One-alarm blaze destroys Tempe business

BY MELODY McDONALD

A 30-year-old woodworker, who had spent the night working before falling asleep in his Tempe workshop, barely escaped death early Thursday morning when a one-alarm fire destroyed much of the building.

"I woke up, and it was red fire and smoke all over," said Robert DesMarais, his cracked lips quivering as he watched white-hot flames engulf his business at 115 N. Perry Lane. "There's insurance, but nothing will cover all this."

DesMarais, who custom-makes southwestern furniture, said he was up all night spray painting when he fell asleep at his business, Fleur de Lys Enterprise. DesMarais shared the tin building with an auto-painting and recycling business, as well as a woman who lived there with her dog.

The woodworker also owned an Australian shepherd named Oz, who died in the blaze.

More than 50 firefighters from Rural Metro Fire Department took two hours to control the blaze. When firefighters arrived on scene shortly after 7 a.m., flames and thick black smoke were already billowing from the building.

"It's a raging inferno inside that building," said Rural Metro spokesman Mike Todd. "Fighting fire in a building with a steel roof and steel walls is like fighting fire in an oven. It's a firefighter's nightmare."

DesMarais owns the building that housed his business.

He said he had been at the location for 2 1/2 years.

Rural Metro spokesman Colin Williams said it was too early to tell how the fire started, but someone might have been welding in the building at about the time DesMarais fell asleep.

Chuy Villalobos, a supervisor for Arizona Castings — a metal casting business in the building next to the burned structure — said he arrived at work about 6 a.m. and noticed smoke drifting through the adjacent building's vents.

Villalobos, afraid someone might be in the building, called out to three or four other workers, who rushed to the front of the building.

AZ education committee OKs two-year college plan

BY REBECCA MURRAY
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

The Arizona Senate Education Committee approved a bill Thursday that would allow community colleges to offer upper-division university courses to students.

The bill, which was drafted for Yavapai Community College in Prescott, now goes to the full Senate for a vote.

State Rep. Carol Springer, R-Flagstaff, defended it as a means of meeting the changing demands of higher education. Pointing to higher average student ages, family and employment responsibilities, Springer, who introduced the bill, said the it would allow rural Arizonans the opportunity to pursue higher education.

"What we are attempting to do is to expand that access, and hopefully we can do it by maximizing existing facilities," she said. "The end goal should be that we achieve access to students all over Arizona for a degree."

Although the proposal was written for the Prescott school, it would allow other two-year colleges to offer upper-division courses from Northern Arizona University and other state universities — at a cost of nearly $1 million a year.

State law currently prohibits community colleges from offering upper-division courses.

Members of the Arizona Board of Regents, who oversee the state's three public universities, had spoken out against the bill.

At Thursday's committee meeting, Regent Don Ulrich said he was "adamantly against" the proposal.

"It makes more sense to increase funding for these partnerships (between universities and community colleges) instead of creating new bureaucracies," Ulrich said.

Ulrich added that distance learning and the concept of a virtual university are still

Legislators sponsor bill restricting city rental codes

BY JENNIFER NETHERBY
STATE PRESS

Claiming that Tempe's proposed rental code is unconstitutional, five state legislators are sponsoring a bill to counteract the city's attempt to tighten codes on rental properties.

The Municipal Housing Codes, introduced in the state Legislature last week, would prevent Tempe from enforcing the proposed codes on anyone who owned property before the ordinance is passed.

Tempe has been considering implementing the new rental housing codes in an attempt to clean up "slum" property.

Rep. Mark Anderson, R-Mesa, said the bill was written in response to Tempe's proposal. He said Tempe's proposed rental code could be unconstitutional since it is retroactive.

"The city of Tempe is getting ready to propose a rather onerous housing code on residents," he said. "I think that's too much power for a city to have."

Anderson said he is concerned that the code is so broad the city could choose who it wants to enforce it on.

Tempe Vice-mayor Joseph Lewis said the legislation is another effort to stop the proposed rental code.

"It's just another example of an attempt to go around the city and get the state to take control of local issues," he said.

In addition to Anderson, the bill was also sponsored by state Reps. John Carruthers R-Yuma, Jeff Groskost, R-Mesa, Marilyn Jarrett, R-Mesa, and Wes Marsh, R-Scottsdale.

The bill has been held in the government operations committee in the House, Anderson said. It would have to pass

"We saw smoke, and we heard a dog barking in there, so we tried to kick the door in," said Don Cocuzza. "That's when I heard a guy hollering, 'I can't get out! I'm trapped!'"

Cocuzza and the others tried to free DesMarais, who was yelling and screaming, by wrenching open the front door with a bolt cutter. But the flames and smoke roared at them, forcing them to run to the rear of the building. They screamed for DesMarais to go to the back door.

"I tried to find the back door," DesMarais said in a voice barely above a whisper.

The fire was still being doused by 8:30 a.m. The woodworker, wearing dirt-stained jeans, a button-down shirt and sunglasses, stood with his arms crossed — hesitant to talk to fire officials or reporters.

"There was red fire right next to my face. I couldn't find my way out ... then I saw the window of the back door," he said.

Witnesses said DesMarais busted out the back door, frantically calling for his dog who was still inside the building.

"He said, 'my dog, my dog,'" said Jim Norpel, who was one of the workers on the scene. "He wanted to go back in and get him, but I wouldn't let him."

Candy Villalobos, the brother of Chuy Villalobos and also a worker at Arizona Castings, said he was glad people were around to get DesMarais and the woman and her dog out in time.

Candy Villalobos said he was the one who woke up the woman who leased a living space in the building. "Just get the hell out of here," he told the woman. "She said, 'Hold on, let me get my shoes.' I said, 'forget the shoes.'"

"If we had waited 10 more minutes, those people would have been dead."

only in the beginning stages in Arizona.

Jonathan Schmitt, the ABOR student regent, also told the panel that he opposes the measure. He questioned whether the worth of a four-year college degree would decline if the measure is passed.

Schmitt, a senior at NAU, added that he worried some of the upper-division credits offered at the community colleges would not be transferable to universities.

Sen. Tom Patterson, R-Phoenix, was the only member of the seven-person Education Committee to vote against the bill.

"Rather than expanding the regional scope geographically of the four-year universities, we're going the other way and breaking down that system," Patterson said. "At some point, I think we have to look whether these are academic programs and better taught in an academic center."

NAU instructors would offer courses at Yavapai College and through a television system. Class credits would count toward a four-year degree from NAU.

both the House and Senate before becoming law. The proposal has yet to be introduced in the Senate.

Fritz Tuffli, a Tempe resident in opposition to the city's proposed rental ordinance, suggested the bill to legislators.

"It's legislation to negate Tempe's rental code ordinance," he said.

Councilman Dennis Cahill said the bill is "just another one of his (Tuffli's) schemes."

Arizona Tenants Association President Ken Volk, who has supported the rental codes from the start, said he thinks the state legislation is "horrendous."

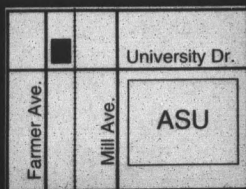

"They should mind their own business," he said. "It's a local matter."

Wayne Kaplan of the Arizona Multihousing Association, a group which opposes the proposed rental codes, said the organization is not supporting the bill.

China silences all dissent, U.S. report says

By GEORGE GEDDA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — China has silenced all public dissent through intimidation, exile, prisons and other means, the State Department said Thursday. Its human rights report also alleged severe repression in Nigeria, Cuba and Burma.

China's policy of zero tolerance for dissent, as described in the report, is certain to be a major topic in Secretary of State Madeleine Albright's visit to Beijing in late February.

