Student attacked in apartment; suspect still at large

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

An 18-year-old ASU student was violently raped in her Tempe apartment Monday afternoon after a stranger walked through her unlocked front door, said a Tempe Police spokesman.

The rape occurred around 3:30 p.m. at the Quadrangles Apartments, 1255 E. University Drive, said Officer Les Strickland.

Police refused to release details of the crime, but Strickland said the victim was "cut up pretty bad with some type of sharp object."

He said that none of her injuries are life threatening and she is expected to make a full physical recovery.

Police are looking for an African-American man in his 20s, 6 feet 3 inches tall to 6 feet 5 inches tall with a large build and matted hair. He was reportedly wearing a blue baseball hat, dark T-shirt, dark shorts, a green vest and tennis shoes.

Strickland added that it is too early to determine if Monday's incident is connected to a series of August sexual assaults where victims did not know their attackers.

This is the first reported rape of an ASU student since the semester officially began Aug. 25.

Radawna Michelle, crime prevention coordinator for the ASU police, said many people often assume that criminals do not come out during the day.

"As soon as you enter your home, whether it's night or day, you should lock your door," she said. "Locks are good but you must use them."

To help prevent becoming a victim, Michelle suggested people walk with confidence and remain alert.

"You do not want to present yourself as a victim," she said. "They give the impression that they can be subdued."

Anyone with information regarding this crime is asked to call the Tempe Police Department at 966-6211.

Faculty members say state ignored environmental report

BY TARA TEICHGRAEBER
STATE PRESS

A report commissioned by former governor Fife Symington to identify important state environmental issues has sat untouched for two years, said ASU faculty who helped compile the study.

"It basically ended up sitting on the shelf," said Duncan Patten, an ASU botany professor emeritus who was chairman of the project's ecosystems committee.

The Arizona Comparative Environmental Risk Project report, commissioned in 1993 and completed in 1995, aimed to identify major environmental threats in Arizona. All three state universities participated in compiling the report, as well as local and state government leaders and Valley grassroots organizations.

"It's a very useful reference document, but it wasn't a successful project because nothing was done with it," said Joseph Feller, an ASU law professor who was a member of the project's steering committee.

Feller said he believed certain state industries were unhappy with the report because it linked them to the cause of some environmental problems.

Feller referred specifically to the Arizona Cattle Grower's Association, whom he believes may have pressured the governor to shelve the report, he said.

Unmanaged cattle grazing on public lands was identified in the report as a major threat to the destruction of riparian ecosystems. Cattle grazing reportedly adds to erosion of stream banks and the elimination of vegetation growth if not properly managed.

Doc Lane, director of growers for the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association, denied Feller's comment that the organization had any involvement in the report's suppression.

As a lobbying group, the Association works as a liaison between the state government and cattle growers, as well as a liaison between different growers associations, Lane said.

Cattle grazing was one of the most pressing environmental concerns identified by ACERP, Feller said.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency funded the report and the state Department of Environmental Quality oversaw funding allocation.

ACERP researchers said they hope the report will spark assertive environmental action now that Gov. Jane Hull has taken office.

"When (Hull) was Speaker of the House, her agenda wasn't really anti-environment or pro-environment," Patten said.

Staff at the governor's office refused to comment.

Maria Baier, Symington's environmental policy advisor, said that because the new executive administration took charge two weeks ago following Symington's conviction, environmental issues and prospects for the report had not yet been discussed.

Feller said he doesn't hold much hope that the current Legislature will act on the report.

"From everything I've seen we have a very anti-environment Legislature right now," Feller said. "If you look back at what's happened, environmental protection has been rolled back, not rolled forward."

Feller referred to two recent legislative

No soliciting, please: ASU e-mail choking on junk mail

BY GENOA SIBOLD-COHN
STATE PRESS

Electronic mass mailings sent from outside the University through campus servers are clogging up electronic mail delivery for ASU users.

Bruce Millard, director of systems integration and management within Information Technology, said the mailings are causing as much as 12-minute delays in electronic mail delivery.

"The Internet is still becoming an adult," he said. "It is being used by people who legally abuse the system."

The mass mailings were detected by Information

Technology last month.

Although it is not illegal, Millard said the servers are being used by people to make business advertisements without being charged by their own Internet carrier. By dialing University servers from their home or business computers, people off campus have free access to Internet service.

Servers are computerized data storage devices that can be accessed by many people simultaneously through different terminals and locations.

"We are creating mechanisms to limit the availability of our servers off campus," Millard said.

Mark Royal, manager of electronic messaging, said although steps have been taken, there is more work to be done to eradicate the problem.

"We will be looking at the headers of all e-mail going through the 'non-ASU' channel and investigating whether they are sending mail to non-ASU sites, and if so, why," Royal said.

There is not a way to keep the mailings from University servers unless the servers were made unavailable to the entire campus, Millard said.

"In order for us to block it, we would have had to block everyone," he said. "We want students to do their studies and to communicate with their parents at home."

TODAY

Campus clubs and organizations may submit written entries to the State Press in the basement of the Matthews Center. Requests will not be taken over the phone or via fax.

Deadline for requests is noon the day before publication and entries will not be accepted more than three working days before publication. Only one entry per organization per day is permitted.

Entries must contain the full name of the club or organization, a description of the event, date, time and the full address of the location. All requests are subject to editing for content, space and clarity. Incomplete or illegible entries will be discarded.

The Today Section is a daily calendar of events printed as a service to the ASU community. Requests are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis and are printed as space permits.

acts — an act making it more difficult to enforce hazardous waste clean-up and another piece of legislation that in effect, exempts cattle ranchers from the livestock's effect on water quality, he said.

Diane Peart at ASU's Center for Environmental Studies currently manages the report by maintaining its display on the Internet.

"It was clear that there was not interest from the politicians (in taking a pro-environment stand)," Peart said. "It's tragic — the lack of concern is tragic."

"I put it on the Web knowing it wouldn't get much attention, but at least it's available."

The environment is the primary reason survey respondents say they live in Arizona, Peart said, referring to a portion of the ACERP report.

"Money coming into the state is because of attractions that are natural," Peart said. She added that unless more action is taken to preserve and maintain the state's natural beauty, economic resources could begin to evaporate.

Feller agreed.

"These are environmental issues that very much need to be addressed," he said.

24-hour delay won in land mine ban talks

BY JIM HEINTZ
ASSOCIATED PRESS

OSLO, Norway — The United States won a 24-hour delay Tuesday in talks on drafting a treaty to ban land mines, part of its last-minute effort to negotiate exemptions to the proposed accord.

The current version would institute an immediate and total ban on anti-personnel mines. But the Clinton administration has been seeking several changes, including a delay in the ban's start and a provision to allow countries to withdraw from the treaty if attacked.

The U.S. delegation had been expected to present a compromise proposal when representatives of more than 100 nations resumed their meeting Tuesday after a weekend break.

But Eric Newsom, head of the U.S. delegation to the talks, requested the one-day postponement, saying the United States needed more time to talk to other governments about changes that "would enable the United States to endorse this treaty."

No one objected to the request and the meeting closed. Newsom declined to comment to reporters after the session.

The move was an unusual delay in a process that has moved with remarkable speed. The talks leading to the treaty negotiations began 11 months ago in Canada and involved only a few small and midsize countries.

Since then, scores of countries have joined. The United States signed on reluctantly last month and generally has been seen as the odd man out — but an influential one.

The United States initially wanted the Korean Peninsula to be excluded from a ban, because it regards mines as a critical in keeping Stalinist North Korea from invading its enemy, capitalist South Korea.

But now, it is seeking a nine-year delay in enacting a total ban — presumably believing that in such time the international community could pressure North Korea to be more conciliatory.

The United States also wants countries to be able to withdraw from the treaty if they come under attack and wants an exemption for anti-personnel mines that are laid to protect anti-tank mines.

All those proposals have outraged non-governmental groups, who insist the ban must be total and immediate to be worth anything.

"The fundamental problem is that Bill Clinton cannot act as a statesman or a commander-in-chief," Jody Williams, of the International Campaign to Ban Land Mines, said after the delay. "He should be ashamed."

It was unclear how much support the United States was getting for its compromise among other delegations.

"We did, reluctantly, agree to another 24 hours," said Norwegian Deputy Foreign Minister Jan Egeland, head of the country's delegation to the talks. But, he added, "We will argue against any changes that weaken the treaty."

Review finds no strong evidence of disease from breast implants

BY PAUL RECER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Silicone breast implants do not cause breast cancer and there is only "borderline" evidence linking the devices to any other disease, according to a federal review of scores of medical studies.

The review even pointed to the possibility that implants could help protect against breast cancer, but researchers said more studies were needed to draw that conclusion.

A report to be published Wednesday in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute gives silicone breast implants a "clean bill of health" so far as cancer and other disease is concerned. Researchers did find that the devices frequently break and escaped silicone spreads throughout the body.

