Day of judgment arrives for candidates

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

As students go to the polls today for the Associated Students of ASU runoff elections, Marc Baumgartner and Gaylord-Eric Crovetto wait for the final word.

Senior psychology major Baumgartner said his experience with ASASU will make him a more effective president.

"I know the system," he said. "I know how to (make changes). It needs to be done, and it needs to be done right.

"ASASU has all this bureaucracy and nothing gets done," he said. "I know every aspect of ASU."

Baumgartner has been a member of the college council, on the committee that brought the GOP debate to ASU and has been a student lobbyist.

He is also active in the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity. As ASASU president, Baumgartner said he hopes to publish teacher evaluations, put a cap on tuition or index it to the rate of inflation "so you'll know what it's going to be when you come in as (a) freshman."

"Probably most important would be the (developing of the) ASU experience — restoring pride and tradition to ASU," he said. "Some of the ideas are creating a spring fling like (the UofA) has and creating a room to display ASU's heritage, possibly in the Memorial Union."

Crovetto, on the other hand, said he believes that as a political outsider, he can best represent students.

"I'm just a basic student and that's why I'm doing it," he said. "I think the people in government have lost touch."

EVP candidates propose widely different views

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

The Associated Students of ASU presidential race isn't the only campaign on the runoff ballots today and Thursday. The office of executive vice president is also contested.

And the two candidates fighting for the job — junior psychology major Jason Alberts and sophomore chemistry major Summer Stuart — are bringing completely different messages to the race.

Alberts said there are limitations to what the EVP can do, but he hopes to work within the senate to build a more cohesive organization.

"There's not a lot you can change, but there's stuff you can fine tune," he said. "I want to facilitate more intelligent discussion on the senate floor, and I want to preserve objectivity on the senate floor."

Alberts worked within ASASU his freshman year as the assistant director of public relations and has also worked for REACH, the Memorial Union Activities Board and in other clubs and organizations.

"I have the experience," he said. "I want to get away from the political agendas at ASASU. I want to get back to

Geography professor captures prestigious fellowship

Jim Poulin/State Press

Ronald Dorn, associate professor of geography, was selected as a recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship. Dorn specializes in the study of rock coatings and has proposed a general theory of the origin of these coatings.

BY JEFF OWENS
STATE PRESS

Only 10 years after getting his doctoral degree at UCLA, ASU Professor Ronald Dorn is nearly at the top of his profession.

Dorn, an associate professor of geography, was selected as a recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship. He is the second ASU geography faculty member to receive the prestigious fellowship in the last three years.

Dorn's specialty is the study of rock coatings: how they originate and how they can be identified. About 25 percent of the Earth's surface is composed of bare rock covered with very thin coatings which come from chemical, biological, geological and human sources. In the past, humans have used these coatings to make rock art.

Dorn said he was particularly pleased with the way his fellowship reflects on the geography department.

"It's a real nice honor," he said. "Our department is actually the highest-ranked Ph.D. department in the University, and we're ranked 15 in the country. This Guggenheim Fellowship reflects how the department is seen nationally."

For 72 years, the John Simon Guggenheim Foundation has handed out nearly $170 million in fellowships to scientists, scholars and artists. The 1996 Committee of Selection chose 158 new fellows from more than 2,700 applicants. In addition to scientists, this year's recipients include poets, filmmakers, playwrights, novelists, sculptors and painters.

Fellowship holders can be found in 73 American colleges and universities, and many others are outside of academic institutions.

Dorn said the presence of two fellows at ASU is no small achievement for the University.

"Mostly, the Harvards and Yales get them and schools like ASU are passed by," he said.

Professor Anthony Brazel, chair of the geography department, agreed that Dorn's appointment as a fellow is a very prestigious honor.

"It's pretty spectacular to have two (fellows) in one department, let alone the whole University," Brazel said. "The whole department is excited about it and for Ron."

Dorn has researched the role of rock coatings in Arizona geoglyphs — large landscape patterns made by people who moved coated rocks to expose lighter-colored, uncoated rocks. He has also studied the Nasca lines in Peru and rock coatings of the Nabatean tomb in Jordan.

Dorn said the coverings are complex phenomena which mainly affect the color of rocks. "The Grand Canyon wouldn't look the way it does without rock coverings," he added.

Rock coatings have long been studied individually by geologists, climatologists, anthropologists, architects and other scientists within their own fields. Dorn has proposed to develop a general theory of rock coatings in a book he is working on.

"I'm about two chapters into it," said Dorn, who has already authored one book and 64 articles.

William Graf, a regents professor of geography at ASU and Guggenheim Fellow himself, said the further recognition his colleague will receive because of the award is well-deserved.

"It's an indication of the respect that he's garnered over an amazingly short time," said Graf. "He's a delight to work with and a real credit to the University."

Crovetto, 24, was born in France and came to ASU 18 months ago. He is studying for a double major in philosophy and political science.

As president, Crovetto hopes to implement a plan that would reimburse students for tuition increases if their grade point average was above 3.0. Combating racism on campus is also important, he said.

"Tuition hits your wallet but racism hits your heart," he said. "We need to do something about that."

Crovetto proposes holding a cook-out a couple of times a semester with speakers addressing the need for ASU community. "It would be kind of a unity thing," he said. "Something to bring people together in a friendly way."

Crovetto did not see his lack of political experience as a handicap in the race.

"That's the point of the campaign — I shouldn't need previous experience," he said. "When are we going to get back to the students and what affects them?"

a student-run organization for the students."

Stuart, on the other hand, said she sees the EVP wielding more power.

"What I'm going to do as EVP is keep tuition from rising by increasing funding from large corporations," she said. "It gives the corporations free publicity and it keeps up with inflation."

She added that she hopes to improve campus security.

"I think as a woman, that is something I would concentrate more on than the other candidates," she said.

Stuart said other issues important to her are increasing school pride, awareness and involvement.

"You've heard the issues before, but I think I have good ideas and ways of implementing them," she said. "I think I would have the support of the senate behind me and that would make us very powerful."

As Clinton visits, thousands protest bases

TOKYO (AP) — About 4,500 demonstrators shouted slogans and waved effigies in a Tokyo park Tuesday to protest the U.S. military presence in Japan as President Clinton began a three-day visit.

Protesters shook their fists and demanded an end to the "illegal occupation" of Okinawan land, referring to laws that require some landowners on the southern island to lease land to U.S. bases.

A cardboard effigy of Clinton was printed with the words, "Give me more land, more people, more money!" Next to it was one of a subservient Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto saying, "Yes, yes. The U.S.-Japan Security Treaty is everything!"

Police said there were no clashes or arrests.

Opposition to the American bases has been running high since last September, when a 12-year-old Okinawan girl was raped by three U.S. servicemen. Bolstering the U.S.

Japan security alliance is a top priority of Clinton's visit.

Clinton arrived in Tokyo on Tuesday afternoon, days after American and Japanese officials announced the closing of Futenma Marine Corps Air Station on Okinawa and other moves to quiet opposition to the bases. The Japanese government estimates the plan will cost $9.26 billion.

