ASU East in limbo over donation offers

BY DEANNA DARR
 STATE PRESS

The renovation of a building at ASU East is all that stands between students and a $3 million donation of high-tech equipment.

Intel Corp. has offered the School of Technology $2 to $3 million worth of technological equipment, but only if the University can provide an adequate facility.

The building, previously used as the commissary at the former Williams Air Force Base, has been earmarked as the future home of the school. Once renovated, the building would house a teaching factory that would give students first-hand training in microelectronics manufacturing.

Sheila Ainlay, director of Planning and Budget at ASU East, said the 65,000-square-foot building is currently "a big, old empty space."

Ainlay said the University has requested $5.9 million from the Legislature to bring the building up to standards. She added that the renovation project would need to be finished by January or February 1998 in order for the campus to get the donation.

The equipment Intel has offered was recently been removed from plants that have either been shut down or upgraded.

Albert L. McHenry, director the School of Technology, said if the University had to buy the same equipment, it would cost $6 to $7 million on the open market or $2 to $3 million if bought from a closing company.

Motorola has sweetened the deal by offering free technical support for three years and assistance in the design and initial operation of the teaching factory.

One window of opportunity to receive the equipment has already passed. The University had to turn down the offer last spring because the building was not prepared to handle the equipment.

Ainlay said the School of Technology is currently being housed in "temporary and less-than-ideal facilities."

McHenry said the facilities are outdated and restrict the quality of teaching. He said students have to travel to ASU Main every Saturday to complete the required lab because there is not an adequate facility on the extension campus. Saturday was the only day available for the School of Technology to conduct labs because of Main campus classes during the week.

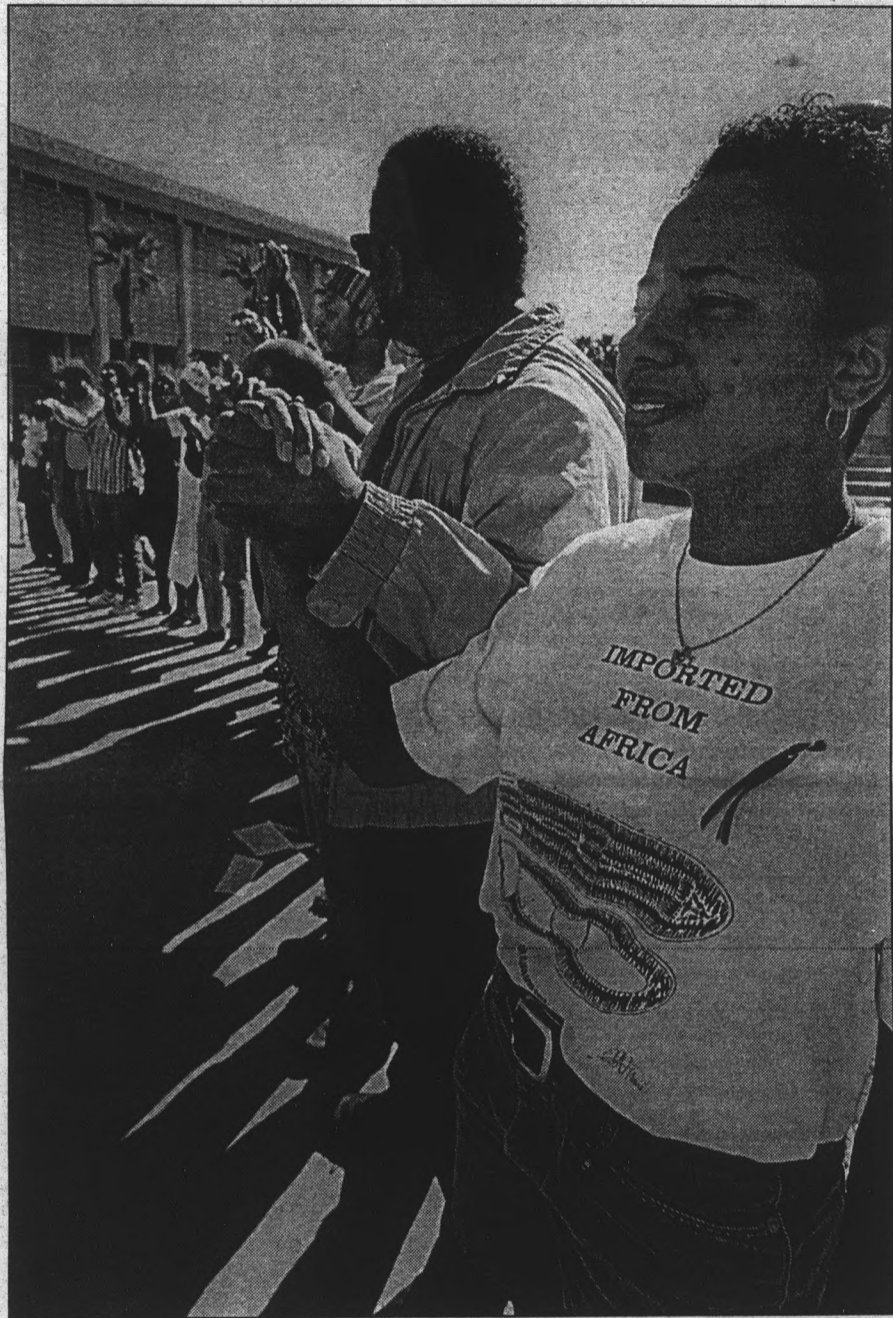

While there are 20 undergraduate and 10 graduate students enrolled in the school, McHenry said he expects 300 to enroll if the teaching lab becomes a reality.

If the Legislature does not appropriate the money needed to renovate the building, future growth of the school would be severely hindered, Ainlay said.

McHenry said Arizona has become a "silicon desert" and that microelectronics manufacturing has become a primary business in the state.

"There is a tremendous need to develop a work force capable of maintaining that business (manufacturing) in the future," he said.

ASU police nab suspected drug officer impersonator

BY MELODY McDONALD
 STATE PRESS

A felon who was released from the state penitentiary in September was arrested last night after allegedly trying to lure an ASU woman into his car by pretending to be an undercover narcotics officer.

ASU police arrested Robert Kenneth Barnes, 33, about 10:50 p.m. at 1500 S. McAllister Ave. and booked him into Madison Street Jail for impersonating a public servant and providing false information to a police officer.

Barnes also had warrants out for his arrest on assault and failure to appear, charges issued by Phoenix police.

Barnes remained in jail Monday afternoon in lieu of a $3,130 bond.

ASU Lt. Bennett Rowe said the suspect first propositioned a woman about 10 p.m. behind Mariposa Hall on the southeast corner of Apache Boulevard and McAllister Avenue. The suspect drove up in a purple 1980 Ford Mustang convertible, flashed a police badge and asked the woman if she would get in the car and assist him in buying narcotics on campus, he said.

"The woman called police," Rowe said. "She was smart enough not to get in the car, thank God. Undercover police officers never operate in this manner. This guy was bogus from the get-go."

Rowe said ASU police began aggressively patrolling the area shortly after receiving the woman's call. A short time later, they spotted the purple Mustang near Sahuaro Hall, where the suspect reportedly tried to draw two other women into his car, he said.

Rowe said when police stopped Barnes, he lied about his identity. Later, when police learned his name and did a background check, they discovered his violent record.

In January 1982, Barnes was sentenced in Pima County Superior Court to 15 years in a state penitentiary for three counts of armed robbery and kidnapping. After serving 14 years, he was released for good behavior. He violated the conditions of his release, however, and was sent back to the state prison at Florence.

He was released again Sept. 16, 1996, said Mike Arra, Arizona Department of Corrections spokesman.

"Our guys did a great job," Rowe said. "They took a lot of time and found the bad guy."

Anyone with additional information regarding this case is encouraged to call ASU police at 965-3456.

College savings bill jumps another legislative hurdle

BY VIVI STENBERG
 STATE PRESS

The college savings plan bill the state Senate Education Committee passed Thursday will enable more students to attend universities and community colleges in the future, the bill's main sponsor said.

"If you save money, won't you be able to go to school?" asked Sen. John Wettaw, R-Flagstaff.

Upon final approval, the bill would set up special savings accounts in which family members can contribute tuition funds for their children's post-secondary education. When the child is ready for college, the accumulated funds could be used for tuition at any qualified public or private college and university.

Wettaw said interest earned in the account would be nontaxable, but the principle will be taxed when the money is pulled out.

Christine Thompson, executive director of the Arizona Students Association, said the bill attempts to "get as many kids as possible to attend college in the future."

"Money should not be the obstacle," Thompson added.

Rep. Laura Knaperek, R-Tempe, also gave the bill her support.

"I think it's a good idea," she said. "It will help people prepare for college at an earlier date."

The bill has bipartisan support at the state Capitol, as opposed to the previous two years. A somewhat similar bill that would have allowed families to pre-pay tuition at current tuition rates failed to make it out of legislative committees last spring.

