Eight cars towed as ASU makes way for Clinton's visit

BY MELODY McDONALD
STATE PRESS

In preparation for President Bill Clinton's visit today, eight students' cars were towed Wednesday morning from Gammage North Lot 3.

The students' cars, which were parked in the lot overnight, were hauled to Lot 17 so construction crews could work, said Linda Riegel, director of Parking and Transit Services.

"They had to be moved," Riegel said. "Either the cars were blocking stage construction or were in danger of being damaged."

When barriers were placed in front of the parking lot Tuesday night, 82 cars were in the area, Riegel said. But because there were night classes going on at the time, the cars were not towed. When Parking and Transit employees returned at 5 a.m. Wednesday morning, 22 cars remained. At that point, every attempt was made to contact the car owners, Riegel said.

"We made contact either by phone or voice mail with all of the owners, and none of them were unsuccessful as far as getting through," she said. "They had until 9 a.m. to relocate their vehicles. Then we started removing vehicles based on which ones were in most danger or intrusive first."

Tempe to tempt trick-or-treaters with party

BY DEANNA DARR
STATE PRESS

Usually running around on Mill Avenue with a mask on is a sign of larceny, but it will be encouraged tonight.

The 10th Annual Mill Avenue Masquerade Adventure will take over Tempe this Halloween night, providing an alternative to trick-or-treating for tiny tots and a good party for older kids.

The masquerade, sponsored by the Mill Avenue Merchant's Association, will begin at 6 p.m. There will be a public parade at 7 p.m. that starts at Maple and Fourth streets, loops through downtown Tempe and works its way back to Mill Avenue and Fourth Street.

The celebration then moves to Hayden Square with a $3 charge for everyone older than 11.

A costume contest begins at 8 p.m. in Hayden Square. The contest will offer thousands of dollars in prizes donated by local merchants. Registration for the contest is $10, and categories include:

- Children — best 12 and under.
- Adult — most frightening.
- Best historical.
- Celebrity look-alike.
- Cartoon.
- Best fantasy.
- Science fiction.
- Best group (two or more).

The Hoodoo Kings will perform at the Hayden Square Amphitheater, and the Valley Art Theatre will have a free showing of The Crow at 7 p.m.

Doris Walker, director of operations for MAMA, said she's not concerned with security for the 10,000 people expected to attend.

She said MAMA has been working with Tempe Police and local security agencies to provide security.

Some street closures will affect traffic.

Fourth Street will close at 8 p.m. and reopen at 5 a.m. Friday. Temporary "no parking" signs have been posted to forewarn visitors to the area.

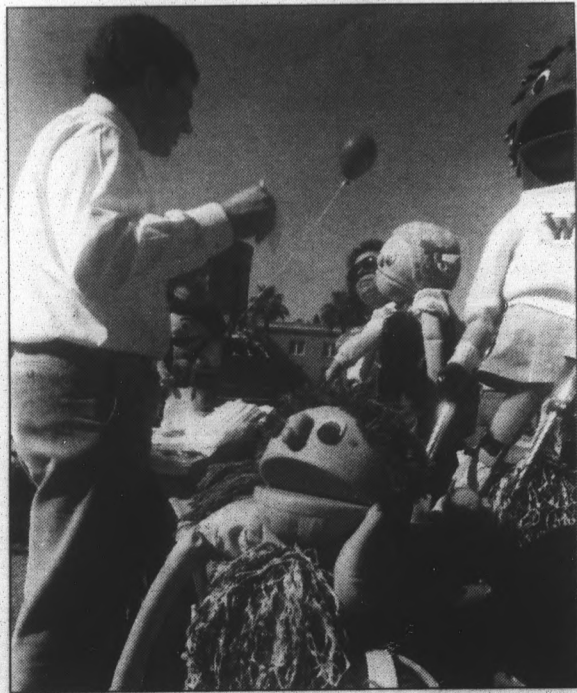

The parking area to the west of the America West Building on Third Street will be closed from this morning until Friday morning.

Walker added that this will be the first year there will be a charge to get into Hayden Square. She said she hopes this will help keep people from getting out of control.

"People tend to think a little more about what they do when they pay to get into something," Walker said.

She said there will be plenty of security in place because "people get really weird with masks on."

Debate continues over proposal to raise requirements for non-resident students

BY BECKY HILL
STATE PRESS

Opposition is mounting against proposed changes to the Arizona Board of Regents' non-resident tuition waiver policy.

The initial target of change — raising the minimum GPA requirements — has been met with relative acceptance.

However, the suggested addition of a community service requirement and offering students the waiver only at the first point of enrollment — and not later on in their college career — is generating debate among students, faculty and Regents alike.

Regent Kurt Davis, the driving force behind the changes, has heard the arguments against the policy changes. However, he said he stands behind his proposal, which will receive its first reading at the Board's meeting on Friday at ASU in the Alumni Lounge. Public comment will be heard at 1 p.m. and Board discussion will begin at 4 p.m.

"If a student is unwilling to give something back to the community assisting them in receiving an education, then maybe we ought not recruit an individual who harbors those attitudes," Davis said.

He added that he still opposes offering waivers after the first semester.

"If a non-resident can afford to pay full tuition the first year, then they can afford to pay their own way the second, third and fourth year," he said. "I've said it time and time again. This is not about hurting out-of-state students, this is about making sure the kids of Arizona's taxpayers who need the waivers and deserve the waivers get them first."

Students who receive the waivers have their tuition covered by state money.

Two categories of waivers are offered to students — academic waivers and special talent waivers. The latter group are offered almost exclusively to fine arts students studying music.

One out-of-state student who receives a special talent tuition waiver is Associated Students of ASU Sen. Aaron Smith.

Smith voiced his objections to the policy change in September when he first heard of the suggested 20 hours of community service requirement.

"It's not that the 20 hours is unreasonable, but for someone who already works and goes to school and practices 'til midnight, then goes home and studies, well, that is a lot."

Smith and Professor Richard Strange, director of bands, also expressed concern about the proposed policy change affecting recruitment.

Strange said, "We now compete with the best schools in the country for our music students, and if the extra requirements took them outside of their field it might be something that the best students in the country might not want to do."

Smith said if the community service hours could include not only the free performances the music students already give for senior citizens and grade school kids, but also practice and rehearsal time, most students probably would not protest.

"But if the Regents want us to go out and pick up garbage," Smith said, "that would be ridiculous."

Regent Judy Gignac said she is worried about the impact on non-traditional students.

"When a working mom returns to school, where is she supposed to find time between school, work and taking care of the kids to volunteer?"

Sara Bush, a freshman journalism major, was one of the eight who had her car towed.

"This is such a disaster," Bush said. "I want to file a formal complaint. I'm mad."

"They left a message on my parents' message machine, but they didn't leave a time. (And) we think it might have done some damage to the car. I don't know, but my car is not working right."

Riegel said three of the car owners will be charged a $30 towing fee because they failed to remove their cars even after someone personally spoke to them.

The other five, who were not actually spoken to over the telephone, will not be charged. Bush was not charged.

Former CIA analyst accuses Pentagon of deception

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Records of U.S. military units deployed in the Persian Gulf War contain abundant evidence of exposure to Iraqi chemical weapons, a former CIA analyst said Wednesday. He accused the Pentagon and CIA of engaging in "a pattern of deception and denial."