"The Chinese government in 1996 continued to commit widespread and well-documented human rights abuses in violation of internationally accepted norms, stemming from the authorities' intolerance of dissent, fear of unrest and the continuing absence of laws protecting basic freedoms," the report said.

Issued annually, the report covers human rights conditions worldwide. It concluded that dictatorships of the left and the right are guilty of repression as are, to a lesser extent, some democracies. It found some shortcomings in countries such as Israel and Germany, but the democracy with which the report appears to deal most harshly is India.

Briefing reporters, Assistant Secretary of State John Shattuck said respect for human rights increased globally in 1996, which should not be overlooked. Included, he said, are such countries as Bosnia, Romania, Haiti, Guatemala, Ghana, Liberia, Mali and Sierra Leone.

Albright also spoke to reporters, indicating she will make religious persecution and intolerance a hallmark of her tenure.

"These are plagues that, from ancient times, have fomented war and deep-seated resentment," she said. "In too many countries, from Sudan to Vietnam to Iran, this form of repression persists. In a few, including China, it has increased."

The China section of the report is certain to fuel further debate over whether the United States should distance itself from China or show its displeasure over its human rights record in other ways.

Since 1994, the administration has virtually ruled out linking U.S. trade policy with Beijing to human rights.

The report said, "All public dissent against party and government was effectively silenced by intimidation, exile or the imposition of prison terms, administrative detention or house arrest. No dissidents were known to be active at the year's end."

Albright will visit China at the end of a nine-country tour encompassing Europe and other Asian countries. She said the U.S. relationship with China is too important to be "held hostage" by any one issue.

Making the case for continued engagement with China, Assistant Secretary Shattuck said, "Never has the human rights situation in China improved by the isolation of China. Quite the contrary."

Two dead, six feared missing in wall collapse

By MICHELLE KOIDIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — A wall collapsed at a shopping Thursday morning, killing two people, injuring six and sending dozens of elderly "mall walkers" scrambling for their lives. As many as six others were feared missing under tons of concrete and steel rubble.

The wall was being torn down to make room for a Magic Johnson movie theater complex when it caved in.

"It just all of a sudden went crackling. I ran," said Dorothy McCann, who was among those who exercise daily by walking laps inside the Northline Mall.

Rescuers using dogs searched through the debris for victims. Cranes were brought in during the afternoon to move rubble.

"We're pretty certain there may be other people under the debris," Fire Chief Eddie Corral said. "We won't really know until we get in there and pull it off. Some of it is rather large and heavy."

He said that up to six people may be missing.

The cause of the accident was not immediately known.

Demolition crews were removing the last sections of an old department store when a wall shared by the store and the mall caved in at about the time the mall opened at 9 a.m. Authorities described the wall as about 20 feet high. The fallen section was said to be 150 to 200 feet long.

"I just heard a loud rumble," said Mary Shields, 59, who was inside the mall. "I could see dust flying. I turned around and looked back. I saw people running out of the offices saying somebody got hurt. The dust was so thick. You couldn't see."

Senate committee approves balanced budget amendment, bill sent to Senate

By JIM ABRAMS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Senate Judiciary Committee approved a balanced budget amendment Thursday after rejecting Democratic attempts to exclude Social Security.

The 13-5 vote sent the bill to the full Senate, where debate is scheduled to begin next week. The final outcome is too close to call, with both sides saying it could come down to one or two votes.

Passage could hinge on the Social Security issue. Many Democrats say they won't vote for the measure unless it ensures that recipients won't be threatened with benefit losses at a future time when Congress is struggling to balance the budget.

Exempting Social Security, said Judiciary Committee Chairman Sen. Orrin Hatch, would create a "tremendous loophole" that could make attaining a real balance impossible.

President Clinton weighed in with a letter released Wednesday in which he warned that including the Social Security trust fund in future balanced budget calculations could pose "grave risks" to the elderly.

The committee defeated six Democratic attempts to change the GOP-crafted bill, including three that would have excluded Social Security.

Hatch, R-Utah, said the trust fund would be one of the last government programs to face budget cuts and taking it off budget "would be the biggest, most tremendous loophole in the balanced budget amendment."

The trust fund, currently running at a surplus, is included in the balanced budget proposals of both the White House and the Republicans, and taking it off budget would require Congress to find hundreds of billions in new savings or revenue.

One of the Social Security amendments, by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., picked up a Republican, Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania, and was defeated in a 9-9 tie. "It was quite clear that Republicans don't have adequate answers to those who care about the future of Social Security," Kennedy said. "That's the fatal flaw in their argument."

As the committee was wrapping up, Democrats held a news conference to introduce a letter signed by 1,060 economists, including 11 Nobel laureates in economics, warning that a balanced budget amendment was "unsound and unnecessary."

The economists said a balanced budget requirement could aggravate recessions and restrict federal borrowing for infrastructure and environmental protection.

Social Security is also an issue in the House, where three Republicans on Thursday introduced a bill ensuring that surpluses from the trust fund are not used to pay for other government programs or mask the true size of the federal deficit.

Rep. David McIntosh, R-Ind., said the trio wanted either a vote on their bill or changes in the GOP-crafted balanced budget amendment to protect Social Security. "We want to see one of those things done," he said. "Beyond that, we're remaining flexible."

Two-thirds majorities in both chambers are needed to pass a constitutional amendment, and Senate Democrats said the bill could get 70 or 80 votes, well above the 67 required, with Social Security protections.

Vaccine blamed for most of polio cases in 1980-94

By TARA MEYER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Practically every case of polio in the United States between 1980 and 1994 was caused by the vaccine itself, the government said Thursday. However, a new vaccine regimen that went into effect this month is expected to cut the risk dramatically.

"This emphasizes the timeliness of the change in policy," said Dr. Rebecca Prevo, an epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

According to the CDC, 133 people contracted polio between 1980 and 1994. A total of 125 of those cases — or an average of eight per year — were caused directly or indirectly by the oral polio vaccine, which consists of a live but weakened virus, the CDC said.

Starting this month, the CDC is recommending that youngsters first receive injections of a killed-virus vaccine to build up their immunity to polio. Then they are given the oral vaccine. It's the first major change in the way the vaccine has been administered since 1961.

The risk of contracting polio from the oral vaccine is one case per 2.4 million doses, the CDC said. The new policy is expected to cut the risk in half.

Of the 125 polio cases blamed on the oral vaccine:

- 49 were caused by the vaccine alone;
- 46 occurred in people who came into contact with someone who contracted polio from the vaccine;
- 23 got polio because they had a weak immune system or immune disorder before getting the vaccine;
- and seven with an immune disorder or weak immune system got polio after coming into contact with someone who got the vaccine.

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

BRAVO — To the administration for developing new acceptance guidelines for future incoming students. Even though the requirements won't be initiated for more than a year, secondary schools around the state have been implementing curriculum changes to prepare students. We hope these changes will ultimately increase the value of an ASU degree.

BOO — To the state Senate Education Committee for approving a measure that would allow community colleges to offer upper-division courses. If signed into law, degrees at Arizona's big three universities will slide in value. There must be a way to provide improved education to more people in rural areas without diminishing the quality of our own.

BRAVO — To the Academic Senate for approving both the publication of teacher evaluations and the compassionate withdrawal policy. Students are the true winners in this one. Bad teachers will no longer have the opportunity to hide from critics, and students suffering from a serious emotional setback will be allowed to take time off to heal without severe repercussions.

