End of an era; Frieder resigns

BY RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

The Bill Frieder era at ASU is over.

After eight turbulent years as head coach of the Sun Devil men's basketball program, Frieder announced from his home in Paradise Valley on Wednesday that he was stepping down from the helm of the Sun Devils' program.

Frieder said he discussed the issue for days with athletic director Kevin White.

"Simply put, we both felt it was in ASU's and Bill Frieder's best interests to part ways," Frieder said with a slight crack in his voice. "I want to emphasize that I love ASU. I love the people ... and I am extremely grateful for the eight-and-a-half years I have been here."

White concurred that the two reached an agreement after looking over the state of the program.

"It's just become more and more abundantly clear to me that we needed to move in another direction," White said. "With all due respect to Bill I think he agreed. We kind of had a final conversation (Tuesday) and it made some sense to change the direction of the program."

After reaching the Sweet 16 — the final round of 16 teams in the NCAA's basketball tournament — during the 1993-94 season, it appeared Frieder had the team on the rise. However, a series of mishaps involving recruits and players derailed the program and sent it spiraling down.

The seemingly never-ending string of misfortunes Frieder faced, including as many as 12 players being arrested for off-the-court incidents, eventually wore the coach down.

"I think the turning point in this whole thing was Eddie House and Reggie Hester getting in trouble and us hearing about it the Tuesday after Labor Day," Frieder said. "In the wake of the FBI thing I was determined and prepared to stay on. To fight through it."

"I know that for the first time the thought came across my mind that maybe it was time to go and I'm sure Kevin at the time had more pressure on him."

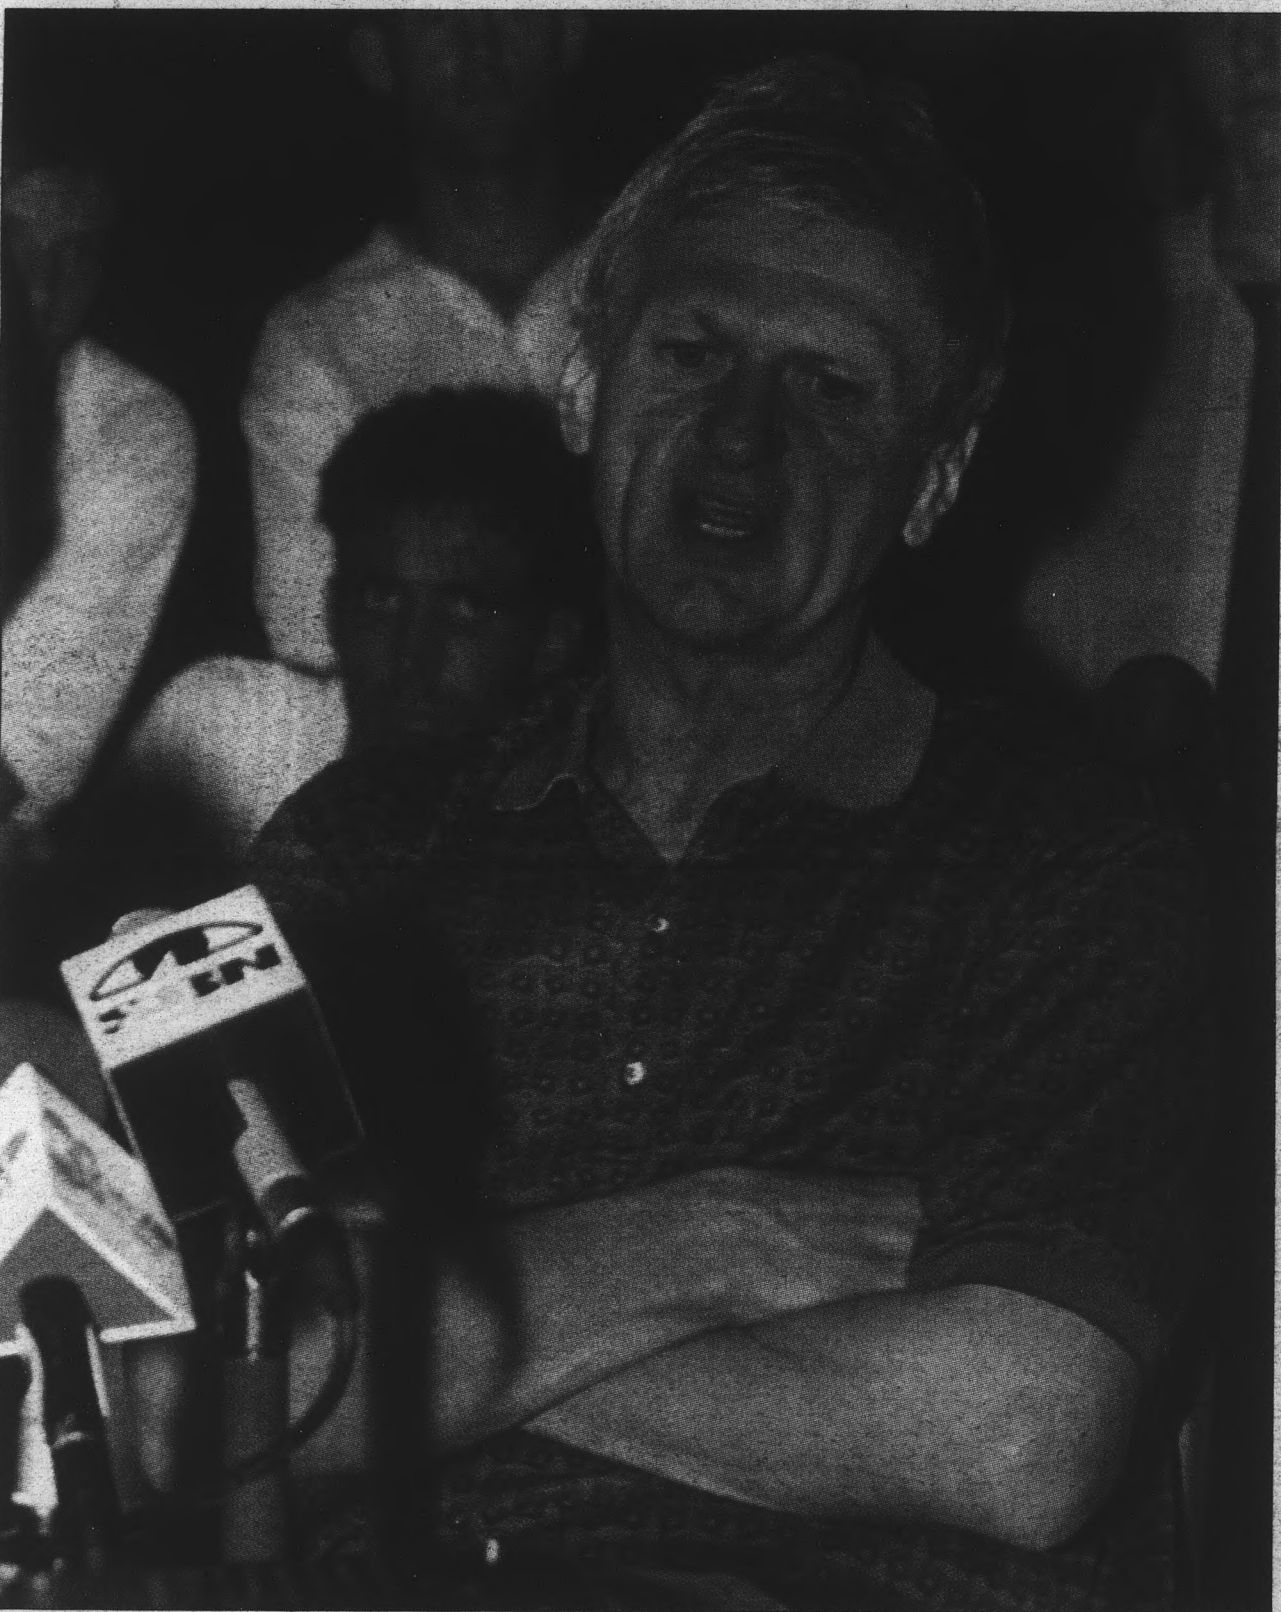

Those incidents included:

•August 30, 1997 — Two players, sophomore guard Eddie House and junior guard Reggie Hester were arrested for allegedly stealing a compact disc player in Manzanita Hall.

•August 1997 — The allegations of point-shaving during the 1993-94 season resurfaced when the Arizona Republic reported that federal authorities were investigating whether point guard Stevin "Hedake" Smith took thousands of dollars from a gambler who bet heavily against ASU in 1994. According to officials of the Phoenix FBI, neither Frieder nor the University are a target of the investigations.

•February 27, 1996 — Three players: Gee Gervin, Thomas Prince and Rico Harris were charged with an alleged rape in the Sonora Center dormitory. The charges were soon dropped. Prince and Harris transferred soon after, while Gervin played one season before transferring to San Jacinto Community College this summer.

•March 1994 — After ASU's March 5, 1994 game against Washington, Las Vegas bookmakers noted unusually heavy betting on the game in which ASU was an 10 1/2-point favorite. ASU missed its first 14 shots, but eventually won the game by 13 points. Also under scrutiny was ASU's March 3rd game versus Washington State in which the Sun Devils lost by nine points after being favored.

These incidents, combined with injuries to key personnel (Quincy Brewer, Okeme Oziwo), the Major League Baseball draft (Ryan McDermott) and epileptic seizures (Lenny Holly), claimed many a player from Frieder.

Throughout it all Frieder stuck by his team and said he would not leave.

However, the House and Hester incident seemed to push him over the edge.

Tempe officials: Transit will grow despite election results

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

Tempe's transit tax, passed last September, was intended to breathe life into the city's dormant public transportation system.

While the election-night death of similar taxes in Phoenix and Scottsdale didn't put Tempe's system on life-support, officials and transportation activists still feel disappointment.

"We need to put in place a better transportation program for this Valley, and our citizens have told us that," Tempe Mayor Neil Giuliano said. "But they obviously did not like those proposals, so it's back to the drawing board."

