Students run to halt cancer

BY GENOA SIBOLD-COHN
STATE PRESS

When Ashley Stone was in her teens, she knew her risk for breast cancer was higher than other young women because her aunt and her great-grandmother were treated for the disease.

Then, at age 16, Stone found a lump in her own breast. Fortunately, it turned out to be benign.

Stone, now 21, finds that concern for her personal health and the well-being of her family has increased her activism in the fight against breast cancer.

She and 150 other ASU sorority women will hit the streets of downtown Phoenix Sunday in the Race for the Cure, the largest race in Arizona. The participating sororities include Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Phi, Kappa Alpha Theta and Kappa Kappa Gamma.

The Race for the Cure, which includes a 5K run, 5K walk and a 1-mile fun run, will benefit the Susan G. Korman Foundation, a private organization dedicated to eradicating breast cancer as a life-threatening disease.

The Foundation expects 10,000 participants at the race, nearly doubling the 5,650 participants from last year's event, said Connie Combs, chair of Race for the Cure.

Held during National Breast Cancer Month, the mission of the 5th annual Phoenix race is to raise awareness of breast cancer and funding for research and education.

"The Greek System was just my stepping stone since I am in a sorority (Alpha Chi Omega)," Stone said. "One hundred and fifty (people) is actually small to me, so I hope that we can increase campus involvement next year."

Stone, a senior broadcasting major and one of six head volunteers for the race, said there is a need to increase awareness among college age women because catching the disease early eliminates development later in life.

"Women aren't aware that it can hit them when they are young," Stone said. "There needs to be more awareness earlier."

She said young women need to recognize the importance of self-examinations, examinations by physicians and when to have a mammogram. Although women in their 40s are

Libraries mull new projects after $50,000 gift from ICA

BY SHARAN K. GILL
STATE PRESS

The Sun Devil football team has a new wide receiver: The ASU library system.

The Intercollegiate Athletic Department is donating $50,000 of excess revenue from the Rose Bowl to the library in a presentation before kickoff at the ASU-USC game on Saturday.

Tom Collins, associate athletic director for corporate and community affairs, said the department had been thinking about doing something with the library for the last four to five months. They just found out exactly how much excess income there was about two weeks ago.

"We wanted to use the money in a way that would benefit all of our students and give back to the campus, so we designated Oct. 11th as University Library Day," he said.

Sherrie Schmidt, dean of university libraries, said she is excited to be receiving the gift for the library because it is the largest donation she has seen in her seven years with ASU.

"The library receives a budget from the state and funding from the provost's office but this money will be used on projects that have been on the back burner," she said.

The library is looking into two projects, digital full-text subscription and preservation of materials, such as maps and sheet music, that could not be preserved before. The full-text subscription will make current journals in the libraries accessible to students from any computer on campus without actually having to go

Homeless advocate threatens to sue city of Tempe for $50 million

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

If the city of Tempe attempts to enforce its "urban camping" ordinance, it will be sued for $50 million, a homeless advocate said.

Jayhawk Arnoldi, claiming to represent Tempe's homeless, served the notice of claim at Thursday's city council meeting. A notice of claim informs the city that a lawsuit will be filed unless an agreement is reached.

In the claim, Arnoldi states "the homeless persons of Tempe now state that they are and will continue to camp in the parks ... in protest of the new urban camping law."

According to the document, any punishment of the homeless will result in a $50 million suit being filed.

The "urban camping" ordinance bans camping in any public area without a permit, and was designed to "deal with the excessive number of people who gather in the downtown area and beg and intimidate," Tempe Mayor Neil Giuliano said in an earlier State Press interview.

"It's a concerted effort to ensure we're providing a safe environment downtown, while making sure we're not violating anyone's constitutional rights," he added.

Arnoldi, who is not homeless, claims it is, in fact, a violation of the homeless' rights.

"The homeless feel it is a discrimination against them," he said. "They're feeling it is a violation of their right to camp."

At Thursday's meeting, Giuliano said, "We have obviously done some research ... and believe this is an ordinance needed for Tempe."

Giuliano added the claim would be referred to legal counsel.

most susceptible, Stone said women need to be aware of breast cancer as early as possible.

There is not only a concern for the health of young women, but also for the risk of family members with the disease.

"Awareness is not only for the individual, but it's how to deal with having family with breast cancer," Stone said. "At the college level, it affects families as well."

With hope of finding a cure, Stone said she will continue her work with Race for the Cure for a lifetime.

"Breast cancer is something I am so into because it hit my family and I would do something to put a stop to it," Stone said. "It could it affect me."

to the library.

"We are trying to get a handle of what we can do that would make a difference," Schmidt said. "I think to do both our future and our past is really important to make the statement that the libraries are going to move forward in making available electronic resources to the students."

"At the same time, we are going to preserve those materials that have been in our trust for some time."

Jill Demichele, assistant athletics director, said the library is a terrific community resource.

"Student athletes spend a lot of time in the classroom and library and this donation illustrates that we support them," she said. "Last year, 45 percent of the student athletes attended the scholar athletes luncheon and that says something."

Collins said he hoped the athletic department would be able to donate to the library on a regular basis.

Schmidt said, "When Tom asked me if I could make it to the game for the presentation, I said sure. I would go anywhere for money for this library."

So far, the city isn't even enforcing the law. Since the ordinance took effect Sept. 21, Tempe police have not issued citations, only warnings, Tempe police spokesman Sgt. Toby Dyas said. The police will begin issuing citations soon, he said, but a date has not been set.

Arnoldi said he would drop the claim if the city would repeal the urban camping law or if $5 million would be set aside to start and operate a homeless shelter in Tempe.

Arnoldi, former publisher of the Grapevine newspaper, once threatened to sue the city of Phoenix, claiming they were harassing the homeless workers who sold his paper on street corners.

Hurricane Pauline rakes Acapulco, kills 45

BY MARK STEVENSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ACAPULCO, Mexico — Hurricane Pauline pounded Mexico's southwestern Pacific coast today with 100 mph winds and torrential rains, creating churning rivers of mud, water and debris that raced down the main streets of Acapulco. More than 45 people died, authorities said.

Many of the victims were caught in muddy torrents that swept hundreds of cars, huge tree trunks and tons of earth down the mountains behind Acapulco toward the sea. The once-glittering resort, a city of 2.9 million, was turned into a disaster zone, with hundreds of homes wrecked by floods.

Gov. Angel Aguirre reported more than 40 deaths in Acapulco and at least five others elsewhere in the state of Guerrero, where the resort city is located.

Tourists huddled in darkened hotels and hundreds of locals sought refuge in emergency shelters. Ropes were strung across downtown intersections to help people across torrents of roaring water. The bodies of at least five people were seen floating away in the powerful currents.

Towering waves carved up most of the city's formerly pristine beaches. Boulders the size of cars were swept down the hills and cars were flipped over like scattered toys, some with their lights still on, their doors under water. A coastal highway skirting the famed beaches became a raging river, where one man's body lay face up in mud.

Elilasio Garcia, 22, said he and other residents of an apartment building fled during the night as Pauline roared past. "We left when we felt the building tremble because of the rocks the river was throwing at the foundation," he said.

A hurricane warning was extended this morning hundreds of miles up Mexico's southwestern coast, from Acapulco to Puerto Vallarta, as satellite images showed Pauline moving roughly parallel to the shore, the U.S. Hurricane Center in Miami reported.

The storm began raking Acapulco before dawn today as it moved north up the coast toward the beach resorts of Zihuatanejo, Manzanillo and Puerto Vallarta. At 2 p.m. EDT, Pauline was near Zihuatanejo and moving west-northwest up the coast at 15 mph, the hurricane center said.

