Frat is first to privatize own house

Lori Cain/State Press

Alumni and fraternity members stand amidst the makings of a new face for the Phi Delta Theta house Wednesday afternoon. The fraternity is the first at ASU to own and operate the house it lives in. Alumni and current members are pitching in time and donations to help renovate the building and show it off during Homecoming weekend.

BY SARA BUSH
STATE PRESS

From the outside, the Phi Delta Theta fraternity house looks much the same as the other aged houses lining Alpha Drive.

But on the inside, things are much different. Alumni of the ASU Phi Delta Theta fraternity recently raised more than $700,000 to purchase the lease of the house as well as renovate it.

The Phi Delta Theta house is the first house on campus to be privately owned by a fraternity. As a privately owned house, the 30 to 40 fraternity members who live there are not subject to the same University policies they formerly were.

Fraternity members said they now follow rules and regulations laid down by alumni, their parent organization Phi Delta Theta International and the Interfraternity Council.

Campus officials involved with on-campus housing for Greek organizations did not return repeated phone calls for comment on the changes.

Brett Corley, a Phi Delta Theta alumnus and general contractor for C<sup>3</sup> Construction, which renovated the fraternity house this year, said he expects some changes in the relationship between the Phi Delta Theta house and ASU.

"We have a little more freedom as owners to enforce the things that go on," Corley said. "One of the things that will change is the way the house is perceived."

This year the Phi Delta Theta house is forbidden to have alcohol or parties with alcohol. All such parties are organized at other locations. The residents of the Phi Delta Theta house are supportive of the change — the University

ASASU president will fight for direct loans

BY JENNIFER NETHERBY
STATE PRESS

It's not certain if direct loans will be debated in Congress again this session, but if they are, Associated Students of ASU President Marc Baumgartner said he will testify on the benefits of the program.

Baumgartner said he intends to lobby for the continuation of the Direct Student Loan Program before Congress. He will work with the National Association of Students for Higher Education (NASH), a national higher education lobby consisting of university student body presidents and student lobbyists.

"It's important for schools to speak up," Baumgartner said.

The direct student loan program offers student loans directly from the federal government, cutting banks out of the process, said Kate Dillon, ASU financial assistance director. About 17,000 ASU students have direct student loans. This is the second year the program has been available at ASU.

Nationwide, about 14,400 universities have direct lending available, Dillon said. In Arizona, ASU and NAU have the program.

Baumgartner said the program has been successful in streamlining the student loan process. He said it has also made the repayment schedule easier.

"It's simple, efficient and easy," he said.

Dillon said the time it takes to get a loan is also much quicker.

Baumgartner said the effort to save direct loan lending comes after the last session of Congress tried to cut the program.

"Since there's a finite amount of money, things have to be cut," he said. "I'm somewhat wary that education might take some of the brunt in balancing the budget."

While attending the NASH conference in Washington last week, Baumgartner had the chance to speak with Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., and Sen. John Kyl, R-Ariz., as well as the six Arizona representatives about direct loans. Baumgartner said the congressmen were receptive to his position on direct loans.

Final election results trickle in

BY RAY STERN
STATE PRESS

The elections held a few surprises as final precincts were counted late Tuesday night and Wednesday morning.

The Hayworth-Owens District 6 congressional race was anybody's call until late Wednesday morning. J.D. Hayworth, R-Ariz., had taken a 10 point lead early on, but Democratic challenger Steve Owens whittled away at that margin as the night wore on.

Final unofficial returns gave the seat to Hayworth by a mere 590 votes. However, by late afternoon there were still 40,000 ballots left to be processed in Maricopa County, and Owens was not ready to concede defeat.

With 99 percent of the precincts reporting, President Bill Clinton became the first Democrat to win Arizona since Harry Truman's 1948 victory, edging out Republican Bob Dole 47 percent to 44 percent.

Dole took six of Arizona's 15 counties, though, including Maricopa. His biggest victory came in Yavapai County, where he took in 26,697 to Clinton's 19,233.

Perot came in third with 8 percent of Arizona's votes, and Libertarian Harry Browne trailed far behind at just 1 percent.

Nationwide, with 99 percent of the precincts reporting, Clinton had 49 percent, Dole had 41 percent and Perot had 8 percent.

In Arizona congressional races, Rep. Jim

Kolbe, R-Ariz., displayed the widest gap over his opponent, Democrat Mort Nelson, beating him 68.6 percent to 25.9 percent in District 5.

Rep. Matt Salmon trounced Democrat John Cox 59.9 percent to 40 percent in District 1.

Two propositions failed, despite being close early on.

Proposition 100, relating to the effective date of laws, was voted down 59.2 percent to 40.7 percent.

Voters also narrowly turned down Proposition 300, which would have given a raise to state legislators. The initiative failed 51.3 percent to 48.6 percent.

Proposition 203, which expands medical services for the working poor, had the largest victory of all the propositions, with 71.9 percent voting yes.

Although Gov. Fife Symington has threatened to veto Proposition 200 (drug laws) and Proposition 201 (Indian gaming), both initiatives won with a wider margin than the Symington-sponsored Juvenile Justice Initiative, Proposition 102.

Proposition 101, relating to tax exemptions for certain businesses, was another narrow victory, passing 51.2 to 48.7 percent.

Further election results can be found on the Arizona Secretary of State web page at <http://www.sosaz.com> allows fraternities to have alcohol under certain guidelines.

"The dry house is a better, safer way," said John Tisa, a junior education major and Phi Delta Theta resident. "You miss out on some things, but we have the best looking house on the row."

According to the fraternity, the previous contract between Phi Delta Theta and ASU gave the fraternity an option to buy before the lease expiration in 2001.

"Since the lease expires in 2001 we needed to make our investment now," said Greg Vogel, organizer of Phi Delta Theta Lodging and negotiator of the deal.

Vogel said that the alumni wanted to renovate the house but wanted the security of owning the house before beginning the renovations. "Buying the property establishes some longevity," Vogel said. "Losing interest in real estate is not really prudent."

Tisa and other alumni members said they had heard various other fraternities discussing the purchase of their houses as well. According to Vogel, other fraternities on Alpha Drive have the same lease, but he does not know which ones.

Other privately owned fraternities on-campus could significantly affect the jurisdiction of the University over fraternity houses, Phi Delta Theta members said.

For now, the fraternity is adapting to its improvements and its changing image.

"We're focusing on building a community atmosphere," said Jesse Luevano, a senior construction major and treasurer of Phi Delta Theta. "We're trying to be the trendsetters."

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, left, and Defense Secretary William Perry, right, talk to reporters July 25, 1995 on Capitol Hill. Perry and Christopher have told President Clinton that they will resign, administration and military officials said Wednesday, leaving the re-elected president with vacancies in two of the Cabinet's most prestigious posts.

Perry, Christopher lead Clinton Cabinet exodus

BY TERENCE HUNT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The anchors of President Clinton's national security team — Warren Christopher and William Perry — led a snowballing exodus of at least six Cabinet officials Wednesday in a sweeping second-term staff shakeup.

Commerce Secretary Mickey Kantor told Clinton he intended to resign to return to California. Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary, out of favor, also was quitting, officials said.

Transportation Secretary Federico Pena and Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros were expected to leave, as well, administration officials said. White House officials were waging a behind-the-scenes campaign for Attorney General Janet Reno to go; she wants to stay.

As the president returned triumphantly to the White House from victory celebrations in Arkansas, Washington buzzed with leaks about resignations and speculation about successors. No formal announcements were expected before a Cabinet meeting on Friday.

