Lake Havasu apparently claims 1 life

BY CADONNA PEYTON
STATE PRESS

One of his teachers described Philip Longo as a "delightful and very thoughtful human being," who will be missed greatly by fellow classmates and loved ones.

The 18-year-old freshman business major apparently drowned after losing his balance and falling off a 20-foot pontoon boat at Lake Havasu Saturday evening, said Steve Johnson, a spokesman with the Mohave County Sheriff's Office.

"The best way to describe Phil as a student is delightful," said Trish Murphy, an English instructor who has been Longo's teacher since September. "He was very careful with all of his work and very thoughtful with his dealings with other students."

Murphy said Longo, who wanted to go into law enforcement, was very diligent and always trying to improve his work.

"Often we would leave class and he would say, 'Hey Trish, I've been thinking about my introduction and maybe I should add these details to make it better.'"

One thing classmate Becky Hoffman remembers about Longo is his dedication.

"He wasn't a slacker and he was a good writer," Hoffman said, remembering one particular paper he wrote about U.S. marshals.

Authorities continued to search for Longo's body Monday by using video cameras and sonar to map the area where they believe Longo went into the water, which is about 30 feet deep.

Johnson said he doesn't know exactly what happened but believes Longo fell from the boat and was sucked underneath near the London Bridge. Alcohol is suspected to have been a factor in the incident.

"Accidents happen every year," Johnson said, mentioning five boating fatalities which happened last year. "But this is the first spring break fatality like this since 1995."

Longo was enjoying his break with eight other students.

Cecilia Rodriguez, the spokeswoman for the National Commission for Democracy in Mexico, speaks to students Monday on Hayden Lawn. The speech was sponsored by the ASU chapter of the Chicano Student Movement of Aztlan.

Chicano culture focus of weeklong celebration

BY ALLY ASHER
STATE PRESS

People living in the margins of society, those minorities living in a white majority, are groups receiving too little attention and interest from global society, a Zapatista official said.

"A lot of people don't care about what's happening to the people at the margins of society. Unfortunately, that's who the Mexicanos and Chicanos have been for a long time," said Cecilia Rodriguez, spokeswoman for the National Commission for Democracy in Mexico, U.S.A., a U.S.-based advocacy group for the Zapatista National Liberation Army.

Rodriguez spoke to students and community members Monday on Hayden Lawn in celebration of La Semana Cultural, or Chicano Culture Week, to educate people about the conditions in Mexico and the struggle of the Zapatistas, a political movement composed mostly of rural, poor indigenous people.

"The Zapatistas' livelihood is being eliminated, much like the same way small farmers in the United States were eliminated," Rodriguez said. "The global market has decided Mexico should only export cheap labor and cheap resources. Their livelihood will be lost because of that."

"They tell us we have no choice but to fight because we will die anyway. We would rather stand up and fight then die. That is who the Zapatistas are. This is how they have lived and this is how they will die."

Chicano Culture Week, sponsored by the Chicano Student Movement of Aztlan or MEChA, a Chicano-based student organization, will celebrate Chicano culture throughout the week during various campus events and activities. This year's theme, "The Sixth Sun," is intended to signify a prophecy stating how Chicanos will rise again.

It's important for us (Chicanos) to continue to maintain and develop our cultural identity here on campus. Our events are trying to promote Chicano culture and our history, as well as our future.

—Rafael Reyes, member of MEChA

Rafael Reyes, a six-year member of MEChA, said Rodriguez was asked to speak because of her close ties to Mexico and the Zapatistas.

"She brings in a true version on what's going on with the Zapatistas," Reyes said. "A lot of information has been filtered by

Stiffer penalties added to drug, alcohol charges

BY MONICA J. AGUIRRE
STATE PRESS

Students arrested with misdemeanor or felony charges related to drugs or alcohol will soon face skyrocketing fines and more severe punishments.

Violators on campus can now be fined $400 to $2,500 due to stricter penalties.

"Anytime you are arrested on ASU's campus or by an ASU officer for an alcohol violation, you can expect to go to the justice court," said David Swain, lawyer for student-legal services.

In 1997, 306 students were arrested with alcohol violations on campus, according to ASU Department of Public Safety.

Within the last year, Judge John Ore, who presides over the Tempe Justice Court, has enforced these raised penalties.

Those with infractions used to be able to take an aver-sion class for a small fee and erase the charges from their court record. They no longer have this option.

On first alcohol offense there is a $400 fine. The second violation is an $800 fine. A third infraction incurs a fine along with a mandatory 24 hours in-jail, Swain said.

The penalties are much more than they used to be, he said. Five years ago, the fine was $75 and a diversion program would erase the first offense.

"Students are less apt to go and do that again because they'd rather follow the rules than violate the laws," said

DPS Officer Stewart Adams.

Substance and paraphernalia possession also have increased punishments.

In 1997, 124 ASU students were arrested on drug charges.