President Ernesto Zedillo, on a state visit to Germany, ordered military and civil defense workers into the hard-hit states of Oaxaca and Chiapas, the official Notimex news agency reported. Telephone communication to much of the coast was cut after Pauline began pummeling the shore late Wednesday.

Rosa Lopez cries in front of her house, behind a pile of debris left from an overflowing river in Huatulco Thursday. As the rains stopped Thursday residents began to dig their town out of the mud and debris left when Hurricane Pauline passed nearby. Pauline moved on with 100 mph winds and torrential rains, creating fast-churning rivers of mud, water and debris that raced down the main streets of Acapulco.

Reports gave widely varying numbers of dead and missing. Red Cross spokesman Marco Antonio Santiago, reached by telephone in Acapulco, said the relief agency counted five dead but at least 50 people were reported missing. "We've got rain coming down, mudslides blocking roads. Houses have fallen, walls are down," he said.

In Puerto Angel, where Pauline first rumbled ashore on Wednesday, many houses that weren't made of concrete were washed away, said Federico Velazquez, a federal highway police official in radio contact with that city.

Nurse says ignoring pictures of injured children will be hard

BY STEVEN K. PAULSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — A Mennonite questioned as a prospective juror in the second Oklahoma City bombing trial said Thursday she could not impose the death penalty on anyone, regardless of how serious a crime was committed.

The Littleton resident also said it would be difficult for her to even decide whether Terry Nichols was guilty.

"I know it has to be done, but I really have difficulty placing myself in the role of judgment," she said. "If I take my faith strongly, I will be a good citizen. But I don't know how this all fits in with sitting on a jury."

The woman, a retired teacher, told U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch she liked to settle disputes with mediation, much like she used to handle arguments between students. Mennonites are members of a Protestant group that is nonviolent and opposes military service.

"I guess I have tried myself to not be judgmental ...," she said. "I'm probably in an ivory tower but it seems children really do want to work out their problems."

On Wednesday, a registered nurse said it would be hard for her to put the images of injured children out of her mind if she's chosen to decide the charges against Nichols.

"I would, I would try and I think I could try and put away the vivid pictures. I don't know that I can keep them out completely," said the woman, who works at a Denver hospital.

She was among six people questioned Wednesday, Day 8 of jury selection for Nichols' trial.

Tempers flared Wednesday when Matsch blocked attempts by defense attorney Ron Woods to ask when potential jurors might impose the death penalty.

Woods stalked back to his seat after Matsch refused to let him ask a prospective juror if the man thought the death penalty would be appropriate in cases such as premeditated mass murder.

Matsch said the man had already answered similar questions posed by himself and prosecutors, and that prompted Woods to ask: "We're not to ask questions about the death penalty?"

Matsch said he could ask about the death penalty, but not about specific circumstances.

Later, Nichols' lead attorney, Michael Tigar, told Matsch the defense pursued the questions because the man "looked like he might be a life-for-a-life person."

About 45 prospective jurors have been questioned.

Jews gear up for holy day's festivities by swinging chickens to atone for sins

BY MELISSA MCCORD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Swinging live chickens over their heads to symbolically cast away their sins, Jews prepared Thursday for Yom Kippur, the holiest day on the Jewish calendar.

Devout Jews traditionally perform the ritual in the runup to Yom Kippur, or Day of Atonement, which is marked by fasting and prayer. Yom Kippur begins at sundown Friday and ends at sundown Saturday.

In Jerusalem's ultra-Orthodox Mea Shearim neighborhood, men in thin plastic aprons sold squawking chickens from hundreds of colored crates stacked in the streets. Men with long black coats, black hats, beards and sidelocks rocked back and forth as they recited blessings.

"On Yom Kippur, you're supposed to dispose of your sins," said one man, who only gave his first name, Eli, as he swung a chicken above his head.

His wife Huvy scolded him for holding the chicken by the wings. "You're supposed to hold it here," she said, pointing to the bird's legs, which were bound with string.

After the blessing, the chickens were slaughtered with a razor-sharp knife. Men in rubber boots hosed down the narrow street to get rid of the blood and feathers.

Many Jews, including those belonging to other streams of Orthodoxy, reject the practice as barbaric and based on superstition. They note that rabbis have ruled that cash — or, recently, even credit cards — may be used in the atonement ritual.

STATE PRESS Boos & Bravos

Boo — To Rep. Don Aldridge, R-Lake Havasu City, for putting the Legislature through such turmoil. Aldridge stepped down as speaker of the Arizona House this week, and lawmakers are having hissy fits over who's going to be the next speaker, when they should be concentrating on the important issues of their upcoming fall session. None of this should be happening because Aldridge clearly knew his health was not up to the demanding task of being speaker when he was selected for the job in November. He lied in January when he said he had a broken toe (when he really had to have his left leg amputated below the knee), and he lied when he said he'd be able to perform his duties. We hope Aldridge got what he wanted out of his tumultuous 10-month tenure as speaker, because Arizonans sure didn't.

Bravo — To this week's revelation that more freshmen were retained this year than ever before. Seventy-five percent of freshmen from last year came back as sophomores this year. It looks like more students than ever are feeling at home here at ASU, and we don't blame them.

Boo — To midterms. Those things sneak up on ya.

Bravo — To those who put flowers at the site of Monday's accident. Four or five bouquets were laying there on Thursday. It's nice to know how many people care.

Bravo — To President Bill Clinton for facing up to his hearing problem and finally deciding on the hearing aids his doctors had been telling him to wear for years. True, he could have bitten the bullet earlier, but admitting he had a problem and then dealing with it is inspiration to thousands of baby boomers who are putting hearing aids off themselves. By the time Generation X gets old enough for hearing aids — and those who frequent nightclubs and concerts are going to need them — they'll be as common and as accepted as eyeglasses.

Boo — To the National Park Service for building a $333,000 outhouse in Pennsylvania. Aren't there road and facility repairs that need to be done immediately in most U.S. parks? This kind of extravagance isn't needed. People who frequent the outdoors are usually hardy souls who don't mind a foul smell in an inexpensive outhouse. The real beauty in national parks is the land, not the development on the land.

Bravo — To the Hubble Space Telescope for continuing to reveal how awesome and wondrous our universe is. This week it discovered a star in our own galaxy, about 133 quadrillion miles away, which outputs more energy in six seconds than our sun does in an entire year. Why is it there?

Non-offensive language benefits all

I have always been politically correct — or so I thought.

I sympathize with Native Americans when they insist that certain geographical landmarks such as Squaw Valley be renamed because of their offensive nomenclature. I am equally disturbed, though not surprised, that names like "Lynchburg" and "Burning Cross Creek" survive.

But then, I was enlightened. Someone told me what true political correctness really means — namely, not to offend anybody at any cost at any time. Therefore we should, for instance, only use "inclusive, non-sexist language," always referring to people as she and he, women and men, etc.

While I took issue with that position at first, I had a sudden change of heart. I realized that I am among the people (that is, including women, men, transsexuals, aliens and even my uncle Hubert) who would profit most from such a radical policy.

Think about it! Nobody could call me an "ugly atheist" anymore. I would simply be another "aesthetically-deficient, denominational non-compliant."

No more fat-man jokes, either! I am just "vertically challenged" for my weight, OK? And, though I hide my age well, I am "advanced in years" enough to know that today's folly usually becomes tomorrow's unchallenged wisdom.

Just once, I don't want to be left behind grumbling and complaining, while wo-/mankind is moving on to a better, kinder place, where self concepts can be inflated in perfect harmony.

In this brave new world, there would be no traffic lights exclusively depicting a distinctly male pedestrian, no drive-through ATMs without Braille-coded buttons. Men would don the coveted white and orange and finally show their true colors at Hooters.