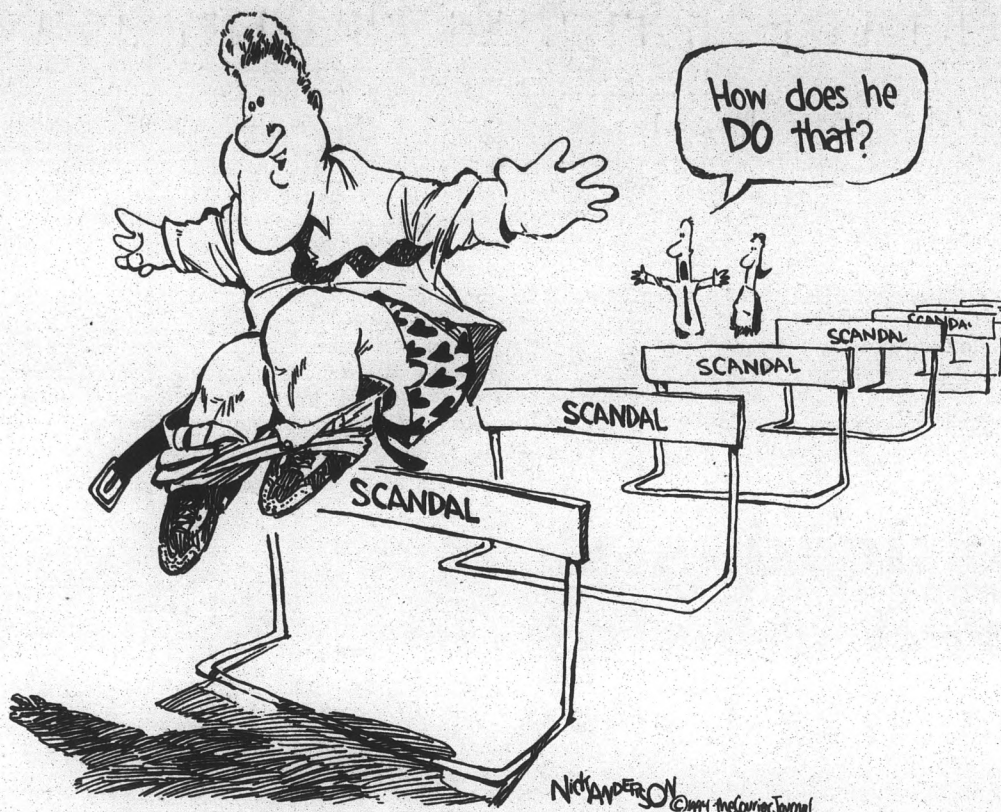

BRAVO — To Arizona Department of Public Safety officers for ramming a stolen Arizona Department of Transportation truck before it reached ASU's people-packed campus. Two DPS officers were injured in the incident, but there is no telling the number of students who could have been hurt had the truck plowed through ASU.

BOO — To the Student Organization Resource Center for banning "amplified bands" from Hayden Lawn. We can see how the loud music could be a disruption, but considering how often as this happens, people could show more tolerance.

BOO — To ASU officials for failing to consider the dangers involved in allowing open access to the western side of the Life Sciences Tower. The safety problem was highlighted late Tuesday night when a visiting scientist fell to his death. Unfortunately, a similar incident claimed the life of another person less than a year ago. The cost of installing a security gate is far less than the value of the lives of two people.

BRAVO — To the ASU Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee for continuing to send out letters advising science department heads that students can use computers to dissect animals. We recommend that students in a wider selection of classes have an opportunity to opt out of real dissections. A few frogs will be spared and students can avoid becoming more nauseous in those classes than they usually are.

BOO — To the Phoenix City Council for revising a law earlier this month that resulted in the end of the Grapevine newspaper. The ordinance forbid the mainly homeless distributors from selling the newspaper at street medians and freeway exit ramps. The Council's action is simply another example of Phoenix sweeping the city's homeless problem under the proverbial rug.

Computerized pet is for the dogz

My roommate bought a new computer and we're adopting a dog. Busy week at our apartment? No, because the dog and the computer are one and the same.

Kimberly, Scot and I disagree on one simple fact. They love dogs, and I can't stand them. The only good dog is someone else's dog, in my opinion. They can't pass by a pet store without going in and staring at the puppies, while I prefer to taunt the iguanas. This creates a problem.

The answer: a computerized dog. Fortunately for me, there already is such a dog on the market. I'm not referring to the AfterDark screen savers which feature Boris the Kitty, I'm talking about "Dogz, Your Computer Pet," from PF. Magic and Virgin Interactive. This software, which retails for about $25, allows you to "adopt a puppy" and watch as it grows up into a full sized "dog." According to the manual, you can experience "the joys of owning a dog without needing a pooper scooper."

Also, the program features a computerized ball for fetch, a computerized shoe for tug-of-war, a computerized water squirter for discipline, computerized food and water, and even computerized doggie treats for a reward.

There are five different breeds of "dog" you can adopt. There is a terrier named Boots, a setter named Skippy, a Chihuahua named Chi-Chi, a Scotty named Chip and a bulldog. Each one has their own personality.

I decided to play with the "puppies" before adopting one, since my roommates were not there. Taking the puppies out of the doghouse one at a time, I threw the ball around the screen and watched them give chase, falling over their puppy feet. The dogs are very cartoonish, with big eyes and exaggerated movements.

After playing fetch for a few minutes, I decided to try petting the puppies. I nearly put the bulldog to sleep, watched the setter roll over so that I could reach his stomach, and gave up on the Chihuahua when he wouldn't sit still. I was actually feeling something toward this dog who doesn't shed or stink.

What does this mean for our society? Have we really started to put so much of our lives into the computer that we now need to have a virtual pet?

Virtual relationships have been around for years, thanks to on-line chat areas and e-mail, but a pet has always been something tangible, something real. You can sit and pet your dog, not just click a mouse button. A pet is supposed to give you love. A computerized dog can't feel or respond. This is just another form of cyber-relationships that say that we are spending too much time sitting in the shadow of the computer screen and not enough time out in the sun with our golden retrievers, or our betta fish, my pet of choice.

The bettas at my house, Alpha and Spiro, have their own personalities and habits. Alpha is outgoing and adventurous, and Spiro is neurotic. These are traits that can't be duplicated by a computer. Nor can a computer duplicate the sensation of a puppy's lick or a betta's bite. These are the real joys of owning a pet.

So, who can "Dogz" help? Well, it can help those who cannot own pets, like students in the dorms. It can also help those, like me, who hate real dogs. However, it should not be used to create a relationship where one will not exist.

We should not fall in love with "Dogz," or its sister program "Catz," because no matter how cute they are, they still cannot replace real animals. We will install a "puppy" onto Scot's desktop, but I'll stick with the bettas for real love and affection.

Landowner's rights as thin as water at Michigan lake

Now that President Clinton and the Republican Congress have vowed to be pals and work on the people's business, it would be nice if someone in that self-obsessed government city does something about the problem of Kathy Stupak-Thrall and her neighbors.

Probably the best thing it could do — the federal government, I mean — would be to just go away and leave her and her neighbors alone. But, of course, that isn't the way government works.

On the surface, the problem of Kathy Stupak-Thrall and her husband, Ben, is one many people would envy.

They are from Oswego, Ill., where they operate a family business, but they own a lake home 350 miles north, in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

Originally, the home belonged to her grandfather, who bought six acres on Crooked Lake in 1939.

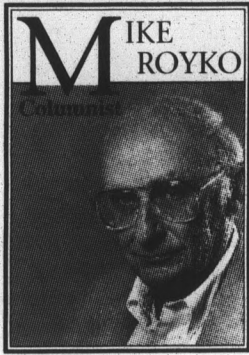

It was passed on to Stupak-Thrall's father and in 1986 it became hers.

