Sun Devil Stix founder Ben Monro (seated) and club member Erik Wennstrom demonstrate their "devil stix" skills between classes Wednesday. The club was formed in 1996 with the intention of promoting Devil Stix as a way of relieving stress. Membership is free and the club meets Wednesdays at 7:00 p.m. on the life sciences courtyard.

Air Force leftovers used in new ASU East union

BY KARA SHIRE
 STATE PRESS

It may lack some of the amenities of the Main campus Memorial Union, but the Williams Campus Union, scheduled to open Monday at ASU East, will provide students a place to study and relax.

"It's very different from the Main campus MU because our campus is very different," said Gary Kleemann of Campus Life Services. "We think that's a good thing."

Temporary hours of operation are Monday through Thursday 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Friday and Saturday 8 a.m. to midnight and Sunday noon to 10 p.m.

LaRae Kendrick, graduate building manager of the union, said 12 students have been hired to run the building.

"We're going to start off really slow," Kendrick said. "We really want to just get it open and get it running. We're all excited because there's so many possibilities."

The reuse of military leftovers has been the key concept in opening the union on a restricted budget, Kleemann said.

The student union is located in the former Officer's Club building. Furniture left behind by the Air Force is being used to furnish the student lounge that was once a formal dining room. Three bars that once used to serve alcohol will now be used as non-alcoholic lounges with pool tables and video games. Plans are being discussed to convert one lounge into a coffee bar. The old Air Force cafeteria will be used as a vending-machine-only eating area.

Kleemann said the majority of the changes made to the facility related to infrastructure that had to be fixed, replaced or brought up to code.

Renovations to the student union cost $100,000, mainly to meet fire codes, said ASU East Provost Charles Backus.

Kleemann said he refers to the new student union as a "work in progress" because the union is not going to be 100 percent complete when it opens. Additional changes may have to be made in the future, but officials are waiting for student input, he added.

Efforts to complete the union were pushed up on the priority list because students needed a place to meet, Backus said.

"We operated all last year without a student union and it's just a terrible situation to ask students to go somewhere where we have no student union," he said. "They don't have a place to hang out here. It's just important to the students, the faculty, everybody."

ASU Police accreditation near

BY AMBER KNUTH
 SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

ASU's Department of Public Safety took another step toward becoming accredited Wednesday when on-site inspectors said they would recommend ASU for full accreditation after a four-day review.

Assessors from CALEA, the Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies, gave ASU a unanimous recommendation with accolades, ASU Chief of Police Lanny Standridge said.

"The accolade distinction means that they were extremely impressed with several aspects of our operation, including our training, facility design, internal management system and for having sound and comprehensive policies," he said.

Accreditation, which is voluntary, is undertaken by police units to receive certification that policies and operational

Tempe eyes county islands to annex

BY TIM BAXTER
 STATE PRESS

The land along the Rio Salado Parkway is a dusty, debris-strewn trail of wrecked cars, adult bookstores and corrugated tin buildings. It may also be some of the most valuable land in Tempe.

If only the land was in Tempe.

The land lies within county islands — unincorporated areas regulated by Maricopa County instead of Tempe.

The properties in the islands are not required to meet Tempe ordinances and regulations, and often take advantage of lax codes and enforcement by the county.

But current and future city projects may change all that.

Jim Huling, Tempe assistant city manager, said the city would like to see at least some of the county islands incorporated into the city for several reasons.

"Our staff is doing preliminary discussions with the property owners to see if there would be interest," he said. "The timing would be nice since we'll be expanding that roadway (Rio Salado Parkway) in the near future. Obviously, as that road is improved it makes that property ... have a higher use."

For land to become part of Tempe, a majority of tenants must want to be annexed.

Plans are already in motion for a widening of the Rio Salado Parkway into a four or five lane road from McClintock to Price Road.

Another concern is that the Peabody Hotel — the cornerstone development of the Rio Salado Project — will have a "good" view of the county islands.

"You're going to have a 1,400 room hotel within a stone's throw of an adult practices meet certain standards.

ASU sought accreditation "out of a desire to improve service and safety of the campus," Standridge said. "It's a pledge for higher standards of performance."

ASU will join more than 40 other agencies from around the country for review at CALEA's national hearing Nov. 19-22 in Tulsa, Okla. At the hearing, the commission will make the final decision to grant ASU police a seal of approval or not.

"The biggest benefit of accreditation is national recognition as a professional (unit)," said CALEA assessor Lewis Ed Moyer. "Only about 3 percent of law enforcement agencies are accredited."

CALEA spokesman Marcella Schurter said there are only nine law enforcement agencies in the state of Arizona that hold accreditation.

NAU's police department earned accreditation in March 1995 and UofA's police unit was granted initial certification in 1993.

ASU applied for accreditation in 1991 but did not begin self-assessment until July 1995 for administrative reasons, Standridge said.

The accreditation process includes self-assessment, on-site inspection by law enforcement officials outside of the agency and review by CALEA's board.

Over the last 26 months, ASU has rewritten policies and procedures, updated equipment and reorganized. This which included constructing a new facility, Standridge said.

"Our goal was to establish the same high quality in policing that Lattie Coor has for the university," he said.

At a public hearing Monday night, campus staff and representatives from Tempe, Scottsdale, Phoenix, Peoria, UofA and NAU police departments spoke in favor of ASU's accreditation.

Student health director Dale Bowen told the review panel how ASU DPS has protected his staff when they received threatening phone calls or needed someone removed from the facility.

"They gave my staff a sense of security," he said. "As a consumer, I think they're highly professional and I am proud to have them on this campus."

book shop and a junkyard," Tempe Vice-Mayor Joe Lewis said. "We continually work with the county in an attempt to incorporate the county islands a bit more."

Lewis added that the buildings have "degraded a little over the last 20 or 30 years."

If annexed, the properties would still not have to meet city codes, because they would be grandfathered, Huling said. Only when further development came along would the area have to meet city regulations.

The island does not receive Tempe water or sewer services, either, and would require both for further development, Tempe Public Works Director Judith Greenberg said.

"If someone wants those services, we don't provide them unless they are annexed," she said. "There's no reason we should be providing something to people not in our city."

Both Lewis and Tempe Economic Development Director Jan Schaefer said that development may be key to the area's future.

"The hope is that the private sector will see the possibilities there," Schaefer said.

Lewis said he believes eventually market factors will push the area into the city.

"I think eventually the economics will outplay the area more than we can as a government and that area will be improved because it will be worth more," Lewis said.

The land is also one of the proposed sites for a new football stadium and sports complex for the Arizona Cardinals.

"That's one of the sites being considered for the national sports center," Huling said. "But that's not even a factor in our wanting to annex—it's to just slowly get them up to city standards."

Lewis said the city does view the stadium as a viable option to clean up the area.

"It's such a big if, but if (the stadium) is going to be built that makes sense. It would kill two birds with one stone."

Pearl High School student Nathan Henry is hugged by a friend after being found safe, following a shooting rampage at the 1,200-student high school in Pearl, Miss., Wednesday. Luke Woodham, 16, a student, is accused of shooting to death his ex-girlfriend and her friend as well as wounding six other students.

Disgruntled student kills two schoolmates

PEARL, Miss. — A student opened fire on schoolmates early Wednesday at Pearl High School, killing at least two people including a former girlfriend and injuring six others. The boy's mother was later found stabbed to death.

The 16-year-old sophomore, Luke Woodham, was arrested and charged with multiple counts of murder and aggravated assault.