"There's no way you can even begin to get a complete picture of what happened over there unless and until they declassify every single unit log," said Patrick Eddington, who resigned from the CIA earlier this year.

During the 1991 Gulf War, Eddington analyzed satellite photos of Iraqi troop movements. Later, he and his wife, Robin, also a CIA analyst, began collecting information on their own initiative about the possible use of chemical weapons during that brief conflict. Robin Eddington also resigned from the CIA earlier this year.

"The idea that the Defense Department has engaged in any sort of conspiracy to cover up any information regarding Gulf War illness is simply not true," Pentagon spokesman Bryan Whitman said. "We have nothing to hide. As we learn new information, we provide it as rapidly as possible."

"All of the information Mr. Eddington brought forward was looked at by the CIA and provided to the presidential advisory commission," said Mark Mansfield, a spokesman for the CIA. The commission is reviewing allegations that U.S. troops were exposed to chemical agents during the 1991 Gulf War.

Mansfield said Eddington's views on the issue "were not suppressed in any way, shape or form." He said they were given a full review and "agency analysts did not agree with his conclusions."

In an interview with The Associated Press, Eddington said logs of the 101st Airborne Division from January 1991 showed that during a period of two or three hours "one unit repeatedly detected chemical agents" using kits issued to every soldier.

He also said that top Pentagon officials including Defense Secretary William Perry and Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, falsely denied the existence of evidence of U.S. forces' exposure to chemical agents during the conflict with Iraq.

Eddington said that in May 1994, Perry and Shalikashvili issued a memorandum that "stated categorically, no caveats on this, that there was no information, classified or otherwise, that indicated that any kind of chemical agent exposures had occurred or that any munitions were in the theater. That was a false statement."

Eddington alleged a government cover-up in a letter published by The Washington Times on Dec. 7, 1994. He elaborated on his accusations in an interview published Wednesday in The New York Times.

Despite persistent reports of unexplained ailments among Gulf War veterans, the Pentagon has said repeatedly it has found no medical evidence of a so-called Gulf War syndrome or gas poisoning.

In June, when it first announced the possibility that troops may have been affected in the incidents, the Pentagon said only about 300 to 400 Army engineers may have been exposed.

More recently, Pentagon officials have said that thousands of U.S. troops may have been exposed to nerve gas when Iraqi ammunition dumps were blown up in March 1991.

China stifles critics, sentences dissident to 11 years in prison

By CHARLES HUTZLER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — The trial lasted four hours, and the verdict was harsh: 11 years in prison for Wang Dan, one of the last active leaders of the 1989 Tiananmen Square democracy movement.

With Wednesday's swift judgment, China's Communist Party leaders signaled their resolve to silence critics. But they also revealed worries about anti-government sentiment and the potent memories of the military assault that crushed the 1989 demonstrations.

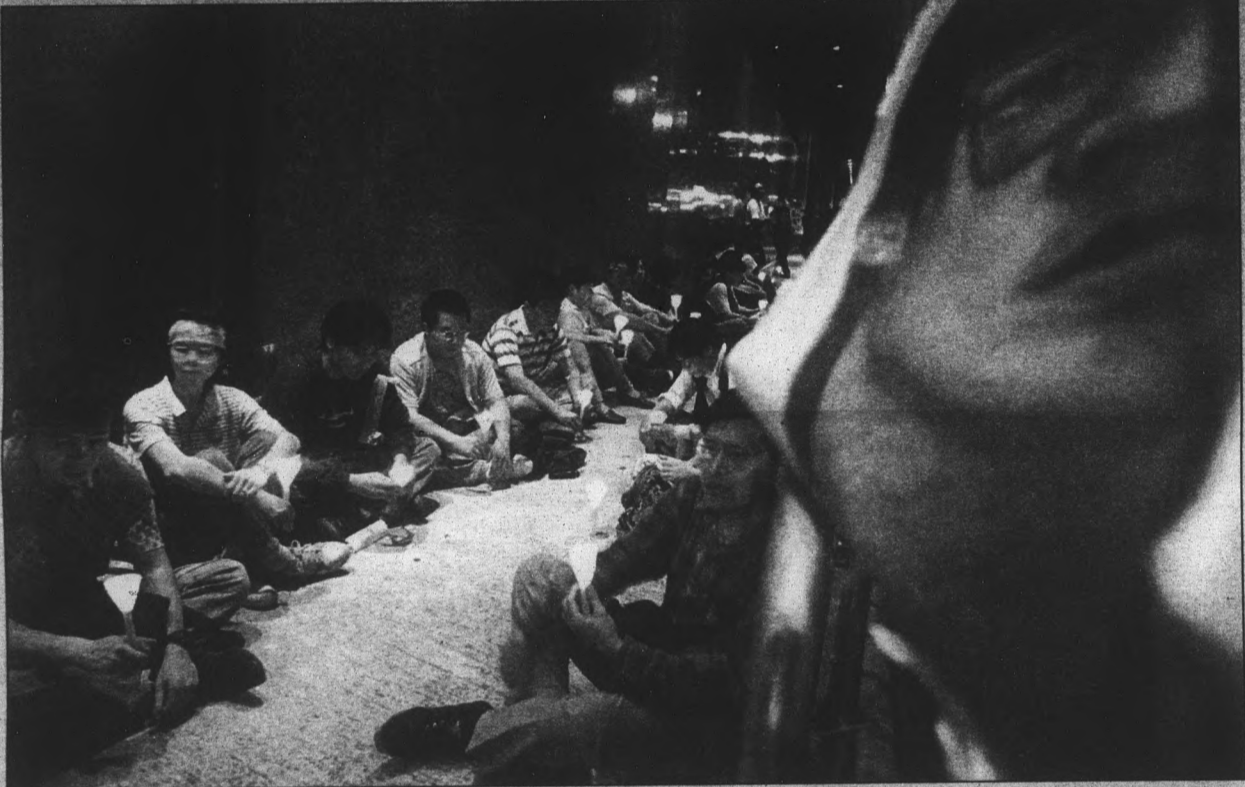

"The student movement was such a big thing that nobody can forget it," said a man standing outside the courthouse where Wang was tried. "Just because we don't talk about it openly doesn't mean we don't care," said the man, who refused to be identified.

For many, Wang symbolized that movement. As a Beijing University student, he led marches and called for a student union free of government control. After the crackdown, the government put him atop its most-wanted list, flashing his picture on TV nationwide.

Wang served 3 1/2 years in prison only to emerge unrepentant. Over 27 months — before he was taken away by police in May 1995 — he criticized the party in essays published abroad, met with other activists and petitioned the government for democracy.

His writings and meetings were used as evidence to convict him Wednesday of plotting to subvert the government.

Wang tried "to mold public opinion to subvert the government. ... He instigated people by saying that 'it is time to turn our words into actions,'" the state-run Xinhua News Agency said in announcing the verdict.

Portraits of Wang Dan, one of the best-known Chinese dissidents, hang above protesters who staged a sit-in protest outside the offices of the Xinhua News Agency, China's de facto embassy in Hong Kong on Wednesday. In a secretive trial lasting less than four hours, China convicted the leader of the 1989 Tiananmen pro-democracy protests of trying to overthrow the Communist government.