On paper, the property is hers. But in reality, it isn't. Not in the sense that any property owner would appreciate.

At the root of her problem is something that would probably gladden the hearts of any conservationist or environmentalist.

In 1987, Congress enacted the Michigan Wilderness Act, and Crooked Lake became part of something called the Sylvania Wilderness Area because the federal government owned more than 90 percent of the land around the lake.

On the one hand, having a wilderness area next door seemed nice because it meant there wouldn't be any creeping development for weekenders from cities.

MIKE ROYKO
Columnist

On the other, the federal government can be a bossy neighbor. In this case, that is quite an understatement.

The Forest Service doesn't allow her to put a motorboat or even a sailboat in the water.

If she or her guests want to swim, they have to have a permit.

"They do not allow motorized vehicles," she said. "No cars, no mopeds. They didn't even want to allow motorized wheelchairs, but I challenged that because it violates the Americans with Disabilities Act. Now they allow the wheelchairs, but they don't allow putting in a suitable surface."

"They even control the airspace. No aircraft is allowed to fly lower than 2,000 feet over the area."

"Sailboats aren't permitted because a sailboat has a pulley system and that is mechanical."

"The permit is the kicker. We need a permit from a federal agency to go swimming. I refuse to recognize that they have this authority over me."

"They haven't issued a citation to me or any of the other property owners. But they have issued citations to our guests. They get a $25 to $50 fine. By the third citation, you stand before a federal magistrate and can be fined $5,000."

"My husband got a $25 fine for having a can of pop in his boat. He also got a warning ticket for having a snowmobile on the lake when it was frozen."

Arguing that their property rights had been unconstitutionally taken from them, Stupak-Thrall and a neighbor along the lake filed a federal lawsuit.

But a federal judge ruled against them after hearing a lawyer from the Justice Department argue that the property owners had nothing to complain about "as long as they can drink from the lake."

Only the minds of bureaucrats work that way. You own a house on a lake, it's been in the same family for almost 60 years and some government lawyer — his paycheck coming out of your taxes — says your only constitutional right as a property owner is to drink the water in the lake.

They appealed, but the lower court ruling was upheld.

So they went to the U.S. Supreme Court. Don't believe what you hear about that court being packed with conservatives. It declined to take the case.

So now Stupak-Thrall and the handful of other no-rights property owners on Crooked Lake have to hope that the Michigan lawmakers or possibly someone in Congress will find the Forest Service's attitude heavy-handed.

Stupak-Thrall is not going to give up.

"In the state of Michigan, when you own lakefront property, you are a riparian, a waterfront property owner. You are then owner of part of the subsurface of the lake. This applies only to inland lakes, not the Great Lakes."

"If you own 100 feet of lakefront property, then you own 100 feet in a pie-shaped manner of the lake's subsurface. And the riparians all own equally the surface of the lake and have equal access to the surface of the entire lake."

"These, under state law, are real property rights."

"We are fighting this to protect individual property rights, but also to protect state rights."

"When something like this happens to one person in Michigan, it doesn't just affect that person. It affects everyone. When it violates one person's rights, it violates everyone else's rights, too. Come hell or high water, we are not going to let them overwhelm us. We're not going to let a federal agency violate the spirit of the law."

Maybe so, and good luck. But as Marie Antoinette, who would have made a good government lawyer, might have said: "Let them drink water."

Fife continues to fail in finances

Fife Symington took the opportunity to show off his financial prowess Tuesday when he got Sen. Scott

KARIN WADSACK
Guest Columnist

Bungaard, R-Glendale, to introduce a bill that would eliminate Arizona's income tax in 1998, and with it, one-third of the state's budget. Meanwhile, lobbyists pushed to get a property tax elimination measure on the ballot for the same November 1998 election, which would allow voters to eliminate two of the state's three sources of income in one fell swoop.

What in God's name are the people who run this state thinking? How many people out there still think Gov. Symington is in the position to make sound economic policy?

The elimination of income tax would reduce the state's budget by roughly $1.5 billion. As Sen. George Cunningham, D-Tucson, told the Republic, this reduction in funds "would be like closing down all three state universities, shutting down the Department of Health Services, the community colleges, the courts, the Department of Juvenile Corrections, and shutting down the Department of Corrections and letting out all the prisoners."

ASU has struggled with the state legislature every year to somehow get enough funds to get by. Our professors make lower salaries than the majority of professors in the nation, and they haven't had a decent pay raise in years. Our tuition scholarships have been reduced, "redundant" departments have been eliminated, and everyone at the university works every day to get by on less than enough.

Where is any of our funding going to come from if income tax, and with it possibly property tax, is eliminated? Our schools are screaming for more money. ASU is desperately trying to keep up with the growth characteristic of the Valley, and lack of funding is already slowing the development of the much-needed East campus.

Is Fife bluffing? Rep. Ken Chevront, D-Central Phoenix told the Republic he believes this is "another Symington diversion designed to keep people from focusing on his personal problems."

If not, the man is a loon, hoping to please voters who happen to be exceedingly rich and who by some stroke of luck have no stake in the public services the state provides (education, a judicial system, public safety). Certainly there are a lot of these people around.

If Symington is merely trying to smoke-screen his own financial misadventures, bad move. Terrible mismanagement of the state's budget only highlights Gov. Symington's personal failures and draws attention to his general inability to see that the money must come from somewhere. He may have fooled some investors, but he's not going to fool an entire state.

Fair relationships ensured by rental code

It was difficult to understand Fritz Tuffli's thrust in his Jan. 28 letter titled, "Rent code changes sure to raise rent." What seems to come through all his insinuations is that Tempe's proposed rental housing code is bad for tenants and should be defeated. He is wrong.

Tuffli asserts that the creation of basic standards of habitability for residential tenants will result in higher rents. Apparently, he believes that some tenants would prefer to live with tumbling walls and ceilings, no air conditioning, cockroach infestation, broken electrical and plumbing, and so on — all to questionably save a few bucks every month.

I concur. There are some people like that. According to Tuffli, tenants will be forbidden from living in such conditions under the rental housing code. This is incorrect. Because the ordinance is complaint driven, inspections will only occur when a complaint is issued to the city.

It is estimated that only about 5 to 10 percent of the city's rental housing is substandard. Over years, as this substandard housing is upgraded, it will have a negligible impact on the remaining dwellings for which no major renovations are required — pursuant to the code.

If there is any relationship between stricter standards and rental rates, it is the converse of that advanced by Tuffli. While he believes that the code would raise rents, rate hikes actually can be attributed to the legislated power imbalance between landlords and tenants that allows owners to take unfair advantage of their customers.

Thus, rents tend to increase as tenants find their rights and status diminished and decrease as they are empowered to represent their own interests. Is this just dinner table postulation? No, it is supported by fact: When the landlord special interests and their sycophants at the state legislature undermined tenant rights with new statewide statutes in July of 1994, and again in July of 1995, evictions and rents surged both statewide and in Tempe.

Tuffli clearly understands that this City of Tempe rental housing code throws a monkey wrench into the landlord lobbyists' love affair with their lackeys at the state Capitol. Tuffli, authoring new proposed statewide legislation prohibiting municipalities from instituting rental housing codes, so threatens the landlords' absolute influence. Let us hope our representatives at the state level have enough sense to butt out of this local control issue.

