400 still lack housing; officials seek alternatives

BY GINGER SCOTT
 STATE PRESS

Heading into the first week of school, 400 students remain without permanent housing after Residential Life accepted more applications than it could honor.

Sally Bryant, director of Residential Life, said the department always accepts extra applications in anticipation of cancellations. Because of a 700-student increase in freshman enrollment this year, the number of cancellations was less than expected.

The number of students without housing was cut from 2,000 as of July 29 to more than 400, Bryant said.

"We have moved all of the students in who had rooms assigned to them," Bryant said. "We are currently running an audit of the no-shows to find out how much space we have available and then we will begin putting more students into those rooms."

One hundred students were expected to temporarily live in the Twin Palms Hotel, located at 225 E. Apache Blvd. However, Residential Life moved in 75 students during orientation week. Only 44 students still reside there.

Each student must pay $20 each night to stay at the hotel. Residential Life is paying an additional $6.50 for each student living at the hotel — approximately $2,600 total — to compensate for the extra costs and inconveniences.

The average dorm costs $2,705 per academic year, which breaks down to about $10 a day.

Residential Life was able to move some people from Twin Palms to the residence halls right away due to cancellations, Bryant said.

"They sent me a letter a couple of weeks before I was moving out here," Tino Bichsel, a temporary resident at the Twin Palms Hotel, said. "It's kind of annoying because I've had so many problems."

Bichsel said he has checked in with Residential Life and expects to be moving into a residence hall within a couple of weeks.

It is the goal of Residential Life officials to have everyone out of the hotel and into the residence halls by Sept. 15. Bryant said she expects the students to be transferred to the residence halls much sooner.

"I anticipate they will all be within the system in the next two weeks," Bryant said, adding that many students will participate in Rush and will be moving from the residence halls into fraternity housing.

Along with the hotel, students are seeking residence at ASU East's Williams Campus Housing. The residence halls there are similar to Ocotillo Hall on ASU's main campus. Students can commute to the main campus via shuttle.

ASU East is housing a total of 850 students and a small percentage of those are main campus students, said Jennifer

Intergroup Relations Center to tackle ASU racial issues

BY DAVE WOODFILL
 STATE PRESS

More than a year after an explosion of racial incidents on campus, the Intergroup Relations Center has opened its doors to students and faculty to create a more tolerant campus environment.

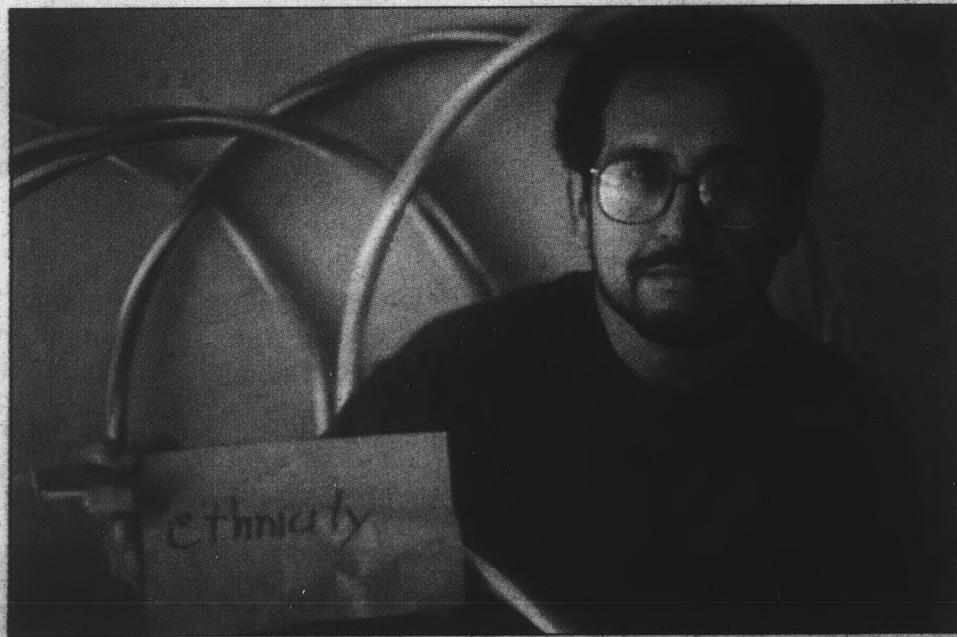

Jesus Trevino, director of the center said the IRC isn't just another race relations program.

"The role of the center will be to engage in a new type of training of students and faculty," Trevino said. "We're going to take what's called a non-defensive approach."

"In older techniques they would bring whites into a room and the speaker would say, 'Everyone here is a racist and by the time we are through you will understand why you are racists.' What happened is that their defensive shields would go up and whatever valuable information the speaker would have wouldn't sink in."

The programs are optional for faculty, staff and students, Trevino said. The center will ask professors to encourage students to attend the program by giving them credit for doing so.

The initiative for the IRC began after a series of racial upsets, one of which included Beth Pearce, a teacher's aide who handed out a sheet during one of her classes containing several racial jokes. The paper was meant to promote a discussion on race relations, but when it surfaced outside of the class it caused an uproar among many students.

Students Against Discrimination met with ASU's president Lattie Coor to address the problem.

"The administration has been very supportive. Because we presented such an impressive representation of the campus, it was something that they really couldn't ignore," said Tonya Banz, one of the SAD founders.

Dondrell Swanson, former head spokesman of SAD, said he was ecstatic to see the program take off so quickly. It was the result of an enormous effort from the students who composed the task force, he said.

"What we wanted were structural changes," Swanson said. "We wanted to put some type of entity in this University that would help to educate those on campus and to basically teach people to get along with each other."

Trevino said the IRC was one of the group's proposals.

Several of the Center's programs are already underway. One of these is Voices of Discovery, a six-week program composed of students from all walks of life who will discuss ethnic issues and seek solutions and understanding of other cultures and values.

The IRC has already received calls from the English department and the Tempe Human Relations Council for training.

Trevino said, "A vast majority of our work will be done on campus with faculty, staff and students but the center also supports the surrounding community."

TODAY

Campus clubs and organizations may submit written entries to the State Press in the basement of the Matthews Center. Requests will not be taken over the phone or via fax.

Deadline for requests is noon the day before publication and entries will not be accepted more than three working days before publication. Only one entry per organization per day is permitted.

Entries must contain the full name of the club or organization, a description of the event, date, time and the full address of the location. All requests are subject to editing for content, space and clarity. Incomplete or illegible entries will be discarded.

The Today Section is a daily calendar of events printed as a service to the ASU community. Requests are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis and are printed as space permits.

• Baptist Student Union Christian Ministries— Tuesday praise and worship at 8 p.m., 1322 S. Mill Ave.

• ASU Forensics — Organizational meeting for interested debaters, speakers and performers will be held 3:15 p.m. at Stauffer Hall, room 301.

• Kappa Delta Chi sorority — Informational meeting. Come and meet new members and find out about membership. Sunday dress, please. Meeting will be held on the second floor of the MU, check the screens for more information.

• ASU Rugby Club — Tryouts are at 6:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at the ASU bandfields. Tryouts will be held from Aug. 26 to Sept. 15. All students are welcome. For more information, call Corbin Krell at 425-0783.

Housing

Hiatt, program coordinator for Williams Campus Housing.

"We still have some space remaining and we will accept applications from main campus students," she said.

ASU students living at the East campus will have the option of being temporary or permanent residents.

"We have said we would be really liberal in letting people out of their contracts if they find housing on the main campus," Hiatt said.

There are also students without campus housing who are not living at ASU East or the Twin Palms Hotel.

"This was a huge inconvenience," said John Duncan. "Along with sleeping on a sofa, I'm living out of my car."

Duncan said he received notice in July that he may not be appointed to a residence hall room. This was followed by another letter on July 30 telling Duncan that he would need to find some form of alternate housing.

"The letter pretty much said 'sorry we don't have any space,'" Duncan said. "They also sent a list of apartment complexes in the area."

Bryant said some students may have found apartment housing as well. Students that no longer want on-campus housing need to write a formal cancellation or contact Residential Life before receiving their deposit.

There are some students who have not informed Residential Life of their status, Bryant said.

"Some of these may be applicants who may or may not have elected to come to ASU," she said.

THE STATE PRESS IS SEEKING REPORTERS AND OPINION COLUMNISTS FOR THE FALL 1997 SEMESTER.

This is a great experience for anyone interested in pursuing a career in journalism. Reporter applicants should be competent writers familiar with AP style, and able to find good story ideas without a lot of prodding. Experience and/or a high level of motivation is preferred.

Opinion writers should have an above-average command of the language and a strong writing voice. Ideally, articles should be as well-researched and informative as they are thought-provoking.

If you're interested, please pick up an application today and return it with clips of any stories you've written to Student Publications, in the Matthews Center basement.

