarnish their already rusty reputation by publishing a testimony to their inherent alcoholism and bad writing skills.

But I was wrong.

PROPER ID REQUIRED." Four stories dealt with various aspects of alcohol and legal drinking age. The editorial is about the editor's hatred of people who are 21 (she just turned 20). There is an article detailing the life of a Greek over 21.

After reading the entire paper, it seemed obvious to me: These people's lives are engulfed by alcohol, fake IDs, planning formals and congratulating new "pledge classes."

The most interesting and entertaining article in the publication is one that discusses the media bias against Greeks here at ASU. It's laughable, really. It is the job of any media to report the news, and the job of the opinion staff to analyze it. In my first semester here at ASU, an African-American man was assaulted on the lawn of a frat house and our student body president, also a fraternity member, was arrested twice for embarrassing conduct in public.

Now, I don't think any reporter made these incidents up. This is a common example of the way the buck is passed. Instead of getting mad at the story in the paper, the blame lies within the house itself and the attitudes within it.

Also, the staff must have some obsession with crack-cocaine. In a promotion for the paper itself, the staff claims that the paper is "More fun than being addicted to crack." Well, maybe it's just me, but I consider having a molar pulled with no anesthesia more fun than being addicted to crack.

They continue the theme of "crack" in an ad for writers and more staff. It reads: "Crack addicts need not apply." Well, after managing to read the paper, I think that talented writers need not apply either.

The back page of the paper has a full-page ad for the Tempe Hooters. The ad pictures a beautiful woman in her anything-but-modest Hooters uniform holding a plate of wings. Not surprising, I guess. I'm sure that the second floor of Hooters is a worthy hangout for frat boys. They can stare at the waitresses, busy degrading themselves, and wonder what house they're from.

I've been wrangling with the term "Anti-Greek" for awhile now. I know people who are members of a fraternity or a sorority, and I am willing to admit that not every Greek is a spoiled, alcoholic, self-centered Republican. But after my uncomfortable encounter with the Greek Review I have come to my conclusion: I am decidedly Anti-Greek.

I cannot bring myself to respect organizations that act like babies, drink like fiends and kiss Lattie Coor's ass on a regular basis.

Maybe if they would grow up and take some responsibility for something that occurs on the other side of Alpha Drive, they wouldn't have such a problem with the State Press "media bias."

No sympathy for Eckel

This is in regard to the editorial on Wednesday, March 20.

Whoever wrote this article needs to take a step back and start reading what they write. If I'm not mistaken a couple of weeks ago, this same editorial said that the ASU basketball players ought to be severely punished and the proper steps taken for their future career here at ASU.

On Wednesday it was written how sorry this person felt for Eckel. Something about innocent until proven guilty. Yet, that didn't seem the case for the three freshmen. They were severely chastised. It seemed as if they were already guilty. And now, the charges have been dropped against them. So, what I want to know is why is Eckel getting your sympathy? What makes him so special?

The three players were charged for things ranging from sexual assault to intimidation. Eckel is being charged with rape. Now, I am not justifying the actions of Prince, Harris or Gervin, I am simply saying that if you are going to bash someone for assault, bash everyone. Not just the athletes, the fraternity brothers too.

The article went on and on saying how "concerned we are for Eckel's welfare." Well, count me out of that "we." If you are going into another country, knowing that the laws are much more harsh than those of the United States, and are planning on getting intoxicated, well then what ever decisions you choose to make, God bless you. As far as I'm concerned, he's where he's at because he chose that path. So, please, no more "Poor Mike."

Headline words should be chosen more carefully

This letter is regarding the headline on the front page of the March 20 State Press: "Basketball players avoid prosecution in sex assault case." When I read the headline I started to get mad because the use of the phrase "Basketball players avoid" led me to believe the story would be about the players not being prosecuted because of some manipulation of the system by them or the athletic department in their favor. The use of the word "avoid" implies, in this context, that they or an agent acting for them somehow unfairly affected the investigation or decision to favor the men.

