'Sun Devil Spark' fades as era nears end

Lack of sales blamed for yearbook closure

BY KEVIN CULWELL
STATE PRESS

After 10 years of publication, ASU's Spark is fading because of lagging sales.

"It's tough to sell yearbooks on a campus of 45,000 students," said Bryan Gershweir, editor-in-chief of the Sun Devil Spark. "Generally, students buy yearbooks to see themselves, and there's just not enough pages to get everyone into it."

The shutdown was contemplated last year, when just 1,400 yearbooks were sold. The final decision was made last week.

Ideally, sales should be one-fourth of what the graduating senior class is, said Julie Knapp, associate director of student publications.

The graduating class last May consisted of more than 10,000 students.

Thus far, 1,700 books have been purchased, with target sales at 2,100, Gershweir said.

Gershweir, in his second year as editor, said colleges are going on-line with their publications.

"More and more universities are going to electronic forms of yearbooks," he said.

Initially, an interactive CD-ROM of the Sun Devil Spark was considered as a replacement. However, that idea was shot down.

"People like to pick something up and read it," Gershweir said. "The idea is all there, and maybe someday they'll create a CD-ROM version."

Bryan Gershweir, a sophomore graphic communications major and returning editor of the Sun Devil Spark, is upset that the yearbook has become a financial loss and will close in late summer. "Part of my life has been taken away because I have worked on yearbooks for the last eight years," he said.

Student seeks on-the-job training in City Council

BY CADONNA PEYTON
STATE PRESS

In sixth grade, Jesse Garcia was learning about government and politics. Now, years later, he continues to learn — not from textbooks, but from experience.

On March 1, 26-year-old Garcia picked up the official packet to be a Phoenix City Council candidate and his dream was set in motion.

"I thought I would be the first one to get the packet, but I was the fourth," said Garcia, a senior political science major. "There are a lot of people out there who have the same dream, but that doesn't bother me."

"It is something I've always wanted to do. Some people wanted to be a policeman, (or) a fireman, I wanted to be a councilman. This is my dream, nothing more." Only five weeks away from graduating ASU, currently working in San Diego during the week and commuting to Phoenix on the weekends to handle his campaign as well as schoolwork, Garcia said his schedule is challenging.

"I was fortunate that my professors have allowed me to travel and continue to take my classes," he said. A friend takes notes for him during the week and faxes them, but he fits exams into his travel schedule.

Saturday was the official day to start campaigning. Garcia and his campaign team of 20 gathered 400 signatures he needed to be put on the ballot as a City Council candidate in District 2, located in northeast Phoenix. Only 200 are needed.

Garcia has lived in Arizona all his life and plans to stay here.

"No way will I ever go to Washington, D.C. All my work will be done in this state," the Republican candidate said. "If there is another level for me, it will be in Arizona because I grew up here and it has been good to me. I just want to give back to my community."

Garcia said he has been planning his campaign since he was 18 and has always known that when he was 26 he would run for office.

"I knew I wanted to run before I was 30, but I wasn't going to run until I graduated from college," he said. "So I decided it would be at 26."

It takes a lot of motivation, determination and money to run a campaign, Garcia said.

He has raised $3,000 with a yard sale, raffle and the auctioning of a donated car. His next two fund-raisers will be a golf tournament and a casino night.

"I estimate it takes between $10,000 to $15,000 to run a good campaign," he said.

Garcia said he will do everything in his power to accomplish his dream and he is confident that it will happen.

"I wouldn't put myself through this if I didn't believe I had the opportunity to win," he said.

However, Garcia knows there is a chance he may lose the election.

"Even if I do lose, I'm doing something I've always wanted to do," he said. "Win or lose, I'm going to be a winner in the end."

Casual decision leads law student to ABOR office

BY VIVI STENBERG
STATE PRESS

The state Senate approved ASU student John H. Platt as the new student representative on the Arizona Board of Regents Friday.

Platt had been selected among three finalists for the position by Gov. Fife Symington.

The student regent has full voting privileges as one of the nine board members who function as the governing body of Arizona's public university system.

The 27-year-old law student will start his term in July, when UofA's Jonathan Schmitt steps down after serving a year on the board.

Platt said he applied after seeing a flier that described the position.

"I didn't even know we had a student regent," Platt said. However, he said he had always intended to be in public service, and the student regent job was one he couldn't pass up.

"I want to be involved in the community," Platt said. "I want to be able to have a say in my kids' education."

Platt is married and has two young daughters.

Originally from St. Johns, northeast of Phoenix, Platt got his undergraduate degree in mechanical engineering from ASU in 1993. He then joined the work force until returning to ASU last fall.

Marc Baumgartner, president of the Associated Students of ASU and member of the selection committee who recommended Platt to the governor, said one of Platt's strengths was his ability to relate to the student body.

"He is a bright student who will bring (ABOR) perspectives from every level of the University," Baumgartner said.

Platt agreed that he has a good understanding of being a university student.

"I have lived in a dorm, I have lived off campus and I have eaten in the cafeteria," he said. "I drove my car to campus and now I ride my bike."

He has also participated in campus organizations such as the Student Bar Association.

As a student regent, Platt will represent more than 101,000 students in Arizona's university system.

The figures didn't seem to intimidate Platt, although he admitted to not being familiar with the other campuses in the state.

"I have relatives who attend other schools that are willing to help me," Platt said. He also anticipated working closely with the Arizona Students Association and the presidents of student governments, in order to get a better knowledge of all the issues important to Arizona's students.

Platt said he hoped students would give him input on what they regard as important.

Platt said one of his priorities once his term starts will be to tackle the problem of student retention.

"There's a gap between the information people get before they enter the university and what they experience once they are in," he said. "We need to concentrate on things that will keep students from dropping out."

Platt said he also saw a gap between students' educational experiences and their expectations toward the job market.

Both problems could be eased by using various university clubs to provide students with valuable information, he said.

Platt's first chance to voice his concerns will be at ABOR's July meeting.

TODAY

Campus clubs and organizations may submit written entries to the State Press in the basement of the Matthews Center. Requests will not be taken over the phone or via fax.

Deadline for requests is noon the day before publication and entries will not be accepted more than three working days before publication. Only one entry per organization per day is permitted.

Entries must contain the full name of the club or organization, a description of the event, date, time and the full address of the location. All requests are subject to editing for content, space and clarity. Incomplete or illegible entries will be discarded.

The Today Section is a daily calendar of events printed as a service to the ASU community. Requests are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis and are printed as space permits.

Yearbook

The Spark's Web page will be expanded in the fall to see if students would be interested in a quarterly or thrice yearly magazine, Knapp said.

"It will be a market research of our consumer base," she said. "We'll also conduct student polls on campus and if they express interest in a magazine, then we'll produce one at some point in the future."

The current site, for the most part, has only a form to order this year's 352-page yearbook, Gershweir said.

The magazine, which would be 72 pages, would have three executive editors, as opposed to the current five, he said. It would rely on advertisements, subscriptions, and rack sales for revenue.