Tweaking the bias-laden language still in use would

MATTHIAS
WALTERSCHEIDT
Columnist

take us there in a jiffy. Granted, catering to the sensitivities of the hypersensitive can be tricky, but I have taken it upon myself to advance this noble vocation:

- The repeated use of "oral sex" in recent publications (Marv Albert, Paula Jones) is deplorable and frivolous. Why not simply refer to "the use of the widest facial opening and connected appendages for primarily stimulating, non-digestive purposes?"

- "Grandfather clock" is a textbook example of chauvinist, phallic symbolism. It should be changed to "indoor high-rise chronometer."

- "Stupidity" is another word that must be purged from our vocabulary in favor of "situational ill-advisedness."

- Likewise, "mistake" and "error" carry strong negative connotations. So, if you bomb your next midterm, it should be because your answers did not "fall within normative solution parameters."

Of course, these are only a few examples, but — in the best Emily Post tradition — I plan to write a comprehensive guide to modern political correctness, which will also be available on compact disc, audio and video cassette, overhead...

Heck, I'll even give half a percent of my earnings to a selected charity, such as the Home for Battered Egos and the Shrinking Violet Preservation Society.

Yes, I do realize there will be those naysayers who still hang on to that outdated ideal of critical thought and progress through controversy. They better shut up and keep in mind what blessings revised etiquette would bestow upon society: more paperwork, larger dictionaries and — most auspiciously — new grounds for litigation.

"And then, Your Honor, the defendant proceeded to criticize my client as being 'mistaken.' He even called his/her effort 'lackluster.' It is only to be expected that my client couldn't put up with that kind of mental anguish for much longer."

Guilty as charged.

Courtesy, manners are concepts that society needs

Some say the world will end in fire and some say in ice, but these days it seems a terminal case of bad manners is more likely to do us in.

ASU should offer a class titled Politeness 101 for all those who have forgotten what it means to live in a civil society. Students could become familiar with the basics, including saying "Thank you," holding a door open and learning a better way of dealing with the crowd in the Memorial Union at lunch time, a way other than pushing the person in front of you.

Whether we are talking about that guy who cuts everyone off in traffic or the other guy who is flipping him the bird, the erosion of our civility in everyday life cannot be denied.

Daytime talk shows heavily load our society down with sex, cheating, familial discord and other topics that once were characteristic of the country-music industry.

The 1980s was a decade in which pop psychiatrists and talk-show hosts stressed the importance of expressing yourself openly. The belief prevailed that if you pursued your own desires wholeheartedly, you would be happy.

People seeking to feel good about themselves carelessly said hurtful things in the name of self interest. The "Me" decade fits Ambrose Bierce's definition of an egotist: One who thinks more of himself than of me.

More than ever, social life is a performance in which, like the gentry of colonial America, we pay heed to appearance, albeit with dress-for-success apparel or fashions from the Gap.

Over the past generation, we have destroyed any semblance of social control, which is an important part of what makes a society. Those who have noticed the dilemma have turned toward formal laws as a remedy.

Invasion of privacy, slander and other libel cases fill our judicial system. Universities have chosen to lead the misguided movement to write "hate speech" limitations into law prohibiting people from uttering things that would trouble others.

No wonder we have trouble when we try to enforce by law common courtesies that used to be assured by the simple concept of manners.

Manners taught people always to be considerate of the other person, so even serious disagreements could be discussed in a polite voice.

Public airwaves should be opened to uncensored comment, but freedom doesn't imply that TV networks are excused from exercising minimum standards of taste.

What we have now is a recipe for a rude society. Manners presume that one wants to be sensitive to others' feelings. Manners are unnecessary if one simply doesn't care.

I'll admit the crisis of politeness doesn't seem on par with balancing the trade deficit, unemployment, racial prejudice and any other problem whose particulars have been described on the front page. But there's a connection: any progress we make in improving politeness will have a direct impact on the above issues.

From "shock jocks" on the airwaves to shootings on the highways, the signs that civility in America is crumbling assail us. It is not only individuals who suffer. A democracy, more than any other society, is built on mutual trust and cooperation among strangers, on the street as well as in the meeting hall. Creating and sustaining such trust was an important public commitment of America's early years — one that we seem increasingly unable to make.

Smokers have rights to preserve

I was very angry as well as confused at M. Bruning's letter, "Designate non-smoking outdoor areas at ASU" (Oct. 6). I am a non-smoker myself but how can this person say she/he believes in "equal rights to freedom" and then go off about excluding smokers from...well everywhere? I understand and appreciate the smokers respecting students in non-smoking areas but if they can't smoke outside, where are they supposed to smoke? If someone has that much of a problem smelling smoke for less than a second then they should just hold their breath until they reach their "smoke-free environment!"

I am sorry to say it but there are going to be smokers no matter what laws you enforce on them. And even though I hate cigarettes as much as the next non-smoker, when you start taking away people's rights, the issue is no longer about smoke but about "equal rights to freedom to choose what they do and how they do it."

Drivers trained to handle tricky traffic

This is (in) response to Mike Millette's article entitled "Take care: University Drive has its share of traffic dangers, threats to student safety" which (appeared) in the State Press on Oct. 8. I would like to say that I am shocked and disappointed by Millette's ignorance. Millette should realize, being an EMT, that when emergency services "roll hot," lights and sirens on, time is a crucial factor between life and death. I am not involved in emergency services, but I do know that ... the operators of those vehicles are trained extensively to react to every possible situation that the operator will encounter when responding to an emergency.

I think what Millette is objecting to is the fact that EMS uses the median, more commonly known as the "suicide lane," when responding to an emergency. The use of this lane is done because that lane provides EMS with a non-congested lane of travel and also because most drivers in this state do not realize that (it) is a law to pull all the way over to the right-hand lane of traffic and stop when EMS is responding to an emergency. Although this practice seems dangerous, rest assured that the operator of that fire engine, police car or ambulance is rigorously trained to handle that vehicle in any type of situation.

Non-smoker's demands 'childish'

I must comment on the letter submitted by M. Bruning in the Oct. 6 issue of State Press. Bruning brought up an interesting issue, but I find some of the complaints to be a bit extreme. Some designated non-smoking areas immediate to surrounding exits/entrances to buildings I can fathom, but whining that "picnic tables, clearly made for anyone to sit in the shade, but almost always taken over by one or two ... smokers," is just plain childish. I say if the smoker is there first, well there isn't much I can do about it. Now what I would do if I was sitting in such a spot and was suddenly joined by a smoker who is about to light one up? Well, I would ask them to kindly leave or to not smoke while sharing the shade.

This sort of issue is one of infringement of rights, and how much limitations can we put on smokers? Yes, it is a health risk to everyone directly and indirectly involved, but those who choose to partake in this habit still have the right of choice as well. Maybe more smokers should consider those around them and not "abuse" such freedoms by not smoking in areas of high traffic as much so that people who are extremely concerned, such as Bruning, won't resort to such measures as suggesting limiting the freedom of smokers.

Either way, M. Bruning must be aware that "clean air" is practically non-existent in the Valley. If this is your main concern, maybe you should be more concerned with the pollution created by motor vehicles.

Drinking-related deaths leave fraternities vulnerable to blame

It makes me disheartened to see the columnists of the State Press go off half-cocked on how bad fraternities are and how everything that has to do about drinking and alcohol is directly blamed on — or is completely the fault of — fraternities. It is ... more than tragic that there have been two, yes two, alcohol-related deaths in only a few months' time. And, yes, both of the victims were members in a social fraternity at their universities. But does that mean everyone who drinks too much, once, has to be a fraternity guy and that, in general, only fraternity guys drink alcohol? What myself and plenty of the Greek members will tell you is that we are just a punching bag for all media opinions.

