Students construct house for needy

BY ALLY ASHER
STATE PRESS

Hammers pounded, sawdust flew and prayers were answered Saturday when students banded together with ASU's Habitat for Humanity chapter to build a house for an Arizona family in need.

The groundbreaking took place at 1334 E. St. Anne St. in Phoenix. The house is being built for the Mendoza family and is scheduled to be finished in 13 weeks.

"Students will work for 13 Saturdays and sometimes on Tuesdays to help keep the house up to speed," said Natalie Scott, vice president of activities for ASU's Habitat for Humanity chapter.

Scott said the organization has been working on collecting donations for the event from different ASU clubs and construction organizations and was able to raise

Degree proposal placed on hold for 1 year

BY KAREN YAMADA
STATE PRESS

State legislators decided Thursday to let the steam out of the pressure-cooker and wait another year to decide if community colleges should offer four-year degrees.

In their quest to bring changes to higher education in Arizona, Sen. Carol Springer, R-Flagstaff, and Rep. James Carruthers, R-Yuma, continued to challenge members of the Senate Higher Education Study Committee.

"A lot of progress has been made simply by having meetings and I think we are moving in the right direction," Springer said to the 17 committee members seated around the table.

"As a result of these discussions, Rep. Carruthers and I have agreed that we will accept the offer of the Regents and the universities and go forward, for in essence a year, of trying to continue this structure. And we have a budget footnote that we are going to recommend, in lieu of any bill."

The budget footnote instructs the committee to recommend an action plan with specific timelines by Dec. 15.

Springer's offensive, which sometimes took on battle-like proportions, began in the legislature last year when she sponsored a bill to bring more degree offerings to students in rural towns, where community colleges are often the only form of higher education available.

The issues as to how to do that without duplicating degree programs, establishing competition between the universities and community colleges and implementing another layer of higher education delivery in the state, have been contentious since the beginning.

Fife Symington, then governor of Arizona, vetoed the bill in April saying it "represents a substantial departure from the existing structure of higher education in Arizona."

Since then the committee, consisting of representatives from the universities, community colleges, the University of Phoenix and the private sector, has been meeting to study the issue.

Committee members expressed their thanks to Springer and Carruthers for making the decision to wait a year. They also rallied behind the vote of confidence that the issues be

Americans 'scientifically illiterate,' lawmaker says

BY CHRIS KAHN
STATE PRESS

On their graduation day, college students were once asked this simple question: Why is it hot in the summer and cold in the winter?

A simple enough question, but one that only 10 percent of graduates knew the answer, said U.S. Representative Vernon Ehlers, R-Mich., at a special colloquium for the physics department on Friday.

Equipped with a laser pointer and overhead projector, the former physics professor told the crowd of mostly physics students and faculty that Americans are alarmingly scientifically illiterate and most have the notion that they could "never do that stuff."

Ehlers, now the vice chairman of the House Science Committee, called on his fellow educators to be better advocates of science.

"When you're at a party and someone says, 'What do you do?' and you say, 'I'm a physicist,' they say, 'Oh,' then usually the conversation stops," said

Ehlers. "This is a great opportunity to explain to them how exciting science is."

If people are going to understand things like the energy crisis, Ehlers added, it's extremely important for everyone to have a basic understanding of science.

Improving math and science education is one aspect that Ehlers will concentrate on as he leads a congressional effort to develop a new science and technology policy.

The new science policy will be concise, coherent and comprehensive, said

Ehlers, developing partnerships between government, industry and universities.

"We must be better educators of students and the public," Ehlers said.

The current U.S. science policy was shaped during the Cold War, and Congress is concerned with the decline in such areas as non-defense related scientific research.

"The policy should be visionary—not look at the future as what it is likely to be, but what it should be," said Ehlers.

$5,000 for supplies. Volunteers from Sigma Lambda Chi Construction Fraternity and the Association of General Contractors of ASU worked through the day putting up the exterior walls of the building.

"There was a really impressive turnout," said Pete Johnson, president of Sigma Lambda Chi Fraternity and treasurer for the Associated General Contractors.

Johnson said his organization found out about Habitat for Humanity and wanted to help support the family.

"It's very worthwhile," he said. "We do understand that they work and are well deserving of this home. They just needed a lift-off."

Justin Connolly, a Habitat for Humanity member, said he found building the house incredibly rewarding.

"It's a great way to give something back to the community," Connolly said.

"By the end of the day you can really see progress, and that's really satisfying. It's a great way to spend a Saturday," he said.

Misael Mendoza and his family will be moving into the house in May. Mendoza said he appreciates all of the hard work and effort being put toward building his family's home.

Keith Winn, public relations coordinator for Arizona's Habitat for Humanity chapter, said they received an anonymous donation of $50,000 for the funding and gave it to ASU's chapter. He said families are picked based on certain qualifications pertaining to their past credit history and need of housing.

Winn said Habitat for Humanity has built over 100 homes in the Valley and that the organization is geared toward helping families mortgage a home over a 20-year period.

"Every family deserves a decent place to live," he said.

"The challenge is before you," Carruthers said. "I hope you come up with a mutually agreed upon solution. It won't be easy and everyone won't come out with everything they want."

Regent Judy Gignac, representing the Arizona Board of Regents, said, "I want to express my thanks to the chairs in ensuring that we're moving forward in a rational, orderly manner. It is such an important issue for the whole Arizona higher education system that it's not something you blithely go into."

Blake Anderson, government lobbyist for ASU, said the University already is implementing a program through the "2+2 system" that allows students to complete their baccalaureate in applied science by seamlessly transferring their first two years of community college credit.

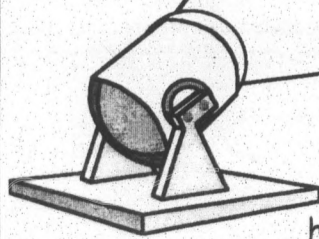

"At (ASU) East we will be offering the applied baccalaureate degree, NAU just recently got board approval to offer the same, and at (ASU) West it's being considered," Anderson added.

Palestinians reject plan for 10 percent Israeli pullback

BY IMAD MUSA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

RAMALLAH, West Bank — Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat on Sunday rejected a plan for a limited Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank, but Secretary of State Madeleine Albright called his response "hasty" and asked him to reconsider, a Palestinian official said.

Albright asked Arafat to take two weeks to rethink his response to a plan she presented that would turn over 10 percent more of the West Bank to Palestinian control in three phases, according to a senior Palestinian official present at the meeting, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Palestinians have full or partial control over 27 percent of the West Bank and have said they want control of more than 90 percent before a final peace settlement with Israel.

David Bar-Illan, a senior aide to Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, said the phased plan was an American idea, "likely based on what the Americans have surmised Israel is ready to offer." He added that Israel "insists on concrete action on the part of the Palestinian Authority before any territory is relinquished."

Israel's Cabinet has come up with a list of demands — most related to security — that the Palestinians must meet before Israel withdraws from any territory.

Assessments of Albright's weekend meetings with Arafat and Netanyahu were discouraging.

Albright said the two sides agreed to send envoys to Washington next week to try to break the yearlong impasse in the peace process, but acknowledged only "minimal progress" during her whirlwind visit.

Netanyahu, speaking Sunday night to a group of American Orthodox Jews in Jerusalem, said there were "substantial gaps" and that there had been no agreement on the extent of the withdrawal.

"I think we've made some progress, but I wouldn't overstate it," he said.

Underscoring tensions, Israeli troops and Palestinian police briefly trained weapons on one another during a clash in the West Bank town of Bethlehem — the second such face-off in recent weeks.

Sunday's fighting marked the third day of battles between Israeli soldiers and Palestinian protesters in Bethlehem. In the clash — on the line between an Israeli-controlled area and a Palestinian-controlled one — about 50 young people hurled rocks and bottles at the soldiers, who fired back rubber bullets and tear gas.

Two protesters were hit with rubber-coated steel pellets and four suffered tear-gas inhalation.

Albright, preparing to depart for a round of regional diplomacy on the crisis in Iraq, told reporters in Jerusalem she had "hoped we would get further on this trip than we have."

"I am not as satisfied as I wish I could be in terms of the mettle of the answers that I got," she said.

