Rape victim files charges, police say

BY ALLY ASHER
STATE PRESS

The 19-year-old student who reported being raped in her residence hall last week has decided to prosecute her attacker, ASU Police said.

Chief Lanny Standridge said he is pleased the victim is working with police in prosecuting the suspect.

"It's a difficult thing to do, but a courageous thing to do," he said. "In terms of protecting herself and the community, it's the right thing to do."

Although a formal complaint has been filed, police are still withholding the suspect's name.

The rape reportedly occurred around 4:30 a.m. Feb. 15 at Palo Verde West after a nearby Valentine's Day party. The victim told police she met the suspect earlier that night.

The victim had been unsure about pressing charges. Standridge said police will complete the investigation and gather all the reports for the County Attorney's Office to review.

"There has to be a reasonable potential for prosecution," Standridge said. "It will be up to the investigators to decide. Then the courts will determine guilt or innocence."

Police were able to find the suspect after the victim gave his first name and a description. Police talked with the suspect and obtained his side of the story, but at that time, no formal accusation had been made.

Standridge said once the County Attorney's Office gets ahold of the case, it will be out of ASU Police hands. He added that police will continue to give the victim support.

"We treat all cases at face value," Standridge said. "This is another call to awareness within our community, and unfortunately, we have a victim of a reported heinous crime. That victim deserves everyone's support."

Chapel enjoys 50 years of on-campus service

BY BECKY BEVINS
STATE PRESS

On its 50th birthday, Danforth Chapel stands as a celebrated monument to aspirations of peace, meditation and love in the middle of ASU's academic storm.

Through the tribulations of student protest, nomadic vendors, growth, construction and change Danforth Chapel remains.

In 1945 William H. Danforth, then president of Ralston Purina and a winter visitor to Arizona, donated $5,000 to ASU and several other schools in an effort to "provide a quiet place apart for meditation or rest for anyone of any faith or no faith."

Since its construction, Danforth Chapel has been the center for various religious practices, weddings, solitude and even controversy.

In 1990 the chapel was the center of controversy because of the cross that once stood atop the building.

"The American Civil Liberties Union decided that the cross was inappropriate because the chapel was supposed to serve the interests and needs of all of the students," said Ben Joseph, the president of the Campus Interfaith Council, the group that oversees the chapel. "We didn't see a need to resist the ACLU. We had no interest in excluding any of the students on campus."

As a result the cross came down and the face of Danforth Chapel was changed forever.

"Students didn't really seem to care about the cross, but several faculty members and the ACLU wanted it to come down so it did," Joseph said.

We want students to come here. We want them to feel that they have a place where they can go, where they can just sit and just be.

— Ben Joseph, president of the Campus Interfaith Council

"In its early years the chapel was at the center of a booming religious conference. Students could take elective classes from ministers with the same credentials as professors," said Mary Ann Carter, Danforth Chapel administrator. "In the 50s it was a place for social gathering because the campus was so small and the student religious council was a very big organization on campus."

The chapel has also hosted the weddings of several hundred ASU students.

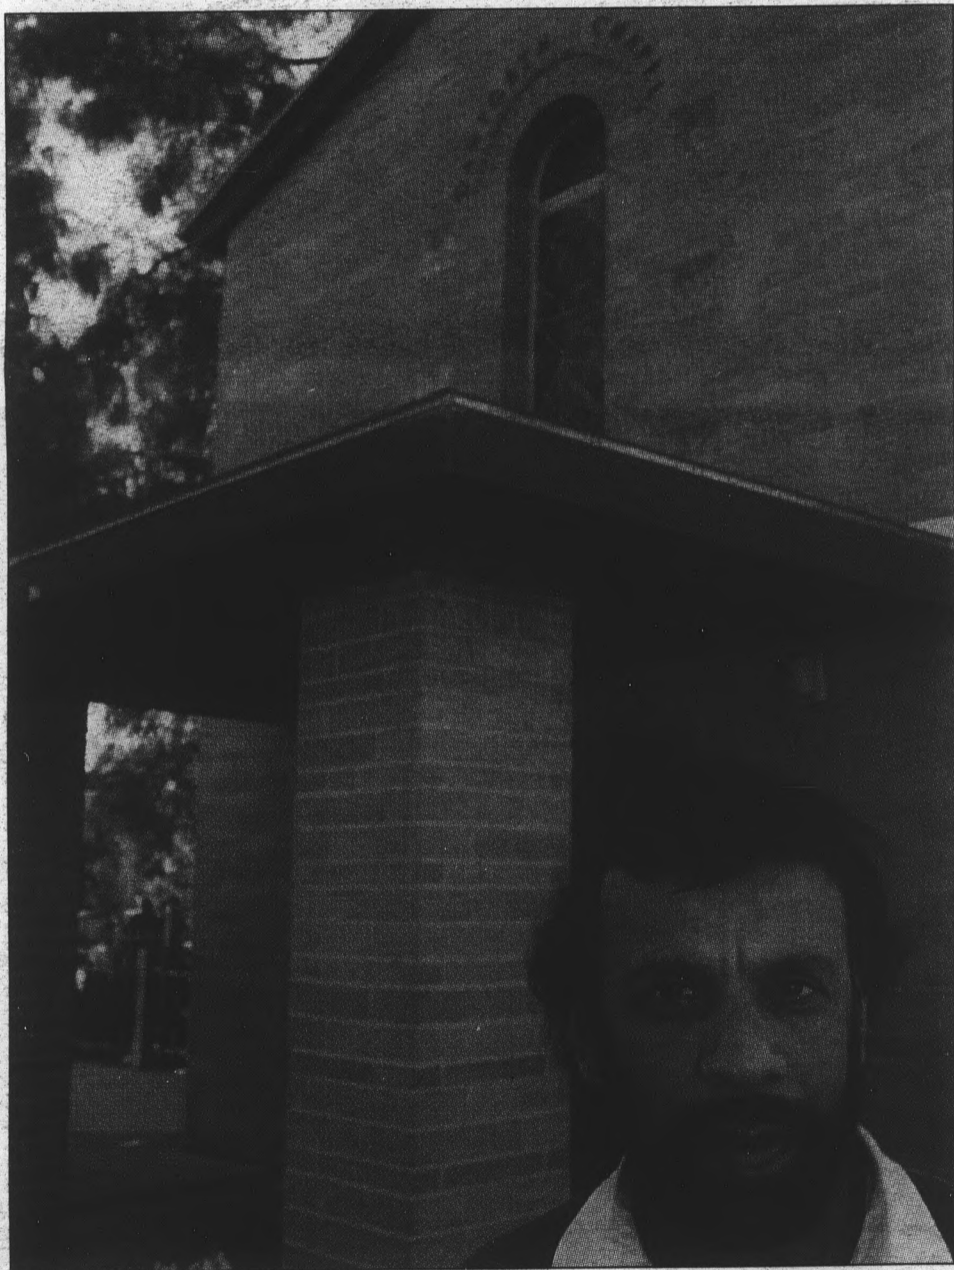

"It was a perfect place for my wife and I because it was so reasonably priced, it was also the only place that I could find on such short notice," said Jeff Meyers, who married his wife, Isabella, at Danforth Chapel nearly a decade ago. "We are planning to renew our vows on our 10 year anniversary we already have the chapel reserved."

