Fee deadline moved for new tax credit

BY CHRIS PASSAMANO
 STATE PRESS

There is new "HOPE" for those first and second year students struggling to make their tuition payments.

The new HOPE Scholarship — actually a tax break — will offer students a major cut in tuition payments. The tax break takes effect Jan. 1 and students can get as much as $1,500 back. ASU students will get the break because the University moved its tuition fee payment deadline from Dec. 16 to Jan. 6, 1998.

"We have changed our fee payment so that students ... can take advantage of (the tax break)," said Lou Ann Denny, University registrar. "We met with the comptrollers and decided that it wouldn't be big to change it."

Only students in their first two years of college can qualify for the scholarship, which is part of the budget deal struck by President Clinton and Congress in July. Clinton promised the student tax relief during his 1996 election campaign.

With the HOPE credit, students can get reimbursed for their qualified expenditures. The expenditures are the actual cost of tuition and do not include things such as the Student Recreation Complex fee or special class fees.

The qualified expenditure for in-state tuition is $994 per semester, said Kelly Farmer, tax manager in the comptrollers office. The qualified expenditure for out-of-state tuition is $4,356 per semester, Farmer added.

Accordingly, in-state students would only be paying $488 after the break for their tuition for the entire school year. Out-of-state students will be paying $2,856 after

March inspired women

BY GINGER SCOTT
 STATE PRESS

Eight ASU students plan to bring their experiences from the Oct. 25 Million Women March back to the University community through a forum.

The panel discussion will revolve around 12 major platform issues promoted at the march, ranging from health to the CIA's involvement with drugs in black communities.

"We didn't want to just take what we learned from the Million Woman March and hold it for ourselves," said Tiffani Davis, a senior elementary education major. "We're responsible for what we learned and (wanted) to bring it back to ASU."

The eight ASU women joined hundreds of thousands women for the march held in Philadelphia. The march was aimed at addressing issues affecting African-American women and their communities.

It began as a grassroots movement to motivate and inform African-American women about ways to make positive changes in today's society.

"I am just really glad that I had the opportunity to be a part of this," Davis said. "It's our responsibility to take what we learned and teach other women in the black community."

The march began at 6 a.m. on Oct. 25. Participants walked for more than 20 blocks through the streets of downtown Philadelphia.

"It was the largest gathering of black women ever," said Isis Jones, a participant in the march and a junior studying political science.

'Tempe's nemesis' vows to put rental code to vote again

BY TIM BAXTER
 STATE PRESS

Just when it appeared that a truce has been called, Tempe renters are in danger of once again being caught in the crossfire over revisions to Tempe's rental code.

It's taken months of closed-door negotiations between representatives of each side to come up with a new proposal, but that new proposal is already drawing fire from social gadfly Fritz Tuffli, one of the primary opponents of a previous rental code change.

The previous plan was shot down on its way to a referendum vote and sent back to committee for revision.

A new plan was brought to the City Council at the Oct. 23 meeting and forwarded to staff to be drafted into an ordinance.

City Council will vote on the proposal when the drafting process is complete, probably in a few weeks.

But Tuffli said the new proposal is unsatisfactory, and if the city doesn't change it, Tuffli threatens to call for another referendum election.

"If the city forces us by refusing to compromise, we will," he said.

Only 715 signatures are required for a referendum election to be called.

Tempe Mayor Neil Giuliano said he hoped the proposal would be a good compromise for competing interests.

"I'm hopeful that after we have a full and thorough discussion we'll be able to move forward and vote on it," he

The proposed changes to Tempe's rental code would:

- Codify administrative procedures for interior inspections.
- Specify new procedures for complaints and appeals. Complaints would first go to a hearing officer, then to the Tempe Board of Adjustment, then to Superior Court.
- Allow a maximum fine of $2,000 to be established daily against non-compliant owners who have failed to make improvements within stipulated time periods.
- Have some requirements of the code retrofitted to older apartments, but allow rental owners to maintain a right to appeal.

said. "(Tuffli) is one renter, he's one citizen. There are others who have different view. We listen to them all and do the best that we can."

Although Tuffli found fault with every point of the proposal, his primary concern is with the retrofit clause, which would require older complexes to meet the new code. Proponents of the tougher code say without retrofit, the code will not clean up older, run-down rental units.

"Retrofit is something that's clearly unconstitutional," Tuffli said. "These days local governments pass things that are unconstitutional because they know most people can't fight it."

Tuffli added that the retrofit would kill development in Tempe.

"After they've built their existing structures, the city could come back years later to ask them to retrofit," he said. That's basically hogwash, according to John Bebling, a Tempe developer and opponent of the earlier proposal.

"All they need to do is build by the code, and all the apartments are being built under it," he said. Bebling is currently developing a new apartment complex at the 1200 block of E. Eighth Street.

Tempe neighborhood program manager Gary Davis said the city does not necessarily expect another referendum, but they are "as prepared as we can be."

"It's hard to say — we don't know for sure yet," he said. "Bebling (gathered the signatures for a referendum) last time. Since he's on board now ... I don't know if there will be any referendum on this."

Tuffli released a list of changes to the proposal Monday that he demands the city incorporate. He says if the city refuses to cooperate, he will attempt to raise the needed signatures for a referendum.

It is unlikely Tuffli's demands will be implemented at this point. The process has been open to advocates of both sides from the beginning, city officials said, and city staff is the break for the first semester.

Since the entire maximum of $1,500 is used for the first semester, out-of-state students will have to pay their full second semester tuition.

Students at ASU should be helped out because of the relatively low tuition compared to the University's peer institutions.

"The HOPE credit is particularly good for Arizona schools," Farmer said. "Since students get dollar-for-dollar back on the first $1,000 dollars and 50 cents back for every dollar on the next $1,000, students will get $1,500 back."

ASU students are not the only ones in Arizona to reap the benefits of the HOPE credit.

According to Rob McLean, an office specialist for student business services at NAU, the Northern Arizona school did not have to change its deadline for spring tuition payment, which is also Jan. 6.

But students at UofA are not as lucky.

"We decided we are not going to change the deadline," said Ron Smith, comptroller of the financial services office at UofA. "We discussed it, but everything we placed had the Dec. 17 deadline date. We thought that it was more fair to leave it the way it is."

But if UofA students want they can still take advantage of the tax break.