Some critics, however, demand the complete withdrawal of the American troops. In the Okinawan capital of Naha, about 250 people gathered in front of the prefectural (state) office to call for the closure of the bases, said local labor union official Nobuo Miyara.

He said about 150 of the protesters began a 36-hour hunger strike and sit-in. Okinawa hosts about two-thirds of the 47,000 U.S. troops stationed in Japan.

The plan to close Futenma and other moves would return about 20 percent of the land the U.S. military now uses on the island, but affect only a few hundred of the 28,000 troops currently on Okinawa, 1,000 miles southwest of Tokyo.

The island's governor, Masahide Ota, planned to meet Hashimoto on Wednesday to ask for assurances that the moves will not just lead to intensified military activities at other bases in Okinawa, said Seiroku Kajiyama, the government's top spokesman.

Ota was also expected to discuss how Futenma's 1,190 acres might be developed to boost the local economy as it is closed over the next five to seven years.

One town worried by the withdrawal from Futenma is Kadena, about eight miles to the north, which will host some of the Marine Corps units to be relocated.

A delegation from Kadena's town assembly went to a Japanese government office in Naha on Tuesday with a resolution rejecting the relocation of any personnel or equipment to Kadena. They are also running a local petition drive against the move.

Israeli aircraft bombard Palestinian camp, Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli helicopter gunships targeted Lebanon's largest Palestinian refugee camp Tuesday, widening their 6-day-old onslaught against Iranian-backed guerrillas. Israeli aircraft also bombarded Beirut, killing a 2-year-old girl, after a rocket attack on northern Israel.

Despite a flurry of diplomatic activity involving the United States, France and other countries, there was no sign of a letup in Israel's offensive aimed at stopping the rocket attacks by Hezbollah guerrillas.

From hideouts in the valleys of south Lebanon, the guerrillas fired more volleys of Katyusha rockets into northern Israel, drawing more Israeli airstrikes.

Five civilians, including the 2-year-old girl, were killed and 20 wounded on Tuesday. All told, 46 people have been killed — including three Hezbollah guerrillas — and 166 wounded on both sides since the hostilities began Thursday.

Most of the dead have been Lebanese civilians.

Among the wounded was a Fijian captain with the U.N. peacekeeping force in south Lebanon, who was shot Monday when he challenged guerrillas preparing to fire rockets on Israel, the U.N. force said.

The attack before dawn Tuesday on the Ein el-Hilweh refugee camp near the port of Sidon was the first on a Palestinian target since Israel began the offensive.

The three Cobra gunships fired six rockets, gutting the house of Palestinian guerrilla leader Col. Munir Makdah, who escaped unhurt, police said. Two of his bodyguards and one of their wives was wounded.

Makdah opposed the 1993 peace accord between the Palestine Liberation Organization and Israel, and broke from the group to form his own militia. He later allied with Hezbollah.

Israel hopes its raids, which have forced 400,000 refugees — 10 percent of Lebanon's population — to flee north toward Beirut, will pressure Lebanon and Syria, the dominant power in the country, to disarm Hezbollah.

For years, Hezbollah has attacked Israeli troops and fired rockets at northern Israel to drive Israeli troops from a zone in southern Lebanon they control to curb cross-border attacks.

The guerrillas fired a barrage of Katyusha rockets on Israel's northern Galilee panhandle again Tuesday morning. Israel army radio said the rockets crashed in northern Israel, causing damage but no casualties.

Hours later, three Israeli helicopter gunships swept through a curtain of anti-aircraft fire to hit Hezbollah targets in the densely populated Shiite quarter of Hay Sullom near Beirut International Airport.

They fired four rockets, damaging several buildings. Hezbollah guerrillas sealed off the area, roughed up journalists and tried to confiscate cameras and film.

Associated Press
A Palestinian guerilla inspects the damage to a building at the refugee camp of Ein el-Hilweh after an attack by Israeli helicopters. The attack on the camp, near the port city of Sidon, was the first on a Palestinian target during Israel's six-day-old war against Shiite Muslim militants.

Jewish youths, Poles march to remember Holocaust

OSWIECIM, Poland (AP) — From the red brick barracks of Auschwitz to the gas chambers at Birkenau, 6,000 Jewish young people marched somberly Tuesday to remember the 1.5 million people who died there during the Nazi Holocaust.

The "March of the Living," which retraces the steps of many Holocaust victims, has been held every other year since 1988 to help preserve the memory of the 6 million Jews who died in Hitler's death camps.

"I cannot understand how human beings could do this to other human beings," said Nicole Katz, a 17-year-old student from Hebrew Academy in Miami. Katz said her grandmother survived Auschwitz, but lost her brothers and sisters here.

The march takes place on Holocaust Remembrance Day, which is a day of national mourning in Israel. Sirens blared and work came to a halt throughout the country as Israelis observed two minutes of silence Tuesday morning.

The Auschwitz march began at the camp's gate, still inscribed with the Nazis' slogan "Arbeit macht frei" — "Work makes you free."

Under cold and cloudy skies, the youths walked the two miles in silence, their blue jackets emblazoned with the white Star of David.

They were joined for the first time by Poles, some 500 of whom marched as part of an effort to ease tensions between Poles and Jews.

Before the war, Poland had a thriving Jewish community of 3.5 million. Today, only 25,000 Jews are left, and misunderstandings and controversies persist.

Many of the disputes involve Auschwitz. Earlier this month, construction of a mini-mall across the street from the former death camp was halted after Jewish organizations complained commercialism was out of place here.

"We are very happy to hear today that the plan has been abandoned," Israeli parliamentary deputy Avraham Hershson said before the march. He warned against a resurgence of neo-Nazi and nationalist groups.

On April 6, a group of skinheads marched at Auschwitz to protest what they said was Jewish pressure on Polish authorities to stop the mini-mall project. To avoid similar incidents, the government discussed Tuesday whether to ban demonstrations at Auschwitz.

Jolanta Tesz, a 21-year-old student from Krakow, was among a group of Polish young people carrying their white-and-red national flag.

"We are joining the march to prove that there are people in Poland who are open to the history, culture and traditions of other nations," Tesz said.

Some 1.5 million people, mostly Jews, were killed from 1940 to 1945 in the Auschwitz-Birkenau complex.

STATE PRESS Editorial

No endorsement

It had been the plan of this editorial board to endorse an Associated Students of ASU presidential candidate.

But, after much consideration, we find ourselves unable to do so. We decline to endorse either candidate.

In our consideration of each candidate, we found strong skills in both. But we also found serious weaknesses in each as well.

Therefore, we will attempt to list the pros and cons of each candidate — and hope that you can come to a decision.

The two vital elements to look for in a presidential candidate are ideas and professionalism. Crovetto has the ideas; Baumgartner has the professionalism.

Crovetto, in his campaign platform, has mentioned a number of ideas that would greatly benefit the student body.

Certainly, the implementation of a "Finish in Four" program would make a big difference for students. Under that program, students would agree to take certain requirements and the University would guarantee their graduation in four years. A reduction in freshman class sizes would also be a breath of fresh air on campus.