When Tempe's $22 million-a-year transit tax narrowly passed last year, supporters believed neighboring communities would also improve mass transit allowing a linked network of buses that would service most of the Valley.

Failure of the mass transit ballot issues killed those hopes, at least for now.

Giuliano said Tempe's mass transit system will continue to grow, but riders will not have the "connectivity" the city hoped for.

"We were hoping to be able to increase our service to connect to increased service in Phoenix," he said. "At some point your quality of life is going to suffer if you don't improve those areas."

Carol Smith, a Tempe city councilwoman, said she thought it was "interesting" that the morning after the proposals failed, a man was shot in a "road rage" incident in Scottsdale and the Valley was under an ozone alert.

"We were 25 years late building freeways and now we're going to be 25 years late building mass transit," she said.

Smith said Tempe bus riders will not be dumped off at the cities borders and Tempe buses regularly travel to Los Arcos and Fashion Square malls, the Scottsdale Airpark and other destinations.

"There is progress that can be made with or without the other cities," she said.

letter-perfect this season, we needed to commit to each other," Frieder said. "If we were going to survive ... we had to be committed to making good decisions, and as early as the second week of school — the first weekend — we had a problem.

"And that really, really had a negative impact on me. For the first time, my heart and soul wasn't in it anymore."

After the team met with White, Hester and House said Frieder's leaving would be hard for the team.

"I feel kinda bad because I like Frieder a lot," House said. "He's a good guy. He recruited me. I'm gonna miss him."

Hester partially blamed the media.

"I don't think it's fair," he said. "Especially (because) some things that some of the players do and when it goes to the media or whatever, it's not always as they write it.

"The last situation was nowhere near what it appeared to be."

Junior forward Michael Batiste said he didn't feel Frieder's decision to leave was the players' fault.

"No, not really. I don't think it's (recent player problems) a big deal," a distressed Batiste said. "When you get a guy (Frieder) under a lot of pressure, he's got to do what he's got to do. And I understand."

Frieder's career at ASU ends with a 132-108 record overall, 66-76 in conference. In his eight years he led the Sun Devils to six postseason appearances (two NCAA) and leaves as ASU's second-winningest coach ever (behind Ned Wulk).

Frieder coached at Michigan from 1981 to 1989, leading the Wolverines to five straight NCAA tournament appearances from 1985 to '89, finishing with a record of 191-87.

Frieder leaves behind a sagging program which slumped to a 10-20, 2-16 Pac-10 finish of last year. It marked the first time ASU finished last in the Pac-10.

This is a far cry from the state Frieder left Michigan when he came to ASU on March 15, 1989.

The Wolverines were 24-7 in his last season, and went on to win the NCAA Championship with then-assistant coach Steve Fisher taking the reigns for the tourney.

White and Frieder reached an agreement on the remaining three years of Frieder's contract that was to pay him a reported $260,000 annually, not including bonuses and endorsements.

Frieder would only say that White's proposal was "nothing earth-shaking. It's fair."

White said of the three years left on Frieder's contract, "There has been a settlement that has been consummated with the general council here at ASU."

State Press reporters Matt Paulson, Lori Haro and John Graber contributed to this story.

CORRECTION:

An editorial in Tuesday's State Press incorrectly stated that the Tempe City Council was to vote on a rental housing code in July, and was "stopped in its tracks" by the Arizona Multihousing Association and Tempe citizen Fritz Tuffli. The rental code was actually approved in February, and the Tempe City Council voted in July to cancel a planned referendum election on the issue. We regret the error.

Army reprimands officer on scandal

BY SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Army has reprimanded the two-star general who headed the training base at the center of service's most serious sexual harassment scandal, officials said Wednesday.

Maj. Gen. Robert Shadley, former commander of the U.S. Army Ordnance Center in Aberdeen, Md., received a letter of reprimand and plans to contest it, said a Pentagon official.

The report came as the Army prepared to issue its long-awaited report on the sex abuse scandal that first came to light last November. Army Secretary Togo West and Gen. Dennis Reimer, the Army chief of staff, are scheduled to discuss the study's findings Thursday. Lawmakers were briefed late Wednesday.

Besides Shadley, several other officers under his command as Aberdeen, including battalion and brigade commanders, have been reprimanded, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Such reprimands are considered career-ending actions in a military.

Shadley currently is deputy chief of staff for logistics and readiness at Fort McPherson, Ga., site of Forces Command, which is in charge of all Army units in the United States.

West and Reimer were expected to release the results of two major Army studies on sexual harassment in the Army that have been under way for nearly a year.

The studies were prompted by last November's disclosures that male drill sergeants at Aberdeen Proving Ground were preying on female trainees. That touched off a series of allegations of rape and other misconduct at a number of bases, including sexual misconduct charges against the service's most senior enlisted man, Sgt. Maj. of the Army Gene McKinney.

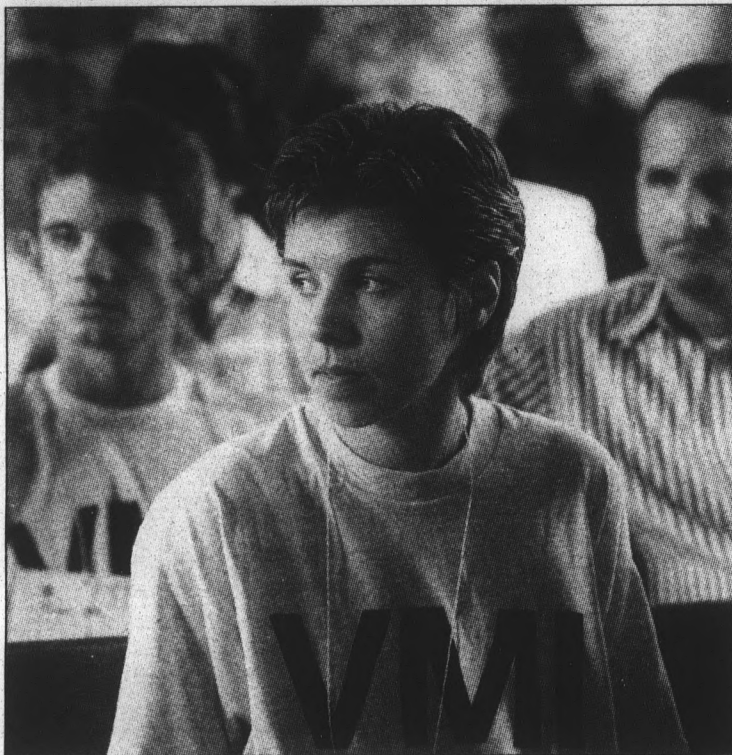

Although some Army officials argued at the time that Shadley should be exonerated, contending he was too senior to know about the sexual misconduct on the base, some members of Congress called for more accountability to be placed upon the Army's senior leaders.

On Thursday, the Army is to announce its "action plan" for dealing with sexual harassment, including putting a new focus on training, revamping screening of potential drill sergeants, and adding more chaplains to the ranks.

West intends to add another week to the service's eight-week basic training course, said one senior officer.

"They want to put the focus on ethics and values," the officer said.

Miss Florida, Hawaii win swimsuit prelims in Atlantic City, N.J.

BY JOHN CURRAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Miss Hawaii became the first Miss America contestant in years to win in a two-piece suit Wednesday, an outfit that also gave Miss Vermont the chance to show off what may be the first navel ring in contest history.

Erika Kauffman won the swimsuit contest during the second night of preliminary competition in the 77th annual Miss America Pageant.

Kauffman, 18, of Honolulu, who graduated from high school in June, wore a two-piece blue suit trimmed in white that she bought off the rack at a J.C. Penney store.

She bested 16 other women who appeared in swimsuit, six of them wearing two-piece suits.

"It covered what I wanted to cover and accentuated what I wanted to accentuate," Kauffman said.

Miss Florida Christy Neuman captured top honors in talent for a rhythmic dance she performed to a song from the movie "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves."

But the big splash went to Miss Vermont Jill Cummings, whose blue two-piece suit clearly displayed the ring she wears through her pierced navel. When she walked out on stage in Convention Hall, dozens of camera flashes went off as photographers scrambled to capture the moment on film.

Preliminary competitions in talent, swimsuit and evening wear are held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday leading up to the pageant finals. The evening gown winners are not announced.

Versatile actor/director Burgess Meredith dies at 89

BY JOHN ANTCAK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Burgess Meredith, the versatile, raspy-voiced actor whose film roles over 60 years included the fated hero in Winterset, the tragic caretaker in Of Mice and Men and the crusty boxing manager in Rocky, has died. He was 89.

Meredith died Tuesday morning at his home in Malibu, his son, Jonathan, said. He had suffered from melanoma, Alzheimer's disease and other complications of old age, his son said.

Meredith's early career was studded with memorable performances: as guardian of the dimwitted giant in Of Mice and Men, as Ginger Rogers' suitor in Tom, Dick and Harry, as war correspondent Ernie Pyle in The Story of G.I. Joe, as James Madison in Magnificent Doll. He was nominated for two Oscars.

He became known as the quacking Penguin in the 1960s Batman TV series.

An intellectual with wide-ranging interests, Meredith was an ardent environmentalist and proponent of causes. In 1971, he commented about pollution: "The whole thing is like a terrible Greek tragedy, grinding toward its inevitable tragic end. I haven't seen one hopeful sign yet."

He sometimes wrote, directed or produced his films. In later years he often took roles that seemed beneath his status as one of America's distinguished actors. He explained to an interviewer in 1967:

"If I spent all my time in Shakespearean companies and only did art movies like Olivier, my position would be more dignified and more serious. I might even be a better actor. But this is America, and I'm a man moved by the rhythms of his time, so I'll just take amusement at being a paradox."

A compact person with unruly, sandy hair, Meredith had a quirky, warm voice that was often heard on television commercial for United Air Lines, Skippy peanut butter and other products.

Born in Cleveland, Ohio, on Nov. 16, 1907 — some references say 1908 or 1909 — Meredith won prizes as a boy soprano. He was educated at Amherst College and began his stage career in 1933 with Eva Le Gallienne's company in New York.