Unfortunately in today's age, there is a lot of underage drinking and alcohol abuse going on, as well as a lot of binge drinking. As some of these examples will show you, unfortunately it can also go to the point beyond common sense when people drive while intoxicated. You could say that almost everyone knows someone with a fake I.D. or who can get their hands on alcohol while being under the legal drinking age. Now, I ask you, does everyone who has a fake I.D. or who drinks underage (belong to) a fraternity? Or they have been forced by the Greek system into doing so?

The fact of the matter is that every single person in the Greek system is more aware and is more concerned about all of these incidents. Fraternal "brothers" have a common bond with anyone in any fraternity at any college. Why is a 21-year-old fraternity member drinking a beer in his room viewed differently than a 21-year-old drinking in his apartment? When you say, "that fraternities as a whole need to place less importance on alcohol and drinking," I am saying to you, take off those one-dimensional glasses and look at the fraternal system as a whole. Not only is there a strict approach taken toward academics and involvement in the University throughout your attendance, (but) the Greek system takes time out to participate in philanthropies, charity organizations and activities. We like to think that it is advantageous to join the Greek system, giving you a much more broad spectrum (in which) to meet people, make many new and close, tight friends and we initiate an added sense of trust and responsibility academically, financially and voluntarily. That's right, we do not just sit around all day in our togas drinking beer after beer after beer. Just once, it would be nice to see an article in the State Press about how a successful philanthropy over the weekend raised so many hundreds of dollars for a great cause, instead of "Wow, some fraternity guys got drunk again," "Oh no, look out, that fraternity guy is drinking over there" or "Someone's gonna get hurt pretty soon!" which I am sure is a common feeling by at least some people out there, because of an already slanderous stereotype.

National literacy program spawns ASU volunteerism

BY STACY MANN
STATE PRESS

Twenty ASU students spend their afternoons making mobiles, playing with puppets and reading children's books.

It's not all fun and games; these students work for the America Reads Program, which helps Tempe grade-school children learn to read.

The program began this semester after President Clinton's State of the Union address challenged Americans to improve children's literacy levels. Clinton called for colleges to be a driving force behind this cause.

ASU stepped up to the plate.

"The hardest part was working out the logistics to get the program started," said Billie Enz, an ASU professor and reading educator who helped develop the curriculum. "After that, it has been wonderful."

The program works in conjunction with the Tempe after-school program KidZone and the City of Tempe. The 20 ASU tutors meet with kids from kindergarten through third grade enrolled in KidZone.

The interactive lessons aren't focused on fundamentals, rather the fun behind the reading.

"First, we needed good books," said Dawn Enz, who planned the curriculum for the kindergarten and first-grade children. "We not only engage them in the book, but we try to make them drawn to it again."

Dawn Enz and her partner Doreen Bardsley made a list of 40 books and planned lessons around them.

"It's not just reading, but fun activities with the kids," Jane Romatzke, director of KidZone, said. "We can build a whole week around the book."

Activities include making puppets of the kids' favorite characters, creating story mobiles and singing songs about the books.

"We tried to build in some choice so that the tutors can adjust the lessons to their students," Dawn Enz said. "Tutors know what their little guys like."

Billie Enz said it is very important to make the kids feel like reading is something they want to do.

Romatzke said children as well as the parents want the program to continue.

"Feedback from the parents has been that they really appreciate the program," Romatzke said.

The tutors enjoy the program as well, Dawn Enz said.

"The tutors have been pretty excited about what they have done," she said. "They always come back full of ideas."

The tutors are at KidZone Monday through Thursday and meet with one another on Fridays. Dawn Enz and Bardsley use Fridays to prepare the tutors for the following week.

"We really enjoy working with the kids and the kids enjoy having time to read," James Hurwitz, America Reads coordinator, said. "It is such a good cause to help children read."

Tempe to consider expansion of city-employee insurance

BY BRIAN ANDERSON
STATE PRESS

Attempting to head off potential insurance problems that occurred in Phoenix when two officers were killed in traffic accidents, a Tempe City Council member is exploring expansion of a city-employee insurance policy.

Councilwoman Carol Smith said she is looking to expand death and dismemberment insurance to cover commuting city employees.

"We're trying to be proactive and not reactive," Smith said. "Hopefully we can pass the proposal."

Shirley Kanode, human resources director for Tempe, said a proposal from the Portland, Maine-based Union Mutual Life Insurance Company would provide $200,000 in coverage to protect employees who commute to work.

The additional insurance would cover all 1,900 city employees and comes with a price tag of $9,000 annually — a relatively small amount of money, Smith said.

Tempe employees have city-financed death and dismemberment insurance, but it does not cover commuters.

Smith's request for information comes on the heels of heated debate about insurance settlements for two Phoenix police officers' families.

Officer Scott Smith was killed in a January traffic accident as he was commuting to work.

Officer Tim Landers died in April when a motorist traveling on the Squaw Peak Parkway hopped a median, hitting Landers' car head-on as he drove home around 1:30 a.m.

Phoenix police insurers refused to pay Smith and Landers' death policy because the officers were not on duty when they were killed.

Critics of the insurance company said the men would not have been driving, and therefore killed, if they were not commuting to and from work.

Smith said there has been some discussion among city employees about the added insurance, and support for the proposal should be strong.

2 teens indicted in gang-related beating death on reservation

PHOENIX (AP) — Two teen-agers have been charged with first-degree murder in federal court for beating and kicking a 15-year-old boy to death in 1995 on the Salt River Indian Reservation.

Mark Anthony Case, 17, and Nicholas Pablo, 18, were indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday, U.S. Attorney Janet Napolitano announced in a news release. Authorities said the killing was apparently gang-related.

The two are accused in the Dec. 23, 1995 attack on Johnny M. James, who was beaten and kicked in the front yard of a home on the reservation east of Scottsdale, said Sgt. Karl Auerbach of the Salt River tribal police. James died three days later "after lingering in a coma after the beating," Napolitano said.

Auerbach said the killing was believed to be part of a crime spree by members of the East Side Crips Rolling 30s street gang, which terrorized the reservation for two years before prosecutors indicted several gang members on organized crime charges. Two Crips are serving life sentences and two more are serving more than 30 years in prison each after being convicted in connection with a murder, car thefts and drug sales.

Witnesses said James' assailants said, "This is for the Rolling 30s" when they stomped on him and dumped the unconscious boy near a canal, Auerbach said. A witness at the federal organized crime trial said Pablo also was present during another gang-related killing, Auerbach said

- A student reported that someone broke into his vehicle while it was parked in Lot 59 and removed items.

The Tempe police reported the following incidents on Thursday:

- Two officers were assaulted while responding to a call about a man chucking rocks at cars in the 1400 block of south McClintock Drive. The suspect reportedly kicked officers John Holdinsky and Joe Bather in the legs and attempted to punch them in the face. After the suspect was maced, he continued to struggle until he was "taken down" and subdued. Bather suffered a minor leg injury. The suspect and Holdinsky were not injured. He was booked into Tempe City Jail on two counts of aggravated assault and one count of disorderly conduct from the original call.
- Two men allegedly robbed a Blimpies sandwich shop in the 2700 block of west Southern Avenue. The first suspect reportedly flashed a "simulated weapon" while he demanded money from the register. When the clerk refused, a second suspect walked behind the counter, pushed the clerk out of the way and removed the cash drawer which contained the loot. Both suspects then fled westbound with the drawer and the money. Police dogs searched the area, but turned up nothing. The first suspect is a thin 15-year-old African American man, about 5-feet-7-inches tall with short, black hair. He was last seen wearing a black-and-white baseball shirt and dark shorts. The second suspect is a thin 32-year-old African American man, 5-feet-11-inches tall with "frizzy" black hair. He was last seen wearing a long-sleeved, cream-colored shirt and dark shorts.

