Frat member to file charges against ΦΔΤ

BY DEANNA DARR
STATE PRESS

A former ASU fraternity member claims he was attacked in a Tempe nightclub by 12 members of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity in retribution for his involvement in having the group suspended from campus.

David Stowe said he was attacked three separate times in the early morning hours of March 14, at Club Eclipse, 919 E. Apache Blvd.

Phi Delta Theta spokesman Alex Edelstein said the fraternity has no knowledge of the incident.

Stowe said he believes the attack was in retaliation for the role he played in getting the fraternity kicked off campus during the 1995-96 academic year. At that time, he was a member of the fraternity, but decided to leave the organization after a friend was singled out to take the blame for hazing incidents.

Edelstein said Stowe and several others were dismissed from the fraternity by the alumni because of failure to meet the minimum grade point average, among other charges.

It is not a practice of the fraternity to go after former members, and only 10 to 20 percent of the current fraternity enrollment ever knew Stowe, Edelstein said.

"We've moved on," he said "It's a totally different atmosphere."

Stowe said after he and several other members left the fraternity, they started receiving threatening phone calls. Soon after, the former members went to University officials with evidence of hazing practices within the fraternity.

Phi Delta Theta was found guilty and suspended from campus. The fraternity was reinstated in fall 1996.

Stowe said he was at Club Eclipse March 14 with several friends when he recognized three members

Gov. signs $5.2 billion budget

BY VIVI STENBERG
STATE PRESS

Gov. Fife Symington signed a $5.2 billion state budget Thursday that ASU President Lattie Coor called very pleasing for the University.

In the state operating budget, ASU received an increase of $14.7 million from last year's budget. However, the allotment fell short of the $20.3 million increase requested by the Arizona Board of Regents.

The three state universities received $681 million, of which $270 million was earmarked for ASU.

"I'm pleased with the strength of the operating budget, and I'm pleased with the strength of the salary pool — that is part of the two-year pay increase plan," Coor said.

All together, $19.9 million was granted to the universities to increase salaries. Of that amount, $8.3 million will be awarded to faculty and other employees at the universities in a merit-based plan. The increase will be effective Jan. 1.

There will also be an across-the-board raise of 2.5 percent for all state employees.

ASU Provost Milton Glick said he was concerned about a footnote to the merit raises that required ASU faculty to teach six credit hours or more per week in order to receive the salary increase.

"We need to find a way to work through this," he said.

Coor said the budget increase will be used to accommodate enrollment growth at ASU.

Money that was requested, but not appropriated, was intended to advance the "undergraduate experience" by, among other things, reducing the number of students per classroom.

"We have to step back and see what we can do with the money we are given," Coor said.

Tempe rental codes to face voters

BY JENNIFER NETHERBY
STATE PRESS

Tempe's recently-approved rental code ordinance, supposed to take affect March 29, is now on hold until a public vote.

Citizens for Fair Housing, a coalition of the Arizona Multihousing Association, Arizona Association of Realtors and other housing groups, turned in 6,000 signatures to the city clerk's office Wednesday to put the issue to a vote in a referendum election. Only 715 valid signatures are needed to get the issue put on the ballot.

City Clerk Helen Fowler said the clerk's office has 15 days to verify the signatures. After that, the secretary of state's office has ten days to verify them.

The exact election date will be decided by the City Council as early as Sept. 9, Fowler said.

The Council originally passed the rental code ordinance Feb. 27 in a 6 to 1 vote. The ordinance aims to clean up "slum" rental property by providing minimum building code standards.

Maryanne Corder, Tempe neighborhood program administrator, said the codes were developed through talks with neighborhood groups, tenants and the AMA.

Corder said many view the changes as more sweeping than they really are, and rising rental rates are also a concern.

Wayne Kaplan, an Arizona Multihousing Association spokesman, said if the signatures are verified, the coalition will focus on trying to get a legislative committee to study the issue of slum housing statewide.

Kaplan said he would like to see a uniform code covering both rentals and non-rentals.

"Slum property is not just rental property," he said.

Ken Volk, of the Arizona Tenants Association, said the legislative study session is unnecessary because the city studied the issue with the various groups involved.

"It's a red herring," he said. "It's just a way to escape the issue."

Volk called the referendum drive "hypocritical and intrusive" and said the backers of the drive don't live in Arizona.

"There were and are slum conditions in this community and this code speaks to them," he said.

Kaplan said the coalition is not opposed to cleaning up slum property, but rather the way the current rental code is written.

TODAY

Campus clubs and organizations may submit written entries to the State Press in the basement of the Matthews Center. Requests will not be taken over the phone or via fax.

Deadline for requests is noon the day before publication and entries will not be accepted more than three working days before publication. Only one entry per organization per day is permitted.

Entries must contain the full name of the club or organization, a description of the event, date, time and the full address of the location. All requests are subject to editing for content, space and clarity. Incomplete or illegible entries will be discarded.

The Today Section is a daily calendar of events printed as a service to the ASU community. Requests are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis and are printed as space permits.

of the group of 12 people. While on the dance floor, Stowe said five members of the fraternity approached and he was hit once in the head.

Amy Anstead, a senior biochemistry major, was with Stowe at the time of the incident. She said Stowe attempted to ignore the unknown man who approached him, and did not retaliate after he was hit.

Stowe said he then went upstairs with another friend where a group of 10 people, whom he believed to be intoxicated, confronted him. He claims the group told him he should not have exposed the hazing and was going to pay for his actions. Stowe claimed he was hit in both the jaw and cheek.

He was assaulted a third time when he moved back to the dance floor, Stowe said.

Stowe added that he believes the fraternity is instructing its new members to confront him since he didn't recognize most of those who attacked him.

After this incident, Stowe said he left the club and later filed an incident report with the Tempe police.

Sgt. Toby Dyas, Tempe police spokesman, said that at the time, Stowe just wanted to document the incident, and not press charges.

But now Stowe said he plans on pressing charges against those who attacked him and does not plan to back down.

Stowe said he fears the harassment will continue if he does not take any action.

"It's never going to stop," he said.

David McCutcheon, another former member who testified against the fraternity, said the group is continuing a pattern of behavior.

"They think that after everything we went through, they still got the house back," he said. "They think they're indestructible."

nor's office during the budget's drafting, said the governor and legislators did a "fantastic job."

Davis said a willingness to compromise was one of the reasons for "smooth" budget discussions. Compared to the previous year's cleavage between the governor's office and the university system, this budget process has been commended by both sides.

"The Legislature and I have achieved these goals on behalf of the people of Arizona," Symington said "It has been a process of cooperation and compromise."

In the original budget proposal from the governor's office in January, a recommendation was made to have ABOR handle the proposed increase. That provision was deleted in the final version, which was approved by the Legislature Wednesday night and signed by the governor Thursday.

The provost said he was content with legislators and the universities handling the money as current policy requires.

"We took a neutral stand on this issue," Glick said.

The state budget which is the first to exceed $5 billion in Arizona history, also included a $110 million cut in individual income taxes.

"Hard-earned money will remain in the pockets of families — out of hands of the government," Symington said.

San Diego and Los Angeles County Medical Examiner personnel place some of the 39 victims of an apparent mass suicide onto a truck for transport to the morgue Thursday in Rancho Santa Fe, Calif.

Astral cult leaves 39 lifeless 'containers'

By Associated Press

RANCHO SANTA FE, Calif. — Thirty-nine members of a cult of computer programmers systematically killed themselves by washing down drugs with vodka, their suitcases packed for what they thought was a rendezvous with a UFO trailing the Hale-Bopp comet.

"It seemed to be a group decision," Dr. Brian Blackbourne, the San Diego County medical examiner. "It was very planned, sort of immaculately carried out."

The victims included 21 women and 18 men, Blackbourne said, with most carrying identification packets in their shirt pockets, along with little pieces of paper containing a suicide recipe: take pudding or apple sauce and mix it with phenobarbital, drink it down with alcohol, lay back and relax.

The victims apparently died in separate groups: 15 the first day, 15 the second and the remaining nine the third day.

Blackbourne said the second group cleaned up after the first, the third after the second. The last two alive removed plastic bags from the last seven bodies and then killed themselves.

"We believe they were the last ones and they did have plastic bags over their heads," Blackbourne said.

The dead ranged in age from 20 to 72, and because each had closely cropped hair, it was difficult initially to determine their sex.

One victim was Canadian, two were black, a few were Hispanic and the rest were white, he said. Authorities withheld IDs until family members were notified.

Each victim had a packed suitcase at the foot of their bed or cot, and each had a $5 bill and quarters in their pockets, Blackbourne said.

Police showed a videotape taken from inside the mansion showing bodies all dressed in black — identical sneakers, long-sleeve shirts and pants — lying on neatly made bunk beds.