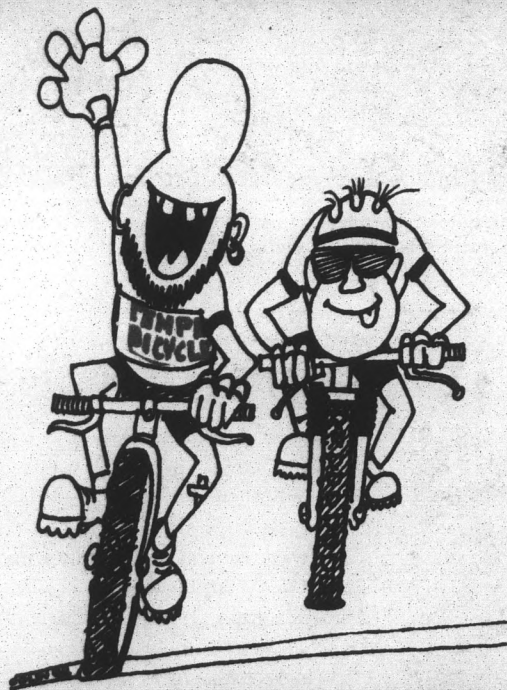

DEADLINE: SEPT. 8, 1997

Last East German communist leader jailed for shooting

BY PAUL GEITNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — The East German communist leader who threw open the Berlin Wall eight years ago was convicted of manslaughter Monday for the shooting deaths of citizens who tried to flee to the West during the Cold War.

Egon Krenz, who labeled the trial "victor's justice," remained defiant even as he was taken into custody to begin serving his 6 1/2-year sentence.

Pale but with his head held high, the 60-year-old Krenz shouted "I will not submit!" before being led away.

Krenz says he does not accept unified Germany's right to prosecute him.

"I wasn't convicted because of a crime, but because of my political offices in East Germany," he said in a statement afterward. "The political persecution is revenge for the fact that East Germany existed."

The Berlin state court convicted Krenz on four manslaughter counts and ordered him jailed immediately as a potential flight risk.

The verdicts mark the first time former members of the East German political hierarchy have been held accountable for deaths at the heavily fortified East German border.

It also was likely to be the last such trial against former political leaders, since most either have died or been excused for health reasons. Other trials since the 1989 fall of the Berlin Wall have dealt only with border guards and military leaders.

At least 916 people were killed trying to escape during East Germany's 41 years of existence, according to authorities, including 80 at the Berlin Wall. The charges were reduced to six counts of manslaughter to speed up the trial that began in November 1995.

had argued he couldn't be held accountable for the deaths because East Germany lacked independence as a pawn of Moscow.

The court said that was no defense. "Even if East Germany acted under the command of the Soviet Union, the crimes still must be prosecuted," presiding Judge Josef Hoch said.

Florida settles lawsuit against tobacco industry

BY KAREN TESTA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Florida's war against the tobacco industry ended today with the signing of an $11.3 billion settlement of a lawsuit intended to punish cigarette makers for decades of fraud and racketeering.

"The tobacco industry very much wanted to settle because our trial is getting closer," said April Herrle, a spokeswoman for Gov. Lawton Chiles. "The clock has been ticking for tobacco."

Chiles said the state won on three important battlegrounds: "protecting Florida's children, making tobacco pay for the damage it has cost our taxpayers and for cigarette makers to finally tell the truth."

In Philadelphia, meanwhile, a federal judge today set an October trial date for another major lawsuit against the industry.

Chiles and tobacco industry lawyer Arthur Golden signed their agreement in court today before Palm Beach County Circuit Judge Harold Cohen.

The trial had been in jury selection since Aug. 1. In depositions, tobacco executives had already conceded that smoking is harmful and can cause deadly diseases. Chiles said those admissions helped spur the deal.

"The industry finally acknowledged that it has a responsibility to truly warn people that smoking kills," Chiles said outside court. "There's a debt long past due for tobacco to pay."

The industry said in a statement: "This is another step in a process to end the climate of confrontation and litigation that has marked the national debate on tobacco-related issues."

White House spokesman Barry Toiv said President Clinton had not yet seen the Florida settlement, but planned to continue an administration review of the proposed overall settlement.

"We don't think it should have any impact on our review of the proposed national settlement," Toiv said. As for that review, "we'll probably have more to say about it in September."

In addition to the financial settlement, the industry agreed to pull down all of its billboards within six months and start with signs within 1,000 feet of schools. Vending machines where children have access will be removed, and outdoor advertising in sporting arenas and on mass transit will be banned.

Burger King yanks Hudson meat from restaurants after bacteria scare

ASSOCIATED PRESS

OMAHA, Neb. — Embroiled in a bad-beef nightmare, Hudson Foods Inc. thought the worst was over. Then the company was hit with a Whopper-sized wallop.

In a bid to restore public confidence in its burgers, Burger King yanked Hudson's beef out of its restaurants permanently, said David Nixon, a spokesman at Burger King headquarters in Miami. Hudson's had announced a recall of 25 million pounds of possibly tainted beef last week, the largest such recall ever.

Burger King also began advertising in newspapers around the country today in an attempt to assure customers that its beef is safe.

The fast-food giant was Hudson's largest beef client. It was unknown what would happen to the company's idled plant in Columbus following the recall and Burger King's reaction to it.

Burger King competitors McDonald's and Wendy's don't use Hudson meat and weren't affected by the scare. Other Hudson customers, including Boston Market restaurants and Wal-Mart and Sam's Club stores, pulled the meat last week.

Some consumers are cutting back on beef regardless of the source.

Ann Vogelson, a New York bank employee and mother of two, said she was serving her family less meat.

"We only eat beef once, maybe twice a week anyway," Vogelson said today. "But yesterday, I was making sauce, and just decided I should make it without the ground beef."

"I can't say I'm really worried, but it's in the back of my mind."

Others were not bothered.

Charlie Hurwitz, 85, ate two plain hamburgers for lunch today at a McDonald's in midtown New York, as he does three or four times a week.

"I've been around a long time, and people have banned everything at some point. When I want a hamburger, I'm going to order it. I just don't let it bother me," said the retired banker.

The recall was prompted by possible contamination by E. coli contamination. Hudson Foods has said the contamination likely came from a supplier.

The company said it will try to keep the Columbus plant open, but the decision will be made only if the Department of Agriculture approves.

The recall forced restaurants and supermarket chains to scramble for replacement beef Thursday night and Friday.

Burger King, the nation's second-largest fast-food chain, took a huge hit by the recall. Some 1,650 restaurants in 28 states — or one of every four Burger Kings in the United States — was reduced to serving chicken, ham and fish, even BLT's, for a day or two.

Tests on samples of Burger King's recalled meat showed no problem, said Michael Simmonds, president of Simmonds Restaurant Management in Omaha, which owns 64 Burger Kings in Nebraska and Iowa.

"I think Burger King is doing the right thing in dropping Hudson Foods to make sure any meat supplier we use is flawless," he said.

A crew of workers make cheesesteak sandwiches at Pat's King of Steaks in South Philadelphia Monday. At Pat's King of Steaks, a restaurant that specializes in Philadelphia cheesesteaks, sales have increased by at least 10 percent since the beef recall, according to Frank E. Olivieri, one of Pat's owners.

Problems plague Mir

Occupants struggle as oxygen generators malfunction

BY MARCIA DUNN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The three men aboard Russia's Mir space station lost use of both their primary and backup oxygen generators at least temporarily today, a potentially serious problem, NASA said.

It was not immediately known whether either system had resumed working, said NASA spokesman Ed Campion. Even if both still are broken, Mir has enough oxygen to last at least a couple of days, he said.

"If you can't get either of the two systems back up, then you're facing a serious situation," said Campion, speaking by telephone from the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

Russian flight controllers do not know the present status aboard Mir because the two Russian cosmonauts and one American astronaut were trying to fix the failed solid fuel-burning system — the backup system — when they had their last communication pass of the day, Campion said.

If neither system can be repaired in the next few days, the crew would have to return to Earth in the attached Soyuz escape capsule.

Neither Russian nor U.S. space officials will find out whether that system is still broken until early Tuesday EDT. For sure, the primary Elektron generator was not working; it began overheating and shut itself down today, Campion said.

"It could be that tomorrow it could be no problem, or it could be a fairly significant problem," Campion said.

In Russia, calls to Russian Mission Control for comment late in the evening Moscow time went unanswered after NASA disclosed the problem.

Football games make bad parking worse

The end of August means different things to different people.

For the students of ASU, it means the beginning of fall semester — no more relaxing, sleeping late or vegging out by the pool.

To some of us, that means coming back to this Valley of Sweat from somewhere much cooler and more comfortable.

But to others — we who have remained in this blistering heat all summer — it means something quite different.

It means the invasion has begun.

To those who have never been around campus during the summer, here's the rundown. Sure, it's extremely hot and miserable, but there is an overall sense of quiet and peacefulness that pervades the area. The everyday struggles of cramming 45,000 or so people into a three-mile area are no longer a problem.

For example, it is possible to walk on Mill Avenue on a Friday night without being attacked by hordes of people cruising the strip and "checking out the scenery," as it may be. How nice it was to be able to drive around campus, park close to the destination of choice and not have to fight for a space — or, for that matter, to have to sit in long lines at traffic lights, waiting to make a left turn, as the air conditioning in the car begins to blow luke-warm air.

The invasion includes more than just students, however. There is another fall tradition which wreaks havoc on the sanity of those who long for the peace of summertime.

That's right, folks — it's professional football season.