If the large property owners' (and Tuffli's) protestations were genuine — that is, stricter standards affecting a small proportion of Tempe's rental housing would result in higher rents across the board — then self-interest would suggest that they would want, not oppose, the proposed code. Rather, their vehement denials prove they realize that providing tenants with the regulatory tools to compel landlord compliance with minimum housing standards will in fact stabilize and perhaps reduce rents. We should share that vision and not allow it to be obscured by Tuffli's unfounded smoke-screen.

Tenants rights is a subset of the general category of human rights. It allows and fosters meaningful, fair and legally binding contractual relationships between parties, in this case landlord and tenant. It enhances the safety of and imparts dignity to individuals and neighborhoods. We must urge that the City of Tempe stay the course and enact its proposed rental housing code.

It's time that those large out-of-state property holders be required to reinvest a modicum of their rent-derived profits back into our local communities. There is no place for slums in Tempe.

ASU offers program in film studies

I read with great interest Lidia Kelly's recent story in the State Press about the growing movie industry in Arizona and the lack of a film studies department at ASU.

While ASU does not yet have such a department, the Humanities Program has established a major with a concentration in film. This new concentration was developed in response to both the employment opportunities that local movie production offers and to strong student interest in courses about film.

The concentration requires majors to take seven film courses from an approved list of offerings in Humanities, English, Languages and Literature, Theater and Art. Most of these courses focus on the historical and cultural analysis of film, but students can also take several hands-on video and film production classes.

Professors whose courses qualify for the concentration include Jay Boyer of the English Department, who won a university-wide teaching award in 1996, and Gus Edwards, whose screenplay adapted from the James Baldwin novel Go Tell It on the Mountain was made into a film, starring Paul Winfield, Ruby Dee and Alfre Woodard. Students interested in more information can contact me at 965-0651 or ICABB@ASUACAD.

Policy terminates band performances on Hayden Lawn

BY KEVIN CULWELL
STATE PRESS

The day has arrived that the music on Hayden Lawn has died — sort of.

The Student Organization Resource Center has issued a "no amplified bands policy" for Hayden Lawn, citing complaints from teachers, library employees and students as the reason for the ruling.

"How could I possibly justify to students studying in the library or teachers in nearby buildings having bands on Hayden Lawn?" said Safali Evans, student organizations program coordinator. "If an organization wants to have an amplified band, they are more than welcome to have it at other sites on campus."

Those sites include the Student Recreation Center fields, the Palo Verde beach area and Neeb Hall, she said.

Acoustic bands and "amplified sound" from disc jockeys or CD players will be allowed on Hayden Lawn with approval from the Student Organization Resource Center during the hours of 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The policy has disturbed a few members of the Associated Students of ASU. Some activities ASASU sponsors on the lawn, including the planned Mardi Gras celebration, include live bands.

"We're a bit upset by the stand," said Keith Menard, campus affairs vice president of ASASU. "However, if that's how the rulings are going to be, then we'll abide by them."

The most recent issue of the Voice, ASASU's newsletter, denounces the policy, claiming "... one must not ignore the counterculture which follows with every university."

The newsletter then asks "... is our intellectual institution any different than an automobile manufacturing plant?"

Evans wasn't pleased with the tone of the newsletter. "I'm all for them standing up and fighting the issue," she said. "I just wish they would have come to me before publishing it and talk with me."

Evans said that all the acoustic bands, including groups from Africa, Asia and other countries, prove the newsletter's insinuation of lacking "social awareness" and "ignoring the counterculture" to be untrue.

"I'd like for us to sit down and try to work something out together," she said. "If (ASASU) created a committee to come up with alternative suggestions, I'd gladly help them out."

However, some staff members applauded the ruling. "We just feel that this policy betters the learning environment for everyone," said Larissa Richardson, administrative assistant at the Student Organization Resource Center. "That's really what this is all about."

- An 18-year-old woman was arrested at Mervyn's, 800 E. Southern Ave., for shoplifting. Police said the suspect was observed by security, and she later admitted taking four pairs of Levi's jeans and leaving the store without paying for them. The value of the jeans is about $180. The suspect was booked into Tempe Jail.
- A 20-year-old male was arrested Tuesday at 1212 S. Smith Road for sniffing rubber cement. Police said the suspect admitted that he was inhaling the glue and had been doing so for one month now.

- A 21-year-old man was arrested at Broadway Road and McClintock Drive for driving under the influence of alcohol. Police said the man had bloodshot, watery eyes as well as a distinct odor of an intoxicating beverage. He admitted to drinking three beers and submitted to a breath analyzer, which showed he had a blood alcohol content of .226/.227.

Roses sown in Sun Devils' honor

By LIDIA E. KELLY
STATE PRESS

About 10 volunteers from the Valley community gathered in front of the Music Building on Gammage Parkway Thursday morning, ready to rock.

Or rather, dig — as they had about 40 rose bushes prepared for planting in buckets around them.

"I got some pretty tough people in here," said Louisa Ballard, program coordinator for the ASU arboretum, who supervised the planting. "They are helping to create a beautiful botanical garden on the campus."

The roses, 1,000 bushes, were donated by the Garden Rose Council in December in honor of the Sun Devils' perfect regular season. The vast majority of them are going to be planted on the ASU Main campus, but some will be sent to ASU West and East campuses, Ballard said.

"That's a great donation and will make our campus so much nicer," she said. The value of the gift comes to about $6,000.

The roses will bloom next spring in ASU's colors — gold and maroon.

"I'm proud of the University and I like gardening — that's why I'm here," said LaVonne Shaffer of Tempe, whose son graduated from ASU a few years ago.

Some of the volunteers came only for yesterday's planting, but some, like Edwin Sanders of Mesa, have been with the arboretum for several years.

Sanders, who is retired from the Air Force, has been volunteering three to four times a week to work on campus, the largest public arboretum in the state. On Thursday he was the team's leader.

"I like plants, I like trees and I like botany, in general," Sanders said. "I like roses because they are easy to grow. They're very forgiving — you can do a lot of bad things to them and they soon will grow back."

The planting will continue on Friday and Saturday. Volunteers interested in helping may contact Louisa Ballard at 965-8467.

Student Health being examined

BY BEN LEATHERMAN
STATE PRESS

Limited facility resources and parking are expected to be identified as areas of deficiency during ASU's Student Health accreditation review.

Student Health is undergoing the review Thursday and Friday and Director Dale Bowen expects outstanding results. But he knows there will be problems with the use of facilities resources.

"The biggest thing (will be) the size of our facility for the huge number of patients we have go through here, and the size of our parking," said Bowen. "It's one of the things they review, but just because you don't have enough parking doesn't mean you can't get accredited."

The department was last accredited in 1993 and was "substantially in compliance with the requirements," Bowen said. The review — which costs the University $2,000 to $3,000 — is required by the Arizona Board of Regents and occurs every one to three years, depending on previous accreditation.

The study is being conducted by the Accreditation Association for Ambulatory Health Care, which rates the quality of the facility and the type of care it provides. A negative report on the size of the facility could help convince ASU administrators to remodel it or move Student Health to a new building, Bowen said, but that's not the main purpose of the report.

"I think we're very low on the scale," he said. "A new Liberal Arts building is much higher because the academic need of the students takes priority over the support services."

ASU President Lattie Coor said the administration will study the results of the accreditation

"Whenever we have an examination like this we will weigh the report and its recommendations," he said. "But it's a very strong service — Bowen and his staff — so I would expect a favorable report."

Besides rating the size of the facilities, the accreditation process includes reviewing records, the quality of care given and the safety of the building as a whole.

"It's a very extensive process," said Bowen. "You basically look at every single aspect of the operation and we submit a three-to-four-inch book full of documents."