S. Lori Brown of the Food and Drug Administration, a co-author of the review, said there is some slight statistical suggestion linking some types of connective tissue disease to leaking breast implants, but she called it "a borderline result" that should be interpreted "very cautiously."

"These diseases are so rare that it may never be possible to clearly link them to silicone breast implants," said Brown.

The conclusion of the research review contrasts starkly with the statements in lawsuits by thousands of women who link silicone breast implants to a wide variety of diseases. About 100,000 women have settled lawsuits with manufacturers of the implants and about a half-million others have reserved the right to sue. Thousands of suits are pending.

Some manufacturers are offering fixed settlements that range from $5,000 to $100,000 for women whose implants have ruptured. Manufacturers have won 16 of 21 lawsuits that have gone to trial and jury awards have ranged from $30,000 up. A Houston woman was awarded $25 million, but she settled later for an undisclosed amount.

Silicone implants were first introduced in 1962 as a means of augmenting breast size or for reconstruction after a cancerous breast was removed. Between 800,000 and 1 million women received the implants, many for cosmetic purposes. After reports began surfacing about implant breakage and possible health effects, the FDA in 1992 restricted their use.

Since then, said Brown, about 14,000 women have received implants, nearly all for reconstruction after cancer surgery.

Brown and Louise A. Brinton of the National Cancer Institute evaluated more than 100 studies on the medical effects of silicone breast implants and gave the devices "a clean bill of health," said Brown.

"We found that, if anything, implants may actually decrease the risk of breast cancer," said Brown. "The studies are quite consistent in finding a decrease. It is not clear what is causing that decrease, if it is real."

Some studies, she said, found up to a 50 percent decrease in breast cancer risk, but these conclusions need to be verified by larger studies.

Searchers find debris from U.S. cargo plane off Namibia's coast

BY TOM COHEN

WINDHOEK, Namibia — Searchers found debris Tuesday from a U.S. cargo plane in the same cold, shark-infested waters where they found remnants of a German aircraft, confirming the two military planes crashed off Namibia's Skeleton Coast.

The prospects of finding survivors from Saturday's crash were "getting slimmer," said Lt. Col. Eddie Brown of South Africa, who is overseeing the search effort.

He said nothing has been heard since faint distress signals were detected Sunday and early Monday. The water, at 59 degrees, "is cold, and I believe there are also sharks in the area," he added.

The two planes were carrying 33 people when they vanished Saturday while traveling in opposite directions. The German Tupolev 154 was heading from Germany to South Africa, while the American C-141 was flying from Namibia, a coastal country northwest of South Africa, to Ascension Island, off the coast in the south Atlantic.

Only one body — that of an unidentified woman — has been found and taken to an unspecified hospital for examination. Three women were among the 24 people aboard the German plane; all nine aboard the American plane were men.

Low clouds and fog hampered visibility Tuesday for the 230 searchers scouring the ocean aboard 10 planes from Germany, the United States, France, South Africa and Namibia.

Importance of NEA lost on Congress

Once again, personal expression is under attack. In what has become an annual occurrence, the National Endowment for the Arts has come under fire, and once again, religious fanatic and moral gatekeeper Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is lighting the match. It seems Helms is offended by some of the art produced with the help of NEA grants — art he feels is “contemptuous of traditional moral standards,” and is “dragged up from the sewer.”

Thou shalt not judge, senator. Helms, while berating the NEA for irresponsible grant-giving and blasphemous subject matter, has conveniently left out all the good things the NEA accomplishes.

The NEA, founded by President Lyndon Johnson in 1965, provides grants for artistic endeavors at the community, state and federal levels. According to the NEA Web site, the number of nonprofit theaters across the country has grown seven-fold since the NEA's inception, and the number of dance companies has expanded ten-fold. Orchestras and opera companies have also at least doubled in numbers.

If this doesn't hit home with some of you, think of it this way — many colleges and universities receive funding from the NEA. What would happen if there was no more funding? It's quite possible the Nelson Fine Arts Center, looming darkly on campus as it is, would seem even more sinister without the abundant music, art, theater and dance present there now.

And what about the jobs provided by the arts industry? According to J. Carter Brown, chairman of the U.S. Fine Arts Commission, there are more than a million people employed in the industry today. How much of the NEA's $100 million budget is Congress willing to transfer into unemployment funding?

The NEA's most important accomplishment, however, is its funding for arts education in public schools. Many inner-city schools, where funding is barely available for books, let alone arts programs, have benefited from NEA funding by allowing children to experience the joy of the arts.

Studies have shown that children who have exposure to the arts perform better in other subjects in school. Is that blasphemy, senator?

Though Helms is one of the more conservative Republicans in the Senate, history has shown that the Senate has given more support to the NEA than the House of Representatives has. In fact, in July, the House voted 217-216 to kill all funding for the NEA.

There are other amendments waiting to be considered, such as one from Sens. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., and Tim Hutchinson, R-Ark. Their proposal would also kill the NEA federally, but would transfer the $100 million budget to states as block grants intended for the arts.

But we all know what usually happens to block grants — “intended” for one thing, applied to another.

It seems clear that doing away with the NEA will do nothing more than stifle the artistic expressions of millions of Americans, put thousands of people out of work and make our country a more stagnant, boring place.

No wonder Helms is so determined to see it go — people might actually get bored enough to listen to him for a change.

Cyclists who must ride at ASU should exercise responsibility

You're late for class. You mount your shiny new two-wheeler and prepare to break the cross-campus land-speed record. Unaware of danger, you are at one with your bicycle, dodging and weaving, thinking of nothing; to botany class you go.

Rounding the last corner toward Life Sciences, an impertinent pedestrian wanders into your path. With lightning-quick reflexes you adjust your position to avoid the obstacle. Unfortunately, the student recognizes you as a threat and begins to shift undecidedly to the left and then to the right, suddenly freezing somewhere in the middle like a deer caught in headlights.

I won't go into the gory details; many of you have weak stomachs, as do I. Be assured though, it's not a pretty sight. Bicycle accidents are very common, but for some reason, common sense regarding their use is not. Bicycle riding on campus is a privilege too often abused. The University has thus been forced to implement sweeping rules and regulations regarding transportation on campus. Skateboards and Rollerblades are prohibited from campus use, mainly because they are viewed more as fads and not as necessary, reliable forms of transportation. This is unfortunate, because these vehicles cause far fewer and less serious accidents than bicycles. Bicycles are only to be ridden in certain areas and at specific times of the day, and then only in designated bicycle lanes. If the amount of bicycle accidents continues to rise, we may see even more regulations appear as early as next semester.

Rules, rules, rules. Why do we have to have all these rules? We wouldn't if the student body would exhibit the low level of common sense necessary to sufficiently diminish the astronomical number of accidents occurring each year. Unfortunately, there's no such course as Common Sense 101, but a few simple choices could easily replace all the regulations.

Ride slowly in any populated areas on campus. If the campus is crowded, get off and walk your vehicle. If no one is around, maintain a reasonable speed — students are crafty and will pop out where you least expect it.

All in all, just use common sense when you're riding or skating. Remember that pedestrians aren't just obstacles — they're people too.

I have a suggestion that I hope someone in the University hierarchy will take seriously: a pact with the student body. As part of our covenant with the University, we will obey the rules of common sense and travel in a safe manner in and around the campus. In turn, they will repeal the sweeping rules they have implemented. By using common sense, we as intelligent, responsible adults will hopefully be able to make our own choices on where, when and what we want to ride.

Constitution framers put people in control, allowed free debate

Two hundred ten years ago, on September 17, 1787, the final draft of the Constitution of the United States was completed. Fifty-five members of the convention had started deliberations four months previously. On September 17, 1787, 42 delegates were present, but only 39 signed the document. It would take another nine months before the colonies ratified it into law.

FRANK SACKTON

On that fateful day when the convention adjourned, the mood among the delegates was not one of wild acclaim or rejoicing. On the contrary, the delegates felt a restrained joy and some apprehension. After all, only 39 of the original 55 delegates had signed the results of their work. The 39 were immediately branded as traitors by the mother country, Britain. Benjamin Franklin, the venerable delegate from Pennsylvania, voiced the concern in a comment he made to another signer, John Hancock, "We must all hang together, or we shall all hang separately."

After the signing, the delegates made their farewell remarks and again, it was Franklin who made the most pertinent statement: "When you assemble a number of men to have advantage of their joint wisdom, you inevitably assemble with those men all their prejudices, the errors of opinion, their local interests, and their selfish views. From such an assembly, can a perfect production be expected?"

As it turned out, Ben Franklin's concern that a "perfect production" might not be achieved was not well founded. True, the men who had gathered four months previously entertained different local interests and personal frames of reference, but it was because of this diversity rather than in spite of it that the Constitution achieved its greatness. The delegates had accomplished much more than they realized at that time. They had developed a document that established the principle of diversity.