Students will have to pay a late fee of $25 from Dec. 18 to Jan. 6. After Jan. 7 the late fee is $50. If students wait, they can pay their tuition after Jan. 1 and pay the late fee, but still take advantage of a $1,500 savings.

There is one catch for all college students. Getting the credit depends on how much income the student — or those who claim the student as a dependent — earn each year.

Rental

drafting the ordinance solely from the latest proposal.

Bebbling, along with code advocate Hut Hutson, developed the new proposal, and said he was basically happy with it. But Bebbeling said he did have some concerns, namely the retrofit clause and concerns that the rental code may be tougher than the city's building code.

Dave Christ, Tempe rental standards specialist and rental code supporter, said that was not likely.

The current (1994) city building code is considerably stiffer than the rental code, but there are possible exceptions. Older buildings are governed by the code they were built under. For example, a structure built in 1958 would be governed by the 1958 building code, which was not as strict.

Christ stands by the retrofit clause, though.

"If you don't mandate an improvement, the improvement won't happen," he said.

A lot of the ongoing conflict over the rental code seems to stem less from concern over improving living conditions for renters than simple personal animosity.

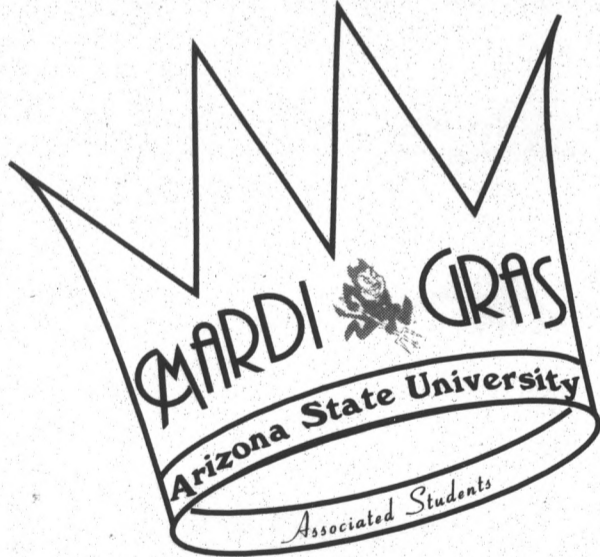

Tuffli, self-proclaimed "nemesis of Tempe", sprinkles his discussion of the rental code liberally with invective aimed at nearly everyone involved in the controversy.

He claims Bebbeling is beholden to the city, that the City Council is corrupt.

Many advocates, on the other hand, claim that Tuffli has a personal vendetta against the city.

"Whatever the city is for, he's against," Christ said.

Gadhafi handed South Africa's highest honor

Libya's President Moammar Gadhafi, left, and South African President Nelson Mandela walk together in the town of Zuwarah, Libya, 75 miles east of Tripoli Wednesday. Mandela returned to Libya Wednesday to present Moammar Gadhafi with South Africa's highest honor for a foreigner. The Libyan trip, Mandela's second in less than a week, prompted speculation that he might try to mediate an end to 5-year-old U.N. sanctions backed by the United States and Britain. South African officials, however, denied Mandela had any such plans.

By LOUIS MEIXLER

ZUWARAH, Libya — Returning to Libya for his second visit in a week, Nelson Mandela presented South Africa's highest award for a foreigner to Moammar Gadhafi on Wednesday, praising the Libyan ruler as "my dear brother leader."

The meeting, coming so quickly after the last one, prompted speculation that the South African president was trying to mediate an end to the 5-year-old U.N. sanctions against Libya.

Mandela was accompanied by foreign reporters, so his visit gave Gadhafi a platform to heap scorn upon the United States. As with his previous stop in Libya, and earlier visits to Cuba, the trip demonstrated Mandela's willingness to risk U.S. ire in maintaining close relationships with old friends.

Libya and Cuba were among the countries that backed Mandela's African National Congress early in its underground struggle against apartheid in South Africa.

At a brief welcome ceremony with bagpipes, a guard raised a red Scottish tartan-plaid umbrella over Mandela's head Wednesday to shield him from the sun. The two leaders linked hands as they walked toward a tent for a five-minute meeting.

Libya used the gathering to lash out at Washington. "Down, down U.S.A., the enemy of the peoples!" said one banner, in English, at the sports center where the ceremony was held in the seaside town of Zuwarah, 60 miles west of the capital, Tripoli.

The sanctions against Libya were imposed to pressure it into surrendering two Libyan suspects in the 1988 bombing of a Pan American jet over Lockerbie, Scotland, that killed 270 people. The sanctions bar flights to and from Libya and ban arms sales to the North African nation.

House investigation links Gulf War illnesses to toxic exposures

By ROBERT BURNS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The mysterious Gulf War illnesses suffered by thousands of U.S. veterans were probably caused by "a variety of toxic agents" encountered in the war against Iraq, a House subcommittee concluded Wednesday.

The panel recommended that the Pentagon be forced to give up its lead role in investigating the matter. It said Congress should create or designate an independent agency to research Gulf War illnesses and their causes.

As recently as Tuesday the Pentagon said it would resist efforts to remove it from the lead role. Spokesman Kenneth Bacon said the Pentagon acknowledged it made mistakes in its early handling of the matter but has recently made important progress in investigating causes and dealing directly with affected veterans.

The report by the House Government Reform subcommittee on human resources asserted that the Clinton administration's approach, through the Pentagon, the CIA and the Department of Veterans Affairs, is "irreparably flawed."

"We find those efforts hobbled by institutional inertia that mistakes motion for progress," it said, accusing the administration of "arrogant incuriosity."

The subcommittee said its 20-month investigation found that toxic agents including Iraqi chemical weapons most likely are to blame for the respiratory and other Gulf War illnesses.

The Pentagon, which also is investigating the origins of veterans' illnesses, says it has found no firm evidence of a direct link to chemical weapons.

Earlier this year the Pentagon estimated that as many as 100,000 U.S. troops were exposed to low doses of nerve gases released in the demolition of an Iraqi ammunition depot in March 1991, days after the war had ended. But it said the doses were too small to have caused any sustained health problems.

The House panel on Wednesday released a draft of its investigative report, which panel members approved and forwarded to the full committee for action on Friday.

Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., chairman of the committee, welcomed the report and said he agreed that the Defense Department had not pursued the issue forcefully.

