'English Patient' front-runner for best picture but not a sweep

BY LYNN ELBER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — "The English Patient" has history on its side for a best-picture win, but don't expect to hear its theme music replayed endlessly Monday night. Oscar is likely to be humming more than one tune this year.

A sweep may be beyond the romantic epic's grasp as a mixed bag of films, including "Sling Blade," "Shine" and " Fargo," appear poised to reap their share of Academy Award glory.

"The English Patient," with its leading 12 nominations, seems likely to snare the top honor: With one exception in the last 14 years, the best-picture award has gone to the film with the most bids.

Last year that was "Braveheart." The year before: "Forrest Gump." The tradition-buster: "The Silence of the Lambs" (1991), which robbed leading contender "Bugsy" of the top honor.

Affection also could favor "The English Patient" because of producer Saul Zaentz, a respected industry figure honored previously for "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" (1975) and "Amadeus" (1984). He's receiving the Irving G. Thalberg Memorial Award on Monday night, when the 69th annual ceremony airs live on ABC.

But the orchestra in the Shrine Auditorium pit may be rapidly shuffling through its sheet music if such major categories as acting and writing are split among other contenders.

Writer-star Billy Bob Thornton's tour de force in "Sling Blade" has his colleagues publicly gushing, and he beat out "The English Patient" writer-director Anthony Minghella for the Writers' Guild of America Award for best adapted screenplay.

Whether Thornton can nab the acting trophy from apparent front-runner Geoffrey Rush of "Shine," who was named best lead actor last month by the Screen Actors Guild, is uncertain.

What is likely is that the best-actor Oscar will go to someone playing a character with a physical or emotional infirmity — a label fitting four of the five roles in the category.

Rush portrays emotionally troubled pianist David Helfgott; Thornton plays a mentally impaired man; Ralph Fiennes is a burn victim in "The English Patient" and Woody Harrelson a paraplegic in "The People vs. Larry Flynt."

Affliction has reaped Oscar gold in the past, so nominee Tom Cruise's healthy sports agent in "Jerry Maguire" may mean he goes home Oscarless.

The best-actress field is generally hale, with the exception of the cancer victim played by Diane Keaton in "Marvin's Room." That factor may not be enough to overcome support for Frances McDormand, who captured the Screen Actors Guild award for her role as a homespun Midwestern crimebuster in " Fargo."

A trio of British contenders in the best-actress ranks — Brenda Blethyn of "Secrets & Lies," Kristin Scott Thomas of "The English Patient" and Emily Watson of "Breaking the Waves" — could cancel each other out and give an added boost to native daughter McDormand.

The supporting actor and actress categories are seen as a lock: Big buzz and Screen Actors Guild awards have gone to Cuba Gooding Jr. of "Jerry Maguire" and veteran Lauren Bacall of "The Mirror Has Two Faces."

There's always room for surprise at the Oscars, of course. Joan Allen missed out last year when she was nominated for "Nixon" — will voters make it up to her by rewarding her work in "The Crucible"?

Minghella, honored by the Directors Guild of America this month, may be allowed a measure of confidence when it comes to the directing trophy. Since 1949, all but four DGA winners have gone on to claim the Oscar.

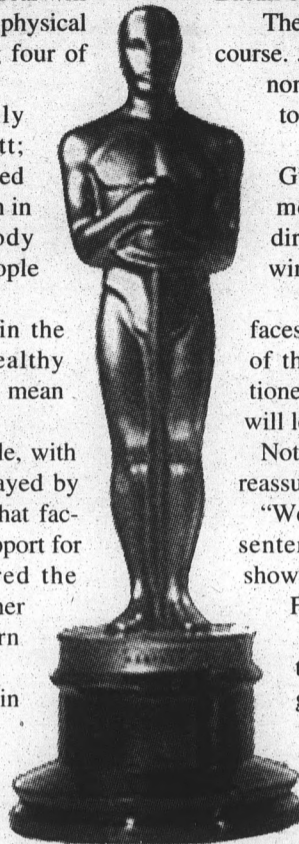

While Oscars may be claimed by fresh faces like Thornton, many of them representatives of the independent film world, some have questioned how much glamor these relative unknowns will lend to the show.

Not to worry, Oscar ceremony producer Gil Cates reassured.

"We have the biggest assortment of stars (as presenters) that has ever gotten together to do this show," he said Friday, naming Mel Gibson, Jodie Foster and Susan Sarandon, among others.

Viewers "are going to get the stars, they're going to get the way they look, they're going to hear Madonna sing, Celine Dion sing, they're going to hear Kenny Loggins, Natalie Cole," Cates said.

And, of course, we'll also hear: "And the Oscar goes to ..."

NATIVE-AMERICAN STUDENTS:

from reservation to higher education

STORY AND PHOTOS BY EMMA SIMONE
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

Luis Jesus came to the city from a wide-open land, where the air is clean and clear and everyone knows each other.

When Jesus, a Navajo from Sawmill in northern Arizona, entered ASU last semester, it was hard for him to find motivation to study. He missed his family and the people on the reservation and he felt alone. He was the only Native American in most of his classes.

Jesus is a 19-year-old freshman and one of 915 Native-American students enrolled at ASU this academic year. Only 2 percent of the University student population is Native American, but these numbers are increasing slowly, according to ASU's Office of Institutional Analysis. Five years ago there were 625 Native American students enrolled.

Many don't stay for long. Nearly half of the Native American freshmen who started in the fall of 1995 dropped out during or after their first year. That is the highest dropout rate of any ethnic group at ASU, and compares to a 29 percent rate overall for freshmen. Of those freshmen who stay, many never graduate from ASU. Only 15.4 percent of Native-American students who started in fall 1990 graduated within six years, compared to 45.9 percent overall.

"The statistics scare me," Jesus said. "I'm afraid, sometimes, that I will become a part of them."

Coming from his tiny village in the Navajo Nation, Jesus faced many cultural differences at the University and in Tempe. He said just the feeling of being a minority and not seeing many other Native Americans around him makes it hard.

"When you finally see a Native American, the first thing you think is, 'How are they doing in school and how do they manage with their struggles?'" Jesus said. "When you come here, you are overwhelmed all the time about everything — like your studies, money issues, socializing, and all the things you can do here."

Like many freshmen, he said he was concerned that he would fail some courses.

"I was so scared to get my grade report," he said. "I didn't know what to expect. I knew that it wasn't going to be good. But, I'm on the borderline."

Lynn Nelson teaches a first-year composition class which is offered only to Native American students. Nelson says the students need to have a place where they can share their experiences in a culture that is very different from their own.

EDUCATIONAL IDENTIFICATION

Jesus said school is harder for him because he is a Native American. Sometimes he does not understand what instructors are trying to teach and it's difficult for him to convey his problems, he said. Jesus said it would be easier if there were some Native-American teachers who could better understand him.