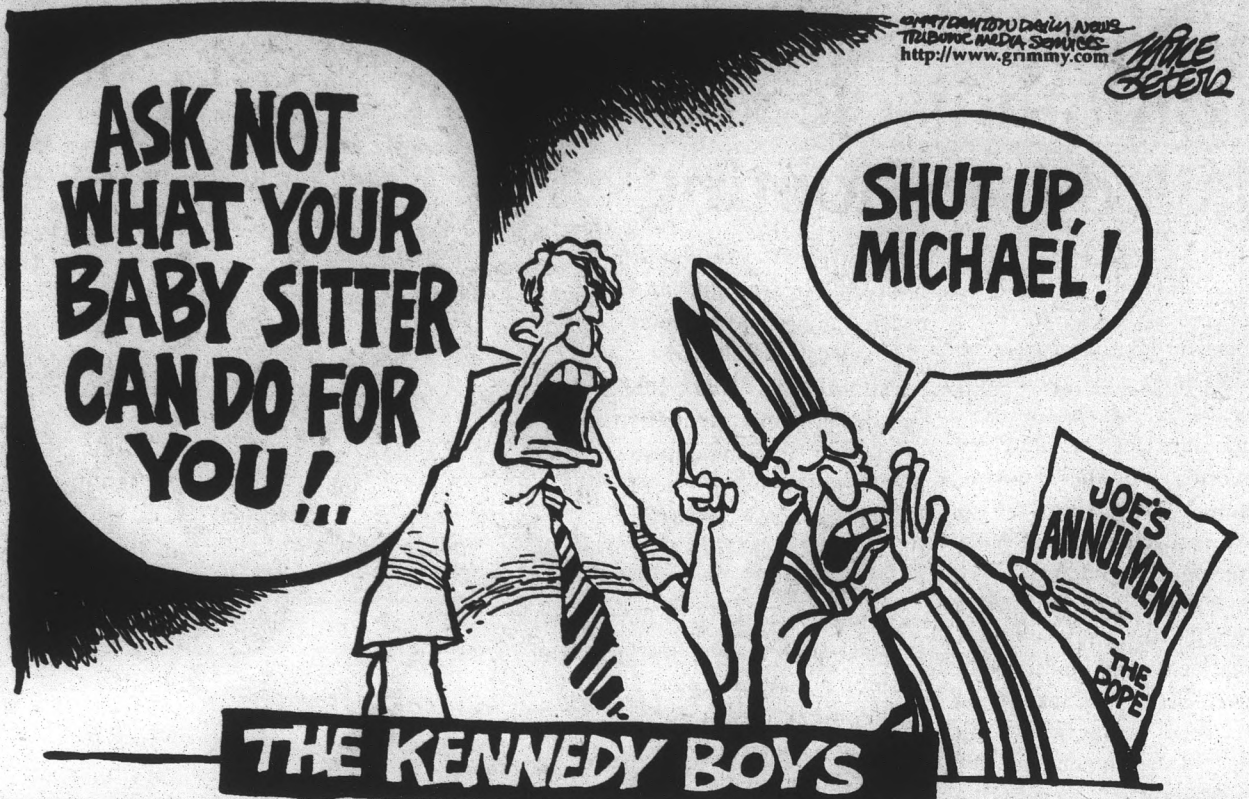

As if parking, traffic and general overcrowding weren't enough problems, we also have to deal with the flocks of red-and-white-wearing, beer-drinking Cardinals fans, who, because of their never-ending reservoirs of hope, continue to pack their bodies into Sun Devil Stadium and their cars into our less-than-plentiful number of parking lots.

It still amazes us that students who fork out their hard-earned financial aid money for parking decals cannot get spaces in their own lots because the fans have to park their cars as close to the stadium as possible. Heaven forbid they have to walk.

And what about driving around campus? It's not even worth leaving home for at least an hour before or after a game, because the traffic jams are enough to bring even the toughest football player to tears. And then there's the fact that the police put up roadblocks so no one can make a left turn anywhere within a two-mile radius of campus. Those people who live or work in the areas surrounding campus are faced with quite a disservice and something should be done about it.

Perhaps the Cardinals should provide a shuttle service from an area outside downtown Tempe where people can park their cars — therefore eliminating the amount of traffic coming in and out of campus. Just an idea; there may be better alternatives out there, but the problem is, no one is looking for them.

The invasion has begun, but fear not, students of ASU — the answer is out there.

First-day class rituals degrade students

Call me a cynic or whiner, but there are not many things that compare to the horrid prospect of another semester of seemingly endless boredom and 7:40 a.m. classes. To make matters worse, there are inevitable initiation rites which have become increasingly popular among many ASU faculty members.

MATTHIAS WALTER SCHEIDT
Columnist

Older students may still recall the old days when your name and major were sufficient introduction to a new class. Now, first-day-of-class rituals range from the absurd to the absolutely ridiculous. Rite stuff straight from the minor idiocy department includes getting your picture taken or having to share a cute anecdote from your vivacious past — yawn.

But that's not all, folks! In one of my classes, an instructor thought it was a neat idea to play musical chairs to "break the ice." The ultimate insult is that I am paying for this belated time warp into the nexus of my kindergarten days.

The rite stuff also tells you a lot about the respect that students apparently deserve in the eyes of some faculty members. And maybe, just maybe, rightly so. After all, the assumption that many college kids are starved for superficial affection does not seem all that far-fetched for a generation for whom drinking binges and dorm parties are oftentimes the beginning of wonderful, yet notoriously short-lived, "friendships."

There is also another problem with this communal breaking of the ice. It is always broken on the backs of those who were able to leave their inner-child behind before they turned 19.

Simply refusing to participate in the sharing frenzy is not an option; such behavior tends to attract attention rather than divert it. Besides, well-meaning teachers often mistake reticence for neurotic inhibition or hidden animosity. Consequently, help is offered where none is wanted, much less needed.

Perhaps I am just old-fashioned, paranoid or "socially challenged," but I feel absolutely no need to share my personal experiences with 30 perfect strangers right off the bat. I wonder why anyone would. After all, there are friends, family, maybe a shrink or even a members of the clergy whom we can bother with our personal problems. They may even give a damn. You can't replace them with a bizarre mixture of ad hoc in-class therapy and phony Brady Bunch mentality.

Some of my past first-day-of-class encounters, for instance, indicate that repressive introverts like me are not the only ones in dire need of help:

- Bob has known God really exists ever since the Holy Spirit descended upon him.
- Dominique's daily three-hour workout routine leaves him little time to pursue "intellectual matters." But the chicks dig muscles and that is what counts.
- Paula has been abducted by an alien spacecraft twice — once in Idaho, once in Montana.
- Christine is an agriculture major from Wisconsin who wants to become an actress someday and is currently doing a commercial for baking soda toothpaste. Say cheese!

Yes indeed, these stories do go straight to the heart ... if heartburn is any guide.

It is sad to see how parody once again lags miles behind ASU reality.

The thing that gives me the creeps about that kind of modern class introduction is that there is no way of telling what imaginative instructors may come up with next.

Communal watching of Baywatch or Beverly Hills 90something? Mandatory registration for the Republican party? A frontal lobotomy? Or are Barney and Big Bird already on ASU retainer, waiting backstage?

Athletes should take role-model tips from Tiger, WNBA

What is it about human nature that makes us look for role models to pattern our lives after? Maybe it's an individual's stature or prowess causes others to look to and follow after that person. In past generations, there were no role-model shortages and multitudes of others would have willingly lined up to provide an example for young men and women. Among them — and rightly so — were mothers and fathers.

GEOERGE ROSE
Columnist

When I was a boy, we looked up to leaders like Gen. Douglas MacArthur ("I will return...") who exemplified courage and determination in opposition to an unjust foe. We looked up to the likes of John Glenn, a pioneer who lived out every boy's dream of traveling in space. Neil Armstrong's "... one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind," inspired us to rise to any challenge and made even the impossible possible. Jackie Robinson inspired a whole generation to reach for their dreams. In addition to these, there were Einstein, JFK, Hubert Humphrey and a myriad of others to look to for inspiration.

Whatever happened? Things have clouded over the last few decades, with kids looking increasingly to sports figures as heroes. While this is not wrong, something in the formula has gone wrong. In the past, these figures felt a certain responsibility and obligation as examples to younger generations. That sense of duty is largely gone now. Today at the very least today, we have a mixed bag. You've got the likes of Charles Barkley, who, upon first joining the Phoenix Suns, decried the scrutiny he was subjected to as a public figure. The media pointed to his excesses and personal shortcomings and he was reminded that this was not role model behavior. His reply was that it was the parents' role to be role models. While he was right about parents' responsibilities, he was wrong about his own. Being prominently placed in the public eye (by his own choice, I might add) makes Barkley a role model, willing or not.

Young athletes might be well served to remember this point: They must force themselves to remember that people are watching and scrutinizing their lives and actions. This is something that, thus far, Tiger Woods has seemed to remember, but our very own Jake Plummer has not.

Woods is being cited as a role model for a new generation of minorities — this in part to his dominance in a historically white man's sport. There is something endearing about seeing Woods embrace his father in unfeigned affection and his father's delight over his son's success. His success is not clouded by controversy or scandal. His bright smile is a welcome sight not only to the public, but to advertisers lining up with endorsement offers.

On the other hand, Jake Plummer is not a role model for anybody. It seems that he is confronted daily with new charges of sexual misconduct. Maybe he, like so many other successful young athletes, thinks that his fame gives him a carte blanche with anybody he desires. Is he in the same camp with Sir Charles Barkley about not wanting to be anyone's role model? Does he live in a vacuum?

What is it about these athletes who forget self-restraint at the taste of financial success? Maybe there is a link between money, morality and role models.

I was intrigued by a headline about the new Women's National Basketball Association. It read, "WNBA shoots, scores as role model." These women are looking forward to becoming role models to a whole generation of girls and they're apparently unafraid of doing it.