His professional debut came with "Alice in Wonderland", but he was not nominated for Academy Awards until his later years: for supporting actor in Day of the Locust in 1975 and Rocky in 1976. He didn't win.

Many Americans remembered him as Batman's adversary, the Penguin. He approached the role with customary preparation: "I waddled like a penguin, which seemed rather obvious to do. The touch I liked was that peculiar penguinlike quack I used in my lines."

Police raid gangster havens, thousands rally for crackdown on gangsters

BY ERIC TALMADGE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Police raided nearly 100 known gangster havens in Tokyo on Wednesday to quell a smoldering gang war, and thousands of people rallied for tougher action against organized crime.

The action by about 700 officers followed sweeping raids Tuesday on gang-related buildings, apartments and offices in Kobe and neighboring areas in western Japan.

A Metropolitan Police Department spokesman said eight Yamaguchi-gumi gangsters were arrested on charges ranging from illegal possession of weapons to assault; warrants were issued for two more gangsters.

Gang-related violence has broken out across Japan since Masaru Takumi, a top underworld boss, was gunned down two weeks ago in Kobe coffee shop.

Police believe the death of Takumi was the result of a power struggle within the Yamaguchi-gumi, Japan's largest crime syndicate. Takumi was the Yamaguchi-gumi's second-in-command.

At Wednesday's anti-crime rally, actor-director Juzo Itami told the crowd of about 5,000 that he was thankful for their courage.

Itami was attacked by gangsters five years ago after the release of "Minbo no Onna" (The Gentle Art of Japanese Extortion), a movie critical of the underworld. His face was slashed repeatedly.

Tokyo Gov. Yukio Aoshima expressed fears over the continuing violence and the potential harm to Tokyo's image.

"Tokyo has a reputation around the world for its safe streets," he said. "But, with the actions of gangsters lately, we must be especially cautious."

Despite police efforts, there have been at least 12 shootings over the past two weeks, half of them in Tokyo. The four men suspected of killing Takumi and a dentist who was sitting nearby remain at large.

A man mistaken for a rival gang member was shot in the face Wednesday in Kumamoto, 570 miles southwest of Tokyo, police said. The 30-year-old nurse was expected to survive.

The National Police Agency says 18,600 people belong to gangs directly affiliated with the Yamaguchi-gumi, and another 15,000 are loosely allied to it.

Police believe there are about 80,000 gangsters nationwide. Over the past several years, a series of scandals also have revealed close links between gangsters and some of Japan's leading brokerages, banks and politicians.

Tokyo has a reputation around the world for its safe streets. But, with the actions of gangsters lately, we must be especially cautious.

Frieder's leaving turns into classy media event

We waited.
And waited.
And . . . waited.

As members of Valley television and radio stations waited at ASU basketball coach Bill Frieder's plush home in Paradise Valley, we finally got an answer to Wednesday's burning question: Would he go or stay?

Amid a throng of microphones that formed a ring around the basketball coach like a Greek phalanx, he told us:

"My heart and soul just wasn't into it anymore."

Television, radio and print journalists corralled his home and already knew he was leaving. Frieder was a hit among members of the media, but was losing popularity with the general public. We, the media, hate to see him leave, and he kept us lingering till the very end.

But it was inevitable.

After eight seasons of running the troubled Sun Devil program, Frieder is leaving. He leaves behind a program laced with incidents and events ranging from last season's last-place finish in the Pac-10 to a point-shaving scandal and a rape incident. The recent alleged theft of a portable CD player from Manzanita Hall by two of his players pushed Frieder over the edge.

The problems took a toll on him. He's had enough. He made his announcement in front of a horde that kept growing in size and kept shrinking in patience. It was a horde that practically camped out on his property.

His wife, Janice, took the whole ordeal in stride. "There's so many more of you guys than I thought," she said to members of the media as she refilled an empty glass bowl with celery sticks and carrots.

Vegetable tidbits weren't the only fare she served the horde — er, the media. She also had sandwiches, iced tea and cold bottled water on hand.

His daughter, Laura, took in the entire spectacle with a look of bewilderment. Damn, there sure were a lot of cameras, microphones and reporters at her parents' home.

Still, life goes on. There are things in life outside basketball.

"Mom, can we go out to dinner Friday?" asked Laura, who is in the honors program at ASU and is an accomplished show jumper. She has three horses: Quabercac, Roulette and Baccarat.

Janice and Laura were hospitable when they didn't have to be. Pleasant, when any other person would have long ago lost any semblance of niceness. They were classy when rude would have been understandable — after all, there was a gaggle of media staked out on their property.

They patiently endured Dad's news conference.

With tears in her eyes, Laura embraced her father.

Bill Frieder sang "Happy Birthday" to his wife, since it was her 55th birthday.

Life goes on for the Frieders.

Laura will continue to attend classes at ASU. Bill and Janice look forward to a long vacation.

But whatever they do now likely won't compare to the media hurricane they experienced Wednesday.

Whatever they do now, it's likely they'll do it with class.

'Foe' alcohol is glorified in U.S. culture

Throughout most of the world, including the United States, alcohol is culturally accepted as a normal part of life. It is found in celebrations, rites of passage, ceremonies and other social functions. Yet there are severe side effects that seem to be overlooked and placed by the wayside in the name of "having a good time." This dangerous set of values surrounding alcohol have some sobering facts that, when brought to light, can demonstrate that this friend — alcohol — is really a foe.

JOSHUA SOLOVSKY
Columnist

When alcohol is consumed, whether at a wedding, a football game, a party or at any occasion, the effects on the human central nervous system and brain functions are the same. Alcohol has a dulling affect on the senses; motor skills are reduced and the capacity to reason is diminished. This dulling creates a feeling of being high or an easiness that washes over the individual. With consumption, the drinker discovers cares are lifted and he or she has a newfound freedom from inhibitions.

In our culture, this is a celebrated activity and a "God-given right." For example, in the advertising of alcoholic beverages, there are young, energetic, sexy people having the greatest time because they have a certain alcoholic product in their hand. The appearance of being "with it" or "hip" is stigmatized into the act of consuming alcohol. In others, the act of consumption is proposed as a reward for a hard day's work or as a perk of being with friends in celebration.

Statistics from the Center for Disease Control (CDC) make it evident that our nation's attitude towards drinking is dangerous. In 1995, as part of the Youth Risk Behavior Surveillance System, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention conducted a national school-based Youth Risk Behavior Survey among a representative sample of 10,904 high school students. During the 30 days preceding the survey, 51.6 percent of students had had at least one drink of alcohol and 32.6 percent of students had consumed five or more drinks of alcohol on at least one occasion. It is safe to assume that for college-age students, these numbers are higher.

Remember, alcohol has a dulling effect on the senses and the capacity to reason is diminished. Two examples of dangerous situations resulting from alcohol consumption are driving under the influence and sexual encounters.

The CDC went on to report that motor-vehicle crashes are a leading cause of death in the United States for persons from one year to 34 years of age. 41.3 percent of the 41,693 traffic fatalities in 1995 were alcohol-related. In 1994, 29 percent of the 2,610 traffic fatalities involving 15-to-17-year-olds and 44 percent of the 3,616 traffic fatalities involving 18-to-20-year-olds were alcohol-related.

As for sex, people can find themselves in sexually compromising, threatening and even deadly surroundings. When reason is blurred, the inhibition to stop or the thought of "What am I doing?" is lifted. "Going all the way" is not so elusive or prohibited. The result could be an unwanted pregnancy, date rape or transmission of a sexually transmitted disease such as herpes or — even worse — AIDS.

The stereotypes found in American culture demonstrate a reckless disregard for the severe side affects of alcohol consumption. Therefore, if you have found yourself in any of the above circumstances, know someone who has or can see the possibility of being in the above mentioned situations — help is available. Organizations like Alcoholics Anonymous, Al-Anon, Al-Atteen and professional counselors are there for you. Even though many people can have a drink or two and never experience these detrimental effects, the danger that one day a person might experience them exists.

Bedrooms no place for politics; private lives not public concern

Right now, millions of people are having sex. I am willing to bet you hadn't noticed.

SCOTT BENNETT
Columnist

Whatever two consenting adults choose to do in their bedroom should not concern anyone else. Sex is not a public concern. The government should not scrutinize its citizens' personal lives. Americans deserve absolute privacy in their bedrooms. But unfortunately, that is not the case.

In the great state of Arizona, everyone has the right to have sex with and/or marry anyone he or she chooses. If they are heterosexual.

Government has overstepped its domain on this issue. A government exists to protect individuals. Certain actions are illegal because they directly harm another person. Murder, theft and vandalism are good examples. If this type of activity were allowed, society could not function. So I ask you: What harm is done when two people of the same gender fall in love, have sex or get married? How do acts of love affect anyone other than the two people involved? When did citizens' private lives become matters of public policy?

According to ARS 25-101, "Marriage between persons of the same sex is void and prohibited." Well, I sleep better at night knowing Arizona's policies are not based on reason, but the anachronistic morality of a vocal minority. The separation of church and state was intended to prevent this type of Bible-beating stupidity. It does not seem to have worked. Politicians cater to the demands of a fervent Christian faction. That is the only explanation for the illogical prohibition of same-sex marriages. The values and prejudices of a religious group should never control a secular state. Instead, legislation should be based upon careful, rational thought.

There is absolutely no logical reason to prevent the marriage of homosexuals. This law is a product of prejudice and ignorance, nothing more. Same-sex marriages would not "rip the social fabric" of this nation (a vague and meaningless statement) as some claim, but would increase social stability, creating more long-term monogamous relationships. That is easy to understand if we listen to our intellects and not our biases. Unfortunately, not everyone agrees on this. "How could they be so blind?" you may ask. "How can they debate such an obvious conclusion?" The answer is that melodrama and prejudice have replaced rational thought in political debates. Opponents of same-sex marriages claim it is "wrong," "unnatural" or "against the will of God." They have every right to believe that. They can sit in their hate chairs and condemn anyone they want. They can stand on Hayden Mall and threaten us with hell fire and other scary things. But they should not be allowed to dictate anyone else's actions.