The Meyers' are now the parents of three and believe that they were the last couple to be wed with the cross still atop the building.

"This place is perfect for people who want to have a small wedding since the

Parking fee increase set for August, officials say

BY DAVID WOODFILL
STATE PRESS

After 10 years of steady parking rates, Parking and Transit Services has announced an increase in parking fees for all the campus lots and structures beginning in August.

Prices for lot 59 will be raised to $50, a $5 increase; lots 40, 55 and 58 will increase $100, a $15 hike; and structures one through six will be raised to $129, an increase of $24.

"Basically you're paying for the level of service that you're receiving," said Linda Riegel, assistant director of Parking and Transit Services. "Structure parking offers the greatest convenience and the greater service; also the structures cost more, so we feel they should pay more."

Parking and Transit Services mailed out fliers this week alerting students, faculty and staff who use the lots about the rate hike. The flier also highlighted perks included with the increase, including two new flash buses and some new gate arm systems.

ASU parking costs still remain the lowest among Pac-10 universities, however.

Riegel said they needed to raise rates not only to keep up with inflation but also to help finance two new structures, although the department initially said it would not fund the construction.

The structures are expected to undergo development in 1999 and 2000.

One new structure will be an underground lot in the 10-acre area where the Tempe Center now resides. ASU will begin construction after the business leases run out on June 30, 2000.

chapel only seats 70, and it's cheap, which is perfect for students just starting out their lives," Carter said. "Anyone affiliated with ASU can have the chapel for $35. If not (affiliated) with the university it's $50."

Carter said she's seen a steady decline in the number of weddings held at Danforth because of other low-cost wedding chapels sprouting throughout the area.

"We used to see 60 weddings a year in the 1970s, now there are probably only 25 a year," Carter said.

There has also been a decline in the number of religious groups who use the facility.

"The Quakers are one of the groups that used to use Danforth as a meeting place but they built a larger meeting place nearby," Carter said. "We are seeing a lot of groups go elsewhere because their memberships get larger and out grow the chapel."

Although the needs of the community may have surpassed the abilities of Danforth to serve it, the chapel remains available to anyone looking for a place to think, meditate and to celebrate away from the rest of the world.

The 50th anniversary celebration will be marked by an open house from 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. today.

Danforth Chapel will have its doors open to everyone, just as it has for 50 years.

"We want students to come here," Joseph said. "We want them to feel that they have a place where they can go, where they can just sit and just be."

Parking

Karen Honeycutt, coordinator of University Properties and Purchasing, said the new lot is needed because a lot of people have complained about the long distances they have to walk.

"That 10-acre site is a prime location," she said "We don't have an exact estimate but we have a ballpark figure of about $12,000 to $14,000 dollars a space (between $14 and $21 million)."

She also said an underground lot is more expensive but given its location, the area is too valuable to local development.

The spot for the second structure, which will cost $1.8 million, has not been decided but Parking and Transit Services was considering building it either near the University Club or where the tennis courts now reside in front of the Student Recreation Center.

Riegel also said maintenance for the new structures will cost the University, although she's not sure how much. Currently, it runs about $120,000 every five years to keep them clean, and to maintain the emergency call boxes and shuttle services.

Student opinions vary on the increases.

"I don't see why we need the new lots if there's already enough space," said Kelly Hiers, an undeclared freshman who parks in Lot 59. "If people are too lazy to walk a little, the rest of us shouldn't have to pay."

Casey Gagnon, a sophomore majoring in sociology, felt differently.

"I don't think that it is that big of an increase," he said. "They can charge as much as they want as long as they fix these gate arms. I always see people all the time from lot 59 who shouldn't even be here and nobody does anything and it ticks me off."

Iraq deployment costs top $600 million, officials say

By JOHN DIAMOND
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The cost to U.S. taxpayers of keeping military pressure on Iraq is more than $600 million and climbing, according to Pentagon and congressional officials.

Money for increased fuel consumption, special deployment pay, shipment of supplies and increased flying time adds up quickly as the U.S. presence around Iraq reaches a post-Gulf War high. Unlike in the 1991 conflict, no large coalition of other countries is ponying up money to support the U.S. deployment.

And with the Clinton administration suspicious of Iraqi intentions, the troops aren't going home any time soon.

Deputy Defense Secretary John Hamre told reporters Wednesday that the cost of managing military operations in the Persian Gulf since the crisis with Iraq erupted last fall has been "well over $600 million."

Hamre, the Pentagon's No. 2 official, said that figure represents spending "above ordinary operating costs." An aircraft carrier, for example, is already fully budgeted for a six-month cruise whether it steams in the Persian Gulf or elsewhere.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., a senior member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said that based on briefings he has received, the total is already closer to $750 million.

The Pentagon says it is still calculating the total, but based on Hamre's and Warner's estimates, the military has equaled or exceeded the entire sum of money it was allotted by Congress for the Persian Gulf region, and that's with more than half the fiscal year still to go.

Congress budgeted $700 million for Gulf operations for the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1. That amount would sustain the basic force of 15,000 to 20,000 troops along with perhaps 120 planes and one aircraft carrier battle group. With the U.S. force in the Gulf nearly doubled and stepped-up operations, Hamre's $600 million estimate brings the new minimum total for the year to $1.3 billion.

Hamre said Saudi Arabia paid the United States about $300 million to support military operations last year. He said he did not know whether the Saudis or Kuwait and Bahrain would contribute to the most recent deployments.

To be sure, the Pentagon, with more than 30,000 troops in the region, is spending nowhere near what it cost to field a force of more than half a million to eject Iraq from Kuwait in 1991.

But neither is the international support for today's mission anywhere near what it was seven years ago. The Gulf War cost $61.1 billion, according to a 1992 Pentagon estimate. But international contributions pared the cost to U.S. taxpayers to $7.4 billion.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., says the cost of the Gulf mission should come out of the Pentagon's hide.

Laurent Rebours/Associated Press

U.S. soldiers of the 3rd Battalion, 69th Armor, 3rd Infantry Division from Fort Stewart, Ga., receive ashes from Chaplain Jeff Matsler of Floydada, Texas, during a service held at their base camp in the desert north of Kuwait City Wednesday. Despite the recently brokered agreement in Baghdad, U.S. forces still continue to deploy in northern Kuwait close to the Iraqi border.

"We have a military on a contingency basis. Whenever they're actually going to do anything, they're going to charge us extra," Frank said. He said it was as if the Department of Housing and Urban Development had its budget and then, "if we put somebody in a house, we have to pay extra."

Warner, however, agrees with President Clinton that the Pentagon should not have to pay for the troop deployment out of its budget.