Lynn Nelson, an associate professor of English, said he makes an effort to understand. Nelson started working with Native-American students eight years ago. In his classes, which are exclusively for Native-American students, he not only teaches them how to write, but how to write from the heart, he said.

"I believe that you can teach the principles of good writing and at the same time write about stuff that you care about," he said.

Nelson said he had a student who felt he had to "leave his heart behind" when he came to ASU.

"I don't think education should be that way for anybody," he said. "It's important for them to have a place where they can share and write about their own experiences."

Nelson, who is white, said he enjoys working with Native-American students because it provides him with an opportunity to learn more about their heritage and culture.

Jesus said he likes Nelson's class because it "is the only class where I can be myself." He also said that it's easier for him to make friends in his English class because they have similar backgrounds and understand each other.

In class, students share their feelings, memories and experiences. They often conduct a feather circle, a tribal tradition in which people sit in a circle and pass a feather. The student who has the feather reads from a paper he or she has written during the week.

"The only rule is that you must speak from the heart," Nelson said.

IMPORTANCE OF FAMILY

At 4 years old, Jesus was raised by his mother after his father died in a logging accident while at work and his older brother died some years later when he was hit by a drunk driver. In one feather circle, Jesus read about his brother's death.

"The devastating death of my oldest brother still sends shock and feelings of guilt through our four-bedroom home, leaving a sense of emptiness," he said.

Jesus has two older sisters living in Phoenix, which eases the effort of keeping in touch with family matters.

During class, many students discuss the importance of parents and grandparents and the difficulties the Native-American students face when they have to be away from home, Nelson said.

"Their homeland and their family mean a lot to them," he said. "Many of them come from remote parts of the country. Then they come here, there is a lot of noise, they are away from their land, their family, and it's hard for them. This is a big lonely place."

Sasha Hoskie, a 21-year-old Navajo student, said Navajo families, especially the women, tend to be close. She came from a big family where her cousins were like her brothers and sisters. She said she misses the morning coffee talks she and her family members used to have outside before everyone went off to school.

It can really get hard and lonely here," Hoskie said.

Sasha Hoskie, 21, works at the Native American Institute on campus. Hoskie helps Navajo freshman deal with the culture shock many of the students feel when first arriving at ASU.

Before Jesus came to ASU, he lived in a boarding school together with other Native Americans, but he could still go home to see his family every weekend. Now he shares a dorm on campus with three non-Native-American students.

CULTURAL DIFFERENCES

"It's a lot louder here," Jesus said. "My roommates like to stay up late, and that's kind of distracting after a while. That's something I have to adjust to."

He also has to contend with the fact that many people continue to have limited knowledge of Native Americans and their culture, he said. In one instance, a roommate asked if Jesus lived in a teepee on the reservation.

"Dealing with that kind of stuff gets a bit annoying," Jesus said. "History is history. It's obvious that we are up to date with everything. But you get used to it."

INCREASING OPPORTUNITIES

Jesus said he chose ASU because he could afford it. If he keeps his grades over 2.0 GPA, ASU provides him with scholarships and loans. Some Native-American students receive scholarships from their tribes.

Students like Jesus can also find help at the Native American Institute, which is housed in the Engineering Annex on campus. There, they can share their problems and interests with other Native Americans. The institute offers tutoring, counseling and computer access. It also hosts Native-American student organizations in fields from law and business to architecture and environmental design.

Sasha Hoskie works as a tutor and receptionist for the institute.

"I'm a very traditional Navajo," she said. "I speak Navajo fluently and I can understand many of the Navajo students' problems because I'm in the same situation."

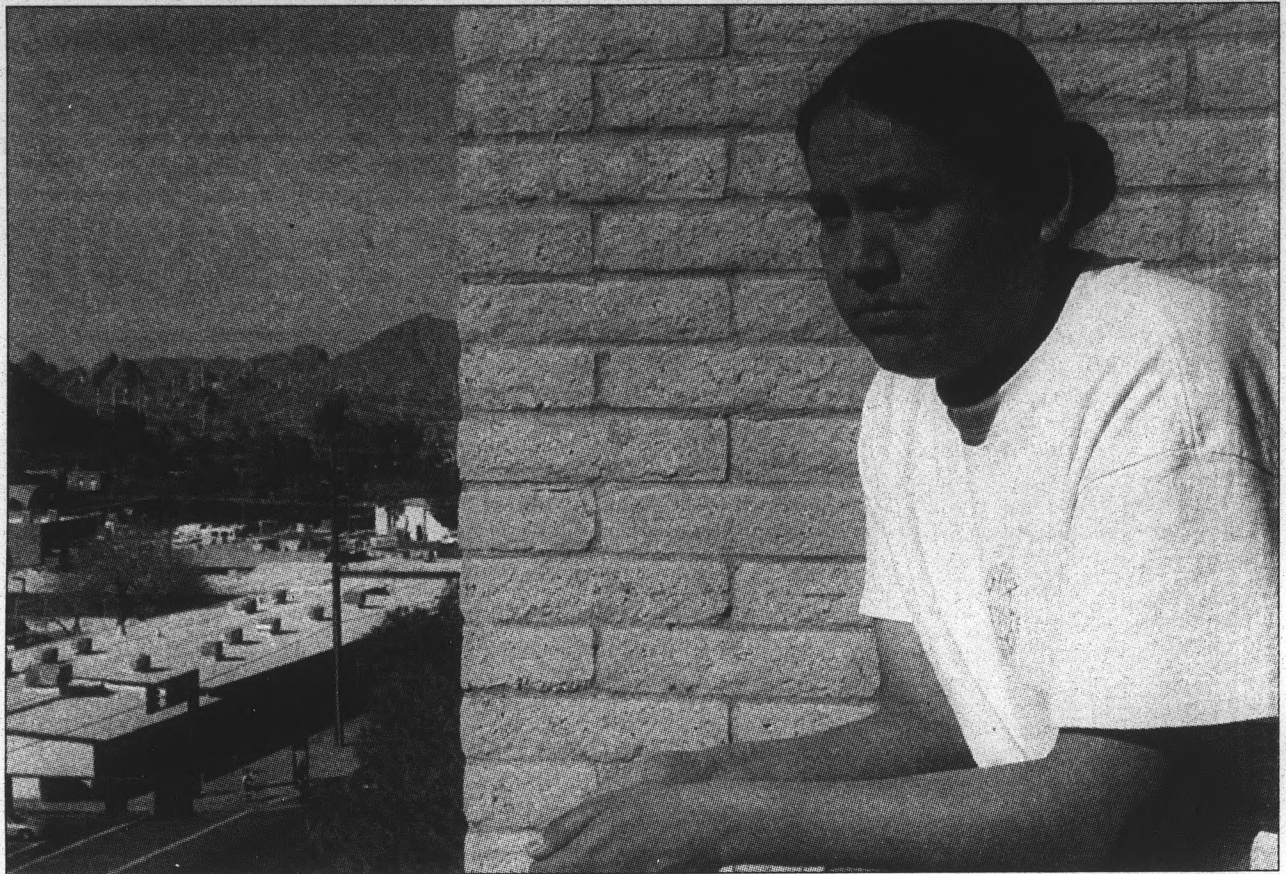

Hoskie came to ASU four years ago, but before she came she had been traveling and living in cities, which she said, helped her to adjust here.