"If the departments of Defense and Veterans Affairs cannot do a better job than they have so far on this issue, we need to move this responsibility to an agency that will," Burton said in a statement released by his office.

The draft report accuses the Pentagon and the VA of ignoring veterans when they offered information about the possible causes of their illnesses.

"The presence of a variety of toxic agents in the Gulf War theater strongly suggests exposures have a role in causing, triggering or amplifying subsequent service-connected illnesses," the report concluded.

In direct contradiction of the conclusion reached by the Presidential Advisory Committee on Gulf War Veterans' Illnesses, which is to submit its final report to the White House on Friday, the House panel ruled out stress as the causes of illnesses. There is "no credible evidence" of a link to wartime stress, it said.

The presidential advisory committee also is expected to recommend to President Clinton that the Pentagon be stripped of its authority over the issue.

Prosecutors: Kaczynski papers admit to 'non-bombing acts of violence'

By RICHARD COLE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — In papers found in his Montana cabin, Theodore Kaczynski admitted committing "non-bombing acts of violence," prosecutors said in documents filed Wednesday.

The government did not say what the acts of violence were. Justice Department spokeswoman Leesa Brown said she could not release any information.

A federal law enforcement source who spoke on condition of anonymity, however, said the acts were serious and have never been made public.

Kaczynski's writings also show the "incremental development of ... (his) intent to kill," which grew out of his "hatred and antisocial preoccupations," prosecutors said.

The government contends Kaczynski is the anti-technology terrorist known as the Unabomber who is responsible for 16 bombings over 17 years that killed three and injured 23.

Prosecutors filed the documents Wednesday in an attempt to use Kaczynski's writings as evidence that he was responsible for bombings he has not been charged with and that he intended to hurt people.

Such evidence could help counter a possible insanity defense. Kaczynski's lawyers have indicated they may argue that he suffered from paranoid schizophrenia.

"The defendant's decision to put his mental condition at issue makes highly relevant his admissions to committing the non-bombing acts of violence," said the brief by prosecutors Robert Cleary and Douglas Wilson.

Defense lawyer Quin Denvir did not immediately return a telephone call Wednesday.

Compromise needed in Tempe traffic woes

Tempe is a city in conflict — while trying to keep the suburban neighborhood feel, it is desperately trying to expand to meet the influx of college students and businesses entering the area.

Case in point: Fifth Street, between Farmer Avenue and Priest Drive. Two local neighborhood associations have been working with the city for two years to try to improve the situations of increasing traffic volume and speed throughout their community. In response to their outcries, city officials have built road bumps and changed street signs to keep both traffic volume and speed down. Drivers have responded in two ways: slowing down, or more commonly, dodging into the bike lane, avoiding the bumps that jut out and up from the median.

But city officials and the Fifth Street associations weren't done yet — now they've dumped a barricade at the intersection of Fifth Street and Farmer Avenue, preventing all traffic at the intersection from turning left. Or so was the plan.

This barricade, intended to further "calm" traffic on this busy neighborhood street, has caused headaches and hassles for those who drive through or live in the area. Moreover, most drivers aren't abiding by the barricade, only checking for traffic (and police) as they weave around the barricade.

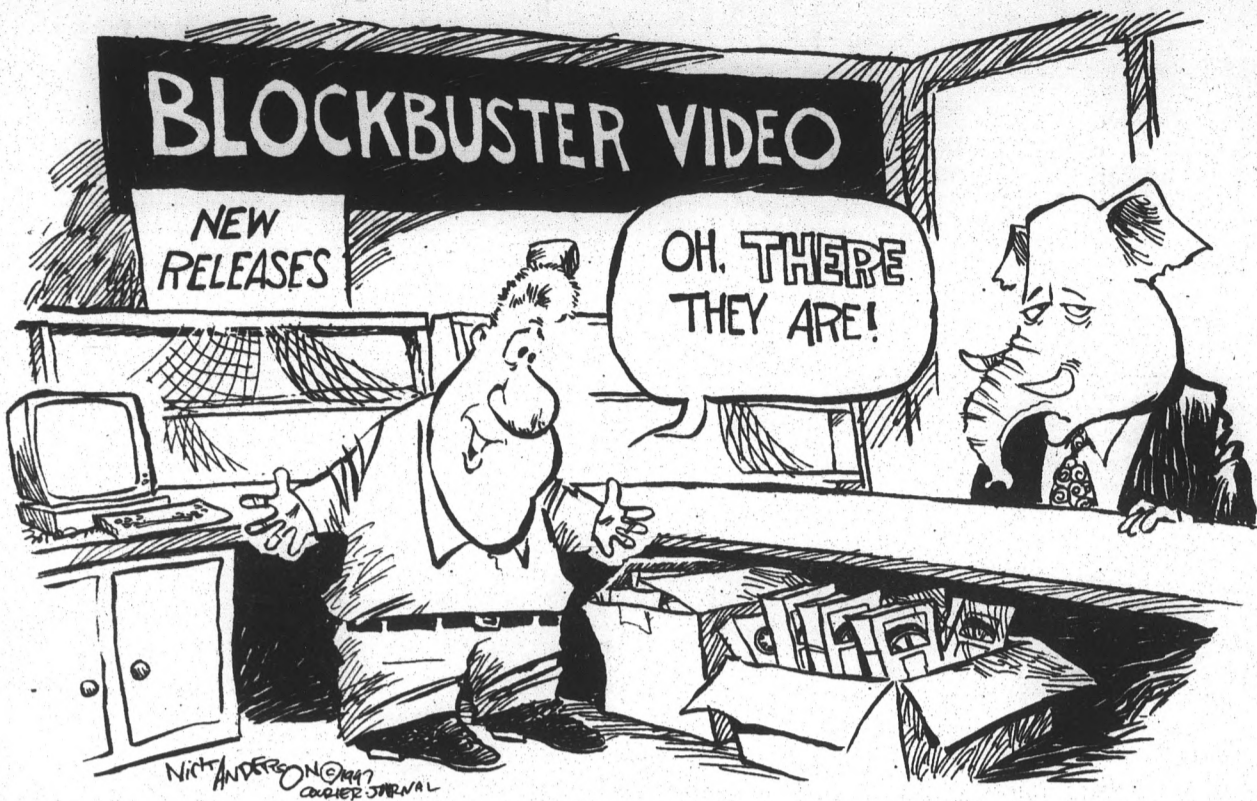

The problem comes down to this — there is too much traffic in this area to impose such limits. We appreciate the efforts of city officials to accommodate neighborhood groups; at least we know the officials are listening. But reducing access to neighborhood streets makes getting around — and in some cases, getting home — rather difficult.