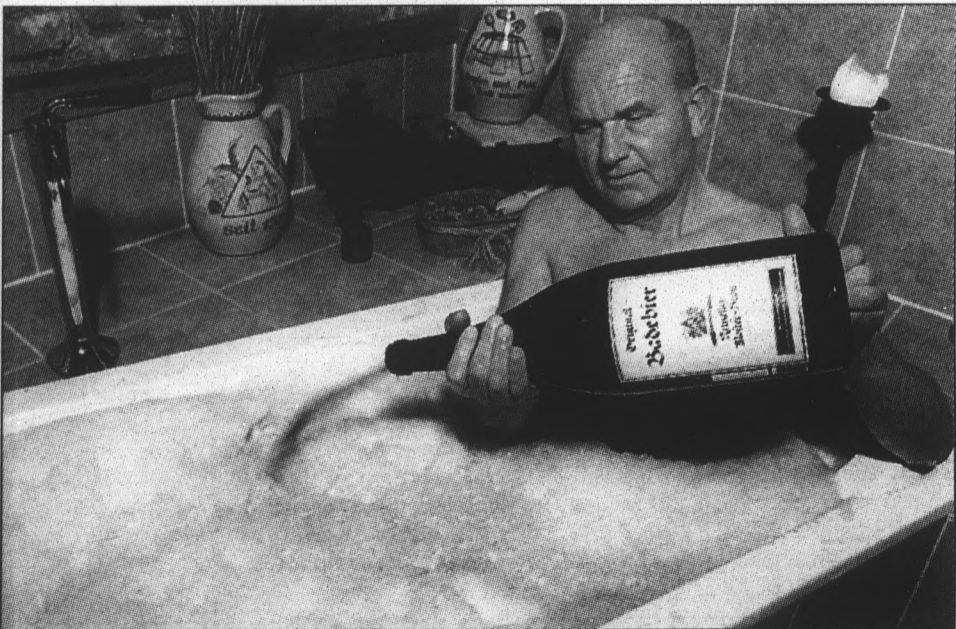

Interviews with defense experts and testimony from senior officers pointed to some of the ingredients of the cost of deploying forces:

—Deployed Navy ships typically steam 50 days out of three months; in the Gulf, the deployed ships are steaming 70 days per quarter, according to Ron O'Rourke, a Navy analyst with the Congressional Research Service. Carriers in the Gulf are launching 100 sorties per day as opposed to 40 to 60 during routine deployments.

—The Air Force spends $30 million a month to deploy a 30-aircraft expeditionary force. The Air Force had 125 planes in the region before the crisis broke out vs. 210 planes today. An individual fighter sortie can cost between $5,000 and $15,000, said Steve Kosiak of the Center for Strategic and Budgetary Assessments.

—Adm. Donald L. Pilling, the vice chief of naval operations, said that keeping two aircraft carriers in the Persian Gulf full time costs hundreds of millions of dollars a year. At a separate hearing, Adm. Jay Johnson, the chief of naval operations, put the total extra cost of Gulf operations for the Navy at $130 million going back to last fall.

Chief of the Kloster Brewery Helmut Fritsche demonstrated use of the product, a beer to bathe in, in Neuzelle Tuesday.

German brewer offers bathing beer

NEUZELLE, Germany (AP) — Can't afford a champagne bath? Tired of floral-scented bubbles? A German brewer has the answer: bathing beer.

The Kloster brewery in Neuzelle, 60 miles southeast of Berlin, plans to begin selling three-quart bottles of dark beer concentrate next month. Mixed with water, four bottles, at $22 each, are enough to fill the average 32-gallon tub.

The only difference between the beer concentrate and the normal drinking suds is that the yeast, normally filtered out, is left in, brewery owner Helmut Fritsche said Wednesday.

That makes the bath soothing to the skin and also a great treatment for eczema, he said.

"The usual foam baths are made of synthetic ingredients, while our beer is a purely natural product," he said. "You can bathe in it, or drink it. Whoever wants to can do both."

Black Baptist leader charged; his alleged mistress arrested

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — The leader of the nation's largest black denomination was charged Wednesday with racketeering and theft, while the woman the Rev. Henry Lyons allegedly had an affair with and spent church funds on was arrested in Milwaukee.

Lyons, president of the 8.5-million-member National Baptist Convention USA, was released on $100,000 bail. As he arrived at court, Lyons said he planned to clear his name.

Federal and state investigators have been looking into corporate deals Lyons brokered on the denomination's behalf and what he did with more than $200,000 contributed to burned churches in the South. Lyons has said he returned most of the money to donors.

He also has been accused of accepting $350,000 in secret payments from Nigeria's military ruler.

The charges Wednesday were filed state by prosecutors in Pinellas County, but the specific allegations were not immediately released.

In Wisconsin, Bernice Edwards, a former church worker and a convicted embezzler, was arrested on a warrant out of Pinellas County, Milwaukee police Lt. Greg Baur said. No more details were immediately available.

Lyons, 55, became the target of a federal grand jury investigation last year after his wife, Deborah Lyons, was charged with setting fire to a waterfront house Lyons owns with Ms. Edwards. He was suspected of using church money to buy the real estate as well as cars and jewelry for Ms. Edwards.

Lyons has denied having an affair with Ms. Edwards or misusing funds. Last year, Mrs. Lyons admitted setting the fires, saying she had a drinking problem. She was sentenced to five years' probation.

In past months, Lyons survived repeated no-confidence votes from the church membership and publicly apologized but admitted no more than serious errors in judgment.

"I have sinned," he said in December. "And I have displayed human weaknesses and frailties."

He talked about the corrupting power of money but made it clear he would not give up his Baptist presidency before the five-year term ends in 1999.

Titanic can't handle power of the force

The Titanic phenomenon just keeps chugging along, with no signs of slowing anytime soon.

The big-budget James Cameron film shattered the world box-office mark late Monday night, surging past Jurassic Park as the biggest global box-office moneymaker in history.

Millions of giggly, pre-pubescent girls — as well as giggly, post-pubescent girls — have swooned over Titanic star Leonardo DiCaprio's on-screen pursuit of co-star Kate Winslet. Some have fainted mid-movie at his pouty advances. And some have — ugh — called DiCaprio a — “ugh” again — “honey.”

Are you quaking in your boots, Matthew McConaughey? Apparently, you've been replaced as the world's top heartthrob.

Some of Titanic's devoted have taken it upon themselves to watch the lengthy (almost three-and-a-half hours) movie numerous times. It's a case of Hollywood ballot-box stuffing. Or, in this case, box office-box stuffing.

It's happened before, when Star Wars first made its way to theaters and drive-in screens.

But the times were different then.

Bell bottoms, Watergate and disco have given way to electronica, Fornigate and ... bell bottoms.

OK, so maybe the times aren't so different, but the path both movies took to achieving success is.

The aloof bravado of Han Solo and the innocence and do-good ideals of Luke Skywalker vs. the breathtaking, romantic sweetness of Jack Dawson should really be viewed with perspective. When Star Wars hit the big screen in 1977, ticket prices were undoubtedly lower and movie theaters weren't as abundant as they are today.

Still, the George Lucas space saga managed to become the top moneymaker of all time.

The movie spawned books, posters, and other memorabilia. The same hasn't happened to Titanic — yet.

May the apocalypse strike the Earth with full force the day store shelves are inundated with Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet action figures. May it strike twice if these figures have the G.I. Joe “kung-fu grip.”

View Titanic; despite the somewhat-trite dialog, it really is that good. View it many times, too, if you must. View it, too, if it wins the 1997 Academy Award for best picture.

But prepare yourselves for next summer, when the first installment of Lucas' Star Wars prequels arrive to theaters.

As Obi Wan Kenobi would likely say, the Force will always triumph.

A disturbing history of the income tax

In an annual event, the Internal Revenue Service mailed millions of tax packages for the 1997 income tax. The 113,000 employees of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service will process about 200 million tax returns, to be filed by April 15.