Knapp said the cost to students for the magazine is expected to be $5.95 per issue.

"Yearbooks are a dying tradition nationally, especially with large universities," said Gershweir, a sophomore graphic communications major. "(UofA's yearbook) is also closing down."

The Desert Yearbook at the UofA has sold about 700 copies this year, but expects to sell 300-400 more since the men's basketball team won the national championship, said Najah Swartz, associate editor-in-chief of the publication.

"As of now, we've been told that we're shutting down next year," she said.

The final Sun Devil Spark, which will be distributed in late August or early September, promises to be a great publication, Gershweir said.

"We're determined to make this the best yearbook ever," he said. "We want to make this the book people should have bought."

This year's book will feature a 23-page layout of the football team and a "reflective" section, which will have submissions of short stories, poems and art from students.

"The closing of our book is the closing of a tradition," Gershweir said.

The Sun Devil Spark, which began publication in 1987, has won 38 awards in its tenure.

It replaced The Saguaro, which ran for 50 years before retiring in 1972 due to budget problems.

Violent crime decreases sharply

By CASSANDRA BURRELL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Americans experienced significantly fewer violent crimes in 1995 than in 1994, with rates for such acts as rape, robbery and assault down by 12.4 percent, the Justice Department said Sunday.

The broadest decline happened in the suburbs, where crime rates dropped in all areas of personal victimization except rape and sexual assault.

The Bureau of Justice Statistics said the fall was the largest recorded since the bureau began taking its annual National Crime Victimization Survey 24 years ago.

"Four years ago, we made a commitment to take our streets back from crime and violence. We had a comprehensive plan," President Clinton said. "Our plan is working."

He said in a written statement that the statistics, which covered the first full year of his crime act of 1994, reflect the largest drop in violent crime in 22 years. He credited the act.

Attorney General Janet Reno said the figures continued a downward trend in violent crime that has been reflected in every year of the Clinton administration.

Republicans said crime figures remain much too high. And some experts said the administration is reaping the benefit of a baby boomer generation mellowed with age.

Among white residents age 12 and older, the survey showed overall violent crime declined 12.8 percent. Aggravated assault among whites dropped 24.7 percent.

The decline was less dramatic for black Americans. "Although there was some evidence of a decline in violent crimes rates for black men and women (down 10.4 percent), the only statistically significant change for them was a 24 percent drop in aggravated assault," the report said.

Preliminary figures were released in September, and Clinton boasted of them during his presidential re-election campaign.

Rep. Bill McCollum, a Florida Republican, said because Clinton signed the crime bill in September 1994, it probably had little effect on crime in 1995. McCollum also said Americans should brace themselves for a jump in crime as the number of teen-agers increases over the next few years.

"We shouldn't feel too secure," McCollum said. "Crime is not down nearly enough, and it's going to go back up."

A Northeastern University crime expert agreed that the crime bill wasn't solely responsible for the good statistics but said he believed the decrease can be long-term.

Jack Levin, director of the university's Program for the Study of Violence, said the aging population contributed to the decline, but parents should receive some credit because they're getting tougher with wayward teen-agers and taking parenting more seriously.

"The baby boomers are mellowing out. They are no longer committing the high-risk violent offenses, like armed robbery and aggravated assault," he said.

Pope appeals for forgiveness to put closure to Bosnian war

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — In bone-chilling cold and with tight security protecting him from the hatreds that still poison Bosnia, Pope John Paul II preached forgiveness Sunday to Catholics, Muslims and Orthodox alike.

Tanks, sharpshooters and thousands of police were deployed to protect the pontiff, whose long-delayed visit to a city with a special spot in his heart was marred by the discovery Saturday of explosives along his route.

Organizers installed a heater and used a large, white umbrella to shield him from an icy wind driving snow flurries into his face during Mass at a soccer stadium near the former front line. The 76-year-old pope was chilled and visibly shivering at the end of the 2 1/2-hour service. An aide helped him from the altar.

John Paul left Sarajevo in the evening aboard his special Alitalia jet after a farewell ceremony ending his 25-hour visit.

The pope's message of peace drew wide praise from the people who suffered most in war, as well as the politicians who fomented it. However, Bosnia's dilemma remained: whether to find peace in unity or separation.

For the pope, there was no question that peace and unity go hand-in-hand.

"For the edifice of peace to be solid, against the background of so much blood and hatred, it will have to be built on the courage of forgiveness," he said. "People must know how to ask forgiveness and to forgive."

If Bosnians can establish peace, he told the Muslim, Serb and Croat members of a joint presidency, their land "can become at the end of this century an example of coexistence in diversity for many nations experiencing the same difficulty, in Europe and elsewhere in the world."

John Paul said Sarajevo is a symbol of the horrors of the 20th century including the start of World War I, the bitter fighting of World War II and the conflict marking the end of the century.

He called for respect for human rights, efforts to ensure all Bosnians have work and the return of legions of refugees to their homes.

About 70 percent of the workforce is unemployed in Muslim-Croat territory, and probably more on the Serb side. The future of the refugees is one of the biggest political issues facing Bosnia.

Muslims and Croats are often at odds, but their men on the presidency promised to work for unity.

Bosnia's chief Muslim cleric, Mustafa Ceric, met the pope Sunday afternoon and said afterward he would use the opportunity of the pope's visit to seek "substantial dialogue" between Muslims and Catholics.

More than 100,000 march on German Embassy in Tehran

More than 100,000 Iranians march on the German Embassy in Tehran on Sunday, to protest a German court ruling implicating Iranian leaders in political assassinations. Hundreds of police in full riot gear ringed the embassy compound in downtown Tehran, but the protest appeared to be orderly.

TEHRAN, Iran — More than 100,000 people marched on the German Embassy in Tehran on Sunday, one of several demonstrations across the country to protest a German court ruling implicating Iranian leaders in political assassinations.

Hundreds of police in riot gear ringed the embassy compound in downtown Tehran. But the protest appeared orderly, a sign that despite the fervor, both European countries and Iran were reluctant to let the dispute wreck their lucrative relations.

In fact, Sunday's march was in some ways more the usual demonstration in the Islamic Republic than a protest against Germany.

Protesters burned an Israeli flag, and the crowd chanted "Death to America!" and "Death to Israel!" There were no chants against Germany, and organizers stopped the crowd from burning a German flag and an effigy of the German judge who issued the verdict Thursday.

Demonstrations were reported in more than a dozen other cities, including Qom, the seat of Iran's ruling clergy.

The Berlin court's decision has created the worst diplomatic crisis between Iran and the West since 1989, when Iran's revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, called on Muslims to kill British author Salman Rushdie for blasphemy.

The court convicted four men in the 1992 murders of four Iranian dissidents in Berlin and said the order to kill came from Iran's top leaders. Prosecutors earlier implicated Iran's supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, and President Hashemi Rafsanjani.

After the court ruling, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and all European Union countries except Greece recalled their ambassadors from Tehran. The United States, which for years has sought to isolate Iran, welcomed their actions.

Iran, which has vehemently denied the charges in Germany, summoned home its ambassador to Germany and withdrew four diplomats.