Crovetto also seems to be on target with his calls for zero tolerance for rape and discrimination, the mandatory presence of the ASASU president at all regent meetings and a fixation of tuition increases at 3 percent a year or less.

However, ideas alone cannot carry a candidate. This is why we are not endorsing Crovetto.

Anyone can have good ideas, but political finesse is required to get the ideas made into reality. And Crovetto's behavior has made us wonder if he will burn bridges, rather than building them.

Crovetto's behavior has shown that he lacks professionalism. Certainly, this trait can be learned. We do not doubt that Crovetto would work on these skills, should he win election.

But we are unsure if the student body should take that risk.

Baumgartner, on the other hand, exudes finesse and experience.

His personal presentation to potential voters is nearly flawless. He strikes us as someone who could get things done, if elected. His experience as student lobbyist would serve him well as president.

But this would only be an advantage if Baumgartner had ideas to push.

Baumgartner's ideas seem too broad-based to appeal much. He speaks of establishing traditions and cutting bureaucracy.

But the student body needs hard proposals. Establishing a trophy case in the Memorial Union Gallery shouldn't be grounds for voting for someone.

To be fair, Baumgartner has targeted tuition, work-study and published teacher evaluations as his main legislative goals. But we are still unsure exactly what Baumgartner hopes to accomplish with those bills — or how they will benefit students.

We're truly disappointed, because we do see passion for the office in both men. Both candidates truly want to make a difference for students. Both men are excited about the opportunity that the office presents.

Combine Baumgartner's class with Crovetto's ideas, and we'd have our dream candidate.

Unfortunately, there are no dream candidates, only realities.

Therefore, we wish both candidates well — but we will not endorse either one of them.

Fans must consider what sports figures represent

What's wrong with sports fans in the '90s?

My stomach turned three weeks ago when I was watching the Mike Tyson/ Frank Bruno match. When Tyson entered the ring with his jungle-beat music blaring in the background, he was given a hero's welcome by the majority of the 15,000 fans at the MGM Grand.

First of all, why anyone would spend up to $3,000 to see a guy fight when you know he won't go more than three rounds is beyond me.

But to give a convicted rapist a standing ovation made me sick.

One image from the fight remains very clear to me. When Tyson had Bruno in trouble in the third round and the crowd started to stand up, there was one woman in the second row jumping up and down with such enthusiasm that I thought she had fallen victim to the hot-foot prank.

Doesn't she realize what she is rooting for?

As a woman, doesn't she feel any disgust toward Lying Mike Tyson?

First of all, boxing is a ridiculous sport. Tyson would likely be another lifer in some penitentiary if it wasn't for his exceptional skills at beating people senseless.

Then, to pay him $30 million for this is ridiculous. This society is so two-faced. People don't have a problem with a convicted rapist becoming an instant millionaire after spending three years in prison.

Yet Ritchie Parker can't even have a college express interest in having him play basketball for them without a public outcry. At least the woman who Parker was accused of sexually assaulting has a cut in any future professional contracts he may sign.

What is Desiree Washington getting besides people criticizing her and saying things like, "What was she doing in Tyson's room at two in the morning anyway?"

What kind of message is this sending to the public?

RON MATEJKO
Columnist

OK, you committed a serious crime, but if you possess an athletic gift we will overlook it for the sake of making money off of it.

Anybody who shelled out $50 to watch this fight should be just as embarrassed as the nimrods yelling at ringside.

Yes, I watched it. But I got the fight the old-fashioned way, with an illegal cable box.

Every time the boxing public cheers for an elaborate Michael Buffer introduction for the rapist Tyson, they are slapping Washington and all other sexual assault victims in the face.

I guess it's OK that he raped, because he served his time. It's a good thing the crime didn't occur in L.A. or we could figure out what the outcome would have probably been.

To this day, Tyson still hasn't admitted or apologized for what happened back in 1990.

With every punishing blow Tyson delivered to Bruno's lumpy cranium, the whiter my knuckles got as I hoped Bruno would muster up the energy to give this dredge of society the beating he deserves.

I wonder how many other convicted rapists who don't possess athletic talent only got a three-year sentence. It's a good thing Barry Bonds' divorce lawyer wasn't on the case or he would have had Tyson autographing a pair of boxing gloves before outfitting him in his new denims.

When Tyson enters the ring they should say something like: "In the corner to my right, from Catskills, N.Y., with a record of ... (pause) rape ... Lying Mike Tyson."

Tyson is just one of a quickly-growing list of fallen stars who were vaulted into the spotlight, but stepped back into the shadow which follows behind them.

With every news story of an athlete who beats his wife or gets caught with drugs, the search for a role model in sports becomes that much tougher.

The Dallas Cowboys have had so many people arrested for criminal action that they could now field a prison-league team.

Hopefully next time Tyson enters the ring fans will think twice before they root for him. Instead of rooting for the boxer, think about what that boxer represents.

Ron Matejko is a senior studying broadcasting.

Censorship of book does more harm than good

When censorship rears its ugly head one can usually count on an outcry from various quarters. The idea that a work should be suppressed from general readership because of opposition by some vocal minority is anathema to American tradition. Recently, however, the proponents of an open "marketplace of ideas" have been unusually quiet. These parties, usually liberal, apparently don't believe that the protections they champion apply to those that they disagree with. Time magazine opines that rejecting a manuscript is not the same as censorship, but when the rejection takes place only because of the coercion of opponents then censorship is the applicable term.

The text in question is David Irving's latest work, Goebbels, Mastermind of the Third Reich. Irving is a self-styled British historian who has made a name for himself by writing often controversial works on the Third Reich and World War II. I am no Irving apologist. For one thing I have only read a few of his works, for another some of what I've read has been pure crap. The question, however, is not whether or not I like his work, but rather whether or not others will get a chance to judge it for themselves.

I'm told (because I haven't been able to get a hold of the text — yet) that in the book Irving argues that Goebbels was more responsible for the Holocaust than Hitler was. It is doubtful that Irving will change many minds, but the fact that he has used newly-available 75,000 pages of Goebbels diaries is reason enough to check in. In some quarters, however, the very idea that anyone would dare forward a new thesis about the Holocaust is regarded as a mortal danger. Rather than let Irving's book be published, and probably critically panned, they have moved to see it suppressed and, in the process, have probably bolstered its standing amongst neo-Nazi circles.

In an earlier book (Hitler's War, 1977) Irving made a similar attempt to exonerate Hitler. His case was not good, however, and that portion of the book got drubbed. The text was not an entire waste, however. As scholar Eberhard Jackel related "His book covers much else, and not all of it is shocking; in fact some of it is worth reading and even enlightening." It is interesting to note that one of Irving's themes, as explained by Jackel, was "... that guilt for the bloody and mindless massacre of the Jews must be laid to a large number of Germans and not just Hitler." This is exactly the message of the recently-published, and generally acclaimed, Hitler's Willing Executioners by Daniel Goldhagen, though Goldhagen apports blame from the ground up rather than from the top down.