As we scurry to complete our filing, have you ever wondered how we ever came to adopt such an unwieldy, time-consuming and frustrating tax system? Well, we did it to ourselves. The people of the United States decided it was a good thing, so we amended the Constitution to have an income tax.

It all occurred 85 years ago, when the 16th Amendment was adopted. The people didn't know what they were getting into, because at that time less than one-half of one percent of the people paid the tax, and they paid very little. The tax was one percent of income. A graduated surtax beginning on incomes of $20,000 (a lot of money in those days) rose gradually to six percent on incomes of more than $500,000 ($7 million in today's money value).

Once the income tax law was enacted, the fat was in the fire because the 16th Amendment is completely open-ended, with no restrictions or limitations on Congress. The first few words of the amendment read, “The Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived.” With this blanket authority, the Congress has changed the tax rate many times by legislative action.

Apparently, the new tax code was not well understood. Senator Elihu Root was speaking to a friend shortly after the tax was enacted, and is reported to have remarked that they both could go to jail for failing to understand the tax form. Mind you, the original 1913 code had only 16 pages. Today's Revenue Code is more than 36,000 pages. It is still not well understood, except by a well-trained cadre of tax professionals.

To put it in perspective, the Gettysburg Address runs about 200 words. The Declaration of Independence is about 1,300 words. The Holy Bible contains about 773,000 words. But the federal income-tax code runs about 7 million words and is growing every year. Since 1986, Congress has made about 4,000 changes to the tax law.

Although the Internal Revenue Service has taken a lot of heat recently about its administration of the tax code, trying to correct the administration is not the answer. The problem is with the basic policies established by the Congress that result in the tax code. Reform must come from the Congress, not the IRS.

A few years ago, Forbes magazine asked the top 12 members of Congress who write the tax laws — six from each part — if they prepared their own tax returns. Only one did. The other 11 rely on tax professionals. The sole exception is Rep. Bill Archer of Texas, the senior Republican on the Ways and Means Committee. Recently, he said, “I am convinced that if most members of Congress did their own taxes, we would have had tax reform long ago.” Archer wants to replace the tax code with a national sales tax.

The significance of the 16th Amendment goes beyond the tax implications. Prior to its enactment, the state was the dominant authority of our system of government. Before 1913, the federal government had only a narrow range of policy options in its legislative efforts, simply because it did not control much revenue. Customs collections and alcohol taxes constituted 75 percent of all federal revenue.

The change came with the new national income tax. In effect, Congress captured the tax authority in the country. Belatedly, state and local governments entered the income-tax arena for a source of revenue. But it was too late to make any significant impact in the total revenue picture. Today, the federal government collects more than 90 percent of all income taxes imposed on the people by all levels of government, and it has become the dominant influence in our system of federal-state-local government.

So, as we struggle with our tax forms to beat the midnight deadline at the post office on April 15, let us remember that it was “We the People” who made the decision to have a federal income tax and gave to the Congress unlimited authority to change the conditions and the amount of the tax.

Ironic tolerance

It is more tragic than it is ironic. If you were a black male attending the recent lecture on Race Relations entitled "Teaching Tolerance," there was a reasonably high probability that you were isolated from the long line of attendees and detained by a large man with a metal detector, while allowing "others" to enter the Gammage Auditorium undeterred. The reason I am writing this now, a week later, is that I only yesterday received confirmation that what I thought I had seen, was in fact observed by others. I had wanted to believe so badly that there was some sort of an explanation for the security guard's behavior, that I remained in a state of denial about the seriousness, about the implications of this event, until now. Interestingly, when the issue came up for discussion, one of my black friends (one of the individuals stopped by Gammage security), mentioned that he was reluctant to say anything because "You just learn to pick your battles." I can't be the only person that finds it ironic that my friend is more tolerant of the security guard who discriminated against him, than the security guard was "tolerant" of my friend's skin color. After much thought, I have concluded that the uninformed belief that the poor treatment of minorities is something that happens only occasionally and elsewhere, is one of the more ominous obstacles we face today as a country, in our local communities and on this college campus. Some might argue that I am pinpointing an inappropriate behavior toward one individual, by one individual. Unfortunately, this is not true. It took the participation, the acquiescence of all those present, including myself who said nothing at the time, to allow it to continue; to, through passivity, essentially condone and perpetuate the discrimination. That one can be discriminated against at a conference on race relations, which was made possible through the efforts of a black scholar, at a publicly funded university that routinely issues policy statements against discrimination and harassment, is far more tragic than it is ironic.

Column blames victim

This is a much-needed response to Meghan Gaynor's editorial on alcohol and rape ("Alcohol obstructs our freedom to reason," Feb. 24). As much as I agree with Gaynor that alcohol is a problem on any campus, her statement on alcohol and rape is frankly untrue. I applaud Gaynor's attempt not to blame the victim for her own rape, because it is not my any means her fault, NO MATTER WHAT. Unfortunately, it was only an attempt, as she did blame the victim — and I quote: "I only wish to point out that this crime might have been prevented. If this woman had not been drinking ..." Enough said. What about the man? What if he hadn't been drinking? Why does she place the burden on the only person who had no control or means of prevention, with or without alcohol? Or at the least, what if alcohol wasn't a factor? Gaynor continues, "If she hadn't been drinking is it likely she would have passed out in her bedroom with a man she had only met earlier that evening?" Now she is questioning her character and choices as a woman. When a woman lets a man into her house, it is not an invitation for sex. Not to mention she was raped in her own bed. She could have went to the party, not had a drop of alcohol, went back to her place with her friends and this man she met, fell asleep, or stayed awake, and she still could have been raped. A woman does not need to be passed out to be raped. Nor does she need to be sober. A rapist does not have to be drunk when he rapes. I am aware that alcohol does play a role, but not in blaming the women.

It is because of Gaynor's (whether she realizes it or not) along with a good percentage of society's means of thinking that this women, and thousands of other women, are afraid to press charges or even report a rape. The victim is always on trial and it will always be this way unless people start understanding that rape is a crime of violence and that there is absolutely nothing that a woman does to become a rape victim.

Sick humor is fun

I would just like to take a minute out of my busy schedule and comment on the comic Across the Hall by Gentry Smith, as well as the State Press for allowing it to run. I personally think that the comic is twisted in a way only certain people can understand. It is called "sick humor," and I think everyone needs it every once in a while. In response to anyone that feels that this comic is "tasteless" — hey don't read it. No one is forcing you to.

Research key to police residents

To have a police officer in one's community may increase a sense of well being.

Tempe Mayor Neil Giuliano and Police Chief Ron Burns both agree that having members of the police department as residents would give others a sense of community ownership and increase the visibility of police presence.

Having a policeman in your community does not ensure safety, but it does insure a member with connections, know-how and concern for the safety and protection of the area.

With only 12 percent of the police force residing in Tempe (population 156,000 within about 40 square miles), perhaps the Tempe City Council is a little embarrassed. I hope it is not the incidence of crime or the safety of the neighborhoods. If the police of an area do not feel safe raising their family here, than who should? This is a possibility, but I am willing to discredit it and take the reason proposed.