Homophobia has even crept into higher education. ASU does not extend benefits to homosexual partners of faculty members, as it does with heterosexuals. That is blatant discrimination. What is the justification for that? Universities should be places for intellectual discovery and free thought, beyond the myopia of the masses. ASU, however, is only concerned with public image. It frightens me to think that my tuition supports narrow-minded bureaucrats more concerned with petty discrimination than education. ASU should do everything possible to attract and keep the best professors. I am willing to bet they are not all heterosexuals. I challenge the administration and Board of Regents: end this discrimination. Find the courage to confront the frothing zealots. Utilize the lumpy gray things sloshing around in your skulls!

Religious beliefs should not create public policy. I may be mistaken, but I assume that no one would be forced into a same-sex marriage. So if you are opposed, marry someone of the opposite sex. Pray for the souls of the "sinners," but allow them to determine their own fates. Choose your own path and allow others to do the same.

Love, sex and marriage are not public domain. Individuals should be the masters of their private lives. The government should get out of our bedrooms and deal with some real problems. Every day, Americans die in the streets. Poverty and war ravage the world. Bombs kill Israeli shoppers. Yet we waste our time fighting ancient, irrational prejudices. Our country needs to grow up.

Tagliabue, spare a goal post or two

Just when things were going so well, it now seems that Arizona Cardinals fans have found a common enemy: the NFL.

Following Sunday night's celebration, which came after the Cardinals' upset of the Dallas Cowboys, the National Football League has set some ground rules to prevent further "college antics."

Ouch, that hurts.

From now on, police officers will use more force, if necessary, to keep fans from coming onto the field after a victory. Officially, the NFL said it was taking these steps for safety purposes, but it doesn't take a complete genius to figure out another reason.

You can't just go down to the local hardware store and pick up an official NFL goal post, like the one taken down by the fans in the post-win gala on Sunday.

OK, so the NFL has a point. We are destroying property. But can't we make a compromise?

We need to set a condition on when we're allowed to go on the field and commemorate a victory. It's not all that often that the Cards win, let alone win in dramatic fashion.

For instance, if the Cards should beat the New York Giants, we shall do nothing more than stand and applaud the effort. However, if they should earn a playoff berth late in the season, it's time for those goal posts to hit the deck.

Going to watch your favorite football team play has always been about fun, and look, we found a way to have even more fun right here in Sun Devil Stadium. It makes perfect sense to raise a little hell when the situation calls for it; after all, a good number of the Cardinals fans are Sun Devils.

So, Paul Tagliabue and the rest of the NFL, we ask you to compromise. We're not asking for a lot, maybe just a goal post or two.

And if the Cowboys fans want to tear down their goal posts in haste after the Cardinals upset them in Texas, we'll leave that up to them.

College is preparation for life

In the Sept. 9 State Press, columnist Bryan Ary expressed his opposition to the attendance policies in many of his classes. Ary states, "Attendance policies sound elementary to me." He says that college is about making decisions and he has the option to make them. One of these decisions is to attend or not to attend class. Attendance policies do not deny Ary the option to decide, but merely present the consequences up front. If you miss class, you fail — that is the bottom line.

Ary goes on to complain, "I want to have the option without fearing expulsion." Is this realistic? Ary better become used to hearing the expression "you can't always get what you want." Many college freshmen are ill-prepared for the realities of college, as the high rate of drop-outs and students on probation exhibits. The intent of attendance policies is to help students get through their first year and return for a second year in "good standing."

Ary and other students need to focus on the word responsibility. College is an enormous responsibility. I am sure most students have heard the cliché, "College is what you make of it." This really is true! Every student at ASU has the opportunity to gain a higher education. Do with it what you will. The real world is right around the corner and it does not put up with absence because you want to sleep until noon. If you can't handle going to class, how are you going to handle a career in the real world? You have a few years to figure it out (these years will be some of the best and the hardest years of your life), but I suggest you get a head start and get your priorities straight.

Correction

The State Press would like to clarify two errors printed in the Sept. 10 opinion section:

- The column, "Alcohol-related accidents hit home" was written by Angela Yeager, not Amanda as was incorrectly printed.
- The letter to the editor, "Burger King hikes price on ASU Whopper" was submitted by David M. McKee, a manager in ASU's telecommunications services.

The State Press regrets the errors.

Use computing time wisely

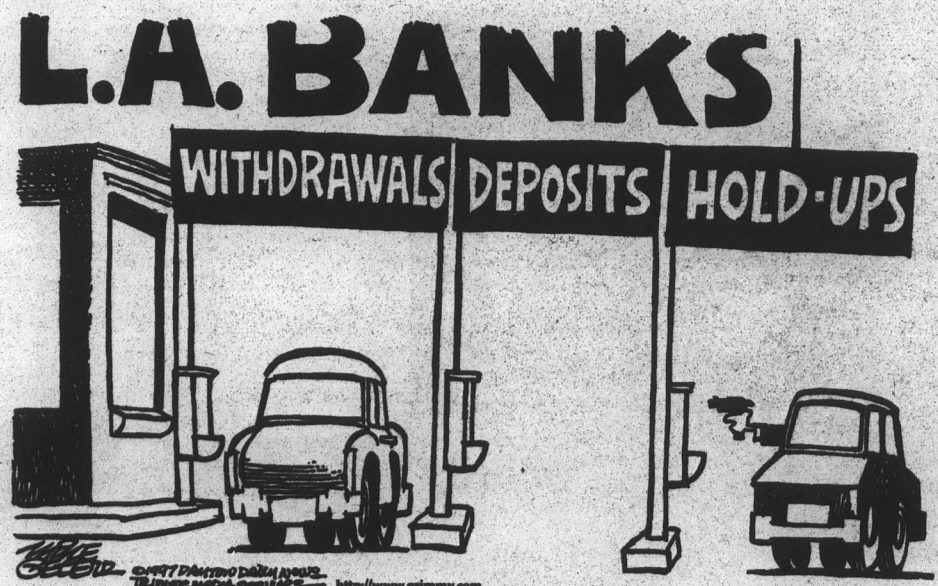

I have just waited in line at the Computing Commons for 30 minutes so I could use a computer for 10 minutes before going back to class. And here I am, utilizing those 10 minutes to write this editorial in the hopes of saving myself and others from this stupidity. It is no great secret that the computer facilities at ASU ... well ... suck! But there are some things that we as users can do to ease the frustration.

• If you are able to use other computer facilities besides the Computing Commons, do it! And encourage those other facilities to increase their hours of operation. Usage of the other facilities, such as the ones in the business building and the music building, especially during peak times, would cut down the lines and the lag time in the systems.

• If you do use the Computing Commons, use the "open" signs correctly! There is a reason for them. When you sit down, remove the sign from the top of the computer, and when you leave, put the sign back up. It is not that difficult to understand! And if you are waiting in line for a computer, be observant. Don't just stand there; if you think that one might be open across the room, go find out!

• Lastly, utilize your time wisely. Be aware of the fact that there are 20 others waiting in line. Do what you need to do, do it quickly, and leave. If you are planning to surf the Web for two hours, maybe you could do it later in the afternoon when there is not so much traffic.

Universities stress desire for work-study program

BY KARA SHIRE
STATE PRESS

A state-funded work-study proposal denied by the Legislature last year is once again being pushed by state universities to give eligible students the opportunity to work with local businesses toward their career goals.

"The main goal of the project is to give students experience in their future professions or in their areas of interest, rather than experience in areas that aren't going to help them in the future," said Christine Thompson, Arizona Students Association executive director.

Sens. Gary Richardson, R-Tempe, and John Huppenthal, R-Chandler, are working with the government relations department of ASASU to help successfully push the bill through the next legislative session.

"It's a great program to enable students to get some hands-on working knowledge in a chosen field while they are receiving their education," Richardson said. "It's much better than delivering pizza or waiting tables."

Funding for the program has been the major hurdle that has kept the proposal dormant in the past.

mant in the past.

"If (the universities) have to absorb the cost of these additional work-study slots, then the universities are not going to be supportive," said Tony Seese-Bieda, spokesman for the Arizona Board of Regents.

Thompson said there is currently a work-study committee in ASA looking into funding options.

"Last year we asked for a tax break, but we didn't have all the kinks worked out," she said. "We still haven't fully decided how we're going to go about asking for funding."

Pace said one option is to have the work-study program paid for by both the state and the employer.

If the student wage was $8 an hour, the state would pay $4 and the employer would pay $4, he said.

Seese-Bieda said that would be a good approach.

"If the proposal has a funding source where its a win-win situation, it will probably be a good outcome," he said.

Airport buys house, gets a pet

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The house cost $231,000. The cat came free.

Los Angeles International Airport found itself with an unofficial mascot with its purchase of a Playa del Rey home. The house sits near the northern runway and authorities wanted to turn it into a showcase for soundproofing.

The previous homeowner didn't take a gray-and-white cat that had been hanging around long enough to have earned the nickname Cat.

Airport workers didn't mind. They feed and care for the cat, even paying for veterinary care.

"He's somewhat become a mascot," said Nancy Niles, community outreach coordinator for the LAX Residential Soundproofing Bureau.

The airport workers gave Cat a new name, too — Runway.

"She responds to it," Niles said. The home, which was bought last month, is being refurbished to reduce jet noise.

The cat doesn't seem to mind the construction.

- A non-affiliated adult male reported that someone took his bicycle from the Student Recreation Center, where it was secured with a lock.
- An adult male student was arrested, cited, and released for being a minor in possession of alcohol at the Palo Verde complex.
- A small amount of currency was impounded for safekeeping by ASU Police.
- An adult male non-affiliate reported that he was assaulted while watching the Cardinals vs. Cowboys football game at Sun Devil Stadium. No word on if he got bonked on the head by the goal post.
- Three students were arrested, cited, and released for being underage in possession of alcohol at 350 E. University Drive.
- Someone tried to take a washing machine from McClintock Hall.
- A bicycle was taken from Mariposa Hall, where it was "secured with a lock."
- An adult male student reported that his vehicle was taken from Parking Area 63 without his permission.
- An adult male student neglected to look both ways and was injured when he rode his bicycle into the path of a vehicle that was leaving the Student Health parking lot.
- An adult female non-affiliate reported that someone took her cellular phone from 609 E. Alpha Drive.

