Friends remember 'inspiring' student

BY TIMOTHY TAIT
STATE PRESS

Roommates Stephen LeBlanc and Chris Mitchell collected beer bottles. It was a hobby that began as a joke, but the collection grew to more than 100 glass containers.

Those bottles are now a shrine to LeBlanc.

An empty bottle of Foster's beer held a candle yesterday at a memorial service for LeBlanc, who was killed Jan. 23 when police said he ran a red light at Rural Road and Apache Boulevard and was struck by a van. He died at the hospital that day, but the effect the nursing student had on his friends is far from gone.

"When I look at those bottles, I see a thousand stories," Mitchell said. "He had a distinct, almost annoying, laugh. I will miss him laughing at my jokes."

In the wake of the unexpected death, friends and others who knew LeBlanc struggled to find meaning for his passing. Many reflected on the lessons they learned from their friend and wore gold ribbons to honor him.

"We have to remember to appreciate the people around us," said Mary Killeen, an associate dean in the College of Nursing. "Sometimes we get too busy doing other things that we forget to tell the people around us how special they are to us. We have to pay better attention."

Friends said LeBlanc, 26, was a generous and optimistic person with a quick wit and who was always willing to lend a hand.

"I need to find meaning for his death," said nursing student Wendy Brown. "Life will go on tomorrow."

At the service Wednesday, some 50 friends of the late student struggled to contain the tears. The faces of some were red from weeping. Tissues were passed down the rows as a collection was taken in LeBlanc's name for the Dartmouth/Hitchcock Medical Center in New Hampshire.

"I know more about Stephen today than I did yesterday," Killeen said. "He inspired us to do things that we might not have done and to try things that we might not try. He was important in so many of our lives."

Mitchell and LeBlanc became roommates three years ago. Mitchell said LeBlanc was a caring man who enjoyed having fun. He never let stress get him down.

"Stephen always said he liked my songs. I don't know if he did or not but I am going to make him sit through one more," Mitchell said before singing "Smoke," a tune he wrote over the summer. "He was always so sure that I would make it as a musician that he would have played every instrument in the band if he had to."

That was LeBlanc, a man willing to max out his credit card to buy a round of beer for his friends and who enjoyed shooting 120 on a golf course, his friends said.

"If I could just have 15 more minutes, I would hit him a few times and give him a big hug and tell him that I love him," said Marilyn Zeitlin, director of the ASU Art Museum, where LeBlanc worked as a security guard. "We all need to unzip a little bit and look into people's eyes and tell them, 'You are special.' That was Stephen. He was full of light, full of bubbles."

Donations can be made in Stephen LeBlanc's name through the Dartmouth/Hitchcock Medical Center Intensive Care Nursery, 1 Medical Center Drive, Lebanon, NH, 03756.

Coor opposes preferential-treatment proposal

BY KAREN YAMADA
STATE PRESS

ASU President Lattie Coor, on Wednesday, voiced his disappointment with the Arizona legislative agenda to ban discrimination and preferential treatment, saying he feared it would result in significant "negative symbolism."

Coor also reaffirmed his opposition to the referendum, which passed despite vigorous opposition in the Senate Committee for Government Reform on Tuesday. Coor said preferential treatment of minorities is not considered in the admission process.

"There is not a problem here to be solved," Coor said. "And if there isn't a problem to be solved, I would fear the negative consequences. We (the universities) have been so careful to observe evolving case law and to ensure programs that eliminate the barriers to equal opportunity."

He affirmed the view of the other university presidents that the referendum could preclude university efforts to enlarge the pool of student candidates for admission, though he saw no immediate consequences to other minority-gated programs.

Under current law, it is generally unlawful to discriminate based on race, color, sex or national origin. But there is no law which specifically prohibits the practice of increasing opportunities for specific groups such as women and minorities. Programs that aim to increase opportunities for these groups are commonly known as "affirmative action" programs.

The referendum proposes an amendment to the

ASU gearing up for Black History Month events

BY ALLY ASHER
STATE PRESS

The contributions and accomplishments of African Americans will be celebrated on campus throughout February during Black History Month.

"It's a time that African Americans all over the country come together to honor the contributions of our ancestors," said Karen Carson, president of ASU's NAACP college chapter.

Black History Month, which began in 1926 as Negro History Week, was founded by Carter G. Woodson, one of Harvard's first African American graduates. Woodson picked the month of February to celebrate Black history in honor of Frederick Douglass, an escaped slave and abolitionist born on Valentine's Day.

This month, Douglass and many other African American icons will be honored by ASU students and faculty. ASU's NAACP chapter is sponsoring tributes to Douglass, Malcolm X, Betty Shabazz and W.E.B. Dubois throughout the month.

"There are a lot of misconceptions about African American contributions," Carson said. "This month gives the opportunity to highlight some of the great accomplishments."

Dr. Leonor Boulton-Johnson, director of African American studies, said the month provides many educational opportunities and is important for all students.

"In a university setting, being exposed to diversity is essential for education," she said.

A race relations lecture is scheduled Feb. 11 in conjunction with Black History Month. Guest speaker Morris Dees, founder of the Southern Poverty Law Center, will lecture to students, faculty and community members in Gammage Auditorium about tolerance and his ongoing battle with the Ku Klux Klan.

There will also be a series of dramatic performances given by Sisters With Tongues, a campus theater group that voices its opinions and concerns by using poetry and interpretive dance.

Carson added that her organization plans to celebrate black history every month, as opposed to just February.

"My wish is to highlight our ancestors' accomplishments every month," she said. "I think we should be doing this every day, every year."

Constitution of Arizona which would ban racial and gender preferential practices in the operation of public employment, public education or public contracting by state and local governments.

To become effective as law, the bill would require passage in the Senate and the House of Representatives before being put to a public vote in November.

Supporters of the referendum see it not as fixing a problem, but as institutionalizing a principle.

"A law treating people unequally because of race is a fundamental wrong," said Sen. Tom Patterson, R-Paradise Valley.

Francie Noyes, press secretary to Gov. Jane Dee Hull, said the governor is not convinced there is a problem with practices at the state level.

"Her approach is, 'Let's not do anything unless we are fixing something,'" Noyes said. "It would need to be demonstrated to her that there was a real problem. She also would not want to do anything that would jeopardize the positive achievements of the civil rights battle of the 1960's."

Christine Wilkinson, vice president of student affairs said, "It is a good thing for us to act affirmatively to bring individuals into the system to diversify the work force, students, the whole environment."

"I don't think we have reached our goals as a society," she said. "People need encouragement to get into the pool."

Then they can prove themselves."

"If a number of minority students felt through this legislation that they couldn't go to school, they wouldn't try," Wilkinson said. "We need to make a more welcoming environment to encourage these people to try."

Sophia Cleland, an American Indian and senior studying biochemistry at ASU, said she owes her achievements to programs that helped her deal with ethnic issues.