In an attempt to illustrate why the book shouldn't be printed, Time quoted the following paraphrase of a 1937 Goebbels speech: "In Russia, said Goebbels, Stalin had murdered 42,000 priests; in Spain, his agents had already killed 17,000 priests and monks by February; yet the world resounded with squawks of horror if one Jew in Germany had his ears deservedly boxed."

Why such a quote should preclude the printing of the book is beyond me. It sounds just like something Goebbels would say. The Nazis were constantly complaining of bad press throughout the '30s, and not totally without reason. Compared to Stalin during this time Hitler was a paragon of virtue. If you ever take a history test and are asked which it was safer to be in 1937 — a Spanish priest, a German rabbi or a Russian kulak — choose German rabbi. Indeed, even into the fall of 1938 (and after the "Week of Broken Glass") the official German policy was for expulsion rather than killing of Jews. If you were a German Jew, and willing to leave all your money behind, you could probably escape Germany. This was a luxury that Russian Jews (indeed Russians in general) never got. The quote, as I said before, sounds rather typical of Nazi reasoning of the time. Is accuracy any reason to not print a book? If this is the worst that Time could come up with, then the book is rather tame.

The decision had been made to print the book, why hold it back now? If Irving forwards some unsupported ideas other scholars will no doubt be quick to point them out. What disturbs me is the notion that readers must be "protected" from Irving's work. There is no shortage of garbage being printed, perhaps we should be protected from the works of JFK conspiracy nuts and Whitewater wackos. The conventional wisdom has been that bad work should be countered with good work and not suppressed, lest the suppression feed the paranoia of those looking for conspiracies against truth.

That wisdom should be followed, even when the topic in question is something as emotionally charged as the Holocaust.

ASASU decision will set precedent for future defacing

This is regarding the article in the Monday, April 15 State Press, "Crovetto returns ..." Rather it is about the Associated Students of ASU Supreme Court's decision. The decision is tenuous at best. It is based on a poor distinction that, in the future, could validate inappropriate campaign behavior.

The reason for the reversal is the distinction between "defacing" and "destroying." The court decided that "defacing" was not "deliberate destruction such as annihilation and rendering it useless." This distinction is problematic because it has set a precedent to protect any defacing of campaign material short of "annihilation or rendering it useless."

It protects future campaigners from doing anything to a sign that does not destroy it or render it useless. It seems to allow most alterations to material as long as the alteration does not make it useless. Does crossing out the entire message while leaving it readable make it useless? Does writing "bullpuckey" across it while leaving it readable make it useless?

These examples are not materially much different than what Crovetto did to Platt's sign and seem to be protected by the decision. I hope that the decision goes on to address this and other issues which make the decision problematic. Crovetto may deserve to be in the runoff. But he doesn't seem to be too apologetic about his actions. There were many preferable options to defacing Platt's sign. Hopefully if Crovetto does win the runoff he will use better judgment than he did in deciding to deface Platt's sign. Given the way he reacted: (I don't know of any apology, I may be wrong) "Yeah I did it, I was just correcting it ... no big deal," I doubt it.

Taiwan's road to democracy not as rocky as some

This is in response to Donald Valich's letter in the April 9 State Press.

While I'm not a pundit in this matter, I do know that Taiwan's democratization, as mentioned by Valich, is commendable in that it has occurred in a relatively short period of time. It's especially noteworthy that Taiwan's democratization has occurred with relatively little violence. Sure there were protests and some may have gotten a bit physical, but it's nothing that we can call really violent as compared to other countries who have tried to democratize.

In addition, there is no doubt that Taiwan's political institution is full of corruption. But, as a beginner in democracy, Taiwan is really doing pretty well. It's obvious that in almost all situations, the beginnings have always had much more serious problems. Hopefully as Taiwan further progresses toward democracy, she will mature and deal with the problems of democracy more efficiently, thereby creating an institution that will have a minimal amount of corruption. I say minimal because, after all, we're talking politics ... how clean can it be?

Taiwan does have a long way to go. But considering in just a few decades, Taiwan has transformed herself from an authoritarian government to a more democratic one, while it has taken European countries centuries, one cannot help but watch Taiwan democratize with excitement. (Although I must say that Taiwan has models such as the United States to follow ... hence aiding in her swift and peaceful democratization.)

As an Asian nation, Taiwan's situation is different from other democracy such as the United States. Yes, Taiwan is a Confucian society. And yes, Confucianism consists of a system of hierarchy. But Confucianism also has a streak of egalitarianism. For instance, in ancient China, the civil service examination system was a system of egalitarianism. Anybody can become a government official, a very prestigious position at that time in China, if one passes the exam. Although, one can argue that usually those who have the money can afford any schooling to prepare for the exam, there were people who were determined enough to overcome monetary hardship and a lower-class status to become a government official by passing the exam.

This is almost like the American dream ... if you work hard enough, you will attain your goals. In addition, I'd like to point out that in Taiwan's constitution, there is even a kind of "affirmative action." For instance, the constitution allots seats in the elective bodies of government to racial minorities and women if they are not elected. I don't remember about the minorities part, but for the women, I know that this did not have to be carried out because recent elections have gained enough women in the elective bodies.

Also, I don't know if I can agree with Valich's term "hierarchical rankings" such as gender and wealth. Confucianism hierarchy is about relationships. For instance, a father to son, an employer to employee. The emphasis is on order and people helping people. A son is expected to follow what his father says and respect him. The father has to be loving and instructive. There really is no ranking. It's about people's position in society relative to others. It's like Burkean conservatism ... order and peace should be upheld. Everyone has his/her own duties, and should try his/her best to do it. And everyone is respected for doing his/her job.

As for considering gender and wealth — yes, ideologically we should not consider them in choosing a candidate.

Realistically, we do. We do in the United States. Why do you think we have never even had a female president? (Which by the way, to me, is an embarrassment for the United States. Many Third World countries have had female leaders such as in the Philippines. Industrialized countries such as Great Britain as well.)

Why do you think most presidents are relatively well off and so are most senators? They all had money to go to Yale or Harvard in order to place them in the positions where they are at. As for "guanxi," which is Chinese for connections in English, it is alive and well in the United States, too. In fact, it's alive and well in the whole world. I disagree that Confucianism and "guanxi" are two factors that will make Taiwan's democratization extremely difficult. I think they will not help, but they will not hinder extremely. Taiwan is very cosmopolitan and up to date. It is influenced widely by the Western world. Traditional Chinese ways are still extant in Taiwan, but Taiwan has come a long way. It's constitution is set on the Western-influenced Three Principles of the People formulated by Sun Yat-sen.

Most of the leaders in Taiwan are educated abroad, especially in the United States. Taiwan is taking her time to democratize, yet certain things are unforeseen and sometimes she cannot control the pace. But give her a little time ... this is pretty obvious. Compared to many Third World countries, especially China, Taiwan's future is looking brighter than ever.

65% of ASU students say 'no preference' to religion

By KELLY WENDEL
STATE PRESS

More than 40,000 students flocked to the ASU campus this semester for higher education, but most students expressed "No preference" when it came to a higher authority.