Any drug in possession other than a minute amount of marijuana is considered a felony and sent directly to the Arizona Supreme Court. Possession of paraphernalia or small amounts of marijuana is usually charged as a Class One misdemeanor.

Misdemeanors held in Justice Court can expect a $250 to $750 fine, 24 hours of community service and one year probation.

Criminals have one other option, which is to sign up at the Treatment Assessment Screening Center, a drug diversion program for Maricopa county. In this case, the charges may be erased.

Swain said many people choose this option because hav-

Reyes said Chicano Culture Week is a way to get people together to contemplate the future of Chicanos, an effort he described as an ongoing struggle.

"It's important for us (Chicanos) to continue to maintain and develop our cultural identity here on campus," Reyes said. "Our events are trying to promote Chicano culture and our history, as well as our future."

Reyes said MEChA is a support group for students who are still searching for identity. He also said the biggest issue facing the group is the major misrepresentation of Chicanos on campus.

"MEChA works to promote education throughout the country," Reyes said. "Being a support group and supporting our culture helps the retention here. It's an uphill battle."

Clinton's Africa trip begins with cumbersome crowd

By TERENCE HUNT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ACCRA, Ghana — Buoyed by the biggest crowd of his presidency, President Clinton hailed "the new face of Africa" and its growing peace, prosperity and democracy as he opened a historic six-nation tour on Monday.

While poverty and war still trouble parts of the continent, Clinton said Americans must shake off "the stereotypes that have warped our view and weakened our understanding of Africa."

Dictatorships have fallen in many countries, Clinton said, and half of the 48 nations of sub-Saharan Africa now have elected governments. Where business was once stifled, "now Africans are embracing economic reform," the president said on a mission to applaud political reforms and open the door for U.S.-African trade.

Clinton's message was almost lost to a few seconds of dramatic video that showed him being jostled by an enthusiastic crowd.

After waiting for hours in temperatures that hovered near 100 degrees, the massive crowd roared at the sight of Clinton in Independence Square, a sprawling parade ground alongside the Gulf of Guinea. After weeks of sex-scandal publicity back home, the White House happily passed along Ghanaian government estimates of more than 500,000 people, although that number seemed high.

Clinton's press secretary said the audience was "the largest he's seen as president, maybe one of the largest any American president has ever seen." Last July's visit to Bucharest, Romania, cheered by tens of thousands, had been the previous benchmark.

But the huge turnout and intense heat brought problems. Crowds surged toward Clinton to shake his hand, endangering people pressed against metal barriers. An obviously alarmed Clinton waved crowds to stop, and he shouted, "Back up! Back up!" Spokesman Mike McCurry said Clinton was worried about the people in front being injured.

Fights broke out in the crowd over scarce bottles of water. Police and military security whipped people with belts and canes to keep order. Thousands of people drifted away from the square as the ceremony droned on.

Accra, once an Atlantic port for slave traders, was the gateway for Clinton's 12-day, 21,000-mile journey to Ghana, Uganda, Rwanda, South Africa, Botswana and Senegal. Over the course of the trip, he will spend about 42 hours on Air Force One.

The United States sees Africa as a huge potential market, with per capita income rising in 31 countries. The population of Sub-Saharan Africa is projected to double to 1.5 billion in 27 years.