Originally, the mainly-Republican opponents worried about the consequences of a possible shortfall of funds. The latest version of the bill clearly states that the state will not be responsible for the tuition if funds are lacking.

If the person who benefits from the account decides to use the money for something other than higher education, a 10 percent penalty will be imposed.

Thompson said if a person decides to buy a car with the money instead of going to school, it would only be right to ask for a penalty. If the bill passes, the Arizona Commission for Post-Secondary Education will select financial institutions to serve as the account depositories.

The proposed legislation will appear before the Senate Finance Committee sometime during the next few weeks.

Police chase, beat Yugoslavian protesters

BY JULIJANA MOJSILOVIC
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Police chased student demonstrators down streets, through stores and into university buildings Monday, beating them and dragging some away in a second violent day of anti-government protests.

Opponents of President Slobodan Milosevic avoided a larger, more dangerous confrontation Monday afternoon by moving tens of thousands of people away from a police cordon.

The violence has increased since Sunday, but it is unclear whether police force is how Milosevic ultimately plans to bring the 76 days of protest to an end. His tactics have varied, including silent tolerance, legal maneuvers and force.

Late Sunday and early Monday, police beat protesters at a Belgrade bridge, fired tear gas and sprayed water cannons in their most brutal reaction yet. About 80 people were injured; police reported 18 arrests.

The protests began when Milosevic refused to recognize opposition victories in municipal elections Nov. 17, but they have swelled into wider demands for democratic reforms.

Leaders of the movement gained new support Monday from prominent actors and the Serbian Orthodox Church, but Milosevic indicated his tough line may continue.

"All those who think that they can achieve terrorist goals with terrorist acts should draw a clear conclusion that our state will not let Serbia become a testing range for terrorism," he said.

Milosevic was addressing his top security officials after what the state-run Tanjug news agency said was an anti-terrorist operation in Serbia's southern Kosovo province. It said 66 people were rounded up.

Representatives of Kosovo's ethnic Albanian majority, living under a heavy police presence, said five people were killed in the sweep.

Students hold their report cards up during a protest in central Belgrade Monday. Tens of thousands of President Slobodan Milosevic's opponents demonstrated again Monday for democracy, defying hundreds of riot police and unbowed by the state's biggest show of muscle in 2 1/2 months of protests.

Courthouse bombing suspect turns himself in

BY ANN BANCROFT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALLEJO, Calif. — An ex-convict surrendered Monday to face charges he masterminded bombings at a courthouse and a bank to thwart a drug trial that could put him away for life under California's "three strikes" law.

The explosions last week destroyed three cash machines and blasted a crater in the side of the Solano County Courthouse wall. No one was injured.

Authorities said Kevin Lee Robinson, 29, had hired several men to disrupt the Solano County court system, where he was to go on trial Monday on cocaine charges that could send him to prison for 25 years to life.

"Apparently his thought process was this would somehow stop the trial," Police Chief Robert Nichelini said.

The bank was bombed to throw detectives off the trail, investigators believe. "None of this makes any sense," Nichelini said. "But desperate people do desperate things."

Police said the conspirators amassed more than 500 pounds of stolen dynamite, which is closely regulated and can be traced to its legitimate owner.

Nichelini said Robinson surfaced as a suspect Sunday. Police arranged to meet him on the street Monday, then brought him in for questioning and arrested him.

"We're happy to have him off the streets," the chief said.

Three men were arrested Sunday in the plot and another was still being sought.

Police didn't say how much they were paid to carry out the bombings.

On Jan. 25, children found 30 sticks of dynamite in a rucksack at the county library, which houses some police evidence in its basement. On Sunday morning, investigators found more than 60 sticks of wired dynamite in the trunk of a car parked outside an apartment complex. They speculated it was intended for a second assault on the library.

The bombers used the same dynamite for the courthouse and library, investigators said.

On Sunday evening, police stormed a house and found 500 pounds of dynamite and a semiautomatic rifle in the garage. Authorities said the explosives could have leveled much of the neighborhood.

Federal agents said they were still searching for another cache of explosives, possibly up to 100 pounds.

Three men were arrested Sunday. Francis Ernestberg, 40, and Oston Osotonu, 24, face conspiracy, burglary and explosives charges, carrying up to 160 years in prison. Robinson faces the same charges.

Osotonu's brother Ivan was charged with possession of explosives.

Robinson has a history of drug and weapons convictions. Ernestberg and Oston Osotonu also have police records.

Mike Morrissey of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in San Francisco said a break came when investigators traced the dynamite found at the library and learned it was stolen from a construction company in the San Francisco Bay area.

Bhutto loses in low-turnout election, Sharif prevails

BY KATHY GANNON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAHORE, Pakistan — Nawaz Sharif — once ousted from the prime minister's job in a corruption scandal — claimed election victory Monday over Benazir Bhutto, who was labeled incompetent and fired from the premiership.

Ms. Bhutto's supporters attributed her apparent failed bid for vindication to election fraud. She had vowed to reject the results if she lost.

Independent election observers reported no serious irregularities, although reporters saw scattered incidents where women were forced from the polls in one province. The observers also noted a general apathy, and the 26 percent turnout in parliamentary elections — a record low — reflected widespread despair over the state of Pakistani democracy.

Although Ms. Bhutto was charged with corruption and incompetence upon her ouster in November, she was allowed to run against Sharif, whose own term as prime minister was cut short in 1993 by charges of dishonesty.

Only one official result was announced by late Monday, when Sharif's Pakistan Muslim League took the only National Assembly seat for Islamabad, the capital. The election commission said turnout was 26 percent, based on figures from provincial elections held at the same time.

Sharif was exuberant, telling supporters in Lahore that reports from poll workers showed his Pakistan Muslim Party winning a majority in the 217-seat National Assembly. This would allow him to form a government without seeking coalition partners.

"It is much better than expected," he said.

In her hometown of Larkana, 500 miles south of Islamabad, Ms. Bhutto's spokesman Munawar Suhurwardy said Sharif was sweeping Punjab, Sharif's home province and Pakistan's largest. Suhurwardy said Ms. Bhutto also was losing ground in Sindh, her home province and traditional power base.

Neither party provided any figures.

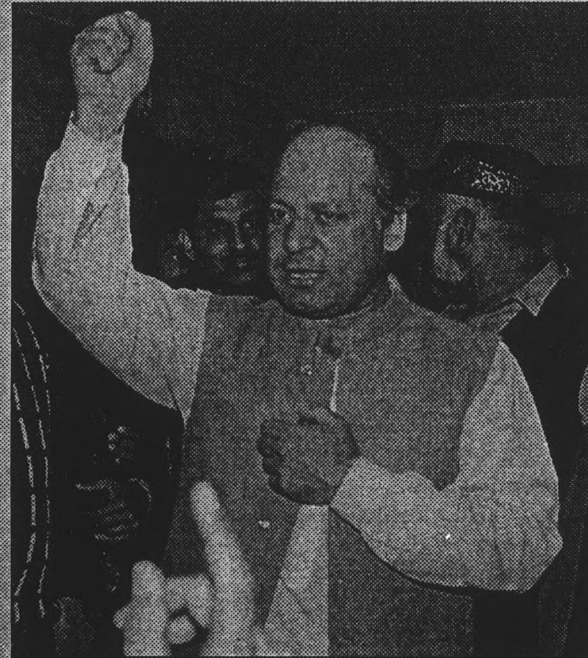

Ms. Bhutto is no stranger to misfortune — political or personal. On the walls of her sprawling brick home, images of the dead stare out from giant portraits: father Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, toppled by a military dictator and hanged in 1977; his youngest son, Shahnawaz, poisoned under mysterious circumstances in 1985; and his eldest son, Murtaza, killed last year in a police attack that many blame on Ms. Bhutto.

Monday's dismal turnout made clear the lack of support for any of the candidates and the disgust over Pakistani politics.

"I don't give a damn about voting," said Lahore resident Mohammed Abdul. "Politicians get elected, they make promises about roads, then they never build the roads."

Independent election observers remarked on the apathy among the country's nearly 60 million registered voters.

"Public respect for political parties has plummeted, and democratic government (has been) discredited," said former Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser, who led an election observer team. "The massive fall in voters can only be attributed to voter disillusionment in their governments — successive governments."

Criminals on streets pose danger to innocent people

Last night a man was arrested very close to campus for allegedly trying to lure women into his car by posing as an undercover narcotics officer. Luckily, the women played it smart by declining to get in the car and one woman even called the police. Who knows what would have happened had one of them gotten in the car with the man.

Following a police background check, they discovered the man has a history of convictions. His record reads multiple counts of armed robbery, kidnapping and time served at Florence State Penitentiary. At one time, he was released but violated the conditions of his release and was again sent back to prison.

