New Bill of Rights to advise students of dating etiquette

By JENNIFER NETHERBY
 STATE PRESS

You have the right to say no.
 You have the right to keep and develop friendships with both genders.
 Should you waive these rights ...
 It's not the politically correct Miranda warning — it's a Dater's Bill of Rights that the Associated Students of ASU will soon publish in the ASU telephone directory.
 The goal of the project is to raise rape prevention awareness, said Keith Menard, ASASU campus affairs vice president.
 "It gives people something to rally behind," he said.
 The ASASU Counseling and Health Advisory Committee sponsored the Dater's Bill of Rights in an effort to raise rape prevention awareness among students.

 According to ASU police, eight rapes were reported at ASU in 1995, and many more went unreported.
 Joanne O'Donnell, associate dean of Student Life and head of the ASU Rape Prevention and Education Committee, said the goal is to remind students of their rights and responsibilities and to empower people.
 "The idea is to avoid students feeling they're being pressured into something they don't know how to deal with," O'Donnell said.
 Patricia Pozo, ASASU/C-HAC director, said the Dater's Bill of Rights empowers students and is educational for anyone in a relationship.

Pozo said the Bill of Rights does not

Research to reveal the tales time tells

By JEFF OWENS
 STATE PRESS

For Peter Killeen, timing really is everything.
 Killeen, an experimental psychologist at ASU, will spend the next five years researching the finer points of behavioral questions concerning timing.
 Timing has much to do with such questions as why some comedians are funny and some aren't, why some conversations go well and some don't, and why lovemaking can be sublime or disastrous.
 "Some of the world's greatest tragedies have been the result of bad timing," Killeen said. "Whether it's Michael Jordan passing a ball on the court or President (Bill) Clinton passing a bill, timing makes or breaks an event."

Killeen's research prowess has been honored twice this year. He received a "highly sought after and quite rare" grant in January from the National Institute of Mental Health, a division of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. In April, he accepted an invitation to join the Society of Experimental Psychologists, a nationwide group of 200 of the field's best researchers.

 He will carry out most of his research here at ASU, but said his work will also take him to facilities in Massachusetts and Southern California. Much of his work is devoted to constructing mathematical models to provide an understanding of various behaviors.
 "He's a true scholar," said Barry Leshowitz, associate professor of psychology. "I've known him for 25 years and he's the most dedicated research scholar in this department. His ability to move from field

Police brutality suit against ABOR, ASU police still alive

By MELODY McDONALD
 STATE PRESS

A suit filed against the Arizona Board of Regents and ASU police will resurface during a pre-trial conference in May, almost two years after a student alleged police brutality during his arrest.

Michael T. McVerry, a senior exercise science major, was arrested for disorderly conduct in August 1995 by four police officers.

A judge later dismissed criminal charges against McVerry after McVerry's lawyer filed a motion asking the judge to rule on the case following the state's presentation at his trial.

Attorneys for both parties will appear before U.S. District Judge Stephen M. McNamee on May 19, to reach a settlement or schedule a trial date.

Until then, both sides will use the time for trial preparation, said John MacDonald, director of government affairs for the U.S. Attorney General's Office.

The complaint was filed May 29, 1996 in the Arizona District Court against the Arizona Board of Regents, ASU Chief of Police Lanny Standridge, Lt. Bennett Rowe, Sgt. Marvin Tahmahkera and Officers Terry Lewis, Ron Kelley, Scott Perron and Rory Moran.

The complaint claims officers forced McVerry to the ground and arrested him without probable cause. Later, according to the complaint, either Kelley or Lewis forced McVerry's head on the trunk of the patrol car and Lewis told him he would "kick your (McVerry's) ass."

Shortly after the incident occurred, ASU Chief of Police Lanny Standridge approved an internal investigation into the incident which resulted in one officer receiving disciplinary action.

Standridge maintains his officers handled the situation in accordance to the law, but said he respects McVerry's right to pursue the matter.

"With regard to the suit itself, we treat all complaints seriously and have investigated when members of our community feel they've been harmed by police," Standridge said. "But we want the issue resolved, and I believe the outcome of this case will conform to justice."

According to the complaint, McVerry sustained mental and physical injuries and has incurred about $2,000 in attorney fees. He seeks compensation for the violation of his Fourth Amendment rights — unlawful search and seizure, to be reimbursed his attorney's fees, and to receive punitive damages in an amount to be determined at the time of trial.

Senior exercise science major Michael T. McVerry displayed bruises he allegedly received from ASU police when he was arrested for disorderly conduct in August 1995. McVerry filed a lawsuit against ASU police and the Arizona Board of Regents that is scheduled for a pre-trial conference hearing in May.

Palestinian hijacker sentenced to life in prison

By CASSANDRA BURRELL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A federal judge sentenced a Palestinian man to life in prison Monday, moments after the man sought forgiveness from the victims of a violent hijacking that left nearly 60 people dead at a Maltese airport 11 years ago.

"I cannot accept my own self what I did," Omar Mohammed Ali Rezaq said in broken and heavily accented English. "I feel guilty for what's happened."

When victims were invited to make statements, Edward Leonard of Oakville, Ontario, whose wife and infant son were killed during the incident, told Rezaq:

"In addition to whatever temporal sentence this court imposes on you, I and the families of the dead and the survivors of your wanton acts, do condemn you to the most miserable sentence of all — living with yourself for the rest of your own natural life."

U.S. District Court Judge Royce Lamberth then imposed the life term and ordered Rezaq to pay $264,000 in restitution to some of the victims. He ruled Rezaq ineligible for parole for 10 years and recommended that any request made after that time be rejected.

During a month-long trial this summer, Rezaq's attorneys argued that daily bloodshed and killing in the Mideast, and political indoctrination, had driven their client insane, making him unable to comprehend that what he was doing was wrong.

Public Defender Robert Tucker told jurors that Rezaq, who grew up under Israeli occupation in the West Bank, "snapped" because of post traumatic stress syndrome.

But the jury convicted him of a single count of air piracy on July 19.

"How could I go so far from what I am really. ... I lost my life in a spiritual way," Rezaq told the judge during a statement that included quotations of New Testament scripture on forgiveness. "At that time, I could not see that something was wrong."

Prosecutors scoffed at Rezaq's defense.

"The truth is that the legal responsibility ... lies with this defendant alone," Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Valder said.

Witnesses said Rezaq was the masked man who shoved a pistol against the head of a pilot on EgyptAir Flight 648 shortly after takeoff from Athens, Greece, on Nov. 23, 1985, and ordered him to land on the island of Malta.

Rezaq and two companions then announced they were members of the Egyptian Revolutionary Organization, a group opposed to the Camp David agreement signed by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, prosecutors said. The companions died in the hijacking.

Maltese officials repeatedly rejected demands for fuel to fly to another destination although the hijackers threatened to kill one passenger every 15 minutes. Rezaq carried out the threat with five passengers who were either American or Israeli, killing two women — including Scarlett Rogenkamp of Oceanside, Calif. — and wounding three others.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Scott Glick said prosecutors were pushing for the longest possible sentence, and they asked for restitution in order to prevent Rezaq from profiting from a book or movie about the incident.