What is the 12 percent of? There were, as of early 1997, 403 employees of the Tempe Police, 256 of which are officers, sworn supervisors and managers; 115 of these are civilian police — a concept which began here in 1988, with the opening of the Civilian Police Academy. There are also 156 volunteers. When it is stated 12 percent of police officers live in the city, I'm guessing the council is referring to the 256 officers, etc. This means that there are still 115 civilian police who may all be living in Tempe. Are the civilian police not sufficient in maintaining a sense of security in the community?

Yet the question remains, how will the council entice officers to remain residents of Tempe? Will we give them funds to equalize their spending on housing? Tempe's police budget is currently $25 million and this would be a gratuity, as well as illegal. How could they equalize the budget to maintain fairness? Depending on the house, the area, taxes and the property accessories, the rate of spending required to keep and maintain a home could vary per officer.

Free garbage pick-up and water service do not sound too unjust; as many other jobs offer perks, this could be considered one of those. However, these perks are ones that ask us to pay so others may enjoy the service.

Perhaps, officers' salaries could be raised so they may actually be able to reside in the area they protect and serve. If that is not an option, then perhaps the council could get another grant from the Department of Justice to form barrack-like housing for police officers on 15 square miles. This, too, would also ensure the visible presence of enforcement.

But if money is to be given out at all, then we should first consider who deserves it. Commanders, managers or radio dispatchers? Who would we like to have in close proximity for quick action or some sort of comforting adornment?

The Tempe police have four divisions: Patrol North, Patrol South, Investigation Division and Support Division. Each division has a commander who reports to Police Chief Burns. Each bureau has a manager or lieutenant who reports to the divisions commander. The bureaus work under the concept of geographic deployment, which began in 1991 after receiving two $200,000 grants from the Department of Justice. This first action was carried out with the opening of a ministration in Escalante Park, and an evaluation of various communities for favorable policing strategies. This operation was extended to the whole Department Patrol in 1993.

With the idea of geographic deployment on your mind, consider the desired effect of having a police officer residing in a community. Even if police officers were living mainly in Tempe, what if they were all grouped together in one neighborhood instead of being spread throughout? Would we want only those who work on patrols to live in our communities? And which of the police officers want to live in Tempe? Should an officer live in the areas they patrol? Probably not, considering that an officer stays on a "beat" for two years before going to another section of the city. Perhaps the City Council could buy houses in various neighborhoods around the city and give them out to officers who will maintain and organize neighborhood watches. With such an action, their homes could become like mini-ministations and a hub of community action. But what police officer would desire to lose his extra time in such a way?

What do they really want to accomplish by making more of the Tempe police force be city residents? Better their image, create a police state or just be more efficient and community oriented?

If the officers need more cash, then the police department should address it as such. So far, all that has been committed to is the promise to research the issue in this community and others. I hope they do investigate this matter further, and in my opinion, the question of giving housing allowances to police officers should have been saved for mentioning when more research was done.

Is Iraq being singled out on weapons-inspections issue?

Recently, I was speaking with an anonymous professor on campus who stated that he believes that there is a lack of "evenhandedness" in the current confrontation between Iraq and the United Nations regarding weapons inspections. This professor stated that if Iraq should be forced to have their non-conventional weapons inspected, so should the rest of the countries with such weapons.

Could this professor have a point? Is it really "fair" that only Iraq be forced to open up their weapons stores to U.N. inspections? What about countries such as Israel, the United States, Russia and all other countries that have such weapons? Shouldn't they be forced to let the United Nations — or another worldwide organization with similar credentials — investigate their weapons supplies?

It is an intriguing question. On a certain level, it would seem to have a lot of merit. After all, the United States has tons of chemical weaponry. Russia does as well. And there's no question at this point that Israel does. On a certain plane, it would only seem fair that these countries be forced to open their stockpiles to inspections.

However, if the question is examined in a deeper fashion, certain facts emerge. For example, there is conclusive evidence that the Iraqis not only stockpile chemical weapons, they also don't have a problem using them. Ask the Iraqi Kurds, who experienced a chemical-weapons attack by Saddam in the late 1980s. Ask the Iranians, who were subjected to an attack in the Iraq-Iran War of the '80s. Saddam has also threatened to destroy Israel with chemical weapons. It could be argued that Saddam put himself in this position by using — or threatening to use — the stockpile he possesses. A country such as his needs to be restrained by the international community from using these weapons again. Perhaps if the leadership in Iraq changes, these inspections can be reduced or ceased altogether.

It is true that many other countries have chemical and nuclear weapons. It's also true these weapons in themselves represent just as big a potential threat to international security as Saddam's. Also, as everyone knows, the United States is the only country to use nuclear weapons, as well as Agent Orange and Napalm. However, to compare the present leadership of the United States, Russia or Israel with the current Iraqi leadership would be a gigantic leap. Though no one has the certitude to guarantee any of these other countries will not use non-conventional weapons in the future, it would be fair to say that the chances of any of these countries (including Israel, who restrained from attacking Iraq at all in the Gulf War, even though 39 Scuds fell on or around Tel Aviv) from attacking Iraq with non-conventional weapons, is infinitesimal compared to the other way around. The Iraqi government has not proven itself trustworthy in its dealings with the international community at all — witness the continuing fight over current weapons inspections. These other nations do not have Saddam's track record.

So, to expect "evenhandedness" in the context of weapons inspections, given the current unstable political leadership in Iraq, could be looked on almost as an oxymoronic question. Perhaps, when Saddam is no longer in power and the government represents the will of the Iraqi people, then the weapons-inspection process in Iraq could be reduced or even stopped. Until then, let's not delude ourselves regarding the need to be "fair."

New SES cart features student's design

BY MONICA AGUIRRE
STATE PRESS

With a vast military background, two previous degrees, artistic talent and a good eye for potential, one student has created a very inventive machine.

ASU freshman Mark Hayzlett designed and constructed a handicapped cart the Safety Escort Service will receive in March.

"I am creative — an artist," the bio-medical engineering student said. "If I were an inventor, it would drive me nuts. I just apply creative application to things I've seen."

The modifications to the cart Hayzlett designed will include a wheelchair-accessible ramp, a fiberglass canopy, settles, handrails and a re-chargeable dual battery pack.

Hayzlett works at The Electric Vehicle Company in Tempe, which supplies golf carts for ASU. He assists the team by transforming carts for special purposes.

"Mark is a very talented fabricator," said Jim McCord, general manager for EVC. "He comes to us with a wealth of experience from his military background."

The Provosts and Vice President of Student Affairs offices are funding the $11,500 cart.

The Day The Earth Stood Still, a 1951 science fiction movie, depicted a space ship with a roll-down ramp. That inspired Hayzlett to create the handicapped mobile.

"The projects Mark builds are always first-class," said Erin Alvarez, an EVC employee.

Hayzlett said simplicity is essential to this cart. "You want to make it as easy as possible," he said. "The safety depends on the operator. I wanted to get some professional credentials to back up my creativity."

After graduation, Hayzlett, a 42-year-old re-entry student, said he wants to get involved in medical science, specifically custom modifications of people. This concept would enable patients to generate new organs with cell division instead of transplants.

In the meantime, Hayzlett is content inventing various specialized carts and pursuing his engineering degree.

"I'm getting out with a diploma or a death certificate," he said. "I'm very determined."