Picture a map of Tempe, north of University Drive, south of Rio Salado Parkway, east of Priest Drive and west of Mill Avenue. (Okay, maybe get a real map). This is an extremely congested area of travel, with very few main-access roads. In fact, the only main roads running in an east-west direction are University Drive, Rio Salado Parkway and Fifth Street. Considering the volume of traffic in relation to the number of lanes on University and Rio Salado, it is no wonder people choose to reroute through Fifth Street.

This also explains why trying to reduce traffic through the area is illogical. City officials should be looking ahead to the future. They should recognize the demands of a growing population while still considering the desires of those who wish to keep their neighborhood "calm."

We propose that the city builds a frontage road around the congested area of Fifth Street, with a tree-lined divider to try to absorb some of the traffic noise. Furthermore, the city should expand Fifth Street to accommodate the volume of traffic, which exceeds the current street size. This way, the city would appease the neighborhood associations who want to maintain the neighborhood feeling, as well as those who live in the area and travel by way of Fifth Street regularly.

We appreciate the need for balance in a dynamic city like Tempe; we hope officials continue to strive for a more harmonious solution.

Arizona pollutes air-quality info

As guinea pigs for the state and county government's pollution-control plans, the public should know the plain truth about our air.

RAY STERN
Editor in Chief

Instead, the government tries to spoon-feed news organizations with misleading information about "encouraging" pollution trends and years with "zero-exceedance days." Sometimes officials just don't release certain info. The news outlets, in a money-driven quest to provide readers with happy news, gladly pass along this information without looking too critically at it.

And the public gets a muddled picture of reality.

While there's nothing wrong with looking on the brighter side now and then, the air-quality issue is confusing enough without a lot of misinformation.

One example of this was when the mealy mouthed spokesman for ex-Gov. Fife Symington told the press last summer that the region could not meet the EPA's standards for particulate pollution in the Spanish conquistador days. That ignorant statement wouldn't even be true in a dust storm.

Usually, the misinformation — or non-information — isn't that extreme, but the results are the same: confusion.

For instance, it isn't encouraging that air pollution hasn't gotten "much" worse despite the influx of more than 500,000 new residents in the last 10 years.

It's not encouraging that Central Phoenix pollution levels have dropped, when the overall polluted area has increased.

It may be encouraging to look at "exceedance days" as a measure of the pollution problem, but it's not encouraging when one looks at the actual maximum levels of pollutants (see graph).

It's definitely not encouraging that there were no exceedances of the ozone standard over the summer, because there's a new standard now. The EPA toughened the standard in July from 120 parts per billion over a 1-hour period to 80 ppb over an 8-hour period. It did this because health problems start at about 80 ppb.

Disturbingly, the EPA wants bad-air regions to "keep current ozone standards and plans in place until they are achieved," rather than work immediately toward the tough new standard. With that attitude, the region will be one step behind for the next 20 years, and people will continue to breathe levels of pollution that exceed the EPA's health recommendations. If we work toward the new standard, won't we achieve the old standard at some point by default? If we keep taking small steps that aren't achieving the old standard, will we ever be able to achieve the new standard?

Probably not. The new standard is really, really tough for the Valley to meet.

According to Arizona Department of Quality studies completed in August, the area in Maricopa County that is expected to exceed the new standard is 14 times larger than the area exceeding the old standard. Also, the amount of exceedance over the old standard will increase from 17 percent to 39 percent with the new standard. The total number of violation days will go up, too.

I don't recall seeing a press release with this new information.

Maybe the information isn't encouraging enough. Ray Stern is a senior studying journalism and can be reached at amyray@primenet.com.

Arizona's date-rape laws compromise justice, equality

A few weeks ago, I watched a performance on Hayden Lawn titled, "A Lack of Consent is not Consent."

The production was a story about date rape, a viciously serious issue on any college campus.

The plot: A man and a woman, both college students, get drunk and have sex. Fairly straightforward, but considerably more assumptions lurk under the surface. Both students were drunk, yet the man was portrayed as completely in control, while the woman apparently could not be held responsible for her actions, thanks to alcohol's attack on her judgment. This kind of double standard leads to grossly false stereotypes, and threatens our society's concepts of justice and equality.

A note before I proceed: I am not attempting to trivialize rape, which I believe is one of the most horrifying experiences anyone could possibly endure. Nor am I implying that rape victims are responsible for the crimes committed against them. I simply feel that we must carefully protect individual rights in our fervent defense of victims. Rage should not dilute justice or equality.

The performance of "Consent" reveals a broader cultural assumption — that men are rampant sexual predators, jumping at any chance to get into a woman's pants.

Even the law supports this blatantly sexist opinion. According to Arizona law, if a male and female, both intoxicated, have sex, the male is guilty of rape. The reasoning behind that is exactly as presented in "Consent": In an identical situation, men are entirely responsible for their actions, yet women are not.

This assumption threatens any hope for sexual equality. The truth, which no one seems willing to admit, is that discrimination works both ways. Our goal should be to eliminate prejudices and stereotypes, not merely to substitute newer, more politically correct biases.

Men may be more sexually aggressive than women. Drunken men may be considerably more sexually aggressive. That, however, is not the point.

Justice demands that guilt be proven, not assumed. As a hypothetical example, even if every single person accused of drug dealing were guilty, that would not justify stripping accused drug dealers of their right to trial. That would compromise our justice system.

Our system may not be perfect, but it is certainly an improvement over simply executing accused criminals in the streets. Do not misunderstand me: Rapists should be held responsible for their actions. They should be severely punished.

Still, it is dangerous to assume that every man who gets drunk and has sex with a woman is a rapist. Efforts to protect rape victims should not overshadow fundamental civil rights.

For equality to exist, every person must respect everyone else. Stereotypes lead to social fragmentation and prevent equality. Unfortunately, not every stereotype is recognized for what it is. In this case, prejudices against men hide under the guise of "protecting victim's rights."

Rape is a somber, complex matter. Surely no one longs for a return to the days when a woman was thought responsible for being raped. A victim should never feel responsible for the atrocities committed against him or her.