Look at salary comparisons between the NBA and the WNBA. The female players will make between $7,500 and $50,000 for their efforts. NBA players start at $220,000 and end up near $25 million. These women make far less than Jake's reported $600,000 contract. That's a big difference in my book.

I trust that these women are willing to become role models for reasons beyond the fact that they can't afford to be bad or — in the words of Dennis Rodman (who I hope is nobody's role model) — bad as they want to be.

Somebody better get a clue.

'Graphic' story hits the Web

While browsing the ASU News website, I noticed that the State Press has the past several issues available to read. I decided to check out the Aug. 5 issue. The very first article was on swing clubs operating in the Valley. I was stunned and surprised that the content of this article was so graphic. I found it obscene. It seemed to be a free advertisement of these clubs, inviting ASU students to check them out.

I understand that ASU is developing a code of conduct for students. I would like to see this type of reporting fall under those guidelines. Since this is on our ASU website, it is available to anyone around the world. Do we want to have our university represented in this manner? Whether the article is published in newsprint or electronically, the content should conform to some kind of acceptable standard.

State Press covered under 'freedom of the press'

In Barbara L. Guilliams' (letter to the editor) "Smut has no place in student publications" (Aug. 25, 1997), she claims: "I am all for 'freedom of the press,'" yet I am unconvinced you understand just what that freedom means.

The beauty of this country is that, in theory at least, people have the right to print whatever they feel is newsworthy — sans consideration of "appropriateness" due to audience. It is also the right of those who disagree with an article's topic to simply not read the offending article.

It is not the job of the State Press — or any other news journal — to censor for adults capable of censoring for themselves. The "journalistic responsibility" you refer to deals with the publication of truth rather than libel/slander, and does not extend to the areas of deciding what you as an individual may/may not deem as offensive.

Furthermore, simply because this is a student publication, does not mean that it must be held to different standards than any other legitimate publication. It is not the job of this newspaper to please parents or to promote "family values." You are more than welcome to promote whatever you wish in your own home, but I read the State Press for unbiased news and do not appreciate other people's conservative attitudes determining what it is I am allowed to read.

I personally hope that "Anything Goes" does become a motto for the State Press. If this offends you, no one's holding a gun to your head and making you read.

Learning English is key to life in the US

Editor's note: This letter is in response to Chris Passamano's Aug. 5 editorial, "Woman in bar proves racism takes on all colors."

I want to agree with you and then disagree with you on your remark about having to learn English. I believe that learning English is as vital as learning American history in order for foreigners to take the citizenship test. I know from first-hand experience how tough either of those can be to foreigners, but it's something that they must do to become citizens. My grandmother refuses to take the citizenship test in her native language because she wants to feel like an American and take it in English — which is our national language. She arrived in America when she was 65. She is now 80 and still taking classes every day to learn to speak English. There are foreigners out there in this country, most of them illegal, that don't care. As long as they're in their community, they will never have to learn.

I don't know if your discussions with that lady arose from "US citizens should learn how to speak English" or just simply "one must know how to speak English if they want to live here." All US citizens should know how to speak English, and it's not a matter of freedom, it's a matter of being "one nation under God." We have areas in this country that speak Spanish more frequently than English, (i.e. Miami and El Paso) where denizens merely occupy space and indulge in government freebies while staying loyal to their native countries.

As an American citizen, I didn't feel like I was in the States anymore when I was in El Paso. As a matter of fact, I was treated like I was a foreigner because I didn't speak Spanish. That angered me. Not because I was having prejudiced thoughts about Hispanics — it was because I was treated as a foreigner for not speaking their language. For those reasons and many more, I truly believe that if you want to live in the United States of America, you should take efforts to at least learn to speak English.

The State Press welcomes and encourages written response from our readers on any topic. All letters must be typed, double-spaced and no longer than two pages to be eligible for publication. Letters are subject to editing by the opinion page editor for factual errors and print space availability. Letters containing obvious factual errors will be rejected. All letters must either be brought in person with a photo I.D. to the State Press front desk in the basement of the Matthews Center, or addressed to the State Press, Box 871502, Arizona State University, Tempe, Ariz., 85287-1502. No faxes, please.

I agree with you about the freedom our country represents, but speaking English in America should be a no-brainer — just as if you would want to learn how to speak Spanish if you wanted to go live in Spain.

Apache Boulevard may get facelift with renovation plan

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

Apache Boulevard renovations will change the area from "slum" to sensation, loaded with housing and shops.

At least, that's what planners hope.

"Apache Boulevard has been a priority for a number of years," said Tempe Mayor Neil Giuliano. "This is kind of the next phase for Apache Boulevard."

The re-development plan calls for a total makeover of the area stretching from Rural Road to the city line at the canal, and about a half mile north and south of Apache.

Once one of the most vibrant commercial areas in the region, in recent years Apache Boulevard has become better known for the prostitution trade than for legitimate businesses.

Marvina DeHerrera is the owner of the Michigan Village Trailer Park, 1912 E. Apache Blvd. and co-chairwoman of the Apache Boulevard Project Area Committee. She said the changes could be seen as early as a few years down the road.

"I think it's going to go quicker than people realize," she said. "Within four to five years we're going to see a tremendous change on this boulevard and it's going to be just great."

Before that can happen, though, the plan must be approved. The city gave the committee a rough draft of the proposal Monday, said Gary Meyer, Tempe senior planner.

The city has scheduled an Oct. 7 "open house" look at the plan, public hearings in December and is "looking at early January for formal adoption," Meyer said.

Once the plan is adopted, the city will receive about $500,000 a year in federal funds, in addition to city funding.

Ideas being considered for the area include changing some zoning from commercial to residential — which in the long term could mean more housing for students — narrowing the road from six lanes to four, creating a bicycle lane and providing more comforts — including grocery stores and other shopping. Most of the new residential areas will be east of McClintock Road.

"It won't have a big effect on ASU, but it will provide amenities to students," Meyer said.

While there are big plans for the area, some problems must be addressed. Run-down properties and crime top the list.

"What you find, typically, is that the substandard properties are absentee landlords, so that's been a problem," Meyer said. "Owners on-site tend to take better care."

The hookers will be targeted with an "order out" policy, which Meyer said has proven successful in Las Vegas.

Under the policy, anyone caught street walking would be ordered out of the area and would be subject to prosecution upon return. A new police beat office is also scheduled for construction on the boulevard, beginning next month.

DeHerrera said that when the area cleans up, she believes students will be attracted. "I think they'll be more willing to come down this way," she said. "There's not a lot (of students) willing to, because it's kind of run down."

Giuliano said the city was hoping to "capture the vision of what that area can be" — something that would be advantageous to ASU as well as Tempe.

"I think it can only be positive, since Apache is pretty much the southern edge of campus," he said.

- A man associated with ASU was arrested, cited and released for underage possession of alcohol in Manzanita.
- A man not associated with ASU was arrested, cited and released for shoplifting at Stabler's Market in the Tempe Center.

• A blue backpack containing burglary tools was found north of the Student Recreation Complex and was impounded.

Tempe Police reported the following incidents Monday:

- An Hispanic man, 25, was arrested after he reportedly broke into a car in the 3300 block of S. Juniper Drive and attempted to steal the stereo. The car he allegedly broke into was parked 200 feet away from a vehicle reported stolen in Phoenix, a police report stated. The keys to the stolen vehicle were found on the front seat of the car the suspect allegedly broke into. When police contacted the suspect, he gave them a phony name. The suspect admitted to burglarizing the car, possessing stolen property and giving false information to police.
- A 20-year-old white man and a 23-year-old Hispanic man were arrested for disorderly conduct after private security guards observed them fighting at 660 S. Mill Ave. The men were apparently kicking and punching each other in the face and body. One of the brawlers took off on foot after being contacted by security guards. He was apprehended after a short chase.
- Two white men, 25 and 31, were arrested for possession of dope and drug paraphernalia after security guards observed them throw a bag of "green, leafy substance" from their vehicle. The guards detained the suspects until police arrived. They were transported and booked into Tempe City Jail. They were later released.

Committee's clean-up efforts restore beauty to Valley

BY KARA SHIRE
STATE PRESS

Cleaning up Valley neighborhoods and parks takes on new momentum this fall with the creation of an Environmental Issues Committee within the Associated Students of ASU.

"These things couldn't be done without a group, so it's important to have all these people working together," said Laura Taft, the committee chairman.

The committee has planned a composting program in conjunction with the campus arboretum and a trail restoration and re-vegetation program.

Taft said she plans to step up recycling and clean-up efforts around the ASU campus and Tempe neighborhoods.

On Sept. 20, volunteers will replant vegetation that has been trampled on and destroyed by hikers on South Mountain. The restoration program, called the Garden of Hope, is a joint effort between ASASU, the city of Phoenix and the American Cancer Society.

Valley nurseries have donated cactuses for the event, which will allow families of cancer victims to adopt a cactus planted in memory of the deceased.

"I think it's beneficial to the donors, in that they can have a tangible way to remember their loved ones, and, at the same time, it beautifies the environment," said Laura Toussaint-Newkirk, director of marketing communications with the American Cancer Society.

The committee will also pick up cans after tailgate parties and recycle them. The money generated will be pumped back into the committee.

Taft said she doesn't expect a profit from the program because of gas and other expenses related to the collection and recycling of cans.

Encouraging more environmentally sound offices is another goal the committee is addressing. The purchase of recycled paper products and pencils are small changes that would be nice to see around campus, Taft said.