ASU Educator wins award for contributions to women

By ALLY ASHER
STATE PRESS

Christine Kajikawa Wilkinson's ongoing efforts to support and uphold the women's community have not gone unnoticed.

As a long-standing member of ASU's Student Activities Board and a well-known educator, Wilkinson has contributed to students' interests for 27 years. Now it is her turn to be recognized for her strong support and active involvement with students and women in the community.

Wilkinson, along with nine other women, will be presented with the Tribute to Women award at the fifth annual Young Women's Christian Association luncheon today at Phoenix Civic Plaza.

The award honors females for their efforts to empower women and eliminate racism. Wilkinson was nominated by several people in the community for being a distinguished educator and leader.

"I was very flattered," Wilkinson said. "It is very significant because to me education is so vital and important to everyone's future. To be a part of that and have the field recognized is really wonderful."

Wilkinson volunteers for several different community organizations, including the American Red Cross, the Arizona Foundation for Women and Tempe Sports Authority, a local group that recognizes athletes who have overcome extreme handicaps. She said her extended community involvement reflects her need to recognize individuals and their differences.

"People need to be aware of the unique qualities of each individual from an ethnic and gender perspective," Wilkinson said. "If you have only a homogeneous perspective, you'll lose out on this wonderful talent, filled with ideas and new ways to approach things that you never would have thought of. It strengthens organizations."

As vice president of Student Affairs, Wilkinson is responsible for a number of programs and services inside and outside of classroom, ranging from financial and academic services to student life and development. She attributes her nomination of the award to the entire department and said everyone helped contribute to her success.

"The award is representative of a whole group of people," Wilkinson said. "I am thrilled to accept the award on behalf of all those I work with and have worked with in the past. It's a team award."

Wilkinson said she plans to continue her involvement in the community fighting for women. She added that she feels there are a number of broader issues people need to recognize and improve for the future.

"Relating to women's issues and race has been very important to me over my lifetime," Wilkinson said. "We need to encourage more people to move into these roles. We have to continue to help people."

Student's auto shanghaied at gunpoint

By DAVID WOODFILL
STATE PRESS

A female student's car was stolen at gun point around 8 p.m. Tuesday night in Lot 63 near Cholla Hall, while she was getting out of her vehicle, ASU Police said.

The suspect was described as a Middle Eastern male with short black hair, a dark complexion and a medium build. The driver also said the man was about 5 feet 8 inches tall, and spoke with a slight accent.

He reportedly threatened the victim with a black semi-automatic pistol and told her to hand over the keys to her vehicle.

The victim asked the suspect to return her apartment key and parking decal, and removed both before the suspect drove away.

Police declined to give the victim's name "because of the nature of the crime, until we can identify the suspect and determine what his intentions are," said Lanny Standridge, chief of ASU police.

According to the police report, the suspect told the victim that he would leave her car on Southern Avenue, but headed north on Rural Road instead.

Standridge said ASU police contacted the Tempe Police Department immediately and requested they be on the lookout for the vehicle.

"Right now we don't have any leads or suspects, but we're following up with the victim to get additional details," Standridge said.

"Overall, serious crimes remain relatively infrequent, but we're still vulnerable and it shows the need to be careful," he said. "In this particular incident I think the victim was a true victim and she did everything right. I'm very relieved that she was not harmed."

POLICE REPORT

- ASU Police reported the following incidents Tuesday:
- A student said someone criminally damaged his vehicle in Area 17.
  - A student was arrested, cited and released for criminal nuisance, possession of illegal drug paraphernalia and underage consumption of alcohol at 615 Alpha Drive.
  - A student reported that someone took his cellular phone from Hayden Library.

- A student reported that someone took her bicycle from the Towers Apartments, where it was secured with a lock.
- A student reported that she was the victim of an armed robbery in Area 63.
- Two adult males, not affiliated with the University, were arrested, cited and released for eating and running at Chili's Restaurant in Tempe Center.

Big Apple's mayor to New Yorkers: Out with rudeness, in with civility and respect

By MICHAEL BLOOD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — From the mayor with the explosive temper comes a lesson in temperate behavior.

Be nice New Yorkers, or else! Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, who once joked on national TV that "We can kick your city's ass," said Wednesday he wants New York to set a new benchmark for civility. In other words, turn down that stereo, lighten up on the gas pedal, stop littering and say, "Thank You."

Careening cabbies must be more courteous on the road and city workers shouldn't be foul-mouthed, he said. Schools should restore traditional civics classes, or at least teach principles like integrity and respect for others.

Even in a city that has a certain pride in its gruffness, New Yorkers should be "treating each other in a civil and decent way," the mayor said in a speech.

"The foundation of any civilized society is mutual respect for each other's rights," he said. Being considerate "lifts the city up."

Among Giuliani's plans: Posting 30 mph speed signs to remind drivers of the largely ignored limit; having police write more speeding tickets; a push Guard Jason Patton's recently improved play will be counted on heavily tonight when ASU hosts Stanford at the University Activity Center. Game time is 7 p.m.

BY MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

The names of the schools are the same. It's the makeup of the teams that has changed. With even more at stake, there are no innocents.

Four weeks after ASU upset then-fourth-ranked Stanford on the road in overtime 90-87, the Sun Devils and Cardinal (23-3, 12-2 Pac-10) will clash again. Game time is set for 7 tonight at the University Activity Center.

ASU (17-10, 7-7) comes into the game a deeper team, fighting to keep alive its dream for an NCAA Tournament bid.

After playing most of the season with only a six-man bench, ASU interim head coach Don Newman has recently felt more confident with the play of seventh-man Jason Patton.

The 6-foot-4 guard has seen some of his longest playing time in the past three contests, averaging 17 minutes a game. Patton has responded well, scoring 8.7 points a night, including 13 against Oregon.

Newman said it is essential for Patton to continue his improved play.

"Jason Patton has stepped up in the last three game and shown that coach Newman can count on him," he said. "He's given us some quality minutes and that's helped us immensely. What I think is necessary for these last four games is that we need to hit on all cylinders. We need all seven guys to take their game to another level."

That level would appear to be 20 wins, a mark that would certainly guarantee ASU a spot in the NCAA's field of 64. To achieve that plateau, the Sun Devils could only lose one of their remaining regular-season games. After Stanford, ASU plays Cal at home and No. 18 UCLA and USC on the road.

However, Newman said he feels his team could still make the Big Dance without 20 victories.

"Everybody is talking about 20 wins," Newman said. "I certainly think 20 wins is a coach's goal, a team goal. But I think realistically, with the strength of the schedule we've played and the team's we (have left to) play, I think we're a bubble team right now. At 18 (wins), we'll be a serious consideration. I think 19 should lock this team in."

No. 8 Stanford, a healthier team than when it first played ASU, is battling for a No. 2 seed in the NCAAs.

Receiver Spann to play another year; football hires new coach

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Wide receiver Craig Spann has been granted an extension for intercollegiate eligibility, the NCAA and ASU announced Wednesday.

The 1998 season will mark the senior's third season as a Sun Devil. Spann played his freshman and sophomore seasons at Phoenix College.

The extension allows Spann to reclaim a medical hardship year for 1996. In the second game of that year, Spann tore his anterior cruciate ligament and was unable to play the remainder of the Rose Bowl season.