Clinton brushed aside questions about his staff, telling reporters on Air Force One "we just want to savor what happened yesterday."

There were varying reasons for the staff reshuffling.

Some, like presidential senior adviser George Stephanopoulos, made no secret of the fact they are worn out. Outgoing chief of staff Leon Panetta is considering running for governor of California. Some officials — O'Leary, Reno — were nudged toward the door. In general, Clinton wants to reinvigorate his presidency.

Christopher, 71, and Perry, 69, are highly regarded but, after countless trips to world trouble spots, have tired of the job.

Kantor, a political warrior who helped engineer Clinton's 1992 victory, is bored at Commerce. He was believed to be interested in becoming White House chief of staff or attorney general, but now is said to have dropped those ideas.

Reno upset the White House overseeing Waco and Whitewater. Popular in Washington, she is not considered a team player. Recognizing she would be tough to shove aside, White House officials are waging a campaign of leaks against her, noting her battle with Parkinson's disease. Her doctors say she has a mild case and it is not a problem.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich is welcome to stay, officials said, but appears inclined to leave. Reich told associates he'll talk about his future over the weekend with his family, which has moved back to Boston.

Voter turnout possibly lowest since 1824

BY HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — More than half of America's eligible voters stayed home on Election Day, producing the lowest turnout since 1924 when Calvin Coolidge's campaign didn't excite the electorate either. Chief among the reasons cited by experts was President Clinton's near-certain victory.

The final figures weren't in on Wednesday, the day after the election, but Curtis Gans, director of the Committee for Study of the American Electorate, said he expects Tuesday's turnout to be 48.8 percent of eligible voters. That compares with 55 percent in 1992.

In all, 95.8 million people will have voted, he said, out of 196.5 million who were eligible.

The 1924 turnout that elected the taciturn Coolidge was 50.1 percent. The previous low turnout was in 1824, with 48.9 percent.

Some of the people who did vote indicated they held their noses while doing it.

Gilbert Finger of Grosse Pointe Park, Mich., said he decided to vote "because I have no right to gripe if I don't." He chose Clinton, but said, "It's almost like I'm voting for the lesser of two evils."

Gans said the attack advertising one or two hours a day "gives people a choice between bad and awful, worse and worse, and creates a pall across the system."

Robert Y. Shapiro, a political science professor at Columbia University, said Clinton's lead in the polls held down the turnout.

"The presidential election was essentially a done deal," he said.

Shapiro says voters in 1992 were upset about the state of the economy and wanted to vote against George Bush. And Ross Perot's presence in the race stirred voter interest.

Paradoxically, Perot probably had something to do with people staying away on Tuesday, Shapiro said.

"This go-round, voters were turned off by him," he added. "He laid the groundwork for a third party, but I think that Perot was perceived as tired, worn and less effective."

West Virginians voted in far larger percentages than the national average, but the turnout, at just under 64 percent, fell below expectations.

It was "M&M politics," said West Virginia Secretary of State Ken Hechler, who had predicted 75 percent. "If you look at M&Ms, they're all different colors on the outside. And when you bite into them, they're all similar on the inside."

Politics has become dependent on mud and money, said Hechler, who served in Harry Truman's White House. "All too frequently, the voters look at this and they throw up their hands, and say what's the use in voting."

Forrest Maltzman, an assistant professor of political science at George Washington University, said voter turnout goes down when people think they know the outcome.

"A lot of people thought they knew exactly what was going to happen and that it was not worth bothering to vote," he said.

J.P. Monroe, a professor of political science at the University of Miami, said the low turnout is a concern.

"Here you have half the eligible voters electing the most important political official in the country," he said.

War leaves Zaire without leader

BY BETH DUFF-BROWN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

KINSHASA, Zaire — Zaire's president convalesces in his French Riviera chateau, while students rule the streets of his capital. The prime minister hasn't surfaced in days.

So who is running central Africa's largest nation, a resource-rich land thrust into chaos by the ethnic hatred in Rwanda, its neighbor to the east?

"Nobody," a newspaper publisher says.

"The people are just running themselves," an opposition politician lamented.

"Who knows?" a university student snarled. "You tell ME!"

Just months ago, Zairians hoped the country's first multiparty elections were in sight and that decades of dictatorship under President Mobutu Sese Seko would be over.

Today, Mobutu has cancer, for which he sought treatment in Europe three months ago. Prime Minister Leon Kengo wa Dondo's job appears to be on the line. And since Rwandan Tutsi rebels drove Zairian soldiers out of the main cities of eastern Zaire, the army has hinted at mutiny.

Inflation has soared by 100 percent since June. Thousands of unemployed youths roam the streets of Kinshasa, stealing cars and destroying Tutsi homes and businesses.

Tens of thousands of young men demonstrated Tuesday, speeding around the capital and aiming fake, bamboo rifles at people with the tall, angular features of Tutsis. Two university students were killed and dozens injured in the violence.

"There's no point in understating the degree of government disarray in this country," said U.S. Ambassador Daniel Simpson.

David Guttenfelder/Associated Press
A Zairian girl carries a sack of manioc flour into the littered and looted streets of Goma, Zaire Wednesday. Food supplies are just beginning to reach Goma from the countryside since Zairian rebels took control of the city. Fighting between Zairian troops and Rwandan-backed rebels in eastern Zaire has sent 1 million refugees on the roads, raising fears of a widespread outbreak of disease and famine.

STATE PRESS Editorial

Mesans finally honor Martin Luther King

The election is over, all of the candidates have slept off their election-night hangovers and the country should be allowed to get back to what might be called normal.

Whether your candidate experienced the thrill of victory or went down in a blaze of glory, one good thing happened during this time of mud slinging and hate mongering — the city of Mesa approved a Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

Mesa voters decided to put previously failed efforts behind them and do the right thing. They finally recognized the importance of Martin Luther King's endless speeches and peaceful demonstrations about giving all Americans the opportunity to prosper in this great society.

Many of the original opponents of the proposition must have put common sense before personal feelings or maybe they just didn't show up. However, it is beyond the grasp of the Editorial Board as to why the previous efforts had failed.

We wonder why it took so long. Was it truly because Mesans are a lot of racist goons who do not care about the advancement of other Mesans? Or maybe it was because city employees wanted to work more than the rest of the state and country. Whatever the reason, Proposition 408 passed.

There should be no more doubt about the city of Mesa. The citizens of this state should be proud that Mesans came out to cast their vote for fairness and humanity. After all, Dr. King did a great deal to bring the plight of African Americans out from the constricting hold of the southern states.

One thing is for sure, we no longer have to be the boil on the ass of America — well, we still have the governor. Now Mesans can get all of those convention dollars they have lost because the city did not recognize the great purveyor of human rights. But last night they finally did.

It took about four times, but they approved it. There will be no more bickering as to the placement of the proposition on the ballot as there was in the past. Mesans indicated that they are, in fact, caring people who believe that civil and human rights are important. A premature bravo can be dished out to the folks in Mesa for showing up and voicing their choice.

Election marks move to center

Well, the people have spoken and the only mandate out there has been given to the status quo. The most powerful party represented in this election was not the Democratic, the Republican, the Reform or the Libertarian, but the incumbent party.

Should this surprise anyone? I don't think so.

In the presidential race, clearly the better candidate won. The rude caterwauling last week at Gammage Auditorium by the desperate (did I mention rude?) Republicans during the Clinton visit only served to underscore the point.

They knew it was a close race in our state. Much closer than it would have been with a viable Republican candidate. When President Clinton won Arizona, a feat not accomplished in this conservative stronghold for nearly half a century, it became apparent this was not much of a race.