A recent survey of ASU-student records revealed that more than 26,000 people, or 65 percent of the student population, checked "No Preference" in the "religious preference" box when registering for classes.

The figures did not surprise the Rev. Bob Marzullo, a Catholic priest at the Newman Center.

"In some ways, it might be at this time of their life, (college students) are making decisions on their own, and they decide not to have a religious preference," he said. "For whatever reason, they may want to distance themselves from the past, until they are ready to make a commitment about religion."

The Newman Center serves the spiritual needs of the 6,000 Roman Catholics attending the University.

Marzullo said the college years are a time when people want to make their own decisions.

The reasons vary as to why people chose to remain religiously unaffiliated. Some, like sophomore history major Erin Wolf, decided against disclosing her religion.

"I don't think it's really anybody's business," she said. "It's not like I am ashamed, but I don't think it's important."

Others simply have no specific ideology with which they wished to be affiliated.

"It's the same reason I registered as an independent (voter)," said sophomore biology major Ryan Horan. "I don't want my name on a list under some heading."

But many students are just irreligious.

"I have no religious preference," said Jonathan Pierce, a senior English major. "Both my parents are non-religious."

John Corrigan, chairman of the Department of American Studies at ASU, said there is a move toward less religious involvement in our modern society.

"The general trend from the most comprehensive studies is that people tend to be less involved in formal religious life, and there is less involvement in institutionalized religion," he said.

Corrigan blamed the lack of religious interest on modern industrial life.

"Industrialized society has leapt to a condition in which people have become objectified," he said. "Whatever people used to think was subjective, and the subjective aspect of human life suffers in industrialized society."

Alienation and a lack of time also contribute to a lack of religious affiliations in America, Corrigan said.

"There are a variety of reasons for the decline," he said. "A lot of women got less interested in religion because they did not perceive a wide enough role for participation in the religion. Some people also have the kind of lifestyle that does not allow the time to get involved."

ASU East gets new provost

BY TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

Less than a week after ASU West received its new provost, ASU President Lattie Coor has announced that Charles Backus will take over as provost of ASU East.

Backus, ASU East director of academic programs, takes control of the East campus this summer when the School of Agribusiness and Resource Management and the School of Technology complete their moves to the branch campus.

Backus replaces Ben Forsyth, who was the provost of both ASU East and West.

Coor appointed Backus for three years Monday. A national search for a permanent replacement will be launched during the 1998-99 school year. Backus said he would not consider taking the provost position on a permanent basis.

Coor said he is pleased that Backus accepted the position.

"ASU East, at this crucial junction in its development, needs the kind of skill, experience and dedication Chuck Backus has given the University for nearly three decades," he said.

Backus was hired as an assistant professor of engineering in 1968. He also served as an assistant dean in the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences and held the post of interim dean of the college in 1991-1992. He has been involved in the development of the East campus from the early stages, heading the academic planning committee for a year before becoming academic programs director last year.

"Chuck Backus has made important contributions to every role he has undertaken as a faculty member, researcher and administrator in the College of Engineering," Coor said. "He has crafted a strong foundation of community partnership as well as a new partnership in education on the ASU East Campus."

Backus said strong partnerships with Chandler-Gilbert Community College will provide a broad selection of both elective and general studies classes on the branch campus.

"We are calling ASU East a 'new campus for a new century,'" he said. "It is appropriate that we anchor the campus with well-established, 'get down to business' programs like agribusiness and technology, tailored to help students develop skills specifically needed in the 21st century. Students will find virtually all the courses they need for technology or agribusiness majors on site at ASU East in the fall."

Students' research set back due to major computer theft

BY GARIN GROFF
STATE PRESS

About $50,000 worth of computer equipment was stolen from an engineering lab over the weekend, setting back 15 students' research for a month or more.

ASU police are still investigating the theft, one of the largest of its kind at the University, said Allen Clark, ASU police officer. The burglary occurred in the Engineering D-Wing between 8 a.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday, he said.

Investigators don't know if the theft is related to others at the University, but are investigating that possibility, Clark said.

The state-of-the-art equipment was used by students studying oceans and the atmosphere in the environmental fluid dynamics program.

"Our operation is shut down for about a month," said Joseph Fernando, a professor of engineering who oversees the lab where the equipment was located.

He said he expects to get new equipment in about one month.

About 15 students and faculty used the equipment, he said. Most students lost only one week's worth of research data because the computers were recently backed up, Fernando said.

"If that were not done then they would have been in big trouble," he said. "We would have lost maybe a year's worth of data."

However, one student lost three months of data and will have to delay his thesis presentation as a result, he said.

Doctoral student Dan McGuinness said he lost about a week's worth of data, but added he should be able to recover it if he works eight-hour days.

"The thing I lost mostly was time," he said. "Luckily, I had a back-up."

'No Smoking' signs going up in Arizona prisons

PHOENIX (AP) — Smokers in the state's prisons have just six more weeks to light up at will inside their cells.

Starting June 1, smoking will be banned inside prisons for everybody — inmates, staff, vendors, visitors and volunteers.

"There's been an increasing number of lawsuits filed by inmates who don't smoke who complain of secondhand smoke," Mike Arra, a department spokesman, said Tuesday.

There are about 22,000 people in Arizona prisons. An informal survey done in January showed that 68.6 percent of them smoked, and that 41.2 percent of the staff smoked or used tobacco products, Arra said.

Overall, an estimated 20 percent of American adults smoke on a daily basis, the American Cancer Society said.

The sale of cigarettes and tobacco products in the prison stores accounted for $209,000 in one recent month, Arra said. Cigarettes cost between $12 and $17.85 a carton in the prison stores — compared to regular store prices of approximately $17 to $20 a carton.

Cigarettes and tobacco still will be sold in prison stores, and prisoners can have the materials in their cells — they just cannot use it unless they are outside.

The state will offer smoking cessation programs to its workers, and similar programs will be offered to inmates.

Terry Stewart, director of the department, said he thought the new policy was fair to everyone since it includes everyone.

"It is designed to clear smoke out of the air in the prisons, smoke that is harmful to both staff and inmates," he said. "If it doesn't work, the only recourse will be to eliminate smoking and tobacco products entirely in the Arizona prison system."

Teachers union launches charter school initiative

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest teachers union, a champion of public education, plans to spend $1.5 million to start five charter schools not bound by conventional rules.

The National Education Association said Tuesday that it will start charter schools over the next five years in Phoenix, San Diego, Colorado Springs, Colo., Atlanta and Oahu, Hawaii.

"The world has changed — and that's forcing all our institutions to revisit the way they do things," said NEA President Keith Geiger. "Schools are no exception."

Charter schools are independent public schools, often designed by teachers and parents, that operate without many of the constraints imposed by local school districts. A charter outlines what students are expected to learn, but this can be revoked if the school fails to meet the goals.

There are an estimated 270 charter schools educating 60,000 students in more than 20 states.