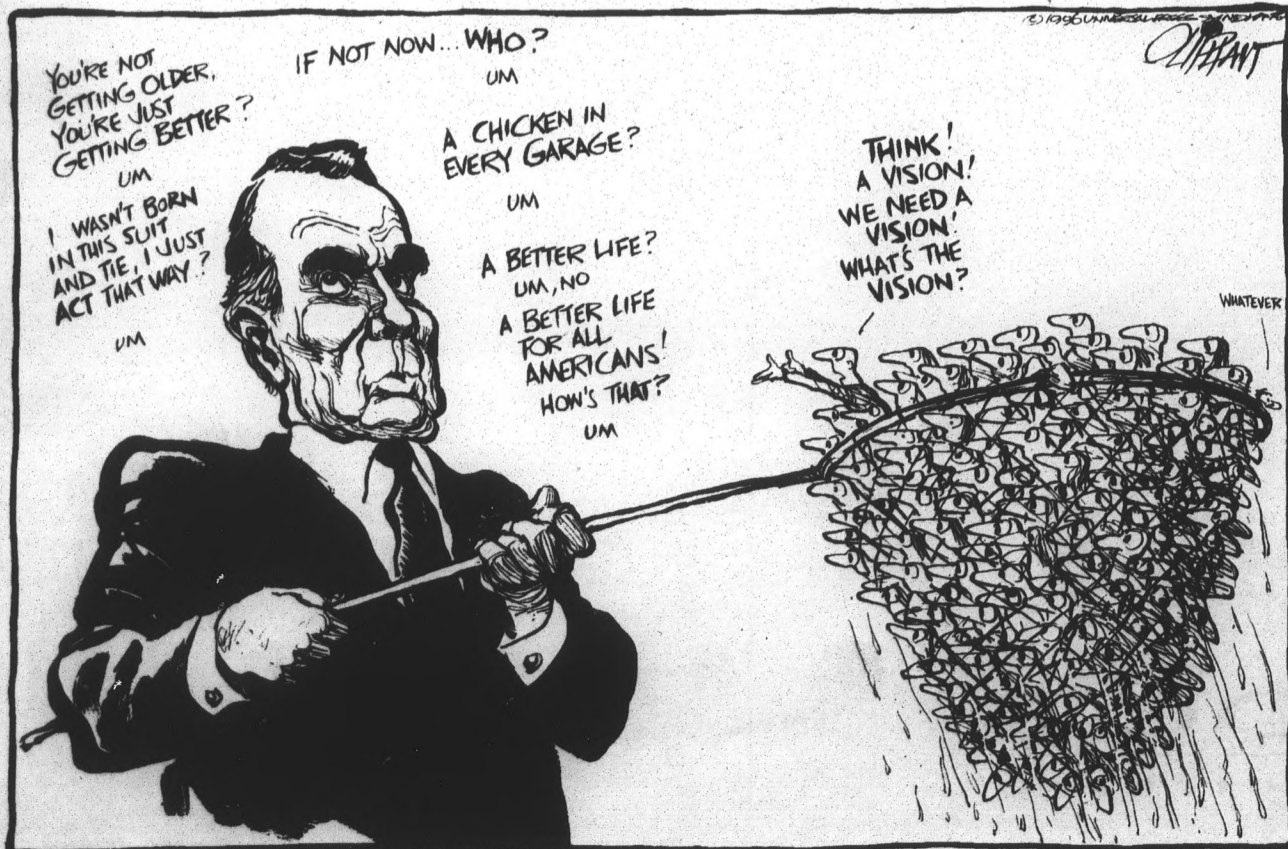

The truth, as presented in the article, is that there was not enough solid evidence to prosecute them. There may have been some kind of active "avoidance" by them or the athletic department, but the story does not imply or prove such an occurrence.

The problem is that as writers you have a unique duty to choose words that accurately and clearly reflect the objective facts you are reporting. The editorial staff may not have to be objective (although they should construct well-thought out arguments), but the reporting staff absolutely should be held to the highest standard of objectivity.

I have never been in a journalism class, but I assume they train writers to develop a good vocabulary and use it well. Especially for headlines. Many people only skim the headlines. And I think most skimmers came read into the headline that the players unjustly "got off."

The three men made bad choices, no doubt. They may, in fact, be guilty. The fact is that they were cleared by the system. And you can't blame them for that. In particular, we must assume they did not commit the crimes of which they were accused. In general, though, we must critique the system that seems to treat victims as criminals and rarely seems to procure just punishment for accused rapists.