Student rep on ABOR hardly speaks for us all

REMEMBER voting for the new student regent? Of course not; that's because you didn't vote on that position.

The new student regent of the Arizona Board of Regents has been chosen, but not by students. This causes us to question the selection process and how fairly represented students are, which in turn affects the amount of influence the student regent truly has.

The student regent represents public university students in the state of Arizona, yet students don't vote for the regent. There is a selection committee that some student leaders are a part of, but the student regent is ultimately selected by the governor and approved by the state Senate.

So, a student can sit on the board, vote and represent three university populations, but we, the customers of the Arizona university system, have no choice in the matter.

The student regent represents more than 101,000 students from NAU, UofA and ASU. Therefore, by rounding the student population, we find that 100,000 students are represented by .001 percent of the student population. Is that fair representation? We sure don't think so.

We're not doubting the abilities, intelligence or aspirations of the student regent. But we feel the person in this position is fighting a hopeless battle. We doubt the amount of influence one student has, when faced with eight other non-student regents holding a much different opinion and much more power in general. Just one example from our own experiences as University students is that for the past few years tuition has risen. Of course the student regent was against it each year, but still, tuition was increased.

Students are given no voice in appointing the student regent, nor are we fairly represented, given the large population of students between the three state universities.

ABOR needs more student regents to provide university students of Arizona with fair representation. Until then, the position of student regent will remain an almost powerless one, meant to deceive students into believing that ABOR truly considers our problems.

Our suggestion is that a percentage of the student population from all three universities acts as an advisory committee to two student regents from each university. Also, the general population of students from each university should be involved in selecting both the committee members and the student regents. This way, student regents wouldn't out-number the other regents — but Arizona university students would be fairly represented.

Working hard is worth the challenge when benefits of struggle can be seen

When I was growing up, my best friend's dad knew that I ran track. He told me that there was a new American Youth Soccer Organization (AYSO) coming to our small town and he thought I should give it a try.

I was very excited, knowing that I had always enjoyed kickball, running and competing with the boys. It was a small border town, so the organization's popularity grew with both the Hispanic and American cultures. But I was still only one of about three or four girls in the whole league.

Well, in my first game, I just about died. I must have been only 9 or 10. I had no idea that running up and down a field five-hundred times throughout the course of one game could be so tiring. I had to prove something to the boys, though. I had to let them know that we all stood on equal ground. They had to know I wasn't a wimp and I wasn't going to take anything for granted.

I played on coed teams up until a couple of years before high school. The most exciting games were tournaments, usually held in Tucson. We'd play up to four or five games a day and afterward retreat to the cold swimming pools at the hotel sunburned, drained and exhausted.

I then played on some all-girl teams, a couple of years before high school. But high school was the greatest. It was probably the best and worst experience all rolled into one. My first couple of years on varsity, I learned a great deal. I came to love the game, then — more than I ever had before. But then my family moved to Knoxville, Tennessee.

Coming from a small town, I didn't feel "good" enough to play for a large high school. Fortunately though, I got there in the summer and found out about the soccer camp my new high school was hosting. I never worked so hard in my whole life as I did that week. I felt great. I knew my ability level, my skills jumped 10 times and I enjoyed the process. I then learned about try-outs: the timed 4-mile run and all of the other horrid things I had to be prepared to do. But I was ready. I wasn't going to let up now — besides, I had already come this far.

Try-outs were fun — but hard — and very exhausting. I ended up meeting several girls from the previous year's team, and we all supported each other. Needless to say, I made the team. We ended up being district champions and lost the playoff game that would have taken us to state by giving up one too many goals to the school's biggest rival.

My Tennessee excitement ended and we moved back to Arizona my senior year. My coach expected me now, more than ever, to pull the team together and over-play my bounds. It was frustrating coming back to a somewhat inexperienced team, but I made the most of it. I definitely knew I would not hesitate to take advantage of an opportunity when I saw it.

One of those opportunities was to help coach a very young AYSO team. I also helped out my high school coach after I graduated. I could see potential in these young kids' eyes. I don't think they realized what they were getting into. It's not a game of give-and-take, but rather of personal skill, attitude and endurance.

I wished I could give them a taste of my experience and love for the game. But that is the beauty of it. You don't see the benefits until you've been tested and found worthy to partake of the fruit. Until these kids understand this, they will not be able to understand teamwork. But, I watched, coached and helped that sparkle in their eye grow when they saw a soccer ball. They were beginning to see, to glimpse the picture as a whole, as a game.

It's time to retire the primitive practice of circumcision

Rituals and rites of passage are, by definition, entrenched and difficult to let go. But the primitive — and some say, barbaric — practice of male circumcision may be due for retirement.

KATHLEEN PARKER
Syndicated Columnist

For thousands of years, young males have been subjected to what amounts to genital mutilation for "medical" reasons that largely have been disproved by modern science. In the United States, circumcision has been practiced routinely since about 1870, when the operation first was used successfully to alleviate specific afflictions and diseases.

Today, in the absence of medical justification, we continue to perform the procedure for cultural and religious reasons and, well, "just because." Because our fathers did it. Because circumcised doctors recommend it. Because we just do.

It's time to take a closer look at why we just do and ask whether we really want to continue.

A story in the March 24 issue of Time titled, "A Boy Without a Penis," should be sufficient cause for discontinuing the practice. In this incomprehensible tale, an infant twin boy in 1963 lost his penis to a mangled circumcision. His parents followed the "expert" advice of doctors at Johns Hopkins Medical School that the child's best bet for a normal life was to be reconstructed as a female.

This brilliant solution was proffered as we were trying to convince ourselves that the only difference between boys and girls was anatomical. Ergo, the dismembered boy would be just as happy as a girl. He wasn't. "Joan," as her doctors called her, sought the company and activities of other boys and felt uncomfortable using female restrooms at school. Constantly, and despite her protestations, Joan's parents insisted that their "daughter" be more feminine.

Suicidal at age 14, Joan finally confronted her father and learned the truth. In the late 1970s, Joan was reconstructed as the man she was meant to be. "John," according to Time, is today a happily married father of three.

Joan's case may be unusual, but even one accidental amputation is too many — especially when the procedure apparently is unnecessary.

Prevailing medical opinion today is that circumcision has no medical basis, except in individual cases of deformity or disease. Traditional arguments favoring the procedure were that removing the child's foreskin prevented urinary tract infections, penile cancer and protected sexual partners against cervical cancer. All have been disproved by recent medical research, not to mention advances in personal hygiene.

Urinary tract infections may occur in one out of 100 children, hardly cause for widespread preventive surgery. Penile cancer, meanwhile, occurs in older men at a rate of about 1 in 100,000.

Dr. George C. Denniston, president of Doctors Opposing Circumcision, writes on his web site that "performing 100,000 mutilating procedures on newborns to possibly prevent cancer in one elderly man is absurd. Applying this type of reasoning to women would lead to the conclusion that removing all breasts at puberty should be done to prevent breast cancer."