The trial in Beijing Intermediate People's Court took place amid the usual secrecy and unusually heavy police presence. No foreign reporters or observers were allowed to attend, despite requests by the United States and other governments.

Police cordoned off the courthouse in western Beijing, stringing up white rope to keep foreign reporters and curious locals away. Dozens of uniformed and plainclothes police patrolled the area.

Officers confiscated videotapes from at least two foreign cameramen and detained for seven hours a three-man crew from ABC television. An Associated Press reporter was prevented from reading a notice board outside the court, forced into a taxi and threatened with expulsion if he returned.

Police shooed reporters away from Wang's family home. "His actions were not criminal," his mother, Wang Lingyun, said in a telephone interview. "This is so inconceivable."

She saw her son Wednesday for only the second time since he was detained 17 months ago. The first was two weeks ago.

GOP worried about early election-night call in presidential race

By AMANDA COVARRUBIAS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO — An early TV call of the presidential race could prompt Bernie Tanner to stay home Tuesday night and skip voting entirely, a thought that dismays Republicans worried about close Senate and House races throughout the West.

"If they told me the (presidential) election had been won, I wouldn't go out after 6 o'clock to vote," said Tanner, 77, of San Diego, who did not disclose her political preferences in an interview.

"Why should I if my vote doesn't count?" It's not only Tanner, of course, but the fact that there are literally millions more like her who might skip their Election Day right if it's the end of the day and the television networks have made it abundantly clear that the presidential race has been settled without them.

"I call it voter turnout suppression," California GOP chairman John Herrington said Wednesday. "This directly impacts turnout in a very big way. ... It's hard to imagine a worse example of public policy or public responsibility."

The stakes are huge. California alone has 52 congressional races, Oregon five more and Washington nine. Perhaps two dozen figure to be competitive on election night, potentially decided by a few thousand votes or less. Oregon has a close Senate contest on the ballot, as well.

Republicans and Democrats alike remember all too well the example of 1980, when then-president Jimmy Carter conceded defeat to Ronald Reagan with the polls still open out West. It's an article of faith among Democrats that Carter's comments caused turnout to plunge and cost the party seats in Congress.

This year, polls close nationwide at varying times — from 6 p.m. EST to midnight EST. In California, the polls close at 11 p.m. EST.

Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour says declaring a winner in the presidential race before all the polls close probably most hurts turnout for the losing party. Once the contest for the White House is finished, "the networks are telling people 'Now there's no reason to go. The election's over,'" he said.

Network policy is not to declare a presidential winner in a state until a majority of polls in that state have closed. But this year, if the race is as one-sided as opinion polls indicate, Clinton could clinch the magic 270 electoral votes needed to win two hours before voting is done out West.

Lane Venardos, a CBS News vice president, discounts such worries. "We have uncovered not one whit of actual evidence that because some TV network called a presidential race before the polls closed anybody ever decided not to go to the poll or to leave the poll before casting his vote," he said.

ASU parking people botch Clinton visit

The parking powers that be are at it again. The situation: Eight tuition-paying students had their cars towed from Gammage North Lot 3 after they failed to move them per a Parking and Transit Services order.

The reason: Your friend and mine, President Bill Clinton is coming to campus and the space was needed to construct a stage.

Linda Riegel, director of Parking and Transit Services, said the owners of the cars were told to get them out of the lot before 9 a.m. Wednesday. Eight of those people failed to do so and, as a result, their cars were towed to a different lot.

What's the problem with that?

Well, officials at Parking and Transit Services made direct contact with only three of the illegal parkers. The other five received messages on their answering machines notifying them that their cars would be ousted if not dealt with before the deadline.

Still a little fuzzy?

The problem is that the five students who were contacted via an answering machine did not receive the message until it was too late. One woman didn't get a message at all because the parking people called the owners of the car — her parents, who had left for work already. To us, that seems just a wee bit screwy.

We are aware that the parking people probably did not have as much time to prepare for the visit as they would have liked. We would guess they probably found out about the not-so-impromptu presidential excursion around Friday or Saturday. It wouldn't have taken that much effort to throw a couple of barricades with some explanation attached out there on Monday. It doesn't sound like a lot more time, but another day would probably have made a difference.

There is one light note to this tale of woe, however. Apparently, the parking people are not going to charge the five students who received — or didn't receive, in this case — the message. We bet this is the first time the parking people haven't charged auto offenders. The other three, however, will be charged 30 bucks.

In our opinion, but probably not the people who had their cars towed, having the president come to our campus is pretty neat-o. On the flip side, however, this is just another event that casts students aside in favor of the self-serving publicity ASU will receive. Student parking restrictions happen when the Sun Devils and Cardinals play over at the stadium, so why not the president? It's just too bad the president's visit had to be blemished because of some ill planning and half-assed management on the part of Parking and Transit Services.

Jury duty shows reality's harshness

I received that letter we all dread to get last month: a jury summons. I called the court the night before, hoping I wouldn't have to show up but after one delay, there I was.

I put my cute juror badge on and waited in a room packed with other people who also couldn't get out of coming. We all watched a video with Linda Turley explaining how we were chosen from driver's license records and voting lists.

Then the bailiffs started showing up, in amazingly normal clothes, to take us to courtrooms where we would stand in the back, waiting to see if we would be chosen to sit in the juror's area and be part of the jury selection process. I was. We were asked a series of questions to determine if we could be impartial and fair in this trial. I could be.

Then we were excused so the lawyers could compromise on how many of the 26 of us would be part of the 14-member jury (12 jurors and two alternates). I was. Even being a member of the press couldn't get me out of this one. I was, along with nine other white men and four white women, considered a peer of the defendant, a young black man named J.R.

Please understand, this is not about doing your duty as a citizen and going to jury duty. This is about J.R. We determined that he did what he was accused of. Even though the evidence was pretty clear, it was harder than it first appeared. J.R. used a very small gun to attempt an armed robbery on a local skateboarder. Later, when confronted by a family J.R.'s friends had thrown rocks at, J.R. pulled the gun again and pointed it at the group. For these things, he will get five-to-15 years on each of the six counts. J.R. just turned 18.

I performed my part of the justice process and right up to the end where we convicted him, it was fun. You are instructed not to let your personal feelings become involved in the evaluation of the defendant's guilt, but that is a much harder thing to do than it sounds. Yet, he had tried to rob the skateboarder. That one was pretty obvious and was a no-brainer in the deliberation room. After several serious discussions on the use of self-defense, we finally determined pulling the gun was not justified as self-defense. Boom. That's it, then.

What bothered me was not that we found him guilty, because I believe that he was. What bothered me is that J.R. will not be rehabilitated. After seeing everything a juror sees, it is already too late at 18 for him to be rehabilitated.

We were able to talk to the defense lawyer in the court parking lot before we left. He told us J.R. has a substantial juvenile record, which I expected. From watching all of the testimony, including J.R.'s, I believe he isn't that bright of a kid. He made several judgment errors the night of the crime, beginning with bringing a gun to show his friends, children much younger than he is. J.R. has no future.