- An adult female employee reported that someone took 15 ASU keys and $20 from her desk in the Language and Literature building.
- An adult male student suffered a seizure at the Memorial Union. He was transported to Tempe St. Lukes Hospital.
- Someone took a bicycle from Manzanita Hall, where it was "secured with a lock."

Tempe Police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

- A man took $157 cash and a $185 pool cue from the pool hall where he worked. He was booked into Tempe City Jail and later released.
- A woman was arrested for misdemeanor assault and domestic violence while staying at the Roadway Inn, 1550 S. 52nd St. She ripped the telephone out of the wall and hit her brother with it, hit him with a boom box, ripped his shirt, cursed at him and threw a water jug at his noggin. She was booked into Tempe City Jail.
- Two women were arrested for theft when they attempted to stiff the Sukiyaki Express delivery driver. First they refused to pay the $33 total, then they tried to give the driver a stolen check. When the driver asked for identification, they snatched the check back. Both were transported to Tempe City Jail.
- In other dine and dash news, a man attempted to bolt on a $156.34 tab at Riazzi's Italian Gardens, 2700 S. Mill Ave. He also gave a false name to Tempe police. He was transported and booked into Tempe City Jail. He did not get a doggie bag.

Alleged bounty hunter accused, not charged in past crime

PHOENIX (AP) — A man charged in two killings authorities attributed to bounty hunters who entered the wrong home was implicated in a 1993 supermarket armed robbery but never charged, a spokesman for the county prosecutor's office acknowledged today.

Maricopa County Attorney Rick Romley refused to give immunity to Michael Martin Sanders for the Pace Warehouse robbery, Romley spokesman Bill FitzGerald said. But authorities don't have enough evidence to charge Sanders, a longtime police informant, with the heist, he said.

Sanders and four other men have been charged with second-degree murder, aggravated assault and unlawful imprisonment in the Aug. 31 shooting deaths of Chris Foote, 25, and his girlfriend Spring Wright, 19. Police said five armed men wearing ski masks and body armor broke into Foote's home and shot the couple to death in their bed when Foote shot at them.

Those arrested gave police documents indicating they were bounty hunters looking for a man who had skipped out on a $25,000 bond in Los Angeles.

But the bond for that fugitive — drunken driving suspect Victor Rodriguez Alcantar — expired in 1993, said Mark Bernstein, a lawyer for the Pomona, Calif., bail bond firm which provided it.

Bernstein and other representatives of the bail bond industry have accused police and prosecutors of keeping Sanders on the streets because of his background as an informant. Authorities have strongly denied going easy on Sanders because he was a snitch.

"Sanders is a bad guy ... but we need evidence to prosecute him, and there is no evidence (on the Pace Warehouse robbery)," FitzGerald said.

Also today, FitzGerald acknowledged that Sanders the informant received more money than had been previously reported. FitzGerald said last week that Sanders got $500 a month for nine months in the 1980s, but said today officials had recently found records showing the amount was more than that.

Two Phoenix newspapers reported today that Sanders got $20,000 from prosecutors, but FitzGerald said the exact amount had not been determined. He said the relationship had been difficult to document because it happened before Romley took office in 1988 and Sanders was paid indirectly through a prosecutor.

A prosecutor's memo refers to Sanders being an informant for Romley's office in 1990, but FitzGerald told The Arizona Republic that the 1990 reference was a typographical error.

Sanders told a Glendale Police detective he wanted immunity for the Pace Warehouse robbery in exchange for information about the robbery and killing of a Wells Fargo delivery driver, FitzGerald said. But the detective created a problem in prosecuting Sanders by telling him that authorities were not interested in prosecuting him for the Pace Warehouse crime, FitzGerald said.

The Tribune, a newspaper serving suburban Phoenix, reported today that police reports list evidence linking Sanders to the supermarket heist including security video of Sanders entering the store shortly before the robbery.

One man — a Pace employee — confessed to the heist, which netted $80,000 in cash and about as much in checks, and fingered Sanders as an accomplice, The Tribune reported.

Glendale police Detective Brian Wilkins acknowledged the department moved slowly on the Pace robbery, which they expected to close after the Wells Fargo case.

Wilkins told The Tribune that Phoenix and Glendale police, as well as the Maricopa County Attorney's Office, agreed they would not offer immunity in the Pace robbery in exchange for help with the Wells Fargo case.

Sanders was an informant in the case against three men accused of killing a Wells Fargo driver and stealing more than $900,000 in 1994. Timothy Ring, who was convicted in the case and could face the death penalty, has accused Sanders of committing the Wells Fargo robbery and framing Ring for it.

FitzGerald said the evidence against Ring was overwhelming, including the discovery of several hundred thousand dollars from the robbery in Ring's garage, and said the only evidence Sanders was involved in the Wells Fargo robbery is Ring's claim.

Since his arrest, reports have raised questions about Sanders' background, including the fact that he was an ex-convict. Sanders was fired from his job as a county jailer in Texas in 1981 for his involvement in an escape plot, The Arizona Republic reported today.

Sanders later was found guilty of retaliating against a witness for allegedly plotting to kill the sheriff's investigators whose investigation led to his firing. He served two years in prison.

Sanders then became an informant for several Arizona law enforcement agencies, including the Phoenix Police Department and the Maricopa County Attorney's office.

Sanders was charged with assault when he tried to barge into the wrong house while acting as a bounty hunter in 1990, although for reasons which remain unclear, he was never prosecuted.

California moves to ban cheap 'Saturday night specials'

BY MICHAEL WHITE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The crackdown on cheap handguns after Robert Kennedy's assassination in 1968 has had the paradoxical effect of making Southern California the capital of America's "Saturday night special" industry.

Nearly 30 years after the United States banned imports of cheap and easy-to-conceal handguns, five Los Angeles-area manufacturers produce 80 percent of the Saturday night specials sold in the United States.

Now, after years of heavy lobbying by gun-control foes, that may be about to change.

The California Legislature has voted to ban the manufacture or sale of such guns.

Under the bill, which passed Tuesday and still must be signed by an undecided Gov. Pete Wilson, handguns must be at least 6 inches long and 4 inches tall.

Gunmakers contend that larger, more powerful guns that would be legal under the law are more lethal and thus more of a danger to the public. And the National Rifle Association has gone so far as to suggest that outlawing these guns would discriminate against poor people who cannot afford more expensive weapons for self-defense.

Bill Mabie, a spokesman for the legislator who sponsored the bill, Democratic state Sen. Richard Polanco, said such arguments from the pro-gun forces are absurd: "They want to maintain a stream of cheap, disposable guns."

The story of America's Saturday night special industry goes back to June 1968, when Sirhan Sirhan used a cheap, .22-caliber revolver made in Europe to kill Kennedy in Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel.

Until then, most cheap handguns sold in the United States were manufactured overseas. After the assassination, Congress made it illegal to import small, cheaply manufactured handguns. But the law did not ban the domestic manufacture of such guns.

George Jennings, a California aircraft parts manufacturer, then founded Raven Arms Co. and began manufacturing a small, budget-priced .25-caliber semiautomatic pistol that sold by the thousands. Other companies sprang up to tap the lucrative market, establishing small plants in the Los Angeles area.

At their peak, in 1993, the California companies manufactured nearly 900,000 pistols, according to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Some Saturday night specials sell for well under $100. By comparison, higher-quality guns made by manufacturers such as Glock and Beretta go for $500 to $600.

The state's gunmakers are already planning ways to survive, including manufacturing a new generation of cheap guns that will be larger and more powerful than those banned under the bill.

"We had pretty well resolved ourselves that it was eventually going to happen, so we're going to move in the direction of continuing to make handguns, just of a higher quality and caliber," said Steve Jennings, president of Sundance Industries.

Coor speaks on enrollment growth, focuses on 21st century

BY CHRIS PASSAMANO
STATE PRESS

Emphasizing the importance of diversity and the ever increasing academic standards, ASU President Lattie Coor, gave his State of the University address Tuesday morning to about 300 members of the school faculty.

Coor's basic outline for ASU in its 112th year included focusing on the student body. Coor spoke of the growth of the campus in terms of students.

The address, delivered at the presidents breakfast, reaffirmed Coor's focus to make ASU "a university for the next century."

"For ASU main, we set out about five years ago to re-balance the incoming freshman class to give us a sense of balance between the originating students and the transfer students," Coor said. "Recognizing that with the new architecture at ASU with three campuses, where we have a greater capacity to teach students on a variety of sources, that setting is a base of 5,000 entering freshman to main campus was going to be hard."

Coor pointed out that in fall 1991 there were only 2,800 freshman and highlighted the strengths of this year's freshman class.

"We thought it would take 5-7 years," Coor said. "As you know, we hit the target earlier than we thought this year, with not only 5,000 students, but with the strongest and most diverse student body that we have ever had. There are 618 regent scholars in this class. There are 52 national merit scholars in this class and that is up from six years ago. In short what we see is that goal of having ASU become the institution of choice in Arizona for the most talented students."

Coor praised the diversity of the new freshman class and said he wants to continue to build on the progress that has been made in recent years.

"Of our total freshman class, in-state and out-of-state, 23 percent of the Universities freshman are from a minority background," Coor said. "Twelve hundred of the students are from a minority background, compared to 533 in 1991."

Coor stated that he could feel the excitement of the progress made and that we all need to continue the spirit.

"We must continue working on the spirit of the students. We have to continue building that base of academic enthusiasm for the students," he said.

He also hoped to try to upgrade — without hurting — the curriculum to make it that much easier for students

"I do not want us to diminish the quality or rigor of what we do educationally one iota," Coor said. "(But) 19 percent of our students change majors. Eleven percent change colleges. We have large numbers of transfer students — half of the undergraduates on this campus (main) and all of them at ASU West. We have university level requirements, we have 58 separate sets of college requirements and 253 sets of major and/or concentration requirements."

