Week gives the skinny on eating disorders

Awareness week activities focus on image problems

By BEN LEATHERMAN
 STATE PRESS

If an ASU student's dream is to have the same figure as Barbie and Ken, he or she might want to consider the doll's relative measurements.

A 5-foot-8-inch Barbie-in-the-flesh would have a 33-inch bust, 17-inch waist, 30-inch hips and a neck only 10 inches in diameter. To be Ken, a 6-foot male would have to slim down to a waist of 26-and-a-half, a 36-inch chest and a neck measuring 15 inches.

These comic disproportions were examples ASU health officials gave in an attempt to shatter common stereotypes about appearance. Officials hope to reach the estimated 15 to 30 percent of students afflicted with anorexia and bulimia as part of the national observance of Eating Disorder Awareness Week, Feb. 3-9.

The Barbie and Ken measurements, sponsored by Student Health along with Counseling and Consultation, were set up outside the Memorial Union Monday and Tuesday, along with information on mental disorders which center around an obsession with food and weight.

Several ASU counselors were available to speak with students who were concerned about the problem.

Karen Moses, assistant director of Health Education and Wellness, said a number of students laughed at the exag-

ASASU pins election turnout hopes on Internet

By Kevin Culwell
 State Press

The ASU Student Senate was expected to pass a bill Tuesday night that will allow students to vote in the upcoming Associated Students of ASU elections via the Internet.

"The goal here is to try to increase voter turnout as much as possible," said ASASU President Marc Baumgartner.

Just over 3,000 students voted in last year's elections.

"This will make it much easier for students to vote, and because of that I think turnout will at least double and maybe triple," said Kolby Granville, ASASU activities vice president. "It wouldn't surprise me to see 8,000 to 10,000 students vote if this gets passed."

That will make student leaders more representative of the students, he said.

Andy Ortiz, graduate student vice president, collected the most votes in the last election with a total of 1,916, while Honors College Senator J.D. Wallace had the honor of winning with the least number of votes, taking in just 33.

Should the measure pass, students will be able to vote by simply going to ASASU's homepage on the world wide web.

Positions will be posted individually and 1000-word campaign statements will also be accessible by clicking on the name of the candidate.

Granville said the benefits of having an increased turnout outweigh the logistical concerns of voting via the Internet.

"The main problem is that it will be easier for organizations such as the Residence Hall Association and Greek Life to vote for one candidate," he said. "However, if we receive information that something like that is occurring, that candidate will automatically be disqualified from the election."

Double-voting is the other potential glitch in the system, but that shouldn't pose a huge problem, Granville said.

Students will be locked out from the computer system if they try to vote a second time on the Internet, and election representatives will keep a close eye for students voting once using a paper ballot and once on the Internet.

Students caught defrauding the voting system will have their votes thrown out.

Voting on the Internet has proved to be a success at Stanford University, where 64 percent of undergraduates voted in last year's Associated Students of Stanford University elections — up 20 percent from the previous year.

"This is something that was a long time coming," Granville said.

Arpaio shoots poop with high school journalists

Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio speaks to high school journalism students Tuesday in the Memorial Union. Arpaio fielded questions ranging from new prison uniforms to alleged inmate abuse in county facilities.

Human rights violations toward prisoners, the riot at the Tent City jail, and female chain gangs were issues Sheriff Joe Arpaio confronted Tuesday at a press conference with high school journalists.

Addressing a question about his response to the Justice Department's accusation of civil rights violations in his jails, Arpaio told about 100 students from eight different high schools that the department never provided any names or evidence and have not filed a report on its findings.

"We, by ourselves, did however, discover two officers beating up inmates," Arpaio said. "We investigated that, fired them and I had them prosecuted."

Celesta Lopez, a 17-year-old news editor for the Mustang Messenger — a Dobson High School publication — who quizzed Arpaio about the jail-house abuses, pressed the sheriff to comment on his duty to check into civil rights violation in his jails.

She said she based her questions on a newspaper article on the alleged violations.

"When you read, that's the problem," Arpaio said. "You should not believe what you read."

Lopez then asked if Arpaio wanted to hide the fact that Scott Norberg was killed.

"He wasn't killed — he died," Arpaio said. "Don't use the word 'killed.'"

Arpaio said the investigation into Norberg's case, who died in Madison gerated Barbie and Ken figures, but many picked up information on the disorders. Moses said she felt the display helped students realize how impossible it is to look like a living doll.

"What we're trying to demonstrate is that even as young children, playing with dolls (shows) an image that is unattainable," she said.

Counselors and pamphlets were also available to answer questions on everything from a proper diet to how to deal with a friend or family member suffering from an eating disorder.

Julie Bolt, a senior nutrition major, said one student was shocked by the doll measurements.

"She wished she would have known this sooner because she wouldn't have taken diet pills in junior high and high school and been obsessed with her image," Bolt said.

Anorexia is a particular mental state characterized by a fear of weight gain leading to faulty eating patterns and excessive weight loss. With bulimia, a person compulsively overeats then purges the food, usually by self-induced vomiting or laxative abuse.

Two videos relating to the media's desire for "the perfect body" will be shown in the MU today and Thursday.

Slim Hopes: Advertising and the Obsession with Thinness, an exposé by Harvard filmmaker Jeanne Killborn, will be shown at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday in the MU Gold Room. On Thursday at 12:30 p.m., Illusions: Models and the American Ideal, a piece on how the looks of some fashion models are being altered by computers, will be shown in the MU Pinal Room.

Wright said some students might have trouble dealing with emotions regarding eating disorders.

"Some people feel more defensive," she explained. "It depends on how much they're interested in talking about personal experiences or (are) aware of things that have worked for them."

Arpaio also answered questions about changing the uniforms of Maricopa County inmates to traditional black-and-white striped garb.

"They are going to wear white uniforms with black stripes, so everyone will know where they are from," Arpaio said.

The press conference was held for students that are involved in high school journalism and are considering pursuing careers in the field.

"It's the first real press conference I've ever been at," said 17-year-old Keri Brooks from Chandler High School.

Kim Bostran, an English and journalism teacher from McClintock High School, said the press conference was a good experience for her students and all of them will write an article about it.

"We love the opportunity of being here," said Bostran, who brought 25 students with her. "It is definitely useful for them."

Jury finds Simpson liable on all counts

By LINDA DEUTSCH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — A civil jury found O.J. Simpson liable Tuesday for the slashing deaths of his ex-wife and her friend, a moral victory for grieving relatives who felt the football great got away with murder at the criminal trial.

The jury ordered Simpson to pay $8.5 million in compensatory damages and will return to decide whether to award millions more in punitive damages.

The mostly white panel, forced to start deliberations anew last Friday after a juror was removed for misconduct, snatched away some of the vindication Simpson claimed when he was acquitted of murder by a mostly black jury in 1995. That televised murder trial divided the nation over issues of police racism, domestic violence and the quality of justice.

The civil jury, using the lesser standard of "preponderance of evidence" rather than "beyond a reasonable doubt," was unanimous on all counts in blaming Simpson for the June 12, 1994, deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

The dramatic reading of the verdict was delayed more than three hours to allow the lawyers and families to get to the courthouse. Simpson's trip — in a black Suburban instead of a white Bronco — was televised live nationally on a split screen just as President Clinton began his State of the Union address.

