Orchestra outraged at Gammage alterations

BY JEFF OWENS
STATE PRESS

Some members of the Phoenix Symphony Orchestra are strung out about plans to alter the structure of Gammage Auditorium.

They have petitioned against the removal of the stage's 80-ton acoustic shell, which contributes to the hall's near-perfect sound.

In a letter to the Board of Regents, violinist Jan Septon wrote: "We are most concerned that by removing the acoustic shell, ASU will not only squander taxpayers' money, but will also ruin the auditorium for its students and for future audiences of live, unamplified music."

Colleen Jennings-Roggensack, ASU executive director of public events, said the changes are still in the works, and they come in response to the evolving nature of Gammage events.

"Thirty years ago, it was built for one purpose — symphony orchestras," she said. "Now people come for a variety of reasons.

They come to see Phantom of the Opera and the Nutcracker."

The design modifications are planned to accommodate a production of Showboat scheduled for next July.

Septon's letter notes that "Destroying the most valuable feature of Gammage Auditorium in order to turn it into a cash cow for the University seems irresponsible, shortsighted, and contrary to the educational mission of the University."

Jennings-Roggensack said while she is aware of high feelings about the auditorium, Gammage simply has to keep up with the times.

"People have strong emotional ties to a lot of things in life," she said.

Gammage's renowned acoustics are a product of architects trained by Frank Lloyd Wright. They designed the hall's shell and curved ceiling to deliver pure acoustic sound to every seat in the building.

Jennings-Roggensack said the final decisions on any architectural changes will be made at an as-yet undetermined time.

Hanukkah holiday is here

BY DEANNA DARR
STATE PRESS

Happy Hanukkah to all the Jewish students at ASU.

Hanukkah, known as the festival of lights or the feast of rededication, commemorates the victory of the Jews over King Antiochus in the year 165 B.C.

The legend says that when the Jews returned to the Holy Temple, they found only enough olive oil to light the Menorah for a day. The story goes on to say that the Menorah instead burned for eight days, therefore, Hanukkah is celebrated for eight days.

On each of the nights of Hanukkah a candle is lit until all eight are burning on the final day.

Joshua Cole, Student Board president for the Hillel Jewish Student Union and a senior majoring in journalism, said traditionally Hanukkah is not a major holiday for people of the Jewish faith.

"Because it occurs around Christmas, it's kind of been Americanized," Cole said.

Hanukkah began Thursday at sundown. But according to an inaccurate listing in the Residential Life Handbook, the holiday is to begin Dec. 17.

He said Hillel is planning several activities for the holiday. Tonight there will be services, a dinner and a party at Hillel starting at 6 p.m. Monday night a candle will be lit at Manzanita Hall.

Cole said that Hanukkah has gained importance in the United States mainly because of the Christmas holiday: "Jewish students feel the pressure," he said.

Coor: ASU in best shape ever

BY BECKY HILL
STATE PRESS

ASU President Lattie Coor, in his final fall report to the Arizona Board of Regents, will re-live a stellar semester filled with University records.

The week following the launch of a Mars probe bedecked with ASU-built equipment and less than a month before the Sun Devils head to Pasadena undefeated, Coor will kick off a set of technological, academic and athletic milestones previously unheard of by the University.

At its Wednesday meeting in Tucson, the regents will also hear the latest changes to the new tenure review system, University report cards and non-resident tuition waivers.

In addition, the spring calendar for 1997-1998 tuition setting will be up for approval.

Policy issues aside, the President's Report released this week seems to prove Coor has reason to exercise bragging rights.

The Mars Pathfinder began its space trip to the Red Planet at 2 a.m. Wednesday and is expected to arrive July 4, 1997. Equipment used to identify rock types and the chemical composition of the atmosphere are housed on the ship.

Other research-based accomplishments include the awarding of a National Science Foundation contract.

One of only 13 offered from the more than 130 proposals considered nationwide, ASU research will focus on the study of extreme pressure and temperature on various types of newly discovered materials.

Academically, the GPA for incoming freshmen is higher than ever and this is reflected in the record number of students enrolled in the Honors College and who received National Merit, Truman and Marshall scholarships.

Fewer students than ever were admitted with math or English deficiencies.

Provost Milton Glick said the University has reached these heights due to a culmination of hard work and planning.

"It is really reflective of the students, faculty and staff," he said. "I really do think success is building on success."

Glick said it will be difficult to recreate or surpass the accomplishments of this semester but added, "We will just have to work harder."

ASU has also made tradition-breaking strides in the areas of post-tenure review and teacher evaluations.

The issue of post-tenure review has in the past been an untouchable subject, but all that is changing with the creation of new ABOR and Academic Senate policy.

Academic Senate President Tom Callarman said a new draft of changes to what will eventually become post-tenure review policy will be presented to the regents this month.

"We wanted to make it very clear that the evaluation of teaching would be taken seriously," he said.

The big change involves the amount of time a professor has to improve once deemed 'unsatisfactory.'

"We put specific language in the improvement process so that anyone with a teaching deficiency will have to meet improvement standards usually within a year."

Though some conditions will allow instructors to advance their skills over a three-year period, this is a reversal from an earlier plan that allowed an automatic three-year term for improvement.

Callarman also said the draft is more specific about the use of student evaluations.

"They have always been a part of professors' review portfolios but now it is clearly in policy. I don't think most students understand that."

On Monday, the Academic Senate will present a policy for publishing student evaluations.

According to ASASU President Marc Baumgartner, the published reports would be on sale at the book store, available for review from the library or on the Internet.

This may be the last issue of the State Press, but the food drive will continue through Thursday. Look for drop boxes at Stabler's Market and in the basement of Matthews Center.

Clinton, Yeltsin agree to summit

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin will meet President Clinton in March, most likely in the United States, Yeltsin's spokesman said Thursday.

Sergei Yastrzhembsky said the two leaders agreed on the summit during a telephone conversation Monday. He said the meeting most likely "will take place on American soil," said the Interfax news agency.

The White House confirmed that Clinton had agreed to meet with Yeltsin in March, but it did not mention a location. It added that Vice President Al Gore will meet with Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin in February to prepare for the summit.

In a 20-minute telephone conversation, Clinton "expressed his pleasure" at Yeltsin's recovery from heart bypass surgery, and Yeltsin congratulated Clinton on his re-election, said a White House statement. It was the leaders' first conversation since Yeltsin's surgery in November.