A composting program, a joint effort between ASASU and ASU's nationally recognized arboretum, has been set up to use a mixture of substances to fertilize soil.

"We'll be getting (old) tomatoes and other kinds of fruits and vegetables from the University Club and other dead stuff from the arboretum and turning it into soil," Taft said.

Close to 70 volunteers have signed up for the program. An informational meeting will be held Sept. 4 in the Memorial Union.

"If we don't do something about environmental problems, we won't have a place to live," Taft said.

Asthma on the rise for black children

PHOENIX (AP) — Asthma is a growing problem in Arizona, particularly among black children, according to a study released Monday.

The report by the Arizona Asthma Coalition found that black children in Arizona are hospitalized for asthma four times more frequently than Hispanics or Anglos.

It also found that asthma hospitalizations are higher in the last quarter of the year, when carbon monoxide and particulate air pollution are the highest.

Sixty-five people in Maricopa County died of asthma last year, up from 58 in 1995, the study said.

"This shows the powers that be in this community that this is really a very serious health problem," said David Feuerherd, program director of the American Lung Association of Arizona.

"When you have African-American children being hospitalized at four times the rate, that is just obscene. It is so striking that you have to wonder what is going on there," he said.

The local numbers jibe with national studies showing black children and young adults to be most at risk for asthma.

Nationwide, the number of people with asthma has jumped more than 60 percent since the 1980s, according to the American Lung Association.

Researchers now can only estimate how many Arizonans have asthma, said Dr. Tim Flood, medical director for the state Office of Chronic Disease Epidemiology.

Studies conducted on small groups in Nogales and Tucson show that the asthma rate may be as high as 7 percent, compared with 5 percent nationally, Flood said.

The report offers statistics but reveals few answers to a mystery that perplexes physicians and public health officials: Why the rise in asthma?

But researchers say lack of access to health care is what makes the condition serious.

"I don't think it's a coincidence that we have high rates of asthma hospitalization for children and 14 percent of our children don't have insurance," said Dr. Jose Felipe Gonzales, a Phoenix pediatric pulmonary disease specialist.

Pilots' union leader: UPS wants to 'dictate' new terms

By THOMAS S. WATSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — One day after professing neutrality, a pilots union leader criticized United Parcel Service's tactics in presenting a final contract offer — casting doubt on a looming ratification vote.

"It is fairly obvious that the company's last, best and final offer shows they don't want to negotiate, but to dictate," Independent Pilot's Association President Bob Miller said Monday.

Shortly after UPS submitted the offer Sunday, Miller said he would remain neutral on the proposed pact and promised to submit it to the 2,000 members of the Louisville-based union for a vote this fall.

The company and pilots union returned to the negotiating table Sunday after a three-month lull. The hastily scheduled talks followed last week's settlement of the Teamsters strike against UPS. The union pilots refused to cross picket lines during the Teamsters' 15-day walkout against the giant package shipping company.

UPS spokesman Ken Shapero said Monday that the company did not approach the talks with the pilots union in a confrontational manner.

"Nobody's trying to dictate anything," Shapero said. "We've been negotiating for 20 months. They asked for a better pension and we gave it to them. They asked for better pay and they got that."

Since December 1995, the pilots have been working under terms of an old contract. Pay and pensions have been the main sticking points.

Shapero said after a federal mediator called the two sides together for the latest talks, the pilots seemed further away from agreeing than when the negotiations recessed in May.

Meanwhile, the two sides disagreed Monday over the actual size of the salary increases presented in UPS' five-year offer.

Shapero said the offer would boost pay for captains by about 32 percent, from $153,000 to $202,000 a year. The average co-pilot would move from $84,700 to $132,000 a year, a 56 percent increase, and the average flight engineer would receive a 94 percent pay raise, from $48,392 to $94,000, he said.

Miller said the company's figures were inflated.

The minimum pension paid to pilots under the contract offer would be $100,000 per year after 25 years of service for their lifetime.

The pilots plan to have their ballots counted by the third week of September. The next step will be decided following the vote, Miller said.

If the pilots reject the contract — and then refuse to submit it to arbitration — they would be required by the National Railway Labor Act to start the negotiations again.

That would essentially mean going back to where they were in December 1995, and federal rules would prevent a strike for months.

Mind Games have imaginations on run

By EDITH M. LEDERER
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

LONDON — It was a mind game to end all mind games, and a South African who dreamed up 40 uses for an egg and described links between Princess Diana and an orange came out a winner.

Philip Bateman said he let his imagination run wild to win gold medal for creative thinking Sunday in the first annual Mind Sports Olympiad.

Karl Galle, 28, of Liberty Hills, Texas, won the gold for mental calculation — doing complex mathematical problems without paper, pencil or electronic calculator.

They were among nearly 2,000 mental gymnasts from 58 countries who competed in 39 mind sports — from chess and bridge to the ancient Chinese game Go and the Madagascar board game Fanorona.

"You have a sports Olympiad which brings together people who run and jump. Why not an Olympiad of the brain, which is the most important part of our body and always will be?" said Tony Buzan, author of 20 bestsellers on the mind and learning and one of the Olympiad's organizers.

The competition was open to anyone. A total of $160,000 in prizes was awarded.

Bateman, 52, the creative director of a mail order company, said he read about the Olympiad a week ago and flew from South Africa to compete because the creative thinking even sounded like something "akin to my soul."

So how many uses could he think of for a boiled egg? "I thought of 40 different ways," he said. "You can grind it, expand it, evaporate it, use it to warm your hands, use it as face cream, paint with it."

And the similarities between Princess Diana and an orange?

"They've both got these huge family trees," he said with a broad smile. "They're both fairly juicy. They're both slightly delicious."

Robots play soccer; US team wins Cup

NAGOYA, Japan (AP) — Computers may have world chess champ Garry Kasparov worried, but soccer-playing robots still have nothing on their human counterparts.

Five teams of clicking, whirring soccer machines from the United States, Australia and Japan went at each other Monday on the first day of World RoboCup 97.

The championship is the high point of the 15th International Joint Conference on Artificial Intelligence, an annual meeting where scientists show off the latest in robot technology.

A team from Carnegie Mellon University outperformed all others Monday, beating a Japanese team 5-0.

It was a drastic mismatch in which the Americans' spunky little dune buggies whirred circles around the opposing bulky black boxes, which usually stood still, apparently confused.

'Soft money' contributions from Arizona are growing

MESA (AP) — Following the rest of the nation, businesses and individuals in Arizona are making more "soft money" donations to political parties.

There's no limit on such donations, which isn't the case when giving to a specific candidate. And the donations appear to get results.

The day after Bechtel Group Inc. gave $5,000 to the Democratic National Committee from its Phoenix operation, Vice President Al Gore invited the company's lobbyist to a coffee. The Tribune reported Monday.

California-based Bechtel, the nation's largest construction and engineering firm, was the largest contributor from Arizona, giving $153,000 from its office here between 1991 and 1996, the newspaper said. The company gave $535,297 from its Washington and San Francisco offices.

The single-largest soft money contribution from Arizona was a $100,000 gift from the supermarket chain Smitty's to the DNC last year.

Darius Anderson, a spokesman for Yucaipa Cos., an investment group that until mid-1996 had a controlling interest in Smitty's, said the Democrats came knocking.

"Usually, it's who asks," Anderson said. "There's nothing very complicated about it."

Republicans have had better luck than Democrats in Arizona, grabbing seven out of every 10 soft money dollars.

For example, retirement community developer Del Webb Corp. gave $61,500 in soft money donations to the Republican National Committee during the period.

Ron Jones general counsel for Del Webb, said he doesn't see the money as buying influence.

"We get our phone calls returned, but I had my phone calls returned before I had this job," Jones said.

The huge donations to political parties by corporations, unions and wealthy patrons are a central theme of the current fund-raising investigations by Congress and the Justice Department.

Soft money is exempt from the $25,000-a-year legal contribution limit on donations from individuals. Contributions of $50,000 and $100,000 in a single month are not uncommon.

The donations are supposed to be used for party-building activities such as get-out-the-vote drives and not to support specific candidates. But both political parties have gotten more creative in using soft money and last year funneled millions of dollars in donations to pay for ads in support of candidates.

Symington attorneys demand mistrial over juror ousting

By JERRY NACHTIGAL
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER
PHOENIX — Attorneys for Gov. Fife Symington demanded a mistrial Monday, arguing that a judge made a grievous error by dismissing a capable juror who later said she would have voted to acquit.

U.S. District Judge Roger Strand took the matter under advisement, giving no indication on when he would rule.

Meanwhile, jurors completed their 12th day of deliberations — the fourth day since the dismissal of 74-year-old juror Mary Jane Cotey and the addition of an alternate forced deliberations to begin all over. Deliberations were to resume Tuesday.

Defense attorney John Dowd said the judge erred in dismissing Cotey last week after other jurors complained she was unable to focus on details of the case, gave rambling answers and was sometimes combative.

"She was at all times willing and able," Dowd argued. "She refused to change her mind or explain herself. Because she wouldn't explain, she was presented to the court as unwilling and unable to deliberate."

Each juror was interviewed individually in private by Strand and attorneys for both sides after other panel members sent the judge a note saying Cotey seemed incapable of comprehending the deliberation process.

Dowd asserted that fellow jurors wanted Cotey off the panel because on certain counts the vote was 11-1 for conviction with Cotey the lone holdout, running the risk of a hung jury.

But prosecutor David Schindler said Cotey's answers during her meeting with the judge and attorneys proved that she was not up to the task mentally.