She said that students who have never lived off the reservation have a harder time adjusting.

"One of the common things among Navajo students when they experience the culture shock is that they constantly go home every weekend, which is a six-hour drive," Hoskie said. "That's a problem that we try to fix right off. It's a whole psychological process to make them understand that they live here now, not on the reservation."

Jesus said another problem for many freshmen is that they have a hard time focusing on their studies because there are so many things going on in Tempe and on campus. And many of them are not used to living on their own.

"At home, I had a lot of responsibilities," he said.

Luis Jesus, 21, looks out from the balcony of his dorm room at Cholla Apartments onto the campus of ASU.

"When I went home on the weekends, sometimes I went to my grandmother's house, where I had to take care of the livestock. When you come here you are relieved from all the tension at home."

Hershman John, a 24-year-old Navajo student working as a teaching assistant in the English Department, said many Native Americans drop out because they party too much.

"When they come here, they don't have anyone to tell them what to do — to tell them to study — so they stay up late at night," John said. "Then, at the end of the semester, they realize that their grades are bad and they lose their scholarships."

He said he thinks there should be more individual help for the Native American students — more tutors and more Native American counselors and teachers. He said he believes that teachers at ASU should be informed of Native American customs, which can affect some students' class participation.

"Navajos are taught that it's rude to stand up in class and say your opinion and interrupt the teachers with questions," he said.

NATIVE-AMERICAN PROGRAMS

Last semester, ASU started to develop an American Indian Studies Program that will be offered in three years. It will be a multidisciplinary program including courses on the culture, history and contemporary situations of Native-American people.

Carol Lujan, a Navajo-Pima Indian and the director of the program, said it will encourage students to interact with Native-American governments and organizations and will protect the integrity and identity of the Native American population. She said that some of the classes should be available next fall.

Lujan, an associate professor of Justice Studies, said an important factor in retaining students is to hold on to Native-American faculty. She is one of seven Native-American teachers at the University, which represents less than a half of a percent of the total faculty.

"We recently lost four teachers," Lujan said. "We need to do a lot to recruit new faculty and to keep the ones that we have. Hopefully, this new program will attract new faculty as well as new students."

The Minority Engineering Program has also assisted students in reaching their goals in higher education. Last semester, it had its largest increase of Native-American freshmen in engineering, with 18 students enrolled.

Program Director Mary Ann McCartney said they try to recruit students to the University through a program called MESA — Mathematics, Engineering, Science Achievement.

McCartney said the program works with school teachers on the reservations to help them understand that engineering is important and that the industry wants diversity. They also bring high school students to ASU for one-day visits.

Despite statistics indicating that many Native American students find it hard to study and adjust at the university level, many others are doing well.

Before Felicia Belone, a Navajo freshman studying biology, came to ASU, she attended summer study programs which helped her ease into the college environment, she said.

"I expected it to be a lot harder, but it's nice," she said of ASU. "I have a lot of time on my hands."

Similar programs are held at ASU East during the summer.

Belone said parents play an important role in their children's education, but that it's also up to the students themselves and what they want to do with their lives.

COMMUNITY ROLE MODELS

Jesus said it is important for Native Americans to get a college degree — not just to get a job, but to be a role model in the community. He said his high school friends who didn't go to college have trouble finding jobs because they don't have enough work experience.

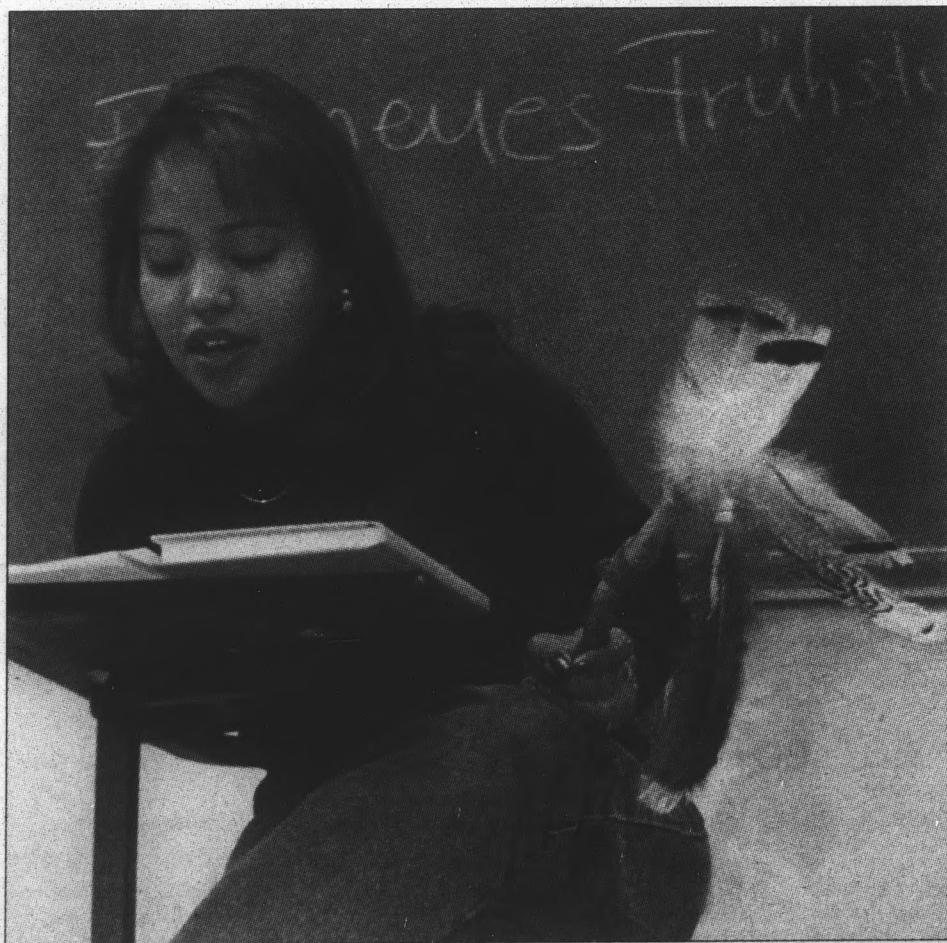

He added that he appreciated representatives from universities coming to the reservation to recruit students.

"When they came to our reservation, I felt happy because they said that they believed in us and that they wanted to have Native Americans in their universities," he said. "There were even people from Harvard (University) who wanted us."

Jesus said he was also excited to hear ASU representatives speak about how the University tried to make Native American enrollment larger because it gave him encouragement to study.

"Many people say that we Navajos are not achievers, but that's not really true," he said. "If you think like that, you don't give yourself a chance. It depends on the person."