The shooting happened about 8:10 a.m. as buses were arriving at the school. David Williams, a sophomore, said the boy walked into the commons area inside the front of the school, pulled a gun and opened fire. He was unemotional as he fired the rifle, witnesses said.

"He was shooting anybody he could find. He shot at me and hit the staircase," said Mark Wilkerson, a freshman. "I saw fragments going everywhere."

Another witness said the boy apologized to one of the students he had wounded.

Police Chief Bill Slade choked back tears as he talked about the shooting.

"This was a disgruntled girlfriend-boyfriend thing," the chief said. "We talked to the youth; he gave us a statement and his manifesto was that he felt he had been wronged."

Slade said Woodham's mother was found at the family home in Pearl, dead of stab wounds. Mary T. Woodham, 50, was believed to have died around 5 a.m.

The girlfriend was one of two students killed at the school.

Officials shut down the school, and weeping students gathered outside.

In his yearbook photo, a serious looking Woodham sports shoulder length brown hair and wire-rimmed glasses.

"He always seemed polite, like a nice guy," said Courtnei Thomas, a Pearl High senior. "It doesn't seem real that anyone like him would do this."

Nathan Henry, a freshman, said one girl was shot in the back of the head and another boy was shot in the leg as screaming students ran into classrooms and dove for cover.

"People were laying everywhere bleeding," he said. "I didn't hear cries; everybody looked dead."

Kasey King, a freshman, said after the shooting the boy talked to at least one of the wounded.

"He apologized to Jerry ... said he was sorry and was not shooting anybody in particular," King said.

He said the student then ran to another area of the school, where he was apprehended by the principal and a coach.

Tony Johnson, a senior, said he helped carry injured students to the band hall where teachers used belts and compresses to stop the bleeding until ambulances arrived.

Rhonda Marks, a spokeswoman at River Oaks Hospital, said two students had been brought into the hospital for treatment. Rankin Medical Center reported four wounded students were brought there.

Fugitive director Polanski in secret talks with prosecutors

BY MICHAEL FLEEMAN
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — An attorney for movie director Roman Polanski, who fled the United States to escape punishment for having sex with a 13-year-old girl, has been in secret talks with prosecutors about his 1970s guilty plea.

Court records buried in Polanski's 20-year-old file show that his attorney, Douglas Dalton, has twice met with Deputy District Attorney Roger Gunson in the chambers of Superior Court Judge Larry Fidler.

The documents — minute orders from Fidler — don't reveal the details of the meetings. But the KTLA Morning News reported Tuesday that arrangements were made to keep Polanski out of jail and free to continue his Hollywood career.

Gunson, the original prosecutor in the 1977 case, refused Tuesday to discuss any aspect of it.

Sandi Gibbons, spokeswoman for the district attorney's office, would not comment on the possibility of a resolution Tuesday.

"Our position has always remained the same — that Mr. Polanski must surrender," she said. "We have not agreed to any sentence."

Meetings between Dalton and Gunson took place on Dec. 5 and Jan. 31, records show.

Polanski couldn't be reached for comment. A message left on Dalton's answering machine wasn't returned.

Polanski, now 63, was indicted on six felony counts, accused of drugging and raping a girl after he contracted to photograph her for a French fashion magazine.

The director lured the girl to Jack Nicholson's home while the actor was away, prosecutors said. Polanski, at the time 42, gave her champagne and the sedative methaqualone, also known as Quaaludes, and had sex with her, prosecutors said.

If convicted, Polanski faced up to 50 years in prison. Instead, he pleaded guilty to one count of unlawful sexual intercourse with a minor and five other counts were dismissed.

American, Russian start 'Amazing' spacewalk from shuttle Atlantis

BY MICHELLE KOIDIN
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPACE CENTER, Houston — In a first for NASA, an American and a Russian took a spacewalk today outside the Atlantis-Mir complex to pick up science experiments strapped to the Russian station last year.

Astronaut Scott Parazynski and cosmonaut Vladimir Titov, both Atlantis crew members, ventured out of the space shuttle, which was docked at the aging Mir station.

Parazynski immediately reported that his tether would not retract, but Mission Control said it probably would not prevent him from doing his work.

The men were so eager to get going they floated out into the shuttle's cargo bay an hour early as the sprawling complex passed over southern Europe. With a backdrop of the Earth 250 miles below, they worked beside the 15-foot docking tunnel linking the two spaceships.

"It is amazing," Parazynski said. "I haven't even looked up yet."

They were expected to be outside in space for five hours.

The hatches between Atlantis and Mir were closed prior to the spacewalk to facilitate a shuttle rescue in the unlikely event someone's tether broke. As an extra safety measure, the men wore jet packs they could use to propel themselves back to the orbiting complex.

Meanwhile, the two Russians inside Mir hooked up a new computer brought up by Atlantis; the lengthy job of installing the software was expected to continue through the spacewalk. The station's old central computer repeatedly failed in recent weeks.

Parazynski and Titov weren't the first astronaut-cosmonaut pair to perform a spacewalk; two other such sets did so from Mir this year. But Titov became the first person from outside the United States to conduct a spacewalk in U.S. gear from a U.S. ship.

The two were to retrieve four suitcase-shaped experiment boxes that were attached to Mir's docking module by Americans last year.

samples, fibers, metals and other materials. Researchers want to know how exposure to space affected the materials, which could be used for external surfaces on the planned international space station.

Parazynski, 36, and Titov, 50, also were to fasten a funnel-shaped, 120-pound plug to the outside of the docking tunnel. Future spacewalkers might use the plug to seal the hole that would be created if they removed a Mir solar panel damaged when a cargo ship struck the station in June.

Polanski wants to return to U.S. after 20-year 'exile'

Movie director Roman Polanski wants to return to the United States after a 20-year "exile."

Why? Who knows. Perhaps he wants to make movies in Hollywood again. Perhaps the money to be had directing movies in France just isn't enough. Or perhaps the remake of Lolita, which is being released in Europe, has Polanski quaking. Art imitating life, perhaps? Lolita's subject matter hitting too close to home?

Polanski left the U.S. to flee from punishment for having sex with a 13-year-old girl. He has been lobbying with prosecutors via his attorney, Douglas Daulton, to allow him to return to Hollywood without facing any penalties.

Nothing wrong with that. He can come back to the U.S. — but he'll have to serve some form of punishment.

Statute of limitations aside, it's only fair he do so.

He did, after all, lure a girl into Jack Nicholson's home and give her champagne and Quaaludes before having sex with her. Nicholson was not at home at the time.

The Lolita remake features a middle-aged man who is seduced by a young girl.

Art imitating life? Subject matter (pedophilia) hitting too close to home?

Perhaps.

Polanski, 63, would have faced up to 50 years in prison if he were convicted. He was indicted on six felony counts, but pleaded guilty to one count of unlawful sexual intercourse with a minor. Five other counts were tossed.

He fled the country to avoid possible incarceration. A cowardly act from a man who took advantage of a teen-age girl.

So what if the woman Polanski seduced has said she doesn't mind his return? The woman, now 30, married and living in Hawaii, has had plenty of time to formulate her opinions. Sportscaster Marv Albert's accuser said she has forgiven Albert, resulting in some of Albert's charges being dropped. Still, the severity of Albert's or Polanski's crimes cannot be diminished.

Deputy District Attorney Roger Gunson, the prosecuting attorney when Polanski's case first surfaced in 1977, refuses to discuss the case. Sandi Gibbons, a spokeswoman for the district attorney's office, said their stance on Polanski's sentence remains firm.