However, we must separate justice from passion and personal judgment. A drunken man who has sex with a drunken woman may be guilty of stupidity, but that does not necessarily assign him culpability for rape. No member of our society should be found guilty by default.

We can probably never be certain of what happens behind closed bedroom doors. That is an unfortunate fact. Still, we can rid our legislation and culture of sexual prejudices.

A man should not be guilty of rape simply because he and his partner are both drunk. It is that simple. If we want our society to progress, we must change this sexist law.

Absolute sexual equality may never be possible, but we must at least attempt to attain it. Similarly, perfection may not be possible when humans are involved, but it is our obligation to move toward it.

Correcting Arizona's date-rape laws is a vital first step.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reader misses point of Opinions Forum

This letter is in response to a letter in your Oct. 29 issue. Thomas McDermott seemed to have missed the entire reason why the MUAB Opinions Forum exists.

The Opinions Forum is a program that encourages dialogue between the guests on stage and the audience. Every effort is made to get the audience involved. It is unfortunate that Mr. McDermott did not choose to exercise his rights as an audience member, and as an American, in asking questions of the panelists.

After taking a hard look at the situation and asking other members of the committee for comments, I remembered that there were few people in the audience and even less that posed questions to the panelists. I see no reason why Mr. McDermott would have chosen not to participate in this free and open forum.

With this in mind, I have asked my fellow members of the Forum committee to give assistance to all confidence-impaired audience members so that they can ask questions directly of the panel instead of having to go to the State Press for popular sympathy in their stabbing and misguided criticisms.

We never have taken responsibility for the views of any of the panelists on any of our programs. We do not all believe that Columbus was a jerk; we also don't all believe in capitalism or socialism. The personal views that we hold as individuals are as different and contradictory as those of Mr. McDermott and the Columbus Day panel. That's why we call it the Opinions Forum.

We always endeavor to bring diverse and interesting programs to this campus for the entire student body to enjoy. Mr. McDermott, we thank you for your opinion.

MUAB's goal is to feature educational debate

As president of the Memorial Union Activities Board, I feel it is my duty to clarify a possible misconception.

On Oct. 29, Thomas McDermott wrote a letter that seemed to place the Opinions Forum in a position that supported a particular point of view in regards to a recent program on Columbus Day.

The Opinions Forum is a program created and designed to bring different points of view together for open and educational discussion. Often, the programs feature guests whose views are unique and controversial. We feel that these types of programs are necessary to engage the student population in a dialogue that might be full of controversy, but will also be educational.

I encourage Mr. McDermott and the rest of the student body to attend future editions of the Opinions Forum, which will include Arizona Secretary of State Betsy Bayless on Nov. 5, and the Nation of Islam on Nov. 19.

Quotes against teacher can't go unchallenged

In response to the front-page article, "Theater professor says he's being ousted for teaching classics" (Oct. 28), I wanted to encourage the theater department not to let Jared Sakren's statements stand without comment. Both Lin Wright's and Bonnie Eckard's reluctance to confront Sakren's statements, although legally and professionally responsible, allow accusations of ideological militancy to go unchallenged and, worse, leave the department wallowing under his characterization.

The department also has a responsibility to clarify this matter and, better, to defend itself from such representations — especially since they threaten to undermine the department's credibility. In allowing Sakren's statements to go unchallenged, the department risks further assaults on its principles and practices.

Even worse, in characterizing the theater department as a hotbed of "militant" feminism and multiculturalism, Sakren's statements do greater damage by reducing useful perspectives and approaches to mere politics. The department has a responsibility to its pedagogies and its principles; it should defend itself from such accusations not only for its own benefit, but for the benefit of those who support such pedagogies and principles.

Department of Communication treats its December graduates right

Much discussion was made in the Oct. 28 State Press about the College of Public Programs' lack of persistence toward its own convocation.

Nothing was mentioned, however, about the convocation that goes on every December in one of the departments that is housed in the College of Public Programs: the Communication convocation.

While the college has been debating back and forth over whether to have a convocation, the Department of Communication has moved forward with its own convocation, as it has done for the last five years. In a time where the rift between professors and students is growing larger with each passing year, the Department of Communication helps close this gap by sponsoring a student-organized convocation with their time and money.

This convocation is a very personal one; instead of casting students off into the world with no collegiate support, the department sends them into the job world like a parent saying good-bye to their grown children — with a sense of accomplishment and pride rather than emotional distance.

An editorial from Tuesday's paper stated that "administrators are out of touch. They obviously didn't think about things such as the proud friends and family that come from across the globe to see their loved ones walk across the stage."

Not only is the Department of Communication supporting the Communication students with this convocation, but they are also expressing their appreciation for all the time and money each parent, student and loved one has invested in this University.

Every December, over 100 students graduate from the Department of Communication, and the Communication convocation shows each graduate that while their formal education as an undergraduate is complete, as an alumnus, they will always have a home here at ASU in the Department of Communication.

All departments and colleges should take note and care for their students' wants and needs as much as this branch of the College of Public Programs does.

Goodwill fundraiser slated to feature celebrity cashiers

BY TIM BAXTER
STATE PRESS

Two Tempe city council members are going to Goodwill today.

They'll be celebrity cashiers for a few hours to help raise money for the thrift stores.

Carol Smith will be at the Goodwill store at Baseline and Hardy roads, along with Guadalupe Vice-Mayor Veronica Flores and other local celebrities, from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Meanwhile, Linda Spears will put in a couple of hours behind the counter at the McClintock Drive and Southern Avenue location.

"It came about because we want to bridge the gap between businesses and Goodwill," said Nancy Fister, Goodwill assistant director of development.

The bulk of the funds raised will go to job-training programs Goodwill runs for the needy, Fister said.

Spears said she was a little surprised when she was asked to cashier, but she does bring some experience — she has worked as a cashier at Sun Devil football games.

Smith said while she and Spears do "this kind of work all the time," she doesn't consider herself a celebrity.

"I'm not really a celebrity; I don't kid myself," she said. "What's flattering is that the people of Tempe wanted me to represent them."

Smith has also worked as a cashier before at a shoe store in high school.

Fister said local celebrities will be at all Goodwill Valley locations today, and the event will also feature an auction of sports memorabilia donated by the Suns, Cardinals and Coyotes organizations. In addition, there will be 100 passes to the Wildlife World Zoo given away.