In the congressional battles, the Democrats picked up a couple of seats in the House while the Republicans picked up a few in the Senate. But again, the big winners were the incumbents. So, the margin of majority in the House will be the smallest since Truman, but Republican. The Senate remains with a Republican majority. There was no coattail effect with Clinton's re-election. So, who won?

The United States of America won.

First off, things are good in our country. The economy's healthy, the deficit has been reduced, new jobs are being created, government has been streamlined. Go ahead and credit your favorite political party for the good, they are patting themselves on the back for it already. Rightfully so. If things are going well, incumbents should be re-elected. For the president, if you don't screw up anything too badly and the economy is good, you will be re-elected, unless you are George Bush.

The best thing that happened in the election is neither party can claim a screaming victory. We want to keep Bill Clinton and a Republican Congress. Most of the Republicans have been struck with a new sense of humility. Newt Gingrich sounds ready to work with the president. The statement coming out of most Republican mouths the day after the general election is that the people have spoken, Clinton is the president of choice and they are prepared to let him set out his agenda, as they set the agenda after the 1994 elections. They will consider what the president has to say.

The Arab-Israeli conflict should be so easy. This election presages a move to the moderate that is more important than party lines. The ethics inquiries and other points of contention that exist will not go away, but we should see a resurgence of bipartisan effort.

What hurt the Republican Party was the contentious spirit of the Contract with America, and the mistaken belief they had been given an all-powerful mandate. They can claim some victories, but not very many. Most of the victories are shared. There is the misconception that the Democrats want big government. Nobody wants big government anymore. People do want their concerns looked after however, and on the whole, they're willing to pay a reasonable price for it. This does not mean they don't want smart government that makes the most use of each dollar. They do. That's why Clinton is president.

Say what you want about our president, he is a very intelligent man who deserves respect for knowing how to engineer change. Accuse him of vacillating on the issues if you like, the flip side explanation is the ability to hear his constituency and change positions to better reflect the voice of the people. He doesn't have to be right all of the time, just be able to get to the right position, and he knows it. The president of the United States is the steward of the people and has to stand for what is right, but also know when to change.

Think of Bob Dole as the Terminator: strong, single-minded, straight forward and hard to deny. Think of Bill Clinton as Terminator II: strong, fluid, able to do whatever it takes to get the job done. The second movie's conclusion aside, when you want something done, who are you going to call? I think we all know the answer.

Bill Clinton is the prototype of a new presidential breed. Expectations are, and should be, high for this administration. The tools are in place for a cooperative effort to go forward. The first four years were respectable, but the second term will make or break his spot in history.

We've purchased a bridge from Bill. Now it's time to build the damn thing.

Governor prepares to disregard will of people

Finally, the elections are over. Clinton is still in, Dole is out (Perot always was), and Mesa city employees get a paid holiday for Martin Luther King Day.

TINA HOLDER
Columnist

What I was happy to see, as many readers out there will be able to guess, was the approval of Proposition 201. It wasn't a close win either; it was passed by 64 percent of the people. I was happy to see the voters of Arizona seem to understand a little something about "fairness."

But, as many of the Natives in this state suspected would happen, our dear governor is saying he will veto Proposition 201, along with the "drug" bill.

Seems a little strange, doesn't it? The "people" have spoken. They want all Indian nations in Arizona to have a fair chance at economic self-sufficiency. They want violent drug offenders to serve 100 percent of their sentences and they want doctors to be able to prescribe medicine for illnesses, even if that medicine is considered "illegal."

Symington was reported to have said that he would veto these two bills at the Republican gathering at the Hyatt last night. Period. No consideration for the fact the people of this state overwhelmingly voted for these bills. No consideration for the fact that while many of the votes came from Natives, many also came from non-Natives. He doesn't want these five nations to have gaming and I guess in his warped mind that is all that matters.

I'm sure that there are many of you who didn't realize that the governor had this power. Most governors have been smart enough not to use this "power" to override the wishes of the citizens of their states. Most governors would just step back, say that the people have spoken and go on with other business. Of course, we aren't talking about most governors, we are talking about Symington.

I must admit that if I were president of one of these nations I would not be "begging" for permission to build a casino on my own land. I have never agreed with the idea that we need permission to build something on our land — well, actually, we never did until the government found out how much money they could get out of us, but we have already discussed that so I'll leave it alone. But, the presidents and councils of these nations were trying to follow the rules. They were only wanting what would be fair — 16 of 21 nations in this state have gaming and with that a chance to actually make some changes on the reservations.

They were following the rules and trying to get Symington to negotiate compact with them. Symington refused, so they took it to the people. The people sided with the Natives and agreed that it is only fair that these five nations also be allowed to have gaming.

So, where does Symington get off thinking that he should veto these bills? Has this man gone completely over the edge? Would he like to see all 21 nations in this state without gaming? Does he like having us in a position of dependency? Just what exactly is the problem, governor?

I am sick and tired of this man getting by with things that any of us would have already been thrown under the jail for. He has allegedly (I have to use that word) falsified documents, lied about it, cheated people out of their hard-earned money, then lied about it. He has either lied about his finances or is the worst financial manager of all time. He has been indicted, he has filed bankruptcy to keep these people from ever getting their money back and he has even tried to keep court records and other documents from being public record. There are so many other things that I just do not have the space to write about — yet, this man is still allowed to remain in office.

Excuse me, Arizona?

Homecoming for all students

This is a monumental year in ASU's Homecoming history. Yes, it is going to be the game that sends ASU to the Rose Bowl. That's true.

But something more is happening. Something so amazing and so unprecedented that the entire school should take notice. ASU's Homecoming week activities, for the first time in its more memorable history, IS FOR STUDENTS.

"We have Homecoming week activities?" you may ask. Well that only proves that it hasn't been for you in the past. If it had been, you would have remembered it. Yes, it is for alumni, faculty, staff and the local Tempe community, too. But this year, unlike any other, ASU's Homecoming is for the students who make up ASU. Just look at the events — Wednesday night a free movie screening at Harkins of The Long Kiss Goodnight and Thursday is the platinum rock band Seven Mary Three at the University Activity Center for only $5. Friday is full of student events such as Spirit and Culture Day, the President's Kickoff (with free food), and a lantern walk up "A" mountain. Saturday is the Homecoming parade and then THE BIG GAME. These events naturally are for everyone, but they are designed for students.

Yes, there is a whole list of events geared toward ASU's valuable alumni. We would never leave them out. But, now is the time that the Associated Students of ASU's activities department is making good on one of this year's published goals: A Student Oriented Homecoming.

This year, HOMECOMING IS FOR STUDENTS. Take part in it. Go to the events all week. Attend the concert and parade. Send a message to the University and future ASASU types that you expect and demand, a successful Homecoming specifically designed for you. That future is not currently set in stone. You will make it happen.

Professor lauds campus groups 'if you can think of a better one'

Bravo on the confession of Robert Kerrigan, of the "Christian" college Republicans. His disassociation with the infamous Donald Dalglish is appropriate. Dalglish's "proliferation of political smut," as Kerrigan calls it, is right on.

I'm with lecturer in the department of English, Jacqueline Wheeler, who said (State Press Oct. 14), "I was shocked and saddened when I read remarks of Donald Dalglish." Now if the Young Republicans of ASU would disassociate themselves from the rotten "slime ads" of J.D. Hayworth, we could have a modicum of respect for this ASU minority.