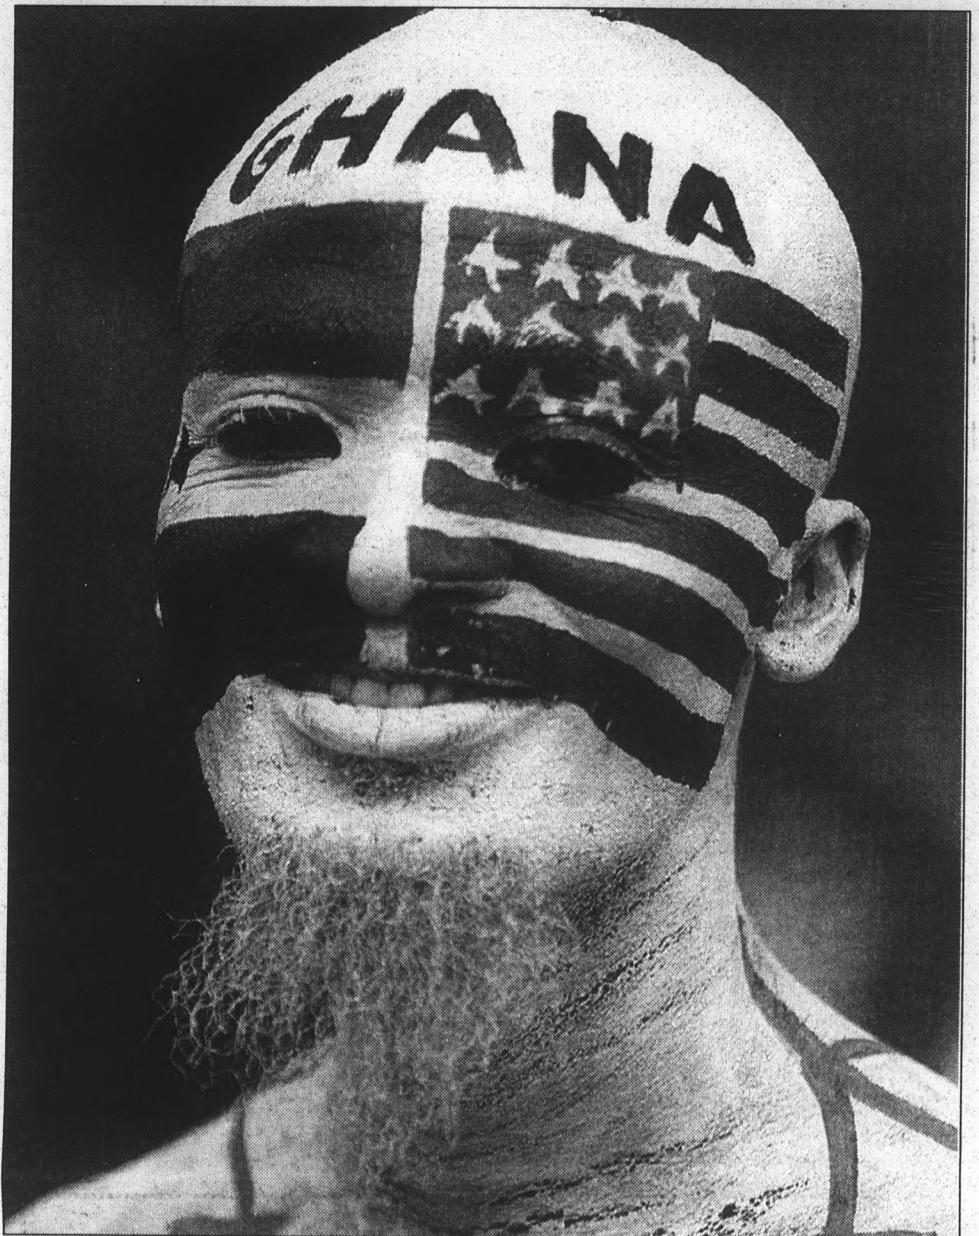

Clinton's journey is the longest foreign trip of his presidency and the first time an American president has visited any of the six countries on his trip map.

"It is a journey long overdue," the president said.

"I want to build a future partnership between our two people and I want to introduce the people of the United States through my trip to the new face of Africa."

Ghana is considered one of Africa's success stories, with a 3 percent economic growth rate. Yet, a severe drought has caused an energy crisis resulting in regular power outages of 12 hours a day.

After a daylong stay, Clinton flew to Uganda, arriving after 1 a.m. local time in a light drizzle. But first the president visited with Peace Corps volunteers, noting that Ghana was the first country where Peace Corps worked.

Yeltsin fires entire Russian government

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin picked a little-known reformer as acting prime minister Monday after firing his entire Cabinet without warning. He promised that Russia's biggest government shakeup since the Soviet Union dissolved would not derail democratic and free-market reforms.

Yeltsin shocked many Russians when he dismissed the Cabinet, including his stolid and loyal prime minister, Viktor Chernomyrdin. Few had ever heard of the man named as Chernomyrdin's acting replacement, Sergei Kirienko.

Despite the shakeup, leaders from Yeltsin on down insisted Russia was not teetering on the verge of a political crisis.

"There is no governmental crisis in the country," Chernomyrdin said after losing the job he had held since 1992. "This is a natural and routine process of renewing power. One thing is clear: The course of reforms in Russia is irreversible."

Most Cabinet members were ordered to stay on temporarily and many, including Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov, were expected to keep their posts.

In Washington, State Department spokesman James Foley said Secretary of State Madeleine Albright will discuss implications of the changes with Primakov during a previously arranged meeting Tuesday in Bonn, Germany.

President Clinton, traveling in Africa, said Yeltsin's action is not likely to harm the partnership he has been trying to build with Moscow.

One symbol of U.S.-Russian cooperation has been Vice President Al Gore's frequent meetings with Chernomyrdin. Their last meeting, just 10 days ago, produced a flurry of accords and good will.

Yeltsin said he needed a fresh government to re-energize economic reforms, which he said were moving too slowly, jeopardizing the future of democracy in Russia.

"I believe that recently the government has been lacking dynamism and initiative, new outlooks, fresh approaches and ideas. And without this, a powerful breakthrough in the economy is impossible," he said, speaking slowly and calmly in a nationwide television broadcast.

The Russian economy actually has begun to show signs of growth after years of decline. But as Yeltsin acknowledged, it has been too little, too late for many people.

The Moscow Stock Exchange plunged on news of the dismissals but steadied after Yeltsin's television address.

Yeltsin fired his prime minister and the entire government Monday, a bombshell announcement that followed weeks of bitter infighting in the Kremlin. The Kremlin gave no explanation for the sudden dismissals. The government's top economic reformers had been locked in a power struggle with some of Russia's top business tycoons over control of the economy.