The $8.5 million represented the value of Goldman's funeral and the loss of Goldman's companionship to his parents. Ms. Simpson's family did not seek compensatory damages.

The jury's findings of malice and oppression triggered a second phase of the trial, to determine punitive damages — money assessed to punish Simpson.

Already, plaintiffs' attorneys have asked for and received Simpson's latest financial records in preparation for a punitive phase.

The jury reached the verdict after 17 hours of deliberations over three days — more than five times as long as the criminal jury deliberated.

That was on top of the 14 hours that were interrupted Friday when the judge replaced the only black member for failing to disclose that her daughter was a secretary in the Los Angeles district attorney's office.

The final six-man, six-woman jury consisted of nine whites, one Hispanic, one Asian and one of Asian and black heritage.

In its last day of deliberations, the jury spent three hours listening to readbacks of some 200 pages of testimony focusing on Simpson's opportunity and motive. It heard testimony about Simpson's alibi, a bruising argument with his ex-wife and a limousine driver's time line.

Jurors were particularly attentive when they heard the testimony of limo driver Allan Park, the only witness whose testimony the jury at Simpson's murder trial asked to hear again before it acquitted him.

A central issue in the case was whether Simpson would have had time to kill two people at Ms. Simpson's condo, dispose of a weapon and bloody clothes, and return home in time to meet the limousine at 11 p.m.

Clinton speech: help students, balance budget

By TERENCE HUNT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Clinton, declaring that Americans "want us to be partners, not partisans," challenged Congress in his State of the Union address Tuesday night to give the nation's schools a big spending increase while balancing the budget by 2002.

Recycling popular ideas from his campaign, Clinton identified education as the top priority of his second term and said he wanted America's classrooms to be "the envy of the world." He challenged communities to measure their students against national standards to lift achievement in math and science.

The president's proposals would boost education spending by 20 percent, to $51 billion for 1998. The increase students — including the cost of tax breaks for college — would total 40 percent by 2002.

Two weeks after his inauguration for a second term, the president lectured the Republican-led Congress to "complete the unfinished business of our country" — balancing the budget, enacting long-stalled campaign finance reform and reopening last year's welfare law to restore benefits to legal immigrants.

His tone was both conciliatory and challenging, calling for racial and political harmony but also pressuring Congress for action.

Balancing the budget by 2002 "requires only your vote and my signature," Clinton said in remarks prepared for delivery, brushing over the wide gulf with Republicans over how to achieve that goal.

He said the Republican-driven proposal for a constitutional amendment for a balanced budget was "unnecessary and unwise," adding: "We don't need a constitutional amendment. We need action."

Clinton was on strong footing as he faced Republicans suspicious of his proposals. His political confidence, shaken by the Democrats' devastation in 1994, was restored by his re-election, and his recent approval ratings were among the highest of his presidency.

Rep. J.C. Watts of Oklahoma, the only black Republican in Congress, gave the traditional Republican response to Clinton. In his prepared remarks, Watts struck the traditional GOP themes of returning power to local communities, family values and balancing the federal budget.

"The strength of America is not in Washington," said Watts.

For the moment, at least, Republicans and Democrats alike are stressing bipartisanship and cooperation, though neither side pretends there won't be legislative fights.

Still, there was none of the bitterness and distrust that reigned a year ago, budget battles forced two government shutdowns that outraged Americans and tarred the GOP. Indeed, Clinton accepted an invitation from Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott and Speaker Newt Gingrich to visit Capitol Hill next Tuesday to discuss the legislative agenda.

"We must work together," the president said. "The people of this nation elected us all. They want us to be partners, not partisans. They put us all here in the same boat. They gave us all oars and they told us to row."

In this image taken from video, rescue and army personnel attend to two of the victims of a crash between two military transport helicopters in heavy fog and rain near Shaar Yeshuv in northern Israel Tuesday, Feb. 4, 1997. No count on the injured or killed has yet been given.

Two army helicopters crash, about 70 killed in accident

By DIANNA CAHN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SHAAR YESHUV, Israel — Two transport helicopters shuttling elite troops to Lebanon collided Tuesday in fog and rain and crashed in flames into a settlement, killing all of the roughly 70 soldiers aboard. It was Israel's worst military air disaster.

About 7 p.m., a bright, white burst of light illuminated the night sky five miles south of the Lebanon border. One of the two CH-53 Sikorsky helicopters smashed into an empty guest house, which exploded into flames.

"There was a huge explosion," witness Rachel Fromovitz told the Associated Press. "They crashed right above us, and the helicopters came down in a fiery blaze."

The accident appeared likely to raise new questions about Israel's costly involvement in Lebanon — as well as the decision to send in the troops by helicopters despite stormy weather. Officials said the helicopter were shuttling soldiers to Lebanon as part of a troop rotation.

Smoke poured from one helicopter as it went down, Yoav Frenkel told Army Radio. "The second helicopter lit up in the air as it fell," he said.

Despite extensive damage in Shaar Yeshuv, a communal settlement in the eastern Galilee, there were no known injuries to anyone on the ground.

Northern commander Maj.-Gen. Amiram Levine said about 70 soldiers and officers were killed.

"This is a grave disaster, and a heavy heart goes out to the families of the victims," Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said in a statement. "The entire nation cries today for the loss of our young fighters."

Netanyahu called off a trip to meet with Jordan's King

Hussein, scheduled for Wednesday, after receiving word of the crash.

Convoys carried the dead to a nearby army base for identification. Israel's Channel Two television showed pictures of bodies being carried away from the crash.

Officials said an inquiry into the cause of the crash would begin immediately.

"As far as we know, the weather was not the problem," said Brig. Gen. Oded Ben-Ami, the military spokesman.

Israel's worst previous military air accident was a 1977 helicopter crash that killed 54 people.

Tuesday night's crash comes at a time when Israeli politicians are increasingly calling into question the wisdom of Israel's policy in south Lebanon. Some urge that Israel withdraw its troops.

In 1985, Israel established a so-called "security zone" in southern Lebanon to guard northern towns from guerrilla attacks, while pulling its troops out of a larger area of Lebanon that it had occupied.

More than 200 soldiers have died in the security zone since then, mostly in clashes with the Iranian-backed Hezbollah guerrillas. According to army figures, 26 soldiers were killed in south Lebanon last year and four have been killed so far this year.

Public Security Minister Avigdor Kahalani, a former general, said this week that Israel should withdraw because Israeli soldiers were too easy a target for Lebanese guerrillas. Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai rejected the idea.

Former Prime Minister Shimon Peres said the lesson of Tuesday's crash was that Israel needed to pay the "price for peace" with Lebanon and Syria.

STATE PRESS Editorial

Trying kids as adults is juvenile injustice

IN American society, the people have established safeguards to keep children out of harm's way. There are age requirements to purchase cigarettes, booze and pornographic magazines. The Motion Picture Association of America cultivated the Classification and Ratings Administration to ensure that people attending movies were of appropriate age.