Prosecutors declined to say why they didn't pursue the death penalty in the case, but circumstances suggest the Clinton administrative gave diplomatic assurances that it wouldn't do so in order to win the cooperation of foreign governments in capturing him.

Schools serve up record number of student breakfasts

By RICHARD KEIL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A record number of low-income students used the school breakfast program last year, which worries anti-poverty advocates who saw Congress cut funding that would help expand the program.

In the new welfare law, federal dollars were eliminated for startup programs at schools that don't take advantage of the nutrition program. About $5 million was taken from the School Breakfast budget in the current fiscal year; similar amounts will be taken from subsequent budgets.

"The money is for educational materials for local school boards to get out the word that there is a government program that is available, it's an entitlement," said Ed Cooney, a child nutrition expert at the Food Research and Action Center, which studies food and nutrition issues affecting low-income Americans. "Without the startup funds, it's going to be very difficult to get the word out."

Overall, funding for the breakfast program increased by 9 percent this year over last. But the startup cuts are troublesome to Cooney and others, particularly since some 26,000 public and private schools around the nation do not have morning feeding programs.

"It's ironic," Cooney said. "Congress wants to keep this program, but doesn't want to get the word out?"

A survey by Cooney's group found that during the 1995-96 school year, low-income students at a record 65,000 public and private schools were able to eat federally subsidized breakfasts.

Many low-income families have counted on school meal programs to ensure that their children receive needed nutrition during the day. Numerous studies have shown that kids who have eaten adequately before class find it easier to pay attention.

The survey found that in schools that offer both breakfast and lunch programs, many needy students use both. Seventy-one percent of the schools that provide lunch also serve breakfast, and 40 percent of the children who eat subsidized lunches also use the breakfast program.

The survey found that 5.6 million low-income students took part in the program on a daily basis during the 1995-96 school year, an increase of 200,000 from the year before.

The School Breakfast Program began with temporary funding 1966 as part of the Child Nutrition Act. It received permanent funding in 1975, and has existed since then under a plan in which the federal government has reimbursed schools for all or part of the cost of each meal.

Children have been required to contribute a portion of their meal costs, if their families are financially able to do so.

Rescuers aid those injured in the bomb blast that rocked the British army's headquarters in Lisburn, Northern Ireland, on Monday. Two car bombs rocked the base wounding up to 20 people, four of which are in serious condition.

Car bombs strike British army headquarters

By SHAWN POGATCHNIK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LISBURN, Northern Ireland — Bombers struck at the center of Northern Ireland's security Monday, detonating two car bombs inside the British army's heavily defended headquarters and raising fears the province could again become a battleground between the IRA and pro-British paramilitaries. Thirty-one people were wounded.

There was no claim of responsibility. Whether the attack was carried out by the Irish Republican Army or by another anti-British group might determine whether the province's pro-British paramilitaries call off their own cease-fire — and send Northern Ireland back into retaliatory violence.

The first bomb went off without warning in a parking lot inside Thiepval Barracks, the main camp for the 18,000 army troops in the British-ruled province.

A second detonated 20 minutes later near the base's hospital, apparently to ambush passing soldiers, medical staff and people wounded by the first bomb.

As flames and black smoke billowed from the blast site, soldiers and paramedics hauled off the wounded on foam mattresses. Some of the people injured in the second blast included medical staff attending to the victims of the first.

The army said 21 of the injured were soldiers and 10 were civilians — including the three most seriously hurt.

One man was critically wounded and four received serious head, chest and leg wounds. The less seriously wounded included an 8-year-old girl and an 18-year-old woman who were treated for shock and released.

Army forensic scientists estimated that the two bombs contained a total of 500 to 1,000 pounds of homemade explosive. Each left a deep crater in the pavement.

The attack inside what, until now, had been Northern Ireland's most untouchable army installation deals an embarrassing blow to the British forces. Thiepval lies in Lisburn, a predominantly Protestant suburb southwest of Belfast, and is home to the army's senior commanders, key officers' families and its elite bomb squad.

Thiepval has a single entrance guarded by armed soldiers and security cameras, with every car requiring clearance — though most are not individually searched.

Among the army facilities damaged were offices, the base's travel agency, the nursery and the chapel. The blasts smashed windows in surrounding civilian homes and at a hospital that is home to 40 senior citizens and multiple-sclerosis patients.

The Dublin office of Irish Prime Minister John Bruton said that "the barbaric bomb attacks" were "deliberately calculated to provoke further violence and bloodshed and (are) aimed at undermining the multiparty talks in Belfast."

American voter emerges as loser

Just when the summer heat is disappearing, voters are faced with more hot air than a caravan crossing the Sahara Desert.

The recent presidential debate has both Republicans and Democrats claiming victory and maybe they are both right. Bob Dole didn't fall off the platform, drool on himself or speak about World War II more than 10 or 12 times.

For his part, Clinton didn't come off as a dope-smoking, draft-dodging hippie, although there are surely people at the VFW lodge in Casa Grande who think he did.

So who really won the debate? No one really knows, but it is clear who lost: the American voter.

A presidential debate is meant to inform voters and help them develop an opinion of who they should vote for. The candidates present their arguments and solutions and it is left to the voter to decide the best person for the job. Unfortunately, Sunday's debate simply restated everything already known about the candidates. Bob Dole wants a tax cut and Bill Clinton wants to build a bridge.

In typical fashion, the old Republican war-horse used cheap-shots and personal attacks rather than well-reasoned arguments and logic. Instead of presenting a vision of the Bob Dole presidency, Dole presented a vision of himself, an image consisting of mean-spiritedness and being tragically out of touch.

Rather than engaging in an informed discussion about the mushrooming national debt, which Dole and Ronald Reagan quadrupled, Dole kept chanting tax cut, something sure to increase the debt even more. Of course, neither candidate really discussed the financial condition of America, something everyone with a future in this country should be worried about.

Which is too bad.

America desperately wants a leader they can trust and identify with. Americans are looking for a leader who does what he or she says, without pandering to special interests and double-talking voters.