Merit -based salary increases sought in latest budget battle

By DEANNA DARR
STATE PRESS

The top priority for the University's 1997-1998 budget is to "have a meaningful salary increase for faculty and staff for next year," ASU President Lattie Coor said Thursday.

In the middle of budget battles with the state Legislature, ASU is not losing sight of the $312 million it originally requested.

The Joint Legislative Budget Committee recommended giving the universities a $31 million budget increase next year, which would give ASU a total budget of $303 million. However, Gov. Fife Symington supported giving the state universities a higher amount and turning the increased allocation over to the Board of Regents.

Each year ASU develops a budget request to submit to the Legislature. Alan Carroll, director of Fiscal Planning and Analysis, said the request is based on strategic plans developed from suggestions from several broad-based University committees and the Board of Regents' goals.

ASU salaries rank low among the 15 institutions included in its peer group. The University's goal is to raise salaries to the middle of the pack. Carroll said in order to reach this goal, ASU would need an additional $22.6 million over the current salary budget allocation.

ABOR identified a three-year plan which would create the additional money. The plan calls for a 40 percent salary increase in the first year, followed by 30 percent increases in the following two years.

Carroll said he doubts the Legislature will approve a 40 percent increase. He added that the plan is looking at a "moving target," because salaries will continue to increase over the years.

Coor said the Governor's Office of Strategic Planning and Budgeting has suggested a 4 percent total salary increase to go into effect Jan. 1, 1998.

The JLBC's recommendation calls for a 2 percent market value increase and a 2 percent merit-based increase for classified staff. It would also give a 2 percent merit-based increase for all other employees. The JLBC plan would go into effect Oct. 1, 1997.

ASU Provost Milton Glick said he feels the most important aspect of any salary increase is that it be on a merit-based scale, not an across-the-board raise. "This way we can compensate excellence," he said.

Carroll said if the University does not end up with enough money, it may have to make due with additional funds from tuition increases.

All tuition increases must be approved by ABOR before they can be implemented by the University.

Carroll added that the Legislature and the Governor's Office tend to support tuition increases so that the universities will use more tuition revenue for their budgets. This free up additional money from the general fund other state projects.

Glick said that no matter what the Legislature hands down as the final budget, he just hopes that "we get enough money to make a difference."

Shooting woes continue in fourth straight loss

ASU senior center Melissa Boyle gets control of a rebound during the first half of Thursday's 86-78 loss to Washington State.

BY PERCY EDNALINO JR.
STATE PRESS

The ASU women's basketball team dropped its fourth Pac-10 game in a row Thursday night with an 86-78 loss to Washington State at the University Activity Center.

"To me, that's the toughness issue," ASU coach Charli Turner Thorne said. "Midway through the second half, we let things bother us when we know that it's a time when the game is coming to an end."

Turner Thorne said mistakes in the second half contributed to the Sun Devils' loss. ASU (7-11, 1-7 Pac-10) trailed by as many as 11 points in the second half. The Cougars (8-9, 2-6 Pac-10) were led in the second half by freshman guard J o a n n a Smith's 7-point effort. Smith finished the game with a game-high 23 points and 10 rebounds. The 5-foot-10 guard shot seven of 12 from the field and went 5-for-7 from behind the three point line.

In all, four of Washington State's players scored in double figures. Sophomore point guard Jade Hyett picked up a game-high 15 assists, but turned the ball over 12 times.

ASU was led by Molly Tuter's 33-point effort. The senior forward shot 10 of 20 from the field and picked up five steals, good enough to share the game-high with Hyett.

"She's had games this year and last year where she didn't have many turnovers," Cougars coach Harold Rhodes said of his 5-foot-4 point guard. "I think (ASU's) size and quickness gave her a lot of problems."

"I was very disappointed," Turner Thorne said. "We knew Smith was a great shooter. We talked about it. We didn't work hard to get through screens and we gave her great looks at the basket."

With the score at 82-73, the Sun Devils closed Washington State's lead on the strength of Tuter's three-point shooting. Tuter was fouled from behind the three point line by Smith, then hit all three of her free throws to close the gap to six. Two foul shots from Center Melissa Boyle cut Washington State's lead to four points.

The Sun Devils' defense then slipped. Tuter fouled forward Amy Saneholtz with 40.2 seconds left in the game. Saneholtz increased the Cougars lead to six.

"We can't afford to make mistakes," Turner Thorne said. "When we do, we don't know how to be tough about it. We don't know how to be resilient and bounce back."

At halftime, both teams were tied at 36 with Smith leading all scorers with 16 points on 6 of 9 shooting from the field and 4 of 5 shooting from behind the three point arc.

Note:

The ASU men's basketball team lost on the road to Washington, 72-61.

"Seventy-eight points is plenty for us to win a basketball game. We're going to miss layups, but the bottom line is if a team shoots 56 percent, you are not going to win too many basketball games."

— ASU coach Charli Turner Thorne

Sun Devils, Trojans want to play baseball, not basebrawl

BY PERCY EDNALINO JR.
STATE PRESS

ASU's main nemesis in the Pac-10 may be UofA, but when it comes to baseball, the Wildcats are mere kittens. It's USC who earns the honor of being the Sun Devils' arch-enemy in the Six-Pac.

And enemies these two teams are.

For the past few seasons, the rivalry between both Six-Pac teams has been intense. Whether or not that intensity has faded remains to be seen when ASU (2-1, 0-0 Pac-10) faces the Trojans (3-0, 0-0 Pac-10) at Dedeaux Field in Los Angeles, today for the first of a three-game series.

USC head coach Mike Gillespie said pitching will be the key to beating the Sun Devils. Gillespie said key losses to the Trojans' offense force the team to rely upon its pitching rotation.

"It's an on-going concern of ours," Gillespie said. "It clearly is the shortcoming of our team. Offense is just not going to be the strength of this team."

It's a rotation that arguably is the best in the Six-Pac.

MURPHY

Senior Randy Flores, the 1995 Pac-10 Pitcher of the Year, anchors a Trojan rotation that also features Seth Etherton, 1996's Pac-10 Pitcher of the Year. Both Etherton, a junior, and Flores are 1-0 as starters.

USC's strengths on the mound aren't limited to its starters, junior Jack Krawczyk is the top reliever in the conference.

Gillespie said facing ASU — or any of the Six-Pac teams — this early in the season, is something he didn't want to do.

"I hate it," Gillespie said. "I don't like it. I couldn't express it to you in strong enough terms, but that's life. No conference coach would want to do this. We'll try not to cry about it, but I suppose if we get swept or beat twice, we'll cry about it Monday."

ASU coach Pat Murphy said he doesn't mind facing a Six-Pac foe this early in the season, but with a two-game series against St. Mary's on deck for Tuesday, he said he would have liked some time off.

Murphy also said he doesn't want to lose any players to suspension.

Last season, outfielder Mikel Moreno, starting pitcher Kaipo Spenser and reliever Ryan Bradley were each slapped with 3-game suspensions as a result of a bench-clearing fight on March 17. The fight started when Moreno collided with Trojans' catcher Jeff Depippo in the Sun Devils' 4-3 loss at USC.

Murphy said that he has not talked to Gillespie or his team about preventing a repeat of last year from happening, but said it won't happen again.

"No, we haven't talked about it," Murphy said. "It was an unfortunate situation, but it's not going to happen again."

Gillespie, on the other hand, said he talked to his players. He said he can't afford to lose players this early in the season. DePippo and pitcher Brian Ponchak also were suspended as a result of the fight.

"We've gone into it in some depth, actually," Gillespie said. "Certainly, nobody wants to see a repeat of any incident like that, at any time, with anybody."