The fact is, a perfect or faultless Constitution was never envisioned. The primary objective of the delegates was to lay a foundation of a government that was sufficiently flexible to change itself as the need arose. Americans, creative then in conceiving change, have been creative since to implement change consistent with environmental and societal needs.

Witness the fact that there were no women, blacks, Indians or minorities at the Constitutional convention. But the new Constitution provided for freedom of debate, and for over 200 years we have debated the merits of the document that is a contract between government and its people, with its greatest power residing in the people. The people are empowered to debate, rewrite or amend its provisions or abolish them altogether.

Although the framers recognized that citizens should have the right to petition to alter the Constitution, it is not easy to do so. More than 7,000 amendments have been proposed; 33 have been passed by Congress, but only 26 have been ratified by the states.

More important are the first ten amendments, called the Bill of Rights. They protect individual liberties such as freedom of religion, speech and the press. They grant citizens the right to peacefully assemble and petition the government.

They also prohibit unreasonable search and seizure of people and property. Outlining rights of citizens in criminal cases, they guarantee the right to confront accusers and mandate the right to a fair trial by jury.

At the time America declared its independence, it was nothing more than what we would now call an undeveloped country. Unlike other world nations of the time, America had no capital, was heavily in debt, had few roads and had few factories or sizable assets of importance.

The American people would turn out to be the country's most important asset. They were able to form a meticulously limited government. They were able to write a Constitution and Bill of Rights unlike any the world has ever seen.

The U.S. Constitution was the first balanced structure of power between the government and the people in which liberty, equality and justice were rights for all citizens. When it was finished, it was called Novus Ordo Seclorum, the "New Order of the Ages" — a phrase engraved on our dollar bills.

Soldiers, statesmen and civilians who participated in the convention counted on the political wisdom and involvement of average citizens to make things work. Hence, the Constitution guarantees that we are all somebody in the political process, because the founding fathers knew that in a free society each individual is an essential ingredient, indispensable to the whole.

The key to the success of the Constitution in its ability to endure for over 200 years must surely be the diversity of thought that went into it in the first place, along with the freedom and power of debate which it provides. As long as tolerance of diversity and freedom exist, the continued success of the republic is assured.

Housing Code votes rigged

This is a response to your Sept. 9 editorial in support of Tempe's Rental Housing Code:

Tempe's Rental Housing Code was passed by the Tempe City Council on Feb. 27. Opponents of the Code — primarily renters — obtained more than 6,600 signatures to hold the ordinance in abeyance until a referendum election could be held. The Arizona Multihousing Association (AMA) provided funding for the referendum effort.

Realizing that approximately half the population of Tempe are renters, and that many of them (ASU students) are smart enough to read the proposed Code, city staff decided that they needed to rig the election in favor of the Code. They did this by accepting fraudulently submitted arguments for the election publicity pamphlet, and by using biased language in the description of the ballot measure in violation of state law.

On July 11, I collected evidence of the election fraud at the Tempe City Clerk's office. The AMA declined to take legal action. As a result, on July 14, I wrote and delivered a letter to Tempe City Clerk Helen Fowler, threatening to sue her if she refused to obey state election laws. As a result of this letter, Tempe City Attorney David Merkel decided to file suit for a Declaratory Judgment on the matter in Superior Court, naming myself and the AMA's political action committee as defendants.

On July 30, Superior Court Judge Robert Myers ruled that Tempe was in violation of state election laws, and he granted injunctive relief. Judge Myers' decision threw the Tempe City Council into a panic. The Council held an emergency meeting on the same day to set a public hearing for Aug. 7 to cancel the election.

At the public hearing on Aug. 7, all of the supporters of the Rental Housing Code argued in favor of canceling the election that opponents of the Code were responsible for in the first place.

Since the cancellation of the election and the ordinance, the Tempe City Council has begun to work to resurrect the Rental Housing Code that Tempe voters were certain to vote down. By doing so, the Council has successfully circumvented both the election process and a Superior Court judge's ruling. The last thing Tempe City Council members want is to allow ASU students the opportunity to vote on a rental code that would have the effect of denying many students the chance at an education, and that would set standards for rental housing that Council members wouldn't even consider implementing for their own homes.

Frat house leases binding; editorial 'inaccurate'

I am disturbed by today's State Press editorial "ASU, don't get legal on frat fire codes." The SP editors have not only insulted, but in my opinion, also slandered the fraternities and the University in the same breath.

Regarding the former, the editors have suggested that the fraternities might commit the felony of arson to get sprinklers funded by the insurance on the structure. Regarding the latter, the editors have suggested that the administration is using the sprinkler issue to pressure the fraternities as part of some insidious plot to rid the campus of these community service organizations. I don't believe either of these misrepresentations is accurate.

For the record, ASU and the fraternities support the installation of sprinklers for the simple reason that sprinklers save lives.

To understand the current dispute, one must get clear facts. As Chair of the Public Safety Advisory Committee, I have presided over discussions of sprinklers in the fraternities. Everyone agrees that sprinklers should be installed. Not only is it a good idea, for 10 years it has been the law. What is not clear is who should pay. In the community, most people agree that the owner of a structure should pay. With the current situation, it seems the dispute depends upon who owns the houses: the fraternities or ASU.

So I may explain, permit me an analogy. Consider that I do not yet own my house "free and clear" because I have not yet paid off my mortgage. Yet, I own my house. The mortgage company only owns the loan. I pay the property taxes and insurance premiums. I pay for improvements. I am king of my castle because I own the castle.

As I understand it, the fraternities own their houses in the same way I own mine. The fraternities will own their houses "free and clear" in 2002. The federal government owns the loans the fraternities are paying on. ASU is the guarantor/collector of the loans. Also, the fraternities lease the land under the houses and in 2002, they will have the option to buy the land or continue to rent.

It seems clear to me that the fraternities own the structures because they are paying off the government loans for those structures. Therefore, it is not appropriate that taxpayer money be used to improve these private properties. A court case, at great expense to everyone, is pending. The question of who should pay is now in the hands of a judge.

It is ironic that the fraternities have long enjoyed the special benefits of property ownership, but now seek to avoid the commensurate responsibilities when it is not convenient for them. Specifically, because the fraternities have owned their houses, they have been free run of them as they see fit, and at times, to the consternation of the community. Indeed, is it not this autonomy that attracts many to fraternity life? Dinner has been served and the check is on the table.

Mother died as she lived

In response to Zeenat Potia's article "Mother Teresa deserved better tribute from media," I agree, but ask, "Would she want it?" I believe that if Mother Teresa were able to choose the day of her death, she would have died exactly when she did. As Zeenat stated, "Mother Teresa shunned the attention of the press." And on that Friday she died, the world's attention was focused elsewhere on the funeral of Princess Diana. There won't be a media spectacle over a funeral like Princess Di's for a very long time. I'm sure Mother Teresa knew the media would have little time for her death in the wake of Di's — and I'm sure that's just as she would have wanted it to be.

'Canes had reason to worry

"This team is just a nasty football team," Fortney said. "These guys will cheap shot you after the whistle and stuff like that. The best thing to do is just butt heads and play tough football."

I read this on the online version of the Miami Hurricane university press. It was the named player referring to the upcoming ASU game. I don't know about the story about ASU being called a high school football team, but reading this makes that statement seem pretty tame. Go Devils!

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- License plate AZ 0505AS was impounded for destruction at the ASU police department.
- A man not associated with ASU reported that he lost one key belonging to the University.
- A man not associated with ASU was arrested, cited and released for second degree criminal trespass at Stabler's Market in the Tempe Center.
- A woman associated with ASU reported that someone unlawfully entered her vehicle and removed some stuff.
- A man not associated with ASU reported that he ran into an illegally parked car with a Flash Bus.
- A student reported that someone removed her bicycle from the Student Recreation Complex where it was locked up.
- A student reported that someone vandalized his vehicle while it was parked in Structure 3.
- A student reported that someone broke into his vehicle while it was parked in Structure 3 and removed the face plate to his Pioneer stereo.
- A student reported that someone removed his purple Trek 830 mountain bike from the Farmer Education Building.
- A student reported that someone broke into her room at Palo Verde Main and removed various items of clothing.

- A man not associated with ASU was arrested on an outstanding warrant from the ASU Police Department. He posted bond and was released.
- Four people were arrested, cited and released for being minors in possession of alcohol at 350 E. University Drive.

Tempe Police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A 22-year-old man was arrested and charged with delaying police and obstruction after he refused to leave a party that police had been called to a second time. The man reportedly told police that he did not have to leave the party because he was 21 years old and could drink beer. Officers asked him several times to leave and he just repeated that he was old enough to stay and drink beer. He ultimately left when officers transported him to the Tempe City Jail.
- A 23-year-old woman was arrested at Gibson's, 410 S. Mill Ave. after she was allegedly acting disorderly. When employees told her to get out of the bar, she refused and began swatting and yelling at them. She ended up hitting two of the people. After she was arrested and transported to Tempe City Jail, she yelled and kicked some more. This time, however, she kicked one of the officers in the knee. She was booked, held to see a judge and released the next morning. Some people just can't handle the power of the Boogie Nights.