Netanyahu met with his Cabinet on Sunday after holding more than four hours of talks with Albright on Saturday night.

Cabinet Secretary Danny Naveh said it would be a mistake for the Americans to pressure Israel. "It would only lead to stalemate, to needless tensions between Israel and the American administration and I don't think that's in the interest of the Americans," Naveh said.

Netanyahu played down any American pressure, saying only that "Differences are inevitable ... because the view from the Potomac is not the same as the view from the Jordan."

Arafat emerged silent and solemn after two hours of talks Sunday with Albright in the West Bank town of Ramallah. He did not speak to reporters.

Further clouding matters, Palestinian officials offered contradictory accounts Sunday of a meeting held to address a key Israeli demand — that the Palestinians renounce calls for Israel's destruction.

After a meeting Saturday night of the PLO executive committee, the Israeli newspaper Maariv reported in Sunday's editions that the Palestinians had "ratified" a letter from Arafat to President Clinton, saying the Palestinians renounced clauses in their national charter calling for the destruction of the Jewish state.

But a statement by the official Palestinian news agency WAFA — and accounts by several officials who were present — merely said the executive committee had been shown Arafat's letter.

The Palestinians contend the provisions were effectively canceled by an extraordinary 1996 vote of the Palestinian parliament-in-exile. But Israel says the Palestinians never followed up on that.

Market open for Web sites for presidential candidates

BY LAURENCE ARNOLD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — He has stamped his name across paid television commercials, a magazine and a publishing empire.

But Steve Forbes can't lay claim to one place that bears his name — the Internet address "www.Forbes2000.com."

The address belongs to two computer entrepreneurs in Arizona who say they are evaluating five-figure offers from at least three would-be buyers.

Other possible presidential contenders might have to make bids on their addresses as well.

From "Ashcroft2000.com" to "Whitman2000.org," Internet domain names that could prove useful to prospective candidates in 2000 have been snatched up by forward-thinking people nationwide.

"Right now, Forbes happens to be the hot one. He's the one everybody seems to be interested in," said Greg Trangmoe, technical director of Adeg LLC, the company that plans to sell its rights to "Forbes2000.com."

Currently, the company's page links visitors to three other sites — one of them pro-Forbes, the other two anti-Forbes. Unless Forbes buys the rights from Adeg, he can't be sure whether the site will end up in friendly or hostile hands.

Trangmoe said it's conceivable, but not likely, that one of the three current bidders for the domain name is a secret representative for the wealthy publishing executive.

Forbes representatives could not be reached for comment.

Dikran Yacoubian, a Republican political consultant in Germantown, Tenn., holds the rights to Web sites named for Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, Texas Gov. George W. Bush, Tennessee Sen. Fred Thompson, former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander and Missouri Sen. John Ashcroft.

Yacoubian says he will use his collection to make political statements, not money.

"My plan is to make sure the Republican nominee is elected president," he said.

That plan could include posting unflattering — but accurate, he promises — information about Rep. Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., and former Sen. Bill Bradley on two other sites for which he has the rights.

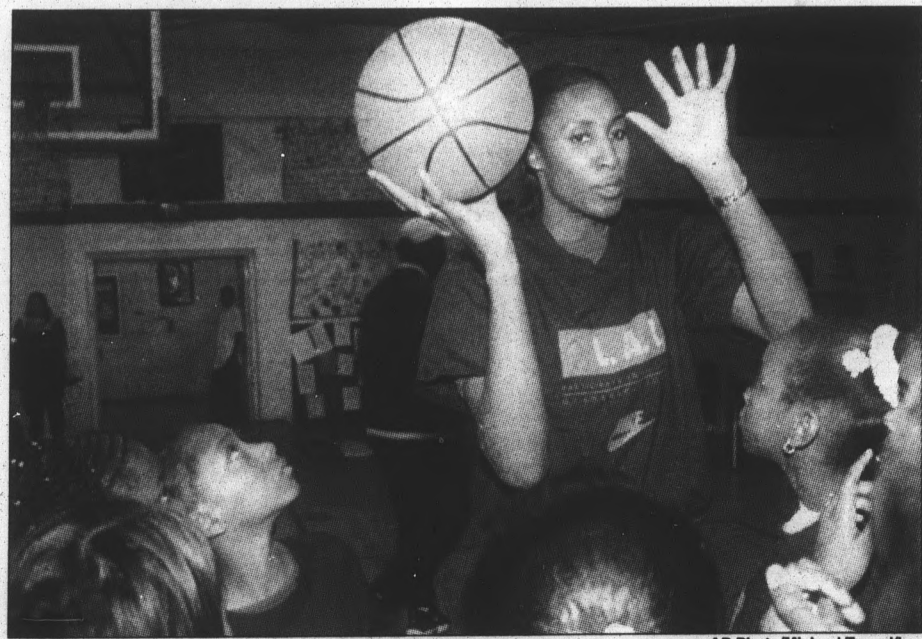

Some prospective candidates have less to worry about.

Ohio Rep. John Kasich, a Republican, might be heartened to know that "Kasich.com," "Kasich2000.com" and "Kasich2000.org" rest in the friendly hands of Gregory Kinzelman, a Washington anti-trust lawyer who once interned for him.

"John Kasich can have it for a nickel," Kinzelman said of his Kasich collection, "but Al Gore couldn't have it for a million dollars."

Registering a domain name is relatively cheap. Internic, the official domain registry, charges a $100 fee for rights to a name for two years. Additional years cost $50.

Freedom of expression also applies to mall preachers

Mall preachers. They have certainly made a home on our campus during the past week. Along with them, they have brought an entire list of issues nobody likes to deal with and sometimes questions to which no one knows the answers.

Firstly, do they have a right to be here?

This is a confusing topic that brings many more questions to mind. Is our campus public domain? It is not a private institution, but a state-funded school. Then again, we pay to be here, the preachers do not. However, neither do visitors coming to campus to see lectures, art, plays or simply just to check out the school.

It's a vicious cycle; where do you draw the line?

This is probably the most-asked question in regard to the freedom of expression. Once the line is definitively drawn, what's to stop it from creeping up on us until we're denied our right to protest the very words the preachers are attempting to shove down our throats?

The fact of the matter is that the preachers have just as much of a right to attempt to persuade the crowds into joining their faith, as the crowds have to mock them by preaching about Pepsi and Doritos.

Now, once they're here on campus, who's to say that their way is the only way? Preachers seem to possess this self-proclaimed omnipotence.