"The two leaders agreed on the importance of their joint leadership in further strengthening the U.S.-Russian relationship and in dealing with a wide range of issues on the bilateral agenda," the statement said.

Russian and U.S. officials had been saying the two presidents wanted to meet following their re-elections — Yeltsin's in July and Clinton's in November. They last met in Moscow in April at a nuclear safety summit.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said earlier this week that in a recent letter to Yeltsin, Clinton had added a personal postscript. McCurry paraphrased it as saying, "Let's get together soon."

McCurry said it "makes a lot of sense" for the two to meet in the first half of next year.

Yeltsin, who underwent heart bypass surgery on Nov. 5, is recovering at a country home outside Moscow. Doctors say he might return to full-time work in the Kremlin by year's end and is expected to be able to travel abroad early next year.

Paris subway bomb death toll up to 3; officials no closer to nabbing culprits

By JOCELYN NOVECK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — The bombing of a Paris subway claimed its third victim Thursday, when a Moroccan man died of wounds from Tuesday's explosion, France Info radio said.

The radio report said the third victim was a hospitalized 25-year-old, whose name was not released. Another three of the 88 wounded were still in critical condition.

The bomb ripped through a rush-hour subway train Tuesday evening, killing outright a Canadian woman and a Frenchman.

Beefed-up security measures were in force around the nation Thursday. Barricades went up outside schools and 1,800 extra soldiers and police were patrolling train stations, airports, and tourist sites. Paris schools were told not to use the subway for class trips.

But many Parisians seemed eager to forget the tragedy and get back to normal. Subway trains were full, and recorded announcements warning riders to be vigilant had stopped.

"If you let the fear get you, you don't do anything," said real estate agent Stephanie Gangneux, emerging from a Metro station

Thursday morning.

Investigators were said to be focusing on Algerian Islamic militants as prime suspects in the case. But they appeared to have no hard evidence of that, except for similarities between the nail-packed gas canister bomb and those used in a wave of attacks in 1995. Algerian militants claimed most, angered at France's support of Algeria's government.

A police source close to the probe said Thursday that although dozens of witnesses had been interviewed since the blast, they had not given investigators substantial leads. Officials set up a hotline for people to call in tips.

The source said investigators were now examining video from cameras at stations near where the bomb went off to see if anyone got on with a bag that might have carried the 30-pound bomb. The Port Royal station, where the bomb exploded, didn't have a video camera.

Interior Minister Jean-Louis Debre said that "for months and months," French intelligence had been getting indications that there could be a renewal of last year's bomb attacks — but nothing precise.

The 1995 attacks killed eight people and wounded 160.

Lighter lip color fails to impress principal

Eighth-grader still denied entrance to Kentucky school

By ALLEN G. BREED
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PIKEVILLE, Ky. — An eighth-grader who wants to wear black lipstick to class switched to dark purple Thursday and was turned away from school again by a principal who said the shade was still too distracting. Her stepmother said the girl attempted suicide.

Connie Chapman said she and her husband had to break down the bathroom door to stop 13-year-old Karla Chapman from cutting her wrists with a razor. She said she got to Karla before she harmed herself.

"She hadn't gotten that far, but she had the intention of doing it, I can tell you that much," Mrs. Chapman said. "It was a struggle with her."

Mrs. Chapman said her husband, Michael, had taken Karla to a nearby mental-health facility.

The family thought the purple lipstick was a compromise. But Runyon

Elementary School Principal Rosa Wolfe said it wasn't enough.

"The lipstick she wore this morning was still a disturbing factor," she said. "It wasn't much different from the shade she has been wearing."

Mrs. Chapman said Karla was distraught. "She said, 'I can't take this no more, I can't take this no more. What does she want from me?'" Mrs. Chapman said.

Karla has been out of school since Nov. 13 because she refused the order to remove her black lipstick. School officials cited a rule prohibiting students from wearing anything considered a distraction.

Mrs. Chapman has been charged with harassment, while her husband was charged with teacher abuse, terroristic threatening and failing to make his daughter go to school. The criminal charges stem from a confrontation at Runyon after Karla was first suspended.

Karla claims Ms. Wolfe is being arbitrary and violating her civil rights. But she has said all along that she would remove the lipstick if the charges against her parents are dropped.

School district spokesman Bruce Hopkins said Thursday that the administration stands behind Ms. Wolfe.

An American Airlines passenger jet sits at a Salt Lake International Airport gate Thursday after the flight experienced severe air turbulence over south-central Colorado, officials said. At least 16 people, including a 7-month-old baby, were reported injured.

Severe turbulence injures 16

By MATTHEW BROWN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY — An American Airlines jetliner ran into severe turbulence over Colorado Thursday, injuring at least 16 people including a 7-month-old baby, officials said.

"It just slammed me into the ceiling of the plane. It was like someone had planted a bomb under the seat," said passenger Chris Richey, 33, of Nashville, Tenn. He suffered a neck injury and bruised head.

Fourteen passengers and two crew members aboard Flight 1351 from Dallas-Fort Worth to Salt Lake City were injured, said John Hotard, spokesman for the airline in Fort Worth, Texas.

Richey said the crew discussed landing at Colorado Springs, but the two women most seriously injured, including his wife, Susan, wanted to continue to Salt Lake City. One woman's head was bleeding badly, but a doctor on board was able to staunch the bleeding, he said.

Victor White, director of air operations at Salt Lake International Airport, said the injured suffered head, neck or back injuries and lacerations. Ambulances took 11 of them to hospitals.

"Two of the flight attendants are reported as the most seriously injured so far," apparently with back injuries, White said.

The injured 7-month-old boy was reported in stable condition at Primary Children's Medical Center with a head injury that was not considered serious, said spokeswoman Bonnie Midget.

The plane, a twin-engine MD-80 with a 150-passenger capacity, was over Alamosa, Colo., at 24,000 feet when it ran into the turbulence. Hotard said there were no storms in the area, but there had been reports of turbulence in the region and the seat-belt sign was on at the time.

BRAVO — To the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for bringing to light a provision in the Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act of 1997 that requires police officers convicted of domestic violence to relinquish their weapons. There is no logical reason why cops who beat their partners should be excluded from the law.

BRAVO — To the continuing support for efforts to recall embattled Gov. Fife Symington. If Symington had the least bit of integrity, he would have stepped down long ago. But he doesn't, so the show must go on.