All had a purple shroud covering their upper bodies, some had eyeglasses folded at their sides. Computer equipment filled the nine-bedroom house.

The group made money with a web design firm called Higher Source and also proselytized through a web site called Heaven's Gate, on which they had put out a statement saying the comet's appearance meant their time had come.

"Hale-Bopp's approach is the 'marker' we've been waiting for," says the statement on the World Wide Web site. "We are happily prepared to leave 'this world.'"

A Beverly Hills businessman who hired a former cult member said Thursday that another member told him several months ago that a space ship following the comet was coming to pick them up.

"They did not say they were going to commit suicide, but they did indicate to me that they would be leaving the planet," Nick Matzorkis said.

Matzorkis, president of Interact Entertainment Group, said an employee he identified only as Rio who used to belong to the cult had received a package late Tuesday with a farewell letter and two videos.

The letter said that by the time Rio read it, his friends would have committed suicide or, in their words, "left their containers," Matzorkis said.

After opening the package Wednesday, Matzorkis and Rio drove down from Los Angeles to the mansion, where they discovered the bodies and called police.

Russians workers march for overdue paychecks

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — In a nationwide strike with strong communist overtones, nearly 2 million workers marched Thursday in cities across Russia to demand overdue paychecks.

Turnout fell far short of organizers' predictions of 17 million and some marchers openly questioned whether the protest would do any good. But government leaders said they were sympathetic to the workers' demands and repeated promises to begin paying them soon.

From St. Petersburg in the west to Vladivostok in the east, workers and retirees marched behind red banners reminiscent of the Soviet era and waved signs condemning President Boris Yeltsin and his top advisers.

"Yeltsin's gang should be tried!" thousands of protesters chanted in a demonstration just off Red Square in Moscow. Some shrieked "Judas!" at the mention of the president's name.

Millions of Russian workers have gone unpaid for months as the nation has seemingly stalled in its transition from a Soviet-style command economy to one based on the free market. While many Russians have done well in the new capitalist system, many more have been left behind.

Theirs were the faces at Thursday's demonstrations: retirees who haven't received their pensions, workers who have been unable or unwilling to adapt to the new economy.

"Our patience has blown up," said Ivan Ivanov, 60, a retired shipyard worker in the Far Eastern port of Vladivostok who hasn't received his pension in three months.

Those who have been surviving without pay have done so for the most part by raising their own food, by not having to pay rent, and by working outside jobs.

At the end of the day, Russia's Interior Ministry said about 1.8 million people had taken part in rallies in nearly 1,300 cities nationwide.

James Earl Ray tells King's son he didn't shoot his father

By KARIN MILLER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A gaunt and frail James Earl Ray looked the son of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. in the eyes Thursday and said: "I had nothing to do with shooting your father."

Dexter King responded, "I believe you."

The extraordinary meeting in a state prison hospital was the first ever between the two men and also marked the first time the King family has publicly backed Ray's claim of innocence.

Ray, 69, was brought to the meeting room in a wheelchair, and at times mumbled and rambled. King, 36, sat just three feet away, listening patiently and speaking softly to a man dying of liver disease.

"My family believes you," said King, who was 7 when his father was assassinated in 1968. "We are going to do everything in our power to try and make sure that justice will prevail."

The family had already joined the call for a trial for Ray, saying that's the only way they'll know the truth about King's death.

King was shot as he stood on a hotel balcony in Memphis, where he had arrived to help direct a sanitation workers' strike. Ray pleaded guilty to the slaying a year later and was sentenced to 99 years in prison, avoiding a possible death sentence. He recanted a few days later and has been proclaiming his innocence ever since.

Ray got up from his wheelchair to shake hands for the meeting before a roomful of reporters. The moment was made more eerie by King's striking resemblance to his late father.

After 25 minutes, the reporters then were ushered out and the two continued to talk privately.

"There's something about looking another person in the eyes and asking them a question, spiritually speaking, to get a feel first hand," King said.

The question: "Did you kill my father?" Ray's answer:

"No, no, I didn't. No."

Ray said the case has been clouded over the years with misinformation and "the only thing that should be relevant is the facts of the case."

"Maybe you can come to conclusions. I think it could be done today," he said. "I don't think it could be done 30 years ago."

King told reporters his family had always felt the truth of the civil rights leader's assassination was being suppressed, but didn't want to deal with it.

It was Ray's deteriorating health and the urging of the inmate's family that persuaded King to look into the evidence collected by Ray's attorney.

Ray contends the rifle found at the murder scene with his fingerprints on it was put there by conspirators trying to frame him. Ray said he brought the rifle to Memphis on instructions from a shadowy gun runner he knew only as Raoul. Authorities have never established Raoul existed.

OPINION

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

BRAVO — To Gov. Fife Symington's signing of the budget. It provides almost a $15 million increase in funding to ASU alone. The budget also contains a little money for state employee raises. It's about time; too bad it's not a lot more.

BRAVO — To former President George Bush for bailing out of a plane 12,500 feet over Yuma. The 72-year-old daredevil made the successful leap after promising to himself more than 50 years ago to jump out of a plane for fun. If only he were that daring when he was running the country.

BOO — To nit-wit state Sen. John Huppenthal, R-Chandler, for dialing 911 to let his fellow legislators know he was running a bit behind schedule. Huppenthal follows in the footsteps of Scottsdale's perennially lost Mayor Sam Campana, who called 911 several times to ask directions to various venues. If John Q. Public were to commit the same outrageous offense, he would likely face harsher punishment than either politico has suffered.

BRAVO — To ASU officials for streamlining the University into a mean, lean teaching machine. Despite a seemingly inaccurate report released by the Arizona Auditor General's Office claiming ASU was fiscally overweight, officials have managed to scale back a few positions to comply with a request to decrease the budget.

BOO — To the Arizona Board of Regents for proposing to allow "community representatives" in on appeals hearings for suspended faculty members. There is absolutely no reason campus outsiders should be allowed to participate in issues as severe as faculty suspensions. Maybe we should allow the same "community representatives" a part in determining the agenda of ABOR.

BRAVO — To the folks over at the Safety Escort Service for picking up two new carts and a new location on the south side of campus. The carts and location will enable SES volunteers to cut their response times almost in half. Now maybe even more people will take advantage of the personal safety service.

BOO — To Tempe city officials for dragging their feet on proposals to curb the incessant jet noise coming from the skies. We can appreciate the fact that there is an airport close to ASU, but exceedingly loud planes should be kept over the Salt River bottom.

CHEERS — To Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Nu for agreeing to go substance free, at least at their houses. Everybody likes a good party, but some of those down on Fraternity Row can get a bit raucous for even the die-hard partier.

Misguided blame should be aimed toward true bombing perpetrators

One of the hardest things to justify in a news column is why an attack on our government is undeserved. Today, however, I find myself in the unenviable position of doing just that. This comes on the heels of the announcement that attorneys filed "intent to sue" papers against federal government agencies on behalf of 34 victims in the bombing of the Oklahoma City federal building.

These papers set the stage for a multi-million dollar lawsuit against the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for its alleged negligence in protecting people in and around the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City. Connecticut attorney Richard Bieder contends that the government was on a heightened state of alert for right wing demonstrations on April 19, 1995 because it was the anniversary of the government's highly criticized raid on the Branch Davidian compound in Waco, Texas. Bieder believes that, "knowing what the government knew, it should have done more to protect citizens in and around the Murrah building."

The attorney contends that U.S. marshals and other personnel could and should have set up barriers around the Murrah building "to blockade traffic coming up as close as that Ryder truck came up that morning." Bieder admits there is no indication the government knew of a specific threat to the building, or that it warned some people and not others.

This argument is to be expected from an attorney, who is paid to represent the grievance of a client, and therefore comes up with as credible a legal attack as is possible. But truly shocking are some of the words from one of the plaintiffs in the case, Edye Smith, who lost two children in the blast.

She told CNN "the government knew there was going to be danger and they should have warned people ... I'm more angry at the government than I am at Tim McVeigh. McVeigh was going to do what he did regardless. He was out to kill people ... I am angry — very angry."

Unfortunately, her anger is misdirected. There was no evidence of a specific threat to the Murrah building. The task of trying to ensure safety for all government buildings nationwide would have been one of Herculean proportion.

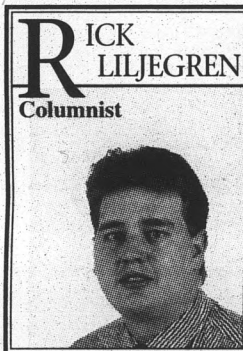

The kind of people who blew up this building were not going to stop because of some temporary measure by the government. Either they would have found some way around the barricades, or they would have briefly postponed the event. It would not have stopped the explosion because they could not complete their task on the Waco anniversary. As Smith pointed out, McVeigh was going to do what he did, "regardless."