Seminars to familiarize educators with bilingual education

By GINGER SCOTT
STATE PRESS

A new ASU program is trying to bring educators up to speed when it comes to bilingual education.

The Center for Bilingual Education is sponsoring a series of Saturday institutes throughout the year for educators and anyone else interested. The day-long institutes train people on anything from how to organize a bilingual program to parent tutoring with a bilingual child.

"I am concerned with the children that come to school knowing another language," said Phyllis Garcia, director for the Center for Bilingual Education and one of the instructors. "We can't wait to start teaching children when they learn English. We need to begin teaching them in their native language."

Marilyn Sanchez, Creighton School District education service director, attended a course offered this spring. Sanchez said her school was awarded a grant it wouldn't have received without the knowledge she and coworkers learned from the institute training.

The center, located in the Farmer Education Building, brings in top bilingual-education specialists from around the nation to instruct the institutes. The speakers are paid through a participation fee that is normally about $30 per session.

"They (the institute trainers) brought people first-hand knowledge of the research on dual-language programs," Sanchez said. "Learning what programs are effective gave us a good base on how to run ours."

Garcia said the institutes are open to the public and usually draw anywhere from 250 to 450 people.

"Our goal is to reach more school districts and help provide training," Garcia said. "We don't want to only train teachers, but administrators and school board members as well."

The next institute, Leadership for Equity, Anti-racism, Diversity and Educational Reform, will be Oct. 25.

In addition to the institutes, the center is trying to bring back two courses offered last spring, aimed at giving educators more hands-on experience with bilingual education. Garcia said if the demand for the classes is high enough, they will be offered again.

"We offer so many classes on theory," Garcia said. "We wanted to show people those theories in work."

The courses were sponsored by participating school districts. Garcia said the districts partnered with ASU to offer more training on bilingual education.

The Two-Way Bilingual Education Program is one of the courses the center hopes to bring back for next semester. This class offers an intensive research study of the pros and cons of the various bilingual or English-as-a-Second-Language (ESL) programs now available.

Garcia said the class was full, with 56 participants the first time it was offered.

Best Practices, the other course the center hopes to continue, is a mentoring program for teachers already practicing bilingual education. Teachers are observed in their classroom by bilingual-education specialists, who critique their teaching style and offer tips for improvement. This course was also full in its first semester, with 40 students spread over three sections.

"This course was taught by Connie Beyer — one of the best trainers in the nation for bilingual education," Garcia said. "We hope to bring her back for the spring."

Two Phoenix officers recovering after being shot in ambush

PHOENIX (AP) — Two police officers who were ambushed and shot underwent surgery and were expected to recover, hospital officials said Tuesday.

Officer Jerry Kilgore, 43, underwent surgery Tuesday morning for a bullet wound behind his left ear, but he was expected to fully recover, said Jennifer Poll, a spokeswoman for Good Samaritan Hospital.

Officer Jim Kliewer, 42, was expected to leave the intensive care unit by the end of the day Tuesday. He underwent surgery Monday night for a gunshot wound to the back of his left shoulder.

Both men were in fair condition.

The two plainclothes officers were trying to arrest

19-year-old Miguel "Pepe" Savala after he allegedly broke into his girlfriend's room and was holding her hostage, said police spokesman Sgt. Mike Torres.

When the officers entered the room looking for the suspect, he fired several shots and fled, Torres said.

Police were still looking for the suspect Tuesday.

Stealth jets will still participate in shows, Air Force says

BY ROBERT BURNS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Air Force officials said Tuesday they won't bar stealth planes from air shows, arguing that the public relations benefit outweighs the possible costs of crashes like that of an F-117A fighter last weekend.

At his Senate confirmation hearing to be the next Air Force chief of staff, Gen. Michael Ryan said the military needs to show Americans what they are paying for.

"It ought to be visible to them. They ought to see that we have great capabilities within our armed forces," Ryan told the Senate Armed Services Committee.

He also said the participation of the more advanced aircraft, like the radar-evading F-117A that was a hero of the Persian Gulf War, also helps Air Force recruiting. This visibility also serves to deter would-be aggressors, he said.

The U.S. military has suffered four separate air crashes since Saturday, but the Pentagon said Tuesday the overall flight safety record is good and is generally improving.

So far this budget year, which ends Sept. 30, the Air Force has had 28 major aircraft accidents, compared with 27 in the year-earlier period and 32 the year before that.

In separate remarks, Air Force Secretary Sheila Widnall told reporters she saw no reason to reconsider using stealth planes in public flying demonstrations.

"I wouldn't call the air shows strictly entertainment," she said. "I think they're informative and they do serve a function of reaching out to the people."

She said the stealth fighter that crashed Sunday was flying a normal, safe maneuver.

"This was not a hot-dogging air show," she said.

The F-117A flying at the Chesapeake Air Show near a Baltimore suburb crashed into a residential area after a piece of the plane broke off. Two houses were set on fire and six people were injured. The pilot ejected safely.

Ryan said at his confirmation hearing that while the accident investigation is at an early stage, it appears the cause was a "catastrophic failure of the outboard section of the wing." He was referring to an apparent failure of the plane's elevon, a movable surface that deflects the flow of air at the back of the wing, helping control the aircraft. The elevon apparently broke off.

Ryan said the Air Force had seen problems with the elevons in early testing of the F-117A and corrections were made to "bulk up" the elevons.

He described the F-117A as "built like a brick."

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., who wants Congress to pass legislation prohibiting the use of F-117A stealth fighters and B-2 stealth bombers at air shows, told Ryan that stealth planes are too expensive to put at risk for such purposes.

"I am of the opinion that those aircraft are designed for very special missions," Warner said.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Kenneth Bacon said the Defense Department would take Warner's view into consideration but he doubted the Air Force would change its policy.

"I have heard no talk in the Pentagon that suggests we would want to stop using F-117s in air shows," Bacon said. "This is something the American public enjoys and certainly expects."

The crash at the Chesapeake Air Show was among a sudden rash of U.S. military air accidents. On Monday, a Marine F-A-18D Hornet fighter jet crashed in North Carolina's Pamlico Sound during a practice bombing run, and on Sunday a U.S. Navy F-A-18 crashed in Oman, killing the pilot. On Saturday a U.S. Air Force C-141 transport plane flying from Namibia and carrying nine men crashed in the South Atlantic.

Bacon said it was a coincidence that these accidents came in a cluster.

"These appear to be totally isolated events," Bacon said. "I don't think anybody believes there is a commonality in any of these events."

There is more to life than news and sports.

AIDS epidemic heightening among heterosexual women

By PAUL A. DRISCOLL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The number of AIDS cases among women is rising more quickly than among men, and sex with infected men has overtaken drug use as the leading cause of infection among women, federal researchers say.

"Prevention efforts remain critical," the researchers said, particularly since those women who are most at risk can be difficult to educate because of poverty, substance abuse, alcoholism and other problems.

From 1991 through 1995, the number of women diagnosed with AIDS increased by 63 percent versus 12.8 percent for men.

By the end of 1995, 67,400 women nationwide had been diagnosed as having AIDS since the epidemic began, with 11,500 of them being diagnosed in 1995.

However, the number of AIDS cases among women is still smaller than for men. Infected women in 1995 represented just 19 percent of all cases that year, said CDC epidemiologist Dr. Pascale M. Wortley, chief researcher of the study.

Throughout the 1980s and early 1990s, the disease was spread in women primarily through sharing injection drug needles. But by 1993, sex with infected men had become the main culprit and two years later had risen to 52 percent of the cases nationwide, up from 40 percent in 1991. In the South, it was even worse— 58 percent.

Among men, about 53 percent were infected through homosexual contact in 1993, with 25 percent from intravenous drug use. In 1991, 63 percent of the new cases for men had come from homosexual sex.

More up-to-date data to be released later this week will show the trend continuing, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The trend toward infection through sex is particularly evident for women under 25, who are 2 1/2 times more likely to have been infected through heterosexual contact than by injecting drugs, Wortley said.

"So it's critical to reach young people before they reach the age of having sex and injecting drugs," she said. "The key is to get them before they even start."

The findings highlight the continuing spread of the disease despite the success of new drugs in prolonging life, said Daniel Zingale, executive director of AIDS Action, an advocacy group.

"There has been a lot of attention on the declining death rate ... this is the rest of the story," Zingale said.

The study also found evidence suggesting that many adolescent women become infected by older men and that in cases of a large age gap the women are less likely to insist on using condoms.

Prevention programs need to take this into account and not assign adolescent women the primary responsibility for adopting safe behavior, the researchers said.

"Condoms cost 40 cents. AIDS drugs cost $40 a day and may or may not work," Zingale said.