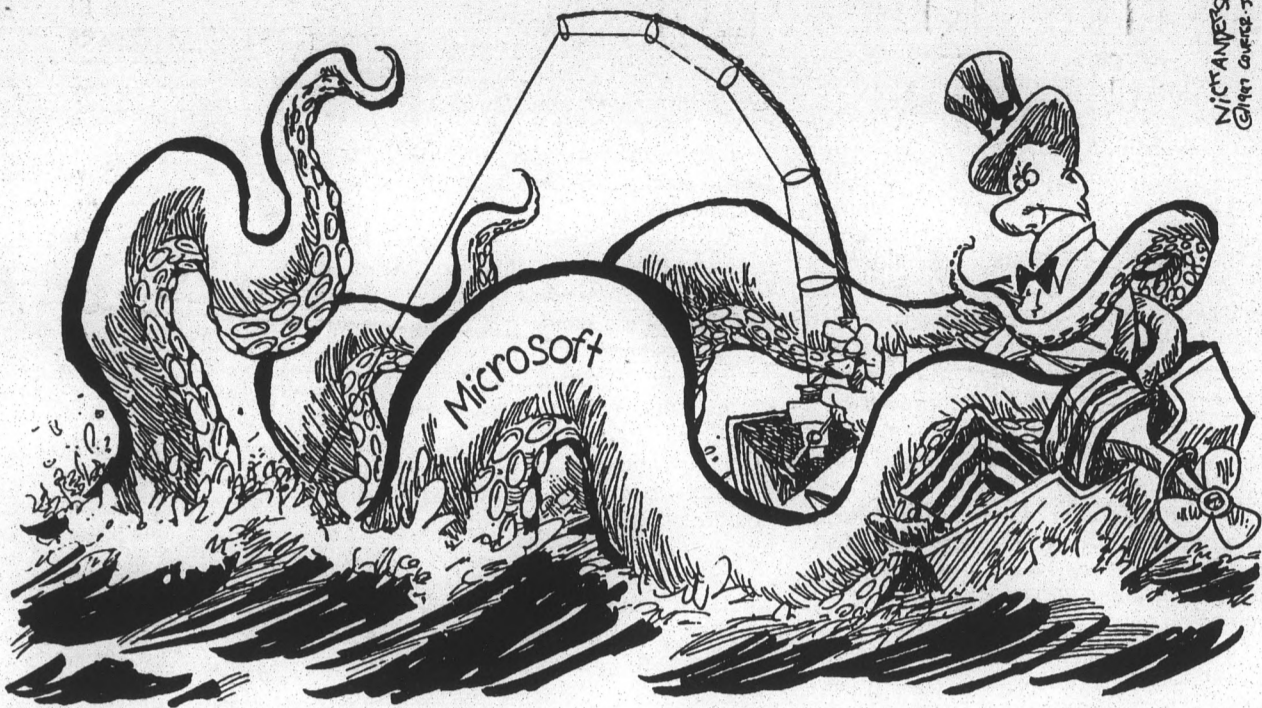

Many are offended when the preacher spouts his or her beliefs with certainty that this particular religion is the only way of faith. However, lately, it seems that you can simply pass up the first preacher and continue on to the next corner to find a whole new one who might be to your liking.

At the very least, the preacher could offer us some type of insurance. Something that states: "Whereby, in the event it should come down to judgment day and the preacher's theory is incorrect, he or she will be held accountable and all followers will be sent back to try their luck again."

The fact is that these preachers have come to our campus and are not going to be threatened by our heathen attitudes. If anything, we're fueling their fire.

So, you have a few choices in the manner in which you decide to deal with the preachers. You can listen to their words and follow their theory — provided the above described disclaimer is available. You may decide to stay and watch with the crowds simply for entertainment purposes. Or, you can react in the easiest manner of all: you can just keep walking and make up your own mind.

Sometimes the State Press may offend people and start controversies, but at least we don't deny you your sovereign right to ascend to a higher plane of existence upon dying.

Fife committed crime, but doesn't want time

Former Governor Fife Symington deserves to do time. At least that's what 58 percent of respondents said in a recent poll by KAET-TV and the Cronkite School of Journalism and Telecommunication at ASU.

GREGOR MCGAVIN
Columnist

Twenty-six percent said he should be given probation or public service, and the rest were undecided. Even among those who think he should be wearing prison blues, however, there seems to be no consensus as to just how much time he should serve.

A few points are clear, however. First, Symington is going to be sentenced today for his conviction on six counts of felony fraud. Just as certain is the fact that the ex-governor does not want to get locked up. But he doesn't want to pay the money back, either. Most important, however, is the fact that if you or I had been found guilty on similar charges, we would most assuredly be in the slammer.

See, that's the only way to look at the question of whether Symington should be behind bars. What if it someone a little less well-heeled and well-known had six federal fraud charges hanging over him?

Symington defense attorney Terry Lynam says Symington should never have to see the inside of a cell-block or even a military surplus tent, because "there was no loss caused by Fife." That's true. Unless, of course, you happen to consider $23 million a loss. His victims certainly do.

The thing is, Fife should be punished just the same as any other con man, from S&L sharks like Charles Keating to forgers and rubber-check artists. They are all the same animal guilty of the same crime. Where they differ, however, is in the fact that they don't think they should be punished for their crimes. They think they're somehow better than the average low-level grifter. They're wrong.

The fact is, they're no different from their down-market counterparts. Sure, their game is played out in more lush surroundings, and far greater sums are involved.

They even have a veneer of respectability. Keating was said to be a pillar of the community, and Symington held the most-powerful political office in the state. But swindling is swindling, whether for a few bucks or a few million. If anything, Symington's ilk caused more harm, because there were more victims.

Crooks like Symington and Keating leave the tax-paying public to foot the bill for their misdeeds. Then they don't think they should be punished, even when caught red-handed.

Of course, they should all pay for their crimes. Whether that payment is made in the form of time served or financial reimbursement is another matter. After all, con-artists are generally not violent or particularly dangerous criminals.

Maybe there's no reason for them to be put behind bars. Perhaps they could just pay back what they've swindled plus a hefty fine and get on with their reformed lives. After all, what kind of threat does Symington pose to society? Who's going to rush into business with him or even trust him with spare change?

But I almost forgot. He doesn't want to give the money back. He even claims he doesn't have it, despite spending more time on first-class flights than the average flight attendant. That's another thing that sets grifters like the former governor apart. Upscale con-men can afford to hire legal weasels to juggle the books and find loopholes for them.

With financial restitution out of the picture, the only possibilities remaining are public service and incarceration. Maybe he could put in a decade or two cleaning up Arizona's highways. Can't you just picture old Fife alongside I-10, picking up trash? Then again, that probably wouldn't sit too well with the former governor. He was all for "getting tough on crime." I guess there's really only one option open. You know what they say, Fife, "If you can't do the time ..."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

E-MAIL THE EDITOR
SINJIN@IMAP2.ASU.EDU

ASASU broken, but working

This letter is in response to the article "ASASU senators slacking off on their jobs" in the Jan. 30, 1998 edition of the State Press. Adrian Fontes slams the student government in almost every aspect possible. I agree with him when I say that the student government is not all that great, but I have several problems with his letter.

Fontes trashes the senate. I wonder if his hatred toward the student senate is because he ran for the office of executive vice president and lost last year? Fontes makes it sound like so many students care about every action the student government takes. How many people at ASU know that the senate office is on the third floor of the MU, or even know there is a third floor in the MU? Fontes questions how many students know their ASASU senators' names. I question how many people know the names of their Congressmen.

There has been a lot of great controversy in the student senate this past semester, and that is what gets time in the newspapers, letting the public know what's going on. Many good things people do are overshadowed by negative press. I think I have seen more things about President Clinton in the past week regarding a sex scandal than all of the things he has done in the past five years.

Autumn Ness and Andrew Lefberg, two of the most controversial members in the senate, do things that they believe are right. I do not agree with everything they do, but they both seem to follow their hearts.

Many people, like Adrian Fontes, deem things they [Ness and Lefberg] do as "wrong." My father told me something when I was younger, and it has been with me ever since: "People who don't do much of anything wrong, don't do much of anything."

Student voice silences preacher

I too watch the preachers. It just seems fun. They rant, rave, and say "fornicate" and "promiscuous" with a growl and a cool little hand-jiggle. They offend you and make you laugh. You heckle and curse at them and they get all the more narrow-minded. They're just kooky like that.

Wednesday they went a little too far. Sister-whatever-her-name was explaining about what the Bible says about "Be-stil-i-ty" (you have to write it like that to fully encompass her drawl). She accused several "Indians" of "fornicating" with the wildlife, which, according to her, was why they were evicted from the land. Then she attacked the gays by saying: "Those homos just can't get enough of other men, so they start using animals to for-ni-cate with." Well, all at once, all the gays and all the Native Americans stood up for direct confrontation. It felt like the Klan episode of The Jerry Springer Show. At the very height of where the three forces were on the verge of violence, a voice, small and sad, cried out from the middle of it all. "Please stop," the voice said, sobbing watery, red tears, to the Soap-boxer. "Please don't present this to them this way. Don't be a representative for God with hate." And for the first time in days, the hecklers and the preachers all fell silent. "God does not hate! God is love. God loves everyone. It doesn't matter if you're a sinner or if you're a homosexual. God loves everyone. God is about acceptance. He doesn't love you or me more than anyone else. You know that Timothy McVeigh, who killed all those people? God loves him, because God loves everyone." I don't know if I believe in a God who loves everyone, or God at all, but at that moment, I found a mortal who does. She walked off alone and several members of the audience shook her hand and hugged her. What needed to be said was said, and everyone was a tad disappointed that the fun was over. Luckily though, the Cluck-U Chicken jumped into center ring and dispersed free Hot-Wing coupons and made everything OK.