The sad truth is, no matter how good your security is, there is always a way to circumvent it. Look at the Middle East. Look at Atlanta during the Olympics. None of us are ever as safe as we think we are. We put a lot of trust in our fellow human beings, and for the most part it works out. But some things are beyond realistic control, even for our government. Like what happened in Oklahoma.

I feel sorrow for the 168 people killed that day, as well as for the over 500 who were injured. I feel worse for those, like Edye Smith, who lost people in the blast and now must pick up the pieces and move on. But the government is not to blame for this, and no multi-million dollar lawsuit will bring back her two children.

There is a natural desire in loss to attach blame, to look for a way to inflict back some of the pain received by playing the "if only ..." game. This is the attempt to achieve closure by rationalizing negligence where it is not. This loss is not rational. The only true sense of closure here will come not by placing blame on the government, but by putting it squarely where it belongs — on the shoulders of the sick bastards who made that bomb and set it off.

Well, pilgrim, there's room for many movie opinions

I wasn't surprised when a call came from a friend we call Little Eddie the Boots. Or that he sounded miffed when he asked: "You know this bozo Garry Wills?"

I quickly cut in. Yes, I know him and he's not a bozo. He's a distinguished author, journalist, scholar and a good guy — for a professor.

Little Eddie the Boots snorted. "Yeah? Well, he don't know squat about westerns. You see the knock he put on Shane?"

Yes, I have. And I understand why it aroused strong feelings in Little Eddie the Boots.

Little Eddie belongs to a loose-knit club known as the Great Westerns Gang.

It was formed, sort of, a few years ago when I did a column on what I considered the 10 greatest westerns of all time.

That was when I first heard from Little Eddie the Boots and others who had strong opinions on the subject. Since then, we have kept in touch, especially when a new western comes out.

He is known as Little Eddie the Boots because (1) he is a little guy and (2) on his little feet, he wears a pair of little cowboy boots.

His all-time western hero is Alan Ladd, a little guy who played Shane in the great western of that name.

And he was offended by a Chicago Tribune story about Wills and his most recent book, John Wayne's America.

In the interview, Wills provided a list of his top 10 westerns. Not only did Wills omit Shane, but worse, he made a disparaging remark about it.

"This Wills, is he a big guy?" asked Little Eddie. Pretty big.

"So I guess he looks down on little guys, huh?"

No. While he might be guilty of odd taste in westerns, he can't be accused of being insensitive to those who are minimally vertical.

"I'll take your word," said Little Eddie, "but you can't let that thing go in the paper without calling him out. The guy is a professor, so there are gullible young people who might believe his list. You can't let him get away with polluting their minds. The least you can do is print our list so they are guided down the right trail."

Maybe we do have such an obligation. I first became aware of that when a movie called Pale Rider, starring Clint Eastwood, came out. Members of the Great Western Gang were outraged.

It was obvious that Pale Rider was a brazen rip-off of Shane. The plot, almost scene by scene, was nothing but a remake.

At the urging of my fellow club members, I asked the city's — maybe the nation's — two best known film critics why they hadn't blasted the makers of Pale Rider for the blatant theft.

I got blank stares. Through pitiless interrogation, I learned that neither of these film scholars had ever seen Shane. The critics were lucky that a nice guy such as me, rather than someone from the National Enquirer, had uncovered this potential scandal.

Anyway, I'll repeat Wills' 10 great westerns and the list chosen by the club.

Wills: The Searchers, Red River, The Big Trail, Rio Grande, Stagecoach, Fort Apache, She Wore a Yellow Ribbon, Pursued, The Gunfighter and The Iron Horse.

Note that the first seven are John Wayne movies, which is OK. The problem is, they aren't all great, and they don't include two of Wayne's very best.

Also note that the last movie, The Iron Horse, is almost unknown because it was made in 1924. Come now, Wills, stop flaunting your history professorship.

Now for our list, which is in no special order because we gave up trying to rank any single western as the greatest: The Magnificent Seven, True Grit, The Wild Bunch, High Noon, The Shootist, Stagecoach, Unforgiven, Viva Zapata!, The Searchers and Shane.

Some might argue that Viva Zapata! was not a true western, since it was the story of the Mexican patriot-revolutionary. But Emiliano (Marlon Brando) and his followers wore big hats, rode horses, shot it out with bad guys and treated women like weak and dumb creatures, so what else does it need?

Others will sniff that The Magnificent Seven was a western remake of the great Japanese movie Seven Samurai. Sure, it admitted that in the credits. But so what? If the Japanese producer had a choice, he would surely have made a western rather than a movie in which the heroes were stumpy, bowlegged guys who wore bathrobes and couldn't speak English.

Some might be surprised that Red River was omitted, since it usually makes the critics' great westerns lists. Sorry, but we decided that the movie's many fine points were bogged down by the female lead, Joanne Dru. I believe, who was so clinging, manipulative, gooey and intrusive that she should have been tossed to the Indians. And by the ridiculous notion that delicate Montgomery Clift would get in a knock-down fist fight with the Duke and hold his own. The twit couldn't have arm-wrestled Dru.

The club also abandoned our Rule of 12, which outlawed any western that couldn't be seen by a 12-year-old boy. This would have ruled out Unforgiven and The Wild Bunch, because of their lewd women.

As one of our liberal members said: "If a lad is old enough to score drugs and do drive-by shootings, he's old enough to see a cowboy's kind of gal."

It's a changing world.

Jumpin' George!

Antic will finally seal Bush in public mind

I can just see it now, instead of those four social rejects and Jackie

Chan hocking Mountain Dew, they have a new, well-mannered spokesman: 72-year-old, CIA-leading, "Voodoo Economics"-coining, Baghdad-bombing, sky-diving, Ex-President George Herbert Walker Bush.

This man continues to amaze me, now that he is no longer president and is in the private sector. First, he was on Saturday Night Live making fun of the impersonation they did of him for years, then he was doing commercials for Comedy Central, "What kind of man is named Dana anyway?", and now he is jumping out of airplanes.

It is amazing how he is breaking the status quo. Why couldn't he have just retired like a normal president by playing golf and slowly going senile until he has completely changed all his political views?

Another reason why I think I am so interested in this story is because, for once, I can finally look at George Bush and say he did something. I cannot remember one thing that came out of his administration, except maybe Desert Storm.

Now, finally, when our children ask us what President Bush did, we can confidently answer them, "He jumped out of an airplane." That is why I think we are so amazed at Pres. Clinton; good or bad, we can all look at him and see that he can actually do something: play the saxophone.

The scary thing is, he liked the jumping experience. This puts Bush in a unique position. He could become the first former president ever to become "Addicted to Adrenaline." Skydiving gave him a taste of "the high," and now he will do anything to get that adrenaline rush back.

What is next? Bungee jumping? Cliff diving? Hang-gliding? Low speed police chases in a white Ford Bronco? He is finally bridging that "generation gap" that plagued him so in the 1992 presidential elections.

He has finally reached out and done something, and now he can relate to the kids. He could easily take this too far though; if he starts growing a marijuana plant in his closet, he has officially crossed the line.

When reporters asked Bush why he decided to skydive, Bush said it was because in World War II, he had to bail out of his Navy fighter and he made a pact that someday he would parachute for the fun of it. I can just picture

Bush's skydiving adventure right now.

He gets to the door and right before he jumps, he yells out, "This is for Johnny and all the other boys who didn't make it back from the South Pacific." He jumped for all the veterans, he jumped for America, he jumped as the former leader of the Free World. I have never been so proud of a former president ever before.

Now that Bush has reached out to all Americans young and old, it is too bad he is about five years too late. He has created an environment in which Democrats and Republicans can finally come together and say that former President George Bush finally did something worth remembering. Ross Eide is a senior studying marketing.

I can finally look at George Bush and say he did something. ... Now, finally, when our children ask us what President Bush did, we can confidently answer them, 'He jumped out of an airplane.'

Life lessons makes a seasoned VP

I am writing in regards to the article about Adrian Fontes, published in the March 26 issue. The State Press reported that Fontes has been arrested twice in the past eight years.

This goes to show the students that he is a man who has made mistakes and who has learned from those mistakes. The State Press also states that Fontes joined the military and then returned to ASU after a four-year hitch. This just goes to show you that even with his mistakes, he still knows how to take responsibility for his actions.

I believe Fontes did a lot of growing up while in the military. The State Press failed to tell its readers about the work Fontes does with the MUAB. I think the biggest thing the paper missed about Fontes was that he is definitely a different candidate. At least he has experienced life. The State Press makes the other 13 candidates look like Mr. Clean. Fontes is no perfect angel, but at least he can use the experiences that he has learned along the way.