"As tragic and sad as it sounds, she was unable to answer the court's questions directly," Schindler said. "Each juror said she was unable or unwilling to participate in the deliberative process."

Symington, 52, faces 21 felony counts of bank fraud, attempted extortion and perjury.

Most of the charges stem from his former career as a real estate developer.

Conviction on a single count would force the two-term Republican out of office and could lead to a prison sentence.

In media interviews, Cotey has suggested jurors were engaging in vote trading, which is against the rules, and alleged some members of the panel had discussed Symington's income taxes — a subject they were told to ignore after Schindler mentioned it during the trial.

Dowd asked Strand to put Cotey on the stand to testify about alleged juror misconduct. The judge so far has refused defense requests to question Cotey.

Officials prepare for Burning Man

By SANDRA CHEREB
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

RENO, Nev. — From the blank expanse of the northern Nevada desert, a temporary city is rising for a bizarre festival drawing artists, performers and free spirits for the ultimate anarchist party.

Burning Man, which began 11 years ago on a San Francisco beach as a woeful tribute to scorned love, starts Wednesday and ends Labor Day weekend with the torching of a 40-foot-tall wooden man on a barren playa.

"We are, in terms of art jargon, outsider art," said founder Larry Harvey, a Bay Area artist.

Thousands are expected to attend the esoteric mix of pagan fire ritual and sci-fi Dada circus where people paint their bodies, bang drums, dance naked and wear weird costumes.

A mile-long esplanade will be lined with large-scale works, such as Jim Mason's Temporal Decomposition, a huge ice sundial with clocks and watches frozen inside. The melting sculpture will be covered with 50 gallons of cherry snow cone syrup and offered for communal licking.

Mason, a sculptor, said the event intrigues and inspires artists.

"The project has captured the imagination of a lot of people," he said. "Something is happening here."

But the unknown of that "something" and the prospect of more than 15,000 people sprawled across the remote desert worry Washoe County officials.

The county imposed a laundry list of conditions, including an $11 million insurance policy and money up front for law enforcement and fire protection.

"It will be a disaster if we let 10,000 to 15,000 people out there with no restrictions," Sheriff Dick Kirkland said. "Whatever is going to happen out there is going to happen, so maybe we should figure the best way to manage it, to salvage it."

Most of the conditions have been met, and organizers say the show will go on. And with construction under way and people en route, officials concede it would be difficult to stop.

A conglomeration of "theme camps" make up the peculiar Black Rock City, named after the nearby desert.

They include the Alien Abduction Camp and Womb with a View, where, according to the program, "you walk through a 74-foot-long pregnant female body, complete with orifice entrance, torso and breasts." Blowin' in the Wind will attempt to create the world's largest wind chime.

The desert's stark emptiness is like being on the moon, said Jarico Reese, of Los Angeles, who with others was creating odd bicycles for Burning Man participants.

"Events like this are kind of needed, to go someplace and be really goofy," he said. "It brings creative people together."

Many of the creative works, along with the wooden man himself, are burned during the festival's finale after sunset Sunday. For that reason, the county demanded on-site firefighters.

The ritual began in 1986 when Harvey built a man representing his girlfriend's new love and burned it on Baker Beach. The event was moved to Nevada's Black Rock Desert as the annual bonfire drew increasingly large numbers of people.

When 10,000 people showed up last year at the site on public land in Pershing County, commissioners worried that the festival was getting out of control.

Three people were injured, one critically, by a drunken driver who slammed into their tent. Another man was killed when his motorcycle ran head-on into a van.

ASU student football season tickets are on sale now at the Ticket Office at Sun Devil Stadium. Thus far over half of the 8,000 available have been sold and all are expected to be gone soon.

Student season FB tickets going fast, Sun Card needed for admission

By JOHN GRABER
STATE PRESS

By the first day of fall semester, just over half of the 8,000 available student football season tickets have already been sold, ASU Athletic Ticket Manager Marie Carey said.

"Right now we're at a little over 4,000 sold," Carey said. "This time last year we were at about 2,600 tickets sold, maybe 2,700. We've definitely seen our numbers jump (because of last year's Rose Bowl appearance). We did sell out last year though. Last year was the first year we sold out since... I don't remember the last time we sold out."

Student tickets make sense, since they run $32 each, as compared to $134 and up for comparable seats in nonstudent sections.

But there is a catch. In order to use a student ticket, the holder must bring a university ID to the Sun Devil Ticket Office on the south-end of Sun Devil Stadium to verify the student is registered for at least seven undergraduate credit hours or six graduate credit hours. If ticket holders do not have a verified ID at game time, they will not be allowed into the game with a student ticket.

Ticket office hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to half-time on game days and 8:30 a.m. to noon on non-game day Saturdays.

"I talked to at least 20 students every game last year and had to send them away because they didn't have their ID's," Carey said.

"It's an annual problem we have because we get a lot of new students. I know it can be frustrating for them so we want to get the word out. We want our fans to enjoy themselves."

Sea of Gold

The ASU Alumni Association is encouraging fans to show their school pride by wearing Sun Devil gold to every game.

The association is sponsoring a raffle at every home game for a football signed by ASU quarterback legends Jake Plummer, Danny White and Jeff Van Raaphorst.

Anybody wearing a solid gold shirt at the tailgate party is eligible for the raffle.

"We want 1997 to be the year of the Sun Devil gold," ASU football head coach Bruce Snyder said.

"It really excites the players to see a sea of gold in the stands. I hope every Sun Devil fan will show their pride by wearing solid gold to the games."

Rattlers 'Hunk' er down, win their second Arena Bowl crown, 55-33

BY MEL REISNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Hunkie Cooper caught a touchdown pass, returned a kickoff 56 yards for another score and ran back an interception for a third, leading the Arizona Rattlers to a 55-33 victory over the Iowa Barnstormers in the Arena Football League title game Monday night.

The Rattlers (15-2) won their second crown in four years, denying the Barnstormers (13-4) a championship in two straight trips to the ArenaBowl.

Last season, Iowa came up one yard short of a score at the end of a 42-38 loss to Tampa Bay.

Cooper, the league MVP in 1993, caught a 4-yard TD pass from Donnie Davis, a rookie pressed into service when Sherdrick Bonner broke his leg late in a semifinal victory over Tampa Bay, to break a 10-10 tie in the second quarter.

Then, after Iowa's Mike Black kicked his second field goal with 28 seconds left in the half, Cooper fielded a kickoff that bounced off the net deep in his end zone. He burst up the middle and got the last defender turned around with an inside-outside move about midfield.

In seven seconds, the Rattlers had a 24-13 halftime lead.

Cooper made it 38-13 with 6:45 left in the third quarter when he leaped high for a pass thrown by Iowa's Kurt Warner, came down in the clear and bolted 30 yards for his third TD.

Davis, who threw a scoring pass to beat the Storm in overtime Aug. 18, but was making his first start, also threw 49- and 28-yard scoring passes to Calvin Schexnayder and scored on a 1-yard run.

Bob McMillen had a 1-yard TD run, and Anthony Brenner, who had kicked a 19-yard field goal to open the scoring, completed it for Arizona with a 44-yard field goal with 3:43 to play.

Warner, the league's first-team quarterback for the second straight year, set ArenaBowl records for attempts (51), completions (31) and yards (325), throwing two 30-yard TD passes to Lamart Cooper and a 9-yarder to Leonard Conley. But he also was picked off twice by an Arizona team that proved defense is a part of the 50-yard indoor game.

Willis Jacox, one of Warner's favorite targets, failed to catch a scoring pass but scored on a 1-yard run.

The Rattlers held Iowa, which had scored 120 points in two previous playoff victories, to one TD in the first half.

The Barnstormers had to settle for two field goals in the second quarter, the first tying it after McMillen gave Arizona a 10-7 lead with his score on the first play of the period.

Davis hit Cooper to break the tie with 4:05 left in the half, capping a 45-yard drive in which Bo Kelly's 23-yard run was the key play.

Then, after Black made it 17-13 with a 20-yard field goal with just 28 seconds left, Cooper deflated the Barnstormers with the third kickoff return for a touchdown in the ArenaBowl's 11-year history.

Hearing wraps up in Army sex case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The six women who brought sexual misconduct allegations against the Army's top enlisted man were described Monday by prosecutors as heroes and attacked by the defense as opportunists.

Don't let them down," lead prosecutor Lt. Col. Michael Child said of the women, as he urged that Sgt. Maj. of the Army Gene McKinney be ordered to stand trial.

But defense lawyer Lt. Col. James Gerstenlauer said McKinney is "an outstanding soldier who has served this country proudly" and is confronted by "baseless allegations."

Charles Gittins, McKinney's civilian defense lawyer, said his client didn't get to be the Army's top enlisted man "because he's a lech. To become sergeant major of the Army he had to undergo an extensive background check."

To Child, McKinney was a manipulative man using his powerful position to prey on vulnerable women. "He used even the death of his son as part of this manipulation," the prosecutor said. McKinney's son was killed in an automobile accident.

The Fort McNair hearing ended with both sides summing up their cases. Now a hearing officer must consider whether McKinney should be court-martialed or can return to his Pentagon post.

Col. Robert Jarvis, the presiding officer, has 15 days to make his recommendation. But given the length of the hearing, which began two months ago and included testimony from more than 30 witnesses, Jarvis could get an extension. The transcript runs thousands of pages.