The rapid increase in AIDS incidence in the South is partly the result of concurrent epidemics of crack cocaine and syphilis, Wortley said.

People who are addicted to crack have more sex partners because they frequently trade sex for drugs. And syphilis is accompanied by sores that facilitate the transmission of the AIDS virus.

Woman killed for interfering in roommates' relationship

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A young woman was bludgeoned to death by her three roommates and another woman, apparently for disrupting the household by starting a romance with one of them, investigators say.

The body of Stacey Hanna, 19, was found face down in the mud July 27 in the woods. She had been beaten beyond recognition, her throat slashed and her skull fractured.

The other women were involved romantically with one another, and Hanna, who had moved to Lynchburg from Richmond only three weeks earlier, may have become intimate with at least one of them, investigators said.

The women believed Hanna "was interfering in their relationships and had told lies to them," Chesterfield County Detective Dave Zeheb testified at a pretrial hearing Monday.

Hanna's roommates — Domica Winkler, 18, Tracy Bitner, 19, and Kelly Tibbs, 18 — were indicted Monday on charges of capital murder, abduction and robbery. Stephanie Cull, 18, was charged with murder and abduction.

Winkler, accused of throwing a cinderblock at Hanna, told investigators that "there are times when people need to die, and this is one of those times," Detective Rick Mormando testified.

Hanna was taken out for what she thought would be some beer-drinking in the woods. The women planned just to beat her but began to worry she would go to police, so they killed her, Zeheb said.

Clinton helps celebrate CIA birthday

By JOHN DIAMOND
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LANGLEY, Va. — Kicking off its 50th birthday week, the CIA basked in presidential praise and showed off a Scud missile, a Soviet tank and a sampling of a little-known line of cosmetics — lipstick that fires a 4.5mm slug.

Half a century after the National Security Act of 1947 set the CIA in motion, the agency forgot about foul-ups, spy scandals and botched coups for a day Tuesday and focused on its accomplishments.

"You served where others could not go. You did what others could not do," said President Clinton, making the third trip of his presidency to the agency. "The intelligence edge you gave our country's national security decision-making made it less likely that our troops would need to fight or that our lives would be put at risk."

CIA Director George Tenet noted that Clinton had interrupted a busy morning working on unresolved negotiations on a land mine ban to visit CIA headquarters. That work, Tenet did not need to say, certainly included the CIA's input.

Pointing to the inherent secrecy of intelligence work, Clinton told the audience of about 2,500 agency employees that they will never receive public acclaim for what they do.

"You labor in obscurity by choice and design, serving with quiet patri-tism that seeks neither spotlight nor praise," he said.

The president drew sustained applause when he noted one of the few recent CIA successes that did receive some publicity: the arrest by FBI agents, with crucial CIA support, of Mir Aimal Kansi, the Pakistani suspected of a 1993 shooting spree in front of agency headquarters that left two dead and three wounded.

Gradually — too slow for many historians — the CIA is lifting the veil on its activities during the Cold War. And after Clinton finished speaking under a tent set up in front of the agency's main entrance, he toured an exhibit displaying the tools and trophies of the spy craft.

The private collection, assembled by historian H. Keith Melton, includes one of the earliest examples of an identification card issued by the Soviet Cheka, the secret police force that preceded the KGB, as well as false identification papers prepared by the Office of Strategic Services, the CIA's predecessor.

A pair of single shot lipstick-pistols used by the KGB were among the more intriguing spy gadgets on display. One was found in the purse of an East German spy arrested in West Berlin during the Cold War.

Clinton lingered over a fascinating array of miniature spy cameras, one concealed in a false cigarette case, another disguised as a button on a coat, a third concealed within a brooch.

Out on the lawn, the CIA had some larger-scale exhibits from its own collection, including a Soviet-built Scud missile and mobile missile launcher.

How did the agency get it?
"That's something we don't talk about," said a CIA host as he helped a member of Congress press the switch that moved the missile into the launch position.

CIA officials were equally close-mouthed as to how a hulking Soviet T-72 battle tank found its way from the communist bloc to agency headquarters.

The public portion of the weeklong birthday celebration was to continue Wednesday with speeches by former President Bush and former CIA Director Richard Helms.

Clearly, even the new, post-Cold War CIA remains concerned with secrecy. On Thursday, the actual 50th anniversary, the CIA will host a ceremony for 50 "trailblazers" — inventors, spies and spy masters who "made a real difference in the CIA's pursuit of its mission," according to an agency release announcing the event. Press won't be invited, however, because two of the names on the list remain classified.

Keep in mind, this is an agency that generates its own electricity with a furnace fueled, in part, by classified trash.

Wife found guilty in Black Bart slaying

By TIM MOLLOY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — A jury found a woman guilty Tuesday in the murder of her husband, a quick-draw performer known as Black Bart.

A jury took three hours of deliberations to find Carole Gold guilty of first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit first-degree murder in the slaying of Charles Gold, who used "Black Bart" as a stage name for his quick-draw performances.

Prosecutors said Mrs. Gold and her son hired a man to kill her husband. They said the pair sought his $150,000 life insurance policy and control of his stables at a resort.

Gold's daughter, Stephanie Gold, cried and hugged prosecutors when the verdict was reached.

"I am just glad that now he can rest in peace," she said. She said she took a leave of absence from her job in Chicago to attend the trial, which began in the first week of August.

Gold's body was found riddled with bullets on the kitchen floor of his Phoenix home in October 1992. His gun still was in his belt, and Mrs. Gold told police she found her husband dead when she returned home that night.

Mrs. Gold, a former playboy bunny, had been married to Gold for 14 years.

Superior Court Judge Susan Bolton set Mrs. Gold's sentencing for Oct. 14.

Mrs. Gold faces a life sentence.

Mrs. Gold's son and Gold's stepson, Kenneth Ashton Cottini, pleaded guilty last month to a part in the murder-for-hire plot. A trial for Cottini before his guilty plea ended with a hung jury.

His sentencing is set for Sept. 29. Cottini faces a maximum of 20 years in prison. He has already served almost four years in jail.

Robert Pryor, identified as Cottini's drug dealer, testified that he hired Dan Goddard to kill Charles Gold at the behest of Cottini, 25, and Mrs. Gold.

Goddard has never been charged with the shooting. He was given immunity from prosecution to testify in the first trial.

JERUSALEM (AP) — The threat of terrorism has persuaded the producers of a new Harrison Ford film to cancel a three-week shoot in Israel.

The producers of The Age of Aquarius made the decision after a bombing in Jerusalem earlier this month, the head of an Israeli production company said Tuesday.

The American producer, Branco Lustig, could not obtain war-risk insurance and was worried about the safety of the cast and crew, said Zvi Spielman, head of Israfilm.

The scenes that were to be filmed in Israel will now be shot in Morocco.

The Sept. 4 blast, claimed by the Islamic militant group Hamas, killed five Israelis and three assailants.

Spielman said a government-owned insurance company used to offer war-risk insurance to foreign movie productions, but that program was canceled in 1992.

He said the bombing also scared off American director William Friedkin, who was considering shooting a movie based on the book Oh, Jerusalem in Israel.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rapper-producer Dr. Dre has been accused of stealing a portion of a song from the group Milkbone and using it on an album he produced for another artist.

Set It Off Records and producer James Gist filed a breach-of-contract lawsuit Monday in Superior Court seeking more than $2 million in damages.

They claim Dr. Dre, whose real name is Andre Young, had been in negotiations with the New Jersey-based record label to distribute recordings of Milkbone and other artists.

According to the complaint, Dr. Dre listened to a demo tape by Milkbone, which contained a sample of a composition called "The Human Fly," performed by Lalo Schiffrin.

A sample of the composition had been cleared for use by Milkbone in a single, the complaint says. Young later broke off negotiations with Set It Off and included the same sample in a song called "Game Over," which he produced for rapper Scarface, according to the company.

The move forced Set It Off to scrap Milkbone's single, the complaint says.

Dre, one of the founders of Death Row Records, has been signing acts to his new company, Aftermath Entertainment. He has produced two of the best-selling gangsta rap albums ever — his solo album, The Chronic, which sold 3.8 million copies, and Snoop Doggy Dogg's Doggystyle, which sold more than 5 million.

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans will have to wait a little longer to get their hands on Elton John's tribute to Princess Diana, "Candle in the Wind 1997."

Although the song was put on sale this past weekend in England and retailers were hoping to see it in stores in the United States Tuesday, its official release date has now been pushed back to Sept. 23.

It was impossible to deliver thousands of copies in time to put it on sale in America this week, A&M Records spokesman Steve Karas said.

Britain got a jump in production because the artwork and master copy of the song were there, he said.

John re-recorded the song with Beatles producer George Martin just hours after performing it at Princess Diana's funeral on Sept. 6.

Tulane's Clark now tops list of coach candidates

BY MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

The pool of candidates to replace Bill Frieder as the next head basketball coach at ASU is drying up faster than desert rain.