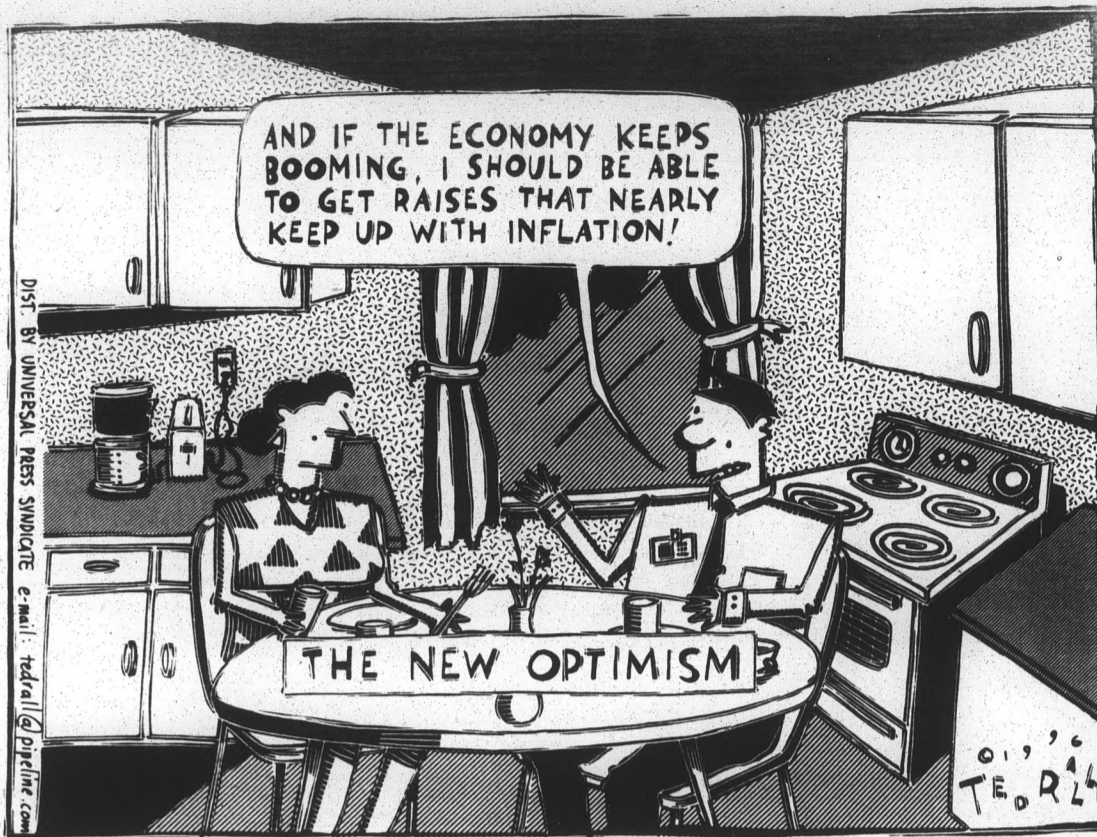

Unfortunately, finding one of these creatures anywhere near Washington, D.C., is about as possible as finding a congressman who isn't in the pockets of special interest groups.

It is no secret many Americans don't trust President Clinton. Allegations of financial impropriety over Whitewater and alleged acts of adultery have most Americans casting a wary eye in "slick Willie's" direction.

So the question is, why does Bill Clinton have a commanding lead in the polls? Because Bob Dole's platform is the standard Republican lip-service which has been dished out since Reagan was a B-movie actor in Hollywood.

Dole brought no new ideas to the debate. Instead of firing America's imagination with innovations and solutions to problems, Dole portrayed the same hackneyed tax cut package as the solution to everything from poverty to teenage drug use.

And that isn't enough for American voters to elect Dole. Without some new ideas and solid solutions, the Republican presidential candidate is doomed to be a footnote in a dusty history book.

Conspiracy theories distort reality

It's all just a giant conspiracy. I have not been able to break the information yet to determine exactly who or what is behind this dastardly plot, but ASU is knee-deep in a giant scheme to control our minds.

TIM ELIZONDO
Columnist

The plan starts off innocently enough. First, incoming freshman are asked to fill out questionnaires for student housing. The University then puts these students together in a controlled environment (dorms) and from then on it is nothing but one big monitored psychology experiment. Each dorm room is exactly alike, thus securing environmental control.

In a sense, students become nothing more than little rats being paired off in identical boxes. I haven't been able to fill in the blanks of my theory yet, such as what ideology we have been brainwashed to believe, or when the day of complete governmental control rushes in. But rest assured it involves top level officials, covert operations, and diabolical motives.

Go ahead and ponder it for a few moments. Soon it will become as clear as day. Sounds pretty convincing, eh?

Well, maybe not.

Last week as part of his televised talk show, Republican demagogue Rush Limbaugh denounced the riots at California State University at Northridge as a conspiracy by the liberal left to attract attention for the opposition of California Prop 202. According to Rush, liberal fiends hired David Duke to come out and speak so they could ambush him once he was there. But that's not the only plot to emerge in the media.

The Sept. 30 issue of Time magazine ran a feature essay on the possibility that the CIA has been secretly supplying heroin to the African-American communities for years in order to support covert guerrilla-operations in foreign countries. It's possible. Most anything in this world is. And it is the "anything is possible" mentality which is at the heart of the growing wave of conspiracy theories.

Conspiracy theorists always give me the giggles. Yet, recently I have been a bit alarmed at the growing number of people I meet on campus who give credit to one or more of the so-call "doomsday" theories. While I can understand their viewpoint and agree with certain points in relation to the "facts" these people cite, deep down I just want to tell these people to turn off the TV, get off the Internet, and come outside and join the rest of us in this place we call "reality."

Now I know that it may seem a bit egotistical to suggest my way is the "right" way and, who knows, perhaps those nasty feds have got my name on some list for "Pony-tailed Subversives who need to be rubbed out when the New World Order arrives." But somehow I just don't think so. I'll give you one example why a New World Order can never happen: Arizona State University.

There are piles of forms that have to be filled out, lines that need to be stood in, people in the offices who sometimes give off that dazed and confused look when you request help - all mere symptoms of what a bureaucracy is. It's long, it's tedious and in many ways it is ineffective. To suggest that somehow it is possible that everyone working for ASU is getting some cryptic message in their decoder rings that is connecting them to "Big Brother" is ludicrous.

We need to stop looking over our shoulders, shake off these modern day "Boogie Man" stories and stop creating grand delusions of paranoia.

Conservative politicians do stupid things sometimes and people sometimes do drugs because they choose to. Yammering about "plots" and covert programs sells papers and increases ratings. But, in reality, all it really does is create a bunch of suspicion and paranoia. We drop out of political action because the government is out to "screw us anyway." We refuse to watch the news with any critical view because it's "liberal" and it's not giving all those innocent conservatives a fair shake. Meanwhile, Rush and the X-Files will key us in on what the truth really is.

Perhaps you disagree. That's fine. You see, I am not really a senior studying communication. My purpose here at this school is actually much grander. I'd let you in on it, but the mothership has given me direct orders not to.

Indians fight use of obscenity on landmarks

According to Webster's Comprehensive Dictionary, International Edition, "squaw" is an American Indian woman or wife.

TINA HOLDER
Columnist

Mr. Webster is way out of date.

The word squaw comes from the Algonquin language group and did originally mean woman. That was several generations ago.

In the "Thesaurus of Slang" by Esther and Albert E. Lewin, squaw is defined as a synonym for prostitute. This is a little bit closer.

History time ....

When the French trappers and traders in the Hudson Bay area learned this word from the Algonquin speaking Natives, the trappers promptly began to use it by walking into the camps of the Native people they were trading with, grabbing their genitalia and saying in a loud, clear voice, "Squaw!" They weren't asking for a wife — they were asking to get laid.

Since many of the Algonquin dialects differed, the word squaw meant woman to some people and vagina to others. This was the translation that moved westward with the expansion of the Europeans across Turtle Island. It was adopted by everyone that heard it to mean an Indian woman.