"I grew up in South Phoenix," Cleland said. "People there believe the stereotype that Indians are inferior, stupid and grow up to be drunks."

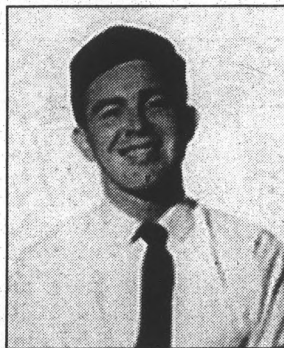

"If I didn't have the opportunity to be involved in programs like the Western Alliance to Expand Student Opportunities, I would have probably been like the stereotypes," she said. "Because of the programs, I gained confidence in myself because the faculty and people running the programs told me I'm good enough. I wouldn't have found my motivation without that."

Antonio Garcia, associate professor in chemical/bioengineering and director of the Western Alliance program, said, "Affirmative action does afford opportunities. It is not meant to close them. If the referendum passes, it will affect us because the perception will be that Arizona is not a friendly place for minority and underrepresented students."

Prosecutors, Starr refuse Lewinsky immunity offer

By JOHN SOLOMON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Prosecutors investigating an alleged presidential affair and cover-up rejected a written offer from Monica Lewinsky to testify in exchange for immunity, individuals familiar with the negotiations said Wednesday.

Ms. Lewinsky's lawyers submitted the offer Monday night before the former White House intern left town for California, according to sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Independent counsel Kenneth Starr's office decided Wednesday to reject the offer, which came after two weeks of on-again, off-again negotiations designed to secure Ms. Lewinsky's cooperation.

Starr's office "is not interested in the offer at this time," as it accelerates its grand jury investigation, one source said.

Attorney William Ginsburg, who represents Ms. Lewinsky, said Wednesday he could not discuss his dealings with Starr's office. "It would be irresponsible to talk about the negotiations," he said.

Ginsburg would say only that he was continuing to work on developing a criminal defense for his client, who has been informed by prosecutors that she is a target likely to be indicted.

Starr's spokeswoman, Deborah Gershman, did not immediately return a call seeking comment.

The rejected offer does not necessarily mean that talks between the sides won't continue, but it signals that prosecutors are content to press ahead with their grand jury investigation in the absence of Ms. Lewinsky's cooperation.

Previously, Ms. Lewinsky had offered to testify that she had sex with Clinton, backing away from her affidavit in the Paula Jones lawsuit stating that she did not have an affair, according to a source familiar with the investigation.

Clinton has publicly denied having sexual relations with Ms. Lewinsky, who began as a White House intern in 1995, then moved to a paid White House job before being transferred to the Pentagon in 1996.

The White House said Wednesday that Clinton has "cleared the air" about the Lewinsky matter, but former senior adviser George Stephanopoulos said nagging questions remain.

"The longer the president goes without telling his side of the story, the more unease there will be in the public," Stephanopoulos said one day after testifying before the grand jury.

Those called before the grand jury on Wednesday included Bayani Nelvis, a White House steward back for a second round of questioning, and Kris Engskov, personal assistant to the president.

A source familiar with the grand jury testimony, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Stephanopoulos was asked if Nelvis worked near the Oval Office and what type of access he would have had to areas inhabited by the president.

White House lawyers, meanwhile, were in talks with Starr's team in an effort to limit the scope of questions posed to Clinton advisers, based on the principle of executive privilege.

The talks were aimed at protecting "the right of the president to get confidential advice from his advisers," said White House press secretary Mike McCurry.

Among those whose potential testimony is under discussion are White House advisers John Podesta and Bruce Lindsey. Podesta is deputy White House chief of staff. Lindsey, a Clinton confidant, is deputy White House counsel and special assistant to the president.

Vice President Al Gore, interviewed for NBC's "Today" show, said any concern about the Lewinsky matter "falls away with the president's denials of the charges."

Likewise, McCurry told reporters, "the president believes he's already cleared the air."

Beyond Clinton's broad denials, the White House has declined to address specifics of the case, such as how well he knew the former White House intern, why she made dozens of visits to the executive mansion after leaving her job there and why Clinton allies helped her find a job in New York.

McCurry acknowledged that questions remain but said the proper place for them to be answered was "through the formal investigation that is under way."

Stephanopoulos said on ABC's "Good Morning America" that refusing to answer specifics "may be their only strategy right now" at the White House, but that "an awful lot of questions" are open.

Gore said he believes Clinton's denials. But he passed up a chance to endorse Hillary Rodham Clinton's theory that a "vast right-wing conspiracy" is behind the allegations being pursued by Starr.

"I respect her opinions and analysis," Gore said when asked about Mrs. Clinton's assertion. "I'm not going to comment on Judge Starr. ... But there's no question that there have been unprecedented attacks on this president and on the agenda that we've been pursuing."

The woman at the center of the controversy, Ms. Lewinsky, stayed out of the spotlight while visiting her father in California.

Diplomats descend on Iraq in push for peaceful ending

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Would-be peacemakers from around the world pressed Iraq on Wednesday to end a standoff over weapons inspections with diplomacy before Washington does it with air strikes. Word emerged of possible progress, including an Iraqi offer at compromise.

Russia insisted there were signs of optimism, but President Boris Yeltsin, using language reminiscent of the Cold War, said a U.S. attack could lead to "world war."

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, meeting with an envoy from France, said he was striving for "a balanced political solution," the official Iraqi News Agency said.

Iraq has refused to allow U.N. inspectors into Saddam's palaces and other key sites, calling it a matter of national sovereignty.

CNN reported the Iraqis were offering to open some — but not all — of the suspected weapons sites to inspectors.

Since March 1996, inspectors have visited 63 sites where they believed the Iraqis were hiding contraband, Charles Duelfer, the deputy chief weapons inspector, said recently. Inspectors were delayed from entering 38 of the sites and flatly denied access to 14 others in the name of national security.

The United States increasingly is threatening to resort to military force to end the Iraqi defiance. Congress worked Wednesday on a resolution authorizing President Clinton to launch air attacks, and U.N. Ambassador Bill Richardson traveled the world seeking support from fellow U.N. Security Council member-nations.

Hoping to avert attack, the Arab League's secretary-general and Turkey's foreign minister arrived in Baghdad, joining envoys from Russia and France in pressing Iraqi leaders for a peaceful solution.

Quoting unidentified sources, CNN said that Iraq was offering to allow U.N. inspectors access to eight disputed sites for about a month.

CNN said the Iraqi proposal called for each of the 15 members of the Security Council to appoint five inspectors. The 21 countries represented on the U.N. Special Commission, which oversees inspections, would then each appoint two more.

It said that these experts would make "visits" to the palaces and would report their findings directly to the Security Council.

Asked about the reported Iraqi offer, Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa in Cairo said: "We have been informed by the Iraqis of this." He refused to elaborate.

Iraqi government officials would not confirm the report, which was similar to an offer Iraq made in November.