As for protecting sexual partners, the incidence of cervical cancer is approximately the same in the United States, where circumcision is common, and in Scandinavia, where circumcision is rare.

Also, recently disproved is the theory that babies don't feel pain with circumcision. In a study published in the March issue of the respected medical journal, The Lancet, researchers studying infants circumcised with and without anesthesia found that pain from circumcision may have long-lasting effects on infant behavior.

Our denial of circumcision as a painful, unnecessary form of mutilation is entrenched in Judeo-Christian history beginning some 6,000 years ago in Egypt, even before the operation was introduced to the Jews as part of God's covenant with Abraham. In recent years, Jewish religious leaders, too, have questioned the practice, perhaps in recognition of an early justification of circumcision as a means to tame the male libido.

In the 12th century, the Jewish philosopher and physician Maimonides called for circumcision "to limit sexual intercourse, and to weaken the organ of generation as far as possible, and thus cause man to be moderate ... for there is no doubt that circumcision weakens the power of sexual excitement and sometimes lessens the natural enjoyment."

There is no doubt that society would benefit from a diminished libido, but surgery seems a bit on the radical side of behavior modification. Thus, the movement to end circumcision is gaining momentum. In the 1970s, an estimated 80 percent of newborn males in the United States were circumcised, compared to only 59 percent today.

Breaking an old habit is always tough, but, in lacking medical justification, humanity may demand this one.

Greek system rewarding for students willing to work hard

It sure seems that every time I pick up an issue of the State Press, there is always something negative about the Greek system. Whether it's the fraternities knocking heads with security companies on controlling alcohol consumption, "Fraternity party-control program not working, security officials say," (Feb. 18), or frat members beating up on their own alumni "Frat member to file charges against Phi Delta Theta," (Mar 28), Greek life always receives a bum rap.

DAVID RUFFULO
Columnist

Walk or Run on campus raised money for the Mesa Group Home for abandoned and abused children, according to an article published by Jenny Warren for the Greek Review magazine.

Yes, there is more to Greek life than binge drinking parties and childish pranks. Throughout the year, many sororities and fraternities hold philanthropic events to raise money and awareness for underprivileged children and adults. Many Greek organizations are heavily active in these events.

One unique philanthropic event, held yearly, is Alpha Gamma Delta Broomball. This event helps raise money for diabetes research. Different fraternities contribute a registration fee to participate (usually $100) and the week of events include banner contests, skit nights and finally, Broomball. The tricky part of this game is that it's not played on a concrete or wood surface — it's played on ice, without skates.

Other events include Lambda Chi Alpha Easter Egg Hunt, in which East Valley Big Brothers and Sisters give kids from single-parent homes a chance to participate in an Easter egg hunt and other events.

The bottom line is that everyone has a good time at these events, and they raise awareness for important issues like Alzheimer's disease, cancer research and domestic violence.

Of course, Greek life isn't for everyone. There are meetings to attend, work parties, a mandated number of study hours, maintaining a minimum grade point average and social events.

Sometimes things can get stressful, especially if you work part time and take 16 credit hours. But before you knock the Greek system by saying we are a bunch of rich, spoiled kids trying to buy friends, try to attend a rush meeting. Get involved.

Believe me, I felt the same way. But then I checked it out, weighed out the pros and cons and found that the Greek system can really enhance your perspective about college life.

David Ruffulo is a senior studying journalism.

Of course, it doesn't help when tragic events involving Greek members are front-page news, "ASU student killed in Mill Avenue car wreck," (April 1). This terrible accident, according to Tempe police, was alcohol-related.

And the list goes on and on. The Greek system makes up approximately 10 percent of the student population, but is always involved in negative headline news.

Fortunately, in the April 11 paper, a positive article about Greek life was published, "ASU students to help homeless."

The story referred to the Christmas in April project, when various sororities and fraternities work together to repair low-income homes for elderly and disabled persons.

This project, however, isn't a one-day annual event. According to the article, 53 houses in low-income areas received assistance in electrical, heating, roofing and cooling services this year.

The Christmas in April project Saturday is just part of the annual Greek Days of ASU, held April 11-13, on-campus. Friday night, a barbecue and carnival was held on the PV Main beach area, in which each Greek system was awarded points for participation. Sunday morning, the annual 5K

Coalition nothing more than coordination of propaganda

An article, "West Bank violence erupts, three killed," appeared on April 9 which reported that House Speaker, Newt Gingrich, spoke to a pro-Israel lobby and blamed Yasser Arafat of participating in a campaign of "terror and coordinated propaganda" that was aimed at defeating Israel. Now, what a thing it is to be a newt! Or a hypocritical sycophant.

Campaign of coordinated propaganda? That's what the American-Israeli Political Action Coalition is all about. It's what causes the U.S. government to veto United Nations resolutions, critical of Netanyahu's provocations. It's what causes our government to send 10 billion dollars a year in "foreign aid" to Israel.

A few years ago, Patrick Buchanan, while he was a syndicated columnist, confessed of being a collaborator of the mind-boggling Israeli propaganda machine. He said that "Brother Feldman" used to write pro-Israel columns that Buchanan would print as his own, without any questions.

I am sure "Brother Feldman" is still at it, but he probably wasn't involved in Steve Forsberg's insightful April 9 column, or in the refreshingly irreverent article which was printed in The Arizona Republic the following day by Gideon Rafael, titled "Middle East Hopes Crumbling."

Rafael, a former director-general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry, wrote that, while campaigning, Netanyahu had proclaimed: "The Oslo accord sticks like a knife in the back of Israel." Rafael also wrote, "In an attempt to free himself from the fetters of the Oslo agreement, Netanyahu has built up a formidable arsenal of political tactical weapons, alternately procrastinating, prevaricating and taking unilateral actions that humiliate the other side and fan the fury of the Palestinian people."

There are millions of Palestinians (both Muslim and Christian) in America. How about forming a pro-Palestinian lobby, guys? Arafat, despite his "coordinated propaganda," is losing ground (pun intended), while dozens of hapless Palestinians are being killed and injured every day.

Maintenance needed to better serve users

I have a major bone to pick with the Computing Commons on campus. I am an out-of-state tuition-paying student who cannot afford to buy my own personal computer. I rely on the services that the Computing Commons can provide for me.

One of these services is a location where I can look at my mail box for e-mail. Due to the long lines that one must wait in to use a computer, there are computers located toward the back for pine users only. There are no problems with these computers, but there is a problem with their keyboards.

The characters on the keys have been worn off and you can't use some characters, unless you know how to type. Is it too much to ask for as a tuition-paying student, to have functioning keyboards on campus? I don't think it is, even with the MBA program here having its various high-tech computer sites.

More money needs to be spent on the computing sites budget. I am willing to pay a little more in tuition for functioning computers.

Runoff elections offer second chance to appoint leaders

BY LIDIA E. KELLY
STATE PRESS

Nine runoff candidates for the Associated Students of ASU will stand before voters in an election scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday.

Brent Maddin and Andy Ortiz will compete for the presidential spot, while Autumn Ness and Eric Noland will run for the office of activities vice president.