Separatism not the answer

It was rather disgusting to read the front page of the State Press on Wednesday, Jan. 28. The headline was "Black unity week strives for equality." The headline alone made me laugh, but what disturbed me was what I read at the rally. Vince Nicholes, chair of the Black African Coalition, was quoted in the State Press article saying, "At this point in time, with what's going on with race relations on campus, it's important for us to come together to make the type of progress we want." I stopped by the Hayden lawn, Mr. Nicholes, to pick up The Final Call newspaper distributed at one of the tables. The newspaper had the Muslim program printed in it and read "We believe that to offer integration is hypocritical ..." and further read that "the time in history has arrived for the separation from the whites of this nation." The entire paper slammed the white race. Even the cover of the paper depicted a white man with white features "dumbing down America" with black children as the victims. This reminded me of last semester when the black students cried foul play on a cartoon in the State Press. Are any white students crying foul play?

It will be impossible to reach equality while preaching separatism. I wonder what the response would be if there was a rally to promote equality on campus sponsored by the White American Coalition and included the Ku Klux Klan? I also wonder, if there were scholarships and counseling centers formed for white students and affirmative action policies for whites only, would the school administration sponsor these programs? If the school officials and the minorities who attend ASU are worried about discrimination, remove the race box from the application. Equality at this school is a big joke, and the Unity Week gave me a good laugh. As long as we label everyone as white, black, yellow and brown, we will never achieve equality.

Preachers, leave us alone

I'm really sick of the religious zealots, who spend their entire days standing on their pulpits in the middle of campus, yelling and clapping their hands and slapping their Bibles and throwing out epithets to every scantily clad woman who just happens to walk by. Personally, I find the whole principal of religious conversion as ridiculous as trying to convert people into believing that Santa Claus, the tooth fairy and honest monogamous politicians actually exist. It would be just as ridiculous enough to start believing in polytheism again; why not start telling people to start worshipping Zeus again, or Odin, Thor or Rah? If you're going to actually believe in a god, you might as well believe in a cool god. I don't know about you, but Zeus could take out Buddha any old day of the week. Billy Joel wrote, "... I'd rather laugh with the sinners, than cry with the saints, the sinners have much more fun ..." Well amen brother, and stop worrying about yourself, mind your own business and let me walk to class in peace.

Book burning enlightens world

This past Friday I saw something on campus I never thought I would see on a university campus, the place espoused as the marketplace of ideas ... a book burning.

GEORGE D. ROSE SR.
Columnist

It reminded me of the Nazi book burning of the 1930s, where tens of thousands of books were burned. The Nazis and all others who have burned books over the centuries did so because they feared what the books had to say. Little did they realize that by burning them, they gave the books power.

The power of the words they contained threatened agendas and preconceptions. The ideas and principles in these books challenged a particular way of thinking, as well as that agenda's actions and dogma. I'm sure that some of these books raised questions about whether the things the Nazis were doing were right.

Winston Churchill said of the Nazis and their attempt to purge their world, "They are afraid of words and thoughts. These terrify them."

John Milton, the English poet who wrote Paradise Lost, said, "He who destroys a good book kills reason itself, kills the Image of God, as if it were in the eye. Many a man lives a burden to the Earth, but a good book is the precious life-blood of a master spirit, embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a life beyond life."

I know that the young man who burned the book was sending a symbolic message. It was not spontaneous, but it was thought out and planned (I make this assumption because he had soaked the book in lighter fluid before entering the public arena). What was it about this particular book that threatened him?

Was it the principles in the book that suggested that we should live peaceably with all other men and women? Was it the concept that suggested we were directly responsible for our actions and any subsequent consequences? Or was it the simple rules it contained for a full and rich life free from many of the problems that we, the human species, face?

I don't know the answer to these questions, but I'm sure that much of what it said ran contrary to his desires and lifestyle. Why else would he be so threatened? He said that he was now capable of thinking for himself. I asked him what the book said. He didn't know. I had hoped for a more reasoned answer.

The book he burned has been responsible for a greater number of literary works than any other book in history. It has been sustained through greater assaults than this. This book, when applied without our prejudices, can guide and direct us to fuller, richer lives.

The book? The Bible. On second thought, I should be glad that he burned it, since, in the words of Ralph Waldo Emerson, "Every burned book enlightens the world." Who is to say that someone might just read it to see exactly what power this book holds. Either that, or they will embrace the same ignorant fear the Nazis held — fear without reason or understanding.

Giuliano bolsters re-election bid by aggressive fund-raising

BY AISLINN FAHY
STATE PRESS

Six weeks before the election, Tempe Mayor Neil Giuliano has garnered over $80,000 in his fight for re-election against political newcomer Jay Mansperger.

This amount is even larger than the $51,337 he raised in his first mayoral race in 1994, where he broke all city spending records. With a little over a month left, Giuliano has $71,559 to spend on his third mayoral campaign.

"The mayor is dedicated to his campaign," Rudy Campbell, a spokesperson for the mayor, told a group of citizens Saturday at the Pyle Center. "We are a city that is the envy of others in the Valley, and the mayor has had a great deal to do with that. We want everyone to know exactly what he has accomplished."

Campbell said that a majority of the 41-year-old mayor's finances came from individual donations from personal friends, namely old fraternity brothers all over the country.

According to reports filed this week, $48,449 comes from small individual donations, 64 percent of which is from people living beyond the city's borders.

"This just goes to show you that the influence is coming from outside of our city limits," said Art Jacobs, who puts out the Internet's Freedom of Information Times.

Jacobs, whose company is credited with putting out "the other side of the news," said that with a little more than 30 percent of the resources coming from in town, it is not absurd to believe that people without Tempe addresses wield some authority in the city.

Other Valley mayoral races have had large price tags in the past. In 1996, Chandler Mayor Jay Tibshraeny spent $19,336, and Mesa Mayor Wayne Brown spent $76,068.

An analysis of Giuliano's 513 contributions shows that a large bulk — over $29,000 — came from money left over from the 1996 campaign, where he ran unopposed and spent only $3,000.

Another $3,150 of Giuliano's financial support comes from nine political action committees, including the Salt River Project and the Phoenix Firefighters.

Campbell said that the mayor's record and commitment to the community speak for themselves, and the campaign will concentrate on making citizens aware of the progress the city has made.

Citizens can look for this information on a custom-built Internet site that cost the mayor $2,500.

"Fund-raising should not have to reach these kinds of extreme proportions," Mansperger told the crowd Saturday at the event, which was sponsored by the Taxpayer's Association. "This is just an indicator of the need to change our philosophy in this city and prioritize our spending."

Mansperger, who has to file his financial statement by Monday's deadline, said that he is concentrating his efforts on Tempe's neighborhood before the March 10 election.

"A lot of people feel like they have been neglected," he said, "so it is more important to physically put myself out there and meet the members of the community who want and need to be heard."

PEOPLE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charlie Chaplin's "Little Tramp" has his very own postage stamp.

A 32-cent stamp immortalizing the silent film legend's best-known character was unveiled Saturday at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Undersized and shabbily dressed, the mustachioed comic character was created in 1914. The tramp's flimsy bamboo cane and signature tottering penguin walk helped make Chaplin an early cinematic icon.

"The museum is proud to host an event that pays tribute to this great film artist and reminds the American public of his talent and comedic genius," said Ian Birnie, film programs director at the art museum.

The "Little Tramp" was the 27th of 30 commemorative stamps honoring major historical figures, places, events and trends from each decade of the 20th century.

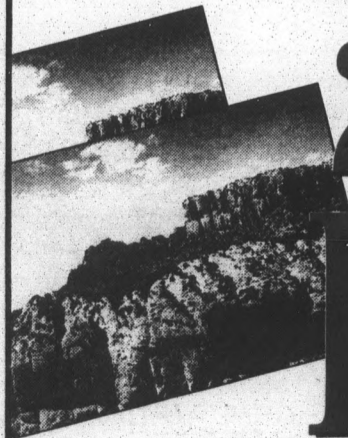

NEW YORK (AP) — Beverly Hills, 90210 star Tiffani-Amber Thiessen is moving to a new ZIP code.

Thiessen, who plays Valerie Malone, one of the melodrama's nastiest characters, has already notified show officials about her plans to quit, TV Guide reports in its Feb. 7-13 issue. It was unclear why she decided to leave.