Real Stories From the State Press Police Scanner:

- At about 5 p.m. on Wednesday, someone called the fire department to inform them that a woman had locked herself in her sewing room. Rumors of a quilt-making scam could not be immediately substantiated.
- At about 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday, a tenant of an apartment complex called police to tell them that his landlord tried to strangle him. Talk about penalties for not paying your rent on time.

2 Arkansas men nabbed in connection with old Valley murder

PHOENIX (AP) — Two Arkansas men, including the ex-husband of the victim, have been arrested in connection with the murder of a woman in Phoenix 12 years ago.

John Dickinson of Marmaduke, Ark., and Harold Speer of Greenway, Ark., were arrested in the death of Speer's ex-wife, Mary Carolyn Speer, said Sgt. Mike Torres, a police spokesman.

Ms. Speer, 32, was found shot in her car in east Phoenix on July 18, 1985, and died a short time later. She had just moved to the Phoenix area after her divorce from Harold Speer.

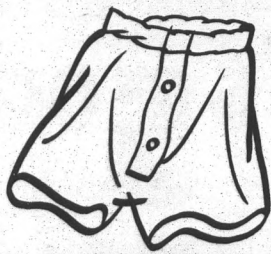

Dickinson is charged with first-degree murder. Speer is charged with conspiracy to commit first-degree murder. Torres said Speer allegedly hired Dickinson to kill his ex-wife.

Both men were arrested Thursday and were awaiting extradition to Arizona, officials said.

Searchers scouring rural area for missing plane, 9 people

BY MARTHA BELLISLE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTROSE, Colo. — Search parties were sent into the woods and mountains of southwestern Colorado Thursday to look for a chartered plane that vanished while carrying eight employees of the federal Bureau of Reclamation and a pilot to a meeting in Arizona.

Rescue workers were focusing on a rugged, snow-covered forest about 23 miles south of Montrose, where radar tracks indicated the single-engine Cessna 208 may have gone down Wednesday.

"The challenge is there's a lot of thick brush and pine trees and low visibility," said U.S. Air Force Capt. Leslie Pratt, who was assisting the Civil Air Patrol directing the search.

The plane, owned by Scenic Airlines Inc. of Arizona, left Montrose airport Wednesday around 8 a.m. for a 90-minute flight to Page, Ariz., where most of the passengers on board worked.

The plane never reached its destination, and a search began around midday.

Dozens of volunteers combed the ground until dark, but found nothing, Montrose County Sheriff Gene Hill said. Overnight temperatures fell to the high 20s and three inches of snow covered the ground from a storm earlier this week, he said.

Rescuers resumed searching at daybreak Thursday. Ten planes focused on an area known as the Uncompahgre Plateau, where elevations reach as high as 10,000 feet. Radar tracks indicated the plane may have gone down there.

Six other planes searched routes between Montrose and Page, Ariz. Those paths would have taken the aircraft over landscape that includes high mountains, plateaus and dense forest.

Thursday afternoon, Pratt was hopeful those on board would be found alive.

The Bureau of Reclamation identified the employees as William H. Duncan, Glen Canyon Field Division manager; Jeff Waite, manager of the dam's power plant; Delphina Holliman, a computer assistant; Walt Kaltmaier, a computer specialist; Catrina Wall, computer specialist; and Jim Bloomfield, electrical engineer, all of the Page, Ariz. office.

Also on board were Al Inman, manager of the Cure Canti field division and Jon Nees, safety and occupational health specialist, both of the Montrose office.

At agency offices throughout the region, workers were trying to remain optimistic their co-workers would be found alive, spokeswoman Susan Iams said.

"This is a great shock to us, but we're trying to keep our spirits up," Iams said. "We're hoping for a positive outcome."

The employees were returning to Arizona for a meeting, Iams said. They arrived in Montrose Tuesday for another meeting and were scheduled to return that night, but bad weather delayed the flight until Wednesday.

The pilot was identified as Robert Armstrong, 63, of Phoenix, who has been flying with Scenic Airlines for 10 years, said the company's spokeswoman, Irit Langness.

Armstrong neither filed a flight plan with the Federal Aviation Administration nor checked with the agency for a weather report before departing, said spokesman Mitch Barker; neither are required.

In September, three Arizona residents were killed and a fourth injured in the crash of a light plane that also had taken off from Montrose and went down about 18 miles southwest of the city.

Authorities said that plane was flying too low to the ground and tried unsuccessfully to bank away from the plateau.

Quadriplegic student protests NAU order for 24-hour caregiver

FLAGSTAFF (AP) — Ben Sutcliffe says Northern Arizona University is denying him his personal space.

The school requires that Sutcliffe, a quadriplegic with cerebral palsy, have 24-hour attendant care. Sutcliffe, a freshman, says he wants the freedom to be left alone at certain times.

"This policy denies my civil rights as a citizen of the United States who has reached the age of majority and as such has the legal right to choose the level and degree of care and supervision that I may need or desire," he wrote in a grievance filed Sept. 22.

"The attendant care service is not provided by or paid for by the University, therefore they cannot dictate the level of supervision that I may need or desire in residence or in classrooms."

Marsha Fields, assistant director for NAU's Testing and Counseling Center and the head of the Disability Support Services, wouldn't comment on Sutcliffe's case because the Americans with Disabilities Act has strict requirements regarding privacy.

But she said the university's policies are intended to keep all students safe.

"With any of our students we try to find a balance that allows them to grow into adults, but at the same time making sure there's a safety net in place," she said.

The matter has been sent to NAU's legal counsel.

According to a memo written by Fields, an NAU lawyer said that the 24-hour required "attendance be continuous until reasonably reliable and accessible messaging-emergency signaling systems are in place to cover short periods of time during which you are unattended."

Sutcliffe, who is from Fort Defiance, Ariz., said officials told him the cost of such emergency devices would not be picked up by the university.

Sutcliffe said he feels inappropriately singled out.