Hollywood used it quite frequently when making their infamous "cowboy and Indian" movies and perpetuated the misinterpretation to the rest of the American public.

Native people would never refer to their wives or daughters as squaws.

Another serious misinterpretation concerning this word is that Indian men treat their women like a lower class citizen, a slave or concubine. This was never the case, nor is it the case today.

Allow me to give you a few examples:

During the gourd dance — a warriors dance performed by veterans — the women dance on the outskirts of the circle; never inside with the men. Chauvinistic? Quite the contrary. The women dance on the outside to protect the men who are calling blessings down upon the earth. Blessings meant to keep the dancers who follow them safe within the circle. Without the women to protect them, the gourd dancers may become distracted or fall prey to spirits meant to trick them.

In many traditional families the woman will walk a few paces behind the man. Sexist? Not hardly. The woman walks behind the man voluntarily, in order to help keep him on a good, straight path.

During a woman's moon time (menstrual cycle); she is not allowed to participate in ceremony. Unfair? Nope. In the spiritual context of many different Nations, a man is said to get his power from the Creator through a series of cleansing and purifying ceremonies. A woman gets her power directly from the earth — the mother of all. Her power is seen to be stronger than a man's because she is cleansed and purified naturally, through her moon time. She, therefore, does not need to participate in these ceremonies and is considered more powerful, spiritually, than a man. During her moon time a woman's power is at its strongest and can render even the most powerful ceremonies ineffective.

These are not new concepts. They are traditions of Native people handed down from generation to generation. Our women are not the disrespected, slave labor that some books and movies would make them out to be. Women have a highly respected and honored place in Indian society.

Which leads me back to the squaw issue.

Two highly motivated and respected young Native American women have taken it upon themselves to remove the word "squaw" from all landmarks in the state of Arizona. They came up with the idea about a year ago and then found out that two young women tackled this same issue in the state of Minnesota and that state agreed with them, removing the offensive term from all state landmarks.

One of the young women here in Arizona is of Cherokee and Choctaw lineage and the other is Pima and Lakota. They have launched a massive letter writing campaign to public officials both at the state and national levels. They have been interviewed by radio and television stations locally and have made their battle known on the Internet, which has brought them a plethora of support letters from concerned Indian and non-Indian people from across the country.

Many times we, as university level students knowledgeable of the world around us, tend to stick our heads in the sand and say: "It doesn't affect me — who cares," while younger people stand and try to make a difference.

The two young women I speak of here are both straight-A students and both are only 15-years-old. They are taking a stand to remove a name from the state of Arizona that they and many Indian people find highly offensive and that they are exposed to on a daily basis. Huge signs scream "Squaw Peak," or "Squaw Peak Parkway." Traffic reporters on radio and television talk about the traffic on the Squaw Peak Parkway in their reports every five minutes during the morning and evening rush hours.

I applaud these two young women and their courage — the courage of Native American warriors — to change something that they can no longer stand by and watch.

Republicans should fear facts

I am writing in response to the "Republicans Aren't Worried" letter published on Oct. 2. Jon Ramsey took great pains in belaboring some of the events which have plagued the Clinton Administration, but which have little relevance to the issues that the vast majority of Americans really care about. Let's take a look at the administration's record on the issues that the American people really care about:

- * Established the office of the drug czar, to step up the attack in the war on drugs.
- * Has reduced the deficit for three years in a row. First president to do so since Harry S. Truman.
- * Has created 10 1/2 million new jobs in the past 4 years.
- * Signed the minimum wage law, making it easier for families to survive without both adults having to work more than one job just to make ends meet.
- * Signed the Family Medical Leave Law, to make sure that parents could take time off from work when a child is born, without having to worry about losing their job.
- * Working with Vice President Al Gore, Clinton has reduced the size of the federal government to the lowest it has been since John F. Kennedy was president.

Now, let's take a look at what Bob Dole has really done in his 35 years in Washington:

- * Voted against creating the Drug Czar's Office.
- * Has consistently voted for tax increases in his 35 year tenure as a member of Congress.
- * Wants to help Newt Gingrich slash Medicare and Medicaid, letting it "wither on the vine."
- * Has consistently opposed the Minimum Wage Law, while he received $66 an hour to debate on the floor of the U.S. Senate.
- * Has consistently opposed family and medical leave.
- * Has consistently voted to make student loans harder to get, despite the fact that he went to college because of the American GI Bill.

These are the facts which will decide this election. Look at the facts. Look at the numbers. Republicans aren't scared? Then explain to me why both Dole and Jack Kemp had to visit Arizona within a month of each other. Why would both of the top GOP standard-bearers feel the need to visit Arizona, a state that has not voted for a Democrat since 1948? Face the facts. If Republicans in Arizona aren't scared, they should be.

Pennies can aid in change

I am writing this proposal to challenge the faculty, staff and student body of ASU to save their pennies to help better our campus and local community. I would like to call on all of the aforementioned groups to join in an effort to raise money to help worthwhile causes and groups that make a difference in our everyday world.

I recently read an article in Parade magazine, which spoke of a project organized by the students in a New York City middle school. The project was called "Common Cents," and simply involved getting students, parents, teachers and community groups to save their spare pennies. During the course of one year, these students collected four-and-a-half tons of pennies. These pennies were used to buy clothes for the homeless and to stock soup kitchens. As one young lady so aptly put it, "People treat pennies like trash. But if you put them all together, they really add up."

What I would like to propose is for student organizations, faculty/staff organizations, fraternities/sororities, residence halls and office pools on campus to begin saving their pennies in a common receptacle. It could be a tin can or an old milk container (rinsed out, of course). This is an idea that everyone can participate in, yet it costs us nothing except the spare pennies that weigh us down all the time. Just think how much we could help our community and campus with the money that we would amass together. Moreover, I would like to invoke a sense of competitiveness into this challenge by proposing that a traveling trophy be made to recognize the group that raises the most money each academic year. In other words, who "made the most cents."

Some groups have participated in this "harvesting of pennies" and have raised hundreds of thousands of dollars. We are the fourth largest university in America; I believe that we can do just as well — or better. I am more than willing to help coordinate this effort, as the graduate student affairs vice president within ASASU. I believe that this project could be a successful perennial program on our campus. I ask for your help and participation in this worthwhile endeavor, remembering full well that "a little change can change a lot."

I specifically challenge the Faculty Senate, classified staff and student organizations on campus to promote this idea to their memberships. If we all cooperate on this project, we will most surely make a significant difference in bettering our community. By the way, we wouldn't want to be outdone by a group of middle school kids, now would we? That would make no "cents" at all. If interested, please contact my office at 965-3161.

ATLANTA (AP) — Don't count on any political lectures from Sen. Sam Nunn once he retires at the end of the year. He's learned a lesson from House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

The House ethics committee is investigating a college course taught by Gingrich, R-Ga., to determine whether it was a political activity that violated tax laws.

Says Democrat Nunn, who will give guest lectures at Georgia Tech: "I am going to go see my good friend Newt and say, 'Newt, give me a checklist of all the things you did.' And then I'm going to avoid those."