If he wants to return to the U.S., it'll have to be conditional — he'll have to face some sort of penalty. He is, in the eyes of the law, a fugitive from justice. If he refuses to abide to any penalties, he can stay in France and make movies there.

Come on, Roman. Be a man for once. Face the penalty for your crime.

Society, not Greeks, to blame for deaths

The second fraternity-related drinking death of the school year has happened, and this time it occurred at one of the finest academic institutions in America — the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The first drinking death happened at Louisiana State University and I thought, like a lot of other people did, that this was just another instance of redneck fraternity hazing and the forcing of pledges to drink till they die. MIT is supposed to be full of the finest minds in the United States, yet one of the students at this institution drank himself into a coma, which later led to his death.

What will the outcome of this be? As always, students will write to their local college newspapers and demand that fraternities be kicked off campus. Would that really do any good? The drink-related deaths at these fraternities have been tragic; in the quest to fit in at any cost, two students have drunk themselves to death. At no time during their demise did they say "No" or just walk away. They probably would have lost their chance to be in that fraternity, but they would still be alive.

If we got rid of all the fraternities, there would still be alcohol abuse on this and every other campus in the United States. Unfortunately, alcohol and college go hand-in-hand. Some see four or five years of intoxication as a right of passage into the adult world, but it is not.

ROSS EIDE
Columnist

Others feel that the only underage drinking and alcohol abuse at colleges occurs in the Greek system, but that is also not true. For example, just look at ASU. Each fraternity has a very tough and stringent risk-management policy that is supposed to cut down on underage drinking and over-intoxication. Does it always work? No.

If a fraternity advertised a party like other organizations, they would quickly find themselves on social probation from the powers that be. It has been suggested making the Greek system go dry. Would that do any good? Probably not — the fraternities and sororities would simply choose to go off campus to have their social events.

I'm not trying to give an answer or swing one side to the other or vice versa. I am not some guy who never drinks, sitting up on a soap box and trying to preach to you what is right and what is wrong. What I am trying to do here is show you that the issue of alcohol and fraternities — and more importantly, alcohol and college students — is not an easy issue and is not going to be solved very easily. It would be really easy to look at Greeks and blame them for everything and say none of this would be happening if they were not around. That would be the easy way out, but the problem is deeper than that. We should look at the college system in general, try to figure out why alcohol abuse has become so acceptable and try to make changes there, if changes are possible.

Readers didn't 'get' cartoon

I'm writing in response to this whole brouhaha over Brian Fairrington's Sept. 29 cartoon. Of the millions and millions of editorial cartoons ever devised, this particular offering doesn't seem particularly difficult to "get." Fairrington has used the recent rapes at ASU to make an important statement concerning the moral decay of our society, especially in juvenile behavior. The Tempe police officer (the one with the "T" patch on his sleeve) sarcastically refers to the "innocent days" when juvenile criminals only engaged in drive-by shootings. The obvious point of the cartoon is "How much worse can our children's behavior get?" and "How is our system dealing with this increasing depravity?"

If either of these questions didn't come to your mind in some shape or form, then you didn't "get" it. You might want to ask a friend to help you with reading the paper intelligently next time, or take a class in the "fine art of reading the editorial cartoon."

Now make sure to notice Fairrington has used a specific current news topic to make a broader societal statement. This is a common technique in editorial cartooning. Of the numerous mistakes readers often make with a cartoon using this technique, this one is the most common: If a specific incident or issue is used to make a broader statement, then every detail of that specific incident must carry over and apply to the broader application. This is irresponsible reading. Just like every cop in America is not a big, fat white guy with glasses and a "T" patch on his sleeve, not every criminal is a juvenile

African American with a Bowie knife. The cartoonist uses labels to help the reader understand the context. For example, the youth has "ASU Rape Suspect" plastered across his chest. Is this misleading? Of course not. The suspect in this particular case is a young African-American male. Is the "T" patch on the officer's sleeve misleading? Of course not. It was the Tempe police who arrested the suspect. Even the officer's reference to "you kids," given the context of the cartoon, clearly refers to all young people, regardless of ethnicity. The whole clamor over this cartoon provides us with an example of one group (in this case the African-American community) making an issue out of a non-issue. In contrast, if all the responsible cartoon readers got just as mad about the real point of the editorial, maybe our society could really begin to deal with the scourge of juvenile crime.

In addition, shame on the State Press editors for bowing before unreasonable critics with an apology. Somehow I thought freedom of the press was more valued by the press. Unless a cartoon is blatantly false or intentionally racist (neither is true in this case), the editor needs to stand up for the cartoonist's freedom to express his or her opinion. Fortunately for me, my editors always practiced good discernment, and stood by me with spines intact when the feces hit the fan. Keep up the good work, Brian.

Backlash for cartoon 'unwarranted'

I have to admit, I do not usually take this initiative to write to the editor to express how I feel on subjects printed in the newspaper, for people are entitled to their own opinion and I would rather not be involved in an argument with people who have different beliefs.

However, a letter written to the editor (on Sept. 30) made me rather angry. Karen V. Carson, member of the Student Organization of (African American) Unity, wrote in to say how racist she believed the cartoon in Monday's State Press to be.

I, as a young African American, find her letter extremely offensive. African Americans in this day and age seem to be so caught up in the idea that everyone is racist and trying to put us down that they don't see things as they should be seen. For example, Fairrington's cartoon in Monday's paper to me did not have any racial undertones. The simple fact is that one of the suspects arrested for the rapes was black. If that is the case, would it really make sense for the cartoon to depict a white person being arrested? That would hardly be accurate.

What Ms. Carson was seeing in the cartoon was what she wanted to see and not understanding the overall meaning of the cartoon: Children today are committing more and more heinous crimes, so that a drive-by shooting looks like an innocent crime in comparison to what kids are doing now. By perceiving everything as racism in disguise, we as African Americans do nothing for our race. She was not seeing what the cartoon was really about, but rather seeing just what she wanted to see.

Perhaps if more African Americans would try not to see things as racist first, but rather see them how they are meant to be seen, we will advance as a race like we have tried for so many years to do. If she does not want African Americans to be depicted as committing crimes, perhaps her time would be better spent going out into the community and encouraging African Americans to stop doing things that put them in the spotlight. That would help our advancement more than anything. If an African American was not a suspect in the rapes that happened two weeks ago, I guarantee that the cartoon would not have included a black child, for that simply was not the point of the cartoon. The statements Ms. Carson made simply make us look bad and generate even more hostility between the races. Isn't that what we are really trying to overcome?

I think Ms. Carson's concern that the cartoon will cause backlash is unwarranted. If one reads the cartoon as it was meant to be read, they will realize that it was not meant as a blatant attack. The underlying message is the one to be concerned about, not the fact that the little boy depicted in the cartoon was black.

As an African American, I would like the editor of the State Press and Mr. Fairrington to know that I was not in the least bit offended by the cartoon printed in Monday's paper. I think that African Americans need to start realizing that not every white person in the world is out to get them and start promoting more racial unity.

CORRECTION

The Sept. 30 letter to the editor entitled "Cartoon depiction 'blatantly racist,'" signed by Karen V. Carson, represented the opinion of other members of the Student Organization of African American Unity as well.

They are: Amber Randall, Junior, Special Education; Kareem Clark, Junior, Education; Harold Branch III (H.B.), Junior; and Jeanine Bashir, Senior, Justice Studies.

The State Press regrets the oversight.