According to a Bureau of Justice Statistics study released recently, almost 60 percent of 234,000 convicted sex offenders under supervision of corrections officials were on parole or probation. That's 140,400 convicts nationwide roaming our streets, neighborhoods and campuses.

Studies have shown that once a person has been convicted of a violent act, they tend to repeat the previous behavior. Jail terms are not the reformatory sentences we idealize them to be. If a criminal lies or steals, he is likely to return to that lifestyle when released from prison.

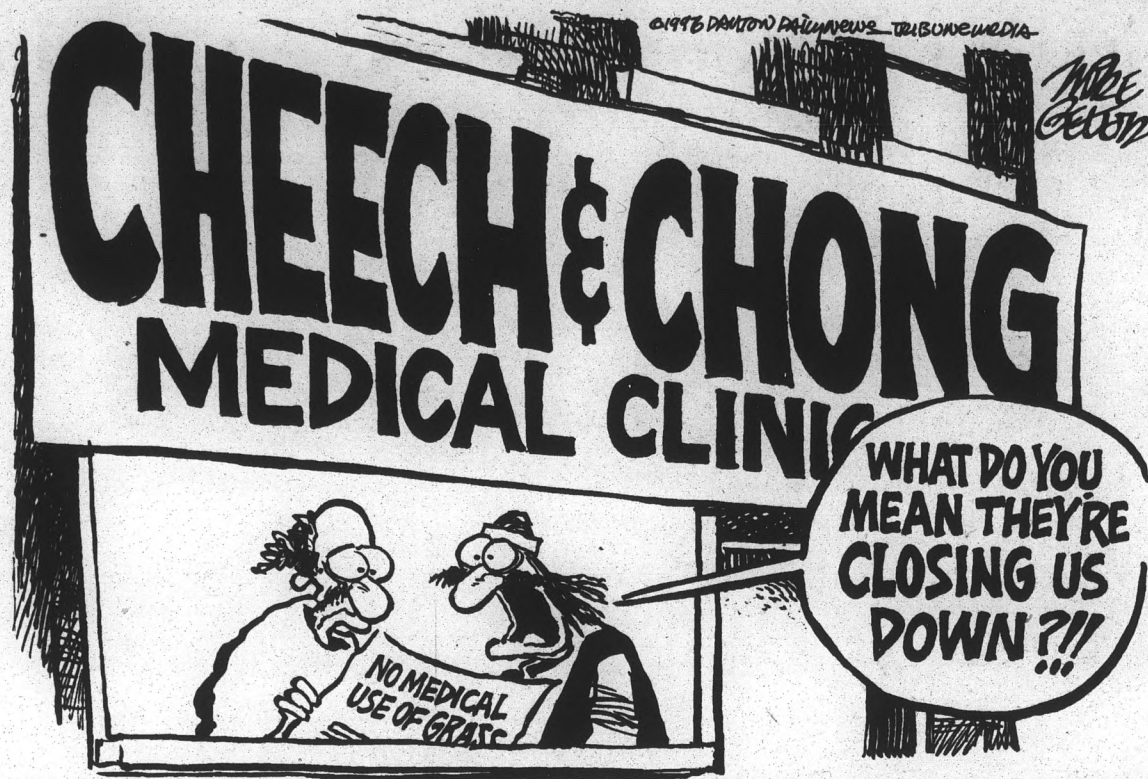

Although the man arrested last night does not show any sex offenses on his record, nor are we going to speculate what his intentions were, we do know for a fact that he has a criminal record and he also has a tendency to repeatedly engage in acts of violent behavior. This makes him and people similar to him a threat to our communities.

Newspaper stories all too frequently exclaim how our prisons are teeming with men and women. It seems we are dealing with this by cutting sentences shorter, offering in-house sentences, and granting parole. In a nation such as ours, we should find a way to curb the overcrowding problem in our penitentiaries. One would think the powers that be could find a way to prevent crime from occurring in volumes. If we get this problem solved, it would fix the overcrowding problem in our prison system.

During President Clinton's first term he signed Megan's Law, which alerts residents of a community when a sex offender moves in. Attorney General Janet Reno said that although a National Sex Offender Registry is being created, notification programs will not work unless the states ensure they are kept updated.

These are good moves by our federal government, but it doesn't help us to be informed when criminals of other violent offenses move into our neighborhoods. We probably couldn't keep up with a registry to record all the names of criminals in this country, but that is another large problem in itself.

It seems at this point all we can do is keep each other informed, be aware of our surroundings and use common sense.

Death may be only revealer of truths

So the O.J. Simpson case is now in the hands of the jury. Soon we will have closure to one of the biggest spectacles of this decade. Either O.J. will be completely vindicated, or the Goldman and Brown families will receive vengeance in the financial crippling of the man they believe killed their children. Only, it won't go that way.

Say what you want about DNA tests, bloody gloves and Bruno Magli shoes, this one isn't over until somebody makes a deathbed confession. The necessary problem of our justice system is that it is in the hands of human beings. Because of this, we cannot be guaranteed of receiving the truth. Already, we know at least one person perjured himself during the criminal trial. It is probable that at least one person has done it during the civil case.

In the civil trial, the pivotal issue has been shoes. Kind of funny that such a high profile case should come down to such a humble piece of evidence, but there it is. O.J. claimed he never had shoes like the ones that left bloody footprints at Nicole Simpson's house. When the plaintiffs brought forth pictures of O.J. wearing the shoes at a 1993 Buffalo Bills game, the defense countered with expert testimony that the picture was faked. This might have been credible if the plaintiffs didn't then produce thirty other pictures of O.J. wearing those shoes from a different photographer, but they did. Did the defendant forget he had owned those shoes? Maybe, but when the plaintiff's lawyer informed the defense of the evidence, don't you think O.J. should have "remembered"?

The case the defense is trying to sell is that you can't believe any of the evidence. O.J.'s blood at the scene of the crime? Planted. The victim's blood in the Bronco? Planted. The bloody glove? Planted. The pictures of O.J. in the shoes? Faked. This is the conspiracy to end all conspiracies. Unfortunately, the defense has already identified a great fall guy in Mark Fuhrman, acknowledged user of the "N" word. There is clearly enough evidence to link Simpson to the killings, but if there is a plausible conspiracy in the eyes of the jury, he gets off with only a huge assortment of legal bills.

In both trials, the defense has managed to raise the argument of tainted evidence. In doing this, they have cast uncertainty over what seems to be a strong case. Further, the defendant has maintained his innocence. O.J. is the only one who truly knows if he is the killer. If he is, it is clear that the public will never get the true story from him. If he is the killer, he brutally murdered two people, but believes he can get away with it by protesting innocence. He knows from his time in television that the image he fosters affects how the public perceives him, in the same way that Ronald Reagan looked like a president.

Provided he has any money left, Simpson will continue to scour golf courses looking for Nicole's killer, as he promised. But the fact remains, he will never go to jail for this crime. The fact remains the public will never know what really happened unless one of the principal players involved comes clean with some sort of revelation. If that were to happen, it would be many years from now.

Those of you that believe the truth cannot remain clouded should look to other current headlines. Right now James Earl Ray, convicted killer of Martin Luther King Jr., is still trying to clear his name. Ray is in need of a liver transplant, or his days are numbered. Many black leaders believe Ray, at the very least, did not act alone. His lawyer is trying to get new tests performed on the murder weapon to show Ray could not have fired the gun. So far, these requests have been denied. If Ray dies, his appeal dies with him. Many are hoping that before James Earl Ray does die he will make some sort of deathbed statement revealing what really happened.

These things don't go away. As far as O.J. is concerned, the evidence says one thing, and the defendant says another. There will be no definitive answer.

Guest privileges have their price even in best houses

After nervously clearing his throat, Slat Grobnik said, "So, you don't believe in tipping? Getting a little tight with the old greenbacks, huh?"

Excuse me?

"Tipping. You know, 15 or 20 percent of the tab, when you go out for dinner?"

Of course I believe in tipping. Why would you suggest otherwise?

"Well, I hate to mention this. Maybe it was just an oversight on your part. But when you were at my house for that dinner party last weekend..."

Wait a minute. Is that what you're talking about? Your highly unusual dinner party?

"Hey, be calm. Like I said, I figure that it was just an oversight on your part."

No, my failure to leave a tip was not an oversight. When I paid the bill, I was still almost in shock that you would present your dinner guests with separate checks for dinner and drinks.

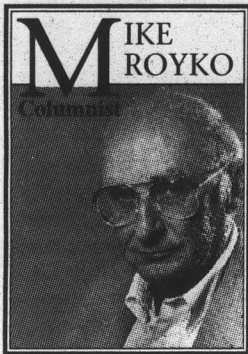

"What's wrong with separate checks? I couldn't stick one of you with the tab for the whole bunch. That wouldn't have been fair. So you did it on purpose — not leaving a tip?"

Yes; frankly, I did it on purpose because I was appalled by what you did.