"I think people should just go out there and see that they can make a difference, even if other people don't believe in you" he said. "We Native Americans have struggled through a lot, but I believe that the more we struggle, the stronger it will make us."

Felicia Belone, freshman, holds a feather as she reads in the "feather circle" and shares her writings with other Native American students in Nelson's English 102 class.

AROUND ARIZONA

PHOENIX (AP) — State Sen. Randall Gnant began writing about the legislative process to make sure he understood how it works, but ended up latching onto something that will outlive his own tenure at the Legislature.

The 400 copies of the 50-page first edition of Gnant's "From Idea to Bill to Law" were snapped up within three days last year. The books are free for the taking on tables outside legislative hearings.

The 76-page second edition's 4,000 copies will be given away by the end of the current session — in about a month, he said.

While hardly a tell-all, Gnant's work goes beyond civics lessons to explain why lawmakers try to kill their own bills and how laws sometimes are enacted purely by mistake.

Printing costs have been paid by businesses, professional associations and other organizations interested in the legislative process.

"My goal is to make the book available to anybody who has an interest," Gnant said. "Somebody will pick up editing this book when I'm gone."

Rare illness kills boy

TUCSON (AP) — The day before he died of a rare genetic disorder, Michael Parseghian played hide-and-seek with friends and watched the University of Arizona knock Kansas out of the top spot in the NCAA basketball tournament.

The grandson of retired Notre Dame football coach Ara Parseghian died Saturday of an inherited disease that inspired a nationwide research fund drive headed by his grandfather. Michael would have been 10 on Thursday.

"We've told them this is a serious illness," said Michael's mother, Cindy Parseghian. "And we've talked about death in the context of we're all going to die, every one of us, but none of us knows when we will die or how or what from."

Michael's two younger sisters also suffer from Niemann-Pick Type C disease, a rare genetic disorder which leaves children without an enzyme they need to metabolize cholesterol. Over time, cholesterol builds up in the cells of the liver, spleen and brain.

Niemann-Pick afflicts an estimated 500 children in the United States, most of whom will die within 10 years of diagnosis, experts say.

The family asks that donations be sent to the Ara Parseghian Medical Research Foundation, 1760 E. River Road, Suite 115, Tucson, Ariz. 85718.

State budget battles

PHOENIX (AP) — Legislators face a challenging week

as they try to end a budget impasse and tackle committee agendas packed with bills whose sponsors are trying to beat a looming deadline.

Under their schedule to end the session by April 22, leaders of the Legislature's majority Republicans originally hoped to have a budget passed two weeks ago and sent to Gov. Fife Symington by last Tuesday.

However, action has been stalled by disagreement on the size of tax cuts and spending issues such as state aid for school operations.

The latest proposal negotiated by legislative leaders and Symington would provide $110 million in tax cuts — $90 million in across-the-board reductions in individual income tax rates, $10 million in bigger exemptions for married couples with children and $10 million reduced vehicle license taxes.

The negotiators' proposal for a $5.1 billion budget included an increase of $50 million of per-student state aid to public schools beyond enrollment growth. "The budget is very generous to the education community," said Senate Appropriations Chairman Rusty Bowers, R-Mesa.

"Our priorities are all askew," said Rep. John Verkamp, R-Flagstaff. "We say we don't have additional money for schools for (maintenance and operations). We say we don't have any money for community colleges, but we keep making all these tax cuts. I think the whole thing is a bunch of baloney."

PEOPLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Bob Thornton's "Sling Blade" has him doing the Hollywood hustle.

"I'm headed to get my tuxedo fitted for the Oscars," Thornton told the Daily News in a hurried interview via carphone. "I'm kind of late on the deal. I mean, everyone else had theirs for a month."

Just days before Monday's Academy Awards ceremony, Thornton relished the impact independent films are having on the industry.

"I guess a lot of people are getting tired waiting around for the studios to get with it," Thornton said in the story published Sunday. "People want to see regular movies again. They've been bombed out by these action movies. They want to see movies about people."

Thornton was nominated for best actor and best adapted screenplay for the story of a retarded man with homicidal tendencies.

From Nannygate to Broadway

NEW YORK (AP) — Wendy Wasserstein considers herself an amateur in the ways of politics-by-the-Potomac. So why bother writing "An American Daughter"?

"I thought I would write something that would make some people uncomfortable," Wasserstein said in Sunday's New York Times.

Her latest play, opening April 13 on Broadway, is based on the story of Zoe Baird. Remember her? Remember Nannygate?

Nominated for attorney general, Baird withdrew after it was learned she and her husband, like thousands of working couples, had hired illegal aliens as domestic help. To Wasserstein, it was an insult to all women.

"What intrigued me, I think, was the idea of women of my own generation who were successful, intelligent, coming to power and suddenly in the public arena," said Wasserstein, who won a Pulitzer Prize for "The Heidi Chronicles."

"I started to think about what they are allowed and what they are not allowed."

What's in a name?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack Ford, meet former Sens. Baker and Baker.

The host of NBC's "Meet the Press" was joined Sunday by newlywed pundits Howard Baker and Nancy Kassebaum Baker.

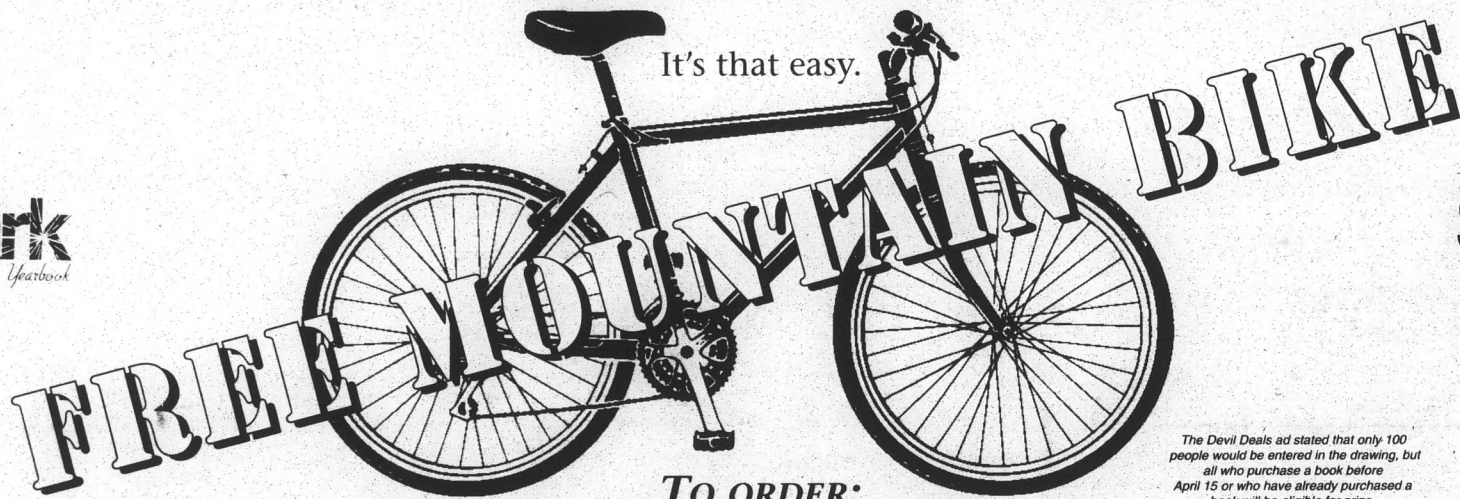

Since their December wedding, Kassebaum has let it be known she prefers to be known as "Mrs. Baker," which posed a problem for Ford.