Something went wrong in the defendant's life from the beginning. Criminals do not just pop up at 18 to begin a life of crime. They are created by some mix of bad environment and insufficient parenting. Somebody did something wrong and now we have one more inmate to fill the prisons with. Please do not misunderstand me. We are all accountable for our actions. J.R. deserves to be punished for the crimes he was convicted of. But I have a hard time ever seeing him as a productive member of society, which is what we should want for all of our citizens.

What is the answer? Frankly, I'm not sure if there is one. The only answer that comes to mind is we need to raise our children better. Once parents lose control, what other authority will a child accept? Children need to be taught the value of rules. A society works or does not work based on the acceptance by its members of certain rules. Unfortunately, even when parents retain control there will still be criminals, but responsible parenting reduces our inmate population.

Once we have created the criminals, can we rehabilitate them? I have not seen evidence that we can consistently do that. So, if we don't stop it before it happens, everything else just becomes a band-aid. In the case of J.R., there is the possibility of leniency on the part of the judge. He may allow J.R. to serve the sentences concurrently. He will be eligible for parole after serving 85 percent of his sentence. So, he could conceivably be out in a little over four years. I may check up on him after that, call the courts to find out if he is able to stay straight. I'm just afraid I already know the answer.

Voters ignore character in presidential election

In 1992, when the Governor of Arkansas was running for the office of president, the issue of character was brought to light by his opposition.

Accusations of infidelity, sexual harassment and unethical practices circled above candidate Clinton like vultures waiting for death. Yet the gauntlet never fell and we the people of the United States of America elected to the highest office in the world a man of questionable character.

Tragically, it seems history might repeat itself.

At one point during the campaign of 1992 I was on a flight from L.A. to Seattle. I was minding my own business enjoying a book when the flight attendant leaned into my space and commented on how she felt about the author. As I looked away from the insightful pages of The Way Things Ought To Be I saw a bastion of liberal feminism peering down at me. I said, "You must be a Clinton supporter?"

With a smile on her face, she proudly displayed the back of her lapel and revealed a Clinton/Gore campaign button. Taken by the nerve of this person to express her political position to a paying customer, I asked her, "How can anyone support a man who has cheated on his wife, lied to the people of Arkansas about fulfilling his obligation as governor and dodged the draft during Vietnam?" She smugly replied, "Those things don't matter."

Now it is 1996 and we are faced with the same question: does character matter?

According to recent polls, over 50 percent say no. There are two possible explanations that make sense for the acceptance of this lack of character.

First, there is the narrowed focus of one issue that the individual feels is the most important topic that Clinton represents. In the case of the flight attendant, I discovered it was abortion. For others it might be his stance on homosexuality, his position on entitlements or his socialistic "one world" philosophy. Therefore, like the flight attendant, they feel it necessary to cast aside his lack of character to have their government-sanctioned freedom that might be eliminated under the Republicans.

The other possibility is that people are more concerned with what is being said than what has been done. For example, in 1992 Clinton declared he would "cut taxes for the middle class" and that his administration "would be the most ethical in recent history." Some believed he would come through on the promises and voted for him.

History reveals that neither of these statements were true. President Clinton gave to Americans the highest tax increase ever. As for ethics, clearly there has been none. For example here are several major violations: Hillary Rodham Clinton was highly leveraged in medical stock futures shortly before she went public with the Clinton health care plan even though she was supposed to have her assets secured in a trust; the withholding of court ordered documents by both Mr. and Mrs. Clinton's staff; the mysterious death of Vincent Foster and his missing files on Whitewater/Madison Guaranty that suddenly turned up after the statute of limitations expired; 900 private FBI files of Republicans in possession of the administration viewed by low level staff for database entry; the recent sex scandal involving a prostitute and a top adviser; and using the Commerce Department as an international fund raiser for the Democratic National Committee.

To vote for a man because he represents your beliefs and values is what democracy is all about. But to set aside what is evident and vote for a man that is more a character than he has character is foolish.

Real welfare queens are just multi-million dollar companies

When the average American hears the word "welfare," they are more likely to think of someone down on their luck asking the government for a handout rather than a rich businessman asking Uncle Sam for a check while vacationing in the Cayman Islands. The sad part is that the rich businessman picture might be the more accurate one.

According to Essential Information Inc., a public interest group in Washington, D.C., in 1994 our government spent $75.1 billion on Aid to Families with Dependent Children, food stamps and Medicaid. Simultaneously, our government spent $104.33 billion to help multi-million dollar corporations. This type of aid could be referred to as Aid to Dependent Foreign and U.S. Corporations.

The following are a few examples of who you're helping with your hard-earned tax dollars:

- Cargill Inc. received $1.2 billion gift from Uncle Sam. Cargill is the largest privately-owned company in the United States and generated $358 million in profits on sales of $47 billion in 1993. It controls the world's largest grain and commodities empire, and has plants and offices in 56 countries on six continents. Don't you feel their pain?
- Continental Grain Company scooped up a $1 billion handout from your taxes. Continental is the fourth largest privately-owned company in the United States and generated $15 billion in sales in 1992. It oversees the world's second-largest grain and related commodities empire. The family's fortune is worth $1 billion. Doesn't their suffering overwhelm you with grief?
- Pillsbury had $160 million given to them from your welfare-conscious Congress. You might have noticed the Pillsbury Dough Boy looks a little fatter lately. Now you know why.

The American people must learn more about what kind of welfare their tax dollars are funding. People who do not have money for food, education and health care depend on food stamps, AFDC and Medicaid for everyday survival. Obviously, there is abuse in these programs, but a significant amount of these people truly need these benefits to survive.

On the other hand, let's examine the recipients of corporate welfare. When has Cargill had its benefits cut off because it has too many subsidiaries? When has Continental's benefits been cut off by Congress after a certain amount of time because of abuse in the overall system of corporate welfare? When has Pillsbury been means-tested to demonstrate its "need?" The answer to all these questions is a resounding "never," yet these threats confront a recipient of AFDC, food stamps and Medicaid on a daily basis.

Many people argue that the social welfare system "as we know it" encourages waste in government and little accountability in its recipients. The question that needs to be asked is who is the more accountable recipient: a) the mother on food stamps who must provide documentation of her income every thirteen weeks to an eligibility worker who has the power to cut off all her benefits at any time? or b) the CEO of a multi-million dollar corporation who is not accountable to any eligibility worker and has highly paid accountants and attorneys.

The most important question surrounding social welfare policy is how to improve accountability within the system while eliminating its abuses. Recently, a welfare bill was signed in Washington which attempts to achieve the above goal. What's now missing is a Corporate Welfare bill which demands the same accountability and rigorous honesty we demand of our social welfare recipients.

Otherwise, the people who so demand accountability from recipients of food stamps without demanding the same from multi-million dollar corporations are hypocrites, liars or both. And the American people are the ones who will continue paying through the nose for a policy their politicians only talk about behind lobbyists' doors.

Reporting assault big mistake, says victim of attempted rapist

I kept the paper from Oct. 16 and the report about the attempted rape of Tanya Massaro. I can only say how very grateful I am that Massaro was not raped. I also know that living through an experience like that leaves its own scars. I hope that Massaro has the resources she needs and will need to deal with this.