In statements that came only hours apart Tuesday, both Utah's Rick Majerus and Oklahoma's Kelvin Sampson, believed to be ASU's top two choices, turned down the job.

Tulane's Perry Clark, now appears to be the University's No. 1 choice.

Another rumor circulating late Tuesday night was that ASU athletic director Kevin White was in Washington D.C. to interview George Washington University head man Mike Jarvis.

CLARK

White told KMVP Radio of Phoenix Tuesday evening Majerus had declined because of timing.

Majerus released the following statement through the University of Utah.

"Athletics are an endeavor in which coaches ask players for a commitment. I, in turn, have to reciprocate that commitment. I am flattered and honored to have been offered the coaching position at Arizona State University. It was attractive because someone for whom I have a great deal of admiration and respect, Dr. Kevin White, is my friend and would have been my athletic director. I have to respectfully decline in the best interest of the University of Utah and my commitment, fondness and affection for my players, administration, faculty, friends and fans of the University of Utah."

White added that a conflict with a shoe deal also contributed to this decision.

Majerus is expected to sign a 10-year contract with Reebok any day. The ASU basketball program has a contract with Nike.

Frieder confirmed this report Tuesday. He added that if the school runs out of candidates, neither he nor White will consider Frieder returning.

"Absolutely not," he said.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press reported Sampson, who is on a recruiting trip in Kansas City, Mo., has no interest in the position. In April, he signed a new contract, that does include an escape clause, with Oklahoma for 10 years.

"Absolutely not," Sampson told the Associated Press. "I can tell you that I've been contacted by Arizona State, and there is no interest for me in the Arizona State job. Any reports that I'm waiting or have visions of leaving aren't true.

MAJERUS

"I really, really believe I have a great job and the longer I'm in it, I think the better it's going to get. I've been here three years and would like to think the next three years are going to be better than the first three."

Sources told the Arizona Republic that Sampson's problem was also one of timing — he didn't want to pull his 15-year-old daughter and 12-year-old son out of school just after classes started. Also, the sources told the paper, he felt that leaving Oklahoma at the height of the recruiting season and a month before practice begins would be unfair.

Snyder calls workout team's worst since Camp Tontozona

BY MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

Following ASU's 23-12 victory over Miami Saturday, Sun Devil head football coach Bruce Snyder said the biggest worry he had was that his team might have a letdown.

In Tuesday's practice, that's exactly what happened. Snyder said it was the worst practice the team had had since returning from Camp Tontozona.

"Yes. No question," Snyder said. "(The problems were) effort, attention to detail, listening. All the things. If you've ever raised children, sometimes they don't listen to you. This is one of those days."

Snyder went on to add that the long road trip, "a hard game, greeting all the press (and) school" contributed to the Sun Devils' sub-par work out.

"All those things came together in their emotional tank if you will," he said. "I think it's empty, so maybe they said 'We can't practice hard today.'"

"Today I don't think we showed the toughness that we need to be a champion. Maybe they've been listening to (and) reading your (the media) stuff that they're good. They're not any good unless they're tough enough to do it. They're capable. I saw it Saturday. Now we have to do it every day."

KICKING CONTROVERSY

Kicker Marcus Williams is in jeopardy of losing his kickoff duties.

Following two horrendous boots in Saturday's game with Miami, Williams was benched in the second half in favor of Robert Nycz. Snyder said he will decide today on who the kickoff man will be for the BYU game.

In the second quarter, he committed a football cardinal sin — whacking a ball out of bounds. Later, Williams pooched a kick to the wrong side of the field.

"One was on the 15 or 20 yard line," Snyder said, "completely away from where we were covering. We were covering over here and he kicked it over there. We just said you can't go

Mental lapses becoming every-game occurrences for football stars

Unlike postal workers, some of today's NFL stars are having problems going mental.

And it's costing their teams games.

Much of the blame in the Philadelphia Eagles' 21-20 loss to the Dallas Cowboys will undoubtedly fall on punter/holder Tom Hutton, whose fumbled hold prevented former Cowboy Chris Boniol from attempting a game-winning, 23-yard field goal as time expired.

But before Hutton becomes the most hated figure in Philadelphia since Mitch Williams of '93 World Series fame, wide receiver Freddie Solomon deserves part of the blame. On the previous play, Solomon caught a short pass from Ty Detmer and turned it into a 46-yard gain. On the play, Solomon had a chance to step out of bounds at around the 10-yard line, stopping the clock and leaving the Eagles well within Boniol's field-goal range.

Had Solomon run out of bounds, the Eagles would have still owned one time out, and there would have been between seven and 10 seconds on the clock. Hutton could have easily fallen on the bad snap, called the timeout, and given Boniol a second chance.

JOSH DEFAMIO

NOT THE CENTERS OF ATTENTION

Solomon isn't the only NFC East player whose mental gaffes may have cost his team a win.

In fact, Pro Bowl fullback Larry Centers may have cost his team two.

In the opener, with the Arizona Cardinals leading 21-16 in the waning moments, Centers' battle for more yards — yards his team didn't necessarily need — led to a fumble that allowed the Cincinnati Bengals to score the winning touchdown with only 38 seconds left.

Then on Sunday, with the Cardinals trailing the Washington Redskins 13-10 with about one minute to go, Centers caught a short pass from quarterback Kent Graham. With no timeouts left, the only way for Centers to stop the clock was to get out of bounds. Like Solomon, Centers instead tried to juke his tackler, but failed and was brought down.

When Graham finally was able to spike the ball to stop the clock, more than 15 seconds had ticked off the clock.

While Centers' snafu did not cost the Cardinals the game — the team still tied it on Kevin Butler's 47-yard field goal — it possibly prevented the offense from getting two more cracks at the end zone.

Neither Solomon nor Centers can be blamed for Philadelphia Eagles punter/holder Tom Hutton walks of the field after losing the handle on the ball and the game to the Dallas Cowboys, 21-20 Monday night. Hutton will try to keep from becoming the next Mitch Williams for Philadelphians.

College football fanatics are in for a real treat this week.

Here in The Valley of the Sun it's still summer. In other parts of the country it's autumn. But no matter where you are, it's that time of year when leaves fall as quickly as national championship dreams.

Now that the early-season schedule of cupcake games is behind us, it's time to get serious. It's time to see games that mean something—games with national championship implications.

Here's a quick rundown on the this week's top showdowns:

NO. 4 TENNESSEE (2-0)

AT NO. 3 FLORIDA (2-0)

The SEC's elite are ready to clash in Gator land. This rivalry has become quite a dog fight the past few seasons with both teams utilizing their aerial assaults. With Heisman hopeful Peyton Manning, the Volunteers appear confident to conquer the conference championship. However this is the same Manning, Archie's boy, who has never won a really big game. He seems to always choke under pressure. This is a real test for the QB to prove his worth.

On the flip side, Florida is the defending NCAA champs. The squad has lost Heisman Trophy winner Danny Wuerffel, who is now employed by Mike Ditka's pseudo-NFL club in New Orleans. (The 'Aints). But the Gators boast a ton of speed on both sides of the ball and one of the best coaches in the business (Steve Spurrier). This game is in Tallahassee which spells trouble for Tennessee

Prediction: Florida 27, Tennessee 17

NO. 5 FLORIDA STATE (2-0)

AT NO. 16 CLEMSON (2-0)

Bobby Bowden's boys don't miss a beat. They are constantly among the nation's top-10 teams, and this season shouldn't be any different. Gone is workhorse tailback Warrick Dunn, who has been a welcome addition to the new-look Tampa Bay (who surprisingly have more wins than the team from the other bay) Buccaneers. Nevertheless, FSU has enough weapons to defeat the Tigers. Leading the Seminoles' offense is QB Thad Busby who passed for 308 yards against Maryland.

Clemson is 2-0 for the first time since 1991. But Coach Tommy West's offense has not had much smooth sailing. The Tigers amassed 439 yards of total offense in last week's 19-17 victory over North Carolina State, but failed to generate an offensive touchdown.

Florida's history of winning big games will continue.

Prediction: FSU 31, Clemson 13

NO. 7 NEBRASKA (2-0)

AT NO. 2 WASHINGTON (2-0)

This game shouldn't be as close as some people might think. The Huskies are clearly the better team.

Freshman quarterback Brock Huard threw four touchdown passes in UW's 36-3 rout of San Diego State. He seems to get better each game and so do the Huskies. This game is their biggest challenge of the season, but the Huskies' all-around athleticism and experience should be enough to beat the 'Huskies.

As for Nebraska, a "quarterback controversy" has developed in Lincoln. Scott Frost is not the savior many people have expected him to be. He hasn't dominated the opposition like his predecessor, Tommy Frazier did.

Host Nebraska escaped with a 38-24 victory over the overachieving Central Florida Golden Knights Saturday. But it's clear that head coach Tom Osborne has lost some confidence in Frost. He was yanked for backup QB Frankie London in the second quarter and London looked poised in the pocket, which is something Frost doesn't normally do.