"Hey, you're not accusing me of padding the bill, are you? If you looked close at it, you would have seen that it wasn't a la carte. Lucky for you, too, since you ate half the appetizers and had seconds and thirds on my wife's beef stew."

On the check, it said "boeuf bourguignon."

"What's the diff. Stew is stew no matter what you call it."

MIKE ROYKO
Columnist

My wife thought the name added a touch of class. So you think I padded the bill and that's why you didn't add a tip."

No. But it is the first time in my life that I've been invited to someone's home for dinner, only to be presented with a check as if I was in a restaurant. I was so stunned that it didn't even occur to me to add a tip. Frankly, I was struck speechless, which is why I didn't say anything at the time. But since you brought it up, I am going to ask you: How could you do something like that? Whatever possessed you to invite five couples — all friends, I might add — into your home and then hand them tabs for dinner and drinks? And now you tell me you expected a tip?

"What, you didn't like the service? Didn't we give free warm-ups on the coffee? You got any idea what coffee costs these days?"

That isn't the point. How could YOU charge anything? I've never heard of something like that.

"You ain't? What, you don't keep up with the news?"

What news?

"Hey, all you got to do is turn on the political talk shows like 'Crossfire' and you'd know where I'm coming from. I watch all those shows, and lately these big Washington Democrats been going on to tell why there ain't nothing wrong with President Clinton renting out the Lincoln Bedroom to people who drop $100 G's into his campaign bucket. And it turns out that it ain't the way you people in the media thought it was."

It wasn't? What way was it?

"Well, the way these guys explain it, Clinton lives in the White House. Maybe he don't own it, but the part that is the living quarters right now that is his home."

So?

"So this. He's like anyone else. Once in a while, he likes to have someone over for drinks and dinner. You know, a party. And sometimes he invites them to sleep over. You know, he invites people from other parts of the country. Don't you ever have out-of-town guests flop at your place?"

Yes, I've done that.

"So, what's the big deal about having friends over for dinner? And maybe inviting them to spend the night?"

That's no big deal, except Clinton, or at least his fundraisers, charge these guests huge sums.

"Nah, that's not what they say. It's more like a coincidence. These people ain't charged. It just turns out they like Clinton so they happen to drop $100 grand and up into his campaign fund. There's nothing illegal about that, you know. And there's nothing illegal about having someone over to his home for dinner and maybe a sleep-over."

And you buy that?

"Sure. And I think it is a good idea, which is why I gave all of you dinner checks at my house. I figure that if it is OK for the president of the United States to do, it's OK for me. And I figure that if you're really friends, you'd think about all the expense and the work me and the wife do to put together a good dinner and serve it."

But people who are guests at a dinner party often reciprocate somewhere down the road and invite their hosts to a dinner party at their place.

"Yeah, but do you think Bill and Hillary and all their Secret Service agents can be running all over the country going to reciprocating dinner parties? Of course not. So instead of having the Clintons over, their guests reciprocate with a nice little campaign gift."

So that is why you charged us for dinner.

"Right. Clinton is my new role model."

Now I've heard everything. Good evening, I'm leaving.

"Don't forget to tip the bartender, cheapo."

Why, is he running for office?

Patience is a virtue earned

I remember studying, in my high school English class, a list of the virtues that Benjamin Franklin wanted to master. It's odd to think that a man of his stature, being an inventor, had troubles (noted to be very extreme) with being patient. Surprisingly enough, patience, I believe, is one of the hardest virtues to achieve. It is so easy to get caught up in our everyday lives that we probably don't even realize how impatient we are. I am reminded of the saying: Dear God, please give me patience, and I want it right now!

MICHELLE HARDT
Columnist

Why is it so hard to wait? There are probably several selfish explanations for it. Our life is in such a hurry that we constantly have to be somewhere five minutes ago. Our life is of utmost importance and every slow or even moderately average person that gets in the way of our life is an inconvenience and causes us to undermine the importance of the things in their life.

Part of being busy is running around with your head cut off, doing things for you, you, you. Frustration comes with impatience and suddenly everyone is the bad guy. Isn't that silly? But we all know we do it. Now that you've had a little light turned on in a dark and hidden room inside of your brain about the plain human nature to be impatient, you should start to notice there are other people in this world besides you.

Take a look at how you react. When you are driving down the road speeding to another appointment, you can appreciate the little old lady walking down the sidewalk, or the faint chirping of birds in nearby trees. With an increased understanding and acknowledgment of the world and people around you, you are less likely to get upset and more likely to appreciate other people's lives.

Personally, when I'm waiting in a line, I take pleasure in observing other people. How do they react in certain situations? Sometimes I even giggle to myself about the rationality of certain people. I don't mean to make fun of these people, I just find it amusing to try to comprehend how other people's minds work in various situations.

Impatience is always easy to spot. The next time you are about to shout something you know you shouldn't, look around you and observe other people instead. You can then laugh at their silly reactions in place of them laughing at yours.

Michelle Hardt is a freshman studying journalism and can be reached at zeek1@asu.edu.

If you have never thought about patience, try thinking about how you react in certain situations. At the grocery store: isn't it typical to get in the checkout line behind the family that has two shopping carts full, with several items that need a price check? When you are driving and can't help but yell to another driver who is oblivious to your complaint, about the way they drive or about the traffic? Dealing with a screaming little brother or sister? And ladies, during half-time at those ball games, waiting in line to use the bathroom? My favorite would have to be waiting on hold to talk to someone on the phone, listening to elevator music for half an hour, until you decide to hang up because they must have forgotten about your call.

Some people are often vocal or get jumpy when they become impatient. Others just smile while they think hideous thoughts. I guess patience is definitely a state of being that is learned and not given. This is the hard part. I believe it all comes down to waiting.

Life Sciences not only risky structure

Am I reading this editorial correctly? Apparently guns aren't the only things that kill people...now it's those pesky dangerous buildings!

According to the State Press, the Life Sciences E-Wing has "contributed to two ASU deaths within one year." Depression, drug addiction, even collegiate bureaucracy may all contribute to suicide; but an inanimate building?

And another thing — if your editors think the rooftop is so accessible, they might try actually getting up to the greenhouse on the roof. The last time I tried to do so, I was told I would have to make an appointment with Dr. Gibson to escort me. Besides, the most recent jumper departed from the fifth floor...not the roof.

While we're busy making the campus safe for everyone, the Business Building is about six floors high with jumping access, as are several parking structures on campus. Then of course there's the Squaw Peak, the Grand Canyon....

I am aghast.

Your anonymous editorial "Rooftop access makes suicide far too easy" on Jan. 30 has opened my eyes to a serious issue affecting us all. Specifically, the fact that the "Life Sciences Building has contributed to two ASU deaths within one year." What is this, the Dr. Jack Kevorkian Memorial Building? That we, as humans, should put up with this behavior from our architecture is unthinkable. Why can't the Life Sciences Tower be a little more sedate, like the Social Sciences Building, for instance?

HIV test offers results, peace of mind

I really appreciated the Jan. 30 article written by Michelle Carson about HIV testing. It was nice to hear that someone else has my same conviction about the necessity of being tested, despite the social stigmas. I took an at-home HIV test (nice for people who are afraid of needles, if you have $40 to spare) about a month ago concerning a fling I had last summer with a guy I knew nothing about and no longer talk to. I found out that I had to wait 6 months after my possible exposure to get an accurate test, and after those months of anxiety, nervousness and general nausea, I then had to endure another week of extreme terror after submitting my test.

Why am I telling you all this? Because no matter how much anxiety I put myself through, the minute I found out that my test was negative, an overwhelming feeling of certainty and relief swept over me that I could never have experienced had I just decided to ignore the possibility.

HIV testing needs to be less taboo! It should be as routine as getting a flu shot. I cannot stress enough the importance of knowing for sure, both before and after any sexual contact. With free, anonymous testing available (though not as readily available as it should be), there is simply no excuse for ignorance.

Ecuadorian rain forest place of learning for summer students

BY ROWE EDGELL
STATE PRESS

In the depths of the Ecuadorian tropical rain forest is the village of Playa de Oro. It is home to the indigenous Cofanes and Chachis people, an abundance of rare and beautiful plant and animal life and this summer it will host an ASU geography professor and a group of curious ASU students.

Geography Professor Rodrigo Sierra will take 12 to 15 students to Ecuador this summer to study biodiversity conservation and explore the human dimensions of environmental change in tropical Latin America.

Sierra is a native Ecuadorian who worked as a naturalist guide in the Galapagos Islands for four years and is currently teaching geography at ASU for a third semester.

The trip will take place June 2 to June 23 and costs $2,646 for three credit hours.

"I want to get students involved in conservation so that they know what the issues are, and how we can at least try to solve them," Sierra said.

In the three week excursion to different areas of Ecuador, the students will hike through the forest, wade and canoe down small rivers, observe freshwater dolphins, and participate in field and lab activities.