BRAVO — To Judge Kevin Chang in Hawaii for ruling in favor of gay marriages. The time has come for people to realize that gays and lesbians have as many rights as the heterosexual population. With any hope, all people will be allowed to escape the current stranglehold of draconian politics.

BOO — To the city of Tempe for continually allowing new builders and developers to raze historic buildings along Mill Avenue. Where downtown is concerned, history should take precedence over profit.

BRAVO — To all students who will graduate in a couple of weeks. With six years of education under your belts, getting that first job should take only a few years at most. And when you get that job, just remember, that you won't have to eat Ramen any more.

BRAVO — To the ASU football players who will head to Pasadena to take on the Ohio State Buckeyes. Play hard and bring home a victory for the school.

BOO — To administrators of Arizona's universities who will in all likelihood recommend that tuition be increased for the fall semester at their meeting later this month. Doesn't the state constitution declare that tuition is supposed to be nearly as free as possible?

BRAVO — To every student on this campus for making it through yet another grueling semester. Return to your homes for a little rest and relaxation now because in a month you will be back.

What a long strange trip it's been

It is not without a little sadness that I write my final column for the State Press.

For the past two years, I have been privileged to work with just about the greatest bunch of people I have ever had the pleasure to be associated with. While the faces have changed over the semesters, the same spirit of camaraderie, friendship and the love of journalism has never wavered.

To tell you the truth, it all seems a touch surrealistic that I will be graduating in a few days, but believe me, Rome was not built in a day.

I started my journey towards a college degree more than 11 years ago at the University of Utah. After discovering a couple of ski resorts that only charged $5 for a lift-pass on a weekday, my first venture with higher education ended with me spending more time on the slopes than in class. Of course, ski season ended, leaving me a kid without a clue or a class.

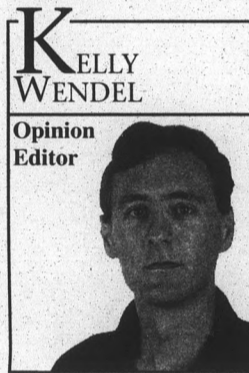

For some reason, a wild hair drove me to enlist in Uncle Sam's Canoe Club, a relatively unheard thing for a Mormon kid from a small town to do. They say join the Navy and see the world, but what they always neglect to mention that three-quarters of the world is covered by water.

After my stint, I obtained a job in Arizona working for the local military-industrial complex. The job was great, and so was the pay, but unfortunately, the "evil empire" collapsed, the cold war ended and the need for starter motors and jet engines for strategic nuclear bombers dried up. I was laid off.

The next two years of my life were perhaps the roughest I'd ever experienced. Homeless for a time, I depended on the good will of friends, who let me surf their couches and provided me with refuge. Soon, I was back on my feet, pounding nails and doing construction work, but I could tell this working man thing was no piece of cake. I was subject to the whims of the market and the wants of various foremen and managers.

I wanted control of my life back. It dawned on me one hot June day while I was on top of a roof: go back to school. That is the only way you will get anywhere.

So I went back that fall at age 25. At times, it seemed I would never finish. Every time it looked like I was getting somewhere, an obstacle would be thrown in my path. Even now, I still have some tough hoops to jump through, but I will jump through them, and you can too. Sometimes it takes courage and sometimes it is painful, but it must be done. No one said life would be easy, or fair, but if you have a goal and the will, nothing can stand in your way.

KELLY WENDEL

Life is always full of surprises, too. It has been one heck of a semester for me, what with working as the opinion editor, working as an intern for a local newspaper and attending school full time. I thought my plate was pretty full. Wrong answer.

I was adopted at birth by a couple of wonderful people who instilled a sense of values and fair-play, but recently, I located my birth parents. Needless to say, that was a trip. All of a sudden, I have long-lost family members pouring out of the woodwork. Sometimes it has been tough keeping my mind in focus, especially after meeting the four half-brothers and sisters I have found myself blessed with, but I have enjoyed every minute of their company. Since I don't have any job prospects, it looks like I will be able to spend a lot of time getting to know them.

As the time winds down, I have had a minute or two to reflect on this semester. It occurs to me that I have been at least a little bit successful in stimulating discussion and discourse on important issues. Columns on these two pages have irritated homophobes and homosexuals, conservatives and liberals, feminists and male chauvinists, students and professors and dozens of other campus sub-groups. Hey, at least we are an equal-opportunity annoyance. But that is what makes this country great: the ability of everyone to express their views, regardless of their popularity, or unpopularity.

There are quite a few things I never had a chance to touch on in these pages, from the shameful U.S.-Chinese trade policy which sacrifices human rights for trade, to the foolish anti-immigrationists who would deny this country the source of its strength.

But my time is done. Next semester, there will be another opinion editor, a new staff, and a whole new slew of controversial issues.

I wish you all well, and for those graduating seniors, a really big "Way to go." As for me, look for me on the ski slopes. I'll be the one with the big smile.

'Perfect paper' threatens law student's graduation, future

Two-and-a-half years of law school including summers and only 16 days until graduation. A few last tasks and I can prepare for the bar. The only thing that can hold me up is if my professor thinks my paper is "too perfect." That's right, a too perfect paper has put my career in jeopardy.

Law students are required to write a substantial paper in order to graduate. The task is extremely time consuming and altogether unpleasant. In addition to trying to discover an area of law that is completely foreign to you, you must fit the topic into the general body of law in order to have the subject matter make sense. But during hundreds of hours of reading, the primary concern is to cite and try not to claim any thought as your own.

Failure to attribute to other authors to the nth degree not only puts your grade at issue, but also assures you will not graduate or be approved to take the bar. This standard has been raised to new heights recently. My professor, Sam Sutton, feels my paper is so good that it must have been copied. He has run computer searches but cannot find the original source. The culture of academic and professional distrust is so strong within the law profession that this failure will not stop him. He assures me he will find the source even if it takes years. In the mean time, I do not graduate or take the bar.

I will force this incident to a resolution in my favor, but I believe this is just one example of an insistence on intellectual honesty which has run amok. Last year, several students were disciplined for submitting papers, some only first drafts, which improperly cited previous works. The previous works were papers written by the professor who the paper was submitted to, or papers handed out by that professor in class. The students cited but failed to cite enough.

Dean Arterian of the College of Law informs me that plagiarism is a strict liability offense. A strict liability offense is one which does not require mental state. You do it, you are guilty. An example is speeding.