Editor should stand behind artist

Stern, you are a spineless individual. What kind of sappy "apology" was that? Good grief man! You would think your life depended on your sympathetic response to the whining of SOAAU! I haven't talked with Brian since this thing erupted, but I am wondering how he feels about you apologizing in his behalf.

There was nothing inappropriate about Fairrington's cartoon and you know it. I, like you, know Brian. And I, like you, know that he is not a racist or a bigot as you claimed he was. You cannot possibly believe that Fairrington's cartoon was aimed to offend or express racist sentiments.

You're a phony, Stern. Why don't you have some guts and stand up for the freedom of the press instead of the bellyaching of the SOAAU?

State Press indecisive, 'sheepish'

Why did the editor in chief of the State Press capitulate so easily to the Sept. 29 editorial cartoon? The State Press has made a name for itself as being an equal-opportunity offender that thrives on controversial publicity. Yet it quickly caved in in the face of racist allegations brought forth by the Student Organization of African American Unity, among others. This was not the first time the State Press may have crossed the line of responsible journalism, but it was the first time in recent memory that it sheepishly apologized for having done so. Above all be consistent. Either be offensive and stick by your decision, or salt your editorial cartoons with a pinch of discretion.

ASU alumnus supports cartoonist, blasts Press for backing down

I often miss drawing cartoons for the State Press. Brian Fairrington is lucky to have this position today and the State Press is lucky to have him. In many ways there is no greater forum for an editorial cartoonist than a university newspaper, where he or she is guaranteed a daily readership that is far more political and ideological than that of any metro paper. My cartoons still evoke an entertaining parade of fantasy (and) vitriol ... misinterpretation from a few individual Tribune readers. But only in a college setting, it seems, do these personalities have the youthful zeal and freedom of pre-employment to organize themselves into organs of collective buffoonery, as exhibited by the Sept. 30 letter from Karen V. Carson of the Student Organization of African American Unity.

It is unlikely that the ascetics of early Christendom, huddled in their hair shirts, devoted as much energy to unraveling the mysteries of the universe as Carson expended in her overwrought tea reading of Fairrington's Sept. 29 cartoon. Certainly Brian, whose work has been honored by the Association of American Editorial Cartoonists, is no doubt accustomed to such screeds. They are part of the fun of his chosen career. That some individuals in the vanguard of "identity politics" can divine the highlights of Mein Kampf from the nutritional information on a bag of Skittles will come as no surprise to most State Press readers. As such, I'm sure they accorded Carson's rant against free expression all the consideration it deserved. I only wish Fairrington's editor displayed such fortitude.

I am second to none in my admiration and respect for State Press editor Ray Stern. He is a talented, dedicated journalist and an all-around great guy. But in his mea culpa of Sept. 30, Stern seemed more concerned with re-asserting his own credentials as a foe of imaginary hate speech than in defending a subordinate journalist's right to draw a cartoon which Stern himself recognized "was not an intentional slam against any ethnic group." That some humorless cohort entranced with the contour of its collective naval believes otherwise is no reason for an editor to hang his cartoonist out to dry. Terrified of being branded with the greatest civic heresy since the Red Scare, the State Press has declared that it does, indeed, "get it." And it has debased itself in the process.

Fairrington's cartoon was not racist. And lest there be any lingering doubt in some corner of campus, Ray Stern is not a racist either. Now that that's settled, I only hope the editor's certitude in his own convictions will not require further public sacrifices.

Architecture Week events highlight state professionals

BY STACY MANN
STATE PRESS

Kite exhibitions, remodeling workshops and behind-the-scenes tours kick off the fifth annual Architecture Week presented by the American Institute of Architects.

Sponsored by the Salt River Project, Architecture Week begins Saturday with exhibitions around the state and celebrates the art of the profession.

A local architectural firm's work is on display at the ASU School of Architecture in honor of the festivities. One of the principals of the firm, Graham Morris, will lecture on the works Monday.

John Meunier, dean of the School of Architecture, said, "this (the exhibit) is a great opportunity for us to interact a bit more vividly with the professional community."

Although the events are designed to appeal to the professional architect, Architecture Week spokeswoman Doris Horn said the festivities are wonderful for the family as well.

Children can build kites at the "Let Your Creativity Soar" event at Borders Books and Music store Saturday. Local architects will be available to help the kids after 1 p.m.

This weekend at SRP's Silva House in Phoenix, Tempe residents can look at plans for the Tempe Town Lake.

"Creativity Takes Flight," a kite-building competition between local architects, will be held at the Arizona Science Center.

Renovating and remodeling will be the focus of Tuesday's events, with a workshop and lecture.

Horn said this series will be especially important for students looking to buy a home within the next few years.

Frank Lloyd Wright's apprentice, Cornelia Brierly, will host an informal talk on Wednesday to discuss some of Wright's work.

Wrapping up the week, the relationship between religion and architecture will be explored in the event "Ecclesiastical Architecture and How It Impacts Worship." The discussion about how design impacts worship will be lead by an AIA member Thursday.

Other events are taking place in Tucson throughout the week. All of the festivities are free.

Student regent questions need for Title IX upgrades

BY TARA TEICHGRAEBER
STATE PRESS

Although the U.S. Office of Civil Rights mandated ASU to upgrade women's softball and soccer facilities to meet Title IX codes, the University could be building too much, too fast, Student Regent John Platt said.

Officials at the department of intercollegiate athletics don't agree.

The Arizona Board of Regents granted ASU conceptual approval last week for the $4 million project. An architect will now be chosen to draw plans for facilities to seat 1,000 soccer fans and 1,500 softball fans.

Platt voted against it.

He said he wonders if the enlarged facilities are necessary, given the number of fans attending games for both sports. With women's soccer only in its second year, Platt suggested waiting to determine what this year's game attendance is before building the stands.

"We are doing a lot better than other universities nationwide, with a better track record (for Title IX compliance) and with obvious good faith to meet the requirements.

"I don't think we would be in violation of the spirit of Title IX to proceed in a more methodical, organized manner," said Platt, a second-year law student at ASU.

But Betsy Mosher, senior associate athletic director, said OCR warned the University five years ago that women's softball — a 30-year tradition at ASU — needed better facilities.

"We're behind the times," she said.

Mosher added that building bleachers that would only satisfy current fan attendance was impractical.

"When you build, you don't just build things to get by," Mosher said. "When you build a facility, you're building for the long-term."

While soccer is a new NCAA sport on campus, the team is already making "waves," Mosher said.

"I would guess that we can draw 1,000 to 1,500 a game," she said. "We're that good."

Those numbers may keep going up, because women's soccer is the fastest-growing sport on all competitive levels.

Softball facilities have needed improvement for a number of years, said Jill DeMichele, assistant athletic director for academic services.

"Compared to other facilities at ASU, we're not near the facility we'd like to have," DeMichele said.

Mosher said better facilities will also improve ASU's chances of recruiting top athletes.

"We are a Division I-A school, and we don't have comparable facilities to recruit other students," Mosher said. "We have to create an appealing atmosphere for fans and athletes."

Because it will take a few years before the new facilities are constructed, the fan base may be large enough to justify expanded facilities, Platt said.

Either way, better facilities likely will increase game attendance, De Michele said.

"I think our fans, including me, will look forward to a better facility," she said.

WHAT IS RAPE?

Most of us know what "stranger rape" is. A less visible problem is date or acquaintance rape. Yet rape is committed more often by an acquaintance or trusted friend of the victim than by a stranger.