Minority enrollment up, ABOR report says

Graduation rates between ethnic groups still show disparity, however

By RAY STERN
STATE PRESS

Minority enrollment at the state's universities have handily exceeded goals set two years ago, according to a report presented at the Arizona Board of Regents meeting at the UofA Thursday.

The report showed that the percentage of minorities at the three schools has gone from 11.4 percent in 1987 to 18.9 percent in 1995. At ASU, percentages jumped from 10.6 to 17.5 in the same time period.

But despite the increases in enrollment, the report emphasized a few areas that need improvement.

"I think it's always exciting when you can increase upon stuff like that," said Student Regent Mark Davis. "But we have a long way to go."

The board's goal for graduation rates was met only in the Hispanic category, and notable disparities exist in graduation rates between the various ethnic groups.

For first-year students who started school in 1986 to 1988 and graduated in six years, the numbers were as follows: 52.1 percent Asian Americans, 47.6 percent whites, 39.7 percent Hispanics, 27.5 percent African Americans and 13.2 percent Native Americans.

"There's a great deal to accomplish as far as reducing the gap between minority and non-minority graduates," said Regent Eddie Basha.

"It's hard to close that gap," said Sandra Taylor, UofA vice president for student affairs who helped present the report.

Another aspect of the report that sparked debate was the continuing low rate of college eligibility for minority students.

The most current figures available show that Hispanics and African Americans lag almost 20 percentage points behind the 50 percent of eligible whites.

Munger and Basha reacted defensively when UofA officials Taylor and Jose Colchado, dean of the College of Communication Arts, proposed undertaking another study to examine the issue.

"I'm concerned about societal and family life," Munger said. "Are we going to study that?"

Basha asked, "Why don't we institute solutions instead of another study?"

Colchado asked Basha why he was not proposing the solutions.

"I have spoken for three years (on the subject) and nobody listens," Basha responded.

Later, Basha said it was extremely important to commit to a concept of a "seamless web of education" in order to boost eligibility levels.

"We have to extend ourselves to the early level — the 'K' level, the pre-K level," he said. "Every major study done in 1968 is no different than any major study done today. (They) indicate unequivocally that the most important component of a child's education is the child's parent. That hasn't changed a bit. But that's part of extending ourselves out into the community — to teach those parents that don't know what they're doing. Not all parents are literate. Not every parent cares."

Munger gave a slightly different angle on the same message.

"Part of the solution is getting the message out to people that education is not a community responsibility," he said. "You have to have a collaborative effort — families, community, all that — but the primary responsibility has to be the families."

Munger emphasized that he did not want to eliminate helpful programs, but instead place a higher priority on family involvement.

However, Colchado said choosing how to best spend the state's finite resources to tackle this problem is difficult.

"Universities cannot in and of themselves solve the problem. It takes total community commitment," he said. "If you have parents who are illiterate, chances are they will not be able to communicate (the importance) of education, so one thing to look at is literacy programs for parents."

In other action, the board:

- Further considered a tuition indexing scheme that would raise tuition in a predictable manner over a number of years. The proposed increases would supposedly keep a lower per-year average tuition hike than in recent years.

- Reviewed modifications to the tenure system.

- Announced new collaborative efforts to expand new technologies such as distance-learning.

UC Berkeley cleared of discrimination

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The affirmative action program at the University of California, Berkeley, did not discriminate against white undergraduate applicants, a seven-year federal investigation has found.

The report released Wednesday by the U.S. Department of Education Office of Civil Rights also concluded that academic achievement at the UC's flagship campus improved during the study period.

"This is a vindication of what we do," said Patrick Hayashi, UC Berkeley's associate chancellor for admissions.

"We have constructed a legal admissions policy that furthers racial integration and results in academic strengthening of the student body. Most people think that those two things cannot happen simultaneously, but we've shown they can," Hayashi said.

The investigation was launched in response to a 1989 complaint by Arthur Hu, a software programmer who conducted his own analysis of UC Berkeley admissions.

Hu claimed that the school violated Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which includes a section that prohibits discrimination based on race, color, or national origin by educational institutions receiving federal funds.