"From our perspective, I think everyone understands what is expected of them. There will be no bench talking, no gestures, no taunting, no styling up of home runs.

Women's athletics in spotlight at ASU

BY LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

Beginning today and lasting through Feb. 8, the Arizona State Intercollegiate Athletic Department will hold its Girls and Women in Sports Week.

The week is designed to recognize women's sports and generate fan support. Women's sporting events during the week include basketball, tennis, swimming and diving and gymnastics. It coincides with the National Girls and Women Sports Day on Feb. 6.

Assistant Athletic Director Sandy Hatfield Clubb and the Piper Branch Manager of the Scottsdale Boys and Girls Club, Christie Lane, first thought of creating it three years ago. After much time and support from the American Humanics Program and Wings of Gold, Hatfield Clubb and the coaches of ASU women's athletics are enthusiastic about next week.

"We want to do two things," Hatfield Clubb said. "To raise awareness and attendance and to hopefully increase participation in girls' sports."

The events are open to all that wish to attend, but the week is particularly geared towards girls' youth groups. Numerous local groups have been invited and will have free admission. ASU students also can enter free of charge with a student I.D.

The events kick off tonight when the women's gymnastics team takes on Washington at 7:30 p.m. at the University Activity Center. On Feb. 1 the tennis team plays Stanford at noon, and women's basketball plays Washington at 3 p.m. The softball team has yet to begin its season, but will hold an open practice Feb. 5 at 4:30 p.m. Women's swimming and diving takes on Loyola Marymount on Feb. 7 at 3 p.m.

On Feb. 8, the basketball team hosts UofA. Before the game there will be the ASU Experience, an exhibit of information booths ranging from ASU organizations that support women's issues to representatives from the WNBA. There will also be a

Gymnastics team mentally ready for Pac-10 rival No. 16 Huskies

BY RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

Look for a confident ASU women's gymnastics team to take the floor tonight at 7:30 at the University Activity Center.

"I think we are pretty gung-ho for the meet," Sophomore Lisa Vincijanovic said. "We're all pretty excited after our win against UCLA (last week). It kind of gave us a big boost, which we needed."

The Sun Devils (1-1, 1-0 Pac-10) host the preseason No. 16-ranked Washington Huskies (2-1, 1-0) in their second consecutive home meet.

Head Coach John Spini said his job right now centers on keeping his team from getting over-confident and in the right mental frame of mind after their big upset over former No. 1-ranked UCLA.

"They are confident," he said. "Probably more so than the coaching staff. We are a strong team, but I am not training them to beat Washington, but to get to nationals. That's the whole point."

"Win, lose or draw (tonight) does not help them to achieve that goal. This is a great team in every way, but I don't want to lose sight of our goal."

This message hasn't been lost on the team said junior Carrie Courtney.

"He (Spini) is trying to dig into our heads that we can't get cocky," she said. "He doesn't mind us being confident it's just that he doesn't want us to get over confident. Beating UCLA was great, but then if we go and lose to Washington — it's just the complete opposite."

Spini said junior Gina Holleran (quadriple), freshman Elizabeth Reid (sore back) and Vincijanovic are all probable, but any or all of the three could compete.

Vincijanovic said she is almost getting used to having a sore ankle.

"It's (the injury) pretty much the same thing," she said. "You've got to work with the pain, or live with the pain of being second place."

Meagan Wright could anchor the floor exercise rotation, Spini said. Her improved routine, jazzed-up with the theme to the film "Rocky," nearly stole the show at last week's meet. When the crowd saw her score of 9.75 the judges were cascaded with a round of boos.

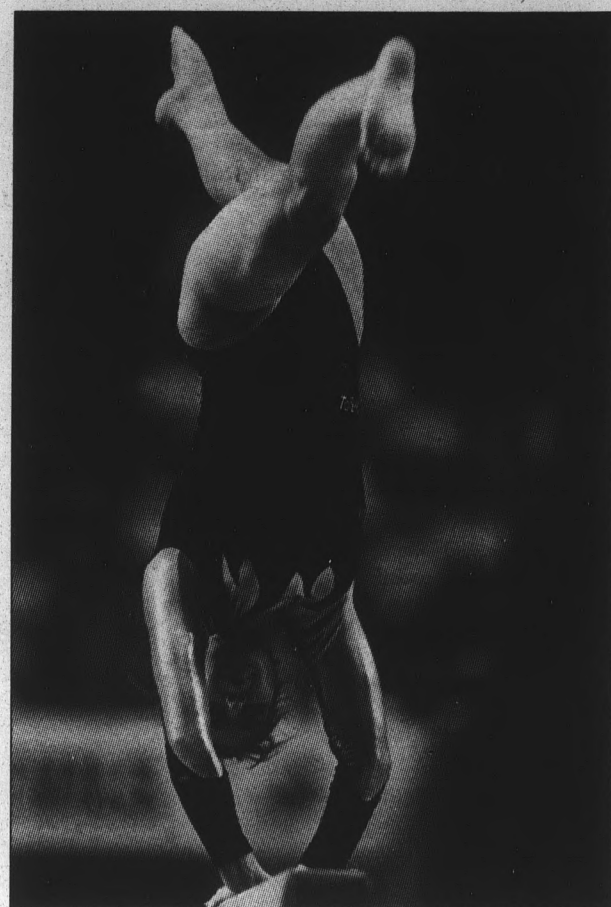

"I thought it was pretty funny," Wright said.

Nominated

Wright was one of four athletes nominated for Pac-10 gymnast of the week for her efforts in ASU's victory over UCLA. Wright scored a 39.2 in the all-around competition and won the vault with a career-high tying score of 9.925.

Good Timing

The Sun Devils score of 195.1 versus the Bruins is the third-best in the conference thus far. Ironically the two scores above were both posted by UCLA — 195.725 and 195.625.

Sophomore Wendy Ellsberry and the rest of the women's gymnastics team look for their second straight Pac-10 win tonight against Washington at the UAC.

Sun Devil wrestlers take to the mat against Oregon schools

BY JOSH DEFAMIO
STATE PRESS

After a two-week hiatus, the ASU wrestling team is back in action in the Great Northwest this weekend.

The 10th-ranked Sun Devils start their Oregon swing tonight at 7 with a dual against the 18th-ranked Beavers of Oregon State. This will be the third meeting between the two schools this year. ASU won both of the previous matches.

"We wrestled Oregon State twice in neutral cities," Head Coach Lee Roy Smith said. "We go to their turf this weekend. Both of the dual meets we beat them in were close, so we're looking for a good challenge."

ASU may get a break due to an injury. Beaver sophomore Oscar Wood, a returning All-American who has compiled an unbelievable 28-1 record thus far, injured himself last week and may not be able to wrestle. Wood is 2-0 this year against ASU's Joey Heckel.

However, they still have to deal with freshman Isaac Wood, Oscar's younger brother. The younger Wood brings an equally impressive 26-3 record into the match. Wood's opponent, senior Michael Douglas, is looking forward to his third match against the freshman.

"I'm kind of pumped up for the match," said Douglas, who has a 1-1 record against Wood thus far. "I want to beat him and make it two out of three, because I have to meet him again at the Pac-10's, and I want him to know that he can't beat me."

The Beavers are coming off a weekend loss to Fresno State one day after upsetting Cal State-Bakersfield, who handed ASU its only home loss two weeks ago.

The two wins against OSU earlier this year give the Devils a 10-9 lead in the all-time series.

After the match, ASU will then travel south to Eugene to face the unranked Oregon Ducks. Despite that fact, Smith refuses to take them lightly.