Prediction: Washington 28, Nebraska 14.

NO. 12 AUBURN (2-0)

AT NO. 10 LOUISIANA STATE (2-0)

It's the televised battle of Tigers on ESPN. What more could you ask for?

The visiting Tigers feature a well-equipped passing attack. Auburn QB Dameayne Craig is the highest-rated passer in school history (133.36 pass efficiency). He has three solid targets to look for: Tyron Goodman, Fred Beasley and Karsten Bailey.

Conversely, the host Tigers are a running-oriented program. Led by Heisman candidate Kevin Faulk, the team is averaging 231.5 yards per game. But with Faulk sidelined last week due to a pulled hamstring, backups Cecil Collins and Rondell Mealey filled in admirably—combining for 227 yards and two scores.

This matchup historically is one of the better ones in the country. Six of the past seven contests have been decided by a TD or less. Expect similar results this time around.

Prediction: Auburn 21, LSU 20

Cardinals sign McGwire to 3-yr, $40 mil contract

By R.B. FALLSTROM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS— The St. Louis Cardinals have Mark McGwire for at least three more seasons, and they didn't have to tear up the team to keep him.

McGwire, who joined Babe Ruth last week as the only players with consecutive 50-homer seasons, signed a three-year, $28 million deal Tuesday.

The deal includes a $1 million signing bonus and a fourth season at McGwire's option that brings the total package to nearly $40 million.

One of McGwire's agents, Bob Cohen, said the slugger could have commanded at least another million per season on the free-agent market. Instead, he wanted to stay so much he not only signed for less, he agreed to defer about 25 percent of the money until he retires. The negotiating process took only a week or so and the deal was finalized late Monday night.

"We fully expect him to complete his wonderful career in St. Louis," said Bill DeWitt, head of the Cardinals' ownership group.

The deferred money and below-market salary will allow the Cardinals to attempt to re-sign pitchers Andy Benes and Todd Stottlemyre. Benes, who is 28-17 in two seasons with the Cardinals, has a player option on his deal. The team has an option on the contract of Stottlemyre, 26-20 in two seasons with the team.

"There's a lot of money being passed around, a lot of questions about how much guys are being paid and people looking for the last dollar," general manager Walt Jocketty said. "I can assure you that Mark McGwire did not do that.

We're trying to structure it so we can keep everybody."

The Cardinals had a $44 million payroll without McGwire. They're counting on a healthy increase in season-ticket sales to help bridge the gap.

"We've got a pretty high payroll relative to baseball and relative to a market-place this size," DeWitt said. "But this city can support it because it's such a great baseball town."

McGwire also is donating $1 million a year to establish a charitable foundation to benefit sexually and physically abused children. McGwire had trouble keeping his composure describing the foundation, pausing for a half-minute at one point.

Later, he said he has close friends who were physically and sexually abused.

"Let's just say children have a special place in my heart," McGwire said. "I just really believe a guy in my position can really help out."

The Cardinals acquired McGwire, 33, from Oakland on July 31, the trading deadline. On Friday, he said he thought he and the Cardinals were a perfect match, and that there was a good chance he'd be back.

McGwire thinks the Cardinals, injury-riddled and 69-80 heading into the final weeks, should be back in the postseason next year. The fans who show up at Busch Stadium two hours early to watch his tape-measure shots in batting practice also played a part in him staying.

"I tell you what, it makes me float every time I come to the ballpark, to play in this stadium and play in front of these fans," McGwire said. "I'm overwhelmed. I'm going to say that probably for the rest of my career."

his team's crushing losses. However, physical mistakes are a lot easier to swallow than mental ones.

THE HONOR ROLL

Other players who failed to take good "mental" notes:

•Derrick Cullors, Patriots, whose ill-advised decision to take the ball out of the end zone and subsequent fumble almost allowed the New York Jets to take a 27-24 win.

•Tomur Barnes, Oilers, committed a ridiculous personal foul that practically handed the overtime game to the Miami Dolphins in Week 2.

•And Emmitt Smith, Cowboys, cost his team 15 yards during the Cowboys 25-22 loss to the Cardinals by violating, of all things, the newly-created Emmitt Smith-rule.

GOOD LUCK, BAD LUCK

Last Sunday, Washington's Gus Frerotte threw two interceptions in the end zone, as his team lost a winnable 14-13 game to Pittsburgh Steelers.

The next week, Frerotte capitalized on an overtime fumble by connecting with Michael Westbrook on a 40-yard touchdown pass in overtime over the Cardinals.

Those two games typifies what has been an up-and-down week for the NFC East. While the Frerotte-Westbrook connection brought down the Cardinals, a week earlier, Arizona used an OT fumble to down the Cowboys.

And Monday night's missed field goal which raised the Cowboys and sunk the Eagles came one week after Philadelphia beat Green Bay on a missed chip shot by Packers' rookie Ryan Longwell.

Stay tuned. This could turn out to be the most exciting division race.

BIG D-DOUBLE STANDARD

Did anyone else find it odd that members of the Dallas Cowboys were falling to their knees and thanking God for Monday's win — one week after backup tight end Scott Galbraith criticized the Cardinals for doing the exact same thing?

THE PACKERS DON'T KNOW JACK-E,

BUT IT DOESN'T REALLY MATTER

There has been a lot of criticism on the Green Bay Packers decision to cut longtime kicker Chris Jacke in favor of a younger, cheaper rookie. That criticism intensified when Longwell missed the 28-yard chip shot against the Eagles, ending the Packers' dreams of an undefeated season.

However, it should be noted that Jacke, now a Pittsburgh Steeler, is currently on the injured list. Even if the Packer's had chosen to resign him, there's a good chance Jacke would not have played, and Longwell would have been forced to miss the winning field goal.

DON'T CALL THE PLUMMER QUITE YET

Finally, after Kent Graham's horrendous performance on Sunday, many local fans have called sports radio stations suggesting that head coach Vince Tobin is making a mistake by allowing Graham to start over local-legend Jake Plummer.

However, fans should remember a game against the New York Giants in September, 1994. During the contest, quarterback Steve Buerlein looked increasingly erratic. The crowd, convinced it knew better than then-coach Buddy Ryan, began calling for backup Jim McMahon.

Ryan gave in, and McMahon came in. And promptly threw an interception.

Maybe there's a lesson to be learned there.

Volleyball squad squashes Aussies

BY JOSH DEFAMIO
STATE PRESS

ASU Head Coach Patty Snyder-Park said she didn't really care if her ASU Sun Devil volleyball team won when the team faced the Australian National Team at the University Activity Center on Tuesday night.

After all, it was just a scrimmage, and Snyder-Park just wanted her team to do well.

"We utilized this match as more like a scrimmage for us," she said. "We didn't care if it was a win or a loss. That wasn't the factor. We wanted to make sure we got a look at everybody."

The Sun Devils used several lineups and tried new offensive schemes, but still handily defeated the Australian team in four sets, 15-13, 4-15, 15-4, and 15-10.

The Sun Devils stormed out to an early 12-2 lead in the first set. But the Aussies came roaring back, closing the gap to 14-13 before a senior Terri Cox serve put the game away.

Snyder-Park put her second string lineup in for the second game, and, predictably, everything went Australia's way.

"There was a little bit of struggling in that second game with that second lineup," Snyder-Park said. "Because those girls haven't really played together in that lineup, ever. That was the first time this year that they played. So they struggled a little bit. But that's natural."

ASU stormed back in the next two games, scoring nine consecutive points in one stretch in game 3, then coming back from a 9-7 deficit to seal the win in the fourth and final game.

Even with the relatively easy win, neither Snyder-Park nor her team were ready to give the Sun Devils effort a perfect grade.

"I still want to see us run our offense a little bit quicker," Snyder-Park said. "(I'd give the team) a B. Because we did not play our best volleyball."

"When the starters were in there, we won," sophomore Jamie Peck said. "But we could have done better. We need to communicate more, and we need to be a little more energetic."

Senior Terri Cox helped the Sun Devils defeat the Australian National Team in a four-game exhibition match Tuesday.

Coaches

The Republic said that Sampson told White Friday that he would be interested if the job remained open.

Sampson has taken the Sooners to the NCAA tournament in each of his three years while compiling a 59-33 record. Previously, he was head coach at Washington State for seven years.

Clark, 45, has been the head coach at Tulane for the past nine seasons. White was the athletic director there for five of those years.

Last year, Clark led his squad to a 20-11 record and a birth in the NIT Tournament.

The State Press was unable to contact White in regard to Clark.

When Bill Frieder resigned, White said he hoped to hire a replacement within 10 days to two weeks. If he couldn't, he said he would name an interim coach and wait until spring. The interim coach likely would be assistant Don Newman, a former head coach at Sacramento State.

Frieder also confirmed this Tuesday saying, "If they go interim, it will be with Don Newman."