The program will emphasize two themes: rural environments and modern natural resource use, and poverty and population growth in urban environments.

Students will visit Ecuador's capital city of Quito, and the cities of Cuenca and Guayaquil. They will also spend time at ecological reserves and research stations in Playa de Oro, San Miguel de Cayapas, El Angel and Imuya/Zabalo.

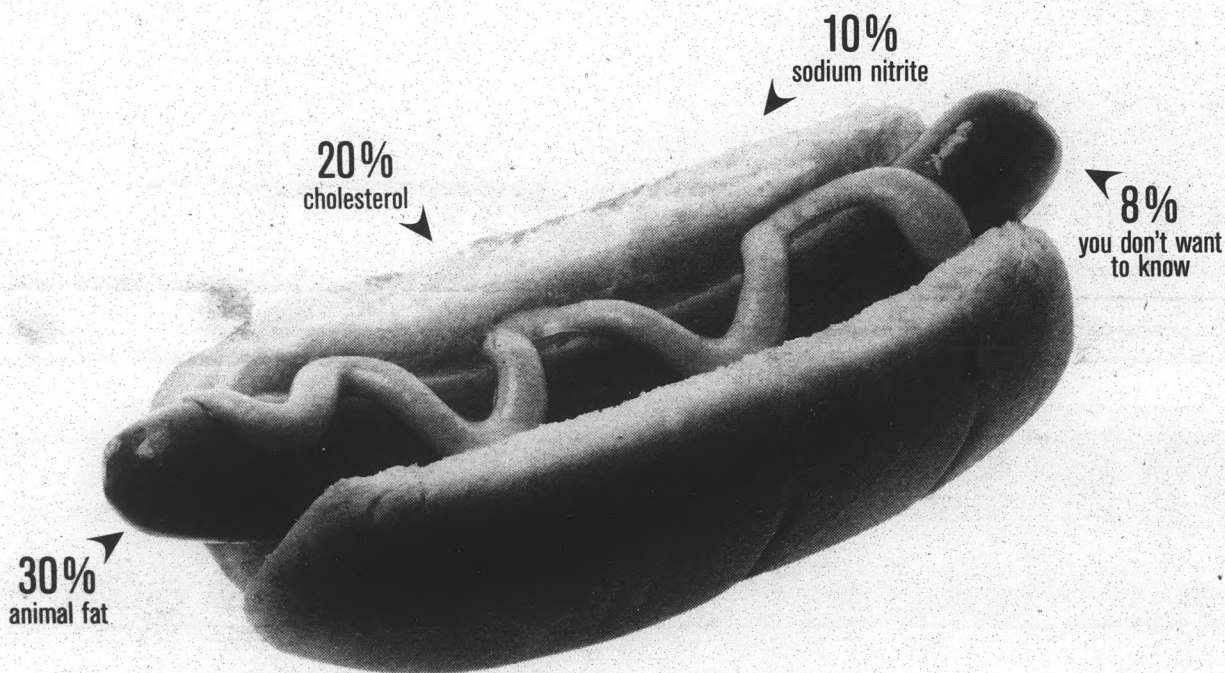

Jeffrey Chow, 18, said he decided he wanted to go on this trip because he was interested in studying abroad.

"I am a biology major with an emphasis on ecology, so I think the main benefit will be the on-location research and the hands-on experience," he said.

The local rain forest communities own and run the two research stations where most of the work will take place and the lodges where the students stay. The money the students pay for the trip goes directly to the rain forest community as a conservation incentive.

"The idea is to work with the community and use what they have built for environmental purposes and then to learn what they do. We want to compare the different communities we visit and their uses of resources," Sierra said.

When provided with a steady flow of income, community members refrain from cutting down the trees which would normally give them the money they need. In this way, both the environment and the students benefit, Sierra said.

Sheriff Arpaio to answer questions in opinion forum

By KEVIN CULWELL
STATE PRESS

Rush Limbaugh calls him "an American hero."

Critics call him a self-serving "egomaniac." It seems everyone has an opinion on Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio, and ASU students will be able to voice them to his face Wednesday.

Any student wishing to attend will be able to meet "America's Toughest Sheriff" and ask questions from 12:40 to 1:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Programming Lounge, located on the lower level of the Memorial Union.

This is the first of many open forums the Memorial Union Activities Board plans to run this semester. Barring cancellations, there will be one each week.

"Sheriff Arpaio is the most popular political figure this state has ever seen," said Adrian Fontes, the MUAB host for the opinion's forum. "I'm glad that he is giving ASU students an opportunity to ask him anything they want."

Arpaio is known for his "pink underwear posse," which have "cut crime in shopping malls, prostitution along Van Buren Street, and graffiti Valley-wide," according to the autobiography Sheriff Joe Arpaio: America's Toughest Sheriff, which debuted last March.

In his autobiography, Arpaio also claims to have "saved taxpayers $3 million a year while protecting the rights and sensibilities of citizens and suspects alike."

Existence of God to be tackled in Veritas Forum debate

BY ROWE EDGELL
STATE PRESS

Philosophers, theologians and other scholars will tackle the timeless question "Does God exist?" tonight at 7:30 in the Memorial Union Arizona Room as the kick-off for a four day Christian symposium.

The Veritas Forum will host a variety of speakers Feb. 4 through 7, including Dr. William Lane Craig and Dr.

Douglas M. Jesseph who will debate the existence of God. Craig, a visiting scholar, philosopher, theologian and author has debated the existence of God at numerous universities. Countering his viewpoint will be Jesseph, a University of California at Berkeley professor of math and philosophy.

Each speaker will be given 20 minutes to voice their initial opinion, and then a formal debate will begin. A question and answer period involving the audience will follow. "I think there is a lot of interest in this topic at ASU. We hope this will clear up some questions for the audience and then they can come to conclusions of their own," said Kurt Richardson of the Campus Crusade for Christ. Over the course of the week there will also be three luncheons, four lectures, and several discussions and forums.

Former judge says chef fondled busboy

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — TV's "Frugal Gourmet" Jeff Smith fondled and kissed a high school-age busboy in his restaurant in the early 1970s, a former administrative law judge said in an affidavit.

William Metcalf of Olympia, Wash., said he saw the incident in 1972 or 1973 at Chaplain's Pantry, a Tacoma, Wash., restaurant and catering store owned and operated by Smith.

At the time, Metcalf was an administrative law judge in Washington state, an appointed post that involves settling disputes within the government.

Metcalf said he was walking to the dining area, took a wrong turn and walked into the kitchen.

"The doorway to a small dish-washing room was open, and as I passed it, I saw the 'bus boy' ... lying on a long table with Jeff Smith standing next to him," he said in the affidavit, which was quoted in The Sunday Oregonian.

Metcalf said he saw Smith massaging the busboy's groin and kissing him.

Metcalf, 62, said he quickly walked away, but didn't tell others about it until years later, after seeing Smith on television.

Smith's lawyer, Ed Winskill, said Saturday he was "inherently suspicious" of Metcalf's accusation.

"As a lawyer, I look at a statement like this — that someone claims to have seen something and then waits 23 years to come forward — as inherently unreliable," Winskill said. "Such reports are not to be believed."

Smith, 58 — host of a popular series of cooking shows and author of several best-selling cookbooks — was sued last month by a 36-year-old man who accused him of using alcohol, threats and physical force to get him to engage in sex in 1976. The man, who is seeking unspecified damages, said he was a 15-year-old high school student working at Chaplain's Pantry at the time.

Metcalf's affidavit was prepared for the plaintiff's attorneys.

Smith has denied the claims made in the lawsuit, as he has denied past accusations.

Siblings sought for Big Brothers, Sisters

BY JENNIFER NETHERBY
STATE PRESS

Big Brothers and Big Sisters at ASU are rounding up students to join one of ASU's newest clubs.

The group is hoping to recruit students who are already involved with other Valley branches, said adviser Elaine Stover.

Officials at the Student Recreation Complex and the Intercollegiate Athletic Building have offered use of their facilities to the group for outings with their little brothers and sisters, she said.

There are approximately 700 little brothers and sisters in the Valley in need of a big brother or sister, Stover said.

The club started at the end of last semester, founder Ryan Van der Voste said. So far 10 new people have joined to become big brothers or sisters.

Van der Voste said volunteer brothers and sisters also are able to get into all ASU sporting events for free with their little new siblings. Potential members can get free admission to a Coyotes hockey game on Feb. 15 at America West Arena.

The group will be on Cady Mall Monday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. for anyone interested in joining.

Cops investigate deaths for possible Kevorkian involvement

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Bodies were left at a hospital and outside a medical examiner's office early today and police were trying to determine whether Dr. Jack Kevorkian was involved in the deaths.

Authorities have neither confirmed nor ruled out a possible Kevorkian involvement in the deaths of the two women, Sgt. Mark Peters said.