Study: Time limits did little to remove people from welfare

By LAURA MECKLER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — In the nation's first evaluation of time limits for people on welfare, researchers found that a looming deadline did little to encourage recipients to move off the rolls more quickly on their own.

The study of a program in Pensacola, Fla., also found that by the time they were kicked off welfare, only about half of welfare recipients had found a job.

For most of the nation's history, cash assistance was available as long as needed to anyone poor enough to qualify. But in 1996, Pensacola became the first place to remove people from the rolls because they had hit a time limit.

Today, welfare recipients across the country face a five-year time limit imposed by the 1996 federal welfare overhaul law. Many states impose shorter limits. Florida allows two years for most welfare recipients.

The Florida report, released Monday by Manpower Demonstration Research Corp., offered a look into the future but did not measure conclusively how people forced from the rolls are faring.

Florida officials and other supporters of time limits noted that the study found no horror stories. But the limits also didn't produce the positive effect of getting people to move off the rolls voluntarily.

The program began in 1994 in Pensacola, near the Alabama border. The first participants reached their time limit in 1996.

In fact, only 11 percent of the Pensacola families actually hit the limit after two years because, like families nationwide, they came on and off the welfare rolls as their circumstances changed.

Time limits might have a greater effect on future recipients, who will see that officials are serious about enforcing them, researchers said.

And they noted that caseworkers did not pressure recipients to leave welfare earlier, suggesting that they use their time to get education and training rather than bank it for the future.

South Park prevails despite critical disgust

It seems the wholesome, fun-for-the-whole-family TV show South Park is stirring up controversy.

The show about "four lovable scamps" — Cartman, Kyle, Stan and Kenny — and their struggles growing up in a backwards mountain town in Colorado, is causing more problems among the older generations who find its brand of humor crude and offensive.

Crude and offensive? What's crude and offensive about Kyle's creation of an imaginary friend, Mr. Hankey? Mr. Hankey helps him deal with his feelings of inadequacy and loneliness resulting from his Jewish heritage, which prevents him from celebrating Christmas like the other kids.

Just because Mr. Hankey came from the toilet...

OK, so we see the point of those naysayers who deem the show inappropriate for children and consider it a counteractive force to their attempts at a moral upbringing.

However, we ask contemptuously, if these parents are such bastions of proper child-rearing and moral influence, why are their children watching TV at 11 p.m., when the show airs? Or worse, at 2 a.m., when the reruns are on?

The show is obviously intended for mature audiences, although we use the word "mature" loosely. There is a big warning at the beginning of the show, it's in a late time slot and it's the only animated series labeled with the MA rating, indicating adult subject matter.

What else do the critics want?

Included in this anti-South Park campaign were parents and school officials in a small town in Virginia. According to MSNBC, elementary-school children were coming to school Thursday mornings (the show airs Wednesday nights, for those still in enthralled by Beavis and Butt-head) spouting off language and catch-phrases associated with the show. School officials were so distraught, they banned all references and paraphernalia related to the caustic cartoon, and went on MSNBC to encourage the show's demise. (To be fair, the school district bans any t-shirts or merchandise from any TV show. Even Barney.)

Thankfully, Comedy Central spokespeople defended the show, citing the aforementioned reasons why the show is deemed for adults, and obviously warned against child viewing.

The executives aren't stupid — taking the show off the air isn't a consideration.

Since the show's inception last fall, thanks to word of mouth and the multitude of South Park websites dedicated to the scatological foursome, the show's popularity is at an all-time high.

Want proof? Just consider the credit-card hounds on campus a few weeks ago, trading impeding student debt for a knock-off, unlicensed Kyle T-shirt. Walking by the table, people would call out, "Look, South Park!" and sign their names on the dotted line, setting themselves up for a heaping helping of interest rates. How's that for devotion?

Like it or not, South Park is here to stay, for at least 14 more minutes. Those of us with the warped sense of humor who appreciate this sadistic, wacky series are forever indebted to Trey Parker and Matt Stone for their creation.

And for those who don't, we'll roe shambo you for the remote control.

Safety worth shelling out the dough

Recently, I was put in a situation where I had to question whether or not I felt ASU has a safe campus.

Yes, we all feel that ASU is unsafe at certain periods of time. For instance, after a rape or some other assault crime is committed, we all feel unsafe, and there is a heightened sense of security on campus. We've all felt and witnessed that — take last semester, for example.

The event that made me question the "safety" of this campus happened when a coworker of mine had her car stolen from her at gunpoint. Now, I know a lot of people may think that she was not thinking by parking in a dark, unsecured area. Well, that's not true. She was parking her car in the ASU parking lot behind Bank One on Rural. Is this place safe? Well, as safe as anywhere else on campus.

As terrible as this crime was, I think it addresses an even bigger problem that we have on this campus. That is the approach our beloved ASU DPS takes after incidents like this.