Jeanne Allen, director of the Center for Education Reform, says the NEA's charter school initiative is a sign that the teachers union believes charter schools are a good idea.

"They've been accused of being anti-school reform and this is an attempt to show they're hip, cool and with it when in fact they're not," Allen said. "It's commendable that they want to start charter schools. It's long overdue. It shows the power of the charter school movement."

But Allen said that union contracts, which set conditions for hiring and firing, school hours, days and activities, are the very restrictions that charter school organizers are fleeing.

"The NEA is trying to show that the union is not part of the problem, but part of the solution," she said.

The 2.2 million-member NEA said, however, that it's willing to look at its own contracts if changes will encourage reform.

A master collective bargaining agreement for teachers is included in the new charter school being formed in Colorado Springs, but the union agreed to waive provisions to allow for a longer school year and school day and provide greater evaluation of employees, said Kathleen Lyons, a spokeswoman for NEA.

The money the NEA has pledged to create the five charter schools will be made through technical assistance in administration, budgeting, staff training and community relations. The NEA also will underwrite documentation and assessment to be conducted by an independent team from the University of California, Los Angeles.

Information obtained on the charter schools will be shared with other public schools across town, or across the nation, Geiger said.

"Our chief aim is to move the good school strategies we learn through our charter school exploration into practice in public schools across the country," he said.

THE PRINCETON REVIEW

DENVER (AP) — Rush Limbaugh's lawsuit against a liberal radio commentator was resolved with a simple change of words.

On Monday, a federal judge dismissed a $20 million lawsuit filed by the conservative talk show host against Aaron Harber, who had named his show After The Rush.

Limbaugh sued two years ago, claiming Harber was capitalizing on his name and that listeners might mistakenly believe that Limbaugh was somehow involved in Harber's program.

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch dismissed the lawsuit because Harber agreed last year to change the name of his show.

Harber's new show? Against the Rush.

"Her eyes look very sparkly. She's very happy, very happy," Rosenberg said. "It's something she's wanted for a very long time."

The world was informed of Madonna's ticking biological clock when she joked last year that she desperately wanted to have a baby and might even take out an ad to find just the right daddy.

Turns out she didn't have to look past her own home gym.

NEW YORK (AP) — Leona Helmsley may be in trouble with the law again — and this time, her hotels could lose their liquor licenses as punishment, the Daily News reported Tuesday.

The New York State Liquor Authority is investigating whether the convicted tax cheat hired and fired employees at two New York hotels she owns, the News said.

Unidentified sources told the paper the 75-year-old hotelier — dubbed "The Queen of Mean" — has fired two executives at her Park Lane Hotel and hired a new general manager at the New York Helmsley.

Both establishments operate with liquor licenses that do not bear Helmsley's name, and that state she is no longer an officer at the hotels, the News said.

It's against state law for convicted felons to in any way manage businesses with a liquor license, said Mara Hart, the state agency's spokeswoman.

If Helmsley violated the law, she could face fines of up to $10,000 and the hotels could lose their liquor licenses. She served 18 months of a 21-month term for tax evasion and was freed in 1993.

NEW YORK (AP) — Imagine life as Madonna's wee one. Cone-shaped baby bottles? Baby togs by Jean-Paul Gaultier? X-rated first words?

We'll see, since the Material Girl has gone Maternal. Madonna is expecting her first child in November.

"She is pregnant," her publicist Liz Rosenberg said Tuesday in a telephone interview from Budapest, Hungary, where Madonna, 37, is filming the movie version of the musical Evita.

The father is Carlos Leon, Madonna's 29-year-old personal trainer-boyfriend.

Rosenberg said Madonna is "a few" months pregnant, but doesn't look it. And she hasn't really suffered from typical first-trimester symptoms, like throwing up at the sight or smell of just about anything.

She does, however, have that well-known maternal glow.

Judge sends alleged deadbeat father to jail

NEW YORK (AP) — An alleged deadbeat dad who failed to pay his wife more than $400,000 in maintenance and child support for the past three years has been ordered jailed.

Mitchell Lapkin, 49, who voluntarily returned from Arizona for the State Supreme Court proceeding, was led away in handcuffs after Justice Martin Schoenfeld said an appeals court decision found jail was appropriate.

Lapkin, who was supported by his wealthy parents while he was married, was found in contempt last year by Justice David Saxe after Lapkin's wife, Donna, complained that his last monthly payment was made with children's play money.

Donna Lapkin, 46, filed for divorce in March 1993. Her husband's lawyer, Joseph Sadow, said Saxe ordered Lapkin to pay her $140,000 a year based on $300,000 annually that Lapkin's parents gave the couple to live on.

Saxe, after learning that Mitchell Lapkin was unemployed and the parental aid had stopped, reduced his payments to $500 a month. After the play dough episode, Sadow said, Saxe ordered the husband to pay $140,000 or go to jail.

Lapkin, who now lives in Scottsdale, Ariz., says his estranged wife steamed open the envelope, substituted play money for his check, and then reported him to the judge. Sadow asked the judge to postpone Lapkin's jailing until he can have the envelope tested for tampering.

Henry Korn, lawyer for Lapkin's parents, Nathaniel,

89, and his wife, Frances, 88, said Saxe's order is based on the elderly couple's willingness to pay the money. He said they have declared under oath that they will not.

"They will not pay a penny of that judgment," Korn said.

Korn said the question is whether Lapkin's parents will be forced to pay his obligations. He called Donna Lapkin's claim that the parents promised to support her forever not true. Korn said the Lapkins never met their daughter-in-law until the day of her wedding.

Mitchell and Donna Lapkin have two sons, aged 18 and 15.

Schoenfeld asked the lawyers to schedule another hearing as soon as possible, presumably aimed at getting Lapkin out of jail.

ASU's late rally spoils Antelope's upset, 10-9

BY RON MATEJKO
STATE PRESS

The No. 19 ASU baseball team refused to lose as they rallied from a 9-1 deficit to beat Grand Canyon 10-9 in 10 innings in front of a season-low 1,059 fans at Packard Stadium Tuesday night.

Junior catcher Cody McKay hit the game-winning single on a 2-0 pitch to left field to score junior first baseman Mike Grijalva.

Grijalva started the extra inning rally with two outs and no runners on base by singling and sophomore designated hitter Kevin Tommasini followed with a single to move Grijalva to third.

Sophomore pitcher Ryan Bradley (1-1) got the win in relief, while Antelope pitcher Jeff Vilarvi took the loss.

ASU (28-16) appeared ready to lose as it trailed the Antelopes (18-24) 9-6 in the bottom of the ninth. However, the Sun Devils scored three runs in the bottom of the ninth. ASU appeared to score the game-winning run, but junior pinch runner Widd Workman was thrown out at the plate after freshman pinch hitter Damien Kolb singled home to tie the score.

ASU freshman pitcher Ryan Mills made his first start since suffering a fractured jaw when he was hit by a line drive Feb. 4.

Mills only lasted 2 2/3 innings giving up five runs on six hits. He walked six and struck out three.

Grand Canyon scored five runs in the third inning off Mills, which was featured by a three-run blast by first baseman Keith Wilson, his eighth of the season.