The discipline doled out by the College of Law involves forcing the student to admit the strict liability offense under the threat of a complete loss of the opportunity to practice law. This happens even when the professor does not believe the student intentionally failed to cite enough. The Law School Honor Code and the disciplinary rules enforced by the state bar are designed to minimize dishonesty. Dishonesty is a subjective element. It can be proved by overwhelming evidence which indicates subjective dishonesty. However, the College of Law has decided that they do not need that degree of evidence. Kind of a "We-Know-Plagiarism-When-We-Saw-It" standard."

It would be easier to accept this strict liability plagiarism standard if plagiarism was easy to define. But no student I know can clearly state what exactly has to be cited. Any source that you read on the same topic? What happens when you read twenty previous writers on the same topic? Do you cite them all? What happens when you read one source which refers to another source? Do you have to cite the first source you read, because that is where you get an idea from, even though the same idea is in twenty previous sources?

But whatever you do, don't write a paper which is too good. You can't win.

All citizens deserve shot at election

A month ago, we the people of the United States of America, re-elected Bill Clinton to another four years. While I am excited and happy for President Clinton, I am also saddened because I and others of similar intent cannot fulfill our dream of running for the highest office in America. The U.S. Constitution states that "no person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States, at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President."

I fall under the exception. I am not a natural born citizen but a naturalized citizen. Regardless, I feel that the clause is obsolete and the Constitution should be amended as to allow all U.S. citizens, natural and naturalized, the opportunity to pursue the presidency. Such an inclusion would provide the American electorate the best possible candidates to contest for the leadership of this great nation.

Allow me the opportunity to pursue my dream. Ultimately, my success or failure will be determined by the American voters. And I would gladly run and lose than not to have run at all.

Victim was no model citizen

On Wednesday, Nov. 27, the State Press printed an editorial on the death of Julio Valerio at the hands of the Phoenix Police. Rightfully so the editorial board denounced the death of this person, but the truth of the situation was completely left out and in an attempt to sway your emotions to their cause, they left out some important facts.

The death of Julio Valerio was a tragic incident that no police officer should have to face nor should Valerio's family. I do question the need to riddle Valerio with 24 bullets. But we are not talking about a model citizen here. Many of you may not know that Julio was arrested twice in his lifetime: once for possession of crack and a second time for possession of a firearm. He also dropped out of school twice and was part of a gang in Phoenix. In the evening which he was shot, Julio got into a fight with his parents on whether he should be allowed to smoke pot at home and after drinking alcohol, smoking pot and doing crystal meth, he grabbed a 15-inch butcher knife and went outside. His parents called the Phoenix Police Department to report what had happened. Valerio, then high as a kite and drunk, went off and stabbed a homeless man on the street. Valerio was spotted by police and was ordered to drop the knife. He refused to drop the knife and was given a second command to drop the knife and, as before, he refused this command as well. The officers at the scene used pepper spray but due to the drugs he was on, this had no effect. The officers moved back and when Valerio lunged at them with the knife, they shot him. Was it necessary to shoot him 24 times, no. But where is the cry of foul that a family would allow their son to leave the house in that condition, or drop out of school twice or get arrested twice. The State Press as well as many of the civil rights leaders forgot about the facts and went solely on emotion. If any of you should cry foul, cry it towards the system that didn't stop Valerio the two times he came their way, and possibly throw some of those cries to the family that did little to stop their son from reaching the point he reached. If this is the typical irresponsible journalism we are going to see out of the State Press, I think it's time a major overhaul needs to occur and some policies of truth and fairness in reporting need to be instituted.

Governing elites usurp power of people, along with vote

The first paragraph of Steve Forsberg's latest column captured my attention like a vise. "You are an idiot. You are too gullible. You can't control yourself. You don't even know what's good for you. You have to be protected from yourself." Yes, Forsberg, influential government figures right here in our state are telling the voters of Arizona these very phrases.

The recently passed voter initiative, Proposition 200, is currently being shot down by Arizona state legislators right before our very eyes. Even though the measure was passed with an overwhelming majority vote, several local elected officials are making no effort to hide their personal prejudices against the intellectual capabilities and moral values of Arizona's citizens. Sen. John Kyl, in particular, states boldly that he believes the Arizona voters were duped into supporting Proposition 200. Certainly, Kyl says, Arizona voters would never have voted for a measure that gives doctors the right to prescribe marijuana to sick patients. Never, Kyl declares, would Arizona voters support a law mandating that criminals under the influence of drugs serve 100 percent of their earned jail time.

I must admit that I am an eternal optimist. Ever since I gained the right to vote, I told myself that "If only people would vote 'X' way, things could get better. The tide could change!" The tide did change on Nov. 4, 1996. The voters of Arizona supported an innovative new initiative, an initiative that cleared both the hurdles of gaining enough signatures to place it on the ballot, as well as passing by an indisputable majority in the general election. Now, however, Kyl, Gov. Fife Symington, and others in our glorious government are trying any way they can to shoot down Proposition 200. These men are not cushioning their words; they blatantly state that they think the voters of Arizona are complete fools. Do we have a message to send to these few individuals who consider their personal opinions to be so much better than 65 percent of Arizona's voters? I certainly hope so.

Thank you, Forsberg, for turning my head to face a blunt reality. The governmental figures you spoke of, who subtly push censorship on the Internet, are entirely vocal in this state when it comes to recognizing the power of each person's vote. Sadly, it appears our votes now have zero value. There is no step left between Kyl's world and Orwell's Big Brother.

I encourage supporters of Proposition 200 to write to Kyl and Symington. Did Arizona's voters indeed step to the ballot box with a clear head and a new vision, or were they duped? At the very least, remember what your legislators think of you when it comes time for re-election.

City Hall staff return from 'cubicle city' to pyramid following renovation

By RAY STERN
STATE PRESS

The City of Tempe's other-worldly, upside-down pyramid building is about to be reinhabited with city staff.

Many of the City Hall offices have been residing temporarily in another city building at Sixth Street and Mill Avenue since last spring while the landmark building was renovated.

Bobra Crockett, Tempe public relations and events coordinator, said the move will occur over three weeks starting Dec. 14, with the third-floor offices of the mayor, city council and city manager going first.

"I think it'll be nice to get back to our offices," she said. "We're kind of cramped over here. I call it Cubicle City."