Teen, alleged ringleader of vampire cult, fears biased jury in murder trial

BY MIKE SCHNEIDER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAVARES, Fla. — Animal torture and mutilations, teens drinking each other's blood, a girl's parents bludgeoned to death and a corpse marked with occult markings.

Sounds like stock elements of a horror movie, but on Monday, jury selection was set to begin in the trial of a teenager whose alleged vampire cult is accused of committing all of the above acts.

Accused cult ringleader Rod Ferrell, 17, could face the death penalty if convicted of a charge of first degree murder.

Ferrell is nervous, especially about whether it's possible to find jurors in this rural area who have not heard about the lurid case, says his lawyer William Lackay.

"I think it's going to be hard, but not impossible," Lackay said of his chances for success.

Important to the case is the testimony of Heather Wendorf, a 16-year-old cult devotee whose parents were beaten to death in their home in November 1996.

That afternoon, Wendorf and Ferrell — a friend who was the cult's "sire" — performed a blood-drinking ritual in a cemetery to induct, or "cross over," her as a fellow vampire, according to investigators.

"The person that gets crossed over is like subject to whatever the sire wants," Wendorf said in a deposition. "Like the sire is boss, basically. They have authority over you."

In the cemetery, investigators say, she and Ferrell talked about their plans to leave town. Ferrell allegedly discussed killing Wendorf's parents, but she told him not to harm them, investigators allege.

Ferrell, Wendorf and others had plotted for seven months through letters and phone conversations to run away together. Considered misfits when they met at Eustis High School, the two found solace in each other's company. When Ferrell later moved to Kentucky, they stayed in touch.

The two were found bludgeoned at their home in Eustis, about 35 miles northwest of Orlando. Wendorf was beaten severely in the face; Queen was found face-down on a bloody kitchen floor.

A "v" sign surrounded by circular marks was burned into Richard Wendorf's body. Police said it was the sign of Ferrell's vampire clan and each circular mark represented a clan member.

Only Ferrell is charged with the actual killing. Another teen, Howard Scott Anderson, 17, is accused of being a principal to murder by being at the house but doing nothing to stop the killings. He faces the death penalty despite the reduced charge.

Charged with being accessories to murder are Dana L. Cooper, 20, and Charity Keese, 17, both of Kentucky. They do not face the death penalty.

The two were not at the house at the time, but later left town with the others in the Wendorfs' stolen car. All five were caught a few days later in Louisiana. Heather Wendorf was cleared by a grand jury.

Although his lawyer says he's nervous, friends have described Ferrell as hostile and prone to animal torture.

He may have had a troubled family life as well. His mother, Sondra Gibson, pleaded guilty in Kentucky last November to trying to entice a 14-year-old boy into having sex as part of a vampire initiation ritual.

John Goodman, a Kentucky cult member who didn't travel with Ferrell to Florida, said his friend "had become possessed with opening the gates to hell, which meant he would have to kill a large number of people in order to consume their souls. By doing this, Ferrell believed that he would obtain super powers."

When questioned by investigators, Heather Wendorf said the only reason she went with the group was because she had no place to go and feared she would be blamed for the murders. She said she learned about the murders during the trip and was distraught at hearing her parents were dead.

Pharmaceutical merger would send stocks soaring

By JOHN HENDREN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A potential merger between SmithKline Beecham PLC and Glaxo Wellcome PLC would create winners and losers on Wall Street and Main Street alike, with stocks expected to make big moves starting Monday and workers fearing the loss of thousands of jobs.

Analysts expected shares of the rival British drug makers to surge in London and New York following the announcement late Friday that the companies were discussing what would be the largest corporate merger in history.

But the news that SmithKline had spurned American Home Products in favor of Glaxo will likely send that Madison, N.J., drug maker's stock sharply downward, they said.

With all major issues resolved, including senior management positions, Glaxo's majority 59.5 percent share, a British headquarters and reportedly even the name — Glaxo SmithKline PLC, according to the Sunday Telegraph of London — analysts said the pact appeared all but complete.

The companies disclosed the talks without any legal obligation to do so, said Hemant K. Shah, an independent drug-industry analyst in Warren, N.J.

"That clearly shows that they want to get the deal done," Shah said. "I think it's almost a done deal."

A merger would unite Glaxo Wellcome's product line, which includes the ulcer drug Zantac and AIDS medication AZT, with SmithKline's antidepressant Paxil and over-the-counter products such as Aquafresh toothpaste, Geritol vitamins, the Nicoderm anti-smoking patch and Tums antacids.

Union leaders warned that a merger could cost up to half of the companies' 20,000 jobs in the United Kingdom alone, said Roger Lyons, general secretary of the Manufacturing, Science and Finance Union in London.

And in the United States, potentially deeper cuts could come from duplicated research and development, and sales and marketing organizations.

Lyons on Sunday called on the British government to block the merger, saying it "will not help employees, will not help consumers, will not improve health care and will have a significant effect on science employment."

Lynne Smith, of SmithKline Beecham, called the union's claim of up to 10,000 job losses premature and "pure speculation."

In this country, the Federal Trade Commission has authority only over the U.S. subsidiaries of the British drug makers. However, companies have shown a willingness to appease regulators in the world's largest drug market; in the $30 billion merger between Swiss firms Sandoz AG and Ciba Geigy that formed Novartis AG, the companies spun off some animal health businesses in part due to FTC objections.

SmithKline has a market value of about $70 billion and Glaxo Wellcome $96 billion. If Glaxo Wellcome winds up buying SmithKline, the deal would eclipse the most expensive merger announced to date, the planned buy-out of MCI Communications Corp. by WorldCom Inc. for stock valued at about $37 billion.

If the deal goes through, many analysts expect it to prompt a frenzy of mergers among drug makers seeking to compete with the new behemoth.

Wall Street had already begun to bid up the stocks of potential takeover targets. Pharmacia & Upjohn Inc. stock jumped 5 percent Friday amid speculation that it was ripe for a merger.

Some analysts believe American Home, maker of Advil pain relievers, Centrum vitamins and Premarin estrogen, also remains a likely merger partner, although company spokesman Lowell Weiner would not say whether the company was still seeking a suitor.

Doctors view gunshot wounds as public-health epidemic

BY TOM RAGAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — William Schwab hasn't ever gone to war, but the 51-year-old surgeon says he sometimes thinks he's in one.

"We average about 500 gunshot wounds a year," said Schwab, chief of critical care and trauma for the hospital of the University of Pennsylvania.

"I trained in the U.S. Navy during Vietnam, and it's similar," he said. "Think of the phrase 'incoming wounded.' That's what it's like."

A survey published in Sunday's issue of the Annals of Internal Medicine finds that 87 percent of surgeons and 94 percent of internists across the country believe it's time to consider gunshot wounds a public-health epidemic — akin to AIDS, alcoholism and tobacco use.

Doctors should play a more active role in trying to prevent the injuries, an accompanying position paper says, whether it's supporting more stringent gun-control legislation or simply taking time to counsel patients.

The position paper predicted that bullets will kill more people than automobile accidents by 2003.

The authors also noted that more teens today die from gunshot wounds than from all natural causes combined, and that firearms in the home make homicide three times more likely.

"Do you have a gun in the house? Is it loaded? And did you know suicide can go up five-fold when you have one around that is loaded? Those are the kinds of questions doctors should start asking and telling their patients," said Frank Davidoff, an internist and editor of the journal, published by the Philadelphia-based American College of Physicians.

The survey involved 915 doctors who answered 55 questions, including the extent of their personal and medical experience with firearms and their opinions on public policy.

Less than 20 percent of the surgeons and internists reported discussing firearm ownership or storage with their patients.

The survey showed that 64 percent of the surgeons and 84 percent of the internists said they thought stronger measures were needed to reduce gun-related deaths, which reached 39,720 in 1994. That includes 13,593 slayings and 20,540 suicides, the journal said.

Couple's love story spawns interviews, book & movie deal

LAS VEGAS, N.M. (AP) — Kim Carpenter stood by his wife Krickett's side after she lost her short-term memory and most of her motor skills in a serious traffic accident.

He could be standing by her side as the couple does the Hollywood scene. Last week they renewed a contract for a movie deal with Caravan Pictures, a Disney-aligned production company, and are working with writers on a revised screenplay.