I felt very confused about the police response to Massaro's experience, "We're very proud of her." I think it is terrific that they are saying such things to her, but it is not the normal occurrence. I have been puzzled over this and trying to determine why she got such a positive response. I have determined that it must have been because she did not know her attacker. The statistics that I have read say that 85 percent of victims know their assailant. I guess this would account for the different attitude experienced by myself and the others that I know.

I had a near-rape experience by an acquaintance. I know that if I had been drinking or been impaired in any way or less clear in my determination to avoid being violated, I would not have escaped as well as I did. As it was, I came out with a few bruises, shaken up and badly frightened. I was encouraged by a friend (an individual who had been raped several years ago) to report the incident because of the danger to other women in our area.

I reported the incident. I can only say that it was one of the most stupid things I have ever done in my life. It rates right up there with finding myself alone with that jerk. I was told to keep it quiet and not talk to anyone while they did their investigation. By the time they got through talking to the world, the only person who did not know that something had happened was my roommate. It was amazing. The "good old boys" club got it together to protect their own. Even though I have only been sexually intimate with one man in my entire life, and I am married to him, they made me look like the tramp of the earth.

I was threatened and coerced and dishonored. My career went up in smoke. I resigned my position and moved to another state. I am still trying to hold my marriage together. The repercussions have been unbelievable.

All I can say at this point is that I will never report or encourage anyone I know to report a situation like this again. The system does not work. The treatment I received from the system was worse than the experience with Mr. Selfish Pin-Brain. My friend was horrified at the treatment I received and swore that she would never encourage anyone to report again. In fact, her comment was that she thought they would do a better job this time. She was treated pretty brutally herself when she reported her rape. Talking to other individuals who have had similar experiences with "the system" the consensus has been consistent with mine. "If you knew him, you must have asked for it" is invariably insinuated. I have always wondered what they would do if they had to keep their cool and defend themselves against someone twice their size with four times their strength.

All of us who have experienced this kind of assault have some major safety issues — not only from assailants, but also from a vicious system that we were told would support and protect us.

FBI official pleads guilty in Ruby Ridge probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior FBI official pleaded guilty to obstruction of justice Wednesday for destroying a report that criticized the FBI's role in a deadly 1992 shootout at the Idaho cabin of white separatist Randall Weaver.

E. Michael Kahoe, who entered his plea before U.S. District Judge Ricardo Urbina, agreed to cooperate with prosecutors investigating whether other FBI officials were involved in the report's suppression.

Prosecutors said Kahoe destroyed the documents to keep them from attorneys representing Weaver, whose wife and son were killed during a nine-day standoff with government agents at Weaver's rural Idaho cabin in 1992.

Weaver and a friend, Kevin L. Harris, were acquitted of charges that they killed a federal marshal during a shootout that led to the FBI siege.

Kahoe's plea was the latest episode in a series of woes for the FBI. On Tuesday, FBI director Louis Freeh disclosed he has opened a pair of internal investigations into whether the FBI leaked the name of security guard Richard Jewell as a suspect in the Olympic bombing. The Justice Department cleared Jewell last weekend as a suspect.

As head of the FBI's violent crimes and major offenders section, Kahoe was responsible for preparing a critique of the FBI's performance at Ruby Ridge. Such reports are typically compiled after every violent encounter involving federal agents.

A factual summary of the case notes that Kahoe first refused to turn over certain documents to the U.S. attorney's office in Idaho, prompting the Justice Department to intervene.

Kahoe, a 25-year FBI veteran, faces up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine in connection with his felony plea.

- A female employee reported that she was assaulted in the ASU Bookstore.
- A female student reported that someone broke into her vehicle while it was parked in Lot 59 and removed the stereo and speakers.

• A female employee reported that someone took a sweater and money from an office in Stauffer Hall.

• A male affiliated with ASU reported that someone took his license plate from his vehicle while it was parked at Palo Verde East Hall.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

• A man was arrested for domestic violence, assault and criminal damage at 1715 E. Don Carlos Ave., after he hit and kicked his girlfriend several times. The man also threw the woman against a wall and damaged her car by jumping on the vehicle's roof. When police booked the man into Tempe City Jail, he was also charged with possession of marijuana after police discovered a substance suspected to be pot in his shoe.

• A man was arrested for aggravated assault after hitting another man with his fist, knocking the man to the ground where he hit his head against the pavement. The men had been cutting one another off at a Taco Bell drive-thru at 1835 E. Southern Ave. They exited their vehicles and exchanged words when the suspect hit the victim.

Prop. 200 would draw druggies to state, says national drug czar

BY SARA BUSH
STATE PRESS

The national drug czar and other officials rallied Wednesday in an effort to convince the public that Proposition 200 would draw drug users and pushers to the state.

"Proposition 200 will do nothing but pose a threat to Arizona and increase drug abuse," said Gen. Barry McCaffrey, national drug czar. "I hope the people of Arizona vote against it."

If passed on Tuesday, Proposition 200 will allow doctors to prescribe marijuana for medical purposes. The initiative also changes the rules on the parole and sentencing of criminals convicted of drug related crimes.

McCaffrey and others expressed concern if Arizona agrees to legalize marijuana for medical purposes, it may lead to legalization of other drugs such as LSD and heroin. Officials at the roundtable discussion also said they feared the changes in laws surrounding drugs would encourage drug dealers and traffickers to relocate to Arizona.

"Arizona could become a magnet to a group of people who would take advantage of the new laws," Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., said. "Arizona will begin to destroy itself by becoming a haven for drug dealers."

Tom Constantine, administrator of the Drug Enforcement Agency, agreed that Proposition 200 would draw drug offenders to Arizona, saying the initiative could turn the Valley of the Sun into a "Valley of Sorrow."

"The experiences everywhere in the world where these proposals have been attempted have proven that drug dealers will gladly travel to Arizona and live in Arizona (if the proposition passes)," Constantine said.

Citizens for a Drug Free Arizona, a group organized to rally against Proposition 200, organized the event. Chairman Tim Lawless said he hoped the roundtable could get the public thinking about Proposition 200.

"We think that the negatives of Proposition 200 far outweigh the positives," Lawless said.

Tempe extends busing to Sundays and nights

BY MELODY McDONALD
STATE PRESS

It's Sunday afternoon and you desperately need to get from Mill Avenue to McClintock Drive to meet a study group. But your car is in the shop, a taxi is unaffordable and buses don't run today.

What do you do?

"If you don't have a car at all, you used to not have any options on Sunday," said Mary O'Conner, Tempe Transportation Planning administrator. "Students who couldn't take the bus before on a weekend can now, however."

Beginning Nov. 17, municipal buses in Tempe will run on Sundays, marking the first time in 40 years they have run on this day, O'Conner said. In addition, buses will have later hours, running from 5 a.m. to 10 p.m., she said.

"Students should also be able to use it to go to evening classes for the first time," she said. "The fact the service is available until after classes are out is a big help to students."

The Sunday bus service is a result of proposition 400, which was passed Sept. 10. Proposition 400 will increase Tempe's sales tax from 1.2 to 1.7 percent and generate about $22 million extra annually.

The tax will help fund the purchase of at least 34 new buses, the hiring of more full-time employees, construction on bus pullouts, shaded bus shelters and two transit centers — one downtown and one in south Tempe — by the year 2002.

Although the sales tax won't be implemented until January 1997, the council is doing its best to get the ball rolling.