The glass-and-steel City Hall building was built in 1971 and has been used as a backdrop in low-budget science-fiction movies. Its unique inverted style made the renovation cost about $500,000 more than anticipated, said Jim Bond, Tempe civil engineer.

The total for the renovation was just over $2 million, plus another $550,000 for asbestos abatement and demolition work.

"We were a little alarmed when the bids came in over our estimates," Bond said. "We did some research — basically, it's hard to do construction in an upside-down pyramid."

Much of the money went to expanding office space, new carpet and paint, and the installation of a new fire sprinkler system, which the building did not have before, he said.

"It was nothing out of the ordinary," Bond said of the renovation. "It was done for practical reasons — some things were in dire need of replacement."

The second phase of the move-in will include the Rio Salado development staff, city clerk's office and economic development on the second floor, Crockett said. The first floor will then be taken over by the fire prevention offices.

Crockett added that there will be an official rededication for City Hall on Feb. 22.

Business Skills Day seeking prospective new students

BY BILL BERTOLINO
STATE PRESS

Future business students will be working to promote their talents today during the eighth annual Business Skills Day in the Memorial Union.

ASU's Phi Beta Lambda, a professional business fraternity, is hosting the event which will run from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and will attract more than 600 high school students from Arizona.

Students will compete for the best test scores in subjects such as accounting, business law, business math and other related classes. The top three high schools will earn scholarships.

According to Keith Zaborski, business honor program coordinator, there will be campus tours and admission representatives to attract prospective students to the college.

"We will be working with the ASU admission office to promote the business college as a place for students to consider," Zaborski said.

Zaborski said the event has been good at attracting students to the University in the past.

ASU's Business Management department will also host workshops throughout the day.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A male employee reported that someone took off with a bunch of stuff from his office in the College of Business.

- Three students — one female, two male — reported that their bicycles, although secured with a lock at Palo Verde West, were not where they left them.

- Another student reported that his bicycle also was not where he left it — this time the Language and Literature Building — even though it was locked up, too.

- A green leafy substance suspected of being a popular mind-altering drug was impounded for destruction at ASU police.

- A female not affiliated with ASU reported that the Physical Sciences Building B-wing experienced a serious sugar shortage after four candy machines disappeared.

- A male who also has nothing to do with ASU reported that person or persons unknown drove off in his car which was parked in the Tempe Center and didn't even ask him for permission.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A man was arrested for disorderly conduct after police observed him yelling racially-charged expletives at a bus full of passengers, including many children, which was stopped at 1901 E. Apache Blvd. Police contacted the man, upon which he wet his pants. The man admitted to partaking of an alcoholic beverage, and the police could smell that he had. He was booked into Tempe City Jail.

Skiers rejoice: Snowbowl to open Wednesday

BY SARA BUSH
STATE PRESS

The Arizona 1996-97 ski season is kicking off a week earlier than normal with the opening of Arizona Snowbowl on Wednesday.

Located near Flagstaff, Arizona Snowbowl is one of Arizona's most popular ski areas.

According to General Manager J.R. Murray, Snowbowl usually opens around Dec. 16. This year the popular ski area has been blessed with early snow.

"We have good coverage on the mountain with as much as a 34-inch settled snow base at our mid-mountain location and less at the base," Murray said. "Conditions are good for this early of an opening."

Snowbowl managers expect the Agassiz, Sunset and Hart Prairie chairlifts to open starting at 9 a.m. Wednesday morning. Trails of all levels will open on about 85 percent of the terrain.

The Aspen chairlift, the Little Spruce handle tow, and the Flagstaff Nordic Center will not be opened until later this year when there is more snow.

Snowbowl managers were pleased with the early snow. "We are always hoping for a storm on the horizon and this year is no different," said Murray. "We wanted to open the mountain as early as possible as our skiers and snowboarders are very anxious to get on the slopes."

Eric Hahn, president of ASU Snow Devils, an ASU skiing club, said that his group is excited.

"We like Snowbowl. We prefer it to Sunrise," Hahn said. "There is more vertical terrain and a wider mountain."

Any student can join the Snow Devils, which organizes student ski trips. The group already went to Utah this year and there is a trip to Telluride, Colo., planned for Jan. 12 to 17. There is also a trip to Lake Tahoe, Nev., in the spring. The trips typically last four days and usually cost around $400 per person.

"I love snowboarding," Hahn said. "I've skied since I was a kid and it's just a lot of fun."

Skiing lovers can pick up free lift passes to Snowbowl at this weekend's presentation of the Warren Miller documentary Snow Riders. Gammage will show the ski fanatics movie at 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. on Saturday. Tickets are $12 or $11 for students. According to a Gammage spokesperson, ASU offers a showing of this skiing extravaganza every year.

Regular rates for an all-day ski pass at Snowbowl are $31 for adults; $17 for ages 8 to 12; $11 for seniors ages 65-69. Children under 7 or seniors over 70 get free passes.

Census test finds 1 percent of Americans call themselves multiracial when given option

WASHINGTON (AP) — When people are allowed to classify themselves as multiracial only a few do so, but adding the extra category to census forms may help Hispanics pick a racial classification.

"Slightly more than 1 percent of those reporting a race identified as multiracial," the Census Bureau reported Thursday, following a test of new questions planned for the 2000 head count.

But among Hispanics, some 6.7 percent selected multiracial, sharply reducing the number who checked the category "other."

Of people who called themselves multiracial, about half wrote in they were a mix of two races and one-third reported a mix of one race and Hispanic origin, the bureau reported.

From less than a half-million in 1970, the number of children of interracial families grew to an estimated 2 million as of the 1990 census. That has led to proposals for the new category for people of mixed race to be listed in federal statistics, though some minority groups fear it would lead to a reduction in their numbers and, hence, political influence.

The final decision will be made by the Office of Management and Budget because a ruling on racial categories will have to apply to all federal programs. A ruling is expected sometime next year. In the meantime, the Census Bureau has been testing sample forms for the next count in 2000.

More than 80 percent of the people who wrote in details on the multiracial category included white as part of their background, which is consistent with other research on interracial marriages, the bureau noted. It estimated that 86 percent of children of mixed race have one white parent.

"About 30 percent of the write-ins involved an Asian or Pacific Islander response, about 25 percent involved a black response and about 7 percent involved an American Indian response," the bureau said.