In the summer of 1971, Congress passed the 26th Amendment to the Constitution — giving 18-year-olds the right to vote. Men and women wanting to serve in the military must be 18 years old. Most states require residents to be 21 years old before they can drink. If states didn't, they would most likely lose federal highway funds. So, what's the point?

The point is that America has many an age restriction chiseled in stone in order to protect kids, and yet we now stand witness to one of the greatest assaults on children this country has ever seen. In November, Arizona voters passed Proposition 102 — the so-called Juvenile Justice Initiative. Among other provisions, the proposition mandated that 15-year-old boys and girls face adult prosecution if they are charged with murder, sexual assault or armed robbery. The problems associated with that principle— well, speak for themselves.

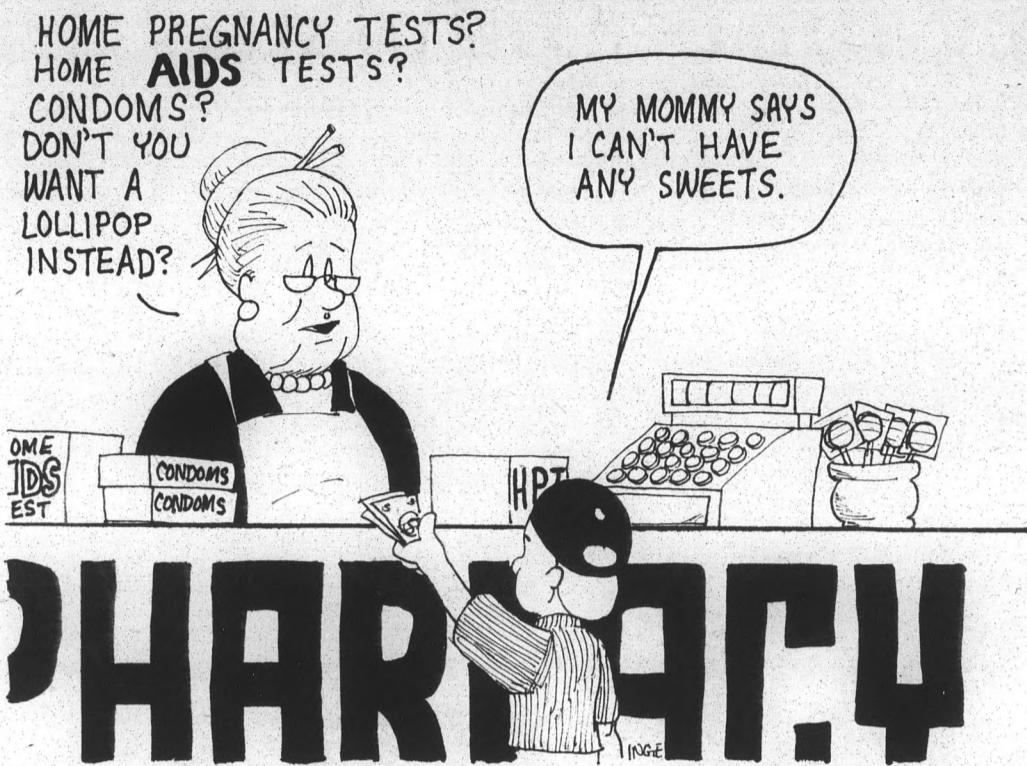

Shortly after the proposition passed, two mentally disabled teenage boys allegedly raped a young girl who had just arrived at the group home where they were living. They were the first victims of Proposition 102. Instead of dealing with the problem at a level where treatment or other appropriate action could have been taken, the boys were carted off to an adult system where suspects are often treated with contempt, disrespect and occasional physical abuse. Seemingly, this is only the beginning.

At present, Republican state legislators are kicking around a plan that would increase the legal arm of Proposition 102. The add-ons would expand the list of transferable offenses to include:

- Aggravated assault and aggravated assault with a weapon.
- Arson of an occupied building.
- Shooting at a building.
- Drive-by shootings.
- Aggravated driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Sure, the aforementioned offenses are serious. And yes, people who commit these crimes should be handled accordingly. However, GOP officials are finding even more ways to cast kids into an adult system when they have yet to be convicted. In theory, the people are forcing children from the very system that was specifically established to effectively deal with the problems of kids and crime. Hence we, the people of Arizona, are sending kids to share jail cells with hardened, experienced criminals — and we expect them to be completely rehabilitated when released.

We admit the problem of juvenile crime needs to be addressed. Arizona needs immediate solutions. But in our hasty quest to find those solutions, should we dispose of lives that may very well be productive? Can we really afford to take such a risk?

New 'Bill of Rights for Bicyclists' designed to ensure better treatment

As an ASU bicyclist, I speak for thousands when I say that we've had it up to our bike helmets and we're not going to take it anymore. No matter what we do, we're wrong. The following are some examples.

If we ride in the street, we're impeding traffic. If we ride on the sidewalk, we're impeding pedestrians. If we bring our bikes inside stores because there aren't any bike racks outside, we're in the way of customers. And, if we ride in certain places on campus, we get a ticket from campus police. These are just a few examples of the abuse we undergo every day. Can you, State Press readers, feel our pain?

There's only one way to go. We bicyclists need to be granted our own Bill of Rights. I know it sounds crazy from the outside, but only we bicyclists know what it means to be flipped off by a red-neck. Only we bicyclists can feel the slings and arrows of a car turning in front of us and the accompanying shouts from the driver of "Get out of the way, you S.O.B.!" And, finally, only we bicyclists experience bike thieves on the ASU campus who love to steal quick-release tires accidentally left unlocked.

What am I really trying to say? I'm saying that we bicyclists deserve better treatment. How are we supposed to feel about ourselves when no bike racks are located at some places of business while cars have hundreds of spaces? How are we supposed to feel when there are places where the racks are constructed so poorly that our U-Locks won't work? We feel persecuted. The following is my Bicyclist's Bill of Rights. Of course, amendments to this bill are accepted, assuming that bicyclists are treated in a superior fashion. Don't misunderstand, we only strive for equality. Well, maybe a little better than equality.

1) Only bicyclists are allowed to flip off other vehicles. Any driver of any motor vehicle flipping off a bike will be required to attend Defensive Driving School and then ride a bicycle down a major street blindfolded.

2) Only bicycles will have the right-of-way. Any driver of a motor vehicle not yielding to a bike will be required to buy that bicyclist anything he or she wants. Price is no object. Of course, Tickle-Me-Elmo or Barney dolls do not count under any circumstances unless the bicyclist is under 8 years old.

3) Anyone caught stealing a bike anywhere will be required to become the offended bicyclist's personal servant for a period of not less than five years. The only exceptions will be bike repossessors.

4) Any driver of a motor vehicle who screams out the window at a bicyclist will be required to have a police whistle blown in their ear for a period of not less than 60 seconds.

5) Finally (and this is the serious one), ASU will be required to develop and execute a plan within five years so bicyclists can ride on campus free and unencumbered.

Now, some drivers of motor vehicles might feel the above changes are unfair. They might feel they are getting their "noses rubbed in it," so to speak. Some of them might feel they don't deserve this type of treatment.