"Senator Kassebaum," Ford said, "if you don't mind, I'm going to refer to you as Senator Kassebaum so that my director doesn't experience some sort of vertigo as he jumps back and forth between Senator Baker and Senator Baker."

Even the other Baker obliged, referring to his wife as Sen. Kassebaum during the show.

Kassebaum is from Kansas. Baker is a former GOP Senate majority leader from Tennessee who later became President Reagan's chief of staff.

Former President Bush to make parachute jump

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

YUMA, Ariz. — Former President George Bush is 72, but that won't stop him from leaping out of a plane and free falling in a parachute jump this week at Yuma Proving Ground.

Bush plans to make the jump Tuesday with members of the Golden Knights, the Army's precision parachuting team, said Jim McGrath, spokesman for Bush's office.

The event is not open to the public, but Bush will explain his reasons for wanting to make the jump to the media after the scheduled jump.

"He is looking forward to it very much," McGrath said late last week.

Bush will arrive Monday in Yuma for some training, McGrath said. His wife, Barbara, will accompany him to Yuma, but she will stay on the ground.

Bush will make one jump before he and Mrs. Bush return to Houston, McGrath said.

At Bush's request, two members of the Golden Knights will assist with training and participate in the jump, McGrath said.

The former president will jump by himself, but will have a jump master on each side of him holding onto a harness in order to ensure his safety, said Chris Needels, a former commander of the Golden Knights.

Bush likely will make the jump from 12,500 feet, the standard altitude at which the Golden Knights jump, Needels said. The time of the jump had not been scheduled as of Sunday afternoon.

Companies want to cut coupons, but consumers demand bargains

BY ALICE ANN LOVE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Supermarkets and food manufacturers agree coupons aren't worth the paper they're printed on, and shoppers are clipping fewer than ever.

But the American passion for bargains and gimmicks is thwarting companies that try to replace coupons with promises of lower prices.

"It's a hard sell to customers, because ... they like that tangible piece of paper," said Barry Scher, spokesman for the 175-store Giant Food grocery chain based in Washington.

Giant stopped putting store coupons in local newspapers and has argued for years at food industry conferences that better ways can be found to give shoppers a break. But the chain doesn't dare quit honoring manufacturer's coupons.

"I think a lot of customers would say, 'We're going to shop elsewhere,'" Scher said.

Continuing a five-year downward trend, fewer than 2 percent of the 286.5 billion manufacturer's coupons distributed last year were redeemed, according to a survey by Illinois-based coupon processor NCH Promotional Services.

Prodded by such studies, Procter & Gamble, makers of a wide array of household products including Jiff peanut butter, Tide laundry detergent and Crest toothpaste, experimentally pulled coupons from stores in three upstate New York cities last year.

"We look at couponing as a wasteful practice," said

P&G spokeswoman Linda Ulrey. "There's nothing from our point of view that is efficient about a practice that fails over 90 percent of the time."

The P&G test, in Buffalo, Rochester, and Syracuse, was accompanied by a more than 50 percent reduction in the company's coupon spending nationally in favor of "everyday low pricing."

Ulrey said P&G lowered the prices to retailers by $2 billion.

Although P&G won't disclose the results of its experiments, there is evidence that what consumers noticed most is not savings but the missing coupons.

New York shoppers have written angry letters to the editor, expressing doubts that their $20 to $40 weekly coupon savings would be matched by "everyday low prices" if other companies were to follow the P&G lead.

Ann Palmer, who oversees a Cooperative Extension program near Buffalo that shows people with low or fixed incomes how to save on grocery bills, put it this way: "I think that the P&G product is a good product, but we continue to encourage consumers to utilize coupons."

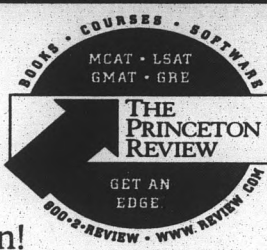

Despite waning redemption rates, industry surveys suggest more than half of shoppers can be tempted with coupons to switch brands.

Six of seven P&G competitors can confirm this. They saw increases as high as 48 percent in redemption of their own coupons in upstate New York last year, said CMS Inc. of Winston-Salem, N.C., a middleman that arranges retailers' compensation for manufacturer's coupons.

FBI investigators examine possible TWA missile theory

By PAT MILTON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SMITHTOWN, N.Y. — The FBI has zeroed in on one area where an attacker most likely would have had to be located to fire a shoulder-launched missile at TWA Flight 800, The Associated Press learned Sunday.

The missile theory has been deemed no more probable than the possibilities that a bomb or a mechanical malfunction caused the July 17 explosion off the coast of Long Island, in which 230 people died. But investigators have said it has been kept alive because of eyewitness accounts.

If a missile did hit the aircraft, it likely would have been fired from somewhere ahead of the plane as it flew along the Long Island coast on a flight to Paris, said an investigator who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"The conjecture is that if the plane was hit by a terrorist missile, the terrorist would have been east of the airplane when he fired," said the investigator. "He would have been in front of the flight path seeing the nose of the plane as opposed to the rear."

Investigators speculate that such an assailant would have had to have been in a boat on the Atlantic Ocean inside a five-mile-wide area east of the zone where the Boeing 747's wreckage splashed into the sea.

FBI scientists and experts helped by the Pentagon have examined the technical capabilities of missiles, in combination with the locations of the wreckage. They also have studied interviews with people who saw streaks of light in the sky before the explosion, and have pinpointed where each witness was standing.

About 200 people reported seeing something that night, but only about 10 to 20 of them saw anything that investigators categorized as significant.

James Kallstrom, the New York FBI chief who is heading the criminal investigation, has said in the past that despite eyewitness reports, there is no evidence a missile or bomb brought down the plane. He said the FBI would continue investigating until it is convinced the crash was not caused by a criminal act.

Investigators are serious enough about the possibility that they have given the crews of scallop trawlers, which are dredging up additional wreckage from the ocean floor, photographs of a missile launcher in case such a device was ditched at sea.

The possible missile launch area pinpointed by investigators would mean any culprit might have been showered by falling wreckage, the investigator said.

Outside that area, an assailant would have been too far away to hit the plane, the investigator said.