POLICE REPORT

The ASU police reported the following incidents on Wednesday:

- A man not associated with ASU was arrested, cited and released for disorderly conduct at Stabler's Market in the Tempe Center.
- A partially burnt cigarette containing a green, leafy substance was impounded for destruction at ASU police headquarters.
- A student removed an amplifier from the University Activity Center.

Tempe police reported the following incidents on Wednesday:

- Two men were arrested at 6005 S. All American Way after an officer saw them pull a car into a parking lot, chug a couple of beers and allegedly spark up some crystal methamphetamines in a glass pipe. They were booked for public consumption of alcohol, possession of dangerous drugs, driving on a suspended license and possession of drug paraphernalia. They were released pending a Department of Public Safety drug analysis.

- Scottsdale Road between Weber Drive and Continental Road.
- Baseline Road between McClintock Drive and Price.
- University Drive between Mill Avenue and Priest Drive.
- McClintock Drive between Broadway Road and Southern Avenue.
- Rural Road between Broadway Road and Southern Avenue.

Opinions Forum dismisses myths of witches, vampires

BY SHARAN K. GILL
STATE PRESS

With Halloween creeping up, the Memorial Union Activities Board flew in some witches and vampires for Wednesday's public opinions forum.

About 100 students attended the presentation to listen to panelists dismantle myths that circulate during the Halloween season.

Rev. Vashnon, a Tempe minister of Paganism and a practicing witch, performs Pagan weddings (handfastings) and christenings (Paganings) he said. Witches are just normal people who have a different religious background. Vashnon also said he doesn't use a first name because he is a witch.

"You are going to have a hard time having a Christian minister perform a Pagan wedding and then sign off on it," he said.

Self-proclaimed vampire Robert Poe, a sophomore interactive computer-graphics major, spoke on the common myths about vampires and explained his own blood fetish.

"It's not that I think that I am immortal or have special powers; I think drinking blood is more of an erotic thing," he said.

Poe's fiancée, Melissa Ruh, a senior at Apache Junction High School, said she drinks blood because she feels energy from it.

"It's like a form of ecstasy," Ruh said. "It's the feeling you get from it, not just drinking it."

Vashnon said many misconceptions about witches have been construed by society and television. The standard TV portrayal generally makes fun of or minimizes what they do, he said.

"We don't twitch our noses and levitate things," he said.

Halloween is just a day to dress up and have fun, because the stigmas that are attached to Halloween were made up by the church, Vashnon said. And since Pagans do not believe in the church, they don't believe in the concepts like Hell or "All Hallows Eve," he said.

Vashnon said he believes there are more people in church because of a fear of Satan rather than a love of God, and that is how Paganism differs from other religions. Paganism is a religion that focuses on nature and energy.

When an audience member asked Vashnon if he casts spells, he said that spell-casting is merely focused wishing. It is similar to what Christians do when they pray.

"The only difference is when Christians pray for a miraculous healing, it is called a miracle. When a Pagan casts a healing, it is called a hoax," Vashnon said.

Poe said Halloween is just another day for him because he is so used to dressing up.

"It's just another day for everyone to catch up with me," he said.

CHASE... the Right Relationship

Consumer awareness goal of Arizona Recycles Day

By KARA SHIRE
STATE PRESS

Now that recycling has become a daily activity for many Arizonans, environmental activists are looking to alert consumers about the importance of buying products made from recycled materials.

Activities have been planned Valley-wide through Nov. 15, the first Arizona Recycles Day.

The event is part of a national program, America Recycles Day, to encourage people to not only recycle, but to create a market for those recycled materials by purchasing products that contain them.

"The emphasis on this is perhaps a little different than previous recycling promotions, because while we still encourage people to recycle their products, we really close the loop on the other end," said David Perry, board member for the Arizona Recycling Coalition. "We need to complete the cycle now and get consumers to look for these recycled products."

Perry said consumers are often not aware which items are made from recycled materials. One way to increase the demand of these items is to better identify products, he said.

"We need to get that identification used to a greater extent so people can spot these materials and use that identification in their buying decision," Perry said. "Awareness is a big part of the program — making people more aware of what these consumer products are, getting them to look for them and seek them out when they go shopping."

State-wide Arizona Recycles Day activities include special hazardous-waste collections in the East Valley, tire recycling, composting at Desert Botanical Gardens, demonstrations, workshops and displays.

Pledge cards will also be available to those interested in making an official pledge to increase recycling efforts.

Perry said Arizona's recycling efforts have been increasing, but state-wide rates are still trailing the national rate by a ratio of 2-to-1.

"We've led the way in some of these tire and other items. But in some of the items, we've only been (recycling) a short time," he said. "We've really boosted the rate that people recycle quite a bit in the last few years. We still have a ways to go in some of these other areas, but we have made strong gains."

LEAF(ING) COMPETITION BEHIND

Associated Press

Washington State standout quarterback Ryan Leaf, the most heralded football player to come out of Pullman since Drew Bledsoe, is the No. 4-rated passer in the nation.

Cougars' QB leads team to best start since 6-0 start under Bledsoe

BY MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

Like the annual budding of the trees to signal the beginning of spring, Ryan Leaf's presence at Washington State has resulted in numerous changes in the Cougar football program.

Three years ago when he first stepped into Martin Stadium, Leaf was a scrawny 6-foot-5 hometown celebrity from Great Falls, Mont. Striving on talent alone, Leaf was highly recruited by several schools including Quarterback U. itself, Miami.

"I didn't lift weights in high school," Leaf said. "I was either busy or lazy."

WSU's football team was coming off of a mediocre season in which it went 5-6 overall and 3-5 in the Pac-10. Leaf, however, chose to become a Cougar because of the proximity and because "Washington State produces NFL quarterbacks. Not just Heisman quarterbacks," he said in reference to Drew Bledsoe and Mark Rypien.

Leaf added he couldn't be happier with choice of pine trees over palm trees.

"It's been the best decision of my life coming to Washington State," the junior said during a Tuesday teleconference. "I'm 7-0 now. Instead of 3-4. I'm totally secure with my decision."

Today, things are a little different.

Leaf is WSU's starting quarterback and the Cougars are ranked No. 10 in both the Associated Press and ESPN/USA Today Coaches Poll. Leaf has the fourth-best passing efficiency (164.0) in the nation and is also No. 4 in total offense (323.14). He is considered to be the best passer in the Pac-10 — and by some — in the country.

Leaf said this has been a result of a change in his work ethic.