"I'm getting out of politics," Nunn said Monday. "They're not going to be getting any political lectures from me."

A former chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Nunn has been in the Senate for 24 years. He will serve part-time and for no pay at Tech, and said he will probably practice law.

"As my wife asks me every day when I get home and tell her about another non-profit opportunity, she says, 'How are you going to make a living?' I think that is a relevant question," Nunn said.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — James Lovell Jr. is finally getting his due in his hometown, more than 25 years after the mayor scrapped plans to name a museum wing after the Apollo 13 commander.

His popularity as commander of the Apollo 8 flight prompted wooing from the Republican Party and a promise in 1970 from city officials to name the science wing of the Discovery World Museum in his honor.

It never happened. Mayor Henry Maier scrapped the plan, saying he was worried that Lovell would come after his job.

"Old Mayor Maier was sort of paranoid about it," Lovell told the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel.

Not to worry. This time, the whole museum will be named for Lovell. He will place his footprints in cement at the front door Oct. 18 with the inscription "Don't Be Afraid of Tomorrow."

Lovell was played by Tom Hanks in Apollo 13 about the 1970 space flight crippled by an explosion.

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Martin Sheen praised a new documentary that profiles the life of William Brennan, calling the retired Supreme Court Justice one of his heroes.

"It's hard for us to look anywhere ... that he has not touched," Sheen said. "And thank God for him."

Sheen, 56, who narrates the film, may get a chance to meet Brennan. Nancy Brennan has invited Sheen to meet her father in November.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Madonna's latest single "You Must Love Me," from the soundtrack for the soon-to-be-released film Evita, debuted Monday on the World Wide Web. The film stars Madonna as the ambitious Eva Peron, wife of former Argentine President Juan Peron.

The song, which will be released to radio stations Wednesday, can be found on Warner Bros.' Online Jukebox and on the company's home page.

Madonna isn't breaking new ground here. Rock star David Bowie last week released his latest single, "Telling Lies," exclusively on the Internet.

Who won debate depends on who answers

BY LIDIA E. KELLY
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

Monday's big question at ASU was who won the presidential debate — it depends on who you asked.

"Clinton wins," said Lee Bolin, president of ASU Young Democrats/Students for Clinton/Gore '96.

Bolin said President Clinton offered a "striking vision of America," adding that a number of students switched voter registration from Republicans to Democrats Monday.

"ASU is a Clinton/Gore country," Bolin said.

Robert Kerrigan, chairman of the College Republicans, said Dole came out ahead, and the former Kansas senator "came across as a man from middle America."

Kerrigan said Dole addressing youth in his closing remarks was a necessity.

"Even if Dole does not win," he said, "the Republicans will go into the 21st century with youth supporting them."

Kerrigan called the debate an "old time" one, saying that it resembled the debate between Kennedy and

Nixon. "It wasn't like the attacking shows we watched during last few debates."

Ed Delci, adviser for ASU Young Democrats, picked Clinton as a winner.

"President Clinton left the debate with a prize," Delci said. "This prize is his re-election in November."

Delci said Clinton clearly addressed all the key issues and his focusing on education is "future oriented," while Dole is "stuck in the past."

Richard Dagger, a professor in political science, said that the debate was "interesting but not exciting."

"It was not a real debate," Dagger said. "It looked more like two separate press conferences, where candidates answered the questions."

Dagger said that while the debate was useful in outlining the differences between the two candidates, in general such debates are not necessary.

"Everyone has pretty clear opinions going into the debate," he added. "Those who favored one of the candidates before the debate do so after the debate."

A CBS news poll on Sunday night showed that 50 percent of viewers chose Clinton to "win" the debate, while 28 percent favored Dole.

Dagger said that neither of the candidates clearly presented their agendas on educational and drug issues.

"Dole never said what is his position on private schools," he said. "Clinton never clearly commented the drug problem."

Donald Dalgleish, professor in military science and adviser for the College Republicans, said he believes that not many people are influenced by debates.

"Today people don't care about the issues the candidates carry," he said. "What they care is the image and visuality."

Dalgleish said that young people are not impressed by wisdom or experience. "They react to a sudden impact and spontaneity," he said.

He said he agreed with Dole's stand against using tax money to pay for education.

"Who the hell entitled students to go to college on someone's expenses?" Dalgleish asked. "The other thing is that there are too many damn students to be in college anyway. Why should we pay for their going to bars every Friday or watching sports events?"

Hayworth lauded for work in Walnut Canyon expansion

FLAGSTAFF (AP) — U.S. Rep. J.D. Hayworth, attacked by his opponent for opposing environmental causes, is earning praise from one corner after passage of a bill to expand Walnut Canyon National Monument.

Betsy McKellar, co-coordinator of the Friends of Walnut Canyon, applauded the efforts of Arizona's entire congressional delegation in backing the expansion proposal. But it was Hayworth, a Republican and the bill's sponsor, who drew the biggest praise.

"He worked really hard, he really did," McKellar said.

The bill was passed last week at the end of the 104th Congress and is expected to be signed by President Clinton. It would expand the federal park south of Flagstaff by 50 percent to protect 800-year-old Sinaguan cliff dwellings found outside its old boundaries.

Hayworth cited the Walnut Canyon expansion as another example of the "balance" he is trying to create when dealing with environmental issues.

Steve Owens, Hayworth's Democratic challenger in the 6th District, downplayed the bill's significance. He said it was not controversial and was merely a gift from Republican leaders.

Owens said GOP leaders almost let the Walnut Canyon measure go "down the tubes" because of their insistence on controversial amendments to the legislation.

Under threat of Clinton's veto, Republicans eventually stripped the bill of measures that would have given ranchers preferential grazing rights and increased corporate sponsorship of national parks.

Owens also noted Hayworth has voted to cut the budget of the Environmental Protection Agency and denounced his opponent's efforts to create a review commission for the national park system.

Hayworth said he voted for the review commission as a way to make the system more cost-efficient. He said criticism that smaller parks would be shut down and auctioned off were "blatant untruths" intended to scare voters.

Supreme Court shields judges from taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, saying its hands were tied by potential conflicts of interest, shielded some federal judges Monday from having to pay certain taxes imposed on most Americans.

Four justices who might have a financial stake disqualified themselves from considering the case. Their action kept the court from gaining a quorum of six jurists to take the case, and thereby sealed the outcome in a way that could benefit them financially.

Monday's action, although not a precedent-setting decision, had the effect of upholding a lower court's ruling that said it was illegal to begin requiring federal judges to pay Medicare and Social Security taxes in 1983 and 1984.

The order, one of more than 1,500 issued as the court began its 1996-97 term, was extraordinary. Court officials could not immediately find the last time the justices had been so stymied.

The result is a victory for 16 federal judges who sued the government in 1989 over tax-law amendments enacted earlier in the decade.

Those amendments for the first time extended Social Security and Medicare taxation to the president, vice president, members of Congress and the president's Cabinet, federal judges and all new employees of the federal government's executive and legislative branches.