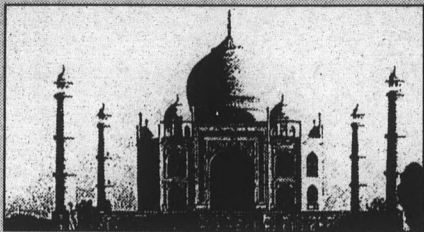

The federal investigation found that the university campus doesn't have illegal quotas for blacks, Hispanics and Filipino applicants to the College of Letters and Science.

All of the applicants "were highly qualified for admission, meeting rigorous UC standards," the report said.

Hu, who never applied to UC Berkeley, also alleged that the campus engaged in discrimination against whites by funneling ethnic minority students away from other campuses — an allegation knocked down in the report.

Investigators found that only 3 percent of freshman admitted in 1993 entered the university campus "by exception" — meaning they didn't meet academic and other standards.

Baumgartner: 'I know the system'

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

One of a series profiling the candidates for Associated Students of ASU president.

BAUMGARTNER

Junior psychology major Mark Baumgartner has been involved with the Associated Students of ASU since he came to ASU three years ago.

"I know the system," he said. "I know how to (make changes). It needs to be done, and it needs to be done right."

Baumgartner said his long experience with ASASU would help him cut through the red tape and get things done.

"ASASU has all this bureaucracy and nothing gets done," he said. "I know every aspect of ASU."

Baumgartner was raised in northern California and came to ASU after graduating from a San Francisco high school. Since starting college, his accomplishments include:

- member of the college council during his first two semesters
- founder of a club called Students Taking Initiative
- college council vice president of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences
- member of committee that brought the GOP debate to ASU
- currently the student lobbyist

Baumgartner also holds several positions in the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity and was an ASU soccer player for two years.

"And I like art and music, the same as everyone else," he said.

As president, Baumgartner hopes to have teacher evaluations published and have a cap on tuition or index it to the rate of inflation "so you'll know what it's going to be when you come in as a freshman."

"Probably most important would be (developing the) ASU experience — restoring pride and tradition to ASU," he said. "Some of the ideas are creating a spring fling like (the UofA) has and creating a room to display ASU's heritage, possibly in the Memorial Union."

Tempe lands new mall project

BY KELLY WENDEL
STATE PRESS

Shoppers, start your credit cards.

The great East Valley mall wars are over, and Tempe's the winner.

The City reached an agreement earlier this week with a consortium of developers who, by this fall, will break ground for a new 1.2 million square-foot mall at the intersection of I-10 and the Superstition Freeway.

Tempe also entered into a revenue sharing plan with Chandler as part of the agreement to place the Arizona Mills Mall in Tempe. The arrangement gives Chandler $5.3 million from sales tax revenues, including $3.5 million from Tempe.

The mall is slated to open in the fall of 1997 and will generate an estimated $2 million in sales taxes annually.

The agreement comes after more than a year of competition between two rival development groups. The Simon Property Group of Indianapolis and the Mills Corporation in Washington, D.C., were developing a mall located on Priest and Ray Roads in Chandler. The Taubman Group of Bloomfield Hills, Michigan, and the Grossman Company of Phoenix worked on the I-10 and Superstition Freeway property.

The rivalry created a fierce competition for tenants in the malls, and the two development groups sued each other. But developers say they have dropped the suits and have joined forces to work on the new Arizona Mills Mall, acting as co-developers.

"We believe this agreement benefits all parties — the customers in the Phoenix market, the cities of Tempe and Chandler, as well as share owners in our organizations," said Robert Taubman, President and CEO of Taubman Centers. "We're convinced that this development will be one of the most productive and unique retail shopping destinations in the Southwest."

Under the agreement, Mills will manage the construction and Taubman will provide accounting and other managerial services. Mills, Taubman and Simon will jointly supervise property management for the center.

The developers are looking to place 12 anchor stores and 200 retail outlets in the mall. Although developers are involved in many negotiations with retailers, Jim West, a consultant for the Taubman Groups, said the developers have already lined up a Saks Fifth Avenue outlet, an Oshman's sporting goods store and a Harkins Cinema with 20 to 25 movie screens.