Candidate declares platform and rises above the 'popularity contest'

I've been reading about Adrian Fontes in the State Press. After seeing the editorial on March 25 about the ugly and childish signs promoting other candidates, I noticed something interesting: there wasn't a single Fontes sign anywhere. I found him and asked him why he wasn't campaigning. He said that he was campaigning, but refused to put up signs that clutter the campus and say nothing of substance. I was impressed!

He handed me a flyer. This was great. On a small slip of paper I knew who he was, what he has done, and more important to me, what he is going to do in the future. My advice to students who don't know or don't care about the popularity contest is to get informed and cast a vote.

Sign vandals accomplish little more than achieving pettiness

I spoke to my friend, Rick Bosco, campus affairs vice presidential candidate, on March 26. He informed me that 11 of his campaign signs were stolen. I later learned that many other candidates such as Damon Pace, Autumn Ness and others had their signs vandalized or stolen.

I am angered and outraged at the fraction of the student body who insists upon destroying signs put up by our candidates. These signs took much time, expense and energy by the part of our fellow students running for office.

Our candidates are asking the student body to become involved and vote for them. You do not have to vote or participate in ASASU, but I am asking you to respect others' rights to be involved and participate. For many people, this election is very important. By vandalizing, stealing or spray painting vulgarities on another person's property, you are only showing disrespect and how childish you can be.

This is an institute of higher learning and I am ashamed of the people who perpetrated these actions and who could act in such a juvenile manner. I hope you read this and in the future think twice before you vandalize or steal someone else's property.

Workshop develops voices for change among diverse groups

BY SARA BUSH
STATE PRESS

After three semesters of initiating conversation between ASU students of diverse backgrounds, the Voices of Discovery program is taking a second step.

The program gathers members of different groups — such as males and females, or black and white students — together for a six-week conversational seminar. Since it began last spring, more than 600 students have participated. After three seemingly successful semesters, Voices of Discovery directors Jesus Trevino and Christine Geranios said it was time to move ahead in building campus inter-group dialogue.

At the Voices of Discovery closing ceremony on Wednesday, Kris Ewing, a program coordinator for Student Life, announced the establishment of "Becoming an Ally," a new two-session workshop in April. Ewing is organizing the program for Voices of Discovery graduates.

"This will be a kind of phase two for Voices of Discovery," Ewing said. "Now that students have gone through this first experience, some of them are wondering, 'What do I do now?' The workshop exercises will begin building skills for students to learn to become change agents and how to interrupt oppression."

Ewing said Student Life will draw from the Voices of Discovery graduate pool because those students have already received some training on diversity issues.

"The students need to understand themselves before they can start to conceptualize breaking down stereotypes other people have," Ewing said.

The ASU Voices of Discovery is one of only two such programs in the United States. It was modeled after the program at Michigan State University, said Trevino, the assistant dean of student life for cultural diversity.

Voices of Discovery has grown since its development last year. This year, student life sponsored 12 groups for the weekly seminar. The groups combine students of different ethnic and religious backgrounds as well as sexual orientations and genders.

"We will keep trying out different groups," Trevino said. "Tension between groups can exist anywhere, so we could keep mixing them forever."

On-line grade access will soon be up and running at ASU

By KEVIN CULWELL
STATE PRESS

ASU students will soon be able to surf for their grades. Registrar and Information Technology officials are working toward implementing on-line grades and hope to have it completed by next spring.

"If not by spring, then it'll definitely be done for the summer sessions," said Janice Garcia, student systems analyst for the registrar's office. "The implementation is actually going faster than we had originally hoped for."

The office of the registrar was originally aiming for the upcoming fall semester to get the program up and running.

The only thing holding the project back at the moment is the "newer technology," Garcia said.

"It's very difficult to install large programs onto the World Wide Web," she said.

On-line grades, when completed, will be operated similarly to the In-Touch telephone system.

Students will access their grades by typing in a social security number followed by a four-digit pin number.

The grade sheet on line will list everything a mailed grade sheet does: grades, standing, and semester and cumulative grade point averages.

"It'll be a lot more convenient than In-Touch, because students will be able to print the grade sheets out," Garcia said.

"It's something that will provide better access of grades for students," said James Rund, associate vice president of student affairs. "I think students will be greatly served by this program."

The main objective of this project is to give students as much flexibility as possible to attain their grades, said ASU Registrar Lou Ann Denny.

"I think that anything we can do to help students is a priority," she said. "We're hoping to get this program going as soon as possible."

Following the installation of on-line grades, the next priority will be to get registration accessible via the Internet.

"Students should have the capability of pre-registering on line in the spring of '98," Garcia said. "After that project is completed, we'll be looking to implement all registering on the Internet."

Women's studies classes offer guidance to female future leaders

Part of a continuing series highlighting woman's history month.

BY DAWN VERHULST
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

To Jo Anne O'Donnell, an associate dean of student life at ASU and founder of the University Women's Council, offering a new "Women and Leadership" class this semester is all about progress.

"Women have traditionally seen themselves as caretakers and nurturers," said O'Donnell, also the director and founder of the Hispanic Mother-Daughter program known as Generation Two. "We've always taken care of domestic things — cooking, cleaning. Classes such as this one give the next generation of women

a chance to see what is needed to be leaders in the community."

The class of 20 women meet Thursday afternoons from 3:15 to 4:30 p.m. Because the students meet once a week, the class is worth one credit hour. In order to enroll, students have to be recommended by an adviser or faculty member.

"My only qualm, and this is no one's fault, is that women are not willing to speak freely about what they feel," O'Donnell said. "Men are more apt to speak up and speak out. By allowing women to sit in a room together with only women, the students can speak up without a fear of the reaction."

O'Donnell's goal for the class has been to bring in women leaders from the community. The speakers tell the class about their lives and show leadership beyond a textbook definition, O'Donnell said.

"When leadership equals authoritarianism, as it traditionally has, people see leaders as males," she said. "We're beginning to understand that there is a reward for our hard work, and women are beginning to break into leadership roles, but not in the same way as men.

"Men have been viewed as all business and being able to bring home the bacon. Men haven't had to accommodate," she said.

Students in the class have mixed feelings about its usefulness.

"At times, it's borderline men-bashing, and that doesn't get women anywhere," said Gillian Johnson, 21, a senior sociology major. "The reality is that the business and political world is still controlled primarily by men, and in order to be successful, women need to adapt to a hierarchical male-dominated social structure.

"In other words, learn to play golf," she said.

Josie Sili, 22, a senior family studies and human development major, said the class bores her.

WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH

"In general, I don't like this class because I thought I was going to get information regarding leadership. The class should expand the role of women in leadership beyond a classroom and some theories," Sili said.

Besides the class, O'Donnell also started a program titled "Mentoring Culturally Diverse Populations," as a service learning class for ethnic minorities and women students. In 1991, she was chosen to receive ASU's Affirmative Action Award for her work.