Why has Kerrigan not come out apologizing for "sportscaster-turned Congressman" J.D. Hayworth? To say nothing of Fife, who has 23 federal indictments against him and has gotten in bed with the tobacco industry. Does Kerrigan know that 71 percent of Arizona want Gov. Symington to "resign" and now, before the recall overtakes him.

I congratulate the State Press in its ethical journalism, unlike the days of Jay Heiler, now in a $100,000 post with Gov. Fife.

The power of trash TV

She's not only one of the richest women in the United States, but judging from what happened last week, she seems to have a pretty powerful grip on the American people too.

No, I'm not talking about any politicians this time (the she would probably have been a he then, wouldn't you think?) I'm talking about good, old Oprah Winfrey.

In case you didn't know (you are, after all, college students and should have better things to do than watch talk shows), Oprah has launched this book club of hers. The concept of this informal book club is that Oprah tells her audience what the book of the month is, people go out and buy the selected title, and a month later she discusses the book with the audience and the author on one of her shows.

Last month, Oprah enthusiastically proclaimed the book of the month to be Toni Morrison's Song of Solomon. Sure enough — three or four weeks later the nearly twenty-year old novel is heading toward the bestseller lists.

Who needs a newly re-elected Bill Clinton to tell us when and where to read, we've got Oprah.

In five minutes, Oprah Winfrey was able to make thousands of Americans do what they should already be doing without some TV personality telling them: read.

I applaud Oprah for creating her "book club" and thereby making it more attractive to the TV junkies to pick up a book and read. And I applaud Oprah in her choice of novels — Song of Solomon is a work of art filled with mysticism, intriguing characters and a fascinating plot. But, to put it in State Press terms: "Boo" to people who are so caught up in TV land they are willing to do anything a celebrity tells them to do. Thank God it was only reading this time.

The power of television has rarely been more obvious than in this example. Yet, few involved in broadcast media seem to appreciate this appropriately. Day in and day out, the numerous channels are filled with programs which do little but stupefy a growing apathetic audience. Trashy talk shows, violent real life dramas, tabloid "news" shows and shows aimed at adolescents who can't tell reality from the fictitious lives of the crew in Beverly Hills and Melrose Place anymore.

"We give people what they want," is a common reply from people involved in feeding the minds of the lowest common denominator of the American people. Wrong. They give people what they ingeniously have made people want: sensationalized trash.

It may take some readjusting and decline in income from commercials, but the American people deserve to be treated as the diverse group of people it is; not a herd of brain-dead cows who readily accept anything given to them through TV signals. But, it's essential people also show they are worthy of such trust by sending signals back telling media icons that the power lies within the audience, not the person behind the microphone.

Oprah Winfrey told her audience to read a book and they did. Hopefully, this will be the start for many of those readers to turn off the TV in order to read books no one told them to, but out of their own free will and enjoyment.

Jenny Jones told her guest that a man had a crush on him and the guest later killed the man. Hopefully, this tragedy will serve as an eye-opener for people to turn off such shows and become responsible viewers.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

- A man was arrested for domestic violence and misdemeanor assault after he was observed hitting his girlfriend in the face and head three to four times while in a vehicle parked at 3320 S. Priest Drive. He also grabbed the woman by the back of the hair and tried to push her head into the steering wheel. The man then approached a witness and threatened to "f--- (him) up" if he did not stop watching. The man was carrying a steel bar above and behind his head in a threatening manner. He was booked into Tempe City Jail.
- A man was arrested for robbery after police spotted him in a store and determined that he fit the description of a suspect who entered a Bank One at 2528 W. Southern Ave., earlier and demanded all the $20s and $50s from a teller. When the man saw the police, he fled the store through the back door but stopped after a short pursuit. The money was recovered from the man's front pocket, and a check of the area revealed the jacket, pants and hat the suspect wore during the robbery in a dumpster behind the store.

Phoenix slated to hold hearing on Coyotes rink

BY BILL BERTOLINO
STATE PRESS

The Phoenix Parks and Recreation board will be holding a public hearing today to discuss the proposed site for the Phoenix Coyotes practice ice arena.

If passed, a portion of Papago Park would be developed into an ice arena near the Papago Sports Complex on McDowell Road and 64th Street.

The hearing will be take place at the Pueblo Grande Museum in the Community room from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. The museum is located at 4619 E.

Washington St., in Phoenix.

Phoenix city officials estimate that the proposed area would be built on about four to five acres of desert land.

According to Rob Harman, facilities supervisor for the city of Phoenix, the ice arena will also be available to the public.

Phoenix Parks and Recreation board members will vote on the proposal during their next meeting on Tuesday.

City officials contend that the arrival of the Coyotes has made ice skating even more popular, and the need for "available ice" is necessary.

Scientists report finding earliest signs of Earth life

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have found the earliest signs of life on Earth, chemical signatures hidden in microscopic mineral grains more than 3.85 billion years old.

That pushes back the record of life by 300 million to 400 million years, to a time when Earth might have been pummeled by a lethal bombardment of asteroids. So if that bombardment really happened, some life might have survived, or perhaps it rose again from extinction.

The newfound traces of life were left by microorganisms, probably single-celled, that could have been "very undistinguished blobs" living at the bottom of an ocean, said researcher Gustaf Arrhenius of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography at the University of California, San Diego.

"It's not some precursor to life, it's real life," said Arrhenius, who reports the finding with graduate student Stephen Mojzsis and colleagues in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

Other scientists called the evidence for the ancient life strong, though not proof.

Researchers looked for evidence of life in the oldest sedimentary rocks known, from Greenland, more than 3.85 billion years old. They found tiny grains of a mineral called apatite, which is often produced by microorganisms. The calcium-containing mineral also makes up bones and teeth.

The real news is what showed up inside the grains. Living things process carbon from the environment and they prefer a kind of carbon called carbon-12, rather than the heavier carbon-13. So a lump of carbon that has been processed by a living thing has a higher ratio of carbon-12 to carbon-13 than one finds elsewhere in nature.

Inside the apatite grains, researchers found carbon ratios in the range to have come from living things.

"That looks an awful lot like a biological activity," said a scientist familiar with the work, David Des Marais of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center at Moffett Field, Calif.

He called the results strong evidence of ancient life.

Norman Pace, a microbial biologist at the University of California, Berkeley, agreed.

"I think it's wonderful," Pace said, adding that the work overcame objections to a previous, controversial hint of life of about the same age.

Still, Pace cautioned that it's not proof, because the telltale carbon ratio might have come from some non-biological process that scientists don't know about.

John M. Hayes, a senior scientist in the geology and geophysics department at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts, said it will take multiple lines of evidence to prove the case. For example, for life at 3.5 billion years ago, scientists have not only suggestive carbon ratios but also bacteria-like fossils and other evidence, which altogether make an impressive case, he said.

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Robert Downey Jr. was sentenced to three years probation on drug and weapons charges and must stay in a drug rehab program for about three more months.

"If you've ever had a chance here to deal with this problem and maintain your sobriety, this is the chance to do it," Judge Lawrence Mira said Wednesday. "I wish you good luck. You've made a good start."

Downey, 31, was ordered to submit to periodic drug and alcohol tests during his stay at the drug treatment center and pay a $250 fee. Mira sentenced the actor to 99 days in jail, but he was credited for time served.

Downey was first arrested in June after his pickup truck was stopped for speeding and authorities found crack cocaine, heroin and a .357 Magnum revolver inside. He pleaded no contest to cocaine and weapons possession and driving under the influence.

He entered a drug rehab center after his arrest in July when he was found passed out in a neighbor's bed. The family chose not to press charges.