In addition, the elections commission ordered a re-election of senators for the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. The ballot in the elections two weeks ago did not include the name of Allison Jones, who was a write-in candidate for the office, as the election commission decided last week.

Chip Ahlswede, elections coordinator, said runoffs are the best time for students to vote.

"The general elections just prepared people for runoffs," Ahlswede said. "And the runoffs will ultimately decide who is going to be the president of ASASU."

Ortiz, who received 1,234 votes in the general election, said it is really important that students vote in the runoffs.

"Nothing has been decided yet," he said. Ortiz also said he hopes students will vote for him, because of the experience he has.

"I have tenable experience on every level of student government," said Ortiz, presently the graduate student affairs vice president. "And because of the experience, I have already many connections which will make things easier."

Maddin, with 968 votes in the general election, said he is bringing fresh ideas to the table.

"I represent the average student," he said. "I know what the average student wants and needs."

Students can vote between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday at two sites — between the Memorial Union and Hayden Library, and at the Palm Walk and Tyler Mall intersection.

Two other sites — Manzanita Hall and east of Neeb Hall on Forest Mall — will be open from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

POLICE REPORT

Tempe police reported the following incidents over the weekend:

- A 27-year-old male was arrested on charges of trespassing at 1923 E. Duke Drive, after looking through the bedroom window of his 16-year-old female neighbor. He admitted involvement and was booked into Tempe City Jail.
- A 21-year-old male was arrested on charges of criminal damage after he shattered the passenger window of his brother's truck, causing $350 worth of damage. Police said the man was angry at his brother for leaving him at Rockin' Rodeo, 7850 S. Priest Drive, without his chew.
- A 45-year-old male was arrested on charges of sexual abuse after he grabbed a female's breast and told her to "shake 'em." The man denied touching her or making the statement. He was booked into Tempe City Jail.

• A 41-year-old male was arrested on charges of shoplifting at Fry's Food and Drug at 2700 W. Baseline Road, after he allegedly stole two Seagram's whiskey bottles. He was taken to Tempe City Jail, where he said he took the whiskey because he had a hangover and no money.

Incidents from ASU Police were unavailable.

Radar photos pinpoint hotspots in search for missing plane

BY RICH SASKAL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAGLE, Colo. — Abnormal shapes in the snow have provided the only tangible tips for the Air Force in its search of the rugged Colorado mountains for a missing pilot and his $8 million warplane.

While skiers have provided useful information, U-2 radar photos provide the best chance of pinpointing where Capt. Craig Button may have crashed his A-10 Thunderbolt 11 days ago.

Any wreckage would be covered by snow, but the high-tech U-2 radar cameras can see through the snow. Photos taken this weekend will be analyzed to see if the shapes under the snow are just rocks or pieces of the plane's engines, which investigators say are likely to have survived a crash.

"They are abnormal shapes that return on the radar different from normal, natural phenomenon," Lt. Gen. Frank Campbell said Sunday. "We need a little more information before we put ground crews at risk in high-snow areas."

The photos have led investigators to focus on six specific sites within a 476-square-mile wilderness area about 20 miles west of Vail. They will be analyzed at Beale Air Force Base near Sacramento, Calif.

On Sunday, one U-2 spy plane searched for Button along with 10 airplanes and 10 Army helicopters.

The search for Button, 32, and the A-10, which was carrying four 500-pound bombs, shifted from Arizona to Colorado on April 5 when faint radar signals were detected in the central Rocky Mountains.

Radar data and witness accounts indicate Button consciously broke away from a three-plane training formation over Arizona and flew to Colorado. Air Force officials previously suggested Button could have become incapacitated and put the plane on autopilot.

Curse of No. 2 continues; Sun Devils sweep Stanford

BY PERCY EDNALINO JR.
STATE PRESS

For teams in the Pac-10 Southern Division, Baseball America's No. 2 ranking has been a curse as of late.

But for the ASU baseball team, it's been nothing but good luck.

And how. ASU notched its second consecutive series win over a Six-Pac opponent ranked No. 2 in Baseball America's poll.

The team beat Stanford 5-3 on Sunday at Sunken Diamond Field and swept the Cardinal 3-0 during the weekend series. The Sun Devils have won five of their last six games against the nation's No. 2 team.

The series win follows last week's home-stand against then-No. 2 UCLA. ASU beat the Bruins two games out of three in that series.

ASU head coach Pat Murphy said the wins over both Stanford and UCLA should put the team in the top 10 in Baseball America's rankings.

"If you beat the No. 2 team in the country five straight games," he said. "I think that classifies you as one of the top teams. We'll just keep battling."

Second baseman Richy Leon agreed.

"It was a pretty big series," Leon said. "We came in and we knew we had to fare well. They have great pitching and they're a tough team. We just came in and played as hard as we could. We played to our full potential. Hopefully, we can stick with it and see what happens."

Leon also said that ASU's recent success with the No. 2 teams in the nations is amusing.

"Like I said before, if it's an omen, we'll take it," he said.

Stanford took a 3-0 lead off ASU starter Jeff Cermak in the third, punctuated by a two-run home run by Ed Muth, and an RBI-single by Luke Quaccia. Muth ended the game going 2-for-5 with two RBI and one run scored.

The Sun Devils came back in the seventh to take a 4-3 lead. Leon and Ryan Bradley opened up the inning with singles.

Both advanced when lefthanded pitcher Tony Cogan threw a wild pitch. A ground out by Michael Collins allowed Leon to score the tying run. Bradley scored two outs later off an error by Stanford second baseman Joe Kilburg.

In the eighth, Greg Halvorson stroked a solo home run off Cogan to cap the Sun Devils' scoring.

ASU improves to 27-16 (12-12 Six-Pac) while Stanford drops to 26-11 (13-5). Stanford now holds a one-game lead in the Six-Pac standings over the second-place Bruins while ASU is four games out of first place.

Leon ended the game going 2-for-3 with one run scored while Bradley went 2-for-4 with one run scored. Halvorson finished going 2-for-5 with one run scored and two RBI.

Murphy said Leon has been one of the team's bright spots this season.

"He's just such an unsung hero," Murphy said. "He's done so much. He swings the bat, he plays defense and he comes in and pitches. People don't notice in the box scores that Richy Leon is always finding a way to help us win."

ASU's Dan McKinley extended his hitting streak to nine games by going 1-for-3 with one RBI and two runs scored.

Lefthanded pitcher Ron Marietta picked up the win for the Sun Devils, tossing four innings in relief of Cermak. Marietta (3-2) allowed no runs, scattered four hits and struck out four.

Losing pitcher Brent Hoard (7-2) gave up four runs on seven hits, walked three and struck out three in six innings of work.

The Sun Devils won the first two games of the series, winning 4-3 on Friday, then picking up a lopsided 16-5 victory on Saturday.

On Friday, an RBI grounder to the short-stop by pinch hitter Dustin Delucchi, coupled with an RBI single to right by Leon, helped the Sun Devils tie the game at 2-2 in the ninth.