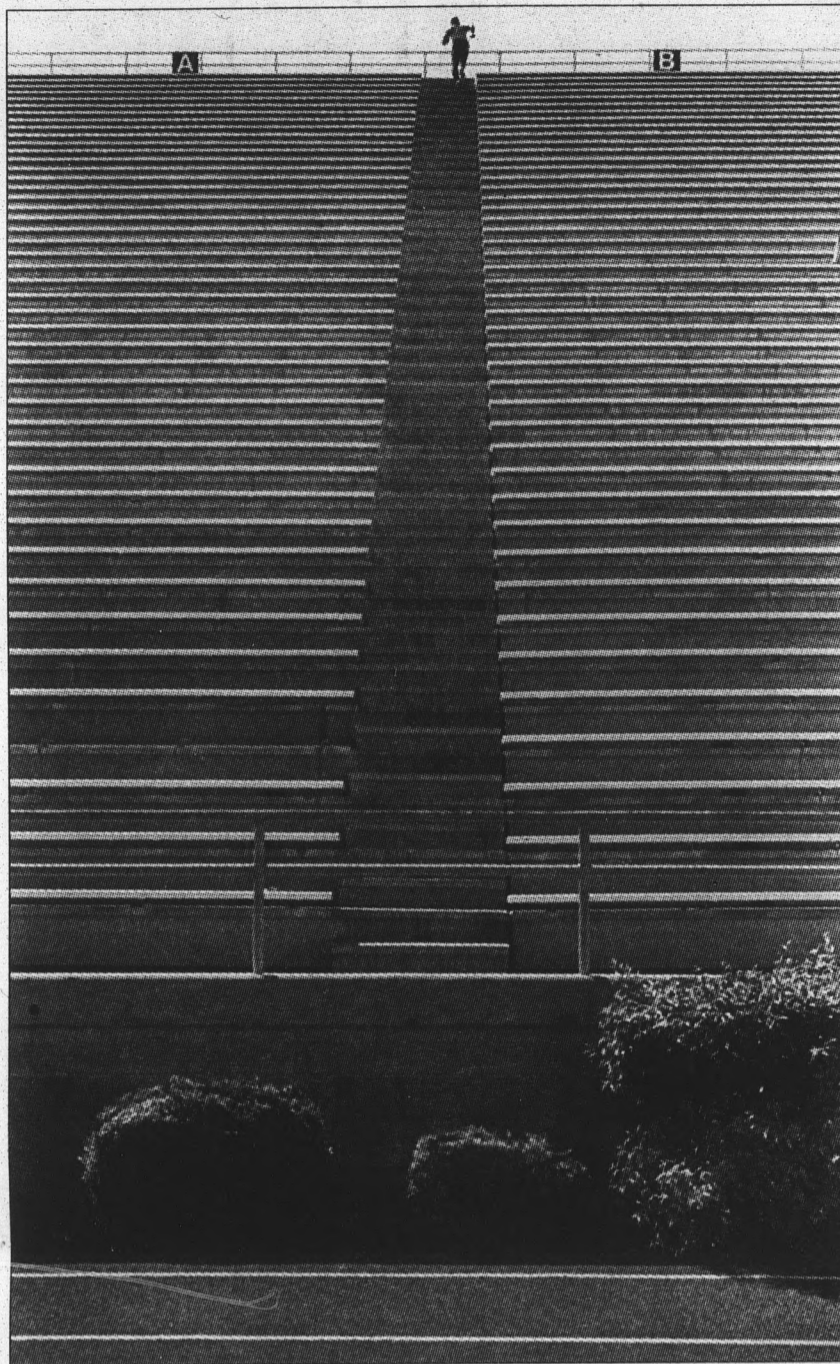

"We have to ask, 'Do we really believe in equity and parity?'" she said. "There is a real wariness about the changing of roles. We have to recognize that all human values have some quality."

Other women's studies courses O'Donnell has brought to ASU have become part of the regular schedule of classes.

"Persistence is the key," she said. "I pick my battles. Women have to pick their battles. They can't go around trying to move in 110 directions and expect to get anywhere. There has to be a focus.

"Of course they are going to get discouraged and quit if they go shooting off in every direction and hope to reach goals. That's true of anyone, male or female."

ASASU presidential candidates to debate

BY LIDIA E. KELLY
STATE PRESS

Associated Students of ASU presidential candidates will have an opportunity to present their platforms to the public in a debate scheduled for noon on Monday.

The debate will be held from noon to 1 p.m. on Hayden Lawn, said Chip Ahlswede, elections coordinator. The four presidential candidates — Brent Maddin, Chad Mueller, Andrew Ortiz and Damon Pace — will present their ideas and answer questions from the public.

"The main purpose of the debate is to get the candidates' ideas out to the students," he said.

ASASU president Marc Baumgartner said the debates create an opportunity for students to get to know the candidates and to hear their programs.

"I think that this year the candidates are very qualified," he said.

During Thursday's vice presidential candidates' debate, a small group of students showed up at the lawn in front of the Student Services Building.

Baumgartner said he wished more students would get involved in the debates.

"It is really unfortunate that not so many students came," he said.

The main issues brought up by students during Thursday's debate were increasing student involvement in ASASU activities and alcohol problems on the campus.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A male not affiliated with the University was arrested, cited and released on charges of shoplifting and drug possession at Stabler's Market in Tempe Center.
- A male student attempting to commit suicide by using a controlled substance was contacted in Parking Structure 4.
- A male student reported that someone removed items from his locker in the Student Recreation Center.
- An altercation occurred between two subjects at 525 S. Forest Ave. Both individuals declined prosecution.
- A male not affiliated with the University was arrested on an outstanding warrant from Pinetop Justice Court. He was unable to post bond and was released.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Thursday:

- A 22-year-old Tempe man was arrested Wednesday on charges of aggravated assault after he allegedly shot a pedestrian two weeks ago while driving down McAllister Avenue. Police said the suspect was driving south on McAllister Avenue, in a 1995 green Jeep with four people inside, at about 1:30 a.m., March 14, when he shot a man walking north on the street with another individual. A Tempe detective received an anonymous tip Wednesday, and the suspect was apprehended at about 1:55 p.m. Police said the suspect "made admissions," but did not give a reason for the shooting.
- A 38-year-old male was arrested on charges of driving on a suspended driver's license, displaying a suspended driver's license and driving with fictitious plates. Police said the man was stopped at 1800 N. Bridalwreath St. in Tempe, after he was observed driving with fictitious plates. The suspect claimed he didn't know how the plates ended up on his vehicle, police said. He was booked into Tempe City Jail.

• An 18-year-old male was arrested on charges of theft after he and his girlfriend walked out without paying the tab at Monti's La Casa Vieja restaurant at 3 W. First St. in Tempe. Police said the couple ate $18.79 worth of food and then attempted to leave without paying. The male was detained by an employee, but his girlfriend fled, police said.

San Diego cult ran group operations through Phoenix

(AP) — Three of the 39 members of a San Diego-based religious cult who died in a mass suicide are from Arizona, and the group's religious operations appear to be run through Phoenix.

At a news conference Thursday, San Diego County medical examiner Dr. Brian Blackburn said the three Arizona members of Higher Source are two women, ages 45 and 52, and a 59-year-old man. Blackburn would not give the names of the dead, what identification was found on their bodies or what towns they came from.

The cult of computer programmers apparently made money with a web design firm called Higher Source and used an Internet web site called Heaven's Gate to proselytize. Their bodies were found Wednesday in the mansion they rented in the posh suburb of Rancho Santa Fe, Calif.

Heaven's Gate Web site lists its mailing address as TELAH Services and a box at a PostNet store in northeast Phoenix. The owner said Thursday he wasn't aware of the group or who was renting the box.

Phoenix radio station KTAR reported that a Logan Lahson applied for a business license for TELAH in May with the city of Phoenix. The address he listed on the application was a large apartment complex near the PostNet, but he did not specify an apartment number. A telephone number he listed was answered by a machine and a message left there was not returned.

No. 13 softball squad hosts Diamond Devil Classic

Junior Carrie Breedlove prepares to deliver a fastball to an opposing batter. Breedlove and the rest of the Sun Devils will host their annual Diamond Devil Classic this weekend at Sun Devil Club Stadium.

BY JOSH DEFAMIO
STATE PRESS

The ASU softball team hosts its third and final tournament of the season this weekend.

The 13th ranked Sun Devil squad (22-7, 5-3 Pac-10) will play five games against two non-conference opponents in its annual Diamond Devil Classic. Outside factors contributed to the number of teams participating.

"The tournament was scheduled about a year ago," head coach Linda Wells said. "But some teams had to drop out because of other commitments. And Central Michigan thought the tournament was for (last) weekend, which is why we played them when we did. So now it's down to us, Southern Utah, and St. Peter's."

ASU battles St. Peter's College in its first game, held at four this afternoon.

St. Peter's (9-3), features a lineup with two .400 hitters, freshman shortstop Meredith McComish (.406) and freshman catcher Susie Johnson (.400).

The Sun Devils won't be counting on the hot sun to be their ally against the St. Peter's, located in Jersey City, New Jersey.

"I know a lot of the girls on St. Peter's and they're from the valley," outfielder Melissa Miller said. "It will be different for them, but I don't think it will be major factor. I think that we're just going to go out and play, (and we don't have to rely) on those factors."

ASU will play St. Peter's three times in the three-day tournament.

Following the first two St. Peter's games, the Sun Devils will face Southern Utah. ASU easily handled the team in last year's tourney, shutting them out by scores of 16-0 and 14-0.

Men's tennis serves it up on the road vs. two Six-Pac rivals

BY JOHN SHEEHY
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's tennis team will be back in action this weekend when they serve it up against conference rivals California, on Friday, and seventh-ranked Stanford, on Saturday.

The Sun Devils (8-6, 0-4 Six-Pac) are still in search of that elusive first conference win.

Earlier in the month, the Sun Devils closed out their non-conference schedule by defeating Virginia Tech, and 30th-ranked Michigan, before meeting conference rivals and perennial powerhouses UCLA and USC. All four of ASU's conference losses came at the hands of their Southern California rivals. The only bright spot of the UCLA match was the red hot play of doubles team Sergio Elias and Ed Carter. They defeated the nation's third-ranked doubles team of Kevin Kim and Eric Lin. It was the second time this season Elias and Carter upset the pair.