"This mall is going to provide a really convenient discount, value-oriented shopping destination for anyone that lives in the East Valley," West said. "People will come from around the Valley because the Arizona Mills Mall will have broader service than your typical mall."

Leaders condemn DJs' anthem stunt

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Religious leaders called Thursday for hate crime charges against three radio station disc jockeys who barged into a mosque as part of a stunt staged in response to a Muslim basketball star's refusal to stand for the national anthem.

KBPI's Joey Teehan, Dean Meyers and Roger Beatty walked into the Colorado Islamic Center Tuesday morning playing "The Star-Spangled Banner" on a trumpet and bugle. Teehan was wearing a turban and a T-shirt featuring Denver Nuggets star Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf.

The men laughed when they were asked to stop the music and leave the mosque, and attempted to interview two worshippers during the live broadcast, which was re-broadcast later on.

"This act was designed to motivate racial, ethnic and religious hatred," said Mohammed Bashir, a representative of the Colorado Muslim Society, which issued a statement condemning the announcers' actions.

Sister Peg Maloney of the Catholic Archdiocese of Denver called the stunt "a desecration of our own national anthem."

The stunt was apparently triggered by Abdul-Rauf's refusal to stand for the anthem before National Basketball Association games. The player later agreed to stand and pray silently after the league suspended him for a game.

As for the three disc jockeys, they were suspended indefinitely without pay for what KBPI manager Jack Evans called "some very poor judgment."

The announcers "issue their sincerest apologies for the appearance of disrespect," Evans said Wednesday. "Certainly none was intended."

Evans said earlier the stunt was "an ill-conceived attempt at humor" as part of the "Torture Tuesday" segment, in which Teehan has done such things as ski naked and sit in bowls of Froot Loops.

At a news conference Thursday at the mosque just outside Denver, religious leaders demanded that the disc jockeys be fired, and prosecuted for religious hate crimes and trespassing.

Walk-on Ford shocks defending champ at NCAAs

By DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS — If anyone at the NCAA wrestling championships hadn't heard of ASU sophomore Shawn Ford before Thursday night, they have now.

Ford, a walk-on who is unseeded in the 126-pound weight class, stunned Iowa's defending NCAA champion Jeff McGinness, 6-4, in the second round in front of 12,508 mind-blown fans at the Target Center.

His improbable feat helped him join four other Sun Devil wrestlers in the championship quarterfinals of the three day tournament which begin at 11 a.m. today.

McGinness, the No. 2 seed, beat Ford, 14-1, in a dual match in Tempe on Feb. 11.

"So far this is the biggest win of my career. This is a pretty good moment right now," said Ford, who was still bloody after a McGinness head-butt opened a gash over his left eye late in the match.

Ford, who needed six stitches to repair the wound, also was on the receiving end of an overhand shot to the head as time expired. McGinness' show of frustration prompted the referee to deduct one team point from top ranked Iowa's tournament leading 32.5 points.

"We approached it from the standpoint that anything can happen," said Coach Lee Roy Smith, who didn't even know who Ford was when he came to a practice last year wanting a chance. "That's a great victory for him. We said let's go in and make your career here."

Ford, who went 18-19 this season and qualified for NCAA's by taking third at Pac-10's, worked part-time at Blimpies last year until a crack at the starting lineup moved him to quit.

"He's still a walk-on but I think that's going to change," Smith said.

If Ford wins his next match, he will assure himself of All-American honors (top-8 finish).

Senior defending national champ Markus Mollica (167 pounds), senior Steve St. John (134), sophomore Aaron Simpson (177) and redshirt-freshman Casey Strand (190) also won their first and second-round matches and are one match from achieving All-America.

Simpson, the 12th seed, pinned fifth-seeded Mike Geurin of Lock Haven (Penn.) in 6:09 of his second-round bout.

ASU sophomore Matt Suter was defeated in his second-round match and must now wrestle back.

ASU is in a three-way tie for eighth place headed into today's action.

Wright could be missing in action

By RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

The 10th-ranked women's gymnastics team's chances of a Pac-10 championship were dealt a severe blow this week with the neck injury of sophomore all-rounder Meagan Wright.

"Meagan took a pretty hard fall off of the beam Wednesday. There is no significant damage to anything," said team trainer Julie Elliott. "It is really sore. Which makes it hard to do the difficult moves she does. We are following her day-by-day...we'll see how she performs."