Perhaps they are right. Perhaps this "Bill of Rights" has gone too far. Perhaps there is a more beneficial alternative. Perhaps there needs to be some sort of compromise so both bicyclists and motor vehicle drivers can live in harmony forever and ever. Then again, nah!

Steven Stein is a senior studying psychology.

News media blind to story that hits below the belt

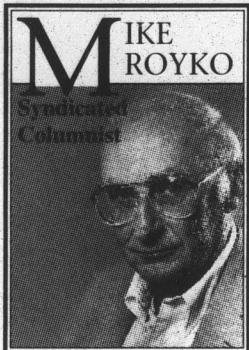

So much happens in the world each day that many fascinating stories never make it into mainstream newspapers or network news shows.

There are several reasons for this. One is limited news space or broadcast time. Another is the growing belief in newsrooms that stories should have "relevance" or "significance." There also is a nervousness that certain stories might offend some readers.

The following story, transmitted by Reuters News Service, falls into one of those categories. The story came from the Reuters bureau in the African nation of Ghana.

Mobs have beaten to death at least 12 sorcerers in Ghana for allegedly making penises shrink or vanish, Ghanaian newspapers reported on Monday.

"The death toll now stands at 12, up by five since Friday," a headline in the Ghanaian Times said, evoking a subject that has gripped the West African nation since last Thursday.

MIKE ROYKO
Syndicated Columnist

"Victims say sorcerers simply touch them and make their penises shrink or vanish by witchcraft to extort cash in return for a cure. Police dismiss the phenomenon as a ploy by thieves to cause a crowd to form and then rob people.

"Most of the deaths have been in the capital Accra, but in a sign the crisis was spreading, newspapers reported that police opened fire in the second town of Kumasi to save one man from lynching. Police prevented seven other attempted lynchings nationwide, they said.

"Some newspapers said that women had started reporting shrinking genitals and that witches were to blame.

"Ghanaian residents attribute the scale of the crisis to the fact that genitals are used in certain voodoo rituals.

"Police armed with automatic rifles have been patrolling markets and bus stations in the former British colony's capital.

"Medical experts have appeared on state television, explaining in detail why penises increase and decrease in size. One doctor linked the phenomenon to fear.

"Such reports are not uncommon in West Africa, with purported victims often blaming handshakes with sorcerers.

Residents recall a similar scare in Accra in the early 1980s."

So the question is why this unusual story was widely ignored by the American news media.

It can't be that it lacks significance. It is significant because it tells us that our efforts to export Western democratic values to developing Third World nations might be a more difficult job than some think.

It also tells us that our notions of what concerns people in countries such as Ghana might be distorted, shaped by the stuffy stuff we see on CNN and the other networks.

When we hear about countries such as Ghana, the news usually concerns a military coup, a change in government, or some such event that requires an update to the nation's encyclopedia entry.

But here we learn that many Ghanaians are all worked up because someone came up to them on the street, touched them on the arm and said: "Ha, ha. I have just made your wallowando vanish completely."

"Why do you want to do that?"
"To make you pay me a reward to restore your wallowando."

"How much is the reward?"
"Everything you've got."
"Too much. Keep my wallowando."

Of course, many people in Ghana don't react that way, which is why so many of the sorcerers or confidence men have been lynched by angry crowds who fear the loss of their wallowandos.

And can we blame them? How would you feel if you were standing at a commuter station or a bus stop and some eerie stranger walked up to you, gave you a tap on the arm and said: "Surprise! Guess what body part you just lost?"

Just remember the intense public interest that was stirred by the temporary loss suffered by John Bobbitt at the hand of his angry wife.

That was only one man in a big country. In Ghana, a small society with a population only a fraction of ours, the threat of shrinkage or total loss has been happening all over the place.

Of course, that couldn't happen here, because we are a much more stable society and take to the streets to act wild and crazy only when something truly important happens, such as a hometown team winning a sports championship.

Also, we are more inclined toward doing things in an orderly, business-like way.

So if there ever is a threat to shrink or make the wallowandos of American men disappear, it would not come from some haphazard collection of wackos running around the streets.

No, it would be the result of some resolution passed at the next convention of the National Organization for Women.

I wonder — does NOW have a branch office in Ghana?

Modern radio sets new low for incorrect political views

My effort to convince fellow talk-radio fans that our favorite shows are long on simplistic solutions and short on accuracy has been highly unsuccessful.

The refusal to believe that Rush Limbaugh's vicious personal attacks and ridiculous generalizations are not sufficient tools for complete political understanding is such that I sometimes wonder if he has tapped into sound-wave hypnosis technology.

I will, therefore, waste no more breath nor ink reiterating the standards of logical debate to talk-radio fans. Instead, I will let Limbaugh, G. Gordon Liddy and others set new standards of logic and fair play.

With that in mind, permit me to tell you what is on my mind, which of course is the 100 percent gospel truth. While others argue with empty rhetoric and dogmatic hyperbole, I simply tell it like it is. Ask God if you don't believe me.

ADAM SCHIFFER
Columnist

You say Clinton was a draft dodger? At least he was principled about it. Newt Gingrich supported the war, but said "Let someone else die for the cause." He claims he received a married-with-children exemption. But we all know that he was not exactly dedicated to his marriage, so that seems a little hard to believe.

So, rural Oregon and Washington were flooded recently? Serves them right. Remember, God hates loggers for destroying his forests and killing off entire species of the animal kingdom. God always exacts revenge upon blasphemous over-developers; I hope you Valley residents have fire insurance.

Since the bombing of abortion clinics and the killing of doctors is simply wrong, I hereby call upon Operation Rescue, the Catholic Church and the Republican National Committee to stop ordering the murders, as we all know they have been doing.

Otherwise, I couldn't care less about the anti-abortion movement because, as a friend of mine properly pointed out, most pro-life women are so ugly that you wouldn't want to.

Forget it. I'm becoming sick to my stomach. Though the preceding paragraphs were entirely facetious, I nevertheless apologize for making remarks that are radically outside of my self-imposed boundaries.

My method for concocting such awful blather was simple: I listened to Rush Limbaugh one week, paying particular attention to comments made by the callers that he either agreed with, or at least did not refute.

I then extracted particularly offensive segments and reversed them, substituting conservative themes and players for the usual targets — liberal ones.

For instance, Newt's marital troubles were substituted for Clinton's. Women with whom I disagree were insulted for their appearance, not unlike the attacks on feminists heard frequently on talk radio.