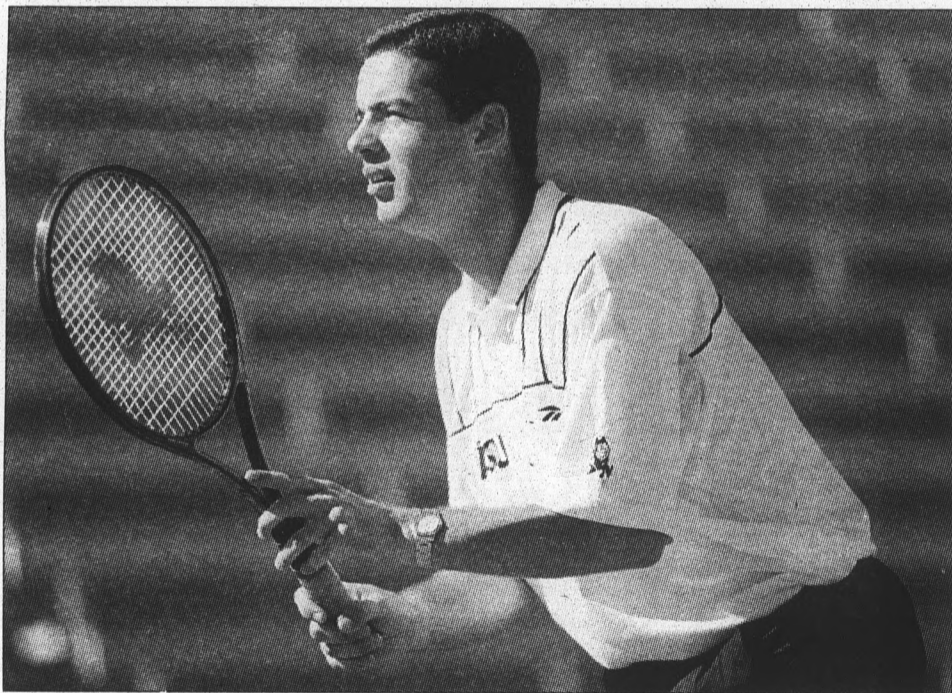

This weekend's matches will be the first this season against Cal and Stanford. Last year, ASU swept the season series with Cal 5-2 and 4-3. Unfortunately, it didn't have the same luck against Stanford. They dropped both of those matches by scores of 5-2 and 7-0.

"We will definitely have our hands full this weekend," said freshman Miles Rogers. "Any time you play on the road it is tough, but playing Cal and Stanford make it that much tougher."

ASU will need all the help it can get this weekend if it wants to bring home a Northern California sweep. The recent play of freshmen Tim Hammond and Alex Osterrieth, has been outstanding. Hammond, the No. 5 seed, has won 10 of his last 12 singles matches, including an impressive 3-1 conference mark. Osterrieth, at number two, who had an 11-match winning streak earlier in the year, has posted a 13-5 mark in his last 18 matches. The doubles play of Elias and Carter has also been a big help to the Sun Devils. They have won three of their last four matches.

"Sergio and I are playing really well right now," Carter said. "It is important that we win, but it is even more important that we get the doubles point."

After this weekend's matches, the Sun Devils return home to Whiteman Tennis Center to face the hated Arizona Wildcats on April 2. Then, ASU will host Stanford and Cal, before finishing up the regular season on the road against UofA.

Sophomore Ed Carter displays the focus that helped him and doubles partner Sergio Elias win three of their last four matches. The Sun Devils head to Cal today and Stanford Saturday for matches.

Sun Devils blow 7-run lead, succumb to Trojans 12-7

ASU's center fielder Mikel Moreno safely slides back into first base Thursday during the USC Trojans 11-7 victory over the Sun Devils at Packard Stadium.

BY PERCY EDNALINO JR.
STATE PRESS

The ASU baseball team lost 12-7 to Six-Pac rival USC Thursday night in front of a season-high crowd of 4,342 at Packard Stadium.

The Sun Devils (21-13, 7-9 Six-Pac) blew a 7-1 lead in the seventh inning. The Trojans (26-10, 9-7) fought back in the seventh, scoring 10 runs on 10 hits.

"We've had these same games go the other way," ASU head coach Pat Murphy said. "With a seven run lead early in the game, it's tough to play not to lose."

USC's Eric Munson helped put the Trojans back in the game 7-4 in the seventh with a three-run home run to right center field. USC's Greg Walbridge singled in both Wes Rachels and Morgan Ensberg to close ASU's lead down to one run. Munson finished 2-for-5 with three RBI.

ASU led 7-0 after four innings. Leadoff hitter Mikel Moreno hit a triple to right field to start the Sun Devils' first. An RBI-single by Rudy Arguelles then allowed Moreno to score. Moreno ended the night going 2-for-4 with two doubles.

Sun Devil second baseman Richy Leon left the game in the Trojans' half of the seventh after bruising his left ribs. The injury was a result of a collision between him, Moreno and Arguelles.

ASU starter Ryan Mills left the game in the seventh inning after giving up the three-run homer to Munson. Mills ended with six strikeouts and three walks in six innings of work, but didn't figure in the decision. Reliever Ryan Bradley (4-5), who came in for Ben Byrd in the seventh took the loss, giving up five runs on four hits and striking out one.

USC starter Randy Flores tossed a complete-game for the win. Flores (7-3) gave up seven runs on seven hits and struck out 12. The win — Flores' 40th — put him in a tie for first place on USC's career wins list with Bruce Gardner. It also was Flores' 19th complete game.

"Flores deserves a lot of credit," Murphy said. "He hung in there tough and really pitched well."

ASU hosts the Trojans again at 7 tonight for the second game of the three-game homestand.

Final Four coaches, teams each have unique story

By JIM O'CONNELL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Dean Smith is again chasing Adolph Rupp. Rick Pitino is going for history. Lute Olson is looking for recognition. Clem Haskins is trying to shake the rookie tag.

College basketball is a sport of coaches and this Final Four features four with very different stories.

Smith and his North Carolina Tar Heels meet Olson and his Arizona Wildcats in the first semifinal Saturday, a rematch of the teams' season-opener that Arizona won, 83-72.

Then it will be Pitino's defending national champion Kentucky Wildcats against Haskins' Minnesota Golden Gophers, who are making the first Final Four appearance in school history.

Smith moved to the top of the coaches' victory list in the second round of the NCAA tournament, passing Adolph Rupp with win No. 877. He's chasing Rupp again this weekend: Two wins would move him past Rupp and into second place on the Final Four victory list.

This is Smith's 11th Final Four, one behind John Wooden's record, and a title would be his third and break him out of a logjam of seven coaches with two. Wooden won 10 titles, Rupp had four and Indiana's Bob Knight has three.

"From 1967 to now a lot has changed even with the Final Four," said Smith, whose 65 tournament victories are well ahead of Wooden's 47 on the career list. "The big hoopla came somewhere between our trips in 1972 and 1977. In 1977, I couldn't believe the difference. Yet I believe I'd like our team to approach it as Arizona is the next game on our schedule."

The Tar Heels (28-6) are on a 16-game winning streak and haven't lost since Jan. 29. Their first loss of the season was to Arizona in the Tipoff Classic at Springfield, Mass.

"I won't even let our team watch that game," Smith said. "Both teams are so different now."

Arizona (23-9) pulled off the upset of the tournament in beating top-ranked Kansas in the Southeast Regional semifinals and then had to sweat out an overtime win over Providence in the finals.

"We're playing very well. We've not made it easy in terms of getting there with all four games going down to the wire," Olson said. "But without a doubt we're playing the best basketball that we have all year long."

Olson took Iowa to the Final Four in Indianapolis in 1980 and this is his third trip with Arizona. Still, he's a coach whose name is more synonymous with being on the wrong end of first-round upsets.

"Our program stands on its own and you can't control what people say," Olson said. "Our program has been an outstanding program for a number of years now and we don't feel the need to protect that at all."

Kentucky (34-4) won it all last season and is two games away from repeating despite losing the heart of last year's team to graduation and the NBA. To make matters worse, star guard Derek Anderson went down at midseason with a knee injury.

Pitino is trying to become the seventh coach to lead a team to a repeat title, the last being Duke's Mike Krzyzewski in 1992.

"With this team the only thing we've been trying to do is get better and improve," Pitino said. "We did think in terms of defending the national title. ... Now we have an opportunity to do that but we understand we're playing Minnesota and it's going to be a difficult task."

The Golden Gophers (31-3), who have won 16 of their last 17 games, are the newcomers to the Final Four, but it doesn't seem to faze Haskins in the least.