The 6-foot, 183 pounder caught 11 passes for 168 yards and one touchdown last season. For his career, Spann 14 receptions for 181 yards and one touchdown.

The South Mountain High School graduate couldn't be reached for comment.

ENGLISH TAKES OVER SECONDARY

Head football coach Bruce Snyder has named former Cal safety and ASU football graduate assistant Ron English to his coaching staff, ASU announced.

English replaces Donnie Henderson, who recently accepted a position coaching the secondary at Houston. English will coach the free and strong safeties.

"Ron is someone I am certainly familiar with, having recruited and coached him at Cal and tutoring him on my staff here at ASU," Snyder said. "He is widely known as one of the up and coming young coaches and recruiters within the college rank."

English coached the previous two seasons at San Diego State University.

He was the outside linebackers coach at NAU in 1995, a graduate assistant, working with the defensive line, under Snyder from 1994-95 and the defensive backs coach at Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut, Calif. in 1993.

The native of Pomona, Calif., was a two year starter at Cal, where he played from 1987-90. English earned a bachelor's degree in communications from Cal and master's degree in education administration from ASU.

Sun Devil diving hosts Pac-10 Championships

BY JASON JOSEPH
STATE PRESS

The ASU men's and women's diving teams will entertain the West Coast's best divers as they host the Pac-10 Diving Championships today through Saturday at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.

Junior All-American Katrina Pfeuffer, who will pace the women's team, said the Sun Devils are ready for action.

"My team and I are really prepared," Pfeuffer said. "We're definitely going to do our best."

ASU diving head coach Mark Bradshaw said the Sun Devils will look to improve on last year's second-place finish.

"We've been pointing to this event all year long," Bradshaw said. "We have geared our training in preparation for this meet."

Pfeuffer added solid practices should have the team well prepared.

"We've been focusing on quality as opposed to quantity," Pfeuffer said. "We have been training twice a day all-year round, so we are prepared to dive well."

Standing out for the Sun Devils last year was Pfeuffer who placed fourth in the 3-meter diving event.

"I feel a lot of pressure," Pfeuffer said. "I just hope that I can live up to the reputation that I've acquired."

Bradshaw said consistency is a big concern.

"We just have to be as consistent as possible," Bradshaw said. "If we keep our consistency, then we will be able to reach our goals."

Diving competition will begin at 9:30 a.m. each day.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

It is finally here.

The No. 23 ASU women's swimming team will attempt to overthrow reigning conference champion Stanford in the Pac-10 Championships today through Saturday at Belmont Shores Olympic Pool in Long Beach, Calif.

While the Cardinal have won an unprecedented 11 straight conference titles, the Sun Devils will look to improve on their sixth-place finish at last year's championship meet.

"Our biggest concern is staying together as a team," ASU head coach Tim Hill said. "Swimming is an individual sport but the girls realize that they feed off one another's confidence."

The Sun Devils go into this tournament with a 7-4 overall record finishing 1-3 in the Pac-10.

"Everybody has to swim well for us to do well or to even pull off some surprises," senior captain Erika Sohlen said. "I think everybody is ready. We have been looking forward to this for a long time."

ASU is coming off a tough loss to UofA two weeks ago losing 204.5-93.5 at the Mona Plummer Aquatic Center.

"The biggest thing is to maintain our confidence level," ASU assistant coach Asher Green said. "We certainly have the talent to do some great things. We just have to increase or maintain our high confidence."

Nine teams will participate in the meet some of whom include UofA, California, Oregon State, UCLA, USC, Washington and Washington State.

Preliminary races will begin at 11 a.m. each day while the finals of each race begin at 6 every evening.

Scott Samplin/State Press

Freshman Kevin Lilly and the rest of the ASU men's and women's diving team will host the Pac-10 Diving Championships this today through Saturday.

Don't be 'that guy'; go to the game

The Sun Devils men's basketball team's near-upset of defending national champion UofA two weeks ago is easily the most memorable moment of my six months at ASU.

SCOTT LEWIS
Sports Columnist

With a University Activity Center capacity crowd of 14,198 — ASU's first sellout in three years — the Sun Devils, like they've done all season, played above and beyond all expectations and had a chance to win the game with their final shot.

As I sat courtside at press row, I couldn't help but look around and smile like a stoner in a head shop as I watched the UAC rock with excitement.

So, with that said, how many of you are planning to attend Thursday night's game against eighth-ranked Stanford?

Probably not many, considering, in a school with almost 45,000 students, there are still over 6,000 unsold tickets. And what a disgrace that is, what a damn disgrace.

Stanford will be heading into Tempe looking to avenge a Jan. 31 loss at Maples Pavilion in Palo Alto, Calif. At the time, the Cardinal, currently second in the Pac-10 standings, were ranked fourth in the nation before the Sun Devils knocked them off their perch.

ASU, with an overall record of 17-10, 7-7 in the Pac-10, will likely need three wins in its last four games to qualify for a once-improbable NCAA Tournament berth.

Stanford is its toughest opponent remaining on the schedule.

How much more drama do you bandwagon-jumping fans need?

Off the bandwagon, on the bandwagon. Off the bandwagon, on the bandwagon the fair-weather fans go. All this is getting me dizzy and it's not just because the flu has raided my body.

When I wrote a column last month about all the Green Bay Packers' "fake fans," I received an e-mail asking, "What's wrong with fake fans?"

This is what's wrong with it. In the whole scheme of things, this is ASU basketball's biggest game of the year and still no fans. As a fellow sports weasel down here at the State Press says, don't be "that guy."

Besides, what else are you going to do at 7 p.m. on Thursday night? Go to Bojo's and slam a few brews? Head over to Gus' Pizza to eat the best slices this side of New York? Study? It can wait, man.

What a shame it would be if you missed Jeremy Veal, arguably ASU's greatest player and its all-time leading scorer, compete in his second-to-last home game.

And, as a good number of the players said following the UofA loss, this might be the second-to-last home game for several of the current Sun Devils if Don Newman isn't retained as coach at the conclusion of this season.

Be a true fan, go to the game.

And for all those fans who have been writing to the State Press and calling for Athletic Director Kevin White to hire Newman, this is a chance to show your support. Get the "Newman, Newman" chant going. Those guys in the student section with the white shirts who each game spell out a different ASU player's name on their shirts, should grab six guys and throw a Newman out there.

Come on fellow Sun Devils, don't be "that guy." Go to the game.

Cardinal

Coming into the previous meeting, the Cardinal was on a one-game losing streak. It has currently won its last four games.

The return of starting forward Mark Madsen has been one of the biggest reasons for the current winning streak.

The 6-foot-8, 235 pound sophomore was rusty, playing in his first game of season, the last time the teams meet. In the six total games he has played in, though, Madsen has been a solid contributor, averaging 10.2 points and 6.9 rebounds.

Newman said he is aware of the extra threat Stanford will bring this time.

"(Madsen) is back and he is a monster," Newman said. "I respect him as much as anybody in the Pac-10."

Despite the Cardinal's better play, point guard Ahlon Lewis said he expects nothing less than a sweep of Stanford. ASU hasn't done that since the 1993-94 season.