"We wanted to show we had a plan and meant to execute it as soon as we could," O'Conner said. "People have been asking for this service, and they were good enough to vote for it. We really wanted to demonstrate that we would do everything we could to make this service happen."

O'Conner said the increased hours and Sunday service will be implemented just in time for the holiday and "carbon monoxide" season.

"We thought this was appropriate," she said.

Tempe Mayor Neil Guiliano agreed, saying he hopes people will use the bus more.

"The frequency of the service will enable students to use the bus more often," he said. "The service would allow students to get to school on Sunday — leave their car at home."

Former Hayworth aides plead guilty in forgery of affidavit

(AP) — Two former campaign aides to U.S. Rep. J.D. Hayworth were fined and placed on probation Wednesday after one admitted forging the freshman Republican's signature on a document the other filed with the state.

Robert Marcus Dell'Artino, a former Hayworth campaign manager, and Jared Winsor Bennett, a former computer worker, each pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of presentation of a false document for filing with a public agency.

Hayworth had previously fired both.

Dell'Artino admitted forging Hayworth's signature on an affidavit stating that Hayworth met qualifications for office, and Bennett admitted filing the document minutes before the deadline on June 27.

The affidavit was filed with the secretary of state's office without Hayworth's prior knowledge or authorization, said the two agencies investigating the case, the Arizona Attorney General's office and the Maricopa County Attorney's office.

"Assertions to the contrary are reckless and untrue," the prosecuting agencies said in a joint statement.

Hayworth, who was interviewed by prosecutors, said he was pleased at the agencies' findings.

"I regret that the forgery occurred and that the individuals serving on my campaign staff, for which I am ultimately responsible, made the mistake for which they are now being punished," he said in statement.

Dell'Artino and Bennett were each sentenced to a year of probation and ordered to perform 100 hours of community service.

Dell'Artino also was fined $1,000 and Bennett $500 by Judge Ronald Reinstein of Maricopa County Superior Court.

Democrats had claimed Hayworth's failure to file a valid affidavit by the June 27 deadline should disqualify him from the ballot in Arizona's 6th Congressional District.

A second affidavit, signed by Hayworth himself, was filed on July 3.

However, Attorney General Grant Woods said in August that Hayworth's nominating papers "appear to substantially comply with statutory requirements." Hayworth was therefore entitled to have his name on the ballot, Woods said.

Neither Dell'Artino nor Bennett could be reached Wednesday, but a prosecutor and Dell'Artino's lawyer said the signature was forged without Hayworth's knowledge or permission.

With Hayworth away in Washington on June 27, the campaign aides were faced with a deadline, "had failed to prepare the appropriate paperwork and have Congressman Hayworth sign it," said Barnett Lotstein, special assistant county attorney.

Afraid to tell Hayworth about a mistake that had the potential to keep him off the ballot, "they took it upon themselves to forge his name and submit his forged affidavit."

Clark Derrick, Dell'Artino's lawyer, said his client found out about an hour before the filing deadline that the affidavit hadn't been filed by another person assigned the task.

"As a result of being in a panic and in attempt to please his boss, he made a stupid mistake," Derrick said of Dell'Artino.

Hayworth said with the findings, his Democratic opponent in Tuesday's general election should pull a "completely false" television ad which accuses Hayworth of filing a forged document and violating state law to keep his name on the ballot.

Challenger Steve Owens' campaign referred an inquiry to a lawyer for the state Democratic Party who said the ad would not be pulled.

 Tuesday around 11:30 p.m. a fire broke out at the warehouses of BNG Enterprises and American Supplement Technology at 1817 W. Fourth St. in Tempe. Tempe and Phoenix units responded to the two-alarm blaze, with 60 firefighters battling the fire at its peak. Several explosions of 55-gallon drums of ethanol fueled the fire, which forced streets to be closed for a half-mile radius. The 10,000 sq. ft. warehouse was totally destroyed, gutted by the intense heat of the flames. Firefighters had the blaze under control by 1:30 a.m. Wednesday.

WHAT ASU STUDENTS ARE SAYING ABOUT THEIR HEALTH

What is your biggest concern regarding alcohol use? What steps are you taking to address this concern?

Nicole Thornbro
Sophomore
Business

My biggest concern with alcohol use is people drinking and driving.

I am in a sorority and we give people rides home if they have been drinking.

Andy Roesch
Junior
Mech. Engineering

Drinking and driving.

I'm usually the designated driver because I don't drink all that much.

Christina Robles
Junior
Psychology

Drunk driving

I prevent friends from drinking and driving and I don't drive when I've been drinking.

Simon Roberts
Senior Journalism

My biggest concern is people are not responsible for their own actions.

I am responsible for my own actions. I'm not out to change people, but when I drink, I am responsible for my behavior. The bottom line is, everyone is responsible for what they do, whether they have been drinking or not.

I am new to ASU and have been Concerned by the Possibility of Being Raped or Attacked. How Can I Protect Myself?

Personal safety issues are a major concern to many. Here are some statistics about acquaintance and date rape. Alcohol and drug abuse contribute to 70% of all sexual abuse. Seventy-three percent of the rapists and 53% of the victims were under the influence of alcohol or drugs at the time of the rape. Forty-seven percent of rapes occurred by first or casual dates or romantic acquaintances and 85% of the rapists on college campuses were known to the victims. The purpose of these statistics is not to scare you, but to make you aware. If you've been assaulted and haven't told anyone, you're not alone. One-third of women raped did not discuss their experiences with anyone, and more than 90% did not contact the police. The only way to stop these occurrences is with preventive education and reporting these crimes to the police for prosecution. There are many myths about rape that society perpetuates, including assumptions like "no means yes," "rape is OK under certain circumstances," "she wouldn't have come back to my room if she didn't want to have sex," "she was passed out, so it was OK." All of these are false. Preventive measures can be taken to minimize the chances of being raped or attacked. Some of the most important are: Know your feelings about sex, have clear communication with your partner about your intentions and limits, be assertive with your position and morals and don't back down, use the "buddy" system when on campus or out at night, stay with friends when at a party and let them know when you're going and who you'll be with that night, and use common sense about possible unsafe situations. Always remember that drugs and alcohol impair your judgment and rational thinking, which can impair you from making clear decisions. No one deserves to be raped or sexually assaulted, and using some of these simple rules may prevent an unwanted situation. We all have to be concerned with our personal safety, and by understanding this issue we can all strive to make ASU a safer place for everyone. If you have questions about personal safety or rape, you can contact these campus information sources:

ANSWERS: In the classified section of today's State Press

Wholesalers Advocating Moderation, in conjunction with ASU Student Health, BACCHUS and local Tempe merchants are taking important first steps to establish a new program to help combat drinking and driving in Tempe.

The program works like this: one person from a group of customers at participating bars agrees not to drink alcoholic beverages during the evening. This person will be the "designated driver" and is responsible for providing transportation to the other members of the group. This person will notify the server that he/she is the group's designated driver, and will receive an identification sticker that allows him/her to enjoy free sodas during the evening. If a customer shows signs of drinking upon entering or while at the participating bar, this person is not eligible to be the designated driver.