MOSCOW (AP) — Will a Trump Tower share the skyline with the Kremlin's spires?

"We're looking at building a super-luxury residential tower, which I think Moscow desperately wants and needs," Donald Trump was quoted as saying in the Moscow Times on Wednesday.

Trump, in the Russian capital this week, said he picked

Moscow because "it is really a city with a great future, great potential."

It would be the first real-estate development project outside the United States for Trump, who owns several casinos in Atlantic City, N.J.

The force behind Trump's visit is Ben LeBow, chairman of the board of the U.S.-based company Brooke Group Ltd., the Times reported. Brooke is the parent company of cigarette maker Liggett-Ducat, which is developing a Moscow office and wants Trump to build on the property.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Howard achieved TV stardom at age 6, but he wouldn't wish the same for kids today.

Howard, who played Opie on The Andy Griffith Show during its eight-year run, said he tries to discourage parents from putting their children in the business.

"I'm one of the few child actors who got through it without a lot of anger and resentment," the director of Ransom said in the Sunday issue of Parade magazine. "Most child actors aren't taught how to act. They're sort of taught how to perform. They're like trained animals."

As a child, Howard also made guest appearances on Dr. Kildare and The Fugitive. He said he was comfortable with acting and his dad gave him a lot of confidence.

"The things I learned as a child I was able to reapply as an adult," Howard said, "whereas a lot of child actors have to unlearn the cutesy kid tricks that sabotage them later when they're trying to operate on a more adult level."

NEW YORK (A) — Joely Richardson says she couldn't have asked for a better supporting cast than the animal-actors in 101 Dalmatians.

The 31-year-old actress stars in a live film remake of the animated Disney classic.

"These dogs were just brilliant," she said in Sunday's issue of Parade magazine. "Perdy (her dog in the film) especially. I'd always know if she was having a bad day or was nervous."

The original 101 Dalmatians was released 35 years ago. In the version due out Nov. 27, Fisher and co-star Jeff Daniels play a young couple who fall in love (as do their dogs), only to have the evil Cruella De Vil, played by Glenn Close, kidnap their puppies with the idea of turning them into fur coats.

NEW YORK (AP) — Chuck Woolery and his fans have made a love connection.

Woolery, perhaps best known as the host of the TV dating show Love Connection, said he "has a new lease on life" six weeks after undergoing a quadruple heart bypass.

Woolery, 50, returned to work this week as host of the Family Channel's cable talk show Home and Family. The letters, cards and e-mail sent by numerous fans has been a major aid in his recovery, he told the New York Post in a story Wednesday.

"There's no way I could thank everybody enough," he said.

Town locks bathrooms during meetings

GEORGETOWN, Mass. (AP) — Public meetings have become a bit like long car trips for the residents of this Massachusetts town.

The town hall's bathrooms have been ordered locked shut during public assemblies in Georgetown, a town of 6,300 people 26 miles north of Boston.

The reason? The bathrooms are not accessible to people with physical disabilities.

"In this case, equal access means no access," said Town Finance Director Jim Davis. "It's the law. The law is stupid, and we're complying."

The policy was started after an anonymous complaint to the Massachusetts Office on Disabilities. The complaint alleged that the 92-year-old converted schoolhouse violated the Americans with Disabilities Act, which requires all public accommodations to be accessible to people with disabilities.

Davis says the town can't afford to upgrade the restrooms just yet.

That angers Bill Walker, chairman of the Georgetown Equal Access Commission.

"Jim Davis isn't disabled in any way that I know of, but I am," said Walker, who is blind. "He doesn't understand we come from experience he just doesn't have. We want it to be done and we want it to be done now."

Run for hospital ends short for new parents

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — The race to the hospital was too fast for Troy Clark's minivan and not fast enough for his pregnant wife.

When Clark was rushing his wife

Virginia to the hospital early Monday, he missed his exit and, after driving 85 mph, had to pull over because his engine quit.

As he was trying to restart the van, Clark's role shifted from chauffeur to midwife.

"I turned (the van) around, and she said, 'She's coming now!'" Clark said.

Clark called for help on his cellular phone, and emergency workers coached through the delivery and called for an ambulance.

Alexis Brittany Clark — weighing 8 pounds, 10 ounces — was born at 3:54 a.m. Moments later, an ambulance took the family to the hospital.

Pepper in class sparks suspension

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — A mother is steaming after her 11-year-old son was suspended from school for bringing a homegrown hot pepper to class.

"I understand the need to have discipline, but this is ludicrous," said Barbara Kuly, whose seventh-grader was to serve a one-day suspension for violating the "nuisance" part of his school's disciplinary code.

Myles Kuly, who grew the pepper in a backyard garden, brought the vegetable to Monroe Middle School last week. Several students touched the pepper, and one of them afterwards touched his eye, causing it to swell shut.

"The student required medical attention," Assistant Superintendent Barry Aycock told The Charlotte Observer.

Mrs. Kuly said the action will hurt her son because the school code prohibits students from joining certain clubs if they have been suspended.

CIA disputes ties to drug dealers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA has gone to court to dispute claims by three alleged drug dealers that they were working for the spy agency.

In a document made public Wednesday, a CIA official told the U.S. District Court in San Diego that the agency searched its records and found no evidence of "any kind of operational, contractual or employment relationship" with the men.

It identified them as Nicaraguan cocaine dealer Danilo Blandon, former California police officer Ronald Lister and David Scott Weekly, whom Lister has named as his CIA contact.

A fourth individual named in the document was identified as Los Angeles crack cocaine dealer "Freeway" Rick Ross.

In the declaration, the CIA said it knew as early as 1984 that Norwin Menesis was a major cocaine trafficker. But it said a 1986 search of the agency's records at the FBI's request failed to produce any evidence of a CIA relationship with Menesis.

A censored document included in the court filing said that in December 1984 a source, whose name was deleted, "reported that a Norwin (Menesis) was apparently well known as the Nicaraguan mafia dealing in drug(s), weapons and smuggling and laundering of counterfeit money."

The document, which was headed "Three Persons Claiming CIA Affiliation," also said Menesis was described as "the kingpin of narcotics traffickers in Nicaragua prior to the fall of Somoza."

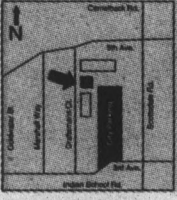

The CIA inspector general is investigating allegations that the agency was involved in the introduction of crack cocaine into the United States.

Inspector General Frederick Hitz has said it might take months to examine fully records of the relationship between the CIA and Nicaraguan Contra members implicated in 1980s cocaine trafficking in California.

Militia member gets separate trial

(AP) — A federal judge ordered a separate trial on machine-gun charges Wednesday for one member of the Viper Militia, the paramilitary group originally accused of conspiring against the federal government.

U.S. District Judge Earl Carroll set a Dec. 3 trial date for Gary Curtis Bauer, who faces seven charges of unlawful possession of a machine gun in the 19-count indictment against Viper members.

Carroll also ordered trial to begin Jan. 28 for all 12 defendants on conspiracy charges of making explosive devices and furnishing instruction in how to use them as part of a plot against the government.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Frederick Battista, the lead prosecutor in the case, said Carroll's action is expected to be the first in a series to separate firearms charges in the case from those dealing with explosives.

"It appears he intends to set subsequent individual machine-gun trials," Battista said.

Randy Lynne Nelson; Dean Carl Pleasant, David Wayne

Belliveau and Walter Earl Sanville also face various charges of possessing machine guns. Battista said any further separate trials would be scheduled between Dec. 3 and Jan. 28.