The Americans rejected the earlier plan, saying it appeared to be an attempt by Baghdad to bypass the Special Commission and ignore the commission's mandate to set up long-term monitoring of suspected chemical, biological and nuclear programs.

At the United Nations, British Ambassador John Weston suggested the latest reported proposal would also prove unacceptable.

"The Security Council will want to be satisfied the Special Commission can go about its job in the manner required by Security Council resolutions," he said.

In Washington, Clinton said the United States' "bottom line" is to deny Saddam the capacity to develop and deliver weapons of mass destruction.

"The best way to stop Saddam from building nuclear, biological or chemical weapons is simply to get the international inspectors back to work with no restraints," he said.

Only higher authority can dish out forgiveness

On Tuesday, one of God's Ten Commandments was pushed aside in favor of Hammurabi's Code when Karla Faye Tucker was executed via lethal injection.

There are those who contend that her execution was wrong simply because of her acceptance of Jesus Christ. There are others who believe her conversion was but a scheme to escape the death sentence.

Hammurabi's Code calls for an eye for an eye, one death to repay another — or in Tucker's case, one death to repay the deaths of two people.

Justice for the former camp would have been better served with Tucker spending the rest of her days in prison. The camp of the latter believed justice came with a stainless-steel needle filled with lethal serum.

In Tucker's case, justice was served when the words "dead woman walking" were announced as she made her way to the room where the lethal injections were to be given.

On Tuesday, Tucker became the first woman executed in Texas since the Civil War. Fourteen years ago, Tucker used a pickax to murder a man and a woman. Tucker had an orgasm as she committed her crime.

After exhausting her court appeals, she continued to plead to officials to spare her life simply because she had discovered Christianity.

Tucker's religious turnaround was a sham. Had she truly repented and accepted Christ, she would not have tried to duck away from her punishment. She would have owned up to her crimes and accepted her fate. Had she truly accepted Christ, she would have realized that God is the final judge. Whatever humanity had in store for her was inconsequential to the judgment of God. He is the one who has the final say.

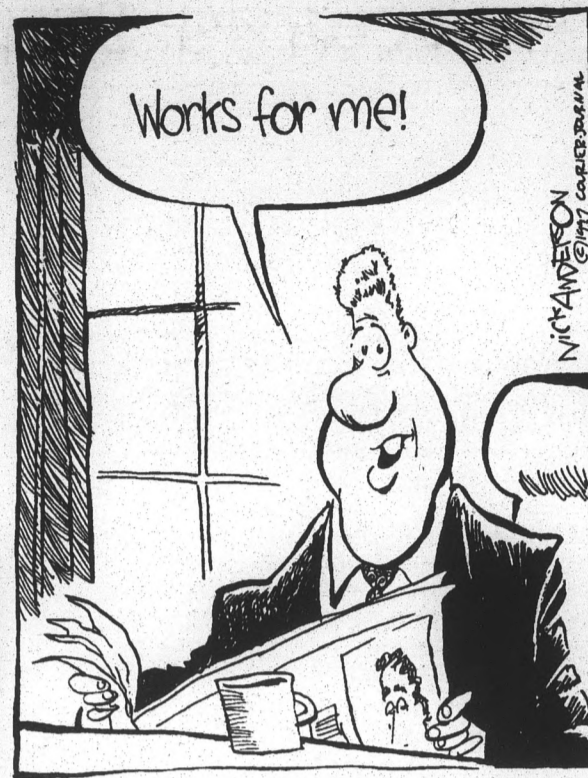

Had she truly accepted her new religion, she would have faced her fate with dignity.

Her conversion was just a plea for lenience. It was a plea that caught the attention of both Pope John Paul II and television evangelist Pat Robertson. But that plea was ignored by Texas Gov. George W. Bush.

It was Bush who denied Tucker a 30-day reprieve. Read his lips: It was Bush who agreed that final judgment should be left to a higher authority.

A sudden conversion to a religion isn't enough retribution for the families of Jerry Lynn Dean and Deborah Thornton. It doesn't cut it. How would you feel if it was your loved ones Tucker had slaughtered? Remember she had an orgasm as she killed these people; she took pleasure in their deaths.

If you must feel bad for anyone, feel bad for Dean, Thornton and their respective families. They're the true victims here.

Baseball fans missing out on ASU tradition

When you think of ASU baseball, these names should come to mind:

Barry Bonds. Sal Bando. Reggie Jackson.

Diehard ASU baseball fans will recall that the program is one of the most storied in college baseball, having made 16 appearances in the NCAA regionals and winning five College World Series titles. ASU currently is ranked No. 6 in Baseball America and has notched an 8-0 record.

But not all is well in Sun Devil Country.

On Monday I spoke with Jay Sferra, the director of operations for the ASU baseball team. He said both he and Head Coach Pat Murphy wanted to boost attendance for this weekend's series with Florida State.

"It's their (students' and faculty's) program," Murphy said. "To have Florida State here this weekend — one of the few teams that can match up well with Six-Pac baseball teams — is great."

Getting more students to watch games is a big concern for both, and they've got reason to feel that way.

In recent years, student attendance has been low despite the fact that the team annually is ranked in the Top 25. Why aren't more students going to Packard Stadium? Ticket prices aren't expensive for baseball games. Au contraire; with a valid ASU student ID, tickets are free.

Wait, let me repeat that: With a valid ASU student ID, tickets are free.

It's not as if the team sucks, either. Au contraire again. Heck, the Sun Devils are undefeated. Buddy Ryan said it best after he first set foot in the Valley to take over as the Cardinals' coach: "You've got a winner in town."

This year, ASU is expected to return to the College World Series in Omaha, Neb., and although that trip wouldn't be as glamorous as going to the Rose Bowl or the NCAA Final Four, Rosenblatt Stadium — where the CWS is held — is college baseball's pinnacle. Mark McGwire played there. So did Barry Bonds and Roger Clemens.

Ah, if only ASU students were like Chicago Cubs fans.

Every year, Cubs fans believe their beloved losers are going to the World Series, and every year they painfully realize a day before Spring Training starts that the team has already been mathematically eliminated from the playoffs.

Although both ASU and the Cubs play in terrific stadiums, the difference is ASU has seen more post-season action in this century.

Win or lose, Cubs fans follow their hapless team. Cheeseheads are the same way with their Green Bay Packers. In the college arena, Nebraska fans are arguably the most devoted of the bunch (remember what happened to the Huskers on Sept. 21, 1996, right?).

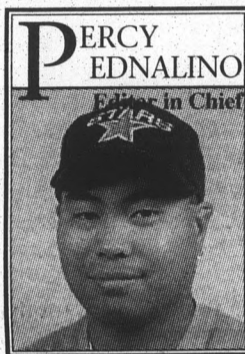

It goes to show that fan support — student, alumni or casual — goes a long way to helping a team succeed.