Antelopes catcher Jon Hamel wouldn't be outdone as he hit a three-run home run of his own in the fourth off junior reliever Kaipo Spenser. It was Hamel's eighth home run of the season and second off Spenser this year.

The Antelopes scored four runs in the inning, all unearned due to a two-out throwing error by McKay allowing Hamel to bat.

ASU senior golfers lead charge as women shoot for elusive 4th title

BY SETH LANDAU
STATE PRESS

It's not often that a women's collegiate golf program loses three key players from a national championship team and still has talent to spare. But with seniors Vinny Riviello and Linda Ericsson around for the 1995-96 season, the Sun Devils — who are coming off an unsurpassed three consecutive national titles — have reaped the benefits of leadership and experience, despite losing Wendy Ward, Kristel Mourgue d'Algue and Heather Bowie from last year's team.

Riviello and Ericsson display a mutual respect for each other's game and have become the best of friends while at college. The two came to ASU from opposite ends of the globe. Riviello hails from Mexico City and Ericsson is a native of Karlstad, Sweden.

ASU Coach Linda Vollstedt, whom Ericsson and Riviello said made them feel at home at ASU and aided their golf games, will miss her squad's upperclassmen.

"The thing that's nice about them, is they're great role models for freshman coming in," said Vollstedt, who is in her 16th year as the Sun Devils' coach. "It's reassuring to know their characteristics, study habits and work ethics, are there for the whole team."

Ericsson, 22, will compete on amateur tours in between classes at ASU as she finishes a bachelor's degree in exercise science next year. The ASU experience triggered mixed emotions from Ericsson, who said she will undoubtedly miss playing for the Sun Devils.

"It's been a hard experience," she said. "In the beginning it was tough because I was really homesick my first year. It was hard to combine the school-work and athletic part. I wanted to keep my grades up and at the same time I

Road to NBA for Riley goes through Nike Desert Classic

BY ED ODEVEN
STATE PRESS

Ron Riley strutted his stuff on the hardwood at ASU for four seasons. Now, the Sun Devils' all-time leading scorer is hoping to impress NBA scouts.

He will be one of 38 college seniors participating in the Nike Desert Classic. The Classic, a pre-NBA draft tournament will be held tonight, Thursday and Saturday at America West Arena. Tip-off is at 6 each night.

The seniors will showcase their talents as NBA scouts and general managers watch intently. Also, an estimated 150 agents will attend.

How does Riley rate himself heading into a grueling week of competition?

"I've just got to keep working hard and I think the competition will even out at some of the summer camps. And I think the rest will take care of itself," he said.

This past season, after the departure of "Super" Mario Bennett, who left school a year early for the NBA, Riley was anointed as the team's go-to-guy.

"He's got to be our leader, our scorer, our everything, or we're going to be in trouble," Sun Devil coach Bill Frieder said in December.

Despite ASU's disappointing 11-16 season, Riley lived up to his billing as a dependable scorer. He averaged a team-high 20.1 points per game.

"I'm the type of person who gets down on himself quickly," Riley said. "But when I look back on it now, I have a lot to be proud of."

Riley surpassed former guard Stevin Smith as ASU's all-time leading scorer on Feb. 15 at the Los Angeles Sports Arena. The 6-foot-5 swingman from Las Vegas, finished his collegiate career with 1,834 points. Smith had 1,673 points.

He was also Mr. Dependable. Riley played in all 116 of ASU's games during his stint as a Sun Devil.

Frieder had kind words to say about Riley. "Ron had a great career for us and I'm very proud of Ron and very happy he played for me," he said.

Note:
The seniors will be divided into four teams, with two games played each evening. The coaches will be K.C. Jones, Chris Ford, Bill Blair and Al Attles.

Tennis takes on Lobos

BY BRIAN A. ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

The ASU women's tennis team is set to do battle with the University of New Mexico at 1:30 p.m. today at Whiteman Tennis Center in its final home match of the 1996 dual-match season.

The Lobos are a bit of an unknown to the Sun Devils, but this should not be a factor today junior Anna Moll said.

"I never really care who I play," she said. "I just always try to play my best."

Even though ASU is going into the unknown, history is on its side. ASU is 16-0 all-time versus New Mexico and has a 9-1 non-conference record this season. However, matches are never decided on paper and ASU Coach Shelia McInerney expects a competitive affair.

"We don't know what to expect and sometimes that's good and sometimes it's not so good," she said.

The match will be the final home event for Julie Coppinger, the lone senior on the team.

"I'm excited for the match (Wednesday),"

Coppinger said. "I've seen past teammates get sad and maybe I'll be sad (Wednesday) but right now I'm just excited."

Coppinger has relished her role as the senior leader this season.

"I enjoy being a leader," she said. "I've had a lot of fun this season especially during the fall when everyone was new to the team."

The Sun Devils are already in the NCAA tournament and are looking for a higher seed. However, today's match should not have too much of an effect on where they will be placed in the tournament.

"I don't think a win will help us, but a loss will hurt," McInerney said. "I'm a firm believer that we should just play our matches and not worry about where we are placed in the tournament."

Moll said that the match will be a good tune-up for Saturday's match against No. 4 UofA.

"If we can prove that we can win on Wednesday we can get a lot of confidence for Saturday," she said.

McInerney also likes the opportunity that the match against the Lobos provides.

"Right now the girls would rather play than practice," she said. "The more matches we play the more fun it is for the team."

After this weekend, ASU will prepare for the Six-Pac Championships on April 25-28 in Ojai, Calif. The Sun Devils are also slated to compete in the NCAA Regionals from May 3-5 at Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif.

wanted to do good on the golf course."

Like many student-athletes, the academic workload and physical demands of a sport affected Ericsson and Riviello harshly at times.

"I gained a lot of experience. I came in knowing nothing whatsoever or what to expect," said Riviello, 22, a finance major. "Here you learn what it takes to be a team and how great it is to have a coach because they're always there for you."

Riviello relished the benefit of a coach while at ASU, something that is lacking on Mexico's Amateur Tour.

Despite an uncertain future in the topsy-turvy world of professional golf, they'll always have fond memories of ASU.

"It was an awesome experience, but it was tough," Riviello said. "We were all good friends, but there was still some competition, because everybody wanted to keep their spot."

Ericsson agreed.

"I played with a lot of good players like Wendy Ward, Heather Bowie and Emilee Klein," she said. "I learned a lot from just watching them play."

Ericsson and Riviello have stepped into the vacated leadership role of the Sun Devils. Going into ASU's final tournament before the Pac-10s, Riviello is averaging 75.38 strokes per round, while Ericsson is averaging 75.52.

"They have really peaked the last couple of tournaments and provide the kind of leadership you want your seniors to provide," Vollstedt said.

Ericsson and Riviello had an enjoyable experience in Tempe, but there is still a little unfinished business.

"To win the national championship with my team again would be the fourth year in a row, which would be great," Ericsson said.