"They're going to be mad," Lewis said. "That's understandable. They feel like what we did to them was a fluke on their home floor. They are going to be on their A game. So it's a big week for us and it's a big challenge. We just have to respond, have fun and focus. If we can do that, we can beat them a second time."

Newman added, "It's going to be a war."

Freshman Grace Park (76-75) and senior Jeanne-Marie Busuttill (79-72) finished in a tie for 11th shooting a 11-over-

Rounding out the rest of the team were juniors Tui Selvaratnam (81-75—156), tied for 38th, and Keri Cornelius who finished 48th shooting rounds of 80 and 77 (157).

USC's Johanna Josefsson won the tournament with an even par 144 (74-70).

The Sun Devils are next in action on Mar. 9-11 as they compete in the San Jose State Spartan Classic at the Fort Ord Bayonet Golf Course in Monterey, Calif.

BASEBALL CANCELED

Even though the skies were clear and sunny Wednesday the Sun Devil baseball team was not able to play the Anaheim Angels due to poor field conditions at Tempe Diablo Stadium.

The game will not be made up.

This marks the fourth time this season that an ASU game has been canceled. The Sun Devils had to cancel games against Florida State, BYU and Grand Canyon due to the weather from El Niño.

Winning-year quest begins tonight

BY RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

In a season of dramatic turnaround, the ASU women's basketball team looks to achieve the last goal it has for itself — finish with a winning record.

The biggest obstacle for that goal takes the court tonight at the Maples Pavilion in Palo, Alto, Calif., as the Sun Devils will attempt to pull off the biggest upset in their history against the No. 5-ranked Stanford Cardinal at 8:30.

The deck would seem to be stacked against the Sun Devils (10-13, 6-8 Pac-10) against the Cardinal (17-5, 13-1).

ASU has not defeated Stanford since 1992, a span of 11 straight losses. Stanford is also currently on a 57-game win streak at Maples Pavilion and the Sun Devils have not won in Palo Alto since Ronald Reagan was in office (a 84-72 win in 1984). Stanford has not lost since Jan. 12 at UofA, going 11-0 since.

However, the Sun Devils relish the chance at turning some more heads this year.

"I love games like (this)," senior forward Stephanie Freeman said. "I think these are the games that make a season. Beating teams that we know we can beat makes us happy but we aren't going to be content with just beating those teams and having other teams just blow us out."

Blown out was exactly what the Sun Devils were when the two squads last met on Jan. 29. Stanford won 81-54.

ASU head coach Charli Turner Thorne said that won't happen this time.

"(Stanford's) going to be a tough game," she said. "We are really looking forward to that game. The biggest reason is that I thought we played scared the first time we played them. A little uncharacteristic of us at the point in the season when we played them."

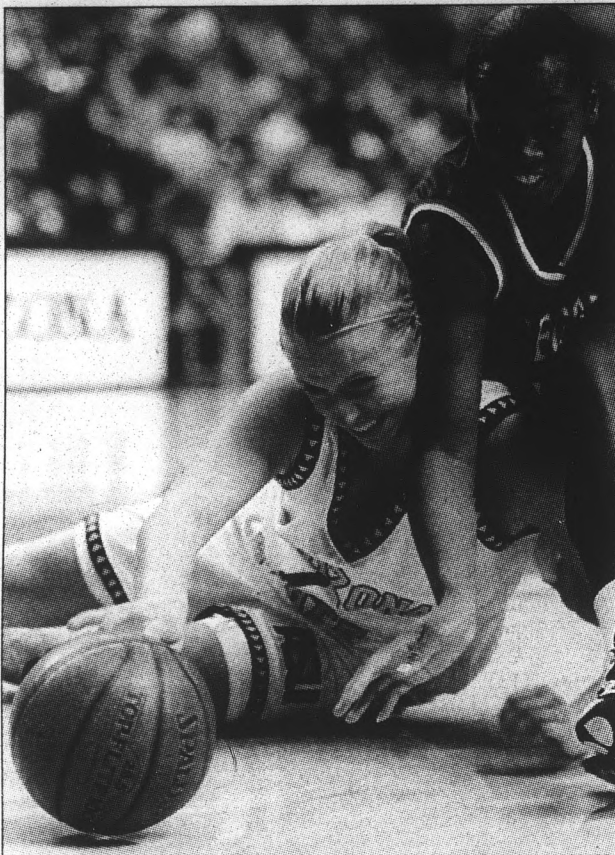

Turner Thorne said she is going to try and let her players know that Stanford is human too.

"We're really going to focus on two arms, two legs," she said. "They put their skirts or pants on the same way. One arm, one leg at a time. I really think we can play them tougher (this time). Even more than we did at home."

To do that the new-found strong post play must continue, Freeman said.

"We are going to have to work really hard at boxing out and shooting," said Freeman, who had just 9 points in the previous meeting with the Cardinal. "I think that the first time we played them we didn't do a good job of taking away the post game, the high low. And I think we are going to have to, to give them a run."

In the past two games, the post game of center Rachel Holt

Brad Lang/State Press

Forward Kristine Sand and the rest of the Sun Devil women's basketball team head to Stanford tonight to take on the No. 5-ranked Cardinal at Maples Pavilion.

and forwards Freeman and Kisha White have shot a blistering 63.2 percent (36 of 57) from the field.

Turner Thorne praised her post players for the vast improvement.

"The post game, I don't know if any of you have noticed, has gotten a lot better," she said. "Not just Kisha and Rachel, but Kristine (Sand) off the bench. I think they are playing a lot stronger, with a lot more confidence."

Post rebounding has improved also. After outrebounding only five opponents in the first 20 games, the Sun Devils outrebounded both UofA and Oregon State in the past three games.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by Frances Drake

Thursday, February 26, 1998

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't allow thoughts of the coming weekend to impede your progress at work. You still have much to do before the enchanted time arrives!
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your concentration peaks early and the afternoon hours are basically useless. However, since you've accomplished what you set out to do in the first place, all goes well.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your thoughts turn to someone from your past. However, it's not a wise idea to pick up the phone. This person has moved on and doesn't need any reminders.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Some begin a new diet. In general, it's a good time to turn your thoughts to your appearance. Some changes should be implemented.
LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) You go out of your way to make a new co-worker comfortable. This gesture is very much appreciated. Bigwigs look on in approval.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Change and a state of flux are in the stars for you. Some could be moving to a new home. Others seek a change of job.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Your mind is working overtime. Fortunately, those ideas are golden. You can translate them into moneymakers.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You're good at what you do. However, you need to believe that as much as others do. If you set your mind to it, you can do just about anything.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Someone is rubbing you the wrong way by not thinking before speaking. Simply ignore this. It's not worth getting so excited about.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) A work project meets more success if you make it a group effort. By sharing your skills, you and your co workers quickly get the job done. An evening social invitation isn't all it's made out to be.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Jealousy definitely doesn't become you. In fact, it's a basically alien feeling for you. Once you let it go, your relationship perks up.
PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20) You discover something very unusual while reading. Perhaps you should do more of this. Make the time to indulge your leisure activities.
YOU BORN TODAY are someone who prefers action. Unfortunately, this causes you to leap before you look. Once you learn how to quickly assess a situation, you are more successful. A military career is possible, with the accent on airplanes. Very athletic, you enjoy sports of any kind, but as a participant, not a fan.