If a heat-seeking missile had been launched from a site behind the plane, it likely would have locked onto the hot jet exhaust and hit one of the plane's engines, according to the investigator.

However, Flight 800's four engines, although battered and damaged, were recognizable when recovered rather than blown to bits, indicating any missile would have had to have come from the east and hit the plane somewhere else.

Although it is possible for one person to fire such a missile alone, investigators suspect more people would have been involved, the investigator said.

U.S. troops ready for possible Zaire evacuation

By CANDICE HUGHES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo — The first wave of a U.S. military task force moved cautiously into central Africa on Sunday, preparing for a possible evacuation of Americans from Zaire.

At midday, a huge C-17 transport plane that flew through the night from Aviano, Italy, disgorged a contingent of soldiers, along with supplies and equipment, onto Brazzaville's blistering tarmac.

Brazzaville is just across the Zaire River from Kinshasa, the Zairian capital that some fear could erupt into violence as rebel troops advance through the country.

While the rebels are still far from Kinshasa, many fear a rampage by Zaire's poorly paid soldiers if President Mobutu Sese Seko dies or the rebels continue their advance. A coup is another possibility.

Kinshasa has suffered several outbreaks of rioting in the past few years, including one in which the French ambassador was killed.

About 500 American civilians are in Zaire, including about 320 in Kinshasa. There are also an estimated 7,000 Europeans in Kinshasa, including 3,000 Belgians and 1,000 French nationals.

The French have had a task force in Brazzaville for several weeks. A Belgian force was expected on Monday. A small advance team from Britain was also in place.

U.S. military planners, who say they will coordinate with the other countries, are anxious to dispel any notions that the force will become embroiled in Zaire's five-month civil war.

The size of the advance party was cut at the last minute to lower its profile. The first contingent consisted of 28 people. They joined an advance team of 20 to 30 that arrived last week. The force could eventually number several hundred.

"We're trying to keep our 'footprint' small so the deployment will be viewed as what it is: preparatory and not provocative," the commander of the task force, Maj. Gen. Edwin P. Smith, told The Associated Press en route to Brazzaville.

Getting foreigners out of Kinshasa, a sprawling city of about 8 million, could be tricky. The only way across the river is by water or air. The most likely scenario would be a helicopter airlift to the Brazzaville airport, where the U.S. force is setting up.

Smith said he expected to have about 200 American soldiers in Brazzaville within the next 48 hours and another 100 or so in Libreville, the capital of neighboring Gabon. Additional U.S. cargo planes were expected later Sunday.

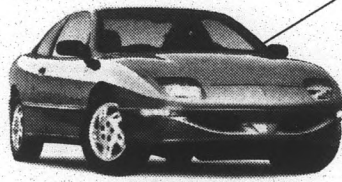

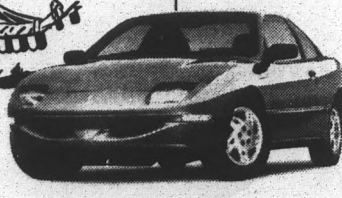

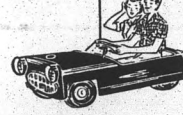

Zaire has been ruled for 31 years by Mobutu, who is 66 and stricken with prostate cancer. Widely seen as a corrupt dictator who has robbed his impoverished nation, he returned home Friday after a lengthy stay on the French Riviera.

The rebels, led by Laurent Kabila, have captured a wide swath of eastern Zaire. Mobutu has refused Kabila's demand for face-to-face talks.

The rebels took the eastern city of Kisangani earlier this week with little resistance from Mobutu's forces. His soldiers looted the city, Zaire's third-largest, and fled.

Congo has not objected to the presence of U.S. troops, welcoming anything that might discourage a spillover of Zairian refugees and looting soldiers.

Mobutu emerges from seclusion

BY BETH DUFF-BROWN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

KINSHASA, Zaire — "My name is Mobutu." With those words, a smiling but tired-looking President Mobutu Sese Seko emerged from seclusion Sunday, trying to prove to the world that he still rules Zaire.

Wearing his signature leopard-skin cap and waving a wooden cane, Mobutu walked slowly out of his residence on the Zaire River in his first public appearance since returning home Friday to face the rebellion that has been ravaging his country.

To the journalists who shouted questions, he replied firmly: "My name is Mobutu." Then, more softly, the ailing president said, "I didn't come back to busy myself with the interests of Mobutu, nor the fortune of Mobutu, as you write from time to time."

He pledged himself to "the highest interest of Zaire — that is to say, our unity and our territorial integrity."

Mobutu brushed off questions about whether he was willing to meet with rebel leader Laurent Kabila, whose forces have taken nearly a third of the country. Asked what his role would be in efforts to forge a national reconciliation, he said only: "You will know within the next 48 hours."

He appeared with South Africa's deputy president, Thabo Mbeki, who has played a key role in trying to bring about peace talks.

Mobutu's residence is on the Zaire River opposite Brazzaville, Congo, where the first wave of U.S. soldiers arrived Sunday to prepare for the possible evacuation of Americans from Zaire. About 500 American civilians live in Zaire, about 320 of them in Kinshasa.

The commander of the task force, Maj. Gen. Edwin P. Smith, said he expected to have about 200 American soldiers in Brazzaville within the next couple days and another 100 or so in Libreville, the capital of neighboring Gabon.

He stressed that he was not intervening in Zaire's troubles.

"We were not sent here to monitor the internal political situation of Zaire," he said.

The rebels trying to end Mobutu's 31-year dictatorship control a vast swath of eastern Zaire. Kabila said Saturday his forces are just 125 miles from Lubumbashi, the country's second-largest city.

The rebels have said they will stop fighting only after Mobutu holds direct talks with Kabila. Mobutu so far has refused.

Mobutu announced Thursday from France that he intended to call for a national council that would bring all sides together — "excluding no one" — to reunite the nation.

The president also said recently that general elections are crucial to Zaire's development.

Though Mobutu has reneged on promises of a transition to democracy for years, many observers believe he may finally step down, return to his hometown, and prepare for his burial.

Dressed in a royal-blue Mao jacket speckled with pink, Mobutu walked to the terrace of his pale blue residence at Camp Tshatschi, a military camp on the outskirts of the Zairian capital. Peacocks strutted about and Mobutu's grandchildren played with the family dogs.

Mobutu, 66 and wasting away from prostate cancer, moved slowly to a striped awning that shielded him from the midday sun.

He spoke only for a moment in his first appearance since returning from Europe, where he'd gone for treatment and convalescence. In contrast to his return in December, when he was greeted by tens of thousands of well-wishers hoping he would end the war and restore confidence in his government, Mobutu's strongmen ushered dignitaries and journalists out of the airport before he could be seen.

This spurred rumors that he was near death. When asked Sunday how his health was, he smiled and said, "As you see me."