Coor concluded his speech explaining his joy with the University and what has been accomplished in the past few years

"I can't imagine a place I would rather be," Coor said. "A university, in a community, in a region, at this point in time, where we have so much we can contribute to become better and better and better."

Reporting HIV infection should be required, journal says

BOSTON (AP) — The distinguished New England Journal of Medicine is urging mandatory reporting of HIV infections to state health departments to increase the chances people will get early treatment.

More than half of all states now require that the names of infected people be reported to confidential registries. However, New York and California, the two with the most cases by far, do not require this.

Early in the epidemic, the need to keep AIDS infections private was often considered to be more important than any public health benefits of turning names over to health agencies.

However, opinion has shifted, and mandatory reporting has grown less controversial in recent years, especially with the advent of treatments for people who are infected but not yet sick.

In Thursday's issue of the journal, Dr. Robert Steinbrook, a deputy editor, said in an editorial that infection with the AIDS virus should be a reportable disease at the federal level, just like tuberculosis and many sexually transmitted illnesses, such as syphilis and gonorrhea.

The editorial noted that this would allow health agencies to track down partners of infected people so they could be warned of their risk and get counseling and treatment.

Protease inhibitors and other AIDS drugs, used together, dramatically slow the progression of an infection to full-blown AIDS. Many doctors believe patients should start treatment as soon as possible after infection to improve their chances of survival.

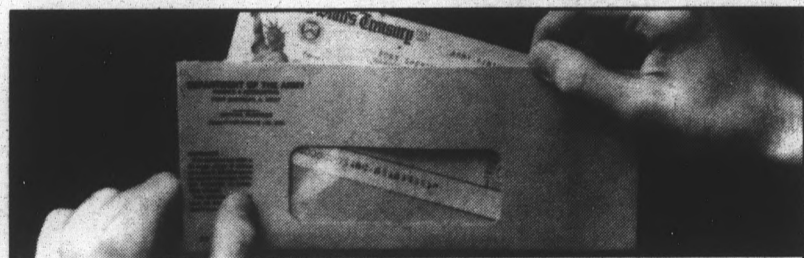

The same issue of the journal published a study, directed by Dr. Scott M. Hammer of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston, showing that AIDS patients getting a combination of the protease inhibitor indinavir, plus the drugs AZT and lamivudine, had half the death rate of those getting two drugs when followed for nine months.

That study received wide attention after the results were released by the National Institutes of Health, its sponsor, in February.

States with laws requiring HIV reporting by name are Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Connecticut, Oregon and Texas require that only HIV-infected children be reported by name.

Eleven killed in California car crash

BY MICHELLE DEARMOND
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Eleven people — most of them returning to Los Angeles after a day of selling corn — were killed in the fiery head-on crash of a packed van and a pickup on scenic California highway.

"I haven't seen anything this horrendous," California Highway Patrol Officer Jim Everly said Wednesday.

Tuesday night's collision left wreckage burning for hours and victims and ears of corn strewn across Highway 1 between Lompoc and Santa Barbara, about 130 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

The names of the dead, eight from a Chevrolet van carrying a dozen people and three from a Ford pickup truck, weren't released. They were charred beyond recognition and the coroner's office said identification wasn't expected for days.

"No one is telling us who they were and we haven't been able to find any identification," said Sgt. Tom Nelson of the Santa Barbara County coroner's office.

Four people survived, two in critical condition. Two of them said they had been selling corn in Lompoc during the day and were heading home to the San Fernando Valley.

Survivors only spoke Spanish, and one said he had arrived in the United States from Mexico only eight days earlier.

According to a preliminary investigation by the highway patrol, the pickup went over the double yellow line and hit the van. Witnesses said the pickup had been passing vehicles on the twisted highway.

Three off-duty correctional officers arrived shortly after the crash and pulled people from the van.

They said they saw a woman hanging out the window of the burning van and tried to pull her out, but her seat belt was holding her in. The flames apparently burned the belt at one point and they pulled her free.

"I can still hear that person screaming," county jail guard Charles Powell said 14 hours later.

The crash site is eight miles from the sea. The 55 mph speed limit is often exceeded by commuters who take the meandering 22-mile route as a shortcut between Lompoc and Santa Barbara.

TORONTO (AP) — Howard Stern to Canada: Lighten up, eh.

The radio host refused to apologize Wednesday for insulting French-speaking Quebecers on his show, saying: "I can't imagine anybody would take what I say seriously."

Stern made his Canadian debut last week when his New York-based program was broadcast in Montreal and Toronto. He called Francophones "peckerheads" and "scumbags" and charged that the French collaborated with the Nazis during World War II.

The broadcast prompted the Quebec government to suggest Stern was violating a law against stirring up ethnic hatred.

At a news conference, Stern said: "The reason you guys have put me on the front page of your newspapers is because I'm the freshest, wildest radio host in the world. You've now been introduced to good radio."

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Mario Cuomo is going back on the air with his serious brand of talk radio.

The former governor is trying a weekly half-hour show that will be offered free to public radio stations and commercial outlets nationwide.

After losing for re-election in 1994, Cuomo tried his hand at national talk radio. His syndicated show, which ran on weekends in 1995 and 1996, aired on about 50 stations at its peak but never drew a large audience.

The new Sunday evening show begins on Sept. 21.

Cuomo said a public radio audience might be more receptive than commercial outlets to his brand of talk radio. He prefers generally serious and in-depth discussions.

To do commercial talk radio, "you have to be entertaining. Entertaining means bing-bang, bing-bang," Cuomo explained Wednesday. "What you have to do is what Rush Limbaugh does."

NEW YORK (AP) — Soprano Rosa Ponselle was a great eater as well as a great singer, Luciano Pavarotti recalled Wednesday as postage stamps picturing four Metropolitan Opera stars of the past were unveiled.

In 1974, Pavarotti said, he visited an 80-year-old Miss Ponselle in Baltimore.

"She gave me an appointment in the afternoon. For her the morning didn't exist," the tenor recalled. "She came out of her house dressed like a beautiful diva. She said, 'Today my pianissimo will not be so great.'"

They talked and sang and ate for hours, he said.

"She was a great eater. Wow. We were eating the same precise things. Staying even with me is not easy," the heroically proportioned Pavarotti said.

Miss Ponselle, soprano Lily Pons, tenor Richard Tucker and baritone Lawrence Tibbett are pictured on the 32-cent stamps, unveiled at the Metropolitan Opera House.

STAUNTON, Va. (AP) — A former soap opera actress got a year in prison for trying to have her husband killed for $20,000.

Catherine Ann Christianson, 40, pleaded guilty in April to soliciting murder. She was sentenced on Tuesday.

Ms. Christianson, who had a recurring role as a character named Jane in "One Life to Live" in 1991, was arrested in 1996.

Police videotaped a conversation between her and a police informant in which she offered the man $20,000 to kill her husband, Charles R. Chittum.

MIAMI (AP) — Racing champion Emerson Fittipaldi will almost certainly walk again after surgery to repair a spinal fracture suffered when his ultralight plane crashed, his doctors said Wednesday.

But he will be "limited in high-velocity activities for at least a year," Dr. Barth Green said.

Fittipaldi, 50, flew from Brazil to Miami on Wednesday for surgery on his lower back. His left leg was paralyzed.

"The chances are almost 100 percent he'll be able to walk," Green said after an initial exam in preparation for surgery on Thursday. "I think his long-term outlook is very good, God willing."

Sun Devil players voice opinions on Frieder's exit

BY LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

The list of Bill Frieder's ASU men's basketball teams' troubles is a long one.

March 1994 — point shaving scandal begins, February 1996 — Three players Gee Gervin, Thomas Prince and Rico Harris are charged with an alleged rape at the Sonora Center, August 1997- Point-shaving allegations resurface, Aug. 30, 1997- Sophomore guard Eddie House and junior guard Reggie Hester are arrested for allegedly stealing a compact disc player in Manzanita Hall.

This only represents a small part of the laundry list of incidents the team has been involved in during Frieder's tenure.

However, from a player's perspective, these situations need to be put behind them, and though ASU head basketball coach Bill Frieder has officially resigned, the team will still go on.

Some players had nothing to say yet about their thoughts on Frieder's resignation. Senior forward Urit Kelly said that there was really nothing he could comment on and that the players didn't know much and they would wait to see what Frieder said. Senior guard Jeremy Veal also declined comment. However, the two players involved in the most recent ASU basketball incident, Hester and House, did offer their views, along with junior forward Michael Batiste.

"We hit a wall, we need to jump it and come together and be strong," sophomore guard Eddie House said. "(We'll) put this behind us and go on with it."

Some of the players offered different reasons for why they thought Frieder decided to step down. The incidents involving some players may have been part of it, but Hester also believes there were other determining factors.

"Some things that some of the players do, when it goes to the media it's not always as they write it. The last situation was nowhere near what it appeared to be," Hester said. "I think it was the pressure, he (Frieder) was kind of uncomfortable with the situation he is in right now."

While the new head coach is yet to be known, several of the players made it clear that they would like one of the assistants to step up.

"I'm getting familiar with the assistant coaches (Don Newman, Doc Sadler)," Hester said. "I'd be a lot more comfortable with those guys to take over."

House agreed. "I really don't want them to bring in anyone new. I wouldn't mind having Newman or Doc take over as head coach and have either Newman or Doc as the assistant, and why I like that is because it's more like family," House said.

Batiste also said Newman would be the man of choice.

"I think I'd rather play for Don," he said. "Because I think that if somebody else came in and took over it would change the continuity and chemistry (of the team). All the hard work we did over the last season and summer. It would be tough if someone new came in."