Let us look at the rapes that happened here last semester. After the news hit the campus, people were frightened and scared to go out at night. To cope with this, there were extended hours for Safety Escort Service, added safety seminars by DPS and beefed-up security in the residence halls.

After the two suspects were arrested, they were paraded in front of the news camera and the DPS spokesman announced that the department had caught their man and ASU is once again safe. This was true, and I think that if you would have asked the average student if they felt safe on campus at that time, they would have said yes.

But what has happened since then? Have they made the campus any safer? I would argue no.

This campus is the same now as it was during the time of these two rapes and the time afterwards, the only difference is that there is no outcry for heightened safety levels on campus. I think there should be.

There need to be more DPS officers on this campus, more security on campus, more DPS call boxes throughout this campus and, especially, a more proactive view toward making this campus safe — not just a lot of time and effort to go into things once there is an assault.

Yet, anytime you bring the issue of more security on campus, the powers that be counter the argument with the, "That costs money we don't have," argument. I am not going to let this be an excuse anymore, and you should not either. If it is important to the students — and I think our safety is — then you FIND THE MONEY! Find some way to pay for more Campus Police, or safety phones or whatever you need to have a more proactive approach to campus safety.

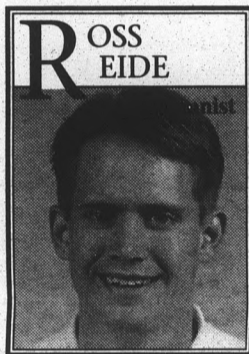

Is this asking too much? Not at all. Will this happen? No, not as long as it is one person's opinion about campus safety.

That is why I need your help — and by "your," I mean every student on this campus. To demand more out of our DPS officers, and even more importantly, demand more out of our campus leadership and campus administrators to make safety a priority and not just political catch phrase to make people feel safe.

If the power of change lies within us, then we must use it to change this campus and make it be known that we want to learn in a better, safer environment. If we all demand this then this will happen.

Ross Eide is a senior studying marketing and can be reached at eide@asu.edu via e-mail.

There need to be more DPS officers on this campus, more security on campus, more DPS call boxes throughout this campus and, especially, a more proactive view toward making this campus safe.

Continued learning

In a letter to the editor on March 11, Jim Buckley said, "Any student that is actually here to learn knows that the learning process does not stop when the test is turned in, but also includes finding out what was answered incorrectly so that mistakes can be learned from." Hear! Hear!

However, most courses are not complete until the final exam. Then they are finished. Aye, there's the rub. The last exam seems to be the end of (and not necessarily a means to) learning. Some professors seem to wash their hands (from their students) with terminal velocity once the final exam is given.

Happily, a distinguished professor I had in my previous life had us take the final exam during the last class period and then come during the scheduled final exam time to go over the test, check the grades and fill out the course/instructor evaluation form. Too bad they don't make them like him anymore.

ASU officials should require that at least answer sheets be made available at the end of final exams. Unless, of course, they'd prefer that you "have patience with everything that remains unsolved in your heart. Try to love the questions themselves" (Rainer Maria Rilke).

The scholarly Mark Twain once said that he never let his schooling interfere with his education. He would be one of those rare students who, after the end of the semester, would try to contact his ex-professors to review his final exams and continue his education. The rest of us, however, could use better schooling.

End justifies means

While reading Anita Hill's remarks printed in the March 23, 1998 State Press edition, page 3, concerning sexual harassment by President Clinton, I could not believe that such an educated attorney could be so purposely and deliberately blind to objective moral truth.

Anita Hill (and Gloria Steinem) is willfully and deliberately taking a blind eye (and she even admits it) at the sexual misconduct of President Bill Clinton, by saying it is OK for Clinton to sexually harass women only because he stands up for women's rights.

But if one does not stand up for women's rights, then that person cannot sexually harass women? What is this? Would Anita Hill (and Gloria Steinem) say the same thing if Republican Robert Dole committed same offenses had he been elected president? Definitely she would not ... because Dole is a Republican and he does not seem to stand up for women's rights. Therefore, in her eyes, it would be wrong.

I cannot understand how feminists can tolerate sexual harassment from Democrats who seem to stand up for women's rights, but not tolerate it from Republicans who do not seem to make a big issue of women's rights.

The feminist movement has sold its soul over to the Democratic party ... right or wrong! Yes, this only goes to show that the feminist agenda in politics has fallen to that same age-old vice as quoted in Arthur Koestler's book, Darkness at Noon: "That the end justifies the means," is and remains the only rule of political ethics.

Anita Hill (and Gloria Steinem) says the same thing as Koestler when Hill says, "We live in a political world, and the reality is that there are larger issues (ends) other than just (Clinton's) individual behavior (means)."

Pretty signs can't replace hard work

Let's hear it for the candidates!

The ASASU candidates have created a colorful display of cardboard and wood placards intended to persuade us to vote for them. To compliment this annual ritual, we will "nickname" the candidates so that we can more easily identify the person with the symbolism.