The story, to be called The Vow in both book and movie form, attracted international attention as a tale of love that endured through trying circumstances.

The Carpenters were married Sept. 8, 1993, in Scottsdale, Ariz. Two months later, driving to Phoenix to spend Thanksgiving with relatives, their car flipped near Gallup.

Rescue workers thought Krickett Carpenter was dead. Her husband — who walked away unscathed — went to the hospital expecting to say good-bye. She had suffered a brain stem injury and slipped into a coma.

Three weeks later, she awoke, but with no short-term memory. She didn't remember her husband.

As she recovered and began relearning motor skills, Carpenter — on the advice of a counselor — began courting her again. She fell in love and on Valentine's Day in 1995, he proposed again. They were married a second time on May 25, 1996.

Calls poured in from newspapers and TV stations throughout the world. To date, Carpenter said, the couple has done more than 80 interviews with newspapers, magazines and television shows.

Carpenter, an assistant athletics director at New Mexico Highlands University, said he and his wife are looking for a publisher for their book, written by Janet Tamaro.

"The book is where our hearts are," he said. "The movie — you know how movies can be, and that's fine because the movie business is the movie business. But the book is important to us."

Krickett Carpenter, now an exercise specialist at Northeastern Regional Medical Center in Las Vegas, is doing well.

Carpenter said he and his wife remain grounded despite the publicity. "The biggest thing, really, is our faith," he said. "That's been the whole focus of this situation."

Tattoo-shop owner wants name changed to 'The Scary Guy'

TUCSON (AP) — Earl Kenneth Kaufmann is getting a new name to go with his new business.

Kaufmann was still a Midwestern computer salesman 14 years ago when he got his first tattoo, a small dragon. Now, he owns a string of tattoo parlors, and the dragon has grown into part of an intricate tablea that covers 85 percent of his body, including much of his face.

On Monday, Kaufmann plans to go before a Pima County Superior Court judge and finalize the petition he filed Jan. 23 — to change his name to "The Scary Guy."

The name comes from an advertisement by a competing tattoo shop that asked, "Are you tired of dealing with scary guys with war paint facial tattoos?" in what Kaufmann says was an obvious reference to him.

His workers began answering the phones with, "The Tattoo Shop. Home of The Scary Guy," and Kaufmann incorporated it into his advertising.

The Scary Guy said he's been artistic all his life, but something happened after the dragon came to life on his arm.

"When I first got my tattoo, I fell in love with it as an art form," Kaufmann said. "I liked how it felt when I looked at it."

A tiger tattoo on his right arm followed the next day, a panther on his chest the day after that.

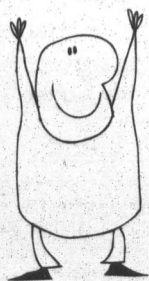

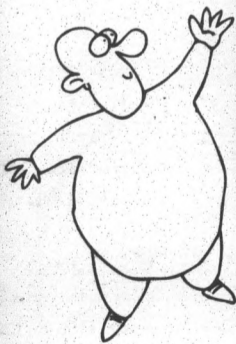

He left his computer sales job of 10 years to become a tattoo artist and moved to Tucson four years ago. The facial tattoos soon followed.

"When I first started getting tattooed on my neck, I got a couple bars on my face," he said.

The name change isn't purely for business reasons, he admits.

"I never really liked the name Earl."

STANFORD STUFFED

Sun Devils surprise No. 4 Cardinal in OT shocker

By MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

Instead of another moral victory, the ASU men's basketball team learned the moral of their season.

After coming up short on two occasions against top-10 teams earlier this campaign, the Sun Devils found their spark Saturday in Palo Alto, Calif., defeating No. 4 Stanford 90-87 in overtime and shocking the college basketball world in the process.

"Proving the only thing that matters is hanging tough and believing in each other," interim head coach Don Newman said about his squad, which was picked to finish last in the conference in the Pac-10 media poll.

ASU is now 14-8 overall and tied for fifth in the Pac-10 at 4-5.

"There really is no such thing as a moral victory," Newman added. "We came into this gym, and we came in for the victory. We prepare hard to not only be in games but to win games."

That preparation had kept ASU in position to accomplish this same sort of upset against then-No. 2 Kansas and then-No. 10 UCLA. The Sun Devils, however, let late leads dwindle and ended up with an L both times.

Reversing the rolls against the Cardinal (18-2, 7-2), though, was the difference as ASU came back from a five-point deficit with under five minutes to go.

Trailing 68-63, the Sun Devils went on a 13-5 run to pull ahead 76-73 with 28 seconds remaining. A three-pointer by Stanford's Ryan Mendez 10 seconds later, however, sent the game to an extra frame.

In overtime, senior guard Jeremy Veal, who led all scorers with 27 points, paced the Sun Devils by sinking eight consecutive free throws, and ASU gained its first victory over a ranked opponent in 14 games.

Veal said it was a relief to break that losing streak.

"This is huge. We've come close to ranked teams before but today we came out and finished the job. We had heart out there and a lot of desire," Veal said.

Cardinal guard Arthur Lee said his team wasn't mentally focused after they suffered their first defeat of the season Thursday to the UofA.

"The guys weren't ready to play,"

Lee said. "Too many people were still thinking about Thursday, and too many people were thinking they could take them (ASU) for granted."

Stanford head coach Mike Montgomery concurred.

"We weren't prepared mentally to the fact that Arizona State was as good as they are," he said. "We couldn't answer them. We made some decisions that were not wise and we paid a price."

After taking a 40-38 lead into intermission, the Cardinal began the second half with a quick 9-2 spurt. The nine-point lead (49-40), though, was the farthest Stanford would pull away.

Forward Mike Batiste, who finished with 17 points and nine rebounds before fouling out, scored 13 of the Sun Devils' next 28 points as they tied the score at 68 with 3:23 remaining.

"Right then I knew we were going to win," Batiste said, referring to the three-point shot he sank to complete the comeback.

Newman said perfection of the game plan was key.

"We needed to right the wrong when we got to Stanford," Newman said. "These guys took the game plan. They put it in their hearts, they put it in their minds and they executed and did it in overtime. I'm really, really proud of those Sun Devils."

He added that "phenomenal" individual defense was also a factor.

"I think (Batiste) did a phenomenal job on Tim Young. If he doesn't score a bucket, it's as good as scoring for us."

Young, who was 0-4 from the field in overtime, led Stanford with 24 points and 12 rebounds.

Forward Bobby Lazor added 22 points for the Sun Devils and was the high rebound man with 14.

ASU was outrebounded 40-36 but outshot the Cardinal from the field (50 percent to 41.3) and free-throw line (87.9-74.1).

Women's tennis volleys past No. 2 UCLA, No. 26 USC

By LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

The No. 8 ASU women's tennis team emerged victorious over two of the toughest opponents it will face in the Pac-10 Southern Division this weekend with wins over No. 26 USC 6-3 Saturday and No. 2 UCLA 5-4 Friday.

The weekend was the team's season opener for dual conference matches.

ASU's top-player, Reka Cseresnyes, came back after losing the first set to USC's Ditta Huber to win 1-6, 6-4, 6-3. Sun Devil freshman Karin Palme lost to Trojan Veronika Safarova in two tie-breaking sets 7-5, 7-5.

USC's Jacqui Boyd beat Stephanie Lansdorp 7-6, 6-1. Junior Alison Nash defeated Karolina Bakalarova 6-4, 6-0. Sophomore Kerry Giardino took her match to three sets before falling to USC's Kara Warkentin 4-6, 6-3, 6-3.

In her singles debut, Sun Devil freshman Celena McCoury beat USC's Amber Basica 6-1, 7-5.

Junior Katy Propstra didn't play singles, due to a slight sprain of her left ankle suffered in her doubles match Friday afternoon. Propstra, however, was cleared to play doubles on Saturday.

"It was hard to see Katy get hurt, but she (head coach Sheila McInerney) put me in there and it went really well," McCoury said. "As a freshman (in my first match I was nervous, but I pulled through."

With the singles matches split, it was up to the doubles teams to pull out the win for the Sun Devils.

The duo of Cseresnyes and Palme easily beat Basica and Warkentin 8-0. Nash and McCoury defeated Safarova and Bakalarova 8-3 and the top doubles team of Lansdorp and Propstra beat Huber and Boyd 8-6.