Detroit station WXYZ-TV reported that one body was left at Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital at about 12:30 a.m. Emergency room Dr. Robert Aranosian said a woman drove up to the emergency entrance and asked for help getting her friend's body inside. Hospital workers helped her.

Peters said the woman told the attendants that her friend had stopped breathing.

The other body was found at about 2:25 a.m. in Kevorkian's van, parked outside the Oakland County Medical Examiner's office, the station said.

"It looks like it has the touches of Dr. Jack Kevorkian," sheriff's Sgt. James Sutton said. "It looks like it's Dr. Jack's van, and we've seen the van before."

The retired pathologist has been known for using a battered, white Volkswagen van and has left bodies in it before.

Kevorkian attorney Geoffrey Fieger said he was unaware of his client's involvement in either case.

"I have no idea about it," Fieger said. "I don't know how anybody can be saying anything. All I know is apparently nobody's making any complaints about family that have passed away."

A doctor at Pontiac Osteopathic who refused to give his name said hospital officials were unaware of any possible involvement by Kevorkian.

Kevorkian, 68, has acknowledged attending 45 deaths since 1990 as part of his campaign for doctor-assisted suicide for some terminally or chronically ill people. He was acquitted in three trials covering five deaths in Oakland and Wayne counties, and has said repeatedly over the years that no law or criminal case would stop his crusade.

Last August, Kevorkian was accused of helping in the death of Loretta Peabody, 54, of Ionia. Prosecutors there charged Kevorkian with violating Michigan's common law prohibiting assisted suicide, conspiring to assist in suicide, practicing unauthorized medicine and conspiring to practice unauthorized medicine. He could face up to 18 years in prison if convicted of all charges.

During a court appearance last fall in Ionia, District Judge David Hoort released Kevorkian on personal bond, on the condition that he not attend any more deaths while the case is pending.

PEOPLE

LONDON — Princess Diana is baring her soul on television again, but this time she's talking about someone else's problems.

The ex-wife of Prince Charles is to appear in a BBC documentary Feb. 11 to give a "personal and frank account" of her four-day trip to Angola last month, the network said Monday. The program is called "Diary of a Princess."

Diana "describes in her own words meeting some of the victims of land mine explosions. She also talks openly about her new role as a humanitarian ambassador," the BBC said.

The princess went to Angola to support a Red Cross campaign to ban land mines. The Red Cross says Angola has the highest amputee rate in the world as a result of the mines.

In 1995, Diana gave an interview to the BBC in which she discussed her failed marriage and admitted having an affair.

ISTANBUL, Turkey — Elizabeth Taylor will use her high-wattage stardom to help the children of war-ravaged Chechnya.

The actress will be the guest of honor at a benefit in Istanbul on Feb. 28, Ms. Taylor's publicist Shirine Ann Coburn said Monday.

The gala is being organized by Taylor's friend Shahpuri Kashoggi, who heads Survive, the international children's charity.

Taylor will also visit the Chechen capital, Grozny, to meet with children, Coburn said, but no date has been set.

Chechnya has been ravaged by fighting between Russian forces and separatist rebels. Thousands have been killed or wounded.

NEW YORK — It's a toss-up which is the more interesting show these days — "Victor/Victoria" or the star-studded drama unfolding backstage.

Liza Minnelli wants to return to the lead role when Julie Andrews bows out this summer, but only if co-star Tony Roberts is sent packing, said Barry Cross, Ms. Minnelli's manager.

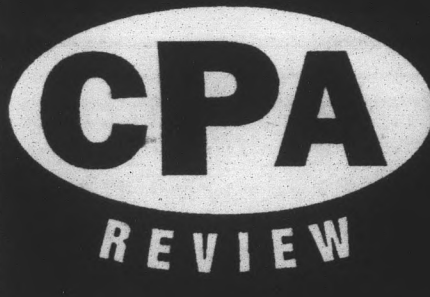

Minnelli returned to Broadway for the first time in 12 years to fill in for the vacationing Ms. Andrews, who returned this week.

Roberts, piqued by Minnelli's on-stage mistakes, staged a sick-out for several days.

Two days after he returned, it was Minnelli who stayed home, producing a doctor's note to prove she really did have a throat infection. She missed five shows.

As for Minnelli's new demand, the New York Post said producers were searching for Roberts' replacement even before the outbreak of diva-ism. And producers "very much want Minnelli back," said producer Tony Adams.

Roberts' agent did not immediately return a call for comment Monday.

ASU students tutor kids in Service Learning

BY ROWE EDGELL
STATE PRESS

ASU students are hitting the books for needy children this semester as part of a program to help combat illiteracy.

More than 200 students met at the Memorial Union last week to participate in a training program sponsored by the Service Learning Project.

Through the project, college students enrolled in various levels of English classes tutor elementary school students in Valley schools, as volunteers or as part of an internship.

Many of the ASU volunteers go to South Phoenix or the Salt River Pima Indian reservation, where the illiteracy rates are high and schools are limited in funding and resources, said Jill Benson, communications intern with the Service Learning Project.

"The project meets the needs of the community and the needs of college students at the same time," Benson said.

The majority of children in the program are doing poorly in school and reading below the level of their peers. Some of them will not graduate from high school.

The mentoring is considered volunteer work, and tutors receive three regular credit hours for the class in addition to three more credits for the tutoring.

Over the past two years, 1,255 elementary school students have been tutored by 680 ASU students at 11 different schools in the Roosevelt Elementary School District in Phoenix.

"This is a growing and exciting project for students to apply what they learn in class, and by teaching what they learn, they will retain more," said Narciso Aleman, coordinator for the project.

Aleman said this program is also being implemented at other universities across the country.

The participating ASU students commit to tutor at the site three times a week, complete progress reports, and attend meetings with graduate students hired to oversee the project.

Despite extra work and commitments, students in the program said the benefits outweigh the responsibilities.

"I want to be a teacher, so I decided to join the program to gain experience with kids. I also want to be a role model," said Jennifer Lake, an elementary education major.

"I hope to gain experience working with kids," said business major Clint Vernon. "I did something similar in high school and had a good experience with it, and that's what led me here. I hope to make a difference if I can."

The project, which started in 1993, also provides tutors in 21 other disciplines, including science, geography and math. However, the main focus of the program is English and reading.

"We've made great progress," said graduate student Molly McBride. "The biggest benefit is the basic reading skills that the elementary-aged students receive."

Girl overdoses on LSD, mother booked

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A woman was in jail today on suspicion of drug possession and child abuse after police said her 5-year-old daughter ate LSD-laced candy hearts.

Suzanna Schroepel, 23, called for help after her daughter lost consciousness Saturday night. Authorities would not confirm where the incident took place.

"(The girl) was in the proximity of the mother and we suspect it was the mother's LSD," said Sheriff's Lt. Steve Alexander.

The child, whose name police did not make public, was admitted to Primary Children's Hospital in critical condition, and was released into her father's care Sunday.

Her mother was booked that day for investigation of possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute and third-degree child abuse, both felonies. The drug charge carries a penalty of five years to life in prison and the child abuse charge carries up to five years.

Hospital officials refused to disclose how much of the hallucinogen the girl ingested.

There is more to life than news, weather and sports.

 - A 21-year-old ASU student was arrested in the south parking lot of Sawmill Bar, 933 E. University Drive, on charges of providing false information to a police officer and public consumption of alcohol. The man was arrested, police said, after he was seen drinking beer in the parking lot and later, gave them a false name. After about 30 minutes, police said the man admitted his real name because they threatened to call the parents of the person's name he was giving. Police said the student told them he lied because he was a political science major and was concerned about his career. A license check revealed the student had a warrant out for his arrest for criminal damage. Police said the student claimed he didn't know about the warrant.

- A 23-year-old man was arrested Friday outside of Beeloe's/Hooters bar and restaurants, 501 S. Mill Ave., on charges of disorderly conduct. Police said the suspect stood on the floor of Beeloe's and pulled down his pants, exposing his buttocks. Later, police said the suspect went upstairs on the elevator to Hooters, where he stood with his pants off, showing his bikini briefs.
 - A 35-year-old woman was taken into custody Friday around 8:10 p.m. by store security at Mervyn's, 800 E. Southern Ave., after she allegedly stuffed $80 worth of underwear into her purse. Tempe police booked the suspect in Tempe City Jail.

Sophomore Tim Hammond and the rest of the ASU men's tennis team defeated Utah, 6-1, Monday at the Whiteman Tennis Center. Hammond defeated the Utes' Cory Dalos 6-3, 6-2.

Men's tennis team routs formerly unbeaten Utes

BY JOHN SHEEHY
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's tennis team improved its record with a 6-1 victory over previously unbeaten Utah at the Whiteman Tennis Center Monday.

Head Coach Lou Belken and the rest of the Sun Devils (3-1) were very pleased with the outcome.

The doubles teams of Ed Carter and Alex Osterrieth, and Tim Hammond and Casey Was, were both impressive. They won with scores of 8-5 and 9-8, respectively. The other doubles team of Gustavo Maraccio and Sergio Elias didn't have the same luck, losing 8-3.