We start with the Office of Campus Affairs Vice President. This race features two very different approaches to promotion. The first, by Seth Kriz, features fluorescent green signs with his name, in small print, smack in the middle. Not terribly creative. I've spoken with Seth and find him to be a likable guy. Since this office is mostly administrative, I won't give him a good nickname until he creates some better signage. For now, he's "Kriz Krinkle."

Trust me, they get better.

Eddie Ableser, the other candidate for Campus Affairs Vice President, has neat signs. You can recognize them easily by the Swingers graphic with the red star. We're going to call him the "Heineken Red Star Guy." It may hurt his campaign to be associated with a particular brand of beer, but at least he's not the "Bitter Beer Face Guy."

The Activities Vice President coordinates Homecoming, Mardi Gras, Earth Day and many other programs that make ASU livable and fun. It's Stone vs. Reinesch. Now, I'm not very fluent in German, so we'll be giving Reinesch a nickname based on the "pop culture" origin of his name and the office he's running for. Before we do that, I'm going to have to apologize to all the Germans at ASU, all the sensitive people who think ethnicity should stay out of politics, and Reinesch himself, for not checking with him to see if his name is really German or not. How does "Colonel Klink" sound? Reinesch is not a Nazi. He's probably never been in the military, and I'm sure he does not wear a monocle. But as with the TV character, and the fact that the office's main role is to promote the "fun" stuff at ASU, the nickname is meant in jest. Get over it.

Stone. What the heck are we going to do with that one? She's running for Activities Vice President too. "Stoner" is just too obvious. I think she's more of a "Stone Soup." I've met with her, and I think she'd be good at pooling lots of different resources to create something good (remember the story?). This is not an endorsement. Those well-reasoned arguments will surface later, after I've had a chance to meet with all the candidates. This is just a nickname that fits her campaign image. "Stone Soup." I like it.

Since the Graduate Student Affairs Vice President's race is pretty boring, and there is only one candidate for Executive Vice President, I'm not going to waste any time or space on them.

On to the presidency.

I see it as a clear-cut race between "Spider-man" (Seth Deitchman) and "Salsa-Man" (Damon Pace). You all should know who they are, since they're the two who will end up in the run-off, so I'll give the rest of the field a little exposure. I'm feeling very generous today.

Leach. An unfortunate name with unfortunate connotations. Although Brock does have a cool first name, I think he got way too campy with the whole "Brock the Vote" thing. It's almost as if he was "leeching" ideas from somewhere. (Forgive the pun, I just had to do it.) Let's just call him "The Leach."

Frost. Paul is a nice guy, and I like the whole "Frosty," "Frostbitten" blah blah. Let's call him "Mr. Freezemiser" (you remember the song from that Rudolph knockoff, right?)

Lujan. His signs scare me. It's like being in Central America in the early 80s. The lone black shadow on that deep red background reminds me of leftist intervention through Cuba and Nicaragua. We'll call him "The Sandanista," since his signs remind us of Marxist interventionism.

Ried. Blah. The only distinguishing factor on his signs is that he compares himself with Ghandi and Howard Stern in the same message. Since this was probably the idea of his campaign manager (you remember her, she thinks Ben & Jerry are communists), I'm not too surprised. I think Craig could talk a good talk, and could probably walk the good walk. But until he proves me right, we're going to have to give him the pseudonym "Big Wind." I'll let you figure out what kind of wind.

If I did not see your sign on Monday, you did not get mentioned. No apology necessary.

Childish, unnecessary, personal, offensive and all the rest. This column is all that and more. I'd like to point out to all the candidates that spring, the season of new life, is a great time to be walking around this world-class arboretum we call ASU Main Campus.

Seriously, the outgoing senate could do this campus an aesthetic favor and ban any future campaign signs on this campus. If the candidates for Associated Students offices want their constituents to know who they are, they should perform during the year, instead of focusing their energy on these silly signs right before elections.

ASU spends tons of money to keep our campus clean and beautiful during the rest of the year, and our future student leaders are doing everything they can to detract from its beauty. What a shame. Tuition issue remains undetermined

By KAREN YAMADA
STATE PRESS

By this time of year, the state Legislature has usually put to bed the issue of university funding, leaving a clearer understanding of shortfall amounts requiring financing from other sources.

But this year's tuition setters are working without a final figure, largely due to legislative bickering on K-12 financing, which is putting an additional crimp in the process.

"Since the state Legislature is still playing with the budget we don't, right now, have a position on tuition," said Christine Thompson, executive director of the Arizona Students' Association. "Everything is up in the air."

Without a finalized state appropriation in sight, student groups, like ASA, can only identify a relative position on tuition, based on recommendations made in the past.

Thompson said ASA is likely to recommend a tuition increase range of zero to 4 percent.

ABOR and the university presidents have identified funding priorities as a way to talk about tuition, so students, their families and legislators can understand how the money will be spent.

"The board has gone to a new process about talking about tuition," said Allan Price, vice president of Institutional Advancement at ASU.