"I thought they did well, I expected it to be tough and it was," McInerney said. "But close, tight matches get you in better shape and give confidence."

Friday's matches against UCLA were even more of a battle.

Bruin Annica Cooper beat Cseresnyes 6-4, 2-6, 7-6. Palme defeated UCLA's Elizabeth Schmidt in straight sets 6-3, 6-1. Lansdorp beat Kelly Rudolph 6-4, 3-6, 6-4 and Nash defeated Kati Kocsis 6-3, 6-4.

Propstra fell to Cristina Popescu 6-4, 6-2 and Giardino lost to Bruin Brandi Freudenberg 6-7, 6-4, 6-3.

It came down to the No. 1 doubles team to decide the win after Cseresnyes and Palme beat Rudolph and Freudenberg 8-2, and McCoury and Nash lost to Kocsis and Cooper 9-8.

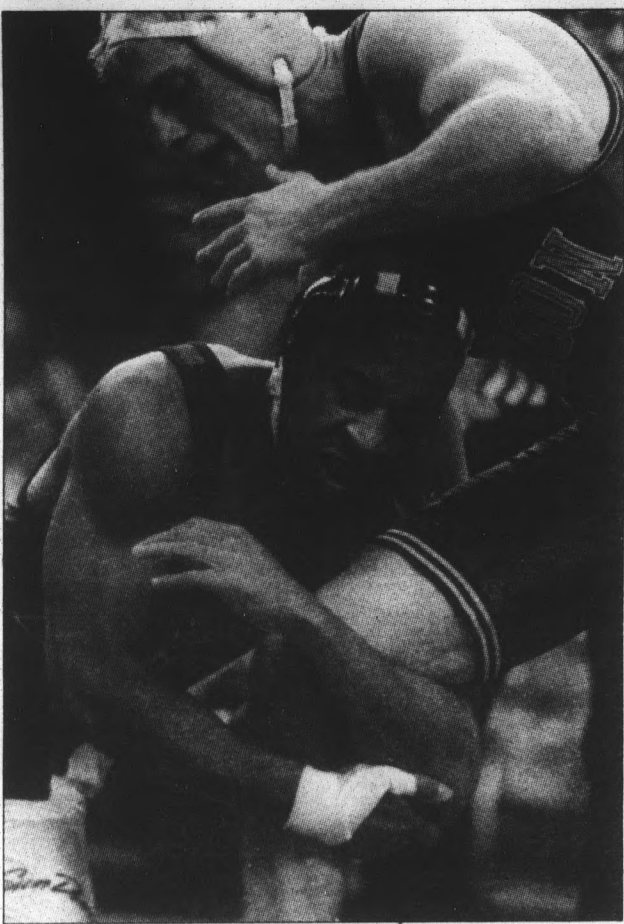

Lansdorp and Propstra put ASU over the top for the win with their 8-5 victory over Popescu and Schmidt.

Stephanie Lansdorp and the rest of the ASU women's tennis team earned two Pac-10 wins over the weekend. Lansdorp lost against USC, but came back to win versus UCLA in singles action.

"Both these matches were so tough and really close, it could've gone either way," Lansdorp said. "We're all really confident with our doubles, but it would be nice if it didn't always have to come down to the doubles."

ASU's next home matches are Feb. 14-15 when they take on UNLV and Washington State respectively. This week the Sun Devils will travel to Dallas to compete in the Rolex National Intercollegiate Championship from Feb. 5-8.

ASU's Shawn Ford, No. 9 in the country at 126 pounds, shoots on the leg of Oregon's David Perkins during Ford's 10-4 victory. The No. 5 Sun Devils defeated the No. 19 Ducks, 27-11, on Friday night at the UAC, and won 31-9 at BYU on Saturday.

Wrestlers waltz to victory

By SCOTT LEWIS
STATE PRESS

Forgive the ASU wrestlers if their focus wasn't completely on this weekend's dual meets against Oregon and BYU.

Despite Friday night's 27-11 home win over the 19th-ranked Ducks and Saturday afternoon's 31-9 road victory against the Cougars, the No. 5 Sun Devils impending home showdown with No. 2 Iowa next Sunday understandably looms large.

After all, it has been 10 years since ASU's last dual meet victory over the mighty Hawkeyes. It was also in 1987-88 that the Sun Devils won their only NCAA National Championship.

"We have a team that can contend with (Iowa)," ASU head coach Lee Roy Smith said. "We're going to be home and it's gonna be televised (FOXAZ) — and that's the first time we've been on TV I think ever. I know for the first time since I've been here.

"(Iowa's) the type of team and caliber of opponent you're going to have to beat to become a national champion."

One Sun Devil whose sights are set on becoming a national champion is senior Aaron Simpson, who continues to display the form that made him an All-American last season. Simpson, ranked second in the country at 177 pounds, led ASU on its weekend waltz with two pinfall victories, improving his dual meet season record to a sweet 16-0.

Against Oregon's Shawn O'Rourke, Simpson utilized four takedowns to open up a 12-5 lead before pinning O'Rourke with three seconds left in the match.

"I knew I was tired, but I figured if I'm tired, (O'Rourke) had to be exhausted," said Simpson, who upped his overall season record to 24-2. "I know I train harder than any 177-pounder in the country. I really believe that, I have to believe that."

Simpson wasn't the only weekend warrior, however, as sophomore Michael Kawamura (12th in the country at 118 pounds), senior Shawn Ford (9th at 126), freshman Steve Blackford (5th at 150), senior Matt Suter (9th at 158) and junior Casey Strand (11th at 167) also went through the Ducks and Cougars undefeated.

"They got a very sound team from top to bottom," said Oregon head coach Ron Finley, in his 28th season coaching the Ducks. "(ASU) has an outstanding team, and I think they have a good chance at doing something in the nationals."

Strand, in particular, exhibited his mat expertise over the weekend, winning an 11-5 decision over Oregon's Kevin Keeney and taking a 17-6 major decision over BYU's Jeremy Lott for his team-leading sixth major decision of the season.

In the first period against Keeney, Strand perfectly executed two single-leg shots that he followed with leg trips for the two-point takedowns. After a pretty duck-under go-behind, Strand had a 6-3 lead heading into the second, where he extended his lead even further with a high-crotch shot into a takedown and a step-over for the two points.

In the third period, up 9-5, Strand shot a double-leg on Keeney for the two points as time expired.

"(Strand is) remembering how he used to wrestle — and that was attack, attack and dominate," Simpson said of Strand, who placed sixth in the country in 1997. "And that's the type of wrestler (Strand) is. He's a dominator."

If the Sun Devils are going to end their winless streak against Iowa, it is going to take a team of dominators. With one week of practice before they meet the Hawkeyes, ASU is at the cusp of controlling its destiny.

"I think we've made some gains with our lineup," Smith said. "In fact, we improved from the Oregon match to the BYU match and that's what you want out of back-to-back dual meets. Now they're ready to get focused on the opportunity next Sunday. I'm excited about it."

Baseball sweeps through Hawaii

BY LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

Not even the strong tradewinds off the Kona coast could hold the ASU baseball team back as the Sun Devils swept a five-game series against Hawaii-Hilo this weekend.

ASU, 8-0, hasn't been undefeated this late in a season since 1988.

"This is a team (Hilo) that has done some things, we just caught them at the right time," head coach Pat Murphy said. "We had an opportunity to do a lot of things, but we made a lot of mistakes. Hopefully, we gained a little bit of confidence and got out some of the early season jitters."

ASU capped the series Sunday with a 14-0 shutout over the Vulcans. Freshman Chad Pennington got his first start and win going 7 2/3 innings, walking two and striking out eight. Senior Aaron Kramer finished off the seventh with a strikeout and junior Chuck Crumpton closed out the game walking one and striking out one. Russell Ricafort took the loss for the Vulcans.

Rightfielder Mikel Moreno was 3-for-6 with three RBI. First baseman Jeff Phelps was 2-for-4 with two runs and Dustin Delucchi had 3 RBI with one hit and one run scored.

"These are adverse conditions to somehow score 14 runs with 40 mile-an-hour winds coming straight in," Murphy said. "I'm proud that our guys held up in these conditions."