You may ask why an establishment that serves alcohol would agree to participate in a program where they give away non-alcoholic beverages. Well, a program like this provides bars with visibility and positive PR in demonstrating the promotion of responsible policies and practices regarding drinking and driving. It shows concern for customers' safety and demonstrates commitment to being part of the solution to alcohol abuse.

WAM Designated Driver Participating Bars:

- Balboa Cafe • Fat Tuesday's
- Chili's • Hooter's
- Islands • Long Wong's
- Mill Cue Club
- Mill Ave. Beer Co.
- Mill Ave. Sports Grill
- Mill Landing
- Owl's Nest • Ruby Tuesday's
- Paradise Tempe Bar and Grill
- Pizzeria Uno

The designated driver program is no substitute for being responsible when you drink. This program will add to the overall community safety by reducing the number of drinking drivers in Tempe.

ASU's "Dynamic Duo" of senior Felipe Delgado (left) and sophomore Francisco Sanchez have not only helped the Sun Devils in the pool, but they have also helped give ASU national exposure by competing in the 1996 summer Olympics.

DYNAMIC DUO

Sanchez, Delgado give ASU swimming team potent punch

By ED ODEVEN
STATE PRESS

The "Dynamic Duo" gave the ASU men's swimming team a potent one-two punch last season.

The duo led the Sun Devils to a surprising ninth-place finish at the 1996 NCAA Men's Swimming Championships at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Now in the 1996-97 season, sophomore-sensation Francisco Sanchez and steady senior Felipe Delgado have helped transform the Sun Devils into one of the premier teams in the nation.

Both All-Americans competed in the 1996 Summer Olympics, and both Olympians have been directly responsible for turning ASU into one of the hot spots for collegiate swimming.

"I can see what it did," ASU men's swimming coach Ernie Maglischo said of the national exposure. "It gave us much greater credibility. Swimmers at the meet (the Olympics) were just noticing these two guys and where they were from. And instantly, we

Wrestling begins season at ASU with international tourney

By JOSH DEFAMIO
STATE PRESS

ASU fans will get their first taste of 1996 collegiate wrestling this weekend, and it will be quite a menu.

Foreign teams from Albania, Belarus, Canada, Cuba, Lithuania, Japan and Korea are all scheduled to compete in the 12th annual Sunkist Kids International Wrestling Open this Saturday and Sunday at the University Activity Center.

"(The tournament) recognizes that (the ASU wrestling program) supports wrestlers who aspire to be Olympians," ASU head coach Lee Roy Smith said. "With several of our former wrestlers and some of our current wrestlers competing as well, this indicates our commitment for facilitating those aspirations (of Olympic competition) as well as our NCAA collegiate goals. And when it comes to recruiting, the best wrestlers in the country are looking for programs that will help them reach not only their NCAA collegiate goals, but also their international and Olympic goals."

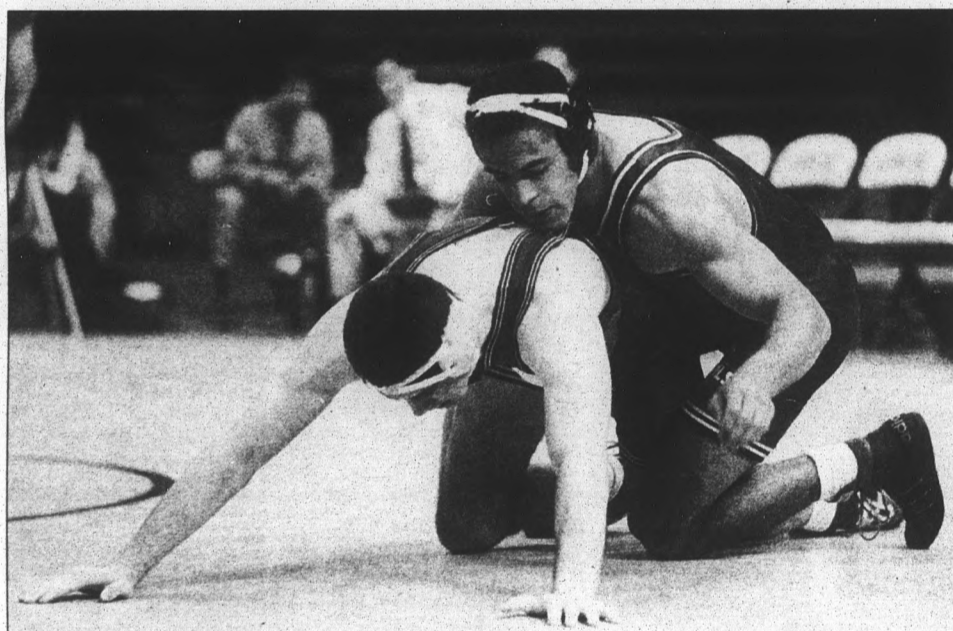

Smith is not sure which of his wrestlers will compete in the open, but he does estimate that between six and 12 athletes will wrestle. He will know for sure which ones will wrestle at weigh-ins on Friday night.

There will be a couple of familiar ASU faces competing in former All-Americans Marcus Mollica and Steve St. John. For both, it will be their first time competing since last season's NCAA tournament.

"This is a starting point," Mollica said of his participation in the meet. "Last year I took fifth in this tournament and I hope to do better. After this, there is a couple of Olympic training camps and then a big meet in Michigan leading to the Us Open in either May or April. I've heard that this tournament can be a stepping stone for making some major tours, which I hope can help me for a spot on Team USA."

Also making an appearance will be the newly formed Dave Schultz Wrestling Club. Formed earlier this year by Schultz's

ASU's 'Samson' linebacker making opposing quarterbacks pay

By PERCY EDNALINO JR.
STATE PRESS

It's got to be the hair.

At least that's what ASU head coach Bruce Snyder said of junior outside linebacker Pat Tillman, who leads the team with four interceptions and boasts a 3.8 grade point average.

At 5-foot-11 and 204 pounds, Tillman is not your typical linebacker. With his long blonde hair, Tillman looks more comfortable catching waves on a surfboard than catching errant passes thrown by opposing quarterbacks.

He prefers it that way.

This season, Tillman has 44 solo tackles, one quarterback sack and leads the team in interceptions. He also was named Pac-10 Player of the Week against Oregon this season and is currently tied for 17th in the nation (3rd in the Pac-10) in interceptions.

Last season, Tillman finished fifth on the team with 47 total tackles, 32 unassisted tackles and one sack.

All this from a guy who hasn't cut his hair since he was a senior in high school.

"He's playing very well. He's all over the field, so maybe his hair is giving him strength," Snyder said with a laugh.

Snyder may find humor in the length of Tillman's hair, but when it comes to his performance on the Sun Devils' defense, opposing teams haven't had much to smile about.

Tillman seized eight tackles during last Saturday's game against Stanford and has a total of 70 for the year. He also has posted an interception in the past two games.

Tillman wasn't highly recruited out of high school. He said San Jose State and Brigham Young gave him offers to play, but he decided on ASU instead after Snyder approached him with an offer.

"I went on a recruiting trip to Stanford, but they told me they didn't want me," Tillman said. "The small schools thought I was going to a big school, and the big became one of the universities in the United States where you could expect to achieve your Olympic dreams."