Did I fail to mention that ASU has won five — count 'em, five — College World Series titles? The last time the Sun Devils were CWS participants was in 1994, when they were eliminated by Oklahoma. ASU also went to the Atlantic Regionals last season, and was one run away from beating Miami and returning to the Series.

Sure, the big money of college basketball and football has overshadowed baseball, but this is a program that has won more national championships than both ASU's football and basketball teams. So why aren't students jumping on the baseball team's bandwagon?

Students at ASU want so badly to be considered among the traditional college athletic powerhouses like UCLA, Florida State or Nebraska. Yet these same students fail to realize there already is a long-standing tradition at ASU.

Just ask Barry Bonds, Reggie Jackson and Sal Bando. Percy Ednalino is a senior studying journalism and can be reached at percy23@asu.edu via e-mail.

Smokers should be courteous

After reading Mark Pollock's column in Wednesday's State Press, I was offended because he unknowingly exaggerates his importance in this world. He is distraught because if a prospective bill is enacted, poor Mark will no longer be able to smoke in restaurants or bars. His so-called "right" to pollute the earth with cancer would be infringed upon.

I've got to give credit where it is deserved, though. Mark is a samaritan. He doesn't smoke in cars. The fact of the matter is that I could care less if Mark hopped into his car, rolled up all of the windows, fired up an entire carton of cigarettes and drowned himself in a sea of carcinogenic doom.

I work in a restaurant because I make excellent money there. It would be virtually impossible for me to locate a different, legal job that pays as well. Mark is under the impression, however, that I should work someplace else if I am bothered by smoke. Believe it or not, I think I can speak for most of us non-smokers when I say that smokers should spark up someplace else if we are in fact bothered by it.

I am dumbfounded at the lack of logic used in Mark's ice cream-factory analogy. Mark seems to overlook the obvious fact that second-hand smoke kills and cold air doesn't. The statement, "If you don't like opera, what are you doing working in an opera house?" simply doesn't fly. If this statement were true, then Red Lobster would be called the Tumor Room. "Wake up and smell the stogie?" No, you, Mark Pollock, need to wake up and smell the death you are spreading.

Maybe I should get a job in an ice-cream factory. I would be compromising my position on this issue and the pay would be less than that of a restaurant, but I wouldn't be forced to deal with the aftermath of Mark's ignorant decision to smoke.

Colangelo making smart moves

Jerry Colangelo may be overpaying the veteran stars as was mentioned in Doug Flanagan's editorial "Bucks boss buying bad baseball" (Feb. 4), but he did bring them to the Diamondbacks for a good reason; they are upstanding individuals who only get their names in the headlines for the right reasons. Colangelo believes that these people will be the best to show the young, potential superstars (Lee, Batiste, etc.) how to handle themselves and the long 162-game schedule. More goes into baseball than production statistics. By signing these veterans, Colangelo signed leaders who [will] build a solid foundation for the future.

Colangelo has single-handedly done more for this state than just about anyone, and to suggest that he is a moron is absolutely ridiculous. You make a valid point saying that the veterans Colangelo signed are overpaid and out of their prime, but they are good players who will produce decent numbers, and, more importantly, they will make the young players better. For you not seeing Colangelo's motives in making sure these players ended up with the Diamondbacks (even if it meant overpaying them), shows that you, Doug Flanagan, know nothing about baseball.

Parking lessons

At ASU, we have the responsibility to follow the parking guidelines as illustrated by the fine people at the ASU parking services. They've bent over backwards to make it unequivocally clear that they will cite you within a matter of seconds if you happen to violate any of these accommodating codes of parking conduct. They have loyal soldiers stationed throughout the perimeter, roaming on "squad carts" and many trudging the Arizona heat on foot. All dedicated to making sure the offender is justifiably assessed the appropriate lucrative fine. Without these robot people, it would just be simply impossible to meet their multi-million dollar self-induced quota. Out of all this, they still find room in their depleted budget to grant us an appeals officer if we feel a little slighted or maybe just wrongly accused. You can take your case before a variety of contemptuous, disgruntled, volatile, unreceptive and excessively obstinate "appeals officers." In three years at ASU, they've enlightened me to the fact that not only am I an ignoramus for not knowing where to park, but I'm also a first-class idiot for thinking I'd weasel my way out of a ticket. To all the rest of those "Generation X" head-bangers attending this school, their message is consistent. You are not a person with logical, rational thought — you are just a young, non-abiding, reckless checkbook. Out of all the inordinate fees we reluctantly succumb to each semester at ASU, this is the hardest pill to swallow. I'd rather just grab my ankles, take the $25 fine and continue my efforts for a good education.

Sex scandals nothing new

Just because President Clinton may not be the best husband doesn't mean that he can't be the best president, does it? We see this all the time with sports stars and various other celebrities committing crimes and other such nonsense — like being caught in a hotel room naked, hooked on crack, covered in blood and watching pornography like a recent story with a rather famous celebrity. But just because they're a great basketball player, football player or actor does not mean that they have to be a great person.

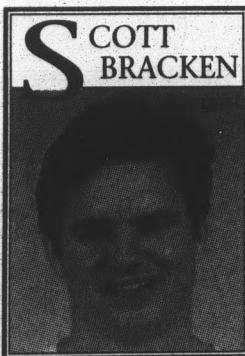

The entire country is in a sort of state of shock and disbelief over the fact that the president can't keep it in his pants. First of all, just by looking at his wife, I can't blame him for wanting to hook up with the first loose moral, star-struck intern he could get his hands on. Second, unfaithful presidents are nothing this country isn't already used to. George Washington died after a quite nasty bout of syphilis. Thomas Jefferson had an affinity for impregnating slaves. Andrew Jackson created quite a furor in his first term of the presidency when he married a well-known Washington, D.C. prostitute and John F. Kennedy's celebrity affairs put Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Clinton to shame. The point is that all the presidents made major contributions to this country, apart from their mismanagement of their personal lives. And as for Clinton, well, if it wasn't for him, I would not have gotten the loan that has gotten me into this school, millions would still be on welfare and people would not be able to keep their health care plans after they have left their jobs. From the looks of it, a lot more milestones are in store for this country if we can just realize that he is just a human like everybody else. No matter what harm he has caused to his marriage, he has done nothing but good for this country and will continue to do so if we can just leave him alone.

Delay in repairing automated arm making parking spaces scarce

ASU's Parking Structure 3 (the parking garage just west of Neeb and Stauffer Hall) has a broken gate, but ASU doesn't seem to want to fix it. More importantly, the delay is costing us our parking spots.

Considering the power, prestige and financial backing a school like ASU has, I would give a broken-parking gate problem a couple days, maybe a few weeks, but at the most a month to fix. But this mechanical arm has been broken since late August. That's over five months! That's right, for more than five months ASU's Parking Services has failed to repair this mechanical arm. I don't know if Parking Services is waiting for a specific component involved in the mechanical-arm process, or if they're just waiting for a convenient time and day to work on it. Whatever the case may be, it's still not fixed.