ASU then took the lead on a single by Michael Collins that first allowed Leon to

Women's track nets first victory of year over Lumberjacks

BY LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

Strong winds didn't hold back the ASU women's track and field team Saturday, as they had a great outing at the annual Arizona/NAU double dual meet beating NAU by a score of 85-74, and only losing to UofA 94-80.

The women's team had major wins in the sprint, middle distance and field events.

Head coach Greg Kraft said the key to the women's success came through the sprints and horizontal jumps.

Dawnyell Linder had an impressive showing winning both the 100 and 200-meter dashes. She took the 100 in 12 seconds flat and the 200 in 24.40, a season best. Joronda White took first in the 400 in 54.85, and Karen Vigilant won the 400 hurdles with a time of 1:01.43. The women's 400 relay team won their event with a time of 3:51.10, which beat UofA's 4:07.54.

"I think people did better because it was against our rivals, and since our season is almost over, we want to go out with a bang," Vigilant said.

In the field events, Charity Amama took first in the javelin with a throw of 142-05 feet, and Adra Hysong won the triple jump with 37-01.75.

"We weren't supposed to beat them (NAU), they have a bigger team than us," Hysong said. "It was exciting."

Other bright spots for the Sun Devils was Chasity Walker's second place finish right behind Linder in the 100 and 200 with 12.37 in the 100 and 25.22 in the 200. Priscilla Boldt finished second in the 800 in 2:14.94, less than a second behind the UofA's Virginia Camacho who ran it in 2:14.27. Mary Duerbeck placed second in the 1500 with a time of 4:41.86. In the long jump, Hysong leaped into second place with a jump of 18-3/4. Fiona Daly took second in the triple jump with a 36-foot effort and third in the high jump, 5-10. It was her first time competing in the triple jump.

"It was a nice effort for all the women, they really did an outstanding job," Kraft said. "A lot of people stepped up."

The men's team lost to both NAU and UofA by wide margins, but Kraft attributes that to the fact that they didn't have athletes to compete in the shot put, discus, high hurdles or short relay, causing them to miss out on a significant number of points.

Scores remain the same, but ASU rackets lose twice in Calif.

BY LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

The scores were reminiscent of the ASU women's tennis team's first outing against Cal and Stanford, but this time around the Sun Devils were unable to come up with either win.

The Sun Devils fell 5-4 to Cal Friday and 8-1 to Stanford Saturday.

"I thought we played pretty well overall, but that's sometimes the way it goes," Sun Devil head coach Sheila McInerney said.

In its first matches of the season, ASU beat Cal 5-4 and lost to Stanford 8-1. And just like the team's first match against the Bears, it all came down to the matches that went to three sets.

"Usually who ever wins the three-setters, wins the match," McInerney said.

Stephanie Lansdorp, Katy Propstra and Alison Nash's matches went to three sets, but only Nash won. Nash beat Stephanie Tibbits 7-6, 3-6, 6-3. No. 6 seed, Kerry Giardino had the only other singles win for the Sun Devils as she easily won her match against Lisa Swierniak 6-2, 6-3.

"It was a close one, we competed really well," Nash said. "It could've gone either way."

Cal swept the first three seeds in the singles matches. Reka Cseresnyes lost to Amanda Augustus 6-2, 6-3. Stephanie Lansdorp fell to Francesca La'O 4-6, 7-6, 6-3, Esther Knox defeated Katy Propstra 3-6, 6-2, 6-3 and Claire Curran beat Anna Moll 6-4, 6-1.

McInerney was impressed with ASU's wins at the No. 1 and 3 doubles. The team of Lansdorp and Propstra beat Augustus and Curran 8-4. Cseresnyes and Giardino defeated Swierniak and Jenny Lee 8-2. The team of Nash and Moll lost to La'O and Knox 8-4.

Against Stanford McInerney felt that several athletes played well in their individual matches, but Giardino notched the only win of the day. At the No. 5 seed, Giardino beat Ania Bleszynski 6-2, 6-2. Bleszynski was a semi-finalist last season at the NCAA Championships.

"That was probably the best match I've played all season," Giardino said.

McInerney also said that Cseresnyes played one of her better matches, even though she lost to Lilia Osterloh 6-3, 6-4.

Stanford swept the remaining singles matches in straight sets. Stanford also took all the doubles matches.

"We didn't play that well in doubles against Stanford," McInerney said. "They kind of blew us away, but they're a good team."

Stephanie Lansdorp and the rest of the ASU women's tennis team lost twice over the weekend.

Who's going to yank 'The Snake' come draft day?

JOSH DEFAMIO
Sports Columnist

It's a strange time of year for ASU athletics.

The anger of watching rival UofA capture a national basketball championship has died down, while the emotions of ASU's magical Rose Bowl run have long since faded to a pleasant memory.

Now, ASU fans are left to look forward to the NFL draft.

During the last several weeks, I've been asked numerous draft-day questions, most of them involving Jake "The Snake" Plummer. Rather than answering each of you individually, I'll make a list of frequently asked questions:

Q: Will Jake be taken in the top 10? How about the first round?

A: No and maybe, but its probable he'll go in the second round.

Q: Will "The Snake" be the first QB taken in this year's draft?

A: Once again, no. That honor belongs to Virginia Tech quarterback Jim Druckenmiller. Plummer should go second.

And of course, the most popular question: Which team will end up taking Plummer?

Now here's where it gets a little tricky. Several teams, most notably the Kansas City Chiefs and San Francisco 49ers, have publicly expressed interest in the QB. There have also been several other teams who scouts feel are very interested.

The top five:

1) Chiefs. No team has shown more interest in Plummer, including a well-publicized, two-day visit to the Valley in late February. Plummer would fit well in Kansas City with a team that has not had a solid, young starter in over a decade. His presence would give the Chiefs a chance to build their offense. Plummer will have a chance to learn the system while backing up newly signed Elvis Grbac.

However, the Chiefs may have hurt their chance by publicizing their interest in him. They cannot afford to take him in the first round, especially with their hole at tight end and the availability of two good ones (California's Tony Gonzalez and Louisiana

Jim Poulin/State Press

Jake Plummer's draft stock has risen considerably in the past few months. The ex-Sun Devil quarterback is expected to be a first- or second-round pick during this weekend's draft.

State's David LaFleur) in the first round. If another team has the same amount of interest in Plummer as the Chiefs do, it can simply pick him up before Kansas City gets a chance in the second round. Finally, the long-term deal given to Grbac indicates he is the starter for the next several years.

2) 49ers. Plummer seems like a logical choice for the 49ers, considering the comparisons he received to ex-QB Joe Montana. San Francisco also needs to develop a young quarterback to replace incumbent Steve Young, and Plummer is a perfect fit for the West Coast offense which San Francisco runs so well.

But, even with the signing of Garrison Hearst, the team has other needs it must address in the first round. Another offensive lineman must be added, since Hearst has a history of knee problems while running behind poor lines. The Niners also have a backup plan in Cal's Pat Barnes, who was coached by 49ers' new head coach Steve Mariucci in college. With the luxury of Barnes, Plummer is not the necessity he would be with the Chiefs.