"Oregon has been ranked 25th at one time," Smith said. "And they'll be moving up in these next rankings. Their team was put together during the second semester and is gelling at this point in time. They should be considered a top-20 team."

ASU defeated Oregon 25-10 in their previous meeting last year at the UAC.

ASU leads the all-time series 11-2.

Simpson an All-Star

Immediately following the match, junior captain Aaron Simpson, ranked second in the nation at 177 pounds, will travel to Clarion, Penn., to compete in the National Wrestling Coaches Association All-Star Classic.

Simpson will be the 18th Sun Devil to compete in the annual tournament since 1967. His first match will be against third-ranked Erich Harvey of Michigan State. Simpson defeated Harvey earlier this season in the Midlands Championship.

Despite the experience, Simpson has other concerns.

"I won't be back until Monday or Tuesday," he said. "So I want to make sure my teachers know where I am."

student-athlete presentation and a question-and-answer discussion with local youths.

Men's Golf Heads to Tucson

The 11th-ranked ASU men's golf team heads to Tucson, Feb. 2, to tee it up in the Ping/Arizona Invitational tournament. The three-day event will be held at the Raven Golf Club at Sabino Springs.

"The Raven is a pretty tough track," senior All-American Chris Hanell said. "It reminds me of a lot of (local) desert courses like Greyhawk or TPC Scottsdale."

Last year the Devils finished sixth in this event, while rival UofA is the defending champion. An improving Hanell is a likely candidate to win this year.

Hanell finished tied for 20th last year. He said he expects to do better this week.

"My goal for this tournament is to win it," Hanell said.

Over the summer Hanell notched a win at the Gavle

Open and finished 14th at the Skoude Open. Both of these tournaments came on the Scandinavian Professional Tour. He also finished fifth at the European Amateur Championships and was 35th at the Scandinavian Masters.

Senior Scott Johnson, who is a finalist for the Dave Williams Award, given to the nation's top senior student-athlete in men's golf, finished 23rd last year. He hopes to improve on that score this time around. — John Sheehy

Women's tennis hosts two from Pac-10

The ASU women's tennis team begins its season today by hosting No. 18 Cal. at 1:30 p.m., and No. 2 Stanford Saturday at noon.

ASU is currently ranked 16th in the nation. The Sun Devils' top player junior Reka Cseresnyes is ranked 18th and the doubles team of junior Stephanie Lansdorp and sophomore Katy Propstra are ranked 17th.

Stanford has five players ranked in the top 26 and their

No. 1-player, Katie Schlukebir is No. 7. Its doubles team of Lilia Osterloh and Schlukebir is ranked 10th. Schlukebir was part of the doubles team that won the 1995 national title.

Stanford is an experienced team, but they do have three freshman. Nevertheless these freshman are just as able to play at an upperclassman's level, Head Coach Sheila McNerney said. Also last week two of their players competed in the Australian Open.

Starting the season against two of the toughest teams in the Pac-10 makes no difference to the Sun Devils who are ready to play," McNerney said.

"It's that old cliché. If you want to be the best you've got to play the best," she said. "In a lot of ways you want to start with an easier schedule, but tough teams can make you stronger. We don't have too many easy matches anyway."

White named to Hall of Fame

BY ED ODEVEN
STATE PRESS

Ex-Sun Devil quarterback and punter Danny White will be one of 12 football players inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1997, the organization announced yesterday.

Ex-ASU coach Frank Kush was thrilled that his former star quarterback was honored.

"I'm real elated for him," Kush said. "It's a tribute to him and a tribute to the program. He was a great football player and a great athlete. He did so much for the program. I think it's long overdue."

Despite his Hall of Fame credentials, White isn't the outspoken type according to Kush.

"Danny's the type of guy that's humble enough to not talk about it. It's typical of him," Kush said.

White, who played at ASU from 1971-73, was a third round pick of the Dallas Cowboys in 1974. He retired from America's Team in 1988.

As a senior in 1973, he completed 146 of 265 pass attempts for 2,878 yards and 23 TD's and finished ninth in Heisman Trophy voting.

He was a 2nd-team All-American selection for The Associated Press in 1973. White also made the NFC All-Pro team in 1983.

The 1997 inductees will be officially honored on Dec. 9 at the ritzy Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City.

Nothing that's inflammatory."

Another suspension is something Moreno said he has no intention of earning.

"It won't ever happen again, so there is really no reason to mention it," Moreno said. "I know what I did was wrong and I've learned from my mistakes."

Bradley, ASU's top reliever, agreed with Moreno and said he's expecting a rough and boisterous Trojan crowd.

"We just need to go out there and be relentless the whole time," Bradley said. "We can't get caught up with the fans, because we already know that they're going to go after us. We just need to stay within ourselves and go out there and play ball."

Moreno, the team's leadoff hitter, said the Sun Devils' hitting will be tested against USC's hurlers. He added that he expects this weekend's series to be a tough one for both teams.

"USC is always tough," Moreno said. "They've got good coaching and good players, but we're a better team than we were last year. It's always tough when we go down there but we'll just have to play our best."

Bradley said USC's offense can't be underestimated.

"As a pitching staff, we've got to go in and throw strikes," Bradley said. "As long as we go in and throw strikes and make them go after the ball, our defense will be able to take care of everything else."

Series Notes:

ASU owns a 71-69 edge in the all-time series. Last season the Sun Devils were 2-4 against USC, including an 0-3 mark on the road.

Junior right hander Jack Krawczyk, a graduate of Scottsdale's Aricadia High School, is the lone Arizonan on the USC roster. In stark contrast, ASU has 10 Californians on its roster.

Gillespie has a 33-27 record against the Sun Devils.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by Frances Drake

Friday, January 31, 1997

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You could have some regrets about a turn of events with your career, yet new horizons also await you. The future looks promising as you let go of the past. Your significant other has good advice in this area.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Keep yourself mentally occupied to avoid a tendency to start daydreaming. A problem with a co-worker still gets to you. Quiet pursuits are best, especially in the evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Friends are very important to you and you could feel that one of them has let you down. Prospects for career success should galvanize you into action. Evening hours are good for quiet activities.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) What should be a good time with friends could be marred by someone's angry outburst. Let cool heads and logic prevail. Then understandings will be reached.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Come to grips with how you feel in a romance. New career developments are promising, but avoid hasty moves. Be keenly observant and you'll know when to take action.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) A raise could be forthcoming, but you still feel a bit uncertain of either your position or your goals. Keep home life and business separate. Use evening hours to pay some attention to finances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Some face a disappointment in business, but it's not the end of the world. Regroup your forces. A nice invitation for travel or a date comes during the evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You don't have to fight about it; you can talk it over. Cooperation is needed with close ties. Place less emphasis on "I" and more on "we."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Remember to be compassionate when the sharp word could easily come to your tongue. Work goes well, but be less critical of close ties. Your peevish behavior is unbecoming.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Everything must be spelled out in business, so take nothing for granted. Given the chance, others could take unfair advantage of your good nature. Don't sacrifice reason to impatience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) A little hard work and self-discipline is all you need to turn creative stirrings into genuine accomplishments. The accent is on local travel and partnerships. After dark, a close friend confides a secret in you.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Home is the center of activities. Both physical and mental pursuits will be part of your agenda. Also, attend to family responsibilities during evening hours.

YOU BORN TODAY are a good student of human nature and this quality will be the cornerstone of your success in life. You are often attracted to life in the theater because of your flair for the dramatic. However, you also need a stable home life in order to keep you well grounded. Family is important to you, particularly children. A tendency to jump to conclusions is an obstacle.