The result is that we, the students and staff who have purchased a $105 decal to park there, have to take our chances because numerous "non-decal" cars are taking advantage of the broken arm and occupying the spaces for which we have already paid. I'm not blaming all the "non-decals" for parking there by any means; I'd be doing the same thing. I'm criticizing Parking Services for not stepping up and taking responsibility to correct a problem that is causing so many to suffer.

Parking Services claims they tow and ticket all the "non-decals". First of all, as narrow as the paths are in Structure 3, I'm pretty sure you couldn't fit a towing truck up there to remove any cars. If they did manage, it would be an awfully tight squeeze, requiring some fairly delicate maneuvering to lift and remove a car without hitting any surrounding parked cars. Second, instead of hiring a staff of six or more to cruise around the structure and ticket all the "non-decals," why don't they hire one person to stand by the gate and check whether or not the cars have decals? This way you'd save work for the people who have to drive through the structure every hour or so checking for decals. Finally, if Parking Services is working on the problem, they sure haven't worked very hard — it's been five months.

For the sake of Parking Services, I'm sure their hands are tied as well. I guess I'm just mad at the system. Not just a system that allows a major problem involving their staff and students to persist this long, but a system that sees an opportunity to make money capitalizing on other's misfortunes. I don't know who claims they're handling the problem, or who's calling the shots to correct it, but they are doing a poor job. The bottom line is we, the "decal" people, are the ones who are suffering. ASU seems to be the one who is benefiting. If ASU won't let you register until you pay your fees, they should be able to find a way to let you park.

Broadcast news — the drinking game

Though last year brought us dead princesses, strangled babies and indicted governors, clearly the worst news of the year was ASU's loss of its reputation as a party school. Though pundits cite our improving academic reputation as the primary cause, my theory is that our resident partiers simply have run out of ideas.

ADAM SCHIFFER

Though I do not condone binge drinking, especially by our underage students, my sympathy for the faded heroes of the party-school culture has led me to come up with a new drinking game. To replace popular but stale television drinking games, I present the Phoenix Television News Drinking Game. Simply watch the late local newscast on any of the four major networks, and follow these rules:

Watch the program immediately before the newscast. Count the total number of seconds that a given story is teased ("Coming up at 10, we'll meet a Valley resident who can put seven golf balls in her mouth"). Then, count the seconds of the actual story. If the teasers are longer, take a sip of beer for each second difference between the two.

Take a sip every time an anchor alludes to his or her upper-class status. Most of these are subtle, but if you listen carefully, this can be a prosperous category. Here are some examples: "If you're planning to hit the slopes this weekend, and I know that I am, here are some tips for travel on icy roads." "Traffic is still a mess at this hour due to the fog. When I drove in from North Scottsdale this morning, it took me ..."

Take a sip for every story that is nothing more than a shameless tie-in to a prime-time show on that network. Watch NBC or FOX if you really want to get hammered. For example, "On tonight's Party of Five episode, you saw the character Julia contemplate a sex-change operation. Is this a growing phenomenon among American youth? We talked to several Valley teens who said ..."

Take a sip every time an inner-city high school receives negative coverage, and ... Pour beer all over yourself and smash the bottle on your head every time a suburban high school receives negative coverage (don't worry; this never happens).

Take a sip for every "viewer poll" response that insults your intelligence. For example, "Bert in Chandler tells us by e-mail that the state should replace Martin Luther King Day with Sheriff Joe Day."

After each story, turn to the person to your left and ask him or her the following questions: Did that story in any way relate to your life? Did it educate or enlighten you? Did it at least entertain you? If she answers "no" to all of the questions, take a sip.

Add this extra category in November and December. Take a sip (of eggnog, perhaps) every time an anchor uses a Christmas cliché as a segue. For example, "'Tis the season for carbon-monoxide poisoning ..."

Remember, drink responsibly; it would be rather embarrassing if your friends heard your name on a newscast while playing my new game.

ASASU senators push for Marriott to lower prices in the Memorial Union

BY MONICA J. AGUIRRE
STATE PRESS

A group of student senators attempted to reopen the battle for lower prices in the Memorial Union at an Associated Student of ASU senate meeting Tuesday.

Sens. Andrew Lefberg, of the College of Business, and Drew Feth, of the College of Engineering, attempted to combat the ongoing battle between the University, Affairs Committee and the senate by proposing further action be taken to lower MU prices and increase food variety.

The UAC was handed a petition in November asking them to investigate ASU's contract with Marriott. Some senators are complaining that little has been accomplished by the UAC, with only a few months remaining in the 1997-98 school year.

A letter was introduced in this week's senate meeting asking that the original petition be re-evaluated, but it failed to get senate backing.

"We were stuck on this issue from day one when we started eating on campus," Lefberg said. "We are the students."

"If they (the committee) were focusing on lower prices, where are they? The dining hall is a major rip-off and the food is horrible," Lefberg said.

While Lefberg and Feth are mainly concerned with everyday food prices and nutritional options, Tony Knowles, executive vice president of graduate student affairs, mentioned the high catering prices.

The committee said it tackled two major issues last semester. It achieved lower prices at Burger King and replaced Cloud Nine candy store with the healthier On The Go store, committee members said.

"A lot of times, we will tell (Marriott) things the students want and they'll work towards that," J.D. Wallace, senator for the Honors College and member of UAC said. "We had told them we wanted some more-healthy eating options."

Wallace said the UAC would like lower prices, and that they try to help Marriott become more aware of what the students want.

"It is a business, so I can see their point of view, but as a student, you sometimes feel like you are still being ripped off," Paul Frost, senator for the liberal arts college and member of UAC said.

"I don't feel like they (Marriott) have been a monopoly," Frost said. "They're willing to listen to the students. It's just that in my opinion, Lefberg and Feth want these huge revolutionary changes."

Frost mentioned that the rent, taxes and overhead costs of locations in the MU are higher than off-campus stores.

Lefberg acknowledged the committee achieved a healthier On the Go store, but prices are still high, and even though Burger King lowered their Whopper prices from $1.99 last semester, MU shoppers still pay $1.39 when Whoppers sell for $1.19 off campus.

"We want Marriott, the students and everybody to know we're upset," Lefberg said. "If they don't reintroduce the petition, we will, because that is how strongly we feel about the issue."

National Signing Day 'successful' for 2nd straight year

By ED ODEVEN
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

In his never-ending quest to land the top recruits in the nation, ASU head coach Bruce Snyder subscribes to a different mentality than many of his peers.

"You should find out who you want to recruit and then find out who else is recruiting him. And in that order," Snyder told the media Wednesday night.

"So many coaches go about it the wrong way. They look around and see who everybody's recruiting and then decide on who they want to recruit."

It remains to be seen which approach will work better for the Classes of 2002, but one thing is certain — Snyder's faith in his ability to lure quality football players to a quality program.