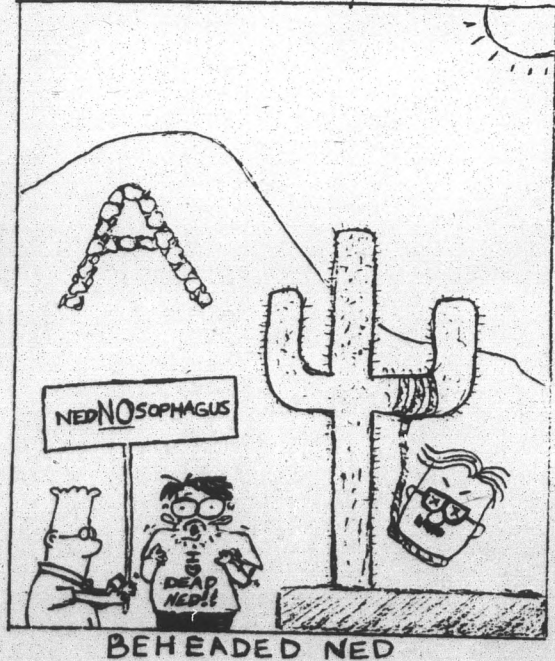

Also, I substituted loggers and developers for homosexuals as the recipients of God's wrath via a major tragedy. In this case, floods and fires are in the place of AIDS.

Certainly, talk radio has been allowed more leeway than other media because of its traditional role as non-substantive entertainment. But with polls indicating that more than one-third of Americans cite talk radio as their primary source of political knowledge, it is clear that the genre has been redefined and must, therefore, be held to a higher standard.

Lesson learned through loss of transportation

Other students and myself would agree that bicycle theft is a problem here on campus. Everyday I read about more bikes and other property being stolen. This is getting ridiculous and is a recurring problem. I too was unfortunate to have my bike stolen while it was locked at the Memorial Union. For myself and others this is your life blood of basic transportation while attending here at ASU. I paid $300 for my bike, and when it was stolen, I had to walk for weeks until I saved for another one.

This was very frustrating and very dramatic for me as I depend on my bike to get around. I told myself that this wasn't going to happen again. I went to my insurance agent and opened a Renters Insurance policy that was introduced to me by a friend.

Whether it be your bike or your PC, TV or stereo, if it was stolen on campus, from a dorm, car or your apartment, this kind of insurance will cover most of your personal property. This type of policy is very inexpensive and it is worth it for a little peace of mind.

Left-handedness is not sin, according to Bible

In his Jan. 29 opinion article, Adam Schiffer wrote "Left-handedness is immoral. I personally do not go to church, but I know it is in the Bible somewhere."

Adam Schiffer is mistaken. I do go to church. I do study the Bible.

Nowhere does it condemn left-handedness. The connection between left-handedness and evil arose out of superstitions and humanity's general fear of anything different. It is in no way Biblical.

To Adam Schiffer — it's dangerous to cite what one does not know. Please read the Bible.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A female student reported that someone stole money from her vehicle while it was parked in Area 11.
- A male student reported that someone removed the handlebars and seat from his bike while it was parked near the Physical Science Building F-wing.
- A male student reported that he lost one key belonging to the University.
- A male not affiliated with ASU reported that someone criminally damaged his vehicle while it was parked in Structure 5.
- A male affiliated with ASU reported that someone unlawfully entered room 110 in the Physical Science Building and removed items.
- A female affiliated with ASU reported that someone removed her bike from the north side of the Farmer Building, where it was locked up.
- A male student reported that his vehicle caught on fire while it was parked in Structure 1.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A 72-year-old woman was arrested at her home Sunday night at 2401 W. Southern Ave. on charges of assault and disorderly conduct. The woman allegedly choked her live-in boyfriend, leaving small cuts and abrasions on his neck. After she was placed under arrest and was being escorted from her from her residence, police said she kicked her boyfriend in the groin. She was booked into Tempe City Jail.

• A 41-year-old female was arrested on charges of theft after she allegedly embezzled more than $78,000 from the Association of Concert Bands of America, Inc. Police said the woman, who was employed as secretary-treasurer at the organization from March 1993 to May 1993, wrote checks to herself and found other fraudulent ways to use funds for her benefit.

• A 24-year-old man was arrested on charges of theft after he allegedly took two compact discs valued at $22.97 from a display inside Zia Records, 105 W. University Drive. Police said when the suspect tried to leave the store without paying for the items, he set off the store's audible alarm. He was detained by store personnel and later booked into Tempe City Jail.

ASU College of Law to host lecture series

Rowe Edgell
STATE PRESS

The ASU College of Law will host a series of speakers Feb. 6-8 to voice their opinions on free speech.

"We hope to explore the tension between free speech and the community," said James Weinstein, professor in the College of Law.

The eight speakers will lecture on freedom of speech in public institutions such as schools, universities, museums and libraries.

The keynote presentation will be held in the ASU College of Law at 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 6, featuring speakers Robert Post and Benjamin Barber. The presentation is free and open to the public.

"It will be a real service to the community to have some of the best scholars talk about real-life issues," Weinstein said.

Lecture topics during the presentation will include the First Amendment, "Can Freedom be Taught?" and "Free Speech and the College Community."

The focus of the lectures will be the issues of grades K-12, Library and Museum issues on Feb. 7, and Focus on Higher Education Issues on Feb. 8.

The last two days require registration for those who are interested, and the cost is $35.

The forum is sponsored by the Rockefeller Foundation, the Nathan Cummings Foundation, the Arizona Humanities Council and the ASU College of Law.

Indian charter schools may lose funding

PHOENIX (AP) — Charter schools on Indian reservations could lose millions of state dollars under a proposal by Republican lawmakers, who just last year passed a law continuing funding for the schools through 1998.

Indian education officials say they're being discriminated against and Democrats say the GOP is being unfair to Arizona's tribes.

"I don't think that is a good way to do business, going back on your word like that," House Assistant Minority Leader Bob McLendon, D-Yuma, said Monday. "The excuse I hear is that that was last year, this is a different session, so we can do what we want."

If the law is changed, the 10 Indian charter schools stand to lose $10.2 million in state funding this year.

Ivan Makil, chairman of the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community, said the charter school on his reservation may have to close if state funding is not continued.

There also are charter schools on the Navajo, Hopi and Gila River reservations.

Republicans said the deal that provided state funding for tribal charter schools was mishandled and needs to be changed. GOP lawmakers said Indian charter schools are getting more money than they are entitled to because they receive both federal and state funds.

Indian charter schools are getting $7,000 to $11,000 per student, while a typical charter school gets $4,300 per student, said Rep. Laura Knaperek, R-Tempe, chairwoman of the House appropriations subcommittee on education.

The Senate education appropriations subcommittee has already adopted the cut in Indian charter-school funding. Knaperek's subcommittee is scheduled to take up the matter Friday in the House.

The Legislature embraced charter schools several years ago as an alternative to traditional public schools and encouraged parents and local citizens to create their own rules and curriculum.

Those that created charter schools, including several Indian tribes, began receiving state funding. But lawmakers balked when they realized tribal schools were also receiving federal aid.

"They are getting two lump sums of money for the same purpose," Knaperek said. "We are just trying to be fair to everyone."

Lawmakers last year agreed to phase out state funding to Indian charter schools over a two-year period. The legislative budget that came out this year, however, called for cutting the funds immediately.

Non-Indian charter schools are eligible for federal funding through impact aid, bilingual funding and money for students from disadvantaged backgrounds, among other sources.

International Management School hosts seminar

By ROWE EDGELL
STATE PRESS

The American Graduate School of International Management will host prominent businesswomen and entrepreneurs Friday, in a seminar on the challenges women face in international business.