Loud snoring: A joke that's serious business

BY DONNA ABU NASR
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARLINGTON, Va. — For months, newlywed Lauren Collins tried dealing diplomatically with her new husband's problem in bed. She would go to sleep before he did, or trundle off to another bedroom to spend the night.

Nothing worked. Finally, she told him he had to do something about his incredibly loud snoring.

Dr. Lewis Newberg, an ear, nose and throat specialist, was shocked. Like most people who suffer from sleep disorders, he didn't know he had a problem.

After surgery, Newberg says he has been cured of sleep apnea, the severest kind of snoring in which narrowed airways cause people to stop breathing briefly as they sleep.

It's a problem that Newberg took seriously enough to write a book about it urging people not to treat the condition lightly.

Newberg is among more than 300 ear, nose and throat specialists who attended a three-day conference on sleep disorders ranging from simple snoring to sleep apnea and how to treat them. The conference ended Sunday.

While many people ridicule snoring and view it not as a problem but as an oddity, doctors at the meeting stressed that snoring is a serious condition that affects 9 percent of adult men and 4 percent of adult women in the United States.

Both snoring and sleep apnea have been associated with development of hypertension, high blood pressure, increased risk of heart attack, stroke — even traffic accidents. They have ended marriages.

Dr. Samuel Mickelson, of Atlanta, Ga., said snoring and sleep apnea are the same disease, differing only in severity.

On the lower end of the spectrum are those who snore without experiencing other problems. At the other end are people who stop breathing and wake up gasping and choking several hundred times a night.

Besides the medical problems, snorers suffer socially. Doctors said some people worry so much about the problem they skip vacations with friends, fear new relationships or avoid business trips that require sharing a room.

UofA wins OT thriller, next stop Final Four

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

BIRMINGHAM — Arizona will meet North Carolina in the national semifinals next Saturday in Indianapolis, trying to advance to the championship game for the first time in school history.

Providence lost its best player, Austin Croshere, midway through the second half. He fouled out after scoring a tournament-low 12 points.

Arizona seemed to be in control when two Providence players received technical fouls for arguing calls. The Wildcats took advantage, scoring six points on one possession and five on another to build a 12-point lead.

The Friars still trailed 82-72 with 3 1/2 minutes to go and seemed to be finished. But with Croshere cheering them on from the bench, Providence made an amazing comeback.

It began after Mike Bibby hit two free throws to give Arizona an 85-78 lead with 1:15 left.

God Shammgod, who equaled Thomas with a team-high 23 points, made a free throw with 1:05 to go, missed the second and Derrick Brown got the rebound. He was fouled and hit two free throws to make it 85-81 with 1:02 left.

Arizona broke the press and drove up court, but Michael Dickerson missed a wide-open 8-footer. Ruben Garces hit a free throw at the other end for Providence after grabbing one of his 19 rebounds, cutting the deficit to 85-82 with 47.1 seconds to go.

Once again, the Friars came up with a defensive stop. Simon's shot was blocked by Garces and Providence drove quickly the other way, finding Thomas alone in the corner. The sophomore guard hit a 3-pointer to tie the game.

But Thomas made only 9-of-29 shots overall and the Friars couldn't recover after Brown fouled out in overtime. Jason Terry clinched the victory with a pull-up jumper in the lane to give Arizona a 94-90 lead with 1:03 left.

When the horn sounded, Terry clung to the rim while Simon broke a table on press row jumping into the crowd to celebrate with his family.

Arizona had six players in double figures, including Bibby with 17 and Bennett Davison with 14. All five Providence starters scored in double figures, with Brown scoring 18 and Garces 16.

The Friars also dominated the boards after halftime, finishing with a 50-45 edge after trailing in that category 19-12 in the first half.

Providence's God Shammgod (12) flies to the hoop against UofA's A.J. Bramlett (42) in the first half of the NCAA Southeast regional final Sunday, in Birmingham, Ala. The Wildcats defeated Providence 96-92 in overtime.

Tar Heels' late surge advances NC to Final Four

By JIM O'CONNELL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dean Smith is taking his imposing records, a long winning streak and a pretty good basketball team to the Final Four.

Top-seeded North Carolina beat sixth-seeded Louisville 97-74 Sunday to win the East Regional and give the Tar Heels their 16th straight victory and 13th Final Four berth.

Eleven of those have been under Smith, who became college basketball's winningest coach last weekend and now has 879 career victories.

North Carolina (28-6) has been to the Final Four in each of the odd-numbered years in the '90s, with 1993 being Smith's second national championship.

The Tar Heels will play the winner of the Southeast Regional championship game between Arizona and Providence next Saturday in Indianapolis.

Smith is also the winningest coach in the history of the NCAA tournament and win No. 65 seemed assured by half-time as the Tar Heels took a 54-33 lead. North Carolina shot 63 percent from the field in the first half, and held the Cardinals (26-9) without a field goal over the final five minutes, outscoring them 19-6.