Federal agents searching Bauer's home in July seized three 9 mm submachine guns, three fully automatic rifles and one fully automatic pistol.

Bauer's attorney, James Logan, declined comment on Carroll's ruling.

The 12 militia members were arrested July 1 after a seven-month undercover investigation. The government accused the group of plotting to blow up federal buildings in Phoenix.

Bauer, Nelson, Belliveau and Pleasant are among six defendants still in custody. Sanville and five others were released July 11 under conditions of house arrest pending trial.

Among the other items federal agents seized during searches of the defendants' homes were dynamite, projectiles and explosives that included more than 500 pounds of ammonium nitrate — the key ingredient in last year's bombing of a federal building in Oklahoma City.

Clinton celebrates, works little on post-Election Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton came back to the White House a happy man Wednesday, throwing a party in his back yard to express his gratitude at being re-elected and his high hopes for the next four years.

"I begin this new tenure with high optimism," Clinton told hundreds of aides and campaign workers who gathered on the White House lawn for a welcome home rally. All but four members of his Cabinet were there, and some wore "Welcome Home" T-shirts over business suits.

"This race was won because of the record we made, and because of the plans we have," Clinton said. "We work hard. And in the end, that is what sustained us."

With his re-election still less than a day old, Clinton began laying the groundwork for a second term. He received resignations from his secretaries of defense, state, energy and commerce. Despite that, Secretary of State Warren Christopher attended the White House party, only to be ribbed by his boss.

"If a picture of Warren Christopher in that T-shirt gets out, he'll be on Letterman and Leno within 48 hours," Clinton said.

UCLA Bruins fire men's basketball coach Harrick

(AP) LOS ANGELES — Jim Harrick, a campus hero 19 months ago when he coached UCLA to its first NCAA basketball title in 20 years, was fired Wednesday over an alleged recruiting violation and a false expense report.

Steve Lavin, a 32-year-old assistant, will be the interim coach this year, and the school will look for a successor to Harrick during the season.

The dismissal came two weeks before the start of the season and one week before the fall signing period begins.

HARRICK

The university said the firing had nothing to do with the well-publicized sale of a car by Harrick's son to the older sister of a prized recruit in September.

UCLA chancellor Charles Young announced the dismissal in a news release, saying Harrick had been "terminated" for "misstatements" following a UCLA investigation.

The school, in response to an NCAA inquiry, had been looking into possible recruiting violations.

LAVIN

UCLA boasts one of the most storied traditions in college basketball history, having won 10 NCAA championships in a 12-year span under John Wooden ending in 1975, when Wooden retired.

Harrick, 58, leaves as the second-winningest coach in school history, behind Wooden.

Harrick was informed of the firing by Young and athletic director Peter Dalis after practice Tuesday.

"UCLA appreciates the hard work that Jim has invested in the men's basketball program during his eight years as head coach, and his program has been very successful," Young said. "However, his termination is linked to the

ASU women's hoops coach set to get season underway

BY PERCY EDNALINO JR. STATE PRESS

Timing is everything for ASU women's basketball coach Charli Turner Thorne.

Before practice Wednesday at the University Activity Center, Turner Thorne said she wants to capitalize on the current popularity of women's basketball.

And with the team's first exhibition game against Ruzembrook scheduled for Wednesday, Turner Thorne said the team is nervous, but ready, to begin the season.

"They're going to come in a week from today and basically show us everything that we're not doing," Turner Thorne said of Ruzembrook. "They're going to totally exploit all of our weaknesses and it's going to be great. We're going to be able to look at that and say, 'OK, where do we need to go from here?'"

Turner Thorne said although there are eight seniors on the team, only forwards Melissa Boyle and Molly Tuter have played Division I basketball for four years, while guard Alyssa Johnson and forward Christine Garner have no college basketball experience.

Yet Turner Thorne said having eight seniors on the team gives the Sun Devils a measure of maturity on the court.

"We're trying to make everything positive, but we've got a lot of work ahead of us," Turner Thorne said. "We're trying to teach very quickly an entirely new system to every single player on the team."

Garner, spent the last four seasons on the Sun Devil volleyball team, while Johnson did the same for the softball team.

"She's definitely tough," Garner said of her coach. "She doesn't let you slip, but I think that's exactly what this team needs. She's a great motivator and we work really hard in practice. She insists on that. I think that's what's going to make the difference."

Making a difference is exactly what the team hopes to do. The Sun Devils are predicted to finish last in the Pac-10 with Stanford picked to win the conference, by

Golf teams close out fall season

BY ED ODEVEN STATE PRESS

Hilton Head, S.C. is a well-known vacation site.

But, the ASU men and women's golf teams will maintain a business-like persona when the Sun Devils visit Hilton Head this weekend.

The Sun Devils will participate in their final golf tourney of the semester Friday through Sunday at the 1996 Golf World/Palmetto Dunes Invitational.

ASU wants to end the semester successfully, according to ASU women's golf coach Linda Vollstedt.

"It's the last event of the year," she said. "We want to play really well. I'd like to end the (fall) season on a positive note."

Randy Lein, the ASU men's golf coach, is another optimist.

"We are going to win the tournament," he said. "We have enough talent, (but) we need all five players to play good golf."

Those five players are Scott Johnson, Brad Cannon, Pat Perez, Greg Padilla and Tim Mickelson.

The tournament will be held at the Arthur Hills Golf Course at Palmetto Hall, a 6,257-yard, par-72 course. The teams will play 18 holes Friday, 18 on Saturday and 18 on Sunday.

The men's field will consist of 18 schools — UofA, ASU, Clemson, East Tennessee State, Florida, UNLV, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Carolina State, Ohio State, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, San Jose State, USC, Southern Methodist University, Texas A&M, Texas Christian University and Wake Forest.

ASU freshman Mickelson said the teams "we will need to look out for are Florida, UNLV, UofA, Oklahoma and USC."

The 12-team women's field will consist of UofA, ASU, Duke, Florida, Furman, Louisiana State, New Mexico, Stanford, Texas, Tulsa, UCLA and Wake Forest.

Senior setter Tracy Heflin finds herself among the top in the Pac-10 in digs average, despite the ASU volleyball team's woes this season.

Senior setter Heflin climbing conference, Sun Devil charts

BY DOUG COOK STATE PRESS

Hitters and blockers often get the most credit for carrying a volleyball team to victory.

While they may make the big plays both offensively and defensively, players and coaches often point to the setter as being the one most responsible for making those assignments go off without a hitch.

ASU's Tracy Heflin is no exception. The 5-foot-7 senior setter from Agoura Hills, Calif., has been one of the bright spots for a Sun Devil team which has been struggling most of the season.

ASU is currently on a six-game losing streak and in eighth place in the Pac-10.

Heflin is second in the conference in digs average with a 3.88 mark and has tallied 880 assists in 68 games. She is fifth on ASU's all-time career assists list with 1,996.

"She's a very dynamic setter," Sun Devil volleyball head coach Patti Snyder-Park said of Heflin. "She's very quick, athletic and she dishes a good ball. She can set any set."

Heflin, who is a co-captain on this year's team, said she has been pleased with her play this season, but isn't totally satisfied.

"Fifth (on ASU's career assists list) isn't fulfilling enough for me," she said. "I look at that and want to be at least second or first."

Sun Devil outside hitter Terri Cox has known Heflin since the fifth grade when they both lived in California. They later competed against one another on separate club teams in high school.

Cox, who is second in kills average and first in digs average in the Pac-10,

Assistant athletic director brings good karma to ASU

By JOSH DEFAMIO
STATE PRESS

As a little girl, ASU's new Senior Athletic Director of Administration and Compliance Betsy Mosher was not overly fond of the Cinderella story.