The Census Bureau has allowed people to identify themselves by race, providing five categories — white, black, American Indian, Asian and other. Asian includes Pacific Islanders and American Indian includes Eskimos and Aleuts.

There is a separate category asking people if they are Hispanic, which is considered an ethnic group — typically Spanish-speaking people of Latin American origin — rather than a race. Hispanics can be members of any race, a possibility that seems to cause confusion on census forms with many Hispanics skipping the race question or listing themselves as other rather than selecting a race.

In the census test, 52.5 percent of Hispanics listed themselves as white, 2.1 percent black and 42.9 percent other. When the multiracial category was added, 56.0 percent said they were white, 0.8 percent black, 33.3 percent other and 6.7 percent multiracial.

In the overall sample, 83.2 percent of respondents listed themselves as white, 8.9 percent black, 0.6 percent American Indian, 4.0 percent Asian and 3.3 percent other.

When a multiracial category was added the breakdown was 85.1 percent white, 8.9 percent black, 0.4 percent American Indian, 2.7 percent Asian, 1.7 percent other and 1.2 percent multiracial.

Sample forms were tested on various groups totaling 94,500 households across the country. The bureau did not list a margin of error for its sample.

Second site sought for DDT-soil dumping

(AP) — Talks are underway to find a second site for the dumping of DDT-contaminated dirt from California in a landfill near Phoenix.

Waste Management Inc. wants another site to be used in conjunction with the Arizona site to speed disposal of 80,000 tons of contaminated soil, company spokesman Don Cassano told The Tucson Citizen.

Cassano said he expects to know by the end of the week if a possible alternate site somewhere in Utah is acceptable to U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

However, San Francisco-based Greenpeace and other California environmental organizations are calling for the dredging of the contaminated soil in California and the dumping near Phoenix to be temporarily stopped.

They also are demanding sufficient public notice before any other sites are used.

Waste Management prompted protests in early September when it started bringing the dirt dredged from San Francisco Bay into its private Butterfield Station landfill in Mobile, a community about 30 miles south of Phoenix.

In California, the material would have to go to a more expensive hazardous-waste facility because that state has much stricter disposal standards.

Waste Management was under a Dec. 1 deadline to complete the dredging of the contaminated soil from Richmond Harbor in San Francisco Bay.

Environmentalists claim the dredging is disturbing the red herring's habitat for its spawning season.

They also say the fish are being sucked up in the machinery and are more likely to be exposed to DDT, a once-popular pesticide banned by the EPA in the 1970s.

The chemical has been linked to thinning eggshells and is listed as a carcinogen, suspected of threatening reproductive and immune systems.

Cassano said about 70 percent of the dredging project is completed and delays were caused by factors outside the company's control, such as having to remove a sunken ship, huge chunks of concrete and metal cables from the harbor.

Transporting the soil by train has also caused problems such as when a couple trains were mistakenly rerouted to Tucson early in the project, he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The tense hours waiting for his infant daughter during her heart operation helped Sylvester Stallone find his sensitive side.

The Rambo and Rocky star said he has decided not to accept any more roles as "overblown super-action heroes."

"Call me a foxhole convert if you will, but I had these thoughts while waiting for the surgery to end. I said that if the baby would just be OK, I would change. I would do different kinds of movies.

"I would no longer play these guys with big muscles and shoulder-length hair blowing in the wind who run through burning flames and wipe out 200 heavily armed mercenaries with only a pistol and jump from airplanes without a parachute."

In Daylight, which opens today, Stallone plays an emergency medical worker who tries to safely guide strangers trapped in a tunnel.

"This is more of a ... humanistic character for me. It's going to surprise some people; I haven't been called human for a long time."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For her next trick, Melissa Joan Hart, star of Sabrina, the Teenage Witch, will try to make her living as an actress.

Hart already appeared on Nickelodeon's Clarissa Explains It All and a Showtime movie that developed into Sabrina on ABC. But Hart didn't think seriously about a career in acting until recent television movie roles that made her realize she can explore a character.

Hart, 20, admitted her acting isn't "really deep yet" and said she simply read lines in Clarissa and didn't think about being funny.

"When people laughed, I was like, 'Oh, that was funny?' The innocence of not really knowing, it played off well," she said. "Now, I concentrate more on the jokes, timing and acting."

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A ski injury has sidetracked Reba McEntire's concert tour.

McEntire, 42, injured a knee Wednesday at the Park City Ski Area and had minor surgery at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center.

A show Thursday night in Tucson was canceled, but McEntire hoped to return to the concert stage today in Phoenix, a spokeswoman said.

"She's feeling great," Jenny Bohler said Thursday. "If she had her way they'd be wheeling her onstage in her hospital bed tonight in Tucson."

The country music singer has sold more than 35 million albums since 1976. She currently has a top 10 hit with "The Fear of Being Alone."

PIGEON FORGE, Tenn. (AP) — Hundreds of fans waited hours for the country music group Alabama to open its second Alabama Grill restaurant.

"She wants a hug and a kiss from (lead singer) Randy Owen," David Jones said of his wife, Dottie, as they waited in line Wednesday.

The $6 million restaurant and gift shop on Music Road was started by Owen, guitarist Jeff Cook, bassist Teddy Gentry and drummer Mark Herndon.

"I'm proud to be here," Cook said. "It's something the fans — who are the reason I'm here — can enjoy."

Country artists donated more than 700 personal items to the restaurant.

The first Alabama Grill was opened in 1994 in Myrtle Beach, S.C. A third is scheduled for the Mall of America in Minneapolis.

MARLY-LE-ROI, France (AP) — Support is sagging for a bust of Brigitte Bardot.

This quiet suburb west of Paris will remove a bust of Marianne — symbol of the French republic — because it was modeled after Bardot, who has fallen from grace because of ties to the far-right National Front.

The model for Marianne changes about every 10 years. "Brigitte Bardot was chosen as the model of Marianne because she had generous curves," Mayor Francois-Henri de Virieu said Thursday. "Today, she has ideas that we don't find generous."

The decision comes a week after the city council in the Brittany city of Quiberon replaced four Bardot-inspired busts.

Bardot, the 62-year-old former screen star, has supported Jean-Marie Chevallier, National Front mayor of the southern city of Toulon. Chevallier was criticized of refusing to honor a Jewish writer at Toulon's annual book fair last month. He instead substituted a book by Bardot.

Woman gives birth to nephew as favor to older sister

MESA, (AP) — A Tempe woman, acting as a "host uterus," has given birth to her nephew as a favor to her older sister.