Was likes his role as a doubles player, and expects good things from himself and partner Hammond.

"We are improving every week. We will not lose a doubles match all season. I guarantee it," said a confident Was.

The premiere singles match of the day was between Elias and Utah's Christian Svensson. Svensson seemed to return everything Elias hit at him en route to a 6-1, 6-3 victory. Svensson looked like a human ball machine. Elias played very well, but Svensson played flawless tennis. The difference in the game was clearly Elias' unforced errors.

"I made a lot of mistakes today," Elias said. "I just wasn't confident, and that led to the errors."

"I just want to get my game back and start helping the team, and start winning again. It is a long season, and I am going to work hard to reach our goal of nationals," said the frustrated senior.

Freshman Alex Osterrieth improved his singles record to 14-3 with a 6-2, 6-2 straight set victory over Utah's No. 2 man Paul McPherson. The victory was Osterrieth's ninth in a row. During this streak, dating back to Nov. 15, he has not even dropped a set.

Sophomore Gustavo Maraccio helped the team's cause by posting a 6-1, 6-4 victory. The No. 3 match pitted Maraccio against Ben Coates. Maraccio played his way to a 6-1, 6-4 victory.

"I served and volleyed well, and I returned the ball well. That was the key for the match," Maraccio said.

Maraccio is now 4-0 in singles play on the season.

Freshman Amir Ran defeated Brandon Owen in the No. 4 match. The first two sets were tight at 7-5 each, but Ran beat Owen in the third by a score of 6-2 to take the match and improve his singles record to 3-1.

Carter beat Phil Rodrigne 6-2, 6-2 in the No. 5 match improving his record to 9-7.

Tim Hammond played No. 6 for ASU against the Utes' Cory Dalos. Hammond won the match 6-3, 6-2.

Hammond attributed his success to Belken's tough practices.

"We have a lot of depth on this team, and we are all in very good shape due to the intense practices," he said.

Freshman Miles Rogers didn't play, because of injury, but should be back in the lineup soon.

"I want more time on the court instead of in the training room," Rogers said.

As for the season, Rogers had no problem predicting positive things.

"We will definitely make a push for the Six-Pac title," he said. "We have a lot of young talent and we will surprise a lot of people."

If the Devils do indeed win the conference title, it would be quite an accomplishment. A Six-Pac school has won the National Championship 39 of the last 42 years.

Belken thinks he knows the reason for this dominance.

"The Six-Pac is the premiere conference in the nation," he said. "This is because of great traditions, great institutions, and great coaches."

Belken wants the team to be patient and try and take the attitude of one match at a time. This is difficult to do for freshmen and sophomores who don't have a lot of experience, Belken said.

The next match for ASU will be against Six-Pac foe Oregon at noon Feb. 9, at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

ASU football looks to reload as signing day approaches

BY ED ODEVEN
STATE PRESS

Out with the old. In with the new.

The famous beer slogan is also a philosophy practiced by college football programs.

The Pac-10 champion Sun Devils are no different than any other school. They need players.

ASU was blessed with an upper-class dominated squad last season — 23 seniors (11 senior starters), headed by All-American quarterback and Heisman Trophy finalist Jake "The Snake" Plummer and All-American offensive lineman Juan Roque.

The Sun Devils also lost standout juniors Terry Battle and All-American defensive end Derrick "Mister" Rodgers. The dynamic duo opted to skip their senior season and enter the NFL draft.

Now, ASU head coach Bruce Snyder must find replacements.

"It's my job to look ahead," Snyder said.

It remains to be seen if Snyder can lure top-caliber players from around the country to suit up in maroon and gold.

However, Snyder is confident the Sun Devils are headed in the right direction.

"Kids that wouldn't consider ASU in the past now are," he said, noting that the Sun Devils are now competing with the traditional powers for blue chippers.

The Sun Devils will announce their 1997 recruiting class Wednesday, official National Signing Day.

Defense

The Sun Devils have many voids to fill, including finding replacements for the defensive front three of Rodgers, tackle Shawn Swayda and end Brent Burnstein.

ASU hopes to address this problem with a fresh crop of recruits.

Mesa Westwood's Cody Price won the Larry Gordon Award, which is given annually to the state's best high school linebacker. Price has orally committed to ASU, but he is also considering Oregon, Barry Sollenberger, editor of Sollenberger's Phoenix Metro Football Preview, said.

Junior college transfers Joe Cesta (Los Angeles Southwest Junior College) and Dayroni Harris (Saddleback (Calif.) Junior College), plus high school athletes — cornerback Courtney Hysaw of Denver, Glendale Cactus High linebacker Kyle Kosler and Sacramento product Welton Kage, a defensive lineman, — round out ASU's list of oral commitments on defense.

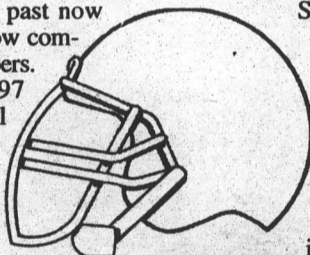

Offense

The Sun Devils appear to have a crop of incoming players that could eventually develop into collegiate stars.

Heading the list is All-California quarterback Chad Elliott of Sacramento's Grant High School. He passed for 3,150 yards and 47 touchdowns last season, while yielding only three interceptions.

RED HOT SUN DEVILS

Ryan Bradley Baseball

Bradley, a junior relief pitcher, knocked in a tie-breaking ninth-inning grand slam in his first plate appearance on Saturday against USC. Bradley (2-0, 0.00 ERA) has given up just three hits and whiffed nine in seven innings of work.

Lisa Vincijanovic Gymnastics

Despite nursing a sore ankle, Vincijanovic scored a perfect 10 on the balance beam in ASU's dominating victory over Washington on Friday. It was the first 10 for the Sun Devils in two years. The sophomore also scored a 9.95 on vault and 9.825 on floor exercise.

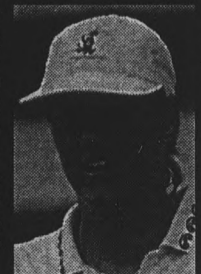

Aaron Simpson Wrestling

Ranked No. 2 in the nation at 177 pounds, ASU's co-captain traveled to Pennsylvania to compete in the National Wrestling Coaches Association All-Star Classic, held Monday. He has 17 wins in his last 18 matches. His overall record is 26-3.

Reka Cseresnyes Tennis

ASU's No. 1-seed won both of her singles matches over the weekend. She downed Amanda Augusta of Cal 3-6, 7-6 (7-3), 7-6 (10-8) on Friday. She then easily handled Stanford's Katie Schlukebir, ranked No. 7 in the nation in straight sets, 7-5, 6-2, for ASU's only win.

Saint Mary's in town, No. 2 Florida State on deck

BY PERCY EDNALINO JR.
STATE PRESS

ASU baseball coach Pat Murphy wants to make one thing clear: winless St. Mary's is a team that no one should take lightly.

They just happen to be on ASU's schedule two days prior to an important three-game series against Florida State.

But make no mistake, though Murphy said he'd like to spend the rest of this week preparing for this weekend's showdown with the No. 2-ranked Seminoles, he has no intention of overlooking the Gaels.

Murphy said the Gaels' current record of 0-5 is misleading. He said teams tend to take the Gaels lightly, which is a big mistake.

"They thrive on people letting down for them," Murphy said. "This is a good ball club. They've survived off people trying to overlook them, but I don't think we'll overlook them."

And how. Last season, St. Mary's stunned ASU by taking the first of two games, 6-4. ASU came back in the second game and won, 7-3. Sun Devil outfielder Dan McKinley said losing the first game against the Gaels made him realize that none of ASU's opponents will be easy.

"It was kind of a reality check," McKinley said of last season's loss. "You don't realize that there are other players around that on any given day can beat you."

ASU (3-3) hosts the Gaels at 7 tonight at Packard Stadium. St. Mary's (0-5) dropped three games at Cal Poly

San Luis Obispo over the weekend.

St. Mary's is led by freshman Tommy Callen. Callen has seven hits and two RBI coming into tonight's matchup.

Starting at pitcher for St. Mary's tonight is senior Aaron Porter. Porter (0-1, 24.30 ERA) is one of just four seniors on the Gaels' squad.

Sound familiar? It should. ASU's boasts just three seniors and 12 seniors. Murphy said veteran leadership needs to establish itself.

"Some more of our older guys have to stop being nervous and start stepping up," Murphy said. "Our young guys are ready to crack in."

Pitcher Phill Lowery is scheduled to start for the Sun Devils. Lowery (0-1, 5.68) . Jason Verdugo (0-0, 27.00) is expected to take the mound Wednesday.