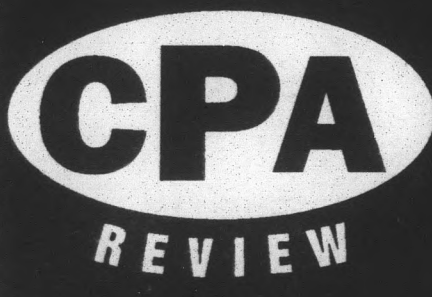

The conference will focus on the experiences of women who have reached the top of their business communities and address questions regarding the role of women in international settings.

"For students, this will be a window of opportunity — especially for women interested in international careers, by women who have already done it," said James Grant, assistant vice president of Public Affairs.

Students will have a chance to meet and talk with leading executives of companies such as Nations Bank, K-mart and Holiday Inn Worldwide.

There will be about 20 presentations delivered by members of the Committee of 200, a professional organization of preeminent business women that has about 400 members worldwide.

The registration fee is $20, which includes lunch. Spaces are filling up fast, Grant said.

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Oksana Baiul skated away from a drunken driving charge Tuesday by enrolling in an alcohol education program.

If the Olympic gold medalist completes the program and 25 hours of community service, the charge will be dropped, Superior Court Judge Terence Sullivan decided. She also pleaded no contest to speeding and was fined $90.

Baiul, a Ukrainian who lives in Connecticut was driving nearly 100 mph when she ran her Mercedes off the road in Bloomfield on Jan. 12, police said. She and a passenger were slightly injured.

Baiul's blood-alcohol level was well over the legal limit, and at 19, she is two years under the drinking age.

Sullivan told the skater she was lucky the accident didn't end tragically.

"You wouldn't be standing here asking me for admittance to the alcohol education program," the judge said. "You'd be standing here asking me not to send you to prison."

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A man who left champagne, a stuffed monkey and other gifts for Jamie Lee Curtis has gotten the attention of the police instead.

Police were looking for the man, who was seen lurking around Screen Gems Studios' gates. He was caught inside the gates on Thursday and was asked to leave, then returned two days later and asked if Curtis was there.

Curtis is in North Carolina filming the medical thriller Virus.

Among the gifts he dropped off: a bag of cashews and a copy of Stephen King's book Thinner.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Maybe they should call it Tigerland.

Tiger Woods arrived in his mother's homeland Tuesday to a reception fit for royalty. He is in town to play in a tournament that starts Thursday.

The 21-year-old golfer stepped from a plane into a throng of government officials, fans and relatives, who besieged him with autograph requests and covered him with traditional floral garlands.

Thai television carried the arrival live, a mark of celebrity status accorded last year to Queen Elizabeth II and President Clinton.

Woods was accompanied by his mother, Kultilda. She met the golfer's father, Army veteran Earl Woods, while he was stationed in Asia.

Earl Woods stayed home in the United States, where he is awaiting heart bypass surgery.

Agreement reached to freeze distribution of Nazi gold

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States, Britain and France have agreed to freeze distribution of gold bars worth $68 million that Nazis looted from European central banks, The New York Times reported Tuesday.

The gold, which for half a century has been stored in the vaults of the Federal Reserve Bank in Manhattan and the Bank of England, could form the core of a fund to compensate Holocaust victims, U.S. officials say.

The Clinton administration, citing new evidence to support Jewish groups' claims that the gold came partly from Jews killed during the Holocaust, has convinced Britain and France to freeze distribution of the remaining gold, the Times reported.

"We've taken the first step, freezing the money in place," Stuart E. Eisenstat, the Undersecretary of Commerce, responsible for sorting out questions of Swiss stewardship of Nazi gold, said in the Times. "But we don't have any agreement yet on what to do next."

The gold bars have been stored since Switzerland, Sweden and other nations turned them over to the Allied powers after World War II.

The Tripartite Commission, a U.S.-British-French commission set up in 1946 to deal with Nazi loot, has gradually returned to central banks across Europe most of an estimated 337 metric tons of gold, valued at $4 billion at current gold prices, collected from those accounts.

The commission has $68 million worth left to disburse and was scheduled to go out of existence by the end of this year.

Jewish groups intervened, claiming some of that gold came from private citizens in Europe, including Jews whose possessions were seized when they were sent to death camps. The president of the World Jewish Conference asked for the money to be put in a restitution fund for Holocaust victims.

Switzerland and its banks have agreed to set up a fund to benefit Holocaust survivors who say Swiss banks have refused to return funds from accounts Jews established in Switzerland to keep their assets from falling into Nazi hands. The amount of that fund and its source have yet to be determined.

Depression likely after miscarriage

CHICAGO (AP) — Women who miscarry are likely to suffer major depression in the six months after, a study found.

Depression, the nation's most prevalent mental health problem, is known to be common among women who have had a miscarriage, but no one had compared its prevalence among miscarrying women and women at large, researchers said.

The study compared 229 women treated at a hospital after miscarriages with 230 women in the community who had not been pregnant in the previous year.

Overall, women who miscarried were 2.5 times more likely to get depressed. A childless woman who miscarried was five times more likely.

Among miscarrying women, 10.9 percent suffered major depression within six months. The rate among the other women during any six-month period was 4.3 percent.

Major depression afflicts 25 percent of all women at some point during their lives, studies have indicated. The disorder is about half as common among men.

Form of vitamin D blocks cancer in lab tests

BY PAUL RECER
AP SCIENCE WRITER

WASHINGTON — Researchers searching for a pill to prevent cancer have found an exotic form of vitamin D that blocks formation of breast tumors in laboratory cell cultures.

Scientists at the University of Illinois, Chicago, synthesized a new form of vitamin D and found that it was able to protect mouse breast tissue from cancer-causing chemicals.

Rajendra G. Mehta of the University of Illinois, Chicago, said some other forms of vitamin D have been shown to combat cancer, but only at doses that are toxic to cells. Vitamin D-5, the compound made by his lab, blocks cancer formation at high concentrations without damaging the cells.

But Mehta cautioned that the research is still at an early stage.

"The toxicity studies are very preliminary," he said. "When we test it in the whole animals, it may turn out to be toxic. We don't know yet."

Mehta said a standard lab test used to screen compounds for anti-cancer action showed that vitamin D-5 linked with cells in the culture and prevented them from making changes that often lead to cancer. Cell cultures not protected by D-5 did develop precancer lesions when exposed to the chemicals, he said.

The compound is now being tested on living laboratory animals and Mehta said early results are promising.

A report on the study is being published Wednesday in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute.

In an editorial in the journal, Dr. Moray J. Campbell and Dr. H. Phillip Koeffler of the University of California, Los Angeles, School of Medicine said the anti-cancer action of vitamin D-5 "is sufficiently high to warrant further investigations using other chemical cell types."

The authors said other forms of vitamin D also are being studied for their anti-cancer effects.

Mehta said vitamin D-5 is being tested on laboratory animals that have been injected with human breast cancer cells. The goal is to determine if the compound blocks proliferation of the cancer. Human tests would be possible only if the compound is successful against cancer in a series of such animal tests, he said.