While the strong winds were a change from playing in the dry desert, Murphy thought it gave the team a chance to work on other aspects of the game. Since it was difficult to get the ball in the air, putting it on the ground became necessary and bunting became a big part of ASU's game.

"We played five games and in at least four games the wind was blowing straight in, so it gave us a chance to work on the little things," Murphy said.

ASU kicked off the series Thursday with a 7-0 shutout over the Vulcans.

Left-hander Ryan Mills got the win for the Sun Devils after going eight innings, allowing six hits, walking two and striking out seven. Hilo's Thomas Ford took the loss, allowing four runs on five hits, walking three and striking out 10.

The Sun Devils were led offensively by Moreno who went 3-for-5, with two RBI. Leftfielder Willie Bloomquist also was 3-for-5 with one RBI.

ASU beat Hilo 11-2 Friday night. Sun Devil pitchers Phil Lowery, Aaron Kramer and Drew Friedberg combined on a five-hitter.

The Sun Devils scored four runs in both the second and fourth innings and picked up one in the seventh and two in the eighth. Hilo scored one run in the sixth and ninth innings.

All nine Sun Devil starters picked up at least one RBI, with Moreno and Bloomquist snagging two apiece.

ASU played a doubleheader Saturday continuing its winning streak, beating the Vulcans 5-1 in the first game and 13-2 in the second.

Men's tennis drops 2

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The ASU men's tennis team dropped to 0-3, 0-2 Pac-10 as it lost to No. 2-ranked UCLA 6-1 on Sunday.

ASU's lone point was the doubles point, as No. 1 doubles duo Ed Carter and Tim Hammond defeated UCLA's Matt Breen and Jean-Noel Grinda 8-4 and No. 2 team Gustavo Marcaccio, and Alex Osterrieth won 8-6 over Alex Decret and Brandon Kramer, to take the point.

In singles action, the Sun Devils were overmatched by the Bruins, losing all six matches.

On Friday, ASU's Marcaccio knocked off the nation's eighth-ranked player in USC's George Bastl, 6-4, 6-4, but it wasn't enough as the Sun Devils dropped their Pac-10 opener against the 10th-ranked Trojans, 4-3.

The Sun Devils captured the first point of the dual by winning huge matches at the No. 1 and 3 doubles.

It appeared as though ASU was putting itself in position for the win when Marcaccio won at No. 1 singles but losses at the 2, 3, 4, and 6 singles positions squelched any aspirations of an upset.

SWIMMING DOMINATES

The No. 21 ASU women's swimming squad came away with a dominating 149-93 over the NAU Lumberjacks. The Sun Devils set three new pool records. Junior Camilla Johansson set records in the 100 and 200 meter backstroke with times of 1:05.04 and 1:59.09, respectively. Sophomore Alyson Miller also set a new record in the 200 meter breaststroke (2:43.08).

On the men's side, the No. 12 Sun Devils were also victorious against NAU winning 143-74. Senior Juan Beltran set a new pool record in the 100 meter breaststroke with a time of 1:04.09. Also setting a pool record was junior Guillermo DeLeon in the 100 meter backstroke (57.05).

Sophomore center Rachel Holt lofts a shot during ASU's 75-54 demolition of Cal on Saturday at the University Activity Center.

Women's team enters foreign territory

BY RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

The ASU women's basketball team is in uncharted waters. While the teams' 8-10 overall, 4-5 Pac-10 record may not look impressive, it speaks volumes of a turnaround a long time in coming.

With their 75-54 win over the Cal Golden Bears on Saturday, the Sun Devils stand in fifth place in conference, or as head coach Charli Turner Thorne called it — "The winning half of the Pac."

A quick look at ASU's finishes in the last four years shows why an under .500 record midway through the season is remarkable.

The Sun Devils have posted 2-16, 2-16, 3-15 and 4-14 conference records during that time span.

"The fact that we were able to come out strong and win really puts us in a foreign position," Turner Thorne said. "A really favorable position. We're just really excited to be 4-5 ... (it's) a tremendous improvement."

Sophomore forward Kristine Sand, who had three key three-pointers in the first half, said the team knows they are somewhere different.

"We've never been in a position where we've had to defend something," she said. "Right now we have something to lose."

And defending has been the key to the Sun Devils' improving status in the Pac-10.

ASU is 5-0 when shooting better than its opponent and a woeful 2-10 when shooting worse.

Turner Thorne has preached the importance of her defensive scheme since her arrival last season and it looks like the team is starting to follow her lead.

"I told the team earlier in the season," Turner Thorne said, "You guys need to understand, once your defense starts to click in you've got to get used to beating teams by 20. Because you are going to be explosive with it."

Center Rachel Holt, who scored 15 points, grabbed eight rebounds and had a career-high three steals, said sticking with Turner Thorne's plan has been tough, but the rewards are just beginning to be reaped.

"In order to beat teams by 20 you have to believe in the defense," Holt said "In the beginning it was really difficult to believe in her defense because she asks so much of each person. At first I didn't think I was capable of it. But gradually as I'm conditioned to play her defense and run the floor, I'm definitely coming around and I do believe in the defense because it's proven.

"If you don't play it you lose bad, if you play it you win."

In the first half, the Golden Bears kept it close. However, with ASU leading 23-16 with 7:34 remaining before intermission, ASU went on a tear — finishing the half with a 18-6 rout.

In that span, the Sun Devils stifled the Cal attack, as only Golden Bear forward Amber Lacey scored.

The Sun Devils continuously pounded the ball inside on the offensive end, and while not scoring field goals, they were racking up points. ASU marched to the free-throw line 15 times during that span, making 11.

The Golden Bears only led once, at 2-0. ASU scored the next four and never trailed again.

In the second half, ASU continued the free-throw barrage. For the game ASU shot 29 of 42 from the line. Cal only visited the charity stripe 14 times, making eight.

BUZZER BEATERS:

•The Sun Devils' 21-point margin of victory is their largest ever over Cal.

•ASU is now 6-0 in games it leads at halftime.

•Injured point guard Rechelle Lang will be day-to-day, Turner Thorne said. Her swollen knee does not need surgery and will be out for a couple more weeks.

Trio of pitchers leads Sun Devil softball team to 7-0 victory over Alumni squad

If the ASU softball team's pitching staff can contain the rest of the Pac-10 similar to the way they held a group of former Sun Devils in check on Saturday, the conference is in deep trouble.

Hurlers Carrie Breedlove and Roxanne Tsosie and Kathy Ponce held the ASU Alumni squad to one hit, a double by catcher Tina Ruff in the fifth inning, and led the current Devils to an easy 7-0 win.

Ponce pitched the first two innings of the exhibition contest, allowing no baserunners. Tsosie pitched the third, fourth and seventh innings, allowing the one hit. Breedlove also allowed nobody to reach base in her two innings of work.

"(With) two innings (apiece), it's kind of hard to tell," head coach Linda Wells said about her pitching staff. "The alumni bats were a little rusty to start off."

On Sunday, the team held a memorial service for freshman catcher Stephanie Collier, who died on Dec. 6. Teammates and coaches spoke about Collier at the open-microphone ceremony.

"Stephanie was blessed with that intangible quality of leadership," said Rick Beach, Collier's coach of eight years. "We depended on Stephanie."

"She had a special uniqueness about her," said Miller. "With death, she's not forgotten — she's remembered."

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by Frances Drake

Monday, February 2, 1998

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) It's in the realm of abstract thinking and philosophy where you excel. Downplay ego, though, to avert confrontations. Although monetary prospects improve, the day is not without arguments over financial matters.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The aggressive or jealous behavior of others can mar social life. Friends show their difficult side. Rapport is good, though, with a partner.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Stick with those creative ideas of yours and don't get involved in disputes. Surprising news comes from family. An early start is best for travelers, but there still could be problems.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) Romance or recreation may not live up to expectations. Although your intentions are good, both friends and loved ones can be the cause of irritation. Although a plan is worthwhile, you can get off on the wrong foot in trying to carry it out.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Watch what you say, since there could be some errors in judgment. A friend, though, is a soothing influence. There's much going on at home, but not everything runs smoothly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A desire to get away from it all competes with current obligations. An innovative method of financing is worth pursuing, but it could take some time. Partnerships require more give-