"The real belief out there is that we've established a program," Snyder said on National Signing Day. "And it appears that we are going to be good for some time."

"It's been really a great day for Arizona State football. We've signed some players that we are excited about, some that will help us immediately."

That help will come from the 21 players who comprise ASU's 1998 football signees.

ASU signed seven in-state players, seven from California, three from Texas, two from Colorado and one each from Utah and Iowa.

IN-STATE SIGNEES

For the second straight year, Snyder has proclaimed a victory over arch-rival UofA in the in-state recruiting battles.

"We've been very successful the last two years," he said. "And again, I think we've won the state this year."

The Phoenician phenom, tailback Kyran Jones of Peoria High School, was rated as the No. 10 running back in the nation by SuperPrep. He rushed for 1,460 yards and 30 touchdowns last season and was also heavily recruited by Washington, UCLA, UofA, Texas and Nebraska.

"He's not a real big man, in terms of mass, but he's an extremely tough runner," Snyder said. "... He's out to prove that he's one of the best runners in college let alone just high school."

Jones' Peoria teammate Brandon Faulkner also chose ASU. The 6-foot defensive back was an honorable mention all-America by USA Today.

Other in-state signees are Mesa Mountain View products Damien Niko, a 6-5, 295-pound offensive lineman, and Todd Heap, a 6-5, 220-pound tight end; Phoenix St. Mary's Willie Daniel, a defensive back from the same school that Sun Devil

ASU head coach Bruce Snyder discusses the future of Sun Devil football—the 1998 signees—with the media Wednesday on National Signing Day.

QB Ryan Kealy went to; and wide receiver Joey Graves from Casa Grande. Graves, who caught 34 passes for 623 yards and eight scores was "the best pure (high school) wide receiver in the state," Snyder said.

FILLING THE HOLES

The loss of defensive line starters Vince Amey, Hamilton Mee and Jeremy Staat created a big void for the 1998 Sun Devils.

But there are new guys expected to help fill the holes left by these standouts. Leading the way are junior college transfers

Erik Flowers and Jawell Samilton.

Flowers, a 6-4, 240-pounder from Trinity Valley Junior College in Athens, Texas, is expected to step in as a pass-rushing specialist.

"Erik Flowers can get up field," Snyder said of the man who amassed 15 sacks and 97 tackles last season. "He can run. He can disrupt on that level that he's been playing. He's a real force."

Another top newcomer is Jawell Samilton of Southwest Community College in Los Angeles. Samilton, who was a first-

Sun Devils attempt to avoid let down

By MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

Five days after upsetting one of the nation's premier basketball teams on the road, the ASU men's squad will be home to host one of Pac-10's worst.

The Sun Devils, who defeated then-No. 4 Stanford 90-87 last Saturday, will tip-off with Washington State (8-12, 1-8 Pac-10) tonight at 6:30 in the University Activity Center.

Junior forward Mike Batiste said ASU can't continue to dwell on the high the Stanford win game caused if it hopes to win tonight.

"The win at Stanford was good for us," Batiste said. "But we've got to put that behind us now. That's past news now. If we want to get to the tournament, we've got to look forward."

Now in the second half of the Pac-10 season, the Sun Devils (14-8, 4-5) said they will have to do a better job of containing Cougar forward Carlos Daniel to produce another win over WSU. ASU was victorious 86-85 on Jan. 11 in Pullman, Wash.

"We only beat Washington State by one point so that proves how tough the league is play," said guard Jeremy Veal, who is leading the conference in scoring with 20.3 points a game. "It's going to be a tough ball game. Coach (Kevin) Eastman has those guys ready. They've got a great player in Carlos Daniel who gave us fits last time. We have to do a better job on him."

Batiste added "I expect them to pound the ball inside to Carlos Daniel, probably the best big man I've played against in my career here. They've got some good spot up shooters, but I think that as long as we play our defense and communicate with each other and just contain Daniels, we'll be alright."

In the teams previous meeting this season, Daniel recorded a career high 28 points. Currently he is the Pac-10's best rebounder (9.9 rpg), and in conference games, he is one of only two players averaging a double-double (20.2 ppg, 11.4 rpg).

While one could expect a blow out win for the Sun Devils, judging from their most recent performance, a playing trend by the team seems to suggest other wise.

The Sun Devils have a tendency to play to the level of

Snyder-Park inks Moon Valley star

By LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

While the talk of the town has been on Bruce Snyder's 1998 recruiting class, other Sun Devil athletic programs have also made significant additions, including the ASU volleyball team which added high school standout Jami Coughlin Wednesday to its roster.

Coughlin, a Moon Valley High School student, has played with the Arizona Juniors club volleyball team for two years.

Head coach Patti Snyder-Park said that even though she had gotten an early commitment from Coughlin in October, she was still excited to have the letter of intent signed.

"We're pretty thrilled," Snyder-Park said. "She's such a quality, all-around player and such a great student."

Coughlin is a 6-foot outside hitter who has been named twice as an All-American by Volleyball Magazine. She also has been named two times to the first-team all-State team and has been a first-team all-Region pick four times.

Coughlin will not just bring her volleyball talents to the court in the fall, but her 4.0 grade point average as well.

"She can hit with power, pass half the court and has a very intense work ethic, whether it's volleyball or school," Snyder-Park said. "She's got all the attributes of a great college athlete."

Before signing with ASU, Coughlin visited Washington State, Cal, Ohio State and UofA.

"I think she likes the idea of playing for a hometown crowd, this is where she was born and raised and she was excited about that," Coughlin's mother, Jane, said. "We're really excited and pleased with being able to watch her play."

Snyder-Park also expects another letter of intent to come today from a recruit in southern California. While

The ASU women's soccer team announced Wednesday the signing of two recruits to letters of intent.

Kristina Dawson, who hails from Peoria, Ariz. (Centennial High School), was a first-team all-State and all-Region selection as a forward her junior season.

She was also a three-time MVP for Centennial and was MVP of the region. She has scored in every game this season except for one and is the state's all-time goal scorer with 157 to date.

"Our coaching staff feels we have Arizona's top player once again coming to ASU," head coach Terri Patraw said. "Krissey is an absolute spark plug, in that she's very dynamic and technical. She has all the tools to step right in at the Division I level."

She joins former Santos club team members Stacey Tullock,

PATRAW

Jennifer Pederson, Jessica Bohl and Erin O'Neill at ASU. Dawson chose ASU over UofA and Vanderbilt.

The second member of the class is goalkeeper Kristin Slater. Slater played for Klein High School in Spring, Texas, led her team to the Youth Nationals in Phoenix last summer. She played regularly on the Texas Olympic Development Team.

"We evaluated Kristin as the top youth goalkeeper in the country for '98," Patraw said. "Having played at both the Regional and National level. Kristin will bring top-level experience to our program. At 5-9 she's a fantastic athlete with tremendous range who possesses excellent hands and quickness."