3) Arizona Cardinals. Many wonder if Plummer would be a publicity pick for the team that plays in the same stadium as he did in college. However, Jake would be a good fit for a franchise that has played quarterback-shuffle since Neil Lomax hurt his hip in 1988. Plummer needs a short passing system, and the Cardinals have the best pass-catching running back in Larry Centers.

Once again, there are reasons for the Cardinals to shy away from Plummer. Although he will fill seats, many less-informed fans will wonder why he is playing second fiddle to starter Kent Graham. Also, with the great number of needs the Cardinals have, it would be hard to justify a second-round pick on Plummer.

4) Miami Dolphins. The interest from the Dolphins has not been well publicized, but many feel it exists for several reasons. Head coach Jimmy Johnson needs someone to take the reins from future Hall-of-Famer Dan Marino, and Plummer's work ethic would fit in well with the style of coaching Johnson brings.

But Johnson has always been partial to big, strong quarterbacks, such as Troy Aikman. Johnson also must fill some holes in the Dolphins defense, meaning Plummer is a very long shot in the first or second round for this franchise.

5) Philadelphia Eagles. The Eagles are the dark horse among the top five, although Plummer draws their interest because of the question marks surrounding Ty Detmer. As in Miami, Plummer would adjust well to coach Ray Rhodes' style, and the offense seems fit for Plummer.

However, the Eagles will probably get only one shot at him, as Plummer will most likely be gone by the time the Eagles pick in the second round. Furthermore, the media and fans in Philadelphia are among the toughest in the league, and there will be serious questions as to whether Plummer can handle that after the god-like treatment he has received in Arizona.

Of course, there are other teams interested in Plummer's services. Indianapolis and Buffalo are among several long shots which could land "The Snake."

And the final question:

Q: When will Jake Plummer be taken in this year's draft?

A: Once again, hard to say. But I have an idea. Place a mark before Miami's first pick, and put another one after San Francisco's second pick. My bet is he'll go somewhere in between those two marks.

However, the men's team did come up with some significant wins.

Mika Laiho won both the javelin and hammer throw. Laiho threw 197-08 in the javelin and 222-04 in the hammer. Lindsey McDonald took first in the 200 with a time of 21.65.

"Mika Laiho continues to be one of the stars of the show," Kraft said.

Kraft also gave credit to McDonald and walk-on LaVell Robinson-Blanchard.

McDonald took second in the 100 in 10.77 and Robinson-Blanchard took third with a time of 10.93. He also placed third in the 200 in 22 flat. In the 400 hurdles, Reggie Charlton took second in 53.42 and Tedrick Rodgers placed third in 56.28. Ari Rodriguez finished fourth in the 3000 in 8:38.83. Jon Bonk-Vasko took second in the high jump with a leap of 6-04.

This double dual was the last of three home meets in a row. The Sun Devils head to the Long Beach Invitational next weekend and the Drake Relays the weekend after that, before returning to Sun Angel Stadium May 3 for the ASU Invitational.

ASU men's tennis squad splits pair vs. Six-Pac rivals

The men's tennis squad wrapped up its home slate with a win (4-3 over Cal) and a loss (6-1 to Stanford) over the weekend.

BY LUANNE MULLER
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

The ASU men's tennis team finished off its home slate with by defeating Cal 4-3 on Saturday and losing to No. 7 Stanford 6-1 on Friday.

The Sun Devils overall record is 10-9, 2-7 in the Six-Pac.

In Friday's match against Stanford, the Cardinal swept all three doubles matches for the first point. At No. 1 doubles, Sun Devils Ed Carter and Sergio Elias lost to Bob Bryan and Mike Bryan 8-5, and ASU's Alex Osterrieth and Casey Was were defeated 8-4 by Geoff Abrams and Grant Elliot at No. 2. Sun Devils Tim Hammond and Gustavo Marcaccio put up a fight in losing to Ryan Wolters and Misha Palecek 9-7.

In singles action, the Sun Devils fell to Stanford at the No. 1, 2, 3, 5, and 6 spots.

At No. 1, Elias lost to Wolters 6-1, 6-1. Bob Bryan defeated Osterrieth 6-4, 6-1 at the No. 2 spot, and Marcaccio lost to Mike Bryan 6-3, 6-3. At No. 5, Elliot defeated Hammond 6-3, 6-3. Was battled Cardinal Charlie Hoeveler to three sets, but lost 3-6, 6-5, 6-7.

The only point for ASU, and the bright spot of the match, came at the No. 4 spot, where Carter defeated Abrams for the second time this year 6-4, 1-6, 6-3.

Saturday proved to be a better day for the Sun Devils, starting with the doubles matches. ASU lost at the No. 2 seed, but won at No. 1 and No. 3 to earn the doubles point. Elias and Carter defeated California's Carlos Santoso and David Sutton 8-5, and Marcaccio and Hammond beat Minh Le and Adam Gross 9-7. Osterrieth and Was lost to Alex Sueur and Nathan Jackmon 8-5.

Winning the doubles point was a confidence builder for the Sun Devils.

"We played better doubles today," Hammond said. "We are more confident going into the singles when we win the doubles point."

That confidence led ASU to split the singles matches, winning at the No. 1, 2, and 5 spots. No. 1 Elias beat Santoso easily 6-3, 6-2.

"I didn't do anything great, but I played pretty solid," Elias said about his win. "I just tried to work on attacking and being aggressive."

At No. 2, Osterrieth sent Sueur down in straight sets 6-3, 6-3. No. 3 Marcaccio lost to Jackmon, but not before taking the match to three sets 6-3, 4-6, 1-6. Carter, at the number No. 4 seed, lost to Sutton 6-2, 6-2, and was fell to Brian Fernando 6-1, 6-1 at No. 6. At the No. 5 spot, Hammond's come-from-behind win against Le (4-6, 7-6, 6-2) clinched the victory for ASU.

"I feel good because I lost to him (Le) last time we played them (California). I hung in there and fought well and competed well," Hammond said. "I had fitness over him. We took it to three sets, and he was getting tired."

The Sun Devils finish the regular season this weekend on the road at UofA. After that the team will participate in the Pac-10 Championships in Palo Alto, Calif., on April 23-26.

score, then allowed Greg Halvorson to cap the scoring when the ball was mishandled by Cardinal left fielder Chris Clark.

Jon Schaeffer stroked a solo home run to right field in the ninth, but could not pull out the win.

Bradley improved his record to 6-5 after tossing the last 1.2 innings in relief. Starter Phill Lowery gave up two runs on six hits, walked three and struck out four in seven innings of work.

Stanford starter Kyle Peterson (6-2) was handed the loss after giving up four runs on five hits, and striking out eight.

Saturday's game saw ASU pitcher Ryan Mills improve his record to 4-2 while Cardinal starter Chad Hutchinson dropped to 3-2. Mills threw seven-plus innings of work, and gave up three runs on eight hits and struck out four. Hutchinson gave up 10 runs on seven hits, walked six and struck out five in two-plus innings.