The 16 federal judges, all already appointed to their lifetime jobs when the tax laws were changed in 1983, contended that new taxes unlawfully diminished their salaries and thereby threatened judicial independence.

The impact of Monday's order may not be limited to those 16 judges, however. Justice Department lawyers, who had urged the Supreme Court to tackle the case, argued that the lower court's rationale might prohibit Congress "from applying any increase in the rate of any tax, including the income tax, to sitting judges' salaries."

In other action, the court:

- Rejected the appeal of Theodore Kaczynski, who contended that his prosecution on Unabomber attacks has been so tainted by news leaks that the government should forfeit its right to make him stand trial.
- Let a New York public school district continue to make charitable community service a high school graduation requirement.
- Passed up a chance to decide, in a Texas case involving allegedly outrageous behavior by junior high school boys, whether educators violate federal law when they fail to stop students from sexually harassing other students.
- Rejected a challenge by five Wisconsin anti-abortion protesters to a federal law that protects access to abortion clinics.
- Turned down the bid of former Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker and two others to quash charges brought by Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr that they plotted to hide profits from a multimillion-dollar cable television deal.

• Heard arguments in a dispute over a federal law that requires cable television systems to carry local broadcast stations. Cable operators told the justices the "must carry" law violates their free-speech rights, but government lawyers said without it, some broadcast stations might be forced out of business.

In the tax dispute involving federal judges, Justices John Paul Stevens, Sandra Day O'Connor, Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Stephen G. Breyer disqualified themselves from considering the case. All had been federal judges before the 1983 law change.

Although Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Antonin Scalia and Anthony M. Kennedy were federal judges before 1983, they agreed to participate in the case — apparently convinced they were ineligible for the favorable tax treatment because of their respective promotions since then.

Only two of the justices — David H. Souter and Clarence Thomas — were not federal judges as of 1983.

"Since the effect was to create an affirmation of the lower court's ruling, they were probably more circumspect than they had to be," New York University law professor Stephen Gillers said of the four justices who disqualified themselves.

"There is something called the 'rule of necessity,' which allows the court to act when the interest in having the matter decided is deemed more important than the potential of having a conflict," he said.

Gillers, a legal ethics expert, said it's possible the court might some day revisit the issue if one of the four disqualified justices is replaced by someone who was not a federal judge in 1983.

The Constitution, which makes federal judgeships lifetime appointments, further protects judicial independence by stating that judges' "compensation ... shall not be diminished during their continuance in office."

The 16 judges' 1989 lawsuit contended that exposing their salaries to taxes they were not required to pay when they took office amounted to an unlawful diminution of compensation.

A claims court ruled against the judges but a federal appeals court — comprised of three judges who took office after 1984 — reversed that ruling and said the 16 judges who sued need not pay the challenged taxes.

The appeals court sent the case back to the claims court to decide what refunds should be made. Each of the judges had paid over $40,000 in challenged taxes by then.

The Clinton administration took the appeals court's decision to the Supreme Court.

It is unclear whether any judge who waited longer than six years — the statute of limitations on tax issues — to challenge the 1983 and 1984 tax changes still may do so.

George Bush 'troubled' by Clinton's character

BUSH

(AP) — Former President George Bush said Monday he remained "troubled" by character questions surrounding President Clinton, but stopped short of suggesting that Bob Dole turn it into a campaign issue.

"If Bob Dole goes after some of the contemporary trials and tribulations (faced by Clinton), he's going to get clobbered," Bush said. "He'll get clobbered by his opponents and he'll get clobbered by the press."

Bush tried to avoid election-year commentary during an appearance before an international gathering of Best Western hotel executives. But he waded into the fray during a question-and-answer session.

Bush made a veiled reference to Clinton as an example of the declining level of trust in public officials, recalling his own failed re-election campaign four years ago.

At the time, Bush painted Clinton as a closet liberal and warned voters to "hold onto your wallet" when listening to his opponent's campaign promises of a middle-class tax cut. Clinton instead raised taxes in the first year of his administration.

"I'm deeply troubled when people are asked of any public servant, 'Do you believe what he says,' and the answer is no," Bush said.

But asked whether Dole should emphasize problems dogging the Clinton administration, including allegations of fraud in an Arkansas land deal and the misuse of secret FBI files by White House staffers, Bush hesitated.

"I don't know that I'm in a position to give advice," he said. "You saw what happened to me."

But despite "ugliness" that has crept into contemporary politics, Bush said public service still requires leaders with a vision for the future.

"I think politics is a noble calling," he said. "If people sit on the sidelines, then you get the lowest denominator of people running our country."

Bush trumpeted the foreign-policy triumphs made under his administration and that of his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, saying the Soviet empire crumbled as the result of a "war of ideas."

But he warned against complacency in future relations with other countries, saying the United States should not give up its role as the world's only remaining superpower.

"The chance of a nuclear exchange between superpowers is now nonexistent, but we can't get complacent," Bush said. "We can't neglect our obligations in funding a well-maintained defense."

In a far corner of the Phoenix Civic Plaza complex, about a half-dozen people protested Bush's appearance.

The group demanded an investigation into reports that Bush, as vice president under Reagan, headed a covert operation that flooded the streets of Los Angeles with crack cocaine as a way to fund the Nicaraguan Contras.

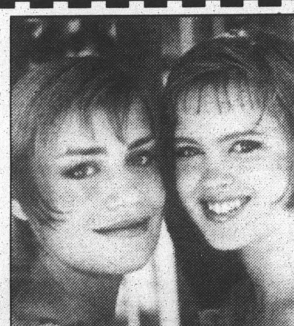

"George Bush was running the operation," said Maria Elena Milton, a Democrat challenging U.S. Rep. John Shadegg, R-Ariz., in the 4th District.

"We have hundreds of thousands of principally Hispanics and blacks in jails. We've got so many tough-on-crime politicians out there, but why don't they go after the crack cocaine kingpin of the world? That's George Bush."

The demonstrators unfurled a banner calling Bush the "Grand Old Pusher of the Republican Party," playing on the Republicans' GOP monicker.

Bush, ushered to a waiting car immediately after his speech, was not available to answer questions regarding the cocaine allegations.

Symington defense calls for prosecutors to specify charges

(AP) — Gov. Fife Symington's lawyers said Monday his trial defense lacks focus because prosecutors refuse to itemize how he allegedly lied to lenders.

Symington's lawyers asked U.S. District Judge Roger Strand to order federal prosecutors to specify what portions of various Symington financial statements are allegedly false.

Because of the amount of information on each of the 20 or so statements which Symington submitted to potential or current lenders, it's unfair for prosecutors not to have to itemize what specific information is in dispute, Symington's lawyers argued.

"That's an enormous amount of information to have to prepare to defend if we have to assume that every entry is false," said defense lawyer Luis Mejia. "It makes it very difficult to prepare for trial."

Assistant U.S. Attorney David Schindler said the requested information had been provided in grand testimony and other material already turned over to the defense.

Symington, a former real estate developer, is scheduled to stand trial March 18 on a 23-count grand jury indictment issued June 13. Among other things, it accuses Symington of submitting dramatically varying financial statements to lenders as he tried to obtain new loans or get out of guarantees he'd made on old ones.