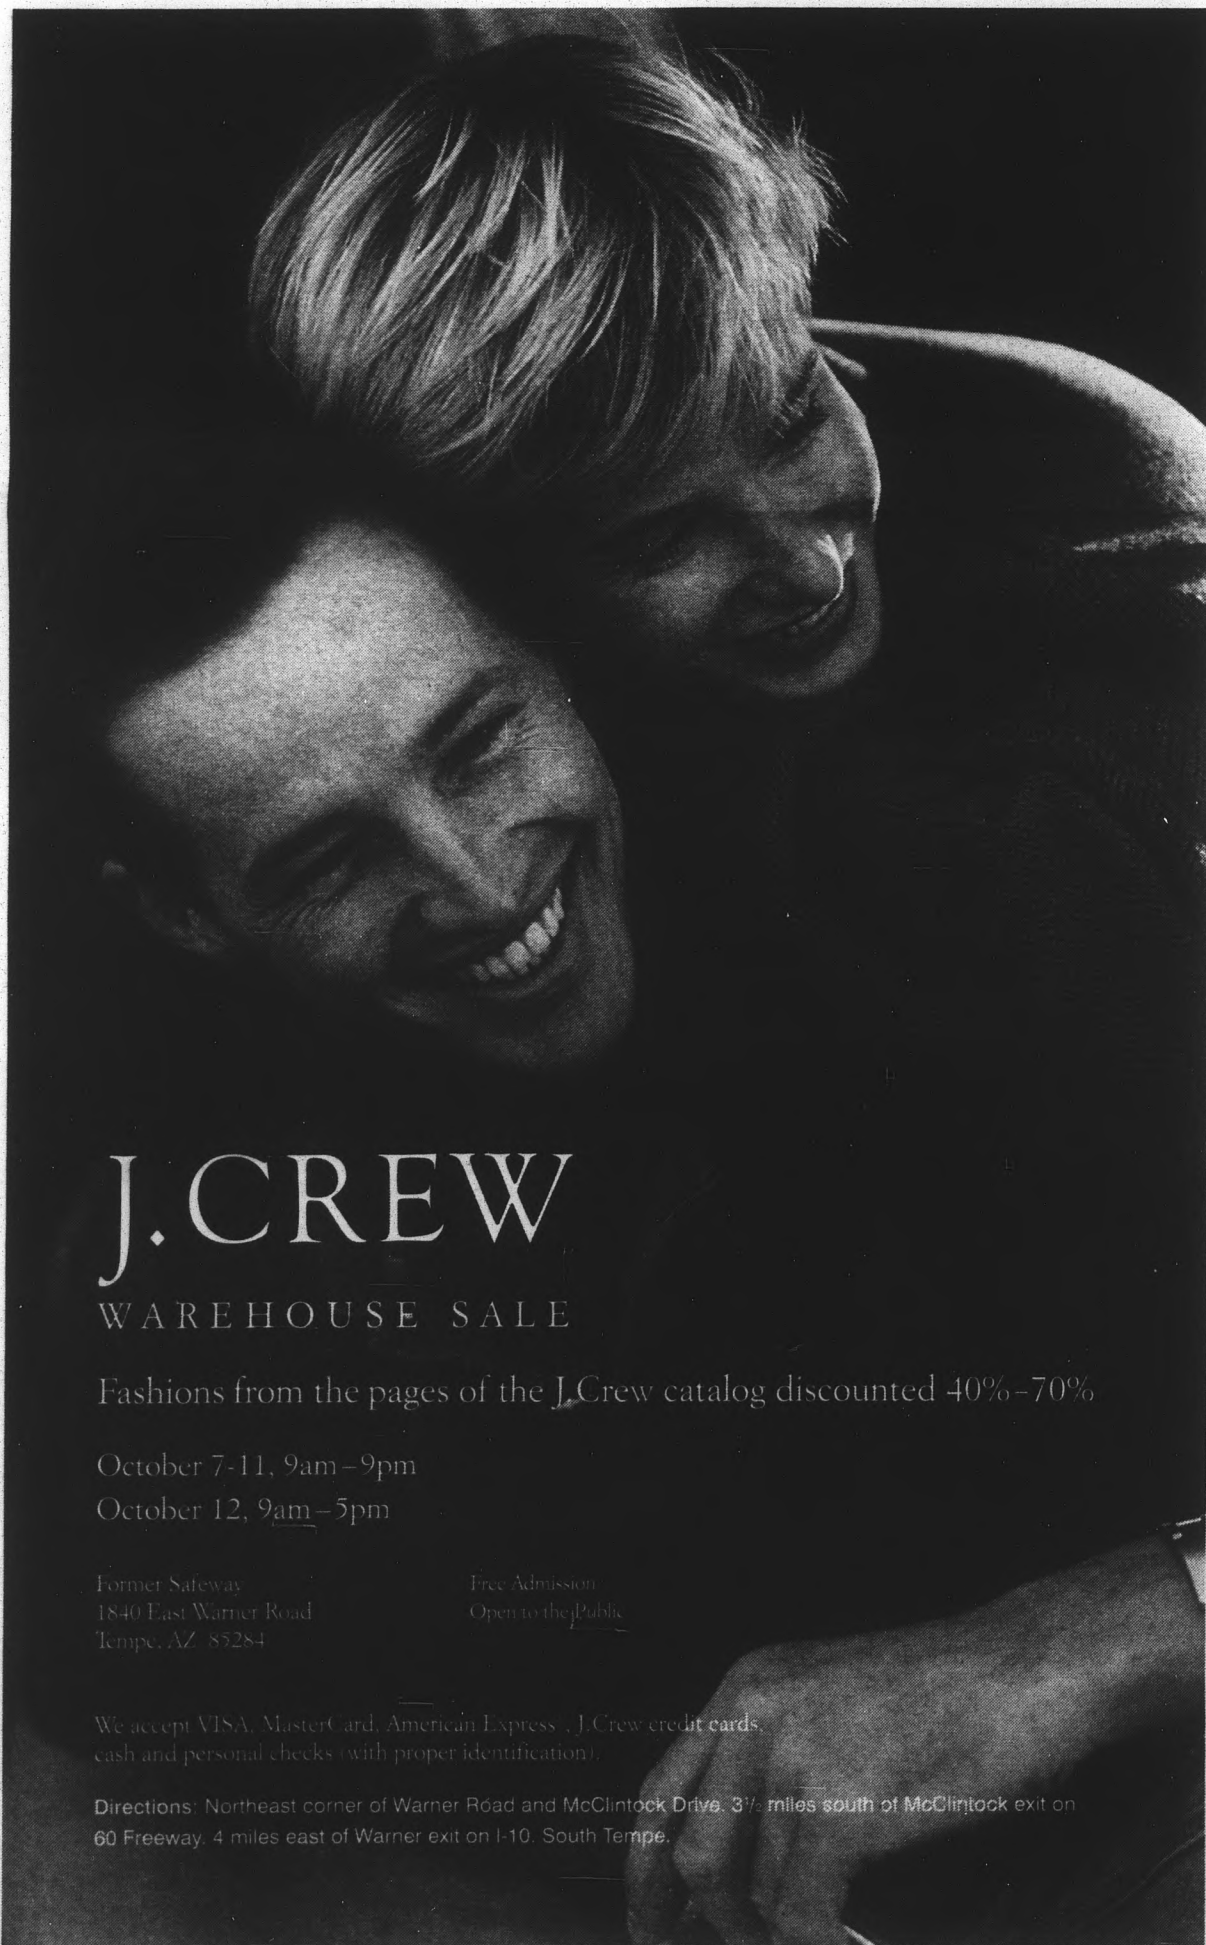

"I am at no greater risk of injury than any other student on campus, in fact I may even be at less risk than many people since I cannot trip and fall," he wrote in his grievance.

The 24-hour rule means that Sutcliffe can neither be alone nor have a friend visit his dorm room without an attendant present. He said it bothers him that the university thinks he needs a chaperone at all times.

"Most important to me is my need for privacy and alone time," he wrote.

In an interview Monday with The Arizona Daily Sun, Sutcliffe used a computer hooked up to an electronic device to communicate. It took him several minutes to complete some sentences. His attendant takes class notes for him.

When asked how he felt about being the only disabled student to be under a 24-hour watch, he typed, "Not right."

Being 'the best' not good enough for 1-4 Cards

BY JOSH DEFAMIO
STATE PRESS

Every NFL team strives to be called the best.

But what about being known as the best 1-4 team in NFL history?

"To me, that's more of an insult than anything," linebacker Eric Hill said. "I hear it all the time. People say, 'ya'll could easily be 5-0.' And I tell them 'Stop it right there.'"

"We're not in this business for moral victories, or for confidence," fullback Larry Centers said. "(those) really don't count."

But that's exactly what many fans are saying about the team that has outplayed most of its opponents, yet sits in last place, three games under .500.

"When you're playing with so many guys," Centers said. "And when you're playing such good competition week in and week out, you have to go forward. And look back only to learn from the mistakes that you made."

Actually, the Cardinals don't have much time to look back. The New York Giants (3-3), the Cardinals' biggest rival, travel to town for a Sunday afternoon game. The Giants, the preseason pick to be doormats of the division, are only one-half game out of first.

Tobin gives much of the credit to Giants rookie head coach Jim Fassel, who served as the offensive coordinator for the Cardinals last season.