"We reached an agreement between the students, regents and universities that we would identify a priority list of issues and funding items, including budget items, beyond those in the state appropriation request."

ASU Main has identified funding priorities, totaling $40.2 million, requiring funding through the state, tuition and reallocation sources, according to an ABOR report.

"If it comes to a point where we don't know the budget at the time the regents set the tuition, the student body presidents will probably hold the university presidents' feet to the fire to tell us their plans so that we can formulate a recommendation," Thompson said.

POLICE REPORT

The ASU police reported the following incidents Monday:

- A man not associated with ASU was arrested, cited and released for possession of drug paraphernalia at 832 S. Maple St.
- An employee reported that he lost six keys belonging to ASU.

The Tempe police reported the following incident Monday:

- A man was pursued on foot by an officer at 740 W. University Drive. During the pursuit, the man turned around and pointed a handgun at the officer and shot three times, but the gun did not discharge. The man then fled and was caught with the help of a canine search. The man was taken into custody and arrested on charges of attempted murder. The same suspect who fired shots at officers last year in Guadalupe.

- A man was arrested at 1010 S. Smith Road after he was found sitting in a car with a friend smoking marijuana. He was smoking a "roach" that he said he found on the ground, but he was sitting on seeds and plant stems believed to be weed. He said he had finished smoking the "roach" and was waiting for a friend. The man was transported and booked at Tempe city jail.

- A Mobil store clerk saw a man sleeping on the sidewalk close to the convenience store. He attempted to wake the man up for about five minutes, but the man continued to ignore the requests by turning his head and falling back asleep. An officer came to the scene and asked the man to move for three minutes. The subject was arrested and transported to jail.

- A 32-year-old man was arrested for assault at 6811 S. Tentilly Lane, after he pushed his live-in pregnant girlfriend three times, leaving red marks on her side and arms. She also had a large softball-sized bruise in the center of her upper back. He was transported and booked at Tempe city jail.

- Today's photo radar locations:
- Elliot Road, between Mill Avenue and Hardy Drive
 - Rural Road, between University Drive and Rio Salado Parkway
 - McClintock Drive, between Broadway Road and Southern Avenue
 - Baseline Road, between McClintock Drive and Price Road

Nichols sentencing hearing slated for this week

DENVER (AP) — Three months after Terry Nichols was convicted in the Oklahoma City bombing, he returns to court this week for a hearing to decide what guidelines a federal judge will use in determining his sentence.

Prosecutors contend Nichols should receive life in prison without parole plus 48 years, the maximum sentence allowed under the guidelines. Nichols' attorneys argue that he deserves a new trial or, if that is rejected, a much shorter prison term.

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch is scheduled to hear arguments on the sentencing proposals Wednesday.

Nichols, 42, was convicted Dec. 23 of conspiracy and eight counts of involuntary manslaughter in the April 19, 1995, bombing. He was acquitted of murder and weapons-related charges.

The jury deadlocked on whether death was the appropriate penalty, which leaves Nichols' sentence to Matsch.

In briefs filed in U.S. District Court, defense attorneys have maintained the jury rejected the prosecution theory that Nichols worked "side by side with Timothy McVeigh" to plan and carry out the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, which killed 168 people and injured hundreds more.

McVeigh is appealing his conviction on murder, weapons-related counts and conspiracy and death sentence.

The defense also argues that Nichols is entitled to a new trial because the government withheld a large number of previously undisclosed witness statements, known as lead sheets, which might have changed the trial's outcome.

Prosecutors say the defense didn't need the witness statements because they only pointed speculatively to possible other suspects. They are the type of early leads the U.S. Supreme Court has said do not need to be turned over, the government attorneys said.

If the new trial motion is rejected, Nichols' attorneys plan to ask for a sentence of 46 months to 57 months on the conspiracy conviction and up to 18 months on the manslaughter convictions.

Meanwhile, in Oklahoma City, U.S. District Judge G. Thomas VanBebber of Kansas City, Kan., issued a schedule of hearings leading up to the May 27 sentencing for Michael Fortier of Kingman, Ariz.

Fortier was a key government witness in the trials of McVeigh and Nichols.

Missionaries freed; families, church relieved

BY KRISTEN MOULTON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY — Families of two missionaries abducted in Russia were joined by Mormon church and political leaders alike in celebrating the pair's release.

Meanwhile, authorities in southern Russia today arrested the two suspects in the kidnapping.

Both suspects confessed to taking part in the abduction, said a spokesman for the Russian Federal Security Service, who spoke on customary condition of anonymity. He said the suspects are residents of Saratov, the southern city where the missionaries were abducted.

Church officials said Mormon elders Travis Robert Tuttle, 20, of Gilbert and Andrew Lee Propst, 20, of Lebanon, Ore., were "tired, happy and grateful to be free," Sunday after four days as hostages in a Saratov, about 450 miles southeast of Moscow.

Roy Tuttle, Travis' father, told reporters his son was "happy. He is safe. He has been comforted.