Slater did not compete for Klein this season so she could concentrate on training with her club team, the Challenge Soccer Club. She selected ASU over Texas, Penn State and Iowa State.

"Our coaching staff couldn't be more excited and happier with the student-athletes we have brought in since last year," Patraw said. "Our program is clearly headed in the right direction."

team all-State player in Region II for California Community Colleges, chose ASU over USC.

"We think (Samilton) is going to be a terrific run stopper and maybe push-the-pile type of guy," Snyder said. "To play in our defense you need at least one guy in the inside who is affectionately thuggish."

ASU also signed defensive linemen James Beal of DeSoto (Texas) High School—the same school that produced current Sun Devil defensive back Courtney Jackson — Ryan Ranson-Pittinger of Long Beach, Calif., Mike Pinkard of Thornton, Colo. and Aaron Winterswyk of LaHabra, Calif.

Snyder also wanted to add depth to replace departing secondary standouts Jason Simmons and Damien Richardson.

Help in this department could come from Alfred Williams of Irvine, Calif., Kyion Grayes of Fullerton, Calif., Faulkner and Daniel.

Lastly, Snyder said he wanted to add depth at flyback since seniors Zack Romero and Kevin Tomassini departed. The 6-1, 240-pound Darrell Turner of Bellflower, Calif., a member of The Tacoma News-Tribune's prestigious "Western 100" squad, and Jake Each, 6-1, 240, of Muscatine, Iowa, have the ability to be good college players, Snyder said.

"Both are kids that can run," he said. "But when I watch them play it ended up where they would smother and smash (whoever) they happen to be blocking on. Both are really aggressive strong-blockers."

Other signees include linebacker Mason Unck, a 6-3, 210-pounder from Ogden, Utah. Unck (pronounced "unc" like in uncle) earned all-region, all-area and all-state honors last season; tailback J.R. Peroulis of Grand Junction, Colo., who rushed for 1,871 yards and 21 touchdowns last season; offensive lineman Adam "Big Country" Williams of Garland, Texas, was a member of the Texas Top 100 by The Dallas Morning News; and 6-4, 24-pound quarterback Matt Cooper of Pleasanton (Calif.) Amador High School, the same school that current ASU left guard Scott Peters attended.

NOTES:

•ASU may announce other student-athlete signings over the next few days. The team is waiting for paper work to clear for three or four potential student-athletes; Snyder said.

•Pinkard, who is listed as a defensive lineman, was the fifth-best tight-end prospect in the country, according to SuperPrep.

•Freshman defensive lineman Levi Jones, a walk-on from Eloy (Ariz.) High School, was selected as ASU's Outstanding Defensive Scout Team Player last season. For his exemplary effort, Snyder rewarded Jones with a full-ride scholarship.

•Parade Magazine All-American Offensive lineman Ralph Zarate, a product of Tucson High School, and defensive back/athlete Kyion Grayes of Fullerton, Calif. originally signed letters of intent to play at ASU in 1997. Neither attended ASU last year due to academic ineligibility. Both signed new letters of intent Wednesday. Grayes is now enrolled at ASU, and Zarate is "still taking the tests. He's very close. I believe he'll be here in the fall as a full-time student," Snyder said.

ASU looks to repeat sweep of Washington schools

BY RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

The ASU women's basketball team heads to north to Washington tonight to begin a two-game series against teams looking to right wrongs which began against the Sun Devils a month ago in Tempe.

In early January, the Sun Devils swept the Washington schools for their first back-to-back wins in conference since 1996.

Now ASU (8-10, 4-5 Pac-10) looks for the repeat performance on the road, beginning at 8 tonight on Friel Court against the Washington State Huskies.

"It's going to be a pivotal point in the season," senior guard Stephanie Freeman said. "To come home with two wins would put us in a position to talk about going to postseason play. Beating the Washington schools this weekend would be a great thing for our team."

And while ASU is "gelling" said Freeman, both Washington schools seem to be on the decline — and each started losing after its visit to the University Activity Center.

The Cougars were reveling in their upset win over then-No. 10 UofA two days previous when ASU last squared off with them, but the Sun Devils sent WSU home with a 20-point loss.

WSU (9-9, 3-6) has been a disappointing 2-5 since.

Washington's lack of success since its loss to ASU has been more dramatic.

The Huskies were undefeated (10-0) and ranked No. 7 when they entered the University Activity Center. But after their 77-76 last-second loss to ASU, Washington (14-5, 4-5) has plummeted to No. 21.

Despite the earlier success against the two squads, sophomore center Rachel Holt said both teams will be looking for revenge.

"Definitely, especially Washington," Holt said. "It was such a close game that went back and forth for quite awhile. Washington State, I think we can beat them again ... if we come out with the same intensity as we did at home. That's hard to do away, so we've really got to come together as a team."

ASU's defense was the key in the first meeting with the Cougars. Washington State turned the ball over 30 times in the loss, and shot a miserable 35 percent from the field.

Cougars coach Harold Rhodes said his team must play a better game against ASU if it wants to win.

"We were dominated in every phase of the game in the first meeting," he said, referring to ASU's 80-60 shellacking of the Cougars. "They forced us into a lot of turnovers, beat us on the boards and took control early. They gave us a good whipping."

Freeman said the Sun Devils intensity got to WSU.

"I think our defense rattled them the first time," she said. "But I think they will be ready for us and we are going to have to make some adjustments."

For improved results, Rhodes said the key is to get the wings open and take the pressure off WSU's point guards.

Also, expect more emphasis on the post play, especially that of WSU's two Germans — freshman forward Alke Dietel (12.5 points, 4.5 rebounds per game) and senior center Yvonne Kunze (13.7 ppg, 3.7 rpg) — ASU head coach Charli Turner Thorne said.

However, teams that make adjustments to the Sun Devils' defensive scheme actually help her squad, Turner Thorne said.

"When we are playing our defense well there is really not an adjustment you can make to beat it," Turner Thorne said. "Coaches think that by spreading the floor and other things they can beat it. It really usually plays into our hands when they do it — when they try to get out of what they have been doing all year and adjust to our defense."

BUZZER BEATERS:

•ASU owns a 12-11 edge all-time over the Cougars.

•Point guard Rechelle Lang will not make the road trip, as her swollen knee is not game ready quite yet.

•The last time ASU finished the first half of the Pac-10 season 4-5 (1992), the Sun Devils made the NCAA Tournament.

•The WSU bench has combined to score only 17 points in the last two games, both losses (USC and UCLA).

Senior guard Stephanie Freeman and the rest of the ASU's women's basketball team hit the road looking to reach the .500 mark with a sweep of the Washington schools. The Sun Devils take on Washington State tonight at 8:00 in Pullman.

the recruit cannot be named until the letter of intent is signed, Snyder-Park did say that she is a setter.