"I wouldn't use the word 'surprise,'" Tobin said. "(head coach) Jim (Fassel) went in there with a fresh. And Jim's a very, very good coach. He's been successful wherever he's been. They beat Dallas at home, and they won their opening ball game (vs. Philadelphia). They're 2-0 in our division, which is usually how to measure whether you're going to end up getting into the playoffs."

But Fassel, who has repeatedly been praised for his offensive creativity, has been unable to revive a Giant offense that ranks dead last in the NFL. To make matters worse, the Giants will be without their starting quarterback, and starting running back.

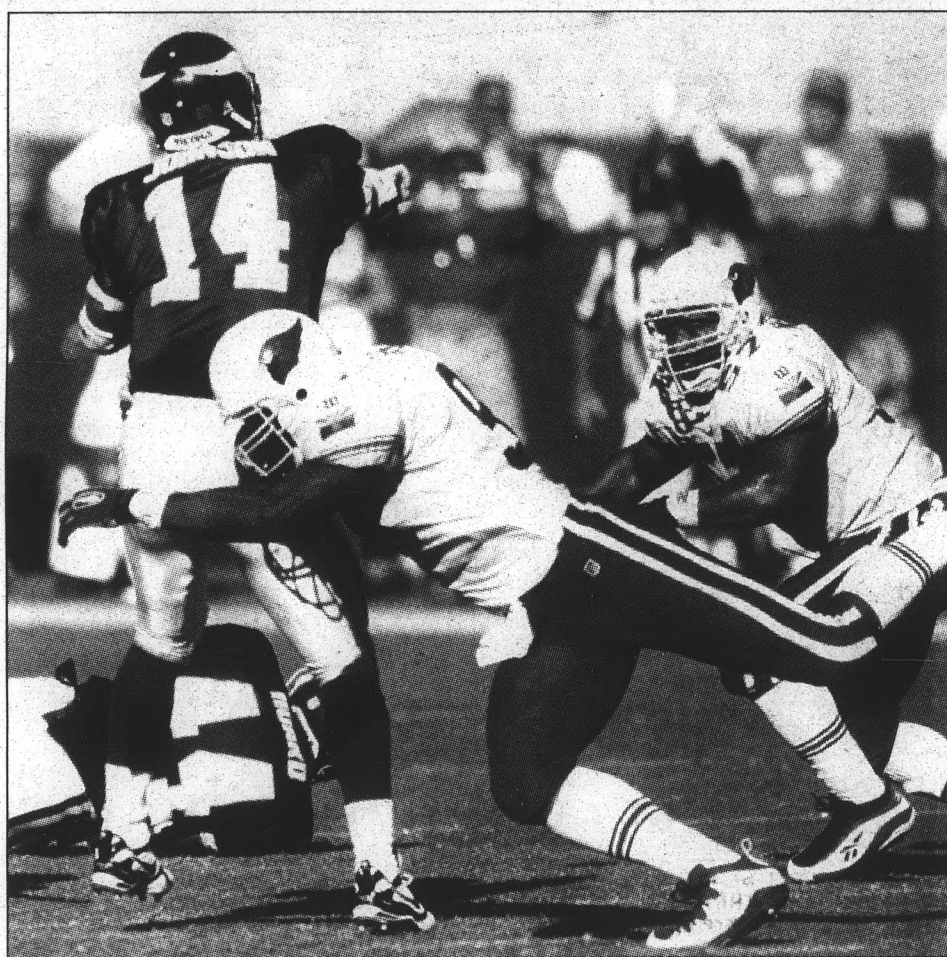

Second-year pro Danny Kanell gets the nod at quarterback in place of the injured Dave Brown. And Tyrone Wheatley, a former first round pick, will take over for rookie Tiki Barber at tailback.

Tobin, who has watched his team shut down the NFL's top running duo (Tampa Bay's Mike Alstott and Warrick Dunn) and receiving duo (Minnesota's Cris Carter and Jake Reed), has a perfect formula to keep

"I guess you point at our record," Tobin said. "And if we don't win this ball game, and get on the winning track, the season's going to slip away."

Most of the Cardinals players agree with Tobin that this is a pivotal contest. A loss would send the team to 1-5 and three games out of first, as co-leaders Washington and Dallas play each other on Monday night. However, most players remain confident that the problems of the team's past few games can stay in the past.

"Tobin has been a guy that has, so far, held this team together," Centers said. "He's been pretty level-headed through this whole ordeal. My dad told me when I was a young kid, that a steady drop of rain will break a block of concrete."

Sun Devil women's tennis team begins season with Classic

BY LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

This weekend the ASU women's tennis team heads for the courts to compete in the first of its fall tournaments with the ASU/Miss Karen's Fall Classic today through Sunday at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

The tournament starts at 8:30 a.m. Friday and Saturday. Finals matches begin at 9 a.m. Sunday.

There will be 32 individuals and 16 doubles teams participating.

"They'll be a lot of good players from good schools," senior Reka Cseresnyes said. "It's going to be a good start, I'm really looking forward to it. I think everybody's ready to play."

ASU brings a different team to the court this year, but one laden with experience. Returnees for the Sun Devils include seniors Cseresnyes and Stephanie Lansdorp, juniors Katy Propstra, Alison Nash and Torey Pratt, sophomore Kerry Giardino and newcomers, freshmen Faye DeVera and Celena McCoury.

The matchups for play at 8:30 a.m. for the Sun Devils include Pratt against Long Beach State's Jing Chen and Nash versus Anna Pampoulova of Kansas State. Seeded player, Cseresnyes will play the winner of the game between UofA's Joanna Buczkowska and California's Stephanie Tibbits in the second round.

At 10 a.m. Giardino will go up against San Diego's Mirja Wallmark, Lansdorp will take on Sara Arquilla of Long Beach State, DeVera will play Pepperdine's Nadine Rastetter and McCoury will play Lena Pilipchak of Kansas State.

The team has been practicing together since early September and head coach Sheila McInerney thinks this tournament will give the girls a good idea of where they stand.

"It's really more than anything to get your feet wet, so we know what to work on and where they're at," McInerney said. "The competition will be tough."

In this tournament Propstra will be the only Sun Devil that will not play, as she is coming off of elbow surgery. The doubles teams for ASU will be Cseresnyes and McCoury, Lansdorp and Nash and Giardino and DeVera.

McInerney said that both of the freshmen are good and that McCoury is a strong hitter and server, while DeVera is more of a groundstroker.

DeVera is a California product from Villa Park. McCoury is from Canton, Ohio.

Top-player Cseresnyes thinks that this first tournament should be a good experience for the newcomers.

"I think its going to be a good test for them, but they've been playing well and working hard," Cseresnyes said.

Last season, the Sun Devils finished No. 7 nationally, third in the Pac-10 South. At the NCAA Championships ASU beat Mississippi State 5-1, before falling to Florida in the quarterfinals.

"I thought we had a great year, last year," McInerney said. "Now it's a new year, new team, new kids, new chemistry and I'm looking forward to it."

Reinvigorated ASU soccer team ends homestand with Montana

Jeremy Hein/State Press

Midfielder Antoinette Marjanovic and the rest of the ASU women's soccer team end their six-game homestand on Sunday against Montana. Game time is set for 11 a.m. at Sun Devil Soccer Field.

BY RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

Rejuvenated after a few days off and some solid practices, the ASU women's soccer team looks to get back on track for its last non-conference game of the season.

The Sun Devils (7-3, 1-0 Pac-10) host Montana (6-5) at 11 a. m. on Sunday. The Grizzlies defeated ASU 4-1 last season in Missoula.

ASU head coach Terri Patraw expects the Grizzlies to be a strong squad.

"I think Montana will be the best team we've played (this year)," she said. "The most dangerous team we've played."

Montana head coach Betsy Duerksen said she expects ASU to be a bigger challenge than last season.