"We try to treat it like any game on the road. It's an opportunity once in a lifetime," he said. "We're here to play a couple of hours a day, relax a couple of hours a day and then enjoy what's going on with the kids."

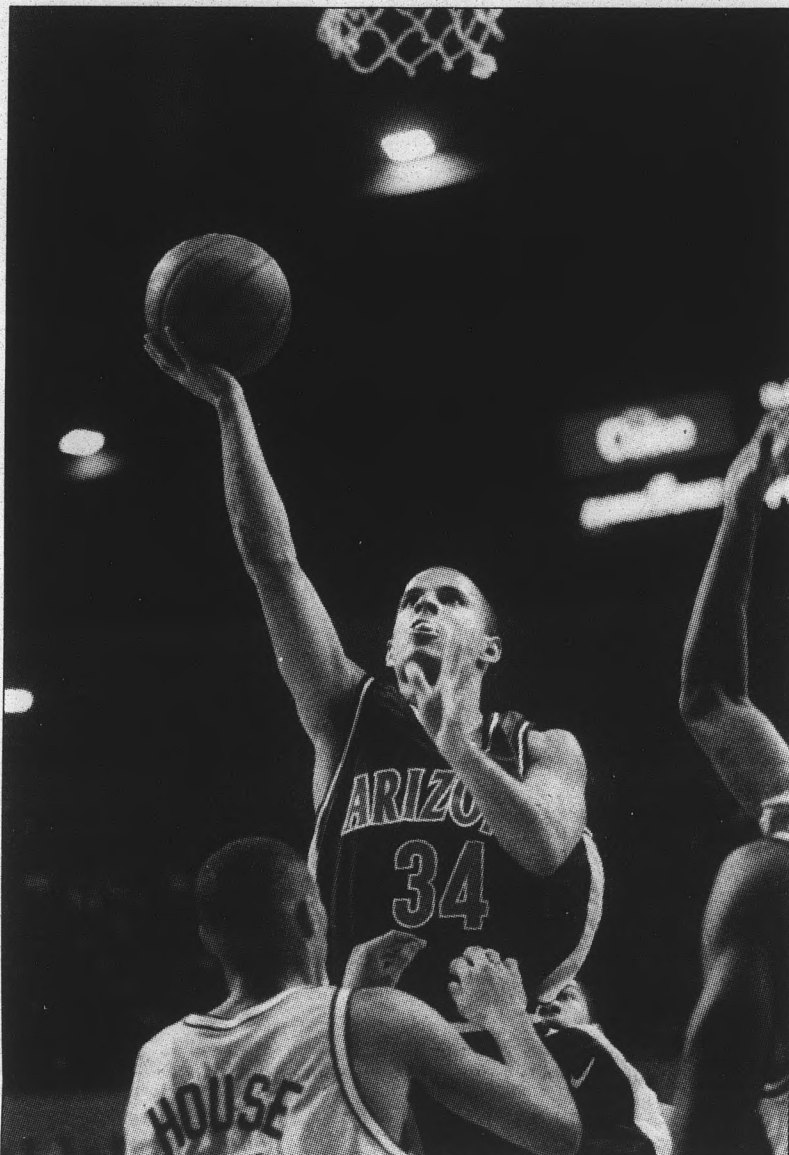

WHERE ARE THE WILDCAT FANS?

If everybody loves an underdog, everybody hasn't been showing it in the days leading to the Final Four.

Arizona is the only team that wasn't top-seeded in its region to reach the NCAA semifinals. But only two fans — TWO! — showed up at the Tucson, Ariz., airport Thursday morning to send off the Wildcats.

And when the Wildcats arrived in Indianapolis, there were only about 10 fans at the airport to greet them. Someone from the NCAA welcoming committee had a sign reading: "Indianapolis Welcomes Arizona."

The sign was held upside down.

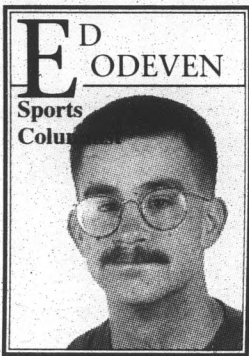

Jim Poulin/State Press
UofA junior guard Miles Simon (34) strives to lead the Wildcats to the school's first NCAA Championship game appearance. Kentucky, Minnesota and North Carolina will also compete in Saturday's Final Four games.

College basketball fiends are in for a real treat this weekend

Attention Final Four fanatics, college hoop junkies, Dick Vitale disciples and die-hard couch potatoes, Saturday is the next-to-last day of the Big Dance. The field of 64 NCAA basketball teams has been reduced to four teams (Arizona, Kentucky, Minnesota and North Carolina) with one common goal — to win it all.

The fun thing has been watching the teams make it to the Final Four. They have taken entirely different paths en route to Saturday's action in Indianapolis.

UofA was considered too young and too inexperienced to be a championship contender. But the team that was expected to make the Final Four next year arrived on the scene a year early (just ask the still-shocked Kansas Jayhawks). Guards Miles Simon and Mike Bibby have been instrumental in UofA's revival.

ED ODEVEN
Sports Columnist

Kentucky has surprised many so-called experts who questioned whether or not the Wildcats could repeat as champs. Despite losing standouts Tony Delk and Antoine Walker to the NBA and having a slew of injuries this season, the Wildcats kept the same formula for success — pressure defense and an explosive offense.

Minnesota was the Big Ten champion this season, but still seemed to suffer from the Rodney Dangerfield Syndrome (no respect). The Golden Gophers have amassed a 31-3 record, and are on a mission to prove that the team deserved to be in the NCAA Tournament last season, instead of being in the NIT.

North Carolina slowly but surely gelled into a hard-working and dangerous team, led by Antawn Jamison. Credit the dean of coaches (Mr. Smith) for molding this team into a dangerous unit.

Keep your eyes open. The two games tomorrow will give fans plenty of good reasons to watch.

It's a chance to watch coaching gurus Dean Smith and Lute Olson's teams battle each other.

It's a chance for Rick Pitino's Kentucky Wildcats to attempt to become first team to repeat as champs since Duke captured back-to-back NCAA titles in 1991 and 1992.

It's a chance to see the golden play of Gopher Bobby Jackson, an acrobatic, dynamic, speedy and talented player who has made his mark during the season's final month.

It's a chance to see intense UofA Wildcat Miles Simon revel in the atmosphere and excitement of Indianapolis.

It's a chance to sensational scorer Ron Mercer light up the scoreboard for Kentucky.

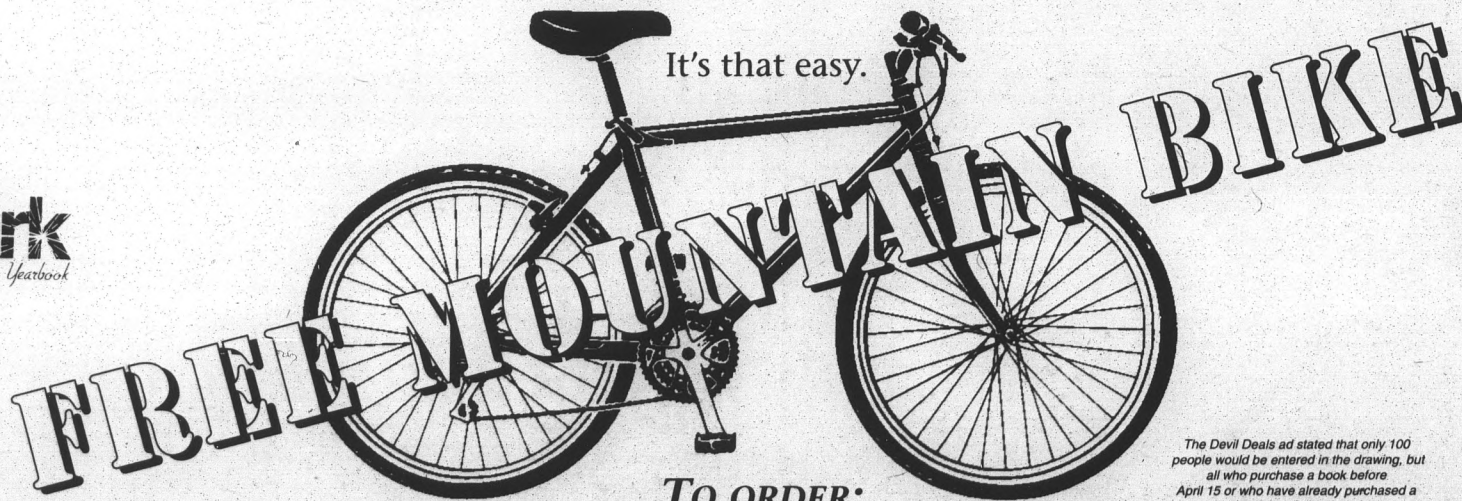

It will be a treat to watch Minnesota coach Clem Haskins

Michigan claims NIT crown over Seminoles, 82-73

By TOM WITHERS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The NIT final wasn't a matchup of football schools. It was a Tractor pull.