Acquaintance Rape

is a category of sexual assault in which a person you know compels you to have sexual intercourse against your will. In short, it means being forced, intimidated or verbally coerced into having sexual intercourse or oral sex without consent. Consent is based on an active choice. Giving in out of fear is not consent. Going along to fit in with the group, is not consent. A person who is intoxicated cannot give consent.

What can be done to reduce the risk of acquaintance rape?

Recognize sexism and get a perspective on how women are treated in this society.
Remember that women are people, not objects.
Reexamine your assumptions about power, gender, and sex and how they can lead to sexual violence.
Respect your partner's choice to refuse sex, even if she/he has sex with you in the past.
Accept 'No' to sex without nagging, coercing or using force to go further.
Assume that you DON'T know what your partner wants—ask him/her and believe.
Don't lie or make promises to get a partner to have sex.
Avoid using alcohol or drugs, as using these substances can lead to rape.
Find out as much as you can about a new date. Let trust develop over time—NOT over night.
Be assertive and tell your partner what your sexual limits are.
Avoid secluded places.
Do not leave a party/bar with someone you have just met.
Use the buddy system when you go out. Agree to return together and stick with your agreement.
Listen to your feelings—trust yourself. If you are afraid or uncomfortable, get to a safe place quickly.

Stranger Rape is a category of sexual assault in which a person you don't know compels you to have sexual intercourse against your will.

What can be done to reduce the risk of rape by a stranger?

Keep your windows and doors locked day and night.
Do not prop open the door to your residence hall. If you see it is propped open, close and lock the door.
Do not open the door to a stranger.
Never tell a stranger you are home alone.
Park in well lighted areas. Avoid isolated parking spots.
Keep your car locked and windows up, even while driving.
Carry only what you need with you.
Keep a safe distance if a stranger asks you for help.
Have your car keys ready when approaching your car.
Scan the area when approaching your car.
Use the buddy system when walking on campus or call the safety escort service on campus (965-1515).
Use a "Blue Light" emergency phone for direct contact with the campus police.

Whether or not a victim uses these risk reduction measures, no one "asks" to be raped. No one "deserves" to be raped.

If you have experienced or witnessed sexual violence—it is never too late or too early to seek assistance.

MIT drinking sparked prior concerns

By JON MARCUS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Two students warned Massachusetts Institute of Technology's president four years ago that drinking was out of hand at some fraternities and might even kill someone. The Boston Globe reported Wednesday. A student at the prestigious school died Monday after a binge.

The two students were so incensed over their fraternity experiences they even produced a 50-page booklet, but neither it nor a letter to President Charles Vest got much response, the paper said.

Vest promised he would give their booklet "serious consideration," but declined their requests for a meeting, Kenneth Campbell, an MIT spokesman, acknowledged. He said he could not confirm the content of letters Vest had received. Vest himself was out of town Tuesday.

An MIT freshman, Scott Krueger, 18, of Orchard Park, N.Y., was found unconscious in his basement room at an MIT fraternity house surrounded by vomit and empty liquor bottles. He was in a coma for three days before he died at a hospital.

His blood alcohol level had reached 0.410 percent — five times the legal limit for drivers in Massachusetts, his parents said.

"When a student is killed or dies at an MIT fraternity, how will MIT explain its full knowledge of dangerous and illegal practices persisting unchecked over a period of years," the Globe said the two students, Scott R. Velazquez and Robert Plotnick, wrote to Vest in July 1993.

The two first complained about drinking, drugs and peer pressure at MIT fraternity houses in a year earlier and sent Vest and other administrators copies of their booklet, "Common Sense: The Truth About Pledging an MIT Fraternity."

Velazquez, 25, who received bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from MIT, said Vest and other administrators have known about problems at fraternities for years but did not address them.

"We went through some bad stuff" as fraternity pledges, "and we were kicked out for not accepting their hazing rituals and for not getting along with fraternity members," Velazquez told the newspaper Tuesday.

"We tried to see what they could do to change this, but all we got was rigmarole, and they didn't appear to do anything," he said.

Krueger was the second U.S. college student to die from an alcohol overdose this semester. In August, a student at Louisiana State University died after a night of drinking.

Boston police launched a criminal investigation and licensing authorities charged the MIT fraternity, Phi Gamma Delta, with serving alcohol to minors, allowing an alcohol overdose and other violations.

MIT suspended the fraternity from participating in campus social activities. Other MIT fraternities agreed to ban alcohol indefinitely and the school planned an alcohol education campaign.

But several students said they had been offered beer at Phi Gamma Delta during the freshman summer rush week, despite existing university regulations that banned alcohol at the event.

Officers of the MIT chapter declined to comment. Phi Gamma Delta's national headquarters said it was suspending the fraternity. Executive director Bill Martin told The New York Times the group's board of directors had already voted to ban all drinking from chapter houses as of the year 2000, adding that "eradicating the culture of alcohol among college students requires education and persuasion."

Dr. Henry Wechsler, who directs Harvard's Department of Health and Social Behavior, said fraternities that repeatedly violate alcohol policies should be shut down.

"The cop-out that many colleges use is to say, 'We don't have control of them because they're off campus,'" Wechsler said. "But there still is a name connection. And there is a person at every university in the administration who knows what's going on."

In a 1993 Harvard survey of more than 17,500 students, virtually all fraternity and sorority members said they drank.

Drug raid catches 40, including alleged Mexican kingpins

PHOENIX (AP) — Authorities have arrested 40 alleged drug smugglers, including 10 said to be kingpins, and indicted 30 others in a raid on what law enforcement said was wholly a family-based operation.

Most of those arrested were members of six major drug-smuggling organizations operating out of Mexico and California that accounted for most of the illegal drugs flowing into Arizona, authorities said following Tuesday raid, described as the largest in Phoenix history.

Authorities said a total of 71 people were indicted on 291 felony charges. They also reported confiscating about 50 weapons and about $6 million in cocaine, marijuana and methamphetamine.

Also seized were a variety of equipment — including cellular phones and scales, about 30 vehicles and about $275,000 in cash.

"These aren't small-time local guys, these are some big-time dealers. If this were a legitimate company, you'd say we got some of the board of directors," said DEA Special Agent Tom Raffanello.

Nonetheless, the raid probably will make only a temporary dent in the illegal drug trade in Arizona, Raffanello said.

"The fact is, as fast as we lock these people up, there is someone waiting to take their place," he said.

However, he added, "the price will probably go up on street sales."

All six of the families involved are Mexican, and most of their members are Mexican nationals, authorities said.

That made infiltration uncommonly difficult, Lt. Andy Anderson of the Phoenix Police Department said.

"They have family in the Mexican states of Sinaloa, Sonora and family here," Anderson said, "and they only deal with family members along the whole route."

That's typical of today's illicit drug operations, he and others added.

Because of that, raids such as Tuesday's "will become much more commonplace," said Raffanello, explaining that drug cartels increasing are cutting out middlemen and are using family in smuggling large quantities of drugs directly to their final destinations.

"An investigation into one drug family led us to another family, and then another," Anderson said. "One thing we were interested to find was that although each family was a distinct organization, there was considerable cooperation between them when the need arose."

Those arrested included Dolores

Corrales, 41, and Gabriel Labrada, 35.

Anderson said the Corrales family organization had members in several cities in the northern Mexico state of Sinaloa, in the Mexican cities of San Luis and Nogales on Arizona's border, and in metropolitan Phoenix.

Corrales "on at least one occasion" helped supply drugs to Labrada, "who supplies much of the drugs that are eventually sold in central and south Phoenix," Anderson said.