"Arizona State is young, but they're doing well for a second-year program," the fourth-year coach said. "I thought they did pretty well last year. They're definitely a team on the right track."

Leading the way for Montana is the midfield.

"They are extremely fast. They are extremely good at the wing midfield positions," Patraw said. "Their right midfield player (Courtney Mathieson) is a great, great player and she is just a burner ... and Karen Hardy is real good too."

Hardy leads the Grizzlies with eight goals and three assists (19 points), while Mathieson has seven goals and five assists (19 points).

To neutralize the Montana attack, Patraw has focused the team on shrinking the field, especially in the middle.

"We're looking to compact ourselves defensively as a team," she said. "We are getting our defenders pushed up and our forwards are dropping back in. We don't want them to play through the middle. We want them to serve the long ball over the top and we will clean that up all day. They like to come through the middle and serve the flank and we're trying to prevent that."

Attacking for the Sun Devils is the freshman trio of midfielder Antoinette Marjanovic and forwards Jaclyn Clark and Karine Inoue.

Marjanovic leads ASU in scoring with 18 points on seven goals and four assists. That puts her in fifth place in the West Region.

Clark has 15 points on six goals and three assists, and leads the team in shots with 24, while Inoue has 13 points on five goals and three assists.

Carter advances in Invite

By SCOTT LEWIS
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's tennis team opened up the 1997 season by hosting the third annual Thunderbirds Collegiate Invitational at the Whiteman Tennis Center on Thursday.

The tournament, featuring Texas, Minnesota, Mississippi State, Mississippi, UofA, USC, NAU and Boise State, will continue through Saturday with a 16-man single elimination draw and doubles play.

The highlight of the day for the Sun Devils, led by head coach Lou Belken and assistant coach Laurie Wardner, was a second-round upset victory by sophomore Ed Carter over the tournament's third seed and 32nd-ranked player in the country, USC's Patrick Gottesleben 6-3, 6-4. Carter will face UofA's Mike Mackay in a quarterfinal match today at 11:30 a.m..

"Ed's a big guy with a dominant serve," said Wardner. "For the first matches that the guys played this year it was good. We had some good results and we had some results that looked like guys hadn't played matches in a while and that's what this is all about."

The top players for ASU this year are sophomore Alex Osterrieth (sixth seed in the tourney), junior Gustavo Marcaccio (eighth seed), Carter and freshman Peter Dani. Osterrieth and Carter, who will play at 4:00 p.m. on Friday, are ranked 25th in the nation in doubles. On Thursday, however, only Carter survived the cut. Osterrieth lost to USC's Akram Zaram 6-3, 6-4 in the first round, while Marcaccio fell in his second match to Texas' Jack Brasington 7-6 (4), 2-6, 7-5.

"Alex didn't get off to a great start, he's a bit of a slow starter," said Wardner. "But these tournaments are good because if you lose in the first round you get to play in the consolation event. He played pretty well in his second match, which was the first round of the consolation."

"Gustavo played a great match. He just couldn't get the win. A few more matches and the guys will get better."

According to Wardner, the ASU which finished fourth in the Pac-10 last year behind USC, UCLA and Stanford, will have its hands full with a conference he considers "the toughest in the country." Wardner feels confident, however, after two weeks of what he called "great practices."

"It should be an exciting year," said Wardner. "Our goal every year is to beat UofA twice, we want to make NCAA's and we want to win regionals."

"Winning the regionals is probably a reasonable goal for the team this year. We're really good this year and that would be great."

ASU spikers Bay Area bound

By LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

The ASU volleyball team heads to the Bay Area this weekend to take on California and Stanford in an effort to improve its Pac-10 Conference record. The Sun Devils face Cal Friday at 7:30 p.m. and Stanford on Saturday at 7 p.m.

Last weekend at home the Sun Devils notched their first conference win of the season when by defeating Washington 3-2. The next match ASU lost to Washington State 3-1.

This time around, ASU will try to win on the road. Currently the Sun Devils are 10-6 overall, 1-4 in the Pac-10.

Several of the Sun Devils feel they match up well with Cal and have a definite chance to beat them.

"Cal is a lot like us," senior middle blocker Kirstin Mattson said. "I think at the worst we'll split, but I honestly think we can beat Cal if we can close out the match."

Cal is 6-8 overall, and tied with ASU for eighth place in the Pac, with its 1-4 record. The Golden Bears' losses have been to UCLA, USC, Oregon and Stanford. The Bears return 10 players, five starters. Cal is led by senior outside hitter Jessica Dinaberg who has 3.28 kills per game (kpg). 2.72 digs per game (dpg).

The Sun Devils lead the series with Cal 18-8. Cal's last win against ASU was in November of 1992.

"They're (Cal) really disciplined on defense and have great ball control, they're a team that doesn't make a lot of mistakes," assistant coach Mindi Rich said. "We match up well with Cal, as long as we stay patient and don't rush things I think we'll do fine."

Stanford is another story. The No. 4 Cardinal is on a nine-match winning streak and are 14-2, 5-0.

"I think it'll be the toughest match," senior outside hitter Terri Cox said. "We're looking through the net at (two) All-Americans."

Stanford also returns 10 players and five starters. The All-Americans are senior outside hitter Kristin Folkl and senior setter Lisa Sharpley. Sophomore Kerri Walsh was the Pac-10 Freshman on the Year.

Folkl leads the team with 4.92 kpg, Walsh has 3.05 kpg. The team has beaten USC, UCLA, Cal, Oregon and Oregon State each, 3-0.

"It looks like they're settling into the old Stanford, national champions," Rich said. "They're pretty strong at all positions, but I believe anyone can be beaten on a given night."

Duerksen said stopping those three will be key. "They're relying on three freshmen for scoring, so they will be a different team than what we saw last year." The outcome could be decided in the first half. Montana is 5-0 when ahead at the half, but 0-5 when behind at the end of the first stanza. Patraw said her team needs to jump on the Grizzlies. "It's going to depend on who makes the statement early," she said. "If they get us rattled, I'm not too sure how well we've been coming out of that."

Ice hockey begins

BY MATT PAULSON

A tough team begins a tough schedule with a tough game.

The ASU Ice Devils, who have made appearances in the American Collegiate Hockey Association National Tournament the past two years with records of 18-11-1 and 20-12-0, start the 1997-98 season tonight at home against Life College of Atlanta.

The game begins at 6 p.m. at Oceanside Arena. The two teams will again skate it out at 8:45 p.m. Saturday.

Life College is the two-time defending ACHA Division II National Champion, while the Ice Devils come into the season ranked No. 10 in Division I.

ASU goalie Greg Powers said it's a difficult way to start the season.

"Life College is a very good team," Powers said. "They have a lot of good players from up north. We can't go in and take them lightly at all because if they do, they're going to beat us. It's that simple." Life College is coached by former NHL goalie Dan Bouchard who played in the league from 1972 to 1986.

ASU captain Keith McElroy said having Bouchard as coach is perhaps Life College's biggest asset.

"I expect these to be real good games," McElroy said. "I expect them to be real disciplined. I can't imagine that they'll be out of control with a guy like that running the show."

After this weekend, 10 of ASU's 22 remaining games are against three of the top four teams in the ACHA. Six of those battles are with archrival and No. 4 UofA.

Head coach Gene Hammett said he likes the challenging schedule.

"(It's) a tough schedule, a really tough schedule," he said. "I don't think that we have a soft team this year, and that's good."

Hammett added: "The truth of the matter is our goal is to win Nationals. We're probably going to be better than last year although I'm not sure we are right now. We've got some senior leadership this year, and we haven't had that over the last couple of years. That should make a difference."

In addition, the Ice Devils return all of the top performers from last season.

Forward/center Steve Hammett led the team in points (48) and assists (28) and was second in goals (20).