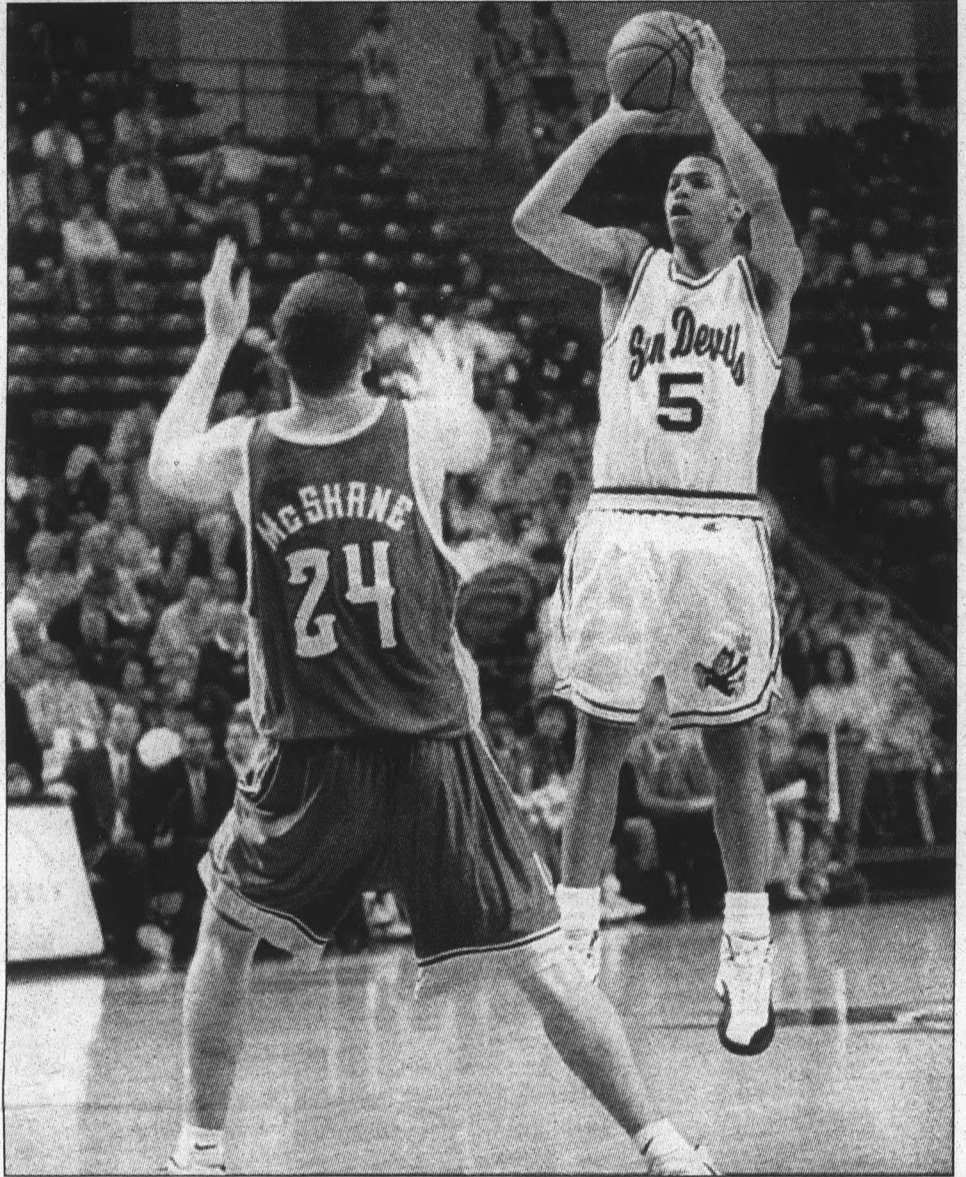

House said that everybody plans to stay on the team and are just looking forward to the season.

"It's like a family, we're all like brothers," House said. "We can just stick this out and hopefully this year, come out and win, change some things around."

Batiste said the team will work things out in its best interest.

"I think first of all we're just going to talk it over with everybody," he said. "Get everybody's decisions and then everybody will go home and make a decision for themselves. First we are going to think about the team and how we feel."

While it may seem odd that Hester and House be the players to share their comments, they seemed genuinely upset over Frieder's leaving. Hester said that Frieder was the main reason for why he decided to come play at ASU.

Sophomore guard Eddie House and his teammates voiced their sadness that head coach Bill Frieder resigned on Wednesday. The team seems to believe that an inside person should take over for the departed coach.

Pat Shannahan/State Press

Athletic director knows time is short to find new coach

BY JOHN GRABER
STATE PRESS

In the big dance of Division I collegiate sports, timing is everything. Unfortunately, former basketball head coach Bill Frieder's and ASU's parting of ways leaves very little time to find a replacement.

With just 35 days until teams can officially begin practice, the search for a new head coach to take over the reigns at the University Activity Center, will have to be a fast and furious one.

"Believe me, the fact that we're here on September the 10th is not lost on any of us," White said.

The plan is to bring in a permanent replacement for Frieder, White said. ASU wants to bring in somebody with considerable collegiate coaching experience, he said.

"Our plan most immediately, in the next seven to 10 days is to take a good hard look at high profile sitting Division I coaches and see who is moveable from an emotional and contractual standpoint and see who might make the best institutional fit and what makes the most sense for this program. At that juncture, if we don't feel the right person is in place, or nearly in place, I think at that point you'll see us appoint an interim."

Though White declined to name names on the list of candidates there are some obvious choices on the wish list bantered around by fans and sports writers.

The most mentioned name is Utah's Rick Majerus who took his team to an elite eight appearance. The Utes finished ranked sixth in the nation last season.

Also high on the list is Paul Westphal's name, who is currently a coach at Phoenix's St. Mary's High School.

But if a permanent replacement can't be found on such short notice, a temporary replacement will have to be found quickly.

"I spent part of the day getting the athlete's input," White said. "They told me, if they had their druthers, and we're going to have an interim, and go to plan B, they would prefer to have somebody who has already been on campus, and I'm inclined to move in that direction."

In that case, Don Newman, an assistant coach under Frieder, could throw his hat in the ring for consideration.

But whoever winds up filling Frieder's shoes, White said he wants somebody with the strong personality Frieder has always displayed in his eight year with the program.

"We need a guy at the front of this program, as (Frieder) has always been, who is enthused, strong and determined and take us back to where we can develop and be competitive," White said.

Miami senior cornerback Duane Starks (23) will attempt to shut down ASU's wide receivers Saturday when the Hurricanes entertain the Sun Devils at 12:30 p.m. on CBS.

University of Miami Media Relations

Miami's Starks secondary star

MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

In the 1980s, the Miami (Fla.) football program earned the nickname "Quarterback U" by producing a string of outstanding hurlers that included Bernie Kosar, Jim Kelly and Vinny Testaverde.

Today, however, a more appropriate moniker for the Hurricanes would be "Secondary State."

Of the 54 Miami players selected in the NFL Draft in the 1990s, 10 have been defensive backs.

Left cornerback Duane Starks is looking to be the latest cover man to add his name to this esteemed list. He's confident he can continue the rich tradition.

"There isn't really pressure because of it (the history), just pressure on maintaining the things that we have to do," Starks said. "The only pressure that we have is not wanting to be the team that lets the (program) down. That's the only pressure that we have."

On Saturday, ASU receivers will be oriented with the All-American hopeful when they step onto the Orange Bowl field at 12:30 p.m. Arizona time for a game which is being nationally televised on CBS.

Starks, a fifth year senior, is the lone returning starter in the 'Canes defensive backfield. And at 5-foot-10, 175 pounds, he is also the fastest man on the squad with a 4.24 40 time.

With such a stature, Starks likens himself to a certain NFL Pro-Bowler.

"I would like people to look at me like (Merton) Hanks who plays for the San Francisco 49ers," Starks said. "I look at myself more in his shoes because of his size, kind of slim built. But he's physical, plays hard and is a great cover guy. And a great physical guy. He reminds me of myself because of his size."

Sun Devil wide out Ricky Boyer said Starks should present a good test for the ASU receiving core, which has been called one of the top five in the nation.

DePaul now Meyer-less as father follows son out door

By BRIAN BERGSTEIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Around DePaul, Ray Meyer is considered a patriarch. In the end, the 83-year-old former coach decided his real family was more important.

Upset over the removal of his son as basketball coach, Meyer broke his contact with the university he's represented for 55 years as basketball coach and chief goodwill ambassador.

"I live with my family, and my family is kind of bitter about this whole thing," Meyer said Wednesday, referring to Joey Meyer's forced resignation in April. "They would be quite disturbed if I stayed on."

Ray Meyer's departure ends the Blue Demons' last link between their deteriorated program and their glory days.

"You hate to see an affiliation, a love affair, end in this kind of situation," college basketball analyst Dick Vitale said. "He's been such a beautiful, loyal person, not only to DePaul University but to college basketball. Obviously, he's a brokenhearted man for the love he has for his family."

DePaul also loses a popular, well-connected fund-raiser, but athletic director Bill Bradshaw said he doesn't believe donations will drop.

"I don't think there should be any reason, unless someone was just holding out to make a statement," Bradshaw said. "The money raised would go to some things coach Ray dreamed of."

From the days of two-handed set shots to the slam dunk era, Meyer either coached, broadcasted or attended 1,467 consecutive Blue Demons games, a 55-year streak.

"When you think, all the family things that could come up that could cause a guy to miss a game," Bradshaw said.

In his 42 seasons as coach, DePaul won 724 games, including the 1945 NIT championship when that was the big college post-season event. The Blue Demons went to the Final Four in 1943 and 1979, and along the way, Meyer introduced stars from George Mikan to Terry Cummings to the NBA.

When he retired in 1984, he saw to it that Joey got the job, and watched as the Blue Demons appear in the postseason 10 of the next 11 years. But after an 11-18 record in 1995-96, DePaul fell to 3-23 last year. Joey Meyer was forced out, and former Florida State coach Pat Kennedy was brought in.

Ray Meyer was unhappy that Joey was sent packing, but he also was angry about the timing because by late April, most coaching vacancies had been filled.

Meyer said he plans to keep running his popular summer basketball camp in Wisconsin, but he said chances are he won't watch a DePaul game for a while.

Instead, he said, he plans on watching the Blue Demons' crosstown rival, Northwestern, where Joey Meyer will be doing commentary on Wildcats games for Chicago radio station WGN.

Joey Meyer declined to comment.

"The university was here long before I came and it will be here long after I go," Ray Meyer said. "I was only an employee. I wasn't the university."