The raid came only one day after Phoenix and Glendale police found 19 independently owned stores that sold bulk quantities of over-the-counter asthma and cold remedies containing chemicals used to make methamphetamine.

In Monday's sweep, 39 people were indicted in connection with nine-month operation and charged with helping to manufacture an illegal drug.

Banged up ASU should be ready to battle in Seattle

BY ED ODEVEN
STATE PRESS

ASU senior cornerback Jason Simmons, who was sidelined with a sprained right shoulder last week, is expected to start Saturday at Washington.

Sun Devils' head coach Bruce Snyder said the final decision will be made Thursday.

Simmons isn't the only ASU player grimacing in pain. Other players have experienced various ailments as well.

"We're beat up. We're not injured, but we're beat up," Snyder said after Wednesday's practice, adding that several players, including Vince Amey (neck), Hamilton Mee (elbow) and Jeremy Staat (arm) have practiced as pain permits.

As the grueling Pac-10 season progresses, Snyder thinks the injury list will increase.

"It accumulated," he said. "And it's going to get worse, because we have Washington (U)SC and Stanford. In the next three weeks, we will have some real banged-up guys. I don't know what to do about it other than take care of them the best that you can and get them to the game."

FILL-IN FARLOW

With Michael Martin and J.R. Redmond receiving limited playing time due to nagging injuries, seldom-used, third-string tailback Marlon Farlow has stepped in and received most of the snaps in practice this week.

It's a task Snyder believes the junior should be able to handle.

"He has to be ready to play," Snyder said. "I would that he would be more ready this week. He's getting more reps. He's getting all the reps that Michael (Martin) is not."

On the season, Farlow has 18 rushes for 112 yards.

GO WITH THE FLOW

Snyder said he learned a long time ago that it's not good to promise more playing time to ballplayers, because "you just don't know how the game is going to unfold."

However, he said senior wide out Creig Spann should be getting the ball more often.

"I want to get him the ball more because he's very fast, and he's made catches when we've thrown them to him," Snyder said.

"A year ago against this same team, Keith Poole didn't catch one ball. He went into that game thinking he was going to have eight. It may unfold where (Creig) will get a lot of balls thrown out of him. It may not."

ASU athletic department will give excess Rose Bowl booty to school's libraries

FROM STAFF REPORTS

ASU's Intercollegiate Athletic Department is forwarding $50,000 to the University Library System, the department announced Wednesday.

The presentation of the proceeds will take place just before kickoff of the ASU-USC game on Oct. 11 at Sun Devil Stadium.

"Our intent is for these resources to be utilized by the Dean of the University Libraries in a way that most improves the University Library System," ASU athletic director Kevin White said. "The $50,000 is a result of excess Rose Bowl residual income. To be sure, the entire ASU Athletics community feels a strong commitment to supporting one of the finest library's in the country, wherein all Sun Devil students are incredibly well served.

ASU University Libraries has already distinguished itself as one of the top 35 academic research libraries in the United States and Canada.

"As an avid reader, I know the value a library can provide any community," Snyder said. "Just as a first-class playing facility is vital to our athletes' success, a first-class library is vital to their success as students. The ASU community is blessed with both.

Members of the Student Athlete Advisory Board and ASU head coaches will make the presentation together prior to the game.

ASU/UW game could decide Pac-10

Forget about UofA. In-state rival indeed, but they're small potatoes. USC? Baby stuff. Washington State? It's like worrying about fighting your sister when your big brother wants to kick your butt. Miami? Yesterday's Hurricanes are today's drizzle.

SCOTT LEWIS
Sports Columnist

This Saturday, ASU's biggest football game of the year will be played when the No. 10 Washington Huskies (2-1, 0-0 Pac-10) host the No. 25 ASU Sun Devils (3-1,0-0) at 3:30 p.m. in Husky Stadium.

Last year, ASU played the Huskies in the season opener at Sun Devil Stadium in front of 73,379 fans. ASU was trailing early in the third quarter 21-14. Behind Jake "the Snake" Plummer, the Sun Devils ran off 28 unanswered points to take a seemingly insurmountable 42-21 lead. But the dynamic left arm of then-freshman Brock Huard led Washington to three touchdowns in 3:47 and the Huskies came roaring back to tie the game 42-42.

But, in what would become their theme for the season, Plummer led the Sun Devils down field, setting up Robert Nycz's game-winning 38-yard field goal with two seconds remaining for the 45-42 victory. Both teams would go undefeated through the rest of their respective Pac-10 schedules. As we all know by now, ASU would end up playing for Roses in the ESPY's Game of the Year. But the Huskies, thanks to us, finished second in the conference and ended up chasing their tails in the Holiday Bowl.

Which brings us to this week's "Game of the Year." Yes, the phrase "Game of the Year" is grossly overused. But there is validity in this one.

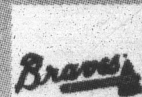

Like last year, this matchup could decide the Pac-10. Unlike last year, Washington is the favorite. Like last year, this game will be the first of many tough conference games (sorry, but Oregon State close game or not, doesn't count as tough. Tough creampuff maybe). Unlike last year, the Pac-10, from top to bottom, may be the toughest conference in football. If ASU beats Washington, only to lose the rest of their games, then true, this game means nothing. But if the underdog Sun Devils are able beat the Huskies, then the table is set for another championship.

In addition, further intrigue lies in the revenge factor. While ASU lost eight players to the 1997 NFL draft, Washington returns not only Huard, but preseason All-Americans, linebacker Jason Chorak and offensive lineman Benji Olson. In all, the Huskies return 16 starters from last season's 9-3 squad. Don't think for a second the Huskies aren't chomping at the bit over this chance for redemption.

As for ASU, this game should answer many of the questions regarding its 1997 campaign. Can Ryan Kealy provide the presence needed to win the big games? Can the defense remain dominant now that the competition has increased? Can anyone stop J.R. Redmond besides head coach Bruce Snyder? One

Husky's linebacker Chorak rare breed in college ball

BY MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

Loyalty is a rare virtue in college football these days.

If a player achieves All-American status as an underclassman, his next step is undoubtedly a leap for NFL millions.

In linebacker Jason Chorak, however, Washington possesses one of the few exceptions.

A 6-foot-4, 255 pound linebacker, Chorak racked up nearly as many post-season awards last year as sacks. His 14.5 quarterback knock downs were No. 1 the Pac-10.

He was named a first-team All-American by The Football News and The Sporting News and third-team All-American by the Associated Press. Chorak was also a first-team All-Pac-10 member.

In a league that included defensive stand-outs Darrell Russell, the No. 2 pick in the NFL draft, and Derrick Rodgers, an AP first team All-American and current starter for the Miami Dolphins, Chorak was voted the Pac-10's Defensive Player of the Year by league's coaches and the conference MVP.

So, why did he stay?

"I've basically done it all with being an All-American and defensive player of the Pac-10," the senior said. "I would like to get to a Rose Bowl, though. That's probably the only thing left for me to accomplish football wise."

Chorak came to Washington in 1993. If this year's team doesn't make it to Pasadena for New Year's Day, his class will be the first not to participate in a Rose Bowl in the 1990s.

This fact weighs heavily on the 23-year-old's mind.

"It's been tough because that's our place, that's our home," said Chorak, whose parents hail from Croatia. "We expect to be there. When we play UCLA down there, we feel comfortable. If we don't get to the Rose Bowl, I think it would be a major shock to us. I'm so tight with this class, I didn't want to be the first one to jump off the ship."