Wright, who has been named Pac-10 gymnast of the week twice this season, believes she will compete at the Championships which are being held 7 tonight at Oregon State.

"I'm real stiff, but I'm going to be all right," she said. "I might not compete in all the events, probably just a couple."

Despite the injury, both the team and coach John Spini believe the team is primed to bring home the title. Before spring break, the Sun Devils were on a hot streak, winning four straight meets, averaging almost 195 points.

"It will be a pretty big blow to us, but we are definitely still capable of stepping up and having a change to win with or without her," said Spini.

Putting the possible loss of Wright into perspective was senior Katie Freeland.

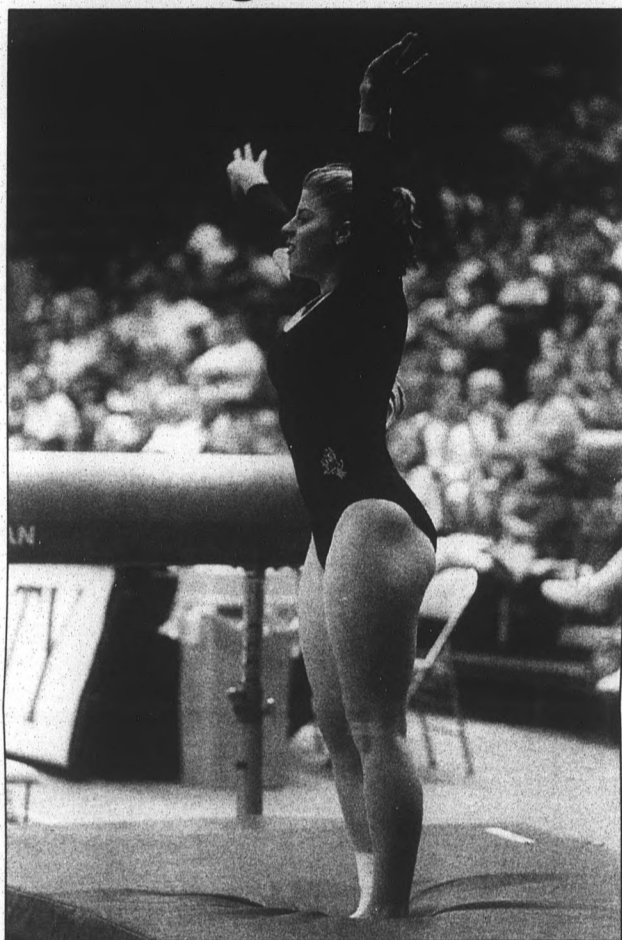

"Yes, it will hurt us somewhat. She's a leader for the team," she said. "But in other ways, no, we've got strong people that can step up in every position."

Freshman Lisa Vincijanovic believes that not having Wright will be tough. "It may hurt us a little, especially on floor. Her tumbling is wonderful," she said. "But I think we're ready."

Last year, the Sun Devils placed second, losing to UCLA by .25.

Spini especially likes the team's place in the rotation. UCLA, Oregon State and UofA all end the competition on a bye, while ASU ends on the beam.

"The rotation is good. We'll have control over our destiny more so than anything else," he said.

Sophomore gymnast Meagan Wright, is questionable for Friday night's Pac-10 Championships in Corvallis, Ore., after sustaining a neck injury in practice.

Coach Frieder experiences 'most disappointing season' of career

By DAMIAN SHAW
STATE PRESS

How did men's basketball coach Bill Frieder follow up ASU's first visit to the Sweet 16 in 20 years? He followed it up with the worst season he could remember.

"This has probably been my most disappointing season in all the time I've been coaching," Frieder said. "We didn't accomplish what we set out to accomplish and it really wasn't the type of season I'm accustomed to."

The Sun Devils finished 11-16 overall, and 6-12 in the Pac-10, a stark contrast from the season before. In the previous season ASU finished 24-9.

"I was very disappointed, I'm not going to hide that," Frieder said. "I think the only saving grace this season was that the (players) continued to play and never gave up. Everytime it looked like we weren't going to win a game, we'd win a game or two, right on down to that last one against (California)."