With national powerhouses San Jose State (No. 1) and UCLA (No. 2) banging on the championship door, third-ranked ASU has no guarantees of a fourth straight title.

"We want to do it for coach because she's been great," Riviello said of winning another championship. "It would be the best thing for Linda and me to give her (Vollstedt) at least that (an NCAA Championship) our fourth year."

Senior Micheal Durante and the rest of the ASU club gymnastics team travel to Seattle tonight hoping to capture its second national club team title at the USA Gymnastics Collegiate Championships.

ENDANGERED SPECIES

Men's gymnastics club team hopes to regain varsity status of '93

BY RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

Men's collegiate gymnastics has been called an endangered sport by the United States Olympic Committee, and at ASU that description fits perfectly.

As the No. 26-ranked Sun Devil club team heads to Seattle today for the Collegiate National Team Championships, sponsored by USA Gymnastics, it must wonder whether or not it will even exist next season.

"(Coach) Scott Barclay has done a great job at ASU keeping the program going," Dennis McIntire of USA Gymnastics said.

The team has been able to keep going by holding raffles, auctions and other fund raisers.

According to senior Rob Kjar, being on a club team can be tough. The men's team currently splits gym time with the women's squad.

"It's been hard this year, because of lack of gym time," said Kjar, one of the remaining scholarship athletes from the last university-funded squad in 1993.

Currently, only 31 NCAA member institutions fund varsity squads.

"It's not just gymnastics that is in danger," said Don Robinson, who coached ASU's team to national prominence from 1968 until 1993, including an NCAA Championship in 1986. "The emphasis (at schools) is on two or three sports. All schools stress football and basketball, while here the third is baseball. Back east it's hockey."

However, recent developments are encouraging for the team, and men's gymnastics as a whole.

The USOC has put together a task force designed to strengthen its relationship with the NCAA.

"I feel the USOC is really concerned with our chances (in gymnastics) in the Olympics," said Robinson, who has been very active in keeping gymnastics alive at ASU. "It's an age thing. Athletes reach their peak performance levels at college age. So (the USOC) is concerned about the loss of training opportunities."

The task force, created in February 1995, focused on three specific target areas:

- The preserving of endangered sports, with men's gymnastics being near the top of the list.

- Encouraging emerging Olympic sports, such as team handball and women's rowing.

- Improving the visibility of existing sports such as track, swimming and wrestling.

"We are really excited," Barclay said. "All we've wanted from the beginning was a chance, and with this task force we could get it."

Kjar hopes he will see the day ASU men's gymnastics is once again a fully-sponsored sport at the university.

"I'd like to see it come back," he said. "I've been here for four years now. I'd like to see it keep going next year. I'd hate to be here at school and not be able to work out with the team and compete."

The team is confident heading into the meet as the No. 2 seed behind defending club champs UCLA.

"We feel pretty confident," senior

Micheal Durante said. "Our chances are real good ... if we hit we could win. Miami Dade (No. 3 seed) has a lot of talent, but based on their scores they haven't been hitting (well) this year."

Ron Galimore, the national men's program director at USA Gymnastics, said he is encouraged with the chances. In town for the Sun Devil Invite on March 23, Galimore said that reinstating the programs at ASU and UCLA are top priorities for his organization.

Richard Aronsen, executive director of the College Gymnastics Association, believes the climate for possible reinstatement at ASU is improving.

"It's better now than six months ago," he said. "We want to put up a bit of a fight to get it back. The ASU men's program brought credit to the institution. It was a consistent winner, had high graduation rates and did much for the community."

Dialogue with the athletic department is the key, he said. The plan for the CGA and USAG is to initiate talks with incoming ASU athletic director Kevin White in late June or early July.

"After he is on board and done settling in we will contact him to discuss the possibility of returning the men's program to varsity status," Aronsen said. "Without dialogue, progress will not be made (toward reinstatement)."

Robinson is encouraged by what he has seen thus far.

"I am very optimistic right now. I hope that they (ASU) listen. If they have the interest in the student-athlete at heart, they will do the right thing," Robinson said.

Men's swimming, women's soccer add new recruits

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The ASU men's swimming team signed Ohio high school All-Americans Kevin Butler and Rory McVay. Coach Ernie Maglischo announced Tuesday.

Butler, a senior at Thomas Worthington High, was the state champion in the 100 and 200-yard freestyle. The Worthington, Ohio native has a 3.8 grade point average and plans to major in engineering.

McVay, a native of Columbus, Ohio, who also attends Worthington, was the runner-up in the 100 backstroke and 100 butterfly at the state championship meet. McVay carries a 3.4 GPA and also plans to major in engineering.

Maglischo said that Butler will strengthen ASU's freestyle relays. Maglischo also expects Butler to become "one of the best swimmers in the world within the next few years."

McVay will help improve ASU's weak spot - the backstroke, Maglischo said.

Women's soccer signs one

ASU women's soccer coach Terri Patraw announced on Tuesday the signing of local product Erin Reinke to play for the inaugural Sun Devil squad.

Reinke, a goaltender, led Dobson High School to the state finals this past season and was named to both the All-Arizona and All-East Valley first teams this season. She was also runner-up for Arizona Player of the Year.

Patraw said Reinke will vie for the starting goalkeeper spot with University of Kentucky transfer Amy Moxley.

by Sydney Omarr

Wednesday, April 17, 1996

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): New moon in your sign coincides with fresh start, romance, vigor, initiative. Moon keynote emphasizes partnership, public relations, marital status. Decide on your direction!

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Experiment, test the waters. You'll be dealing with versatile people, many of whom are confused. Maintain perspective, don't be a victim of get rich-quick scheme. Sagittarian figures prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Read between lines, detect subtle innuendoes aimed at damaging reputation. Ask questions, verify information, proofread. Co-worker provides data much of it misinformation. - Scorpio involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on words, verbal and written. Individual who should know better makes false accusation. Make clear, "Don't let it happen again!" Climb to top perilous, but you make it in grand style!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): People express desire to be with you—emphasis on music, style, glamour, gourmet dining. Domestic adjustment could include residence, decorating, marital status. Libran states, "You're it!"

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): If you don't know what to do, do nothing! Means play waiting game. Funds not yet ready to be dispersed. Don't equate delay with defeat. Pisces another Virgo figure in scenario.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Power play! When it rains it pours! Series of events occur with rocket-like rapidity. Business proposition valid, respond accordingly. Spotlight also on marital status, addition to family.

USUALLY, BASKETS ARE JUST TWO OR THREE POINTS. BUT, IN THIS TOURNAMENT, THEY COULD BE WORTH MILLIONS.

For many of college basketball's biggest hotshots, the Nike Desert Classic is just one step away from the NBA. Phoenix Suns star Michael Finley, who played in last year's tournament, is proof of that.

Make sure you have a seat to watch tomorrow's NBA stars put on a show for the scouts at the Nike Desert Classic, April 17, 18 and 20 at America West Arena. Tickets purchased one day in advance are $10 for adults and $6 for kids ages 15 and under. Tickets purchased the day of the game are $12 for adults and $8 for kids. For more information, call 379-7800.