"This is a wholesale false entry case," Schindler told Strand.

No time for reminiscing as ASU heads to L.A.

ASU head coach Bruce Snyder, shown here before last year's game against UCLA, let it be known Monday that the only thing that should be on his players' minds this weekend is the Sun Devils' game with the UCLA Bruins. The two teams meet at 12:30 p.m. Saturday at the Rose Bowl.

BY DUSTIN KRUGEL
STATE PRESS

When the No. 4 ASU football team arrives in Los Angeles Friday night to play UCLA Saturday in the Rose Bowl, family and friends beware.

"We are not going to Disneyland," Head Coach Bruce Snyder said. "This is nothing but a serious trip to L.A. I'm going to tell them (the players) I don't want any families around. It's all business. You'll see them after the game."

Snyder said in his Monday press conference that swapping stories with friends and relatives is not an option. ASU has over 50 players on its roster who are from California.

"Parents and friends are well intentioned. They all love little Johnny to death and they want a lot of his time, (but) little Johnny is there to do business," he said.

The Sun Devils (5-0, 2-0 Pac-10) will need all their attention when they face an upstart UCLA team (2-2, 1-0), which beat Oregon impressively 41-22 in Eugene last Saturday. ASU has not played a road game since a 38-29 victory over California on Nov. 11, 1995 and this game is the first of six straight games against Pac-10 competition.

"I think it is going to be a nail-biter," Snyder said of this weekend's game, in which ASU is a four-point favorite. "They (UCLA) are in the hunt and we are right in the hunt (for the Rose Bowl). That is what college football is all about."

Against the Ducks defensively, the Bruins contained an Oregon offense to just 266 yards. The Ducks came into the game ranked No. 1 in the Pac-10 in total offense. ASU is now ranked No. 1 in the conference and ninth overall in total offense with an average of 479 yards per game.

The Bruin defense has been a team strength, despite changing defensive schemes to an unorthodox defense that often lines up with three defensive linemen, three linebackers and five defensive backs. The Bruins start only one

Phoenix gets 1st win of season with 5-2 victory over Boston

BOSTON (AP) — All the Phoenix Coyotes needed was a little change of scenery.

The team that couldn't beat Boston when it was known as the Winnipeg Jets did it on its first try as the Coyotes on Monday night, getting three first-period goals in one minute, 49 seconds to beat the Bruins 5-2.

"We have a lot of new guys on the team and a new identity," said Mike Gartner, who had his 17th career hat trick to give the franchise its first victory over Boston since 1992. "I don't think those past things carry over much."

Gartner, Norm MacIver and Oleg Tverdovsky scored 109 seconds apart and Nikolai Khabibulin stopped 30 shots to give the Coyotes their first win. They lost their opener, 1-0 to Hartford on Saturday.

As the Jets, the franchise had lost its last five to the Bruins and had won just three of 23 games in Boston.

"I'm not really concerned about what they've done in the past," rookie coach Don Hay said. "It's what we do in the present and the future that concerns us."

Ironically, the Coyotes were still playing in front of thousands of empty seats. The announced attendance of 13,649 — that's not including the no-shows — was the Bruins' smallest since moving to the 17,565-seat FleetCenter last year.

The crowd saw Boston, which was coming off an inspiring opening-night tie over the New York Rangers, give away the game early. After Boston took a 1-0 lead on Jeff Odgers' spin move in front 2:16 into the game, Phoenix scored four consecutive goals.

Adam Oates had a giveaway in the Coyotes' zone and Keith Tkachuk broke out, taking it all the way to the Bruins crease before Gartner knocked in a loose puck at the 7:11 mark.

Seventy-three seconds later, Craig Janney's

Pittsburgh rumbles past Kansas City 17-7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — If Neil O'Donnell got $25 million, what's Mike Tomczak worth?

The 33-year-old career backup who replaced O'Donnell, who led the Steelers to the Super Bowl last year then took the New York Jets' money, threw for 338 yards Monday night to lead the Steelers to a 17-7 victory over the Kansas City Chiefs.

It was Pittsburgh's fourth straight win since an opening-day loss in Jacksonville and the first loss for the Chiefs in their last 12 regular-season games at Arrowhead Stadium dating to Dec. 4, 1994. It was also their second straight loss after starting the season with four wins and left them a game behind Denver in the AFC West.

So while O'Donnell sits with a separated right shoulder for the 0-6 Jets, Tomczak, who was 20-of-30 Monday night, excels after 11 years in and out of lineups in Chicago, Green Bay, Cleveland and now Pittsburgh.

He had lots of help Monday night.

Golf in 2nd heading into final-round play

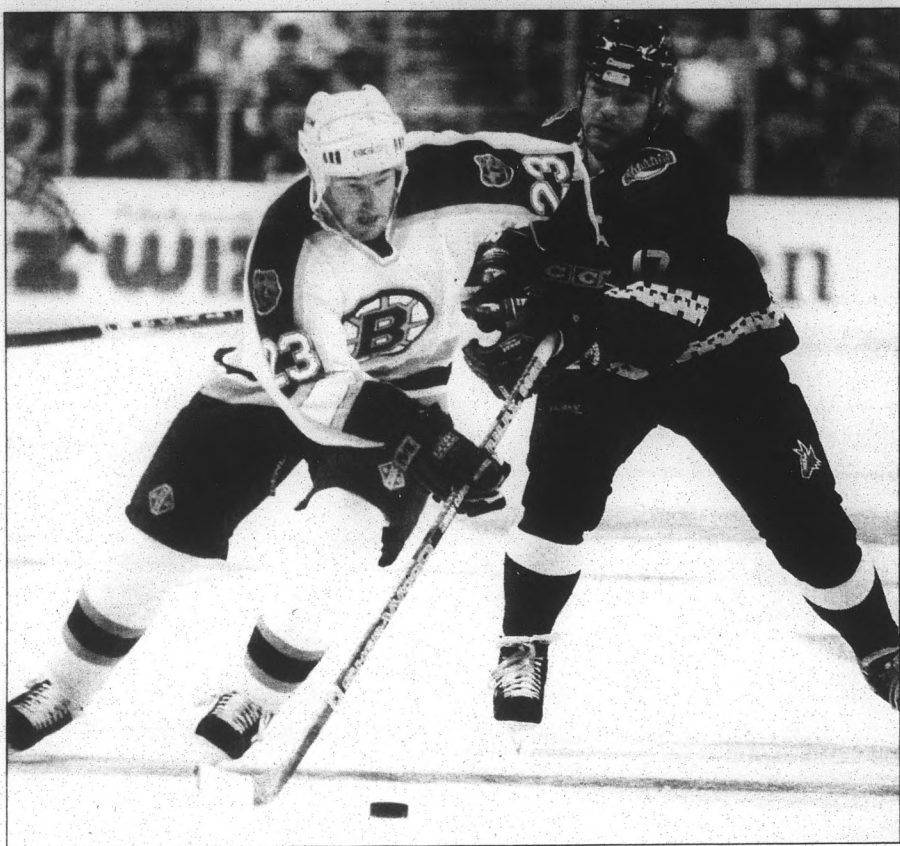

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The ASU men's golf team finished the second round of the Ping-Golfweek Preview Invitational in Lake Forest, Ill. Monday in third place with a score of 598.