Probably one of the only bright spots for the Sun Devils was the play of swingman Ron Riley. Riley, who has never missed a game in his Sun Devil career, which spanned 116 games. He averaged 20.1 points a game for the Sun Devils his senior year. Riley, who finished his career with 1,834 points, amassed the most points ever for an ASU basketball player.

"Ron had a great career for us. I'm very proud of Ron and very happy he played for me," Frieder said. "Even though this season wasn't what we all wanted, he had a great career for us at Arizona State. He was a part of a lot of great victories and lot of great accomplishments, such as going to the Sweet 16."

As the season wound down and it seemed nothing else could go wrong for the team, three ineligible players that were projected to lift the team out of mediocrity next season, were arrested. Tommie Prince, Rico Harris, and George Gervin were arrested on charges ranging from aggravated assault, threatening and intimidating, kidnapping and sexual assault. The county attorney this week chose not to press charges. While the three players future with the team and the school is in question, Frieder maintains that it is not affecting the program.

"There's no controversy," Frieder said. "These kids have not been charged and it's just a matter of what we're going to decide to do with them and I think it's going to be a long while before that decision is made."

Frieder added that ASU has three scholarships to offer this spring and he expects to use them all. Frieder already has received an oral commitment from a six-foot guard Eddie House out of Oakland earlier this week. The signing date for Division I basketball is April 10. The Sun Devils added 6-foot-9 power forward Ryan McDermott from New Mexico, who signed in November.

Senior swingman Ron Riley leaves ASU as the school's all-time leading scorer, but the Sun Devils finished a disappointing 11-16 this season.

Rivals go head-to-head in series

By RON MATEJKO
STATE PRESS

The 16th-ranked ASU baseball team continues its nine-game homestand with three games against rival UofA starting at 7 tonight at Packard Stadium.

Despite defeating Dartmouth last Tuesday, the Sun Devils have dropped four of their last six games, all conference losses, but Coach Pat Murphy isn't concerned.

"In the Six-Pac there's going to be a point in everybody's season where they're going to lose four out of six," he said. "Five of these teams have been ranked in the top 12 at some point of the season, so you're talking about six of the best teams in the country."

This is the first meeting of the season between the teams, with ASU (16-10, 3-6) taking four of six games from the Wildcats (19-14, 3-6) last season. Despite UofA's winning record its pitchers have a combined ERA of over six.

Freshman left-hander Phill Lowery (5-1, 3.54 ERA) will bring his 90-mph fastball to the mound for the Sun Devils, while Matt Hendron (4-2, 6.43 ERA) will start for the Wildcats.

ASU is currently tied for fourth in the conference, but only one game separates third-place from last.

"It's real important to get off to a fast start," said

ASU wrestler looks on with disbelief

By DAN MILLER
STATE PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS — Now the that the heartbreak of missing the NCAA Championships has begun to sink in, ASU junior Danny Felix is trying to cope.

"Why?" Felix asked Thursday after watching the first session of the tournament from the stands at the Target Center. "I worked so hard. I spilled everything I had out in practice for this moment."

Felix, an All-America who was to be the No. 5 seed in the 118-pound weight class, was forced to withdraw from the tourney Wednesday when he failed to make weight by the 5 p.m. deadline. As a result of his last-second pound-crunching endeavor, Felix was overcome by dehydration and cramps which prompted the coaching staff's decision.

"It just caught up with me. It caught up with on my body," admitted Felix, whose natural weight is about 132 and has had problems with his weight control all season.

"I was in the right frame of mind, but physically I just couldn't push it any further."

Now Felix will focus on preparing for the national freestyle season in which he will be a contender at 125.

Mills Update

Freshman left-handed pitcher Ryan Mills has been cleared to play after being out since Feb. 4. Mills suffered a non-displaced fracture of his jaw when he was hit by a line drive in a game against Loyola Marymount.

Murphy said Mills should be back on the mound again soon.

"Mills isn't ready yet mentally to pitch at this level of competition," Murphy said. "He'll need a couple more outings before he's ready to go, but he's a great competitor so you just might see him out there."

Murphy said Mills has been pitching in ASU's developmental games and is experiencing no ill-effects from the injury.

Murphy also said he hasn't yet heard from the Pac-10 about any possible suspensions stemming from the brawl against USC on March 17.