Newman coached for five seasons at Cal State Sacramento where he was 20-114. He is known as a great recruiter.

Team-by-team breakdown of Pac-10 volleyball race

BY LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

The ASU volleyball team has yet to face its Pac-10 foes, but when the team does, these teams are sure to be tough.

The Pac-10 Conference is generally recognized to be the best in volleyball, since it has taken five of the national titles in the last eight years. Six of the Pac-10 teams are ranked in the top-20 in the nation, one of which is defending national champions, the Stanford Cardinal.

In preseason polls done by the Pac-10 coaches, ASU was picked to finish last. Stanford was ranked first, with USC following behind as second-place finishers. UCLA was selected to finish third, Washington State picked fourth, Washington fifth, UofA sixth, Oregon State seventh, California eight, and Oregon ninth.

The following is a preview of the Pac-10 teams the Sun Devils face:

STANFORD

Stanford returns as both the Pac-10 and NCAA champions. Ranked No. 4 by USA Today/AVCA, the team returns five starters, including first team All-Americans middle blocker/outside hitter Kerri Walsh and setter/outside hitter Lisa Sharpley. However, so far this season the team has been plagued by injuries and has gotten off to a slow start.

During the off-season, Sharpley and outside hitter Jaimi Gregory had orthoscopic knee surgery, and Walsh had shoulder surgery.

"Everybody has picked us from the beginning to be a top team, but we were very limited to what we could do in the preseason and we're behind in training," head coach Don Shaw said.

The teams rounds out with senior experience from All-American outside hitter Kristin Folk, middle blocker Barbara Ifejika, outside hitter Debbie Lambert and middle blocker/outside hitter Paul McNamee. Along with Sharpley, these players accounted for a total of 936 kills and 779 digs.

Shaw says that while they still have strong senior talent, they have brought in five new freshman and the team will take on a different look. He also says that their strengths lie in their ability to make adjustments during games, and that when he has a completely healthy team, they will be back on track.

Courtesy of Stanford Media Relations

Two-time AVCA all-american Lisa Sharpley will attempt to lead the Stanford Cardinal to its fourth consecutive Pac-10 volleyball championship this season.

"When you win the national championship there is nowhere to go but down, but we always shoot for the championship every year," Shaw said. "We hope to play our best in December and that's a long way away."

USC

As of Tuesday, USC was ranked No. 8 by USC, behind Washington State. The Trojans lost five seniors from last year and return with seniors setter Antoinette Lindemann and outside hitter Jeanne Vetter to lead the pack. The team does bring in eight new freshman.

All-Pac-10 middle blocker Jasmina Marinkovic does return as well as outside hitter Jennifer Kessy. Marinkovic was third in the league's Top-10 hitting percentage, with .360. Kessy was fifth in the league in digs with 3.04 digs per game (dpg). Junior setter Janice Mounts was fourth in the leagues setters with 13.31 assists per game.

One concern of the team might be replacing the numbers of All-Pac-10 outside hitter Vesna Dragicevic with 430 kills and Bonny Brunst's 115 kills.

UCLA

Last season UCLA finished the season 17-14, missing out on postseason action for the first time in the school's history. The team was injury-ridden and was without outside hitter Kara Milling for 13 matches with a broken bone in her foot. She had led the Bruins with 4.2 kills per game (kpg).

The team has a good mix of players with experience, there are only two freshman. The team's strength will be senior outside hitter Tanisha Larkin, who led the squad with 344 digs and 389 kills. Seniors, setter Kim Coleman and Milling, will together lead the team.

Concerns for the Bruins may be their schedule. The team will play 18 teams on the road, only to return home for matches against all nine of the Pac-10 teams.

WASHINGTON STATE

It could be Washington State that will give Stanford a run for its money. The Cougars finished second in the conference last year and are sure to fight for the championship. Washington State is ranked No. 6 by USA Today/AVCA.

The Cougars return five starters, and only pick up two freshman. All-Pac-10 senior setter Stephanie Papke led the league and was sixth nationally with 13.92 assists per game. Junior Jennifer Wyckoff and senior outside hitter Elis Arias should also have a big impact. Wyckoff finished the season with 262 kills, Arias with 220.

UOFA

No. 15 UofA also returns five seniors and head coach Dave Rubio will rely on their experience and leadership to guide their team to the top.

"I think that this is the best team I've had in the six years I've been here," Rubio said.

"Right now we're a complete team."

Standouts for the Wildcats include sophomore Erin Aldrich who led the team in hitting, .300 and blocks 1.01 blocks per game and senior Carolyn Penfield who finished the season with 237 kills and 163 digs.

Rubio said that the team will be especially strong with their middle blockers and that their setting is good. Their only concern will be passing and the development of their young players.

OREGON STATE

There is a fine line between the experienced and inexperienced on this season's Oregon State team, as they return five seniors and bring in seven freshmen.

Senior setter Miya Malaulu will continue to be counted on for her leadership as she holds every Beaver assist record with 4, 278 career assists. Seniors outside hitters Pia Ahlengard, Heather Low and middle blocker Magan Prieto will also contribute. The three combined for 845 kills last season.

CALIFORNIA

There are high expectations for the Bears this season as they return with five of their starters. Look for senior outside hitter to have an immediate impact, as she vies to become the 29th player in Pac-10 history to accumulate 1,000 kills/1,000 digs. She enters the season with 954 kills and 1,024 digs.

Sophomore middle blocker Kellie Alva was named to the Pac-10 All-Freshman team for her 227 kills and 93 blocks.

Concerns for the Bears is their schedule filled early in the season with Top-25 teams.

OREGON

The Ducks will return with six seniors and five returning starters in an effort to improve on last season's record of 11-20.

Junior middle blocker Alli White led the team in blocks with 120, and junior outside hitter Madeline Ernst and sophomore outside hitter Michelle Christ will anchor their offensive attack. Ernst lead the Ducks in kills with 2.94 kpg, while Christ collected 180 kills on the season.

Oregon's chief concern will be improving on their .159 hitting percentage, which was ninth in the conference last year.

again. After that, at least the ball was going in the direction we wanted it. It stayed in bounds. Now Marcus had a better leg than (Nycz) does. We've just got to get him to kick it."

Williams, though, is confident he will retain his responsibilities.

"I just have to control myself," Williams said. "I know I have the ability to kickoff and punt. It's just the transition of getting used to both of them and not making a bigger deal than it really is. I wasn't nervous (in Miami). I was just really concentrating on doing my job. I know I have the ability to put every ball in the end zone. I just did a little bit too much (concentrating) and it's not needed."

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by Frances Drake

Wednesday, September 17, 1997

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Nursing that resentment isn't good for your mental or physical health. Snap out of it. Later, you meet with a wonderful romantic or social opportunity.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You might encounter problems with parenting early in the day. Romantic feelings deepen. You receive a social invitation from an important business colleague.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Something that occurs causes you to revise your philosophical outlook. A new subject captures your attention. Avoid a tendency to quarrel with those around you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Extra funds could become available to you. Something that occurs early in the day causes you some consternation. Later, though, you're cheerful, charming and content.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Someone you've helped out in the past comes to you yet again for a favor. Rethink your approach. Is someone taking advantage of you?

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) You achieve insight into something that happened to you long ago. Early morning domestic disputes can be quickly resolved, provided you use a clear-headed approach.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You're let down by someone you felt you could always count on. Later in the day, you have luck with collaborative ventures. Your personality comes to the fore at night.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)

Difficulties arise with a friendship due to a financial concern. Romance is a plus, and you become involved with that certain someone. The evening is ideal for quiet pursuits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Financial gains are likely through business interests. However, relations with a co-worker could be sticky. The evening promises to be romantic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Delays that occur on the job are a concern. You make an important business contact while out socializing. The evening favors having guests over.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) It's a topsy-turvy time for you in business. A setback could be quickly followed by a triumph. At night, you're at your best socially.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) It is a great time for your career interests. You're likely to receive a raise, a new job offer or a promotion. The evening accents matters of the heart.

YOU BORN TODAY have a sympathetic and sensitive disposition. Your compassion and empathy are apparent in all your relationships. You are creative and have a talent for knowing what methods and resources will best combine to bring about what you hope to achieve. You don't adapt well to change; you like to stick to a routine that gives you a sense of security. You're inventive and would make a wonderful engineer or mechanic.

A stereo system capable of drowning out the sound of the engine. What were we thinking of?

Not only is it bordering on insanity, but it's also true. We've done exactly that with our new Music Edition Volkswagens. Now the beautiful German engineered growl of both the Golf and Jetta can now be horrifically overpowered by the dexterous musical stylings of an 8 speaker stereo system and a 6 disc CD changer. The alloy wheels and custom cloth interior you can use without restraint. The driving excitement of both cars is there for no other reason than to do your sweet bidding. But we beg you, in the name of all creatures big and small, please be gentle when you turn up the tunes.