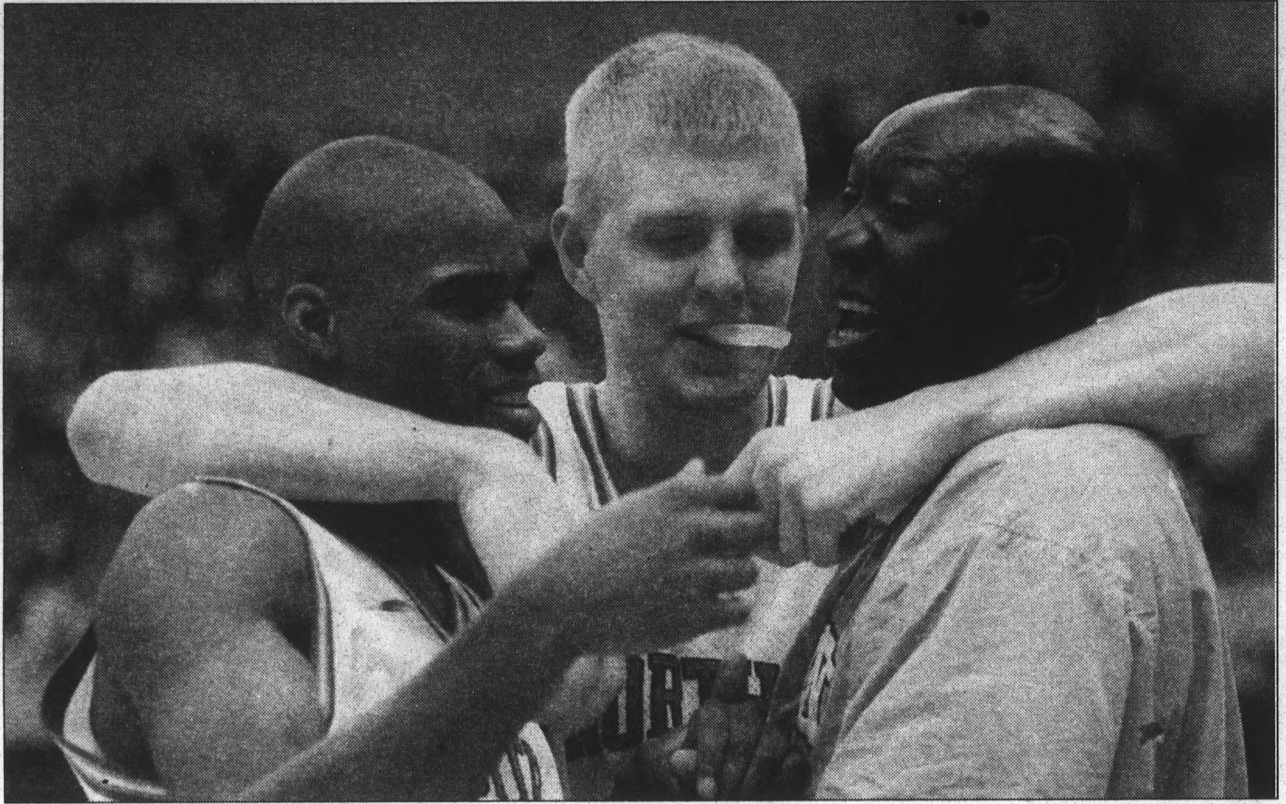

But Louisville, which trailed at halftime in all four of its NCAA tournament games, had other ideas. The Cardinals started the second half with a 19-5 run and used a 3-point barrage to get within 69-66 with 8:19 to play. However, they went into another long scoring drought, and a 12-0 run over the next 4:45 increased North Carolina's lead to 81-66.

"That win came over a courageous, gutsy team that was down by 21 points and came back," Smith said. "You also have to hand it to our players for the way they responded and played great over the last seven minutes. You have to admire that for a team that's been like that all year."

North Carolina lost its first three Atlantic Coast Conference games this season for the first time ever. The Tar Heels were being written off by many, but they haven't lost since Jan. 29.

"This was a great feeling to cut down those nets after the way we started the ACC season," North Carolina forward Antawn Jamison said. "We came together as a team and put all our differences aside. It shows how hard we worked and that hard work pays off."

Louisville senior guard DeJuan Wheat, who sprained his left ankle in the regional semifinal victory over Texas and was considered doubtful for Sunday's game, started but was limited in what he could do.

Stephan Savoia/Associated Press

North Carolina players Antawn Jamison, left, Serge Zwikker, center, and Makhtar Ndiaye celebrate their 97-74 win over Louisville at the Carrier Dome in Syracuse, N.Y., Sunday.

The Cardinals' leading scorer and best ballhandler had one 3-pointer in five attempts in the first half and two of the team's 11 turnovers. He finished with six points on 2-for-11 shooting, and had eight assists in a gutsy 32 minutes.

"I just wanted to play," Wheat said. "If we were going to lose I wanted to be out on the court."

Smith said Wheat received no special treatment from the Tar Heels.

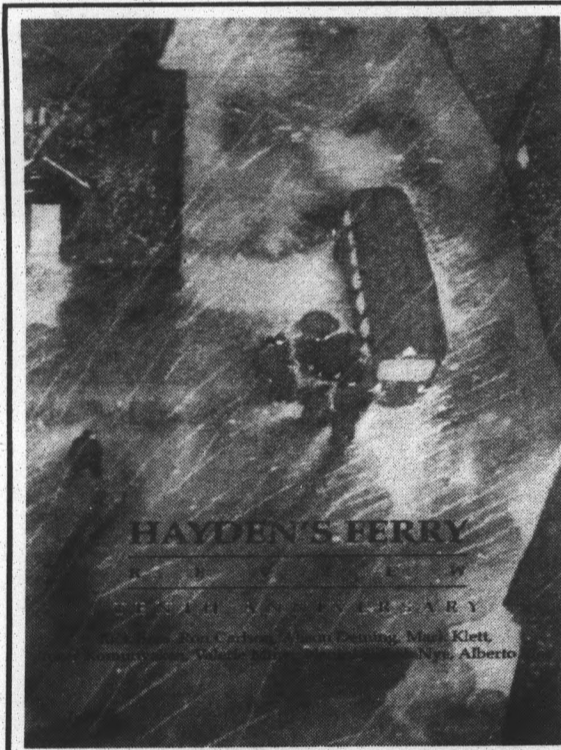

"We played Wheat as if he were healthy," Smith said. "We really covered him."

Cardinals coach Denny Crum, like Smith a Hall of Famer and with 613 victories of his own, was trying to get back to the Final Four for the first time since 1986, the year he won the second of his two national championships. Crum's 42 NCAA tournament wins are behind only Smith and UCLA's John Wooden who had 47. It was Crum's first loss in seven regional final games.

"Even without DeJuan at full strength we didn't play bad," Crum said. "They just played very well."

Shammond Williams, who was selected the regional's most outstanding player, led North Carolina with 22 points, while Vince Carter had 18 and Jamison 15. Serge Zwikker and Ed Cota each had 13 points for the Tar Heels, and Ademola Okulaja had 11.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by Frances Drake

Monday, March 24, 1997

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You'll welcome the day's rapport with a partner, but a relative may seem difficult. More than one estimate is needed about a home repair. Care is also urged in real estate dealings.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Although judgment is good, it could prove difficult to bring a job project to completion at present. Not everyone you deal with is straightforward. Be sure you know whom to trust and whom to avoid.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Minor problems in connection with children or another family member could occur, but in business you're on the road to success. Capitalize on the day's opportunities. Evening hours stress rest and relaxation.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Family members could get on each other's nerves, but relaxation comes through outside activities. Travel, romance and recreation are pleasantly accented.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) There's a problem you've been wrestling with recently, but chances are you won't come up with answers. A fortunate career or financial opportunity comes your way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You're not quite ready to confront a friend about a mutual concern. You could be invited to someplace special later in the day. It's a fortunate time for leisure interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) It's a quiet time, but one in which you're making important plans for your future. Consider your investment needs and where you want to be as far as your career goes in the near future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You'll be spending more time with your friends in the coming weeks. You could decide to participate more in a group activity you'd formerly shunned. Partnership interests are accented after dark.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) An early start puts you a step ahead of the competition. Career interests should prosper. Social life is favored if you don't go hog wild with spending.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) In your optimism, be careful that you don't overlook some important details. Feelings are happily reciprocated in romance. Make plans to spend extra time with each other.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) A social contact is helpful to you in business. An assignment comes your way that you'll truly enjoy. The evening finds you making some positive changes at home.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Someone asks you out on a date. You'll be pleased with developments in a child's life. Keeping on top of current assignments will be difficult if you let yourself be distracted.

YOU BORN TODAY are usually a good moneymaker, but you're happiest in an occupation that accents more than just material gain. You work well with groups but are at your best when you can do your own thing. Whatever you do, it must be something that is related to your philosophy of life and your ideals. You have a good understanding of human nature and could be drawn to a writing career. You are also attracted to a career in the arts.