Felix

"I just need a little break," said Felix, who plans to return to action in April. "But the more time I take off, the worse it will get. I just need to stay active and wrestle hard in tournaments like I would have here."

This year's tourney would have been Felix's third NCAA appearance in as many years. Now, with one year of eligibility remaining, Felix said he will strongly consider moving to the 126-pound weight class.

"Basically it's proven that the weight (118) is hard for me to make so it's probably better off if I go up a weight," Felix said.

Felix, a three-time Pac-10 champion who finished the year 27-8, had already twice beaten the tourney's No. 1 seed, Iowa's Mike Mena. A few insiders believed Felix had a legitimate shot to win it all.

"I knew I was going to win it," Felix said, shaking his head in disbelief. "I've been to enough tournaments. I was on a roll. You just know the time you put in."

But in what could arguably rank as one of the most significant setbacks in ASU wrestling history, that time and effort will not be rewarded this year.

"I've already been here twice. It was a different feeling that I had coming back this time," Felix, whispered, struggling to fight back tears. "It's hard to see it end like this."

Softball coach pleased heading into classic

By DAMIAN SHAW
STATE PRESS

The softball season is only half over, but so far ASU coach Linda Wells likes what she sees.

"I think they're emotionally ready," Wells said. "We know that everybody can play, and we're probably going to win some and lose some, but when we're playing our best there's not a lot of teams that can beat us."

The Sun Devils (16-10, 1-1) will face five non-conference foes in the Diamond Devil Classic, starting with a matchup against Southern Utah at 5 tonight at Sun Devil Club Stadium. That game will be followed by another contest against New Mexico.

Wells isn't the only one with high expectations for the team this weekend. Senior third base Alyssa Johnson said anything less than perfection would not be acceptable.

"I expect us to win five games, and I think anything less than that would be disappointment," she said. "I think spring break was a little disappointing. I think we felt we should have won all but one of those games, and that's going to really push us to win all five this weekend."

The Sun Devils split their games over the break, 3-3.

Junior pitcher Carrie James, who had a win last week against defending national champion UCLA, thinks that a good performance by the Sun Devils this weekend could key a strong drive into the Pac-10 season which begins full-fledged March 30.

"We definitely will do well against the opponents we're playing this weekend. I think if we play well we should win all of our games," James said. "That should give us more confidence going into conference play. We're doing a good job now, we just need to keep our intensity level up, especially in the double-headers."

On Saturday, ASU plays Central Michigan at 4 p.m. and then Virginia at 6 p.m. Finally, on Sunday, the squad wraps up the weekend against Southern Utah at 4 p.m.

Track and field hosts home meet

By RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

After a spring break of somewhat limited squad action, the Sun Devil outdoor track and field teams will be competing with a full team as they host the first of three consecutive meets Saturday at Sun Angel Stadium.

"I think our team/is right on schedule," said interim-coach Ken Lehman. "This meets a little bigger than our last few meets, and they get bigger as the year goes on."

The ASU Invitational begins with field events starting at 8:30 a.m., with the women's hammer throw and running events, with the women's 5,000 meters, at noon.

The Sun Devils welcome nine programs from across the U. S. to the meet. Competing with full squads will be BYU, Colorado State, New Mexico, Rutgers, Southern Utah. Schools with only partial units include Adams State (men), Central Arizona (men), Southern Connecticut State (men) and Texas Tech (women).

Home field advantage will be a nice plus for the team. Knowing the track, its surface and its little imperfections is always a plus, said field events coach Steve Lemke.

Some big names for ASU have nagging injuries, but Lehman doesn't expect it to sideline anyone for the meet, except indoor All-America Fiona Daly who has a lingering quadricep muscle injury.

All-America Shante Williams and jumper Anthony Hazard are nursing slight hamstring problems, while NCAA indoor qualifying hurdler Gaute Gunderson has a sore knee.

Lehman is happy with many of the teams performances thus far in outdoors. The team already has three provisional NCAA qualifiers. All-Americans Avia Morgan (400m) and Lorieann Adams (800m) from the running events, and Mika Laiho (hammer-throw) from the field. Also, the women's 4 X 400 meter relay team missed provisional status by one second.