Heading into today's final round, the Sun Devils trail leader Oklahoma State (592) and UNLV (593), Clemson (600) and East Tennessee State (605) round out the top five.

Individually, senior Scott Johnson leads all Sun Devils. Johnson shot rounds of 75 and 70 on Monday to put him in a third-place tie at three over with UNLV's Ted Oh with one round to play. The only other ASU golfer in the top 20 is senior Chris Hanell. His two-round total of 149 puts him in a tie for 12th place.

The tournament concludes today with final-round play beginning at 8:30 a.m. CDT.

shot from behind the goal line deflected in front, where MacIver sent it through traffic and past the out-of-position Bill Ranford. Thirty-six seconds after that, Tverdovsky put in a slapshot from the point to make it 3-1.

In the final minute of the first period, Gartner broke free over the blue line and went in on Ranford all alone to make it 4-1. Ranford stopped just six of 10 shots before Scott Bailey relieved him to start the second.

"He (coach Steve Kasper) had to do something," Ranford said. "Everything that I tried to do wasn't working."

Everything that came at the net just went in."

Said Kasper: "If anyone thinks I'm putting it all on Billy, they are making a mistake, because that's not the case."

Bailey stopped all 14 shots he faced, including a sprawling save with nine minutes left that temporarily denied Gartner his 17th career hat trick. Gartner eventually got his third goal on an empty-netter with 40 seconds left on a feed from Tkachuk, who passed up the open net.

Tkachuk had three assists.

underclassmen — sophomore defensive end Damon Smith.

"What we are trying to do defensively? I want to know myself," UCLA head coach Bob Toledo joked via teleconference Monday. "It's mass confusion over there. It's an attacking style of defense. We don't line up the same way all the time. We come from all different angles of the field. We play a lot of man-to-man and that is good and bad."

After already losing to No. 7 Tennessee and No. 14 Michigan on the road, Toledo said ASU's offense presents just as much problems as those two powerhouses did.

"Offensively, I think they run the ball better than Tennessee and they throw the ball better than Michigan," he said of the Sun Devils.

UCLA on offense is led by sophomore quarterback Cade McNown, who has completed 50 of 95 passes for 591 yards. After a surprising freshman season, McNown has tossed only two touchdowns, while opponents have intercepted five.

Against the Sun Devils last season, McNown was brilliant in a losing cause and passed for 289 yards.

"He obviously has a lot of courage (and a) great work ethic," Toledo said of McNown. "He's a talented young guy. But he's a young guy still making mistakes that get you beat at times. We just have to not put too much in his hands."

While the Bruin passing attack has been inconsistent, UCLA has shown a resurgence in its running game in recent weeks. Last year, UCLA was set with current Miami Dolphin starter Karim Abdul-Jabbar at tailback, but there was a big question mark surrounding the Bruin tailbacks this season.

Skip Hicks has apparently answered the critics with a career-high 175-yard performance against Oregon, including 153 in the third quarter and two touchdowns.

"It seems to me that UCLA found themselves a bit with their running attack," Snyder said.

Time change

Kickoff for the ASU/USC game on Oct. 19 at Sun Devil Stadium has been changed to 12:30 p.m. to allow ABC to broadcast it regionally. As of Monday, only 2,400 tickets remained for the contest.

carries, his fourth straight 100-yard game. It included Pittsburgh's only touchdown, a 6-yard run with 2:41 left in the third quarter.

Charles Johnson caught six passes for 125 yards and the Pittsburgh defense limited Kansas City to only one trip inside its 20 — the second-quarter drive on which Marcus Allen's 6-yard TD run gave the Chiefs a 7-0 lead.

It was the 107th rushing TD of Allen's career, putting him one ahead of Jim Brown and three behind Walter Payton on the career list. Allen also passed Tony Dorsett for second place behind Payton on the all-purpose yardage list.

For a long time, it looked like that would hold up.

Pittsburgh got inside the Chiefs' 5-yard-line three times in the first 42 minutes and came out with just six points — field goals of 21 and 32 yards by Norm Johnson. A third field goal attempt early in the third quarter was blocked by Kansas City's Derrick Thomas. Johnson capped the scoring with a 43-yard field goal with 1:10 to play.

The blocked field goal didn't give the Chiefs the lift they should have received.

Starting at their own 14 on their next possession, the Steelers took just eight plays to score, the biggest a 45-yard pass from Tomczak to Johnson. Tomczak also had a 12-yard completion to Andre Hastings that put the ball at the 5. One play later, Bettis bulled in for the score and then Tomczak hit Mark Bruener for the 2-point conversion that made it 14-7.

This was a game that might have been played in the playoffs last season had the Chiefs not been upset 10-7 by Indianapolis one game short of the AFC championship game. It matched Kansas City's Marty Schottenheimer against Pittsburgh's Bill Cowher, who got his coaching start under Schottenheimer in Cleveland.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST
by Frances Drake
Tuesday, October 8, 1996

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't be alarmed if there's some competition on the job. These joint ventures will only make you look better. Benefits also come from the help of loving friends.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Make sure that you are kind and giving to an unfortunate friend or family member down on their luck. Also, accept a social invitation from a prominent person on the job.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Make sure you keep up with chores around the home front. A surprise visitor from the past could stop in or call unexpectedly. Be alert for new money-making opportunities.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It is important to consult with a partner before making a financial decision. Don't fuss too much if this person doesn't agree with you. It is important to listen, as you could learn something.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Call it a bit of luck, but your charm brings revealing news about a job opportunity. Domestic plans also fall into place. A career move made a while ago pays off.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) A surprising personal twist in your life gets you back on track. A cantankerous co-worker needs your understanding. Don't be impatient.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Your best bet for happiness is to follow the advice of a trusted friend. Don't be stubborn or you will regret it. Now is the time to concentrate on fun, rest and relaxation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov.

21) Remember that old saying, business and pleasure don't mix, now especially. Your priorities should be centered on the home front. Plan a special romantic evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you use extra drive on the job, you will excel and come out on top. Remember, a career block is only temporary. A dream you've had becomes a reality.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) There could be a minor delay in a promotion you were counting on. This is only a temporary setback. In fact, your financial future looks very promising.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) A friend could be argumentative, but stand up for your rights. You will make your point, as you are more level-headed. Stress cooperation in financial interests.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) If a deal sounds too good to be true, then it probably is. Always remember to read the fine print on any agreement you sign. A problem on the job could mean some overtime.

YOU BORN TODAY have a very strong sense about right and wrong and have no tolerance for injustice. Early in life, if asked to cheat on a test or homework, you often find yourself taking some flak from your peers because you always take the high road ethically. Later in life, this integrity serves you well. You can imbue this same quality in those around you. A career in diplomacy or law appeals to you, as well as the academic life.