Andrew Beinbrink went 2-for-3 with four RBI while Leon went 3-for-6 with five RBI and a home run.

ASU travels to Norman, Okla., to face the Oklahoma Sooners on Tuesday, then returns to Packard Stadium to host Cal for a three-game series.

Softball splits two; soccer gets Haigh

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The ASU softball team experienced mixed results in Oregon this weekend, splitting doubleheaders with both Oregon State and Oregon.

The tenth-ranked Sun Devils (30-12, 8-8 Pac-10) were downed by Oregon State in the first game, 4-2, then bounced back to take the second game 5-1.

Junior Roxanne Tsosie (15-2) picked up the win in the second game with her 10th complete game, while junior Carrie Breedlove took the loss in the first game.

Sophomore Holly Smith and senior Stacey Slick provided the offense in the victory, with Smith knocking in two runs on a 2-for-3 performance, while Slick went 2-for-4 with a stolen base.

Junior Raja Woods and sophomore Carla Fortune played well in the losing effort, as each banged out two hits in the opening contest.

ASU then went on to take the first of two against Oregon the next day, 8-6.

The Sun Devils knocked out 11 hits, including two by senior Tanya Herмосillo and a bases-loaded triple by senior Lisa Dacquisto.

Senior Carrie James (6-2) picked up the win, while Tsosie notched her first save.

The Sun Devils then finished the weekend with a 5-3 loss to Oregon, despite a 4-for-4, two run performance by Dacquisto.

Breedlove (8-7) absorbed the loss.

ASU returns to action next Sunday, when they host No. 3 UCLA at Sun Devils Club stadium.

WOMEN'S SOCCER HIRES ASSISTANT

The ASU women's soccer program hired Jennifer Haigh as an assistant coach, Sun Devil head coach Terri Patraw announced Friday.

Haigh, who played four years at the University of Wisconsin, most recently coached the Bangu F.C. Club team in Minneapolis.

Before coaching in Minnesota, she played professionally for one season in Jokoping, Sweden for JFK Jonkoping. She has also coached at the high school and Olympic development level.

"Jennifer is a great fit for ASU soccer," Patraw said. "She has top-level collegiate and international experience."

ASU men's gymnastics place third

BY MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

SEATTLE — It was a time of triumph, sadness and surprises for the ASU men's gymnastics team at the U.S.A. Gymnastics National Collegiate Championships over the weekend.

One Sun Devil became an All-American for the 12th time and a National Champion for the third time before ending his college career. Another, just starting his, became a two-time All-American.

ASU senior Rob Kjar finished his college days by taking the gold medal in the pommel horse, the most difficult event in men's gymnastics, with a score of 9.625. He was second in the event last season, but reigned supreme the previous two years.

Additionally, Kjar received All-American status in the high bar, where he finished tied for fourth, and the all-around, where he was second. Kjar finished 1.15 points behind UCLA's Steve McCain, the No. 1 gymnast in the country, with 55.85 points.

The top six gymnasts in each event are automatically All-Americans.

Afterwards, Kjar was ecstatic about his performance, which was the highest point total of his life.

"I'm really happy about (the results)," Kjar said with a smile that stretched from Pudget Sound to the Atlantic Ocean. "That's the best way to go out, by winning the pommel horse. It's the third time I've done that, but each time it's different. I'm just real happy about that."

Even McCain had good words for Kjar. "When he was on the junior national team and I was too, I thought he was just like me," McCain said. "I'm happy for the guy because I know that gymnastics is a big part of his life just like mine. It's good to see him come here and triumph and have fun."

ASU head coach Scott Barclay had mixed emotions about Kjar's performance last weekend.

"I'm happy (about Kjar's last competition)," he said. "I'm going to miss Rob. He's the last one to go through the hell we went through when we lost the program. He's one of the few gymnasts who hung with this team to the very end. I'm real proud of him for that."

The gymnastics team was dropped from NCAA status to club status after the 1993 season.

The other Sun Devil who brought back additional hardware was freshman Randy Sooter. He claimed sixth on the all-around with a score of 54.20 and an unexpected second on the high bar with 9.45 points.

Like the style in which he performs, Sooter gave a straight, direct answer when he asked if he expected to do so well.

"Yes," he said.

As a team, ASU made its most impressive showing of the year, point-wise, racking up a total of 211.55. However, it was only good enough for third as UCLA won the team title with 221.575 points. Miami (Fla.) Dade Community College (215.925) was second.

ASU defeated UCLA two weeks ago at the Sun Devil Invitational when the Bruins were without McCain, but Barclay said that he wasn't the only difference in the results.

"I think that any time you put the pressure of a National Championship people rise to the occasion," he said. "We went up five points, but I think every team did."

Erik Guzowski/State Press
Freshman Randy Sooter and the ASU men's club gymnastics team earned third at the NCC meet last weekend.

Another reason for the difference was the Sun Devils' performance on the pommel horse. Three different Sun Devils fell and ASU could only muster 33.2 points.

These mistakes, though, couldn't hold back the joy Barclay had for his team.

"I knew coming in we had a big job to do to hang with them (the competition)," Barclay said. "The team did the job. I was real proud of them. Of course, we would have liked to place a little higher, but the two teams that beat us are exceptional teams. And if I'm going to lose as a team, those are good teams to lose to."

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST
by Frances Drake
Monday, April 14, 1997

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You hear from a far-away friend or two. A minor problem could arise in connection with a partnership. Talks with advisers and representatives are favored.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You have a private business meeting that proves beneficial for you. Be careful in your use of credit. Watch excesses when socializing during evening hours.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) What you hear from an adviser only confuses the issue. It's best to rely on your own instincts. It should be a time of social successes, provided you mind your manners.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You could return an item that you recently bought. Do extra homework about a career concern. Avoid business dealings with higher-ups. At night, get plenty of rest.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Social life could lead to overspending, but your thinking is crystal clear. It's a good time to make important decisions or to deal with creative interests.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You might have some last-minute thoughts as to someone's birthday gift. It's not the best day to get your thoughts across to others. Research is favored.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You're capable of in-depth thinking, and your judgment is especially shrewd about business and financial interests. Don't let friends distract you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have sound insight into others' motives. Contractual matters are favored, and partners reach important agreements. Watch your spending in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Use tact in dealings with a family member. You find a surprisingly simple solution to a job-related problem that has troubled you for some time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Try not to get sidetracked by unimportant matters. Concentrate on the tasks at hand. It should be a romantic time for those in love.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) You're sharp and perceptive in your thinking. You reach an understanding with a family member. You could get carried away with romantic inspirations.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) Try not to be overly concerned about a trifling matter on the job. You're in touch with your creativity and should put it to good use. Accent family life after dark.

YOU BORN TODAY have a natural interest in politics and reform and would make a good government leader. You're a person of vision who's inclined to do your own thing. Although you're a good money maker, you're more inclined to an artistic or academic career than a business career. You have original ideas, but need to hone your self discipline to make them work for you. You're at your best when your work reflects the inner you.