ASU's Pat Tillman (42) is quickly becoming popular among ASU fans for more than just his hair. The junior linebacker is quickly gaining recognition for his ability to get his hands on the football, as he leads the team in interceptions.

The duo's success has been a deciding factor in potential recruits' decisions.

"We are getting much better recruits," Maglischo said. "We are getting people that normally wouldn't have considered us. ... It's done a tremendous amount."

Sanchez

Success follows Sanchez wherever he goes.

Sanchez, a 19-year-old native of Venezuela, grabbed the spotlight at the NAAs last spring when he won the 50-yard freestyle and finished second in the 100 freestyle. He was also named the 1995 Venezuelan "Athlete of the Year."

He capped off his year by going to Atlanta. It began with an exceptional honor — being the Venezuelan flag bearer at the Opening Ceremonies.

"It was pretty exciting to hear all the people in the stadium," he said with a smile. "It was one of my big achievements in life."

However, the biggest honor for Sanchez was the loyal support he received from Venezuelans.

"Everybody at home in my country was expecting me to win a medal," he said. "I had a lot of support from all the people back home, especially from my family. It was like the whole country was stopped just to see my races. It was pretty exciting."

Sanchez made the finals in the 50-meter and 100-meter freestyle events. He placed seventh in the 50 freestyle at 22.71 and eighth in the 100 freestyle at 49.88.

"Francisco was outstanding," Maglischo said. "He did all life-time bests. He scored in two finals. He was the youngest guy in two finals."

Sanchez did not go home as a gold medalist, but he did go home happy.

"I did pretty good actually," he said. "I was hoping to do better in the 50 time wise, but I'm pretty happy with the 100 free and 100 fly."

Delgado

After three seasons of All-American status, Delgado traveled to Atlanta for the ultimate swim meet — the Olympics.

Delgado had a wonderful time in Atlanta competing for his native Ecuador.

"It was quite a rush," he said. "The biggest surprise happened before the Olympics even started. I got nominated to be the flag bearer. Walking into Olympic Stadium with 90,000 to 100,000 people watching you and millions more on TV, you could just imagine what kind of rush that is."

Unfortunately, Delgado failed to advance past the preliminaries in either of his best events (the 50 and 100 freestyle), but he looked at the positive side of it.

"I gained a lot of experience. I made a lot of new friends," he said. "I had a good time and that's what it's all about. Swimming well would've been a plus. Maybe it will happen next time. Maybe in the year 2000."

The hard-working senior has impressed Maglischo.

"A lot of guys at this point after they've been in the Olympic games don't see another Olympic in their future and just say, 'I got to think about my life and I'm going to just swim through this year,'" Maglischo said. "Boy, he is more motivated than ever. I'm just so pleased that somebody who is his age and been in the sport as long as he has and gotten to the pinnacle and is back here more enthusiastic than ever."

The Olympic experience that the "Dynamic Duo" have is beneficial to the Sun Devils.

"Those guys set a pretty good example of how to train year round and the things you can do to make yourself better," assistant coach Sean Farrell said.

Another season.

Another opportunity for success.

The "Dynamic Duo" are anxious to help the Sun Devils get better.

"The ultimate team goal is to improve on our placing from last season," Delgado said.

widow, Nancy, the club will serve as a tribute to the slain gold medalist.

"(Nancy Schultz) has channeled her energy into creating this program to carry on his legacy and love of the sport," Smith said. "It gives wrestlers an opportunity to continue their Olympic aspirations and support their efforts in respect for Dave (and) for what Dave devoted his life to."

The Sunkist Open has routinely attracted top-notch wrestlers. During the summer Olympics in Atlanta, four of the eight medal winners from the U.S. team, including ASU alumni Townsend Saunders, were former members of the Sunkist Kids Club.

The matches will include both men's and women's freestyle and Greco Roman matches. The matches will begin at 9 a.m. on Saturday and at 10 a.m. on Sunday. Separate tickets will be available for each day, and all of the proceeds will go to the ASU Wrestling program.

Happy Halloween

Tillman

schools didn't want me, I can't be happier about what happened."

Snyder said Tillman's versatility as a player was what made his decision to recruit the former Leland High School standout easier. Snyder added that he didn't envision using Tillman as a linebacker.

"He was a guy that was the most productive player in all of his area," Snyder said. "He could catch, he could tackle, he could run. I just said, 'He's a guy that could do so many things.'"

Yet Tillman said he isn't bitter about being passed up by other schools.

"Coming out of high school, I wasn't the biggest guy," Tillman said. "At the time, I was upset. But you get over it."

And it helps when you're playing on a team that is currently ranked No. 4 in the nation and has the inside track to the Rose Bowl.

"That tends to ease the pain," Tillman said with a smile.

Despite his size, Tillman said he doesn't have a problem playing linebacker.

"I am small for a linebacker," Tillman said. "I don't object to that. I try to bring different skills — mostly speed — to the position than most linebackers."

And he's performed well at his position when others thought he would fail. For Tillman, football comes easy. He said the hardest part of the game is knowing what the offensive guards are going to do.

"Football is not something that has been extremely difficult for me compared to some other people," Tillman said. "As far as playing linebacker, you have to read certain things. You have to read guards. That took a while to learn. Reading guards isn't natural. It's something you've got to teach yourself to do."

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST by Frances Drake Thursday, October 31, 1996

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Work projects go best before noon. Later, there's a tendency to carelessness, perhaps through being overtired. Be tactful and patient with a close relative. TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Don't expect others to act in accordance with what you have envisioned. A friend's needs for power and control could undermine recreational pursuits. Don't get discouraged. GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Some business documents require careful scrutiny, so be on your toes and check the fine print. Visits with friends are heartwarming. Good news brings a fine close to the day. CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You'll meet someone who's just as much an individualist as you are, but you come to a meeting of the minds. You make a major purchase for the home—and it looks like a good buy! LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Rumors making the rounds could anger you. However, you still hold the upper hand over jealous rivals. Be sure to get necessary car repairs. VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Steady application to the job brings you career gains, but a dispute with a friend could arise over a monetary situation. Be careful not to be duped by an offer that seems to good to be true. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Although you're getting ready for a concerted work drive, the accent is on pleasure and far-away places. Some grandparents get a last-minute call that will certainly cheer them up. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) What starts as a restful day at home turns into a hectic and exciting time, as you get new ideas about property improvements and financial interests. Evening hours accent rest and romance. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Judgment could be off regarding spending. It is best to play it cool financially. Career thinking is on target, yet you can go overboard in calling attention to yourself. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You are sure of your own standards, but when they are called into question, be sure not to adopt the tactics of your adversary. Be wary of jealous feeling towards a partner. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) It could take awhile for what you put into motion to bring results. Expect some career luck, but do not mix business and pleasure. Be sure to draw a line with higher-ups socially. PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) You'll make an unusual purchase for the home. Plans for a pleasure trip look very promising. Romance is in the offing for the evening hours. YOU BORN TODAY are drawn to both the arts and sciences. The study of law could well lead to a career in politics. You are community-minded and like to be in a position of service to others, yet there's something distinctive about your contribution. You stand out from the crowd, yet you blend in well with it at the same time. Others seem to respect your ability to lead and are attracted to you. You have a fine intellect and rely on logic to achieve solutions to problems.