Daniel Jacob McDermott was born early Tuesday at Chandler Regional Medical Center.

A court order secured in November made certain the birth certificate listed Mesa residents Lorry and Kirk McDermott as parents even though Christine Crabtree, Lorry's 23-year-old sister, gave birth to the boy.

"Before we got the court order, we were trying to figure out how we were going to adopt our own son," Lorry McDermott told Tribune Newspapers. "We brought him home (Wednesday) and he's where he's supposed to be. And his name is what it is supposed to be."

Lorry McDermott, 34, has two grown boys from another marriage. But she and Kirk have been unable to have children because she had cervical cancer in the 1980s.

A partial hysterectomy left her with no uterus, but one functioning ovary.

Although the McDermotts are the baby's biological parents, having donated the fertilized egg that was implanted in Crabtree, state law insisted that Crabtree and her husband be considered the legal parents until the McDermotts could file for adoption.

The McDermotts rejected the adoption route on principal, although the Arizona Attorney General's Office assured them there would be no snags in that process.

Instead, attorney Suzanne Goldman of Phoenix agreed to file for a court order allowing the biological parents to avoid all obstacles.

She cited a similar case that was upheld on appeal in Maricopa County in 1994. A Superior Court judge gave the McDermotts their wish on Nov. 4.

Goldman said the issue might eventually end up in a higher court, however.

Because the Arizona law that does not recognize surrogacy is still on the books, Crabtree and her sister plan to lobby the state Legislature to make a change.

"There are other people who want to do the same thing and the state needs a path to follow," said Crabtree, who has a 21-month-old girl of her own. "It was trial and error for us, and we don't want it to be like that for anybody else."

"Hopefully with some help, we can get a law written. We've never done anything like this, but we're going to try."

Biopark aquarium serves as sea window for desert children

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Sharks in the desert?

Yes, 18 of them are swimming quite serenely in the new aquarium at Albuquerque's biological park that opened Thursday.

Desert children who may have never touched a sandy shore can see, touch and feel the ecosystem where the Rio Grande meets the Gulf of Mexico — a world some 1,500 miles away.

"People asked, why do you want to do an aquarium in the desert? To me it's so obvious. It's another world that people here haven't seen," said aquarium Education Curator Catherine Hubbard. "So many of these inland children have never seen anything like this. I mean, they get excited touching the sand."

Little fingers can trace the trail of a hermit crab in a touch tank, pick up a horse conch and feel a sea star.

"This place is meant to be touched and felt," said Biopark Director Ray D. Darnell.

The Biopark is made of three attractions, including the existing Rio Grande Zoo and the new Rio Grande Botanic Garden and Rio Grande Aquarium.

First there's a nine-minute film called One River,

Many Voices, tracing a drop of water's trek from the San Juan Mountains where the Rio Grande River begins to the Gulf of Mexico. Then you go underwater.

Above, below and on the sides of hallways, there's salt water. Thousands of fish, some small and frisky and others large and slow, pass by. Beyond the reef and into the depths there are sharks. Big sharks with rows of sharp teeth in a 285,000-gallon tank.

"The more immersed people can be, the more they like it. You don't see any big signs right in front of the tanks explaining things here, your heart decides whether you like it," Hubbard said.

Bright orange coral reef, purple anemone and tan rocky walls are the home away from home for the gulf's inhabitants. An imitation wave pushes water past the stingrays and barracudas.

The aquariums sparkle with special lighting, made to look like sunshine hitting water on a snorkeling trip.

The light shows off the flashy fish with the color of silver dollars and the algae-green moray eels peering out at visitors who are peering in at them.

And there's more. After leaving the crabs, shrimps, snails and sharks, there are gardens, a restaurant and gift shop.

The garden is a humid environment of trees, bushes and vines set in tall, green-tinted glass houses, one 8,000-square-foot and the other 3,000-square-foot.

The Mediterranean Conservatory contains exotic Mediterranean plants and the Desert Conservatory has species that grow in the Mexican deserts of Baja, Chihuahua and Sonora.

Visitors see it all from within and above, traversing high platforms to get to the other side.

And outside, park benches beg strollers to sit a spell and admire the mosaic-tiled fountains and details of the elegant Spanish Moorish Garden.

The $30 million park's planning began eight years ago. The 16-acre facility opens free of debt due to a one-half percent quality of life sales tax Albuquerque passed in 1987, officials said.

The park's future includes a children's fantasy garden where youngsters will be able to crawl into an Alice in Wonderland garden amid topiary dragons.

The aquarium and botanic gardens are open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and costs $4.50 for adults and $2.50 for children and seniors. Children two and under are free.

Women's hoops drops American University 90-82

BY PERCY EDNALINO JR.
STATE PRESS

The ASU women's basketball team beat American University 90-82 Thursday night at the University Activity Center.

The win was ASU's third consecutive victory. It also improved the team's record to 4-1, the Sun Devils' best start since the 1992-93 season.

Thursday's meeting was the first between the two schools and the first time American has faced a Pac-10 team. The Eagles (2-1) stunned No. 7 Virginia on Sunday, 69-67.

It wouldn't happen again. The Sun Devils ended the first half with a 14-9 run and led by six points. ASU never gave up its lead, as forward Molly Tuter broke the 1,000-point career barrier with a three-point shot two minutes into the second half.

Tuter ended the night with a game-high 19 points, five steals and eight rebounds, while Stephanie Freeman chipped in 18 points and seven rebounds. American forward Kim Gombola led the Eagles with 18 points and nine rebounds.

ASU head coach Charli Turner Thorne was happy with the win, but said lingering fatigue from last weekend's tournament in San Juan, Puerto Rico, contributed to errors on the court.

"I just knew that we were tired," Turner Thorne said. "We're mentally tired and we're physically tired. I was sure (tonight) wasn't going to be a pretty win and our best basketball. I was just hoping we could play well enough to squeak it out."

Winter homestand to provide view of Sun Devils' future

BY RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

The next few weeks will provide an interesting glimpse at just how the ASU men's basketball team will fare when the Pac-10 schedule begins in January.

Beginning with Saturday's game with Oklahoma State at 7 p.m., the Sun Devils play six games, all at the University Activity Center, before its first conference game against Stanford on Jan. 2.

"With four games before Christmas and two games after ... we've got to find a way to win more than our share of those games," Head Coach Bill Frieder said. "We've got to build our record to get a little cushion going into the Pac-10 season."