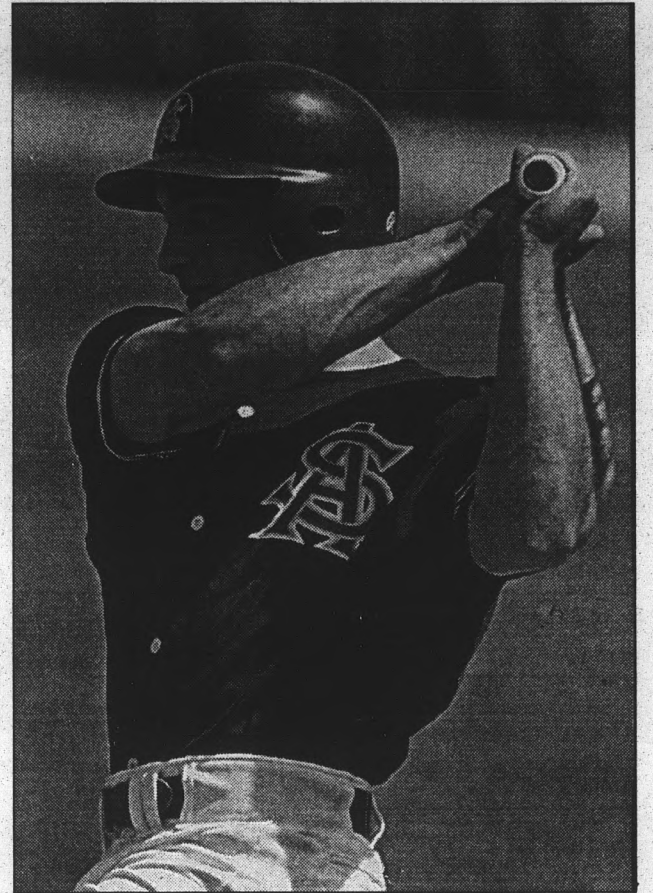

"Verdugo needs to step it up," Murphy said. "But were very, very confident he will."

Stepping up is something stopper Ryan Bradley has done. Bradley knocked in a ninth-inning grand slam, then turned around and threw three innings of relief against USC on Saturday. The 6-foot-4 right-hander agreed with his coach and said St. Mary's will not be treated like a tune-up match for Florida State.

"They're a tough team," Bradley said. "They're going to come out right after us because they've got nothing to lose. They've played a lot of good teams. They've seen good pitching and good hitters, so they're going to be prepared to go up against us."

Highly-touted tailback and return specialist Davaren Hightower of Dallas-area Lake Highland High ran for 2,202 yards on just 261 carries last season. He scored 33 TD's and was named the Dallas Morning News Metro Player of the Year.

Numerous schools pursued the 6-foot-2 inch, 190-pound Hightower to play defensive back or wide out, but the Sun Devils recruited him to play tailback, according to Lake Highlands High coach Jerry Gayden.

Parade All-American offensive tackle Ralph Zarate developed a strong bond with Roque, said Tucson High coach Todd Mayfield.

Mayfield believes Zarate is more than just a talented athlete.

"Ralph's not only a great athlete, he's a great kid," Mayfield said. "He has the potential to be a great one."

Zarate is the first Tucson Badger to ever commit to ASU, according to Sollenberger, who also issues Super All-State '96.

ASU also has received a verbal commitment from Tempe High's Justin Taplin, who was named the 1996 Class 5A Arizona Player of the Year after grabbing 75 receptions for 1,295 yards and 16 TD's.

Tempe coach Tim McBurney believes Taplin should be a bright spot for ASU.

"Some people are able to control of the game," McBurney said. "Justin was able to do that (in high school). He has great vision on the field, and I believe someday we are going to watch him play on Sundays."

Offensively, other oral commitments came from Super All-Star '96 Clifton Jones, a wide receiver from Florence High; John Kasner, a wide receiver from Tucson Flowing Wells; Scott Peters, an offensive lineman from Pleasanton, Calif., and place kicker Stephen Baker from Bakersfield, Calif.

Sollenberger said ASU has been recruiting South Mountain star Rashad Bauman. He was a two-way player last season with 28 TD's (18 rushing, five receptions, two punt returns, two interception returns and one fumble return) and was selected as the Arizona Class 5A Player of the Year. At press time, Bauman, a running back/defensive back, had not committed anywhere.

Short-handed Ice Devils split pair

BY MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

One of the problems that club sports teams face is their lack of funds occasionally affecting their playing ability.

On Friday and Saturday, the visiting ASU Ice Devils were a victim of this when they took an undermanned team north to face the Colorado State Rams.

Playing without top defensemen Mike Bradstock and Jason Pearce and seven others, the No. 9 Ice Devils split the series with the No. 14 Rams.

On Saturday, ASU lost 5-4. However, the team did come away with a commanding 6-3 victory the night before.

The nine Ice Devils remained in Tempe so the squad could save money to travel to nationals.

Despite the one loss, the team was still satisfied with its effort.

"We played pretty solid," All-American center Steve Hammett said. "We're missing half of our defense, but we still played solid. I'm proud of the team. We just came up short in the second game."

Junior center Mark Parris, who had a hat trick on Friday and five goals for the series, agreed.

"We really pulled together," Parris said. "We needed at least one win up there, and we got it."

In their loss the Ice Devils not only suffered from being undermanned but also racked up over 47 penalty minutes and had three players ejected for fighting.

"Considering all the factors that were against us, we still did well," team president and left wing Stefan Richardson said. "Colorado State is good. It's not like we lost to a bad team."

On Saturday, the Ice Devils and Rams were neck and neck throughout. After two periods the score was tied at three, but sophomore right wing Matt Barclay's unassisted goal at the 15:32 mark of the third put ASU up 4-3. ASU appeared to be on its way to a weekend sweep, but it would not be. The Rams Tracy Dyer tied the score again four minutes later, and at the 10:04 mark, Justin Pelletier scored the game-winning goal.

In the first, the Ice Devils jumped out 2-0 on goals by Parris and Richardson. In the second, Hammett added another, but the Rams came to life and answered with three of their own.

On Friday, the Ice Devils were far less physical, but much more productive. ASU held a dominating 5-2 lead going into the third period, and junior forward Jesse Kerns put the game away on a one-timer with 3:28 remaining in the game.

Hammett and Barclay each had a goal in second, and Parris also added two in the period to outscore the Rams 4-1. Parris accounted for the team's only goal in the first.

New radio deal

FROM STAFF REPORTS

ASU fans unable to find a ticket for their favorite sporting event will have an even greater chance to catch them on the radio.

An agreement between the University and Pulitzer Broadcasting calls for more radio broadcasting of ASU athletic events than ever before on KMVP, 860 AM, a new Pulitzer-owned frequency.

Besides broadcasting all of the University contests in football, men's and women's basketball, and baseball throughout the year, the station will present the weekly shows by football coach Bruce Snyder and basketball coach Bill Frieder during their respective seasons.

Also included in the mix is ASU Athletic Director Kevin White's radio program, which will air 20 times during each year of the agreement.

The contract is for two years and will begin with the 1997-98 athletic season.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST
by Frances Drake

Tuesday, February 4, 1997

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Some minor things could go wrong on the home front. Either a delivery is late or an appliance breaks down. Career looks impressive, and evening hours find you ready to party. TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You'll have to take what you hear with a grain of salt. Learn to read between the lines. You'll be enjoying romance and going out more often in the coming weeks. GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Things aren't exactly as they appear to be in business. Take nothing for granted and be leery of mistakes in judgment. Social life is very nice after dark. CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A meeting with an adviser could leave you more confused than ever. It will take a while before matters are clarified. Someone puts in a good word for you in business. LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Be sure to mean what you say and avoid boasting and exaggeration. You could hear of a new investment possibility from an unexpected party. Study is a plus. VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Social possibilities are plentiful and partnership interests are highlighted. Guard against excess spending when having fun. Heart-to-heart talks are favored during evening hours. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A relative is not ready to compromise yet. Small talk and superficiality seem to go together in business dealings. Steer clear of those who waste your time. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) There's no sense arguing with a person whose mind is already made up. There could be a tendency to let things slide on the job and a co-worker is unduly sensitive. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You'll certainly be putting your house in order, but try not to be dictatorial with family members. Evening hours bring happiness in love and joyous good times. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You are asked to do a favor for a longtime friend. Try to be on time for appointments. Happiness comes through family interests and home based activities after dark. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Your dreamy creative mood is not conducive for business success. However, you'll enjoy progress with artistic endeavors. Safeguard credit at present. PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) A behind-the-scenes connection proves helpful to you in business. Travel plans are subject to some change. You spend some time waiting for someone to get back to you. YOU BORN TODAY are visionary in outlook, but sometimes overly skeptical. Learn to trust your fine intuition. You have high ideals and will succeed in work that matches them. You're not likely to find satisfaction in a routine job and need the space to be creative and inventive. Both the arts and the sciences are likely to appeal to you. You're capable of work that will long be remembered.