"It's been something I've established here. I realized that I would have to work for what I wanted in college," Leaf said.

Although the coach has never seen him live in a college game, ASU head man Bruce Snyder said he's impressed by what he has seen on tape.

"He's really talented and has a lot of energy," Snyder said. "He bounces around like an average-sized man, and yet he is 6-5, 245. He is very strong, and very comfortable in the system. He beats the blitz by getting the ball out fast. He is a good runner and he can handle the ball. He is a terrific football player."

WSU head coach Mike Price said he's even a little flabbergasted by Leaf's progress.

"Each week, we're improving our expectations for Ryan and so is he," Price said. "He's very, very coachable (and) spends a lot of time watching game film. He really understands the offense and defenses that people are throwing against him."

ASU cornerback Courtney Jackson added Leaf has also benefited from a system which suits him well.

"I think it's the scheme. The scheme is set up to pass. If you can't stop the pass, you're not going to beat him or them," Jackson said.

All the success has made Leaf a legitimate Heisman Trophy candidate.

While Leaf said he's glad he has been able to add to the public's view of Cougar quarterbacks, there are a few other things about WSU football that he'd like to change.

"It's an honor to be named with guys like Peyton (Manning) in the Heisman

Sun Devils' setter Jolynn Faatulu fights on, despite injuries

BY LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

Before becoming the ASU volleyball team's setter, sophomore Jolynn Faatulu's impressive high school volleyball career made her an attractive prospect to several universities around the country.

ASU volleyball head coach Patti Snyder-Park was only one of the many coaches interested in her.

"She's just a gifted setter," Snyder-Park said. "She had all the attributes of what a good setter has, good hands, good mobility, a good block for her size. And I just loved her temperament, I thought she was so in control, so level and competitive."

At Long Beach Poly High School in California Faatulu was the starting setter her sophomore, junior and senior years and captain of the team for two years. She was a three-time high school All-America, a 1993 All-America MVP, 1993 gold medalist, 1994 and 1995 silver medalist in the Junior Olympics.

Faatulu also was a member of the Nike Ichiban club team.

Her performance in high school opened the door to scholarship offers from Washington State, University of the Pacific, University of California-Berkeley and ASU.

The location and competitiveness of the Pac-10 division that won Faatulu over in ASU's favor.

When she signed on to become a Sun Devil she set high goals and planned to play as well in college as she had in high school.

However, while Faatulu's goals haven't changed, injuries have limited her playing time.

"When you're getting older you won't be able to do as much because your body just won't let you," Faatulu said. "These are just minor setbacks, but it just makes you realize that you're so vulnerable to injuries and you don't know what to expect now."

Faatulu has had injury problems from the beginning of her Sun Devil career. She was the starting setter her freshman year, but tore the anterior cruci-ate ligament in her right knee in a game against USC in October 1995. She had knee surgery that November and was out for the rest of the season. She also medical-redshirted last season as well.

This year Faatulu has had to play through pain in both knees as well as sustaining injuries to both ankles.

"Jolynn is a definite fighter, she's just been through hell and back with injury after injury and she always keeps a smile on her face, is always there to encourage everybody else," freshman setter Carmen Fusco said. "I just think that Jolynn is an awesome contribution to the team."

Her latest injury occurred in ASU's game against Oregon State when she went down with an ankle injury. The injury, an avulsion fracture to her right ankle, has kept her out since Oct. 18.

Her return to the court is indefinite, but Faatulu remains optimistic.

"Personally I'm trying to get back in another week or so, that's my goal," Faatulu said. "If not Oregon, than in the last match for sure, I just really want to get back and play again."

Before this latest injury, Faatulu was on her way to having a strong season.

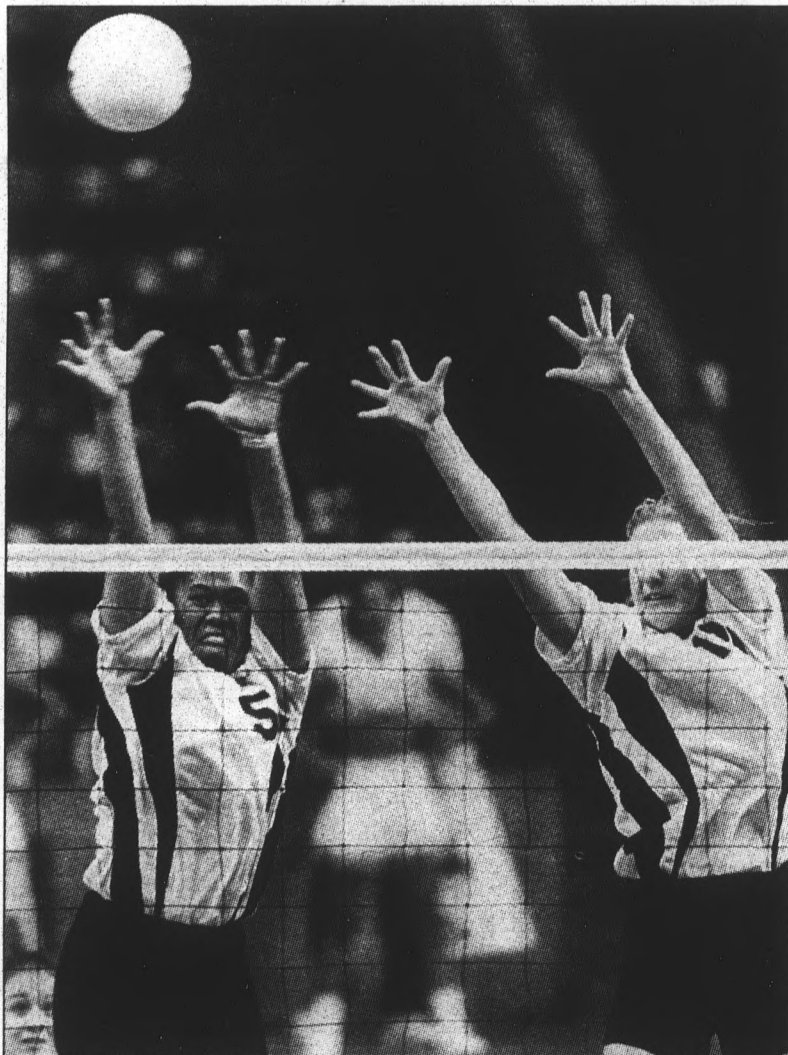

Before the Oregon State game, Faatulu was slated in sixth place in the Pac-10 with 12.14 assists per game.