Jarvis's recommendation would go to Col. Owen Powell, the next senior officer in the chain of command. The final decision on whether the case should go forward would be made by Maj. Gen. Robert F. Foley, commander of the Military District of Washington.

Gittins has said repeatedly that he expects the Army to order McKinney to stand trial on sexual misconduct charges.

Jarvis also can recommend revising the charges, and Child urged him to add rape to the list.

The first of the women to testify against McKinney, Sgt. Christine Roy, said she reluctantly had sex with McKinney when she was nearly eight months pregnant. The prosecutor said that incident amounted to rape.

Gerstenlauer said the recommendation by Child was "offensive." He said there was "no credible evidence to corroborate the charges by Sgt. Roy."

If a court martial is ordered, Gittins has said he will file a motion saying McKinney is a victim of discrimination. To support that claim he said he will offer evidence that high-ranking white officers — colonels and generals — were allowed to quietly retire after doing the same things McKinney is accused of.

McKinney is the first black sergeant major of the Army.

McKinney, who has served in the Army for nearly 30 years, has asked to be allowed to retire. Gerstenlauer seemed to appeal to the Army to take that route when he said, "Is there a better way to handle this? Is there an administrative way to handle this?"

In their summations, the lawyers on both sides offered starkly different views of the accused and his accusers.

Child said the six women who came forward to say McKinney had made improper sexual advances to them knew they would face harsh examination of their personal lives.

"They knew exactly what they had to expect if they came forward and they came forward anyway," he said. "They're heroes, they saw wrong and they were willing to report it."

"The government would have you believe women don't make false allegations," said Gittins, who described McKinney's accusers as "a group of women who are opportunists."

Gittins and McKinney's two military lawyers questioned the truth of the stories of each of the accusers.

"Baseless allegations like these, motivated by the basest of motives, only destroy discipline, breed timid supervisors and encourage contempt for the system," said Gerstenlauer.

Navy to help out in search for possible weapons from crashed Air Force plane

EAGLE, Colo. (AP) — A team of Navy experts has been called in to help search for munitions from an Air Force warplane that crashed into a Colorado mountainside in April.

A 15-person team of Navy explosive ordnance disposal technicians arrived Sunday to prepare for the search of six lakes within a 1.5-mile range of the crash site on Gold Dust Peak.

It took an 18-day search to find the crash site in April, and the Air Force returned July 7 to begin recovery of the plane, the remains of pilot Capt. Craig Button and the munitions on board.

About 5 tons of the 14-ton aircraft have been recovered so far, Air Force officials said Monday, but there has been no sign of the A-10 Warthog's payload of four 500-pound bombs.

Air Force officials have said they do not believe the bombs were armed before the crash.

The Navy personnel come from EOD Mobile Unit 7 out of San Diego. They are experts in locating underwater ordnance using sonar, remote-controlled cameras and underwater metal detectors.

If a bomb is found in one of the lakes, Navy divers will determine how to dispose of it safely, officials said.

The underwater search is scheduled to begin Wednesday in New York Lake, the one closest to the crash site.

The crews, based at a Colorado National Guard station at the Eagle County Airport, have been working seven days a week since early July on the recovery effort.

Button's jet was traveling at an estimated 300 to 400 mph when it crashed about 100 feet from the top of the 13,365-foot summit of Gold Dust Peak. Debris was scattered for thousands of feet and much of it has been carried down the mountain by melting and shifting snow.

Sun Devil defense long on speed, short on depth

BY MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

This is part two of a five part series on ASU/Pac-10 football

Like the midnight train that rumbles through the heart of Tempe every Sunday, the ASU football defense during the 1996 season was a powerful, imposing force.

The Sun Devils had the No. 1 rated defense in the Pac-10. They held the opposition to 17.8 points, 98 rushing yards and 304.7 total yards per game. ASU had the best third down conversion defense (22.9%) and was No. 2 in first downs allowed (190) and quarterback sacks (44).

This year, the Sun Devils will be without six starters from their Rose Bowl squad and will rely on a quicker but less experienced group in their hopes of a duplicate performance.

Head coach Bruce Snyder said, "this could be the fastest defensive unit I've ever had. Particularly our linebackers and secondary will be as fast or faster than any group I've ever had."

Sun Devil starters average 21 games of experience. After that, though, only five players have recorded time in more than five games of Division One football.

Defensive coordinator Phil Snow said he'll have to wait until the first game of the season before he can assess how the inexperience will effect the team.

"How good they'll be remains to be seen," Snow said. "We're going to have to have people perform. People last year didn't think Derrick Smith was going to be as good as he was. They didn't know about Derrick Rodgers. The same thing has to happen this year. There are going to be some guys starting for the first time who have to come out and perform for us."

If the newer players establish themselves early, particularly on the line, ASU will rank at the top of the Pac again. If not, they'll slip down to the middle.

Here's a breakdown.

DEFENSIVE LINE

The defensive line will be most affected by the turnover, having to replace three of four first-team members. Just like last season, though, the success of the defense will hinge on the play of the front line.

Senior Vince Amey, the lone returning starter, will move from right tackle and take up new responsibilities at end. Senior Hamilton Mee, a special teams performer last year, will be opposite Amey at rush end. Junior Albrey Battle and senior Jeremy Staat will try and solidify the middle at the tackle positions.

The starters combined have 55 games of experience. On the second team, though, Malchi Crawford is the only one with significant game time. The senior has appeared in 17 games at ASU but, due to various injuries, hasn't seen any action since the middle of the 1995 campaign.

Snyder sees the loss of Derrick Rodgers, a consensus first-team All-America selection and current starter for the Miami Dolphins and the lack of depth as the two problems with his defense.

"At rush end we don't have Derrick Rodgers and that's a big hole," Snyder said. "The other (problem) is last year we had Albrey Battle and (Jeremy) Staat as backups at tackle and they were significant. Now Albrey and Staat are starting and there's no backups (with any experience) basically."

LINEBACKERS

Senior Pat Tillman, second team All-Pac-10 last year, returns as the leader of the linebackers and the entire defense. His fierce, relentless play should rub off onto senior Paul Reynolds and junior Larry Johnson, who round out the crew in the middle.

Reynolds, after returning from a two year mission, looked impressive in limited

BY LORI HARO

"In the Pac-10 you are going to get hammered on when you're young and inexperienced."

This was the story of the ASU volleyball team last year.

Head coach Patti Snyder-Park made no qualms about how badly last season went. The Sun Devils posted a 4-14 Pac-10 record, 9-15 overall.

"I kind of feel it (the season) was a blip in the history of our volleyball program, but it was a valuable lesson on hard work and pushing towards the next level," Snyder-Park said. "It gave us the perspective that 'hey we don't want that to happen again!'"

If everything goes as planned, this season will not even resemble the year they've already forgotten.

However, the Pac-10 preseason coaches poll rates ASU to finish high in the conference.

Snyder-Park believes the poll is absolutely accurate, based on last year's team. Yet, last season the team had only nine healthy bodies and many of them were freshmen. This year's team lost only setter Tracy Heflin and returns nine players, including senior all-American outside hitter, Terri Cox and sophomore setter Jolynn Faatulu.

Cox led the team in both kills and digs and was second nationally in digs per game with 4.90. Faatulu was a medical redshirt last season and had reconstructive surgery on her torn anterior cruciate ligament (ACL). Before her knee injury she averaged 12.29 assists and 2.90 digs per game.

Not only are nine players returning, but Snyder-Park has filled all 12 scholarships and allowed three walk-ons. This is an unusually large squad, she said.

COX

"Being down so low in the numbers last year, we needed the depth," Snyder-Park said. "Right now we have 15 bodies and all of them could do a good job for us. Our talent pool is deep and very, very close together."

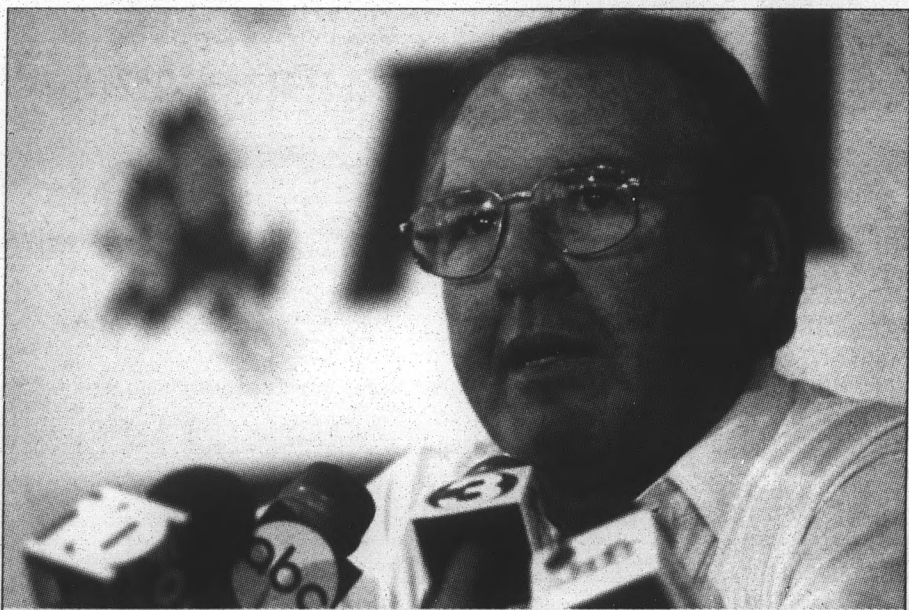

Cox agreed.