Robert Traylor scored 26 points and grabbed 13 rebounds Thursday night as Michigan won its second NIT championship with an 82-73 victory over Florida State.

The first-ever basketball game between schools better known for football accomplishments was fittingly dominated by the one player on the floor who looks like a defensive tackle.

Traylor, a 6-foot-8, 300-pound sophomore nicknamed "Tractor," used his massive body to help Michigan control the boards and thwart a dramatic Florida State comeback in the second half.

Traylor, who had 33 points and 19 rebounds in Michigan's two victories at Madison Square Garden, was named the tournament's MVP.

Maceo Baston added 20 points and Louis Bullock had 17 for Michigan (23-11), which outrebounded Florida State 47-28. A five-game losing streak late in the regular season cost the Wolverines an NCAA berth, but a third men's basketball title will surely take away some of the sting.

Florida State (20-12) was led by James Collins' 20 points and LaMarr Greer had 15. The Seminoles trailed by 18 points in the second half before closing to 68-66 with 4:46 to go.

Traylor, who may play his next game in the NBA, scored on a putback with 3:45 left, giving the Wolverines a four-point lead, and on Florida State's next trip, he slapped the ball off guard Kerry Thompson's knee and out of bounds.

Travis Conlan then hit Maurice Taylor with an alley-oop pass for a dunk and a 72-66 Michigan lead. Florida State misfired on its next trip and Bullock scored on a driving layup with 1:37 left, sending Michigan's bench and fans into a frenzy.

With Michigan leading by 10 points at the half, Traylor opened the second half with a beautiful spin move and dunk, triggering an 8-0 run that gave Michigan a 49-31 lead with 17:05 left.

The big lead made Michigan passive and careless on the offensive end, and Florida State, playing in only its second basketball title game, took advantage.

Greer hit a 3-pointer and the Seminoles ripped off 12 points in a 1:37 stretch to close to 54-49. Following a Michigan turnover, Thompson capped the tear with a dunk with 12:20 remaining and Florida State was right back in it.

Michigan's lead fluctuated between eight and two points over the next eight minutes. Florida State missed a chance to tie it at 68-all when Collins missed two free throws with 4:32 to go.

The Wolverines' inside size and strength was evident from the start. Traylor and Baston scored all 10 of Michigan's points in a five-minute span as the Wolverines opened a 22-14 lead.

Bullock's 3-pointer with 4:45 left before halftime swelled Michigan's lead to 13, and Florida State looked to be in big trouble. But the Seminoles kept their cool and only trailed 41-31 at the half following two free throws by Collins with one second left.

Traylor had 14 points to pace Michigan in the opening 20 minutes.

Connecticut defeated Arkansas 74-64 in the consolation game.

Associated Press
Michigan's Robert "Tractor" Traylor hauls down a rebound over Florida State's Kirk Luchman during the Wolverines 82-73 victory Thursday over the Seminoles in the National Invitational Tourney championship game in New York.

Swimmers in 10th

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The No. 10 ASU men's swimming team finished in 10th place after the first day of competition at the NCAA Championships in Minneapolis.

The Sun Devils' 200-yard freestyle team of Francisco Sanchez, Nelson Vargas, Craig Hutchison and Felipe Delgado placed fourth to earn All-America status.

Sanchez, the reigning 50 freestyle champ, placed fourth in 19.61 seconds. Delgado was 14th in the 50 freestyle at 19.79, which was good for All-American honorable mention.

THE MATCHUPS

•North Carolina versus Arizona (3:40 p.m.)

The Tar Heels have matured tremendously since they lost to UofA 83-72 in the UofA's season-opening win. UofA has surprised everyone this season and are on a memorable run themselves.

UofA's interior quickness (Bennett Davison and A.J. Bramlett), explosive guard trio of Jason Terry, Mike Bibby and Miles Simon and talented scorer Michael Dickerson should be tough for the Tarheels to handle. But UNC's Antwan Jamison, Shammond Williams and Co. will put up a valiant fight.

Prediction: UofA 82, UNC 81

•Minnesota versus Kentucky (6 p.m.)

The Golden Gophers have demonstrated all season that they have a deep bench, superior coaching and the work ethic of a champion.

Kentucky has gotten by thanks to Pitino's coaching and an explosive offense that continues to run and gun at will.

Kentucky will control the game's early tempo, but the Golden Gophers will tire out the Wildcats late in the game. Look for Bobby Jackson to take over and dominate in the last five minutes.

Prediction: Minnesota 75, Kentucky 66.

Championship Game Prediction — Minnesota 89, UofA 79.

Sun Devils down Georgia

By LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

It was sunny in the Nevada desert for the ASU women's tennis team Thursday as it won the first of three matches at Fertitta Tennis Complex in Las Vegas. The Sun Devils defeated No. 10 Georgia 5-4.

ASU won four of six singles matches and clinched the match with Stephanie Lansdorp and Katy Propstra's doubles match. Lansdorp and Propstra beat the doubles team of Michelle Anderson and Lauren Rose 8-5.

In singles action the Sun Devils' top-player Reka Cseresnyes lost to Anderson 6-2, 6-2. ASU won the No. 2-5 seeds with No. 2 Lansdorp defeating No. 17 Marissa Catlin 6-4, 6-3. Alison Nash won her match against Rose in three sets 7-6, 1-6, 6-3. Anna Moll easily beat Zoe Mellis 6-2, 6-3. Kerry Giardino beat Nadine van de Walle 6-4, 6-2. Georgia took the No. 6 seed as Kelly Baksin defeated Torey Pratt 6-4, 6-1.

Georgia won the Nos. 2 and 3 doubles as the team of van de Walle and Catlin beat Moll and Nash in a tie breaker 9-7. Mellis and Baskin defeated Giardino and Cseresnyes 8-6.

With this win ASU moves to 11-2 overall and continues its undefeated record in non-conference matches. This weekend marks the last non-conference matches of the season. In April every match played will be against a Six-Pac conference foe.

The Sun Devils take on No. 32 Kansas today at noon. They complete their trip against No. 14 UNLV Saturday.

SUN DEVIL CLUB SPORTS

MEN'S GYMNASTICS

Senior Rob Kjar will be honored during the ASU men's gymnastics team's final home meet Saturday at 7 p.m. at the PE West building.

Kjar, an NCAA All-American and USA National Champion, is the Sun Devils' co-captain and their best all-around athlete with an average score of 54.550.

ASU, the No. 1-ranked club team in the nation, will host No. 2 UCLA, the defending National Team Champion, No. 3 University of Washington and Albuquerque's Gold Cup Gymnastics team.

"It will be an exciting and close competition," Barclay said, "with lots of high caliber elite routines being performed.

We're excited to have all these teams together on one floor only two weeks before the USA National Championships in Seattle."

MEN'S LACROSSE

After a three week layoff, the ASU men's lacrosse team will hit the field again at 1 p.m. on Sunday in Tucson to face arch-rival UofA.

The Sun Devils are 3-2 on the season.

MEN'S VOLLEYBALL

The ASU men's volleyball team will head north to Utah this weekend for conference matches against Utah State today and Utah Valley State on Saturday.

The State Press Club Sports Box is compiled by reporter Matt Paulson. He can be reached at 965-2292.

The games mark the last non-conference games of the year for ASU. The team begins a 20-game string in which it plays nothing but Pac-10 opponents.

"It's the last hurrah until we go into the meat of our season," captain Tina Ruff said. "It's important to get the wins now, but it's also important to (beat) those out of region teams, because that is big."

All tournament games will be played at Sun Devil Club Stadium.

NOTES

•The team's 22-7 start is the best in a decade, since it finished 41-15 and came home with a seventh place finish at the College World Series.

•Junior Roxanne Tsosie is averaging over nine strikeouts per walk this season. Her 262 career strikeouts rank fourth on the all-time Sun Devil list, and she fanned an incredible 14 batters in her five inning no-hitter over Evansville two weeks ago.

•Junior hurler Carrie Breedlove has been an excellent complement to Tsosie during the hot streak. Breedlove tossed her third complete game of the year during the Central Michigan series. Breedlove gave up one earned run and only four hits while striking out four in the Sun Devils' 6-1 victory.

•Junior Raja Woods and sophomore Holly Smith, both transfers from Solano Community College in Solano, Calif., have provided the Sun Devils with much production in the lineup. Woods and Smith have a combined batting average of .340 and have totaled 36 RBI and 27 runs scored.