As an adult, the Northwestern-turned-ASU administrator is becoming quite familiar with the football version of the classic fairy tale.

"They have been talking about the Mosher Karma," she joked. "By next year, every Big Ten and Pac-10 school is going to want me, because I bring Rose Bowl berths."

However, her duties extend far beyond the football program. As the last of four associate athletic directors hired by Athletic Director Kevin White, Mosher's duties will primarily consist of the legal issues dealing with college athletics.

Mosher's job is made tougher by two high-profile incidents involving the basketball and track and field programs. One of her main goals is not only to adequately deal with situations like these once they have happened, but to prevent them from happening in the first place.

"We do a great job of auditing on the back end," Mosher said. "But why do we want to know after we have already messed up? Let's do something to prevent that."

Mosher also wants to use her position to help the student-athletes on campus make a smooth transition to campus life. She has the help of ASU veterans Jill DeMichele, Sandy Hatfield-Clubb, Bill Kennedy and John Park, who will assist with housing, financial aid and other student services for the athletes.

One of her goals is to make the student-athletes make better use of their time at ASU.

"We're really looking to create a better environment for our students," she said. "We want them to graduate, to excel and we want to do it within the rules."

Mosher's other duty involves women's athletics. She will serve as head of the Senior Women Administration. She will primarily work toward bringing equality to all women's sports, as well as other low-profile men's sports.

"We do have some issues," Mosher said about women's sports. "The softball fields and soccer fields that don't have locker fields. Even though the women are going to benefit, I hope we treat everybody equally. But, we do need to address the visibility and promotion of women's sports."

Mosher brings a diverse background of experience to ASU. She worked the past seven years at Northwestern. Prior to that, she spent a year working for the Big Ten conference and two more years working for the NCAA itself. She also has coached women's basketball and softball.

"I was involved in recruiting and hiring Betsy," Hatfield-Clubb said. "She is terrific. I think it's great that we were able to recruit one of the leading women in intercollegiate athletics. She will be a terrific role model for me and all the female student-athletes. She has a broad background, which will serve intercollegiate athletics well, in that she has taught, coached and has been at the college, conference, and NCAA level."

Finally, Mosher's time at Northwestern gives her one immeasurable bit of experience. The magical Rose Bowl season the Wildcats had last year, coupled with their national exposure, has shown her that the success of the football team can spread to all the other sports.

"Ever since the name of Northwestern has gotten out," Mosher said, "it has been a lot easier to get into the doors of recruits, because they know something about the school. I'm hoping that ASU's exposure has the same effect."

Harrick

seriousness of this situation."

Current assistants Michael Holton and Jim Saia will work under Lavin when the Bruins open play Nov. 20 against Tulsa in the Preseason NIT.

Harrick signed a five-year contract, reportedly for an annual salary of $400,000, in the summer of 1995, shortly after the Bruins won their NCAA title in Seattle.

He was cleared on Oct. 21 by the school and Pacific-10 Conference of violations in the sale of a car he owned to the older sister of standout point guard Baron Davis two days after Davis orally committed to playing for the Bruins next season.

Young said UCLA's investigation has been reported to the Pac-10 and the NCAA, and the sale of the car was "completely unrelated" to the dismissal. A league inquiry turned up no evidence of wrongdoing in that matter.

"UCLA has always tried to compete within the rules and when violations are discovered, we act quickly to investigate the situation and take decisive steps to solve the problem," Young said.

"To our thousands of fans and supporters, I offer our promise that UCLA will continue to be vigilant in enforcing high standards of conducted in all university activities."

Harrick coached at Pepperdine for nine years before succeeding Walt Hazzard as UCLA's coach in 1988. Harrick's record with the Bruins was 191-63.

UCLA was 23-8 last year, losing to Princeton in the first round of the NCAA tournament. The Bruins return all five starters and are expected to be ranked in preseason among the nation's top five teams.

Lavin became the No. 1 assistant on Harrick's staff when Lorenzo Romar left to coach Pepperdine last spring.

Lavin is about to start his sixth season as a member of the UCLA staff, but just his second as a full-time assistant. He was promoted to a full-time spot in June 1995 after spending four years as the restricted earnings coach on Harrick's staff.

In addition to committing an NCAA violation during a recruiting dinner, UCLA said Harrick violated NCAA rules regarding ethical conduct, for "refusal to furnish information relevant to an investigation of a possible violation of an NCAA regulation when requested to do so by the NCAA or the individual's institution."

Also, the school said, Harrick was charged with "knowingly furnishing ... false or misleading information concerning the individual's involvement in or knowledge of matters relevant to a possible violation of an NCAA regulation."

In addition, Harrick violated university policy by filing a false expense report in connection with the dinner, the school said.

According to the university, a recruiting dinner at a local restaurant on Oct. 11 was attended by five current players even though only three recruits were present.

It's against NCAA rules for a school to provide a free meal or entertainment to a student that assists in the recruitment of a prospect during an official visit unless the student is designated as the one student host for that prospect.

On Oct. 15, the school said, Harrick filed an expense report that misrepresented who attended dinner, a breach of NCAA and UCLA policy. The report did not include the names of the extra players, but did include the names of the two guests. The investigation revealed that neither guest ate dinner at the restaurant that night, the school said.

Six days later Harrick was cleared in the sale of his car.

When questioned about the dinner by UCLA officials conducting the investigation, the school said, Harrick misrepresented significant facts on more than one occasion.

Later, when confronted by university officials who had compiled the facts of the dinner, Harrick admitted he had misled the school.

the Pac-10 media.

Turner Thorne said the tight competition among the teams in the Pac-10 last season is an indicator of what this season should be like.

"Stanford's a cut above," Turner Thorne said. "And then I think it's wide open."

For Garner, the addition of Turner Thorne and her coaching staff is just the thing needed for the team.

"I definitely think that Charli has pushed this team in the right direction," Garner said. "Everyone is working harder than they've ever worked before. I definitely guarantee you that we will not be last in the Pac-10."

Senior guard La Toya Johnson agreed.

"I think that's good that we're underrated," she said. "I think we'll surprise a lot of teams. As long as we work hard. I think we're going to try and outwork a lot of people."

La Toya Johnson also said adjusting to Turner Thorne's new defensive and offensive schemes wasn't easy.

"Last year, all we played was zone defense and that's a slower-paced game," La Toya Johnson said. "This year, it's a more up-tempo pressure defense. It takes time, but I think everybody is willing to work hard."

Indeed, Garner said Turner Thorne has instilled a sense of discipline in the team.

For Garner, it's a familiar feeling. She played for the United States National volleyball team.

"We're getting our butts kicked by Charli and that's going to be the difference," Garner said. "She's going to definitely pull us through."

Heflin

credits Heflin for helping improve her mental game.

"She knows the type of player I am and she's seen how well I can play," Cox said of Heflin. "She's not scared to come at me and tell me what I'm doing wrong or give me good advice."

Heflin has quietly shown how talented she is as a setter. In addition to impressive assists numbers, she has put up incredible defensive stats.

Twelve days ago, she recorded a career-high 80 assists in a five-game match with Oregon at the University Activity Center. Only one other setter in the Pac-10 has come up with a better performance this season.

She also had 29 digs in that match, good for second best this season in the conference, beating a former season-high of 27 digs versus California in late September.

Heflin said that when she starts off a match well defensively, she gets psyched up for the rest of it.