"The hardest part of last year was being a small team. The practices were more difficult, it just burnt us out more quickly than usual," Cox said. "Now we have so much depth and experience. I'm totally looking forward to this year."

Other returning players are captain, senior middle blocker, Kirstin Mattson, sophomore middle blocker, Laura Hibsman, junior outside hitter Mindi Moser, junior outside hitter Jen Lucero, sophomore middle blocker Ashley Ottman, sophomore opposite/middle blocker Jamie Peck and sophomore setter/outside hitter Lindsay Priest.

Last season Peck was named to the All-Pac 10 Freshman team, while Hibsman was an honorable mention All-Freshman pick.

Snyder remembers days of pink uniforms, bad football at NMSU

BY ED ODEVEN
STATE PRESS

Mom was right. You shouldn't mix whites with colors when doing laundry.

Just ask ASU head coach Bruce Snyder.

He recalled an embarrassing incident, at his weekly press conference Monday, from his coaching stint at New Mexico State in 1972 when "we were going to play Drake (University) and our equipment person, whoever it was, happened to put our white jerseys in with the red."

"When we unpacked at Drake you could imagine what the color of our jerseys were. They were pink," Snyder said with a big chuckle about that 28-10 loss at Drake.

That wasn't the only embarrassment for the 2-9 Aggies.

"A lot of things went wrong that year," Snyder said, referring to a team that was "maybe the worst in Division One football."

COACH'S CRITIQUE

After returning from 10 days at Camp Tontozona, Snyder gave a solid evaluation of his squad.

"I like this team a lot," he said. "They've really responded to our coaching. I think their are some concerns though about whether we are adequately going to fill some of the spots that were vacated from last year's club or how quickly. I think we've got some talent on the club, but it shows up as being pretty young at times in terms of the things they do."

And it should. The Sun Devils return only 10 starters — five from offense and five from Newcomers include junior outside hitter/middle blocker Shawna Vanley, a transfer from Glendale Community College, freshman opposite/middle blocker Michelle Mortensen and freshman outside hitter Amanda Burbridge. The three walk-ons are sophomore defensive specialist Traci Reiff, freshman setter Carmen Fusco and junior outside hitter Kristal Blair, a transfer from NAU.

"They (the newcomers) all have very good attitudes and are very coachable," Snyder-Park said. "They don't seem intimidated and are very eager. They don't want to let anyone down, they're working so hard."

Burbridge is questionable as to whether she will redshirt this season. Burbridge underwent shoulder surgery in April and will not be cleared to overhand swing until the end of the month. If she is not cleared Snyder-Park said that she might redshirt the season, since she will be too valuable to the team to waste a year of eligibility.

Snyder-Park is looking forward to picking up where the program left off in 1995, finishing 19-8 overall, tied for fourth in the Pac-10 and advancing to the regional semi-finals of the NCAA tournament's Sweet 16.

"We're starting over, but we're kind of back where we were in '95 in that we've got really competitive athletes at all positions," Snyder-Park said.

Snyder-Park has noticed that having competitive athletes at all positions has really added a noticeable intensity to win spots and that the competition between the players in the gym shows their desire to win.

"I see us going really far," Faatulu said. "I think we'll be at least in the top three in the Pac. We have the depth and the talent, it's just up to us to show it on the court to everyone."

The Sun Devils open their season with the Phoenix Airport Hilton Challenge/Sun Devil Challenge Friday and Saturday at the University Activity Center. Action begins at 11 a.m.

playing time last season and Johnson was one of the standouts during Camp Tontozona.

Snow expects their top notch play to continue. "Larry Johnson could really come on," Snow said. "He's real athletic. Paul Reynolds could also."

SECONDARY

The secondary was the weakest and most criticized part of the defense last season. This year it could be the exact opposite. Already gaining the respect it so desperately tried to attain in the past, the cornerbacks and safeties will keep opposing quarterbacks flustered all season.

Senior strong safety Damien Richardson has participated in all 34 games the Sun Devils have played since he first walked onto campus. Snyder calls him "one of the most solid players in the Pac-10."

At free safety, senior Thomas Simmons will get the nod in the first game over last year's starter Mitchell Freeman. Freeman was dismissed from the team for disciplinary reasons during spring ball but reinstated before Camp Tontozona. Once Freedman gets back into playing shape, "he'll take over the starting position," Snyder said.

At the corners, senior Jason Simmons and sophomore Courtney Jackson retain their starting jobs and should pick up right where they left off last year. The two combined for 75 tackles, two interceptions and one touchdown a year ago.

defense — from last year's team

Snyder remains confident his team will find its niche.

"It is going to be a relatively fast team," he said. "I think it will be comparable to last year's and maybe in some ways a bit faster."

CAMPBELL'S CLASS

According to Snyder, junior quarterback Steve Campbell has shown real class in handling the announcement that he will back up redshirt freshman Ryan Kealy.

"I'm just terribly proud of the way he handled it all spring," Snyder said. "He did a great job of knowing that this local quarterback was coming in and there's going to be a lot of pressure. And then when this happened he stayed in the same mold."

Although Campbell felt he should be the starter, he voiced his opinion in a mature matter.

"He thought that we were wrong but I appreciate it," Snyder said. "He thought it was the wrong decision. . . He really handled it like a mature human being."

'Intense' Barr welcome addition for Sun Devils

BY MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

When ex-inside linebackers coach Lyle Setencich left ASU following the Rose Bowl to take the defensive coordinator's job at Cal, the Sun Devil football coaching staff lost one of its most "intense," "focused" and knowledgeable members.

BARR

In his replacement, Johnny Barr, however, the Sun Devils regain all the intensity and focus and most of knowledge they lost.

Head coach Bruce Snyder couldn't be more pleased with the newest member of his coaching staff, a staff which The Sporting News calls the best in the Pac-10 and possibly the nation.

"He's a mature coach," Snyder said. "He has coached the system we use for quite a few years, and that was really important to me. He could come in and hit the ground running in terms of coaching our system."

Snyder also feels that Barr's coaching style is perfect for his program.

"He's not loud," the reigning consensus national coach of the year said. "He's very intense, very focused and wired in. He's got a great ability to concentrate on watching his guys and help them to play better."

Barr, a native of Atlanta, Texas, tries to chisel his players into the same intelligent, intense mold.

"When you coach the linebackers, you have to be hard-nosed because you want the players to be hard-nosed," Barr said. "That's the nature of the position. I think it's important that my guys really know the game because we have to cover the run and the pass. It's a technique game for them. They make a lot of the checks."

Additionally, Barr believes the linebackers are responsible for setting the defensive tone during a game.

"They have to be the so-called leaders on the team," the University of Oklahoma graduate said. "Ever since I've been coaching, the leadership has come from the linebackers."

Barr first began coaching in 1970 as the freshman coach at Oklahoma. Since then he has coached at various high schools, colleges and universities in Texas and Oklahoma. From 1989-94, he coached the inside linebackers at the University of Oklahoma. Barr helped lead the Sooners to bowl victories in the 1993 John Hancock Bowl and 1991 Gator Bowl. Oklahoma also participated in the 1994 Copper Bowl.

After spending a majority of his life in the midwest, Barr is thrilled to be heading west.

"I've been in Texas and Oklahoma my whole career," Barr said, "but the thing that really excited me about this opportunity first of all was Bruce Snyder. I've heard about him for years and he's not only a really good football coach, he's an outstanding person. Also, (defensive coordinator) Phil Snow is an excellent football coach. This is an opportunity to work with some really good people. I'm excited."

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by Frances Drake

Tuesday, August 26, 1997

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
Your major priorities are travel and artistic interests. Try not to force your hand in business, even though you're impatient. The situation soon turns in your favor.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Some begin a home decorating project. Arguments about finances are possible, but you've done your homework. What you want to do can be accommodated by your budget.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Social life is really humming along quite nicely. Singles meet with a new admirer, while those in a committed relationship renew ties. Keep peace with a cantankerous family member in the evening.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
A new assignment comes your way that really utilizes your best talents. Some meet with romance through an introduction made on the job. Later in the day, keep peace with family members.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)
Shopping is favored, provided you're realistic about your budget. Although you're impatient with a friend, your charm works miracles. Utilize this to its best advantage.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
Your best asset in business comes from your considerable charm. You receive recognition for all your efforts. At night, a disagreement is possible with a loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
Some spend time sprucing up wardrobes and starting exercise regimens. A project that's been on the back burner finally receives the go ahead. Feel free to jump right in.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
You're somewhat restless early in the day. Thus, going out for good times is favored over staying at home. Travel and romance are in the stars for singles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
A friend doesn't agree with your advice and doesn't mince words. Try not to take offense. Perhaps you've stepped in where it's really none of your business.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
It's a good time to devote yourself to your mate. Avoid confrontations in business. Make that special call to a troubled friend who really needs your help in the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
Bonds of affection grow stronger between loved ones as you begin a romantic cycle. Enjoy social diversions, but try not to spend too much money. It's possible to have fun without breaking the bank.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20)
You'll get out for some fun times. However, don't let a minor upset turn into a huge disagreement between you and a loved one. The evening favors rest and relaxation.

YOU BORN TODAY are a high profile person with somewhat of a hard edge to your personality. You easily gain the attention of others and tend to be intuitive and a good judge of character. In general, you can trust your hunches. You tend to be academically or professionally minded and excel in both areas. You like knowing where you fit in when it comes to the social hierarchy and have a knack for conforming to that. ©1997 King Features Syndicate Inc.