The No. 10 Huskies (2-1) begin their blitz for the Rose Bowl Saturday when they entertain No. 25 ASU (3-1) at 3:30 p.m. on Fox Sports Net.

Despite being favored by 11, Chorak feels if the Huskies don't stop the run, it could be a much tighter game than people think.

"J.R. Redmond (is our biggest challenge)," he said. "He's one of the best backs in the country. If their offensive line can make some holes for him, he might just have a big day. We've got to stop the running game."

ASU head coach Bruce Snyder said stopping Chorak will be equally as challenging for the Sun Devils.

"Jason Chorak is Washington's answer to Derrick Rodgers of a year ago," Snyder said. "He's a pass rushing specialist, very quick, loves football. I think their entire defensive unit enjoys when the other team has to pass. That's what they like, so they can tee off and he's one of them."

Having Chorak this season has given the Huskies a new dimension, Washington head coach Jim Lambright said.

"Number one in choosing to not go to the NFL, he gave us a lot of preseason credibility as far as people hyping the program," Lambright said. "Jason has been a leader during our whole off-season and is right now getting lots of attention by offenses and as a result, you've seen a little more productivity on the other side from (defensive end) Chris Campbell."

"He's got a true defensive personality where he gives you 110% all the time. Tremendous winning level of intensity and as a result is a really fine leader for you because of example. He has a great work ethic."

Chorak said his parents have been his inspiration in life.

"I've worked for everything that I've had and that came from my parents," Chorak said. "My dad came over here with not too much money in his pocket. Now he's a pretty wealthy man. He achieved his goals in life by hard work. He passed that on to me and my brothers."

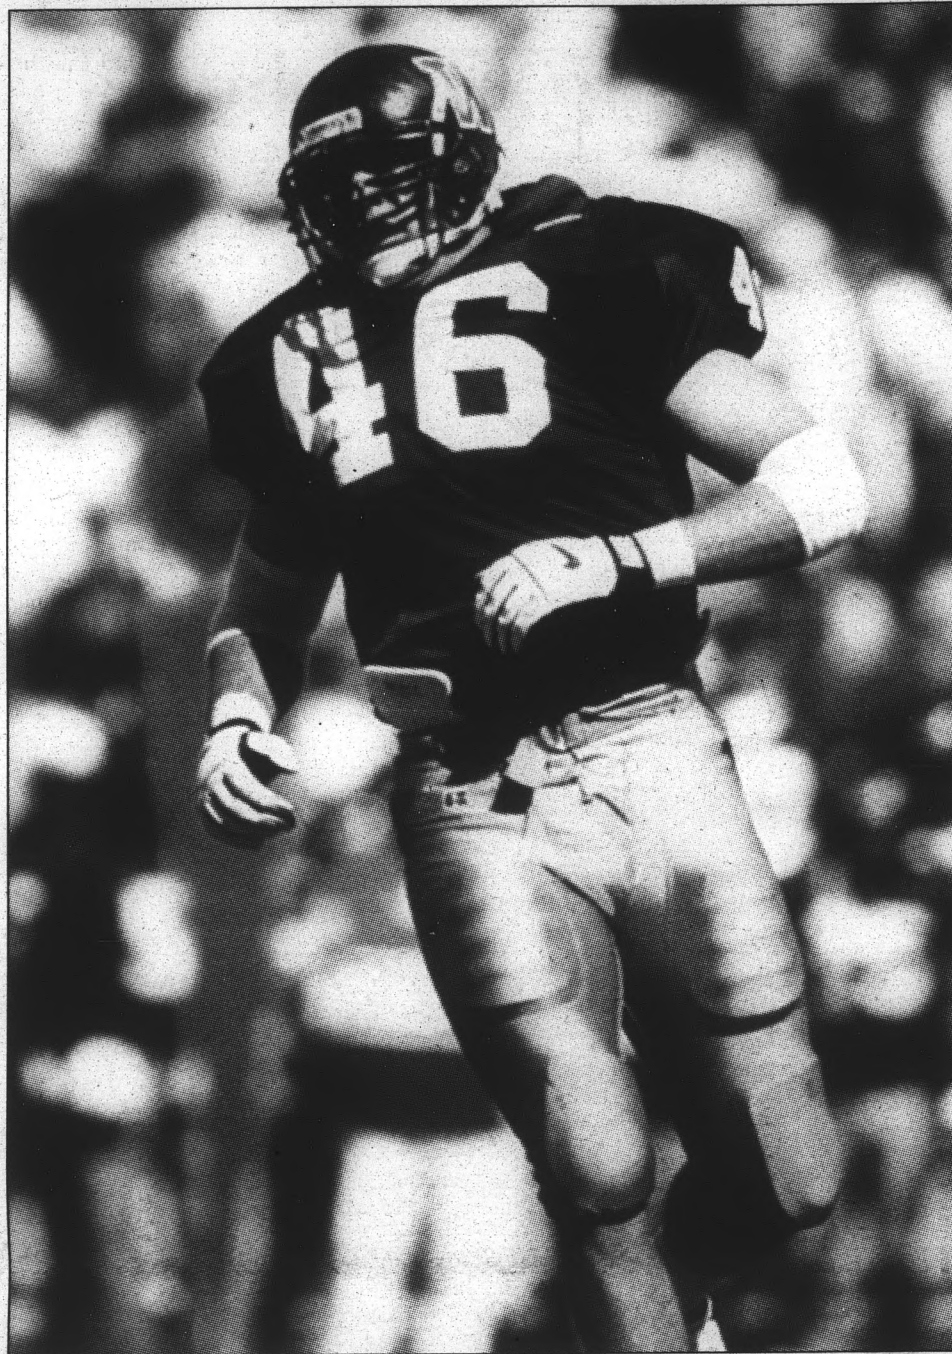

On the field, Chorak looks up to the best.

"Lawrence Taylor has been my idol ever since I was a little kid," he said. "We both get off the ball real well, we're both exciting players. He has other things in his forte that I might not have. We have some similarities but differences as well."

While Chorak won't admit to any weaknesses, he's well aware of his strengths.

"I'd say my strength is (that) my motor is

Final swing produces yet another Marlins' victory

BY STEVEN WINE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — The game came down to a play at the plate that never happened, because the throw from center field caromed off the back of the mound, then high into in the air as 41,283 fans cheered their team's good luck.

For the Florida Marlins, that's the way the ball bounces, especially at home, especially in the ninth inning, and especially in this playoff series against the San Francisco Giants.

The lucky hop allowed Gary Sheffield to score the winning run uncontested Wednesday, and the Marlins beat San Francisco with their final swing for the second game in a row, 7-6.

Sheffield came home from second on Moises Alou's single with no outs in the ninth.

"We caught a break," Florida's Bobby Bonilla said. "I've never the ball bounce quite so high."

The Marlins took a 2-0 lead in the first playoff series in franchise history. They can advance to the NL Championship Series by winning Game 3 Friday at San Francisco.

"Certainly our backs are to the wall," Giants manager Dusty Baker said. "We're not out of it, but those were two tough games there."

Edgar Renteria's bases-loaded, two-out single in the ninth against Roberto Hernandez beat the Giants in Game 1, 2-1. Hernandez was the victim again Wednesday, taking the loss.