The Sun Devils lost two of their top-players at the end of last season, Kirstin Mattson and Terri Cox. Cox finished her career as a Sun Devil as No. 2 on the all-time ASU career digs list with 1,392, she compiled over 1,000 kills as well. Cox led the team in the kills and digs categories and Mattson led the team in the block solos and block assists.

While those may seem like big shoes to fill, Snyder-

Park is confident that Coughlin, who was unavailable for comment, will eventually be able to.

"She's an impact player, she has all the makings," Snyder-Park said. "She's somebody that could fill in the shoes of a Terri Cox."

GM wants Jordan back; 'Iron' Mike Tyson looks to shed Don King's locks

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Bulls general manager Jerry Krause wants Michael Jordan to return next season. But there's a catch — Jordan will have to play for a new coach.

"We want him back. We are not driving anybody out. We're not driving Michael out of here — that's bull," Krause said in an interview with the Chicago Tribune.

The Bulls, five-time champions in the 1990s, are expected to start rebuilding next year. And one person who won't be a part of that is coach Phil Jackson, who's already said he's not coming back.

Jordan has said repeatedly he won't play for any coach other than Jackson.

"If Michael chooses to leave because there is another coach here, then it is his choice and not ours," Krause said.

If Jordan, who turns 35 this month, does return, "he will have to play for someone else," Krause said.

At a morning practice before playing the Utah Jazz in Salt Lake City on Wednesday night, Jordan said it again. If Jackson goes, so does he.

"This is it. I'm done," he said. "That statement really validates what my beliefs are and what my decision is going to be at the end of the season."

Krause, who's had a strained relationship with Jordan and Jackson over the years, said there is no time set for talking with Jordan about his future. Bulls chairman Jerry Reinsdorf does the contract negotiating with Jordan, who makes about $33 million this year.

"The decision on Michael will just have to take a proper time when we will sit down and talk," Krause said. "We will talk about what he wants to do and what the situation is with the franchise and who is going to be here, and what our (salary) cap situation is."

"We would like to have Michael back. But Michael is

ASU men's swimming and diving squads head to Utah

Jeremy Hein/State Press

Sophomore Adam Wolfenberg and the rest of the men's swimming and diving team will be on the road tonight and Friday for dual meets versus BYU and Utah.

BY JASON JOSEPH
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's swimming and diving squad heads to the state of Utah for a pair of dual meets versus BYU tonight and Utah Friday afternoon.

The Sun Devils go into this meet with a 3-4 overall record, 0-3 in the Pac-10.

"They (BYU and Utah) will pose a lot of problems for us," ASU assistant coach Sean Farrell said. "(But) our confidence is really high right now."

ASU is coming off a dominating victory last weekend against in-state rival NAU. One problem that the Sun Devils faced against NAU was the high altitude. BYU and Utah also pose the "altitude problem" for ASU.

"The elevation will definitely be an advantage for them," Farrell said. "Some of our guys had some trouble swimming after the second and third races last weekend in Flagstaff."

With only three meets remaining until the start of the Pac-10 Championships in Long Beach, Calif., the No. 12 Sun Devils have already begun preparing for them.

"Right now we're just focusing on the Pac-10's," freshman Christian Jacobson said. "The meets are almost secondary to our training."

Farrell said some on the team were a bit under the weather but are ready for these meets.

"Some of our guys were sick this past week, but none of them had anything too serious," Farrell said. "They'll be ready for this weekend."

The Sun Devils go to BYU winning three of their last five dual meets, gaining momentum along the way. Last weekend, the Sun Devils set two new pool records at NAU.

"They both have tough teams but we have been swimming well and we are very well conditioned right now," junior Andre Trinidad said. "We just have to keep our attitudes positive and try to prove to ourselves that we can beat anyone."

Farrell said that fatigue shouldn't become a concern as it did earlier in the season.

"The guys have been tired but they're still swimming hard," Farrell said. "It's important for us to work hard and finish the season on a positive note."

their opponent, point guard Ahlon Lewis said. He added the team has recognized this and are working to avoid performing in such a way.

Veal said that isn't what he foresees.

"We understand that (there could be a drop off) and that's why I don't think that will happen," Lewis, who continues to lead the nation in assists with 9.09 a game, said. "We're just communicating more. The more we talk to each other, the more we let each other know where we stand and where we want to go. We don't want to be one of those up and down teams that doesn't even live up to its own expectations."

Interim head coach Don Newman added his squad can't afford any more let downs if it intends on earning a birth in post season play.

"We need to be up and we need to be up every game... because these guys are ready to walk into the second half of this thing with a sense of urgency," Newman said.

Veal, however, said that the way the team is playing now, there is no limit on how far it can go.

"The way I look at it is if we keep playing defense and our chemistry keeps on being the way it is, we're going to be a very, very hard team to beat

NOTES FROM DOWNTOWN

The all time series between these two schools is tied at 21 win apiece with the Cougars winning five of the last six and two in a row at the UAC.

TYSON TRYING TO HACK-UP HAIRBALL

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Mike Tyson wants to end his 10-year association with promoter Don King and his co-managers because of the former heavyweight champion's frustration over his banishment from boxing, according to a source.

"Mike went down and met with some guys in Los Angeles and they enticed him by saying they could help him more than his existing deal," a person close to the parties told The Associated Press on Tuesday night.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by Frances Drake

Thursday, February 5, 1998

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Mere words are not enough, and you know it. You're spending too much time planning how you're going to accomplish a task. Stop procrastinating.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Temptations are everywhere but you make an effort to resist them. You realize there's work to be done, and you apply yourself. An evening reward awaits.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You play some catch-up early in the day. Something you've put off doing can't be ignored. Later in the day, you can feel free to relax.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) While you're not in a romantic mood, your mate could use some attention. Once your work is out of the way, make an effort to reconnect with your mate.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) A sporting event or outing captures your enthusiasm. During evening hours, you tend to some long neglected domestic chores. Family members pitch in.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) If you check out your new acquaintance, you are likely to find that he or she is just a bit too needy. Therefore, expanding your relationship probably would not be a good idea.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You clearly know where you stand, and you won't be swayed. However, rest assured that your opponent in the argument isn't about to change his or her mind either.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You're allowing false pride to stand in your way. If you need help on that work project, go ahead and enlist someone's aid. In the long run, working jointly leads to success.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You need to rely on trust in your dealings with a close friend. While you don't exactly understand what's going on, just let your buddy work it out alone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) If applying for a loan or other financial assistance, don't get discouraged. These things take time. Ultimately, it all will work out in your favor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) You get relief from the recent hectic pace and can breathe a bit easier. Once you settle into your safe routine, you feel better. A friend issues a fun social invitation.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) You get the information you need in order to complete a do-it-yourself project. Take your time with the project, as a botched job could cost you loads of money.

YOU BORN TODAY are a diligent hard worker. While much is expected of you from an early age, you never complain. You simply pull up your sleeves and get to work. Your family is a priority, and you are likely to choose a field that allows you either to work at home or to stay close to it. Those around you admire your stoicism and strength