"When you get into a five-game match, usually they're really exciting matches and everyone gets into it," she said. "I feel like once I get three or four digs in a row, I get pumped and I go for every ball, no matter what."

Heflin, who played four years of club volleyball in high school, credits the club for helping her game excel at ASU.

"Club ball is everything," Heflin said. "They (club coaches) taught me pretty much all I know (about volleyball). They were really strict in regiment."

Heflin said that she would drive two and a half hours, from Agoura Hills to Santa Fe Springs, Calif., three days a week after school just to attend practice for her club team.

"It was a commitment and it was worth it," she said of the experience. "I've been coached by the best setters in the nation."

Perhaps Heflin's days on the club circuit have made her appreciate the setter position even more. She said she loves helping out her teammates and considers herself the team's quarterback.

"I really enjoy making my hitters look good," Heflin said. "I like faking out the block so the other team just gets one blocker up. It's great when one of our hitters pounds the ball and my coach turns around to me and says, 'Hey, great set. Nice split. Way to fake 'em out.'"

Despite a dismal season, in which the Sun Devils are 8-11 overall and 3-10 in the Pac-10, Heflin refuses to let it get to her.

"I just hope I can make a difference, keep working hard and help this team out so next year they'll be that much better," she said. "I know next year they're going to be a really good team. I hope the players don't take this as a losing season, but as a working-to-get-better season."

Jeanne-Marie Busuttill, Keri Cornelius, Michaela Friberg, Jody Niemann and Tui Selvaratnam.

Vollstedt said this is the week to look out for Niemann. "Jody's been playing really well," Vollstedt said. "She's ready to have a good tournament. Just watching her (during practice), I think she's ready to have a good performance."

Notes:

Two ASU senior All-Americans will miss the semester-ending tourney. Instead of going to Hilton Head, Chris Hanell and Kellee Booth will be in the Philippines competing in the World Cup amateur golf championships.

Hanell will represent his native Sweden in the cup.

"He's very excited," Lein said. "I would consider him to be one of the favorites"

Booth will play for her native country as well — the U.S.

Mickelson, who replaced Hanell in the lineup this week, is anxious to play in his first collegiate stroke-play tournament.

"It feels great to represent ASU," Mickelson said.

Stars make most of power plays in 3-2 win over Coyotes

PHOENIX (AP) — The Dallas Stars finally figured out how to get their power play going.

Mike Modano scored a pair of goals, including the first of the Stars' two on power plays, in leading Dallas to a 3-2 victory over Phoenix on Wednesday night.

"The biggest difference is we're involving more people," said Stars coach Ken Hitchcock, whose team had converted only 4 of 54 power-play chances before scoring on two of seven opportunities against the Coyotes.

"We have had a lot of puck movement but only one good scoring chance. Now we're getting four of five chances on every power play."

Benoit Hogue also scored for the Stars, and goaltender Andy Moog made 29 saves for his league-leading eighth win (8-3-0) of the season.

Dallas Drake and Darrin Shannon scored for the Coyotes, who have won only two of their last nine games (2-5-2) and are winless in their last six at home (0-4-2).

And though the Coyotes have been the league's fifth-best penalty-killing team, Dallas capitalized on its first two power-play opportunities.

Modano, the Stars' leader with six goals and 16 points in 14 games, opened the scoring when he was left unattended on one side of Phoenix goaltender Darcy Wakaluk. Modano took a cross-crease pass from Greg Adams and fired into the open net at 5:33 of the first period.

"The puck was just following me around all night," said Modano, whose 227 career goals ranks seventh in Stars history.

"We all figured it (the power play) was going to come around eventually. We were getting the shots and getting the chances, but the puck wasn't going in."

Modano's second goal, which ricocheted off the crossbar and the back of Wakaluk's leg before dropping into the net, gave the Stars a 3-1 lead at 12:27 of the second period.

Less than four minutes later, Benoit Hogue redirected a pass from Jamie Langenbrunner past Wakaluk to give the Stars a 2-0 lead.

Drake's power-play goal pulled Phoenix within one at 2:15 of the second period. Dave Manson blasted a shot from the point off Moog's left pad, and Drake slapped the rebound past Moog from the slot.

Shannon capped the scoring with 4:48 to play when he slid in a rebound off a shot by Jim Johnson.

Wakaluk was pulled in favor of an extra attacker with 1:14 remaining, but the Coyotes failed to record a shot on goal.

Wakaluk, who played 37 games for the Stars last season, made 24 saves in his first loss of the season (2-1-0).

"There was a much different atmosphere around this hockey team tonight," Moog said. "I don't know if it was anxiety on our part, or Phoenix having a lack of confidence, but it felt all along like two clubs who were not sure how they were going to go about the game."

Coyotes coach Don Hay agreed.

"Guys weren't sharp and it cost us," said Hay, whose team has lost three straight against division opponents. "I'd say this was a pretty big game and we should have been ready to play."

ASU senior receives $1,000 scholarship

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA) and Sears, Roebuck and Co. Wednesday named ASU senior Jeffrey Olen as the recipient of a $1,000 postgraduate scholarship.

Olen, a sports information assistant for the Sun Devils, received the scholarship as a result of ASU winning the 1995-96 men's golf championship.

Each year, Sears and NACDA award a $1,000 academic scholarship to every NCAA Division I, II, III and NAIA institution that wins a championship. Individuals who receive scholarships are members of an institution's undergraduate athletic support staff, such as academic support staff, band members, trainers, cheerleaders, equipment room managers, sports information assistants, team managers and student assistant coaches.

Olen will Graduate in December with a bachelor of science degree in economics and plans to pursue a graduate degree while working in a sports-related field.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST
by Frances Drake

Thursday, November 7, 1996

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You harbor some doubts about a new restaurant or recreational activity, but give it a try. In romance, you could sweep someone off his or her feet. You're at your charismatic best. TAURUS (April 20 May 20) Your first instinct is probably right in shopping. You're businesslike on the job and will have something positive to show for your efforts. A family member needs some advice. GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Pleasure comes through children, romance and leisure events. Don't let money become an issue with any one. Opt for relaxation instead of confrontation. CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Luck is with you in career matters, but don't try to accomplish everything at once. Be willing to invest the necessary time, research and money. Much is accomplished by days end. LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Something that hadn't occurred to you before gives you a new approach to an investment or business matter. Morning hours accent partnerships. Later, sometime alone lessens your stress. VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You could see a close tie in a new light. Interruptions interfere with good intentions this morning. A conservative approach is best in business. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You tire early of the pleasure scene and then bury yourself in a work project. Heed your inspiration and finish what you start. Be sure to get enough rest after dark. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)

You could be too finicky about health and diet and need to lighten up. Prospects for enjoyable leisure and romance are good. In romance, feelings grow stronger. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You could have mixed feelings about an outing. Home matters are the focus of your attention. Intuitive promptings are on target regarding career. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Shoppers could end up exchanging an item. Your taste is for something different in the way of entertainment. Dating and romance are particularly favored. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) The day begins on a lackadaisical note. Collector's items, antiques and stereo equipment are the types of items that have an appeal to the shopper in you. However, check your finances before making a purchase. PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) You could sample local culture. Weekend travel will prove different from your usual routine. Things should go pretty much your way in general. YOU BORN TODAY bring a disciplined approach to creative work. You tend to be a perfectionist in what you do. Although somewhat set in your opinions, you are loyal and conscientious. You tend to test others before they gain your trust. You have an unfortunate tendency to be domineering or too exacting. Dramatic by nature, you may have a special talent for the theater, Teaching, law and medicine may also appeal to you.