But he sounded less certain about how leaving DePaul will affect him.

"Change is probably good for everybody. I don't know," he sighed. "I don't know about change because I don't change much."

Starks

"I have watched him (Sparks) on film at home," Boyer said. "He's a pretty good DB. We have to go out there and take it to him. We can't underestimate anyone. We can't also fear anyone. We respect him as a good DB, but we just have to go at him."

Starks is equally as intrigued by the match-up and said the Sun Devil wide outs remind him of the guys he practices against.

"They have a great group of receivers," he said. "It may be a play where they beat me on one play and then maybe I'll play right on top of them. But it's going to be a back-to-back competition."

Starks then added that the competition should be familiar.

"They remind me of a lot of receivers that I've played against at the University of Miami: Jammi German, Yatil Green, Magic Benton and the current receivers that we have now," Starks said. "I don't think there's too much of a difference. Maybe a little height difference, they have taller receivers, but that's about it. They are fast and quick guys. You just got to stay with them a little longer."

Starks grew up in the Miami area and starred for Miami Beach High School, mostly at quarterback. He then moved on to Holmes Junior College in Mississippi where he was voted the team's Most Outstanding Defensive Back.

In 1995, he transferred to Miami but was medically red-shirted after suffering a season-ending shoulder injury. Last year, Starks started all 11 games for the 'Canes. He recorded one touchdown and led the team with three interceptions.

Its that type of talent which ASU head coach Bruce Snyder said has helped make the 'Canes so dominant.

"I've never seen a guy line up in a Miami Hurricanes uniform that wasn't athletic particularly in those positions like the secondary," Snyder said. "They are very good at breaking on the ball and very good tackles, particularly their safeties."

"Normally, there's not a run after the catch because they close so fast. If you plan on needing a first down on third down, you better throw to the stakes because you may not run very far afterwards."

Bledsoe says little about Bill

BY HOWARD ULMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FOXBORO, Mass. — Bill Parcells' old team is quickly becoming Drew Bledsoe's.

On Wednesday, the Patriots quarterback strode into a room packed with reporters where his former coach often pontificated. Before a single question could be asked, he said:

"I know you all want to hear about Bill and our relationship. First of all, this whole thing has been overblown."

Bledsoe had made no secret of his distaste for Parcells' abrasive nature. But wary of stirring up controversy, he talked Wednesday about being indebted to his former coach and about how Parcells' knowledge of New England will affect Sunday's much hyped game with the New York Jets, Parcells' current team.

Then he shut it off.

"That," he said, "is about all I have to say about Bill."

Bledsoe is a different man and player than in his four years under Parcells. Just as he took charge at his news conference, he has become a more vocal — and successful — leader of one of the NFL's best teams.

Perhaps it's because he no longer fears Parcells' loud criticism or because Parcells had preferred that he be the team's only voice.

Maybe it's because Bledsoe has a new coach, Pete Carroll, who doesn't mind heaping praise on a player with eight touchdown passes and no interceptions in two games.

"I believe in this guy a great deal," Carroll said Wednesday. "He's a fierce competitor. I think he's a great student of the game. He has displayed everything you can display in terms of preparing. He's meeting all the expectations I can come up with right now."

Bledsoe clearly prefers the laid-back Carroll to the domineering Parcells.

"We just seem to relate to each other on a person-to-person level in a very good way," Bledsoe said. "We just share a lot of the same ideas about what kind of things are important in football and in life."

Carroll isn't sure why they get along so well.

"I can't tell you why, other than I'm coaching the way I know how to coach and he's playing the way he knows how to play," Carroll said.

During a 20-minute conference call Wednesday, Parcells spoke only once about Bledsoe: "I think he's played very well, looked very comfortable, was throwing the ball very well."

Normally calm, Bledsoe has become a more assured leader in the huddle.

"I'm not by nature a real vocal guy," he said, "but now that I'm in my fifth year, I can say things and I'm taken seriously because I've been around."

He also spreads the credit to his offensive line, which has given up just one sack, and his receivers. He seems far more relaxed, on and off the field, than he was with Parcells.

Sele tames Yanks, 5-2

BY HOWARD ULMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Ever since Aaron Sele began his major-league career with six straight wins in 1993, he's teased the Boston Red Sox with his potential to be a dominant pitcher.

He may be doing it again.

Sele (13-12) broke a three-game losing streak with his second consecutive strong start, and the Red Sox beat the slumping New York Yankees 5-2 Wednesday night.

"When he's confident on the mound, he's as good as there is," said New York's Mike Stanley, Sele's teammate until he was traded Aug. 13.

Sele, who gave up just one hit in a 1-0 loss to Montreal a week earlier, allowed four hits in 6 2-3 innings against the Yankees, who lost for the eighth time in 11 games.

"I'm not going out there saying I need to be more aggressive," he said. "Everybody likes to throw well at the end of the season because you've got five months left before the next start and that's enough inspiration."

New York's David Wells (14-10) is struggling as the season winds down. He has five consecutive losses and an ERA of 7.71 in that span. In September 1996 and 1997, he is 1-4 with a 6.94 ERA.

"He got the ball down and that's the thing that's been plaguing him in the last couple of starts," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "That's a step in the right direction."

New York still leads Anaheim by seven games in the wild-card race but dropped 8 1/2 games behind first-place Baltimore in the AL East.

"We're still trying to catch Baltimore," Wade Boggs said. "Until we're mathematically eliminated, we won't start focusing on the wild-card race."

Sele was 2-4 with an 8.36 ERA in seven starts before he faced the Expos, who got just one hit in his seven innings. But that was a homer by Mike Lansing. On Wednesday night, another homer gave Sele an early deficit.

Boggs' fourth homer of the year put the Yankees ahead 1-0 in the first. It was his 24th homer in five seasons since leaving Boston and first against the Red Sox.

But Sele allowed only three more hits, none after Tino Martinez's one-out single in the fourth.

"His delivery is pretty sound," Boston manager Jimmy Williams said. "The big thing is he's getting the first pitch over for strikes a lot and he's getting his breaking ball over."

John Wallace avoids alleged assault charge

BY BEN DOBBIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREECE, N.Y. — Provided he stays out of trouble for a year, New York Knicks forward John Wallace won't be prosecuted for allegedly punching and choking the mother of his two sons, a judge ruled Wednesday.

"You'll never see him again," defense attorney David Murante said during a brief court hearing as the former Syracuse University basketball star stood silently beside him.

Wallace's former girlfriend, Michelle Bolger, told police he threw her into a wall, punched her in the face and choked her during a quarrel at her home in this Rochester suburb on May 23.

Wallace, 23, turned himself in the next day and could have been charged with harassment, a violation that carries a maximum penalty of 15 days in jail. However, Bolger later asked that her complaint be withdrawn.

Judge Charles Rogers agreed to dismiss the complaint in one year, provided the prosecutor's office does not seek to reopen the case.

"I believe in my heart that's unlikely," Murante told reporters after Wallace left the courtroom without commenting. "These are two good individuals who are doing the best they can to ... take care of their children."

Wallace and Bolger dated in high school, continued seeing each other during his college career and have two sons, ages 4 and 1. The quarrel apparently erupted when Wallace came by the night after his son's fourth birthday, intending to take him out.

Police said Bolger's injuries were not serious enough to constitute a charge of assault.

Wallace played in 68 games for the Knicks last season, averaging 4.8 points and 2.3 rebounds in 11.6 minutes as a rookie. He is likely to be traded to the Toronto Raptors this month. The proposed deal, challenged by the NBA, would bring Portland Trail Blazers center Chris Dudley to the Knicks.

St. Louis slugger Mark McGwire slams his 50th home run of the season versus the San Francisco Giants. McGwire became only the second person in baseball history to hit 50 homers back-to-back.

McGwire hits 50th

By ROB GLOSTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Placing his name next to Babe Ruth's in the record books left Mark McGwire in awe — of himself.

McGwire joined Ruth as the only players in major league history with consecutive 50-homer seasons by hitting a 446-foot shot Wednesday in his St. Louis Cardinals' 7-6, 10-inning loss to the San Francisco Giants.

"Any time you can have your name associated with Babe Ruth, it's a pretty awesome thing to think about," McGwire said. "I'm blown away. I think I'm sort of in awe of myself. I've surpassed anything I ever expected to do in the game of baseball."

McGwire led off the third inning with a drive down the left-field line off Shawn Estes. It was McGwire's 16th homer in 34 games since joining the Cardinals in a July 31 trade from the Oakland Athletics.

McGwire had spent his entire career in Oakland before the trade to St. Louis, where he rejoined longtime Athletics manager and current Cardinals manager Tony La Russa.

The San Francisco crowd gave McGwire, who got the ball back from a fan in exchange for two autographed bats, a standing ovation after the homer.

"It was nice to do it here. I was born and raised a major league baseball player across the Bay in Oakland," McGwire said. "To hit the 50th here with him (La Russa) meant something special to me."

McGwire, who hit a major league-leading 52 homers for Oakland last season, became the first player with back-to-back 50-homer seasons since Ruth did it in 1927 and 1928. Ruth also accomplished the feat in 1920 and 1921.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST
by Frances Drake
Thursday, September 9, 1997

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Slow down and do the job right. Both an old and a new friend are important to you. Doors seem to open for you and goodwill breeds benefits.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) If you are given enough time by yourself, there's no telling what you'll accomplish. You're the one who's pulling the strings from behind the scenes. Keep this to yourself.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Romance is favored over friendship. Put aside career concerns and let yourself have a good time. Happiness comes through children, love and leisure events.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Home-based activities are best. Catch up on sleep and relaxation. Some shoppers find a wonderful bargain, but don't dwell on a career problem.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) You could complain about not having enough time to do your work and then when left to your own devices, you could dawdle the time away. Listen to a friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) First, you argue about how to have fun. Then, you could overstay your welcome while out visiting. Reasoning in social matters is not at its best.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Background maneuvers are favorable for your career. It's a time for preparation and research, rather than action. You need some time for yourself after dark.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Manners and little niceties seem to count in business. Social life finds you quite pop-