The setter position in volleyball is almost naturally a leadership role, but Faatulu claims that she really doesn't try to be a leader.

"I don't see myself much as a leader, but as a setter leadership just comes with it, you don't really think about it," Faatulu said. "You just do what you gotta do on the court."

However her coaches and teammates know that she calmly and quietly controls much of the game.

"Jolynn is a leader by example, she's a leader by actions and she's a leader by her work ethic," Fusco said. "She's not loud and super-aggressive, but she just holds our respect."

Jeremy Hein/State Press

Sophomore setter Jolynn Faatulu's injuries may have cut into her playing time this season, but her determination and desire to play volleyball remain intact.

More football tickets available

BY ED ODEVEN
STATE PRESS

Forget your comfort, but don't forget your college. The ASU-Washington State game has been sold out. However, 500 to 1,000 standing-room only tickets for Saturday's 8 p.m. conference-clash are now available, ASU athletic director Kevin White announced Wednesday.

The tickets, which are $20 apiece, are available through the ASU Athletic Ticket office (965-2381), at any Dillard's Ticket Outlet or charge line (503-5555).

The game sold out Wednesday, which thrilled ASU head coach Bruce Snyder.

"I am elated at the news that the game is a sell-out," he said. "The team is just as excited. We need everyone to wear gold and support the Sun Devils."

ASU's final two home games are not sold out. Tickets for the Nov. 15 game with Oregon at 7 p.m. are available for $20 each. Tickets for "The Game" versus UofA on Nov. 28 at 4:30 p.m. are $30 apiece.

NYCZ NAMED SEMI-FINALIST

ASU senior kicker Robert Nycz has been named one of 20 semi-finalists for the 1997 Lou Groza Collegiate Place-Kicker Award, the Groza Award Committee of the Palm Beach Sports Commission announced Tuesday.

This is the second year in a row that Nycz has been a semi-finalist for this prestigious kicking honor.

"It's nice to be recognized and the hard work that I've put in," said Nycz. "It kind of pays off this season. I've been striking the ball a lot better this year than I have in the past. It makes you feel like that work you do is not useless if there's something behind it."

UCLA senior kicker Chris Sailer is the other Pac-10 semi-finalist.

Three finalists will be announced on Nov. 13 after a 109-member voting panel, consisting of media, pro kickers and previous winners make their selections.

The winner will be announced on Dec. 9.

The winner will be recognized on the ESPN Home Depot College Football Award Show on Dec. 11.

The award is named after Cleveland Browns Hall of Fame kicker, Lou Groza, who earned the nickname "The Toe" during his playing career.

race, but it really isn't on my mind," Leaf said. "If I happen to be near second or anywhere near Peyton, it would be fun to take my family to New York and do that. As of right now, I wish I could take all the attention and give to the rest of my teammates. They deserve it a lot more than I do."

Leaf would also like to see a reversal in fortune considering WSU's record after October. In the past eight years, the Cougars are 0-12 on the road in November and 7-25 overall in the months of November and December combined.

"(November) is a non-issue," he said. "That's the teams in the past. That's not this team. This team has never lost in November."

Leaf and the Cougar's get their first chance to buck the trend Saturday (Nov. 1) when they visit Sun Devil Stadium for a Pac-10 square off with No. 20 ASU. Game time is 8 p.m.

"I think it's a great opportunity for us. We asked for this," Leaf said. "Coming down and playing down in front of 70,000 people on grass at night, with a chance to be on top of the Rose Bowl race. I like the atmosphere. I'm really looking forward to it. It's going to be one of the funnest games of my career. It's the only (Pac-10) stadium I haven't played in. It's going to be one to remember."

House, Hester suspended

FROM STAFF REPORTS

ASU guards Reggie Hester and Eddie House have each been suspended by the university for off the court incidents, head coach Don Newman announced after Wednesday's practice.

Hester will be unavailable for the Sun Devils' first four contests, exhibition games against the California All-Stars and Marathon Oil and regular season matchups versus Cal-State Northridge (Nov. 16) and Wagner (Nov. 19). All games are at home.

House, an Pac-10 All-Freshman team selection last season, will miss the Nov. 5 exhibition season opener.

MEN'S TENNIS IN ACTION

The men's tennis team is in Irvine, Calif., today through Sunday for the Rolex/ITA Southern California Men's Tennis Regional. The majority of the matches, which begins play today at 9:00 a.m. and concludes Sunday, will be played at UC Irvine.

The top seed of the tourney is USC's Patrick Gottlesleben. The top seed for ASU is eighth-seeded Alex Osterrieth, who is also ranked No. 2 in the doubles draw with partner Ed Carter.

Flag football tourney needs teams

BY SCOTT LEWIS
STATE PRESS

ASU will be hosting the 1997 Nike Southwest Regional Flag-Football Tournament the weekend of Nov. 8-9, but if more teams aren't entered soon, the sneaker company is ready to give the Sun Devils the shoe.

The ASU campus is one of 12 regional sites for the tournament, which has men, women and co-ed brackets. Nike has promised that if there is a full slate of participating teams, the winners will receive a $6,000 trip to New Orleans over Christmas Break that will include airfare, room and board.

Two more women's teams and three more co-ed teams are needed to sign up to meet the minimum of six in each bracket. If they aren't filled by next Friday, there will be no free trip and likely no more Nike flag-football tournaments in Tempe.

"We've been campaigning for this (tournament) and this is the first year that ASU is hosting," said Toby Bourget, who coaches the Sparkey's women team and plays for a men's and co-ed team. "Nike is testing the state to see if we have interest here. We need people to get out here and support this."

"There's only a week left to sign up. It's a big waste if we don't get enough teams."

The cost of the tournament is $100 per team, which according to Bourget, is $8.33 split up among 12 teammates. To sign up, contact ASU Intramural Sports at 965-8911. Only ASU students or faculty are eligible. Teams from UofA and NAU are entered.

"Nike doesn't do this for everyone," said Bourget, whose Sparkey's team lost in the regional finals last year to Boise State. "It would be a shame if the school doesn't take advantage of this opportunity."

"Don't let some teams from UofA or NAU come to our house and take the trips right out from under our noses just because we couldn't find anyone to represent ASU."