The eventual goal of such work, Mehta said, is to find vitamin-like compounds that could prevent cancer. He said he and other researchers look for a day when women with a family history of breast cancer may be protected from the disease by taking pills.

"Compounds like this could possibly be used as a chemopreventative by people who are at high risk of cancer," said Mehta.

Arizonans support tax hike for improvement of mass transit

PHOENIX (AP) — More than half of Arizonans in the state's major cities support a half-cent sales tax increase to improve mass transit.

A poll released Monday found 69 percent of respondents in Phoenix supported such a tax hike for better bus service, as did 54 percent in Tucson and 63 percent in Mesa.

Scottsdale was the only major Arizona city where a majority of respondents opposed the tax.

The poll, conducted by the Behavior Research Center in Phoenix, comes as the Legislature considers several bills intended to clear the air in Phoenix, including $10 million to study light rail transit and $5 million to convert diesel-powered city buses to alternative fuels.

The survey found more than 80 percent of those who commute to work do so alone. Respondents said it would take more than a $1 hike in the price of a gallon of gas — up to $2.34 a gallon — to wean them from their cars.

Pollster Earl DeBerge pegged the poll on Tempe's vote last year to raise the city sales tax to put more buses on the streets. The Tempe program will include new buses, new routes and weekend bus service.

The poll surveyed 711 Arizonans by telephone and has a margin of error of 3.8 percentage points.

Arizonans hope feds OK funds for health-care system

Associated Press

If Arizona can convince the federal government that a plan to add nearly $200,000 to the state's health-care system won't increase federal costs, the plan should "sail through," Gov. Fife Symington says.

Symington, in Washington, D.C., on Monday for a meeting of the National Governors Association, said the federal government saves roughly 7 percent a year through the Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System over what equivalent Medicaid would cost.

If that's taken into consideration, the addition to AHCCCS shouldn't cost the federal government more than it's paying now, he said Monday.

The addition requires a federal rules waiver, as does the current system. The current waiver is up for renewal.

Adding to AHCCCS comes under a voter-approved proposition that expands eligibility to those at or below the federal poverty level. Current AHCCCS coverage is pegged at 33 percent of that level and the federal government pays about two-thirds of the bill.

Officer on sex harassment panel accused

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
AP MILITARY WRITER

WASHINGTON — The Army's top enlisted officer was named to a panel studying the service's sex abuse problems, months after assault allegations were made against him by one of his female employees.

The service's top officials could offer no explanation Tuesday how that happened or why the woman's complaint was not more fully investigated.

Army Secretary Togo West, testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee, said he learned of allegations against the sergeant major of the Army, Gene C. McKinney, just this week. Gen. Dennis Reimer, the Army chief of staff, said after the hearing, "I'm not going to have any comment."

West appointed McKinney in November to the panel, formed in the wake of a series of sexual misconduct complaints made against military trainers at Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland.

On Tuesday, the Army announced that a seventh instructor,

Staff Sgt. Vernell Robinson, Jr., had been charged with rape, extortion, assault and threatening three trainees — the most serious charges so far.

McKinney serves in one of the Army's most revered posts, and is supposed to be a role model. He is Reimer's top adviser on matters affecting the service's 410,000 enlisted men and women and his offices are directly across the hall from the Chief of Staff's Pentagon quarters.

In a formal Army statement, McKinney denied the allegations of sexual assault and harassment made by retired Sgt. Maj. Brenda L. Hoster.

The Army said that pending resolution of the matter McKinney was granted a request to be excused from his duties on the high-level panel.

Hoster's allegations first appeared Tuesday in the New York Times. The 22-year Army veteran worked as McKinney's public affairs officer, writing speeches and preparing statements. She said McKinney kissed her, grabbed her and asked for sex in her hotel room during an April business trip to Hawaii.

Freshman point guard Mike Bibby is a major reason that No. 10 UofA's young squad has surprised many this season. ASU plays the Wildcats tonight at 7:30 in Tucson. Jim Poulin/State Press

UofA's super frosh Bibby living up to expectations

BY PERCY EDNALINO JR.
STATE PRESS

Freshman Mike Bibby has been compared to Suns guard Jason Kidd. He's been celebrated as UofA's point guard of the future. And his storied non-relationship with his estranged father, USC basketball coach Henry Bibby, has been well-documented.

The accolades have been heaped high for the former Shadow Mountain High star and the unassuming Bibby has handled the compliments well. He's used to the attention, having dealt with it in high school.

Bibby is part of the Wildcats' triple-threat backcourt that features sophomore Jason Terry and junior Miles Simon. In his first year at UofA, Bibby has poised himself to take over as the Wildcats' floor leader.

But he doesn't believe he deserves all the attention.

"I really haven't done anything yet," Bibby said. "I haven't led us to anything. But I think I'm holding my own."

ASU head coach Bill Frieder said Bibby reminds him of Kidd when he made his debut for California, with a twist.

"I think he's a great player," Frieder said. "Coming out of high school, he was a better player than Jason Kidd was because he was a better shooter than Kidd was in high school."

"Whether he gets as big and strong, and accomplishes what Jason did in college, we'll have to wait and see."

Frieder may not have to wait too long to see just how much Bibby has improved. The Sun Devils face the host Wildcats tonight at 7:30.

The 6-foot-1 Bibby is the only three-time Arizona State High School Player of the Year. He also ended his high school career as the state's all-time leading scorer with 3,002 points and was regarded as the nation's top prep point guard prospect.

This season, Bibby is third in the Pac-10 with 107 assists (5.9 per game) and fourth in steals with 42 (2.3 a game). He hit a career-high 22 points against North Carolina on Nov. 22 and chipped in eight steals against Texas on Dec. 9.

Stanford point guard Brevin Knight said of Bibby: "He can shoot the ball and he gets everyone involved."

That's high praise from the soft-spoken Knight, who opened eyes while playing versus the "Dream Team" last summer and is arguably the best point guard in the Pac-10.

Getting his teammates involved is something Bibby does well. When the Wildcats beat the host Sun Devils 92-84 earlier this year, Bibby led UofA with a game-high nine assists and chipped in eight points. It was his first taste of the rivalry between ASU and UofA.

"I wasn't nervous, but I think I was too excited," Bibby said. "I came out and had too much adrenaline going. Everybody was telling me to settle down."

"I think he's a great player. Coming out of high school, he was a better player than Jason Kidd was because he was a better shooter than Kidd was in high school."

— ASU basketball coach Bill Frieder

ASU's shooting key for win in Tucson

BY ED ODEVEN
STATE PRESS

Archrivals UofA and ASU have one thing in common — both lost road games in Washington last week.

But that's where the similarities between the basketball teams end.

The No. 14 Wildcats (13-5, 6-3 in the Pac-10) appear headed for an unbelievable 13th straight NCAA tournament appearance.

ASU (10-11, 2-7) has lost six of its last seven games. The team is shooting just 35.5 percent from the field in the past six games (135 of 380).

Sun Devils' coach Bill Frieder knows his squad faces a formidable foe in UofA tonight at 7:30 at the McKale Center in Tucson.