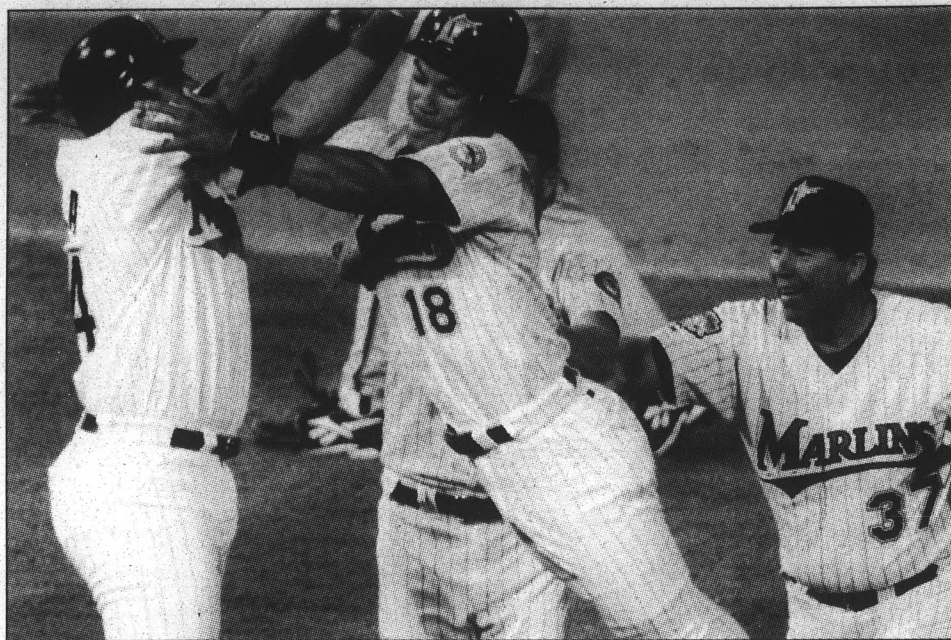

Florida has won in its final at-bat 26 times, most in the majors, and the Marlins are 27-4 at home in one-run games. They came from behind to win for the 45th time, erasing deficits of 1-0, 3-2 and 4-3.

Sheffield led off the bottom of the ninth with a single and caught Hernandez by surprise, stealing second without a throw. Bonilla walked, and Alou lined a breaking pitch for a single.

Sheffield got a late jump and center fielder Dante Powell had a play at home, but his throw never got there.

"I thought we had him," Powell said. "It's a game of inches."

Sheffield slide across the plate, then jumped into the arms of jubilant teammates.

M's Big Unit loses control as Orioles dominate first game

BY JIM COUR
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE — The Baltimore Orioles proved their regular-season mastery over Randy Johnson was the real deal. This time, it was a big defeat for the Big Unit.

If they can beat Seattle's ace so easily, as Mike Mussina and his teammates did Wednesday night, the Mariners are serious jeopardy.

The Orioles, wire-to-wire champions of the AL East, took advantage of Johnson's wildness to beat the 20-game winner 9-3 Wednesday night in the opener of their division series.

"I don't know, maybe I've got a phobia or something about the Orioles," Johnson said.

"Tell all the Baltimore Orioles to go and put on another jersey," he said.

Johnson lost for only the fifth time this season, three of them to Baltimore. Facing a lineup stacked with righties — Rafael Palmeiro, Roberto Alomar and B.J. Surhoff started on the bench — he fell to 3-8 overall against the Orioles.

"His control was off today," manager Lou Piniella said. "He was behind on the count to quite a few hitters. Randy wasn't sharp. It was just one of those days."

"They handle the bat well and they can put the ball in play," he said. "They really didn't have any big strikeout hitters in their lineup tonight."

A crowd of 59,579, the largest ever to watch baseball at the Kingdome, saw Johnson's playoff flop last 100 pitches.

In five innings, he gave up five runs on seven hits and four walks, with only three strikeouts.

"I was happy that the Big Unit got all the press before the game," Orioles manager Davey Johnson said. "It was like Mike Mussina was like chopped liver. I thought that was the greatest thing we had going for us."

The Mariners have to be wondering if the Orioles have their number, too. Cal Ripken, who finished the season in a 6-for-36 slump, had three hits as Baltimore improved to 8-4 against Seattle this year.

"My guys hit some good pitches and they laid off some pretty good pitches," Davey Johnson said. "I've seen Randy throw very good, but he hasn't thrown that good against us."

Atlanta Braves Greg Colbrunn reacts to his fifth inning two RBI single against the Houston Astros on Wednesday.

Braves 'like their odds' after beating Astros, 13-3

BY PAUL NEWBERRY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Braves and the NL championship series. They have become inexorably linked, much like bacon and eggs or Simon and Garfunkel.

The division series, supposed to provide another obstacle when it was instituted three years ago, has become little more than a nuisance for the Braves.

Atlanta routed the Houston Astros 13-3 Wednesday to move within a victory of its sixth straight league championship series. C'mon, did you really expect a change in this October ritual?

"We're up 2-0 and we've got John Smoltz, a big-game pitcher, on the mound for Game 3," third baseman Chipper Jones said. "I like our odds."

The Braves keep saying the best-of-5 division playoffs are the scariest part of the postseason, but they've hardly played like it. Over the past three years, Atlanta is 8-1 in the short series.

"I hope we have the killer instinct," said Tom Glavine, the winning pitcher Wednesday. "In any series, you want to get it over with as soon as possible. You don't want to give the other team any confidence."

The Astros are playing like a team that was satisfied just making it to the postseason for the first time since 1986. Mike Hampton had eight walks Wednesday and "The Killer Bs" have become "The Killer Zs," snoozing through the series with just one hit.

Not even manager Larry Dierker sounds optimistic about his team's chances heading back to the Astrodome to finish out the series. Heck, the Braves had a better record on the road (51-30) than they did at home (50-31).

"It's going to be hard to sweep the Braves," Dierker said. "It looked like we were jittery, pressing, trying too hard, because everyone knew we needed to get one win here."

In 11 regular-season games between the Braves and Astros, the margin of victory was never more than two runs — a trend that continued in Game 1 of the division series when Atlanta won 2-1 behind Greg Maddux.

There wasn't any drama in Game 2. Hampton, who had only two walks in 17 innings during his final two starts of the regular season, walked four in the first four innings and got worse after getting two outs in the fifth.

With the score 3-all, he threw 16 balls in an 18-pitch span, resulting in consecutive walks to Chipper Jones, Fred McGriff, Javy Lopez and Andruw Jones, forcing home the go-ahead run. Hampton, who threw only 38 strikes in 87 pitches, was replaced by Mike Magnante, who gave up a two-run single to pinch-hitter Greg Colbrunn that made it 6-3.

Colbrunn's hit ended an 0-for-25 postseason slump by Atlanta pinch-hitters, dating back to the '95 World Series.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by Frances Drake Thursday, October 2, 1997 ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Singles could be bitten by the love bug and contemplate marriage. Married folks find renewed romance and commitment. Socialize without going overboard. TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Something new of an intellectual nature appeals to you. Creative work is inspired. A family member has something important to say, so be sure you're listening. GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You add to your circle of friends and acquaintances. One new friend is refreshingly different from anyone you've ever known. On the job, guard against absent-mindedness. CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your career takes a turn toward prosperity and success. You're right to question the motives of a friend who is being manipulative. LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) An elderly relative who keeps dwelling on the past tries your patience. Be more understanding if you can. An unexpected business opportunity comes your way. VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Unexpected expenses arise in connection with your home. Be careful you don't let things slide on the job. Don't waste your energy trying to convert an opinionated co-worker. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You're being overly judgmental and harsh in your dealings with a co-worker, whom you should get to know better. Couples make spur-of-the-moment plans.