In Oklahoma State (3-1) the Sun Devils (3-2) face a team they should be familiar with.

The Cowboys defeated ASU 90-85 last year in Stillwater.

Frieder said that Cowboy coach Eddie Sutton will have his team ready to exploit the Sun Devils size deficiencies.

"He's a good coach and he'll work to take advantage of (our) weaknesses," he said. "We know he'll pound the ball inside and go to the boards. Those are the things we've got to work on to combat it."

Oklahoma State returns four starters from last year's squad, but pounding the ball inside could be a problem, with the tallest starter for the Cowboys being 6-foot-7.

Forward Chianti Robers averaged 12.7 points and 5 rebounds per game. Frieder called him a 6-foot-6 point guard at that spot.

Leading scorer Jason Skaer averages 14.7 points.

Another possible problem could be the lack of depth for the Sun Devils. Currently only eight players are in ASU's rotation. The Cowboys regularly play 11 men.

"You'll find double digit minutes from that 11th guy, so that's a problem in itself," Frieder said. "We just don't have the numbers to combat that."

Leading the way for ASU are the quartet of guards

Jeremy Veal (18.4 ppg), Quincy Brewer (14.2), Eddie House (13.8) and Gee Gervin (13.6).

Schedule

ASU's schedule for the month of December is Houston Baptist (Dec. 10), Jackson State (Dec. 20), Northeastern Illinois (Dec. 22), William & Mary (Dec. 27, Tribune Classic) and the second game of the Tribune Classic on Dec. 28. All games are at home.

Buddies

Bill Frieder and Eddie Sutton have a long lasting friendship dating back to the 1970s.

The two faced each other in 1981 in the first CBS nationally televised game, while Frieder was at Michigan and Sutton at Arkansas. Arkansas won.

Frieder also recruited Sutton's son, not once, but twice.

"His son visited me at Michigan and his son visited me at Arizona State," Frieder said. "I've been in his house as a recruiter and we've been in ventures together and vacations together."

Swim team eases past Aggies

BY ED ODEVEN
STATE PRESS

The No. 9 ASU men's swimming team was glad to be home and glad to get a victory Thursday.

The Sun Devils cruised past the New Mexico State Aggies 123-75 at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.

"It felt good to win," said ASU sophomore Craig Hutchinson, after the squad's home-opener. "It's always good to win a meet. It feels good to win because we lost the last couple meets. We know we are going to have a good season."

ASU improved to 2-2 in dual meets. The Aggies fell to 3-4.

Sun Devil assistant coach Sean Farrell was pleased with his team's performance.

"All-around we were really happy with how things were done," Farrell said.

"This is the fastest they've swam in a while. They've been working their butt off all semester. They swam very well."

ASU dominated the meet, winning nine of the 11 events.

Individual winners included Mike

Mullen in the 200-yard freestyle (1-minute, 45.90 seconds); Hutchinson, 50 free (20.69); Kevin Butler, 200 individual medley (1:58.22); Scott Brown, 200 butterfly (1:59.33); Nelson Vargas, 100 free (47.31); Richard Greves, 200 backstroke (1:54.67); and Guillermo Diaz de Leon, 500 free (4:46.26).

ASU placed 1-2 in the 200 and 400 medley relays.

Despite the loss, Aggie assistant coach Tracy Bradley was proud of her team.

"For the most part, they just had stiff competition. They swam the best that they could," Bradley said.

The Sun Devils will not compete in another dual meet until after Christmas vacation. ASU will return to action on Jan. 17 against the visiting NAU Lumberjacks.

Notes: The ASU men and women's swimming teams will compete in the U.S.S. Holiday Classic Friday through Sunday at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.

The meet features various amateur swim clubs throughout the Southwest.

Wrestlers heading to Las Vegas

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The ASU men's wrestling team hopes to continue impressing the country this week-end at the Las Vegas Invitational.

"The Las Vegas Tournament is our final competition before the break," head coach Lee Roy Smith said. "We won't wrestle again until after Christmas. We have tried to gear the wrestlers to peak towards that tournament. An early season peak, that will conclude this cycle of training, then we go into another phase of training for the second half of the season."

The tournament features 42 teams, including 12 of the top 20. It is a great opportunity for ASU, unranked at the beginning of the season, to prove that they deserve to be considered among the elite in the nation.

Winter Schedule

The athletes will not get much of a break over the holidays.

They are scheduled for three dual meets and two tournaments between Christmas and the beginning of next semester.

First is the Midlands Championships, which will take place on December 28 and 29.

The new year kicks off with the Reno Tournament of Champions on January 2 in Reno, California.

After that, the Sun Devils will wrestle Oklahoma at home on January 7, and Cal-State Bakersfield on the 17th, also at home. They will travel to Virginia for the Virginia Duals on January 10-11.

Key Returnees

The team is also hoping to get a boost from a few returnees. Danny Faqir (190 pounds) and Michael Kawamura (118 pounds) were slated to start, but were declared academically ineligible. If both can regain their eligibility, they will compete for the spots and bring added depth to the team.

Freshman Matt Azevedo has wrestled at 118 and has posted a 4-2 record to this point, while redshirt freshman Jake Harman has compiled a 1-1 record at the 190 pound weight class.

As a team, the Devils are 2-0, with wins in dual meets over BYU and Wyoming.

by Frances Drake
Friday, December 6, 1996

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You feel good that you can begin to believe in a certain person again. You have some trouble resisting temptation while out shopping. A co-worker isn't giving you necessary feedback.
TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) The news you've been waiting for finally arrives. Something you're concerned about at work is a complicated issue. Perhaps it's best to consult with co-workers to find a solution.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's full speed ahead on that certain project that had you a bit stymied a while back. At the same time, those around you are indulging in an ego trip. You're at your communicative best in the evening.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A friend is in an argumentative mood concerning a money matter. Don't fall for this. This person has been the cause of his own problems.
LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) You need to tend to what's going on at home before you socialize or go on any trips. Some time is spent later in the day on a business-related concern. A bigwig works right alongside you.
VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) A business or financial development that occurs is in your favor. While one friend is helpful, another is cantankerous and difficult. At night, keep credit cards at home.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Early morning hours find you tending to a domestic problem. You and a friend come to a new agreement about the relationship and where it's headed. This person has been using you as a crutch for some time.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