"I think they are a real solid basketball team and losing to Washington (92-88 on Sunday) on the road is no big deal," Frieder said. "That's a tough place to win and Washington's really good this year. For us to have to go in there after they've lost makes it even worse. They'll even be more focused and more prepared. It's truly a top-10 basketball team."

During the Frieder Era (1990-present), the Sun Devils are 4-12 against UofA.

Wildcat junior guard Jason Terry believes the re-match will be defense oriented.

"Defense is going to be the key for us," said Terry, who made five steals in Tempe. "We just have to come out and take them out of their offense."

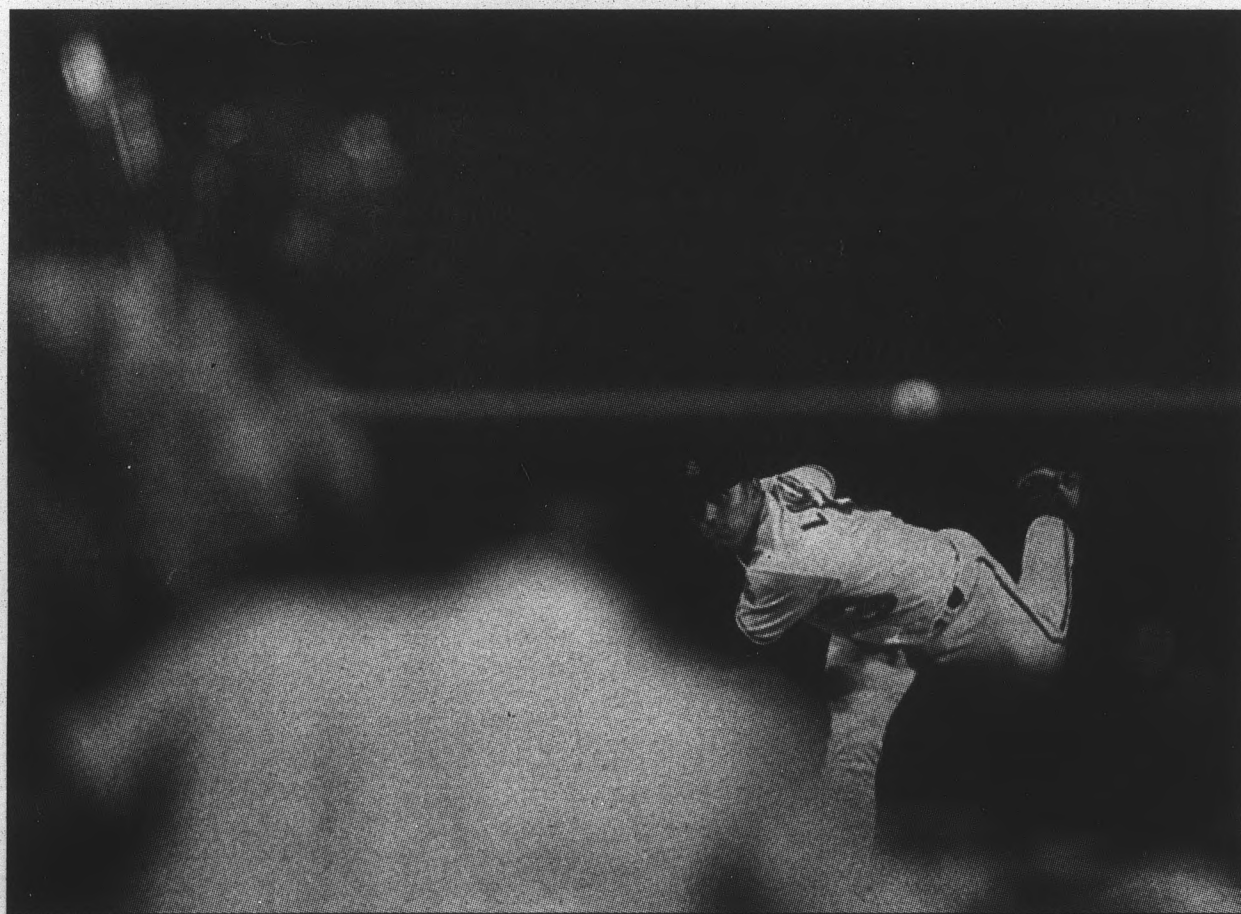

Frieder hopes the improbable occurs.

"When you're a coach, you never go into a game thinking you aren't going to win," he said. "Worst teams than us have beaten better teams than them. Anything's possible, but we would have to play very well."

ASU junior forward Mike Batiste said his team must play gutsy.

"We are just going to try to go out and go out at them, said Batiste, who scored a team-high 25 points in the last meeting between the schools. "And go hard and see if we can go out with a win."

Here's the pitch

ASU pitcher Phill Lowery delivers a pitch to a Saint Mary's College batter during the third inning of Monday night's game at Packard Stadium. The sophomore left-hander was replaced after two and two-thirds innings of work. The Sun Devils defeated the Gaels 4-1 behind a strong team pitching effort. Four ASU hurlers combined to strike out 17 Saint Mary's batters. Sun Devil junior Richy Leon (1-0) got the win, along with scoring the go-ahead run, while junior relief man Ryan Bradley notched his second save of the year. The Sun Devils improved to 4-3, while the Gaels dropped to 0-6. Erik Guzowski/State Press

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by Frances Drake

Wednesday, February 5, 1997

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A new job assignment could come and you may get the chance to try your hand at something different in the line of work. Innovative ideas put you on top!
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You could be making plans for an unusual trip or something different in the way of entertainment. Some you deal with tend to exaggerate. However, you can discern this.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your chief danger is that you'll waste money in the pursuit of good times. Your expensive taste could lead to extravagance. Find something constructive to do with your time instead of shopping.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You can't call all the shots all the time. Try to be cooperative with others and listen to their ideas. A relative needs extra consideration from you during evening hours.
LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Errors in judgment are possible where money is concerned. Be careful that you don't misplace something of value. It's a grand time for socializing after dark.
VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You could be too preoccupied with other matters to be effective in business early in the day. Clear your head. Later, your personality and charm will be a factor in your success.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Self-discipline combined with initiative brings you progress on the job. There's a lovely accent on partnership interests after dark. Enjoy happy times.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) There's a favorable accent on both work and play. You'll take the lead in planning good times and new opportunities await you on the job at present.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You need to think twice about business propositions made to you. If it's not actual deception involved, then there's something you're not seeing clearly.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) It's important that couples are open and honest with each other. Keeping things to yourself could lead to the possibility of a future misunderstanding.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) There could be some minor upsets at home early in the day, and you'll find yourself going out for good times. This is a welcome respite from trivial aggravations. Romance is a plus.
PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Minor strain could exist with an in-law. However, it's a wonderful time to invite others over. Guard against an unwise use of credit and enjoy domestic interests.
YOU BORN TODAY are both idealistic and practical. You have a good understanding of human nature and can succeed in such fields as writing, psychology and counseling. You have a flair for the dramatic and can succeed in show business. A progressive thinker, you can make original contributions in the world of ideas. At times you can become restless and need to stick with what you start.