"He was absolutely ecstatic to be in safe hands," the elder Tuttle said. "He was in good spirits. He was thrilled beyond comprehension to know that he was alive."

Church and government officials said that a $300,000 ransom originally demanded by the kidnappers after the abduction last Wednesday was not paid.

Instead, Tuttle and Propst were dropped off by their captors on a country road outside of Saratov early Sunday afternoon. The two, roughed up but not seriously injured, hitched a ride to town and called church leaders.

"We are all rejoicing that the missionaries are safe," The First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints said in a statement from its Salt Lake City headquarters.

Sen. Bob Bennett, R-Utah, said James Collins, U.S. ambassador to Russia, told him that the kidnappers were young, and the early indications were that they simply wanted money. The speculation was that the involvement of the U.S. State Department, Federal Bureau of Investigation and Federal Security Forces in Russia frightened the kidnappers into giving up the hostages, Bennett said.

"They may have just got scared and said 'Gee, we stirred up a much bigger hornet's nest than we thought.'"

Collins told Bennett it's too early to know whether the kidnapping was part of any larger plot to abduct foreigners, either because of religious hostility or for money.

The two missionaries spent several hours at police headquarters in Saratov, giving information to investigators, said Richard Hoagland, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

"If you looked up in a dictionary 'tears of joy,' you'd find my picture," said Lee Propst, father of Andrew.

He said that the kidnappers ambushed the two missionaries as they arrived at a private Saratov home for a meeting Wednesday evening.

"As they went in the door, they were hit on the head with a gun or something. Both of them have a bump on the head," Propst said. His boy also injured a finger while trying to ward off the blows.

Propst said the young men had sore hands from the handcuffs their captors used, but otherwise were not abused. "They're walking, talking and eating."

In a short conversation with his parents, the missionary on Sunday said he could not give details because of the continuing investigation. He also did not indicate whether he will be coming home or stay for the duration of his mission.

His father said a church official didn't mince words when he called with the news at 2:30 a.m. PST Sunday. "They're free!" Propst was told.

His wife, Mary, began screaming "He's free! He's free!" and the household — including the missionary's four older sisters who had returned home during the ordeal — was soon out of bed. "Everybody was jumping and yelling and screaming."

"If you looked up in a dictionary 'tears of joy,' you'd find my picture."

— Lee Propst, father of one of the kidnapped missionaries.

There was similar jubilation at the Gilbert home of Roy and Donna Tuttle.

"It's great news," said Roy Tuttle. "Our hearts are so full of gratitude and joy right now."

Propst and Tuttle said the families had been buoyed throughout the ordeal by the flowers, food, cards and e-mail from well-wishers throughout the country.

The prayers, Propst said, particularly helped. "There's no doubt in my mind that's what did it," he said.

"The prayers of millions of people, including myself, have been answered," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah. He expressed gratitude to the leaders of Russia, Collins, the State Department, FBI and other law enforcers from both countries.

There had been speculation earlier that the kidnapping was part of an effort to drive Mormons out of the area.

Bennett said Collins believed it was too early to tell, but that his initial reaction was that there was no religious agenda.

"If this turns out to be completely free-lance, then the pressure on the church might disappear. But on other hand, if it turns out there was a connection, then some people might ask Mormons to leave," Bennett said Sunday night.

The Mormon church has 57,000 missionaries, most of them young men and women, deployed around the globe, about 500 of them in Russia.

"They may have just got scared and said 'Gee, we stirred up a much bigger hornet's nest than we thought.'"

— Sen. Bob Bennett, R-Utah.

PEOPLE

LONDON (AP) — Britons gave a lackluster welcome Monday to tubs of margarine bearing the official logo of the Princess Diana memorial fund.

The special tubs of Flora margarine are selling for the same price as the ordinary ones but replace the brand name with the word "thanks" and include Diana's looping signature in purple script.

The margarine, available for a limited time, marks the first time the fund has endorsed a consumer product. Trustees hope the campaign will raise $400,000 for Diana's favorite causes.

There were plenty who disapproved of the royal tie-in.

"I think it is awful and tacky," said Mary Ashworth, a 50-year-old homemaker. "I am a big royal fan, and I don't think this is the right way to remember Princess Diana. I certainly won't be buying it."

Meanwhile, the Royal Automobile Club denied news reports that it was planning to use Diana's death in an Aug. 31 car crash in a campaign to promote seat-belt use. She wasn't wearing a seat belt.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Richard Gere met Monday with six Tibetans on a hunger strike to demand a U.N. investigation of human-rights violations in their country.

"The six human beings represent six million Tibetans," the actor told reporters. "They have pledged to die and I sincerely believe that they are going to die."

Gere, who has been advocating the cause of Tibetans for 15 years, criticized China's human-rights record and said Beijing needs to be pushed on the issue.

China invaded Tibet in 1949. Ten years later, the Dalai Lama and thousands of followers fled and established a government in exile in the northern Indian city of Dharamsala, after the Chinese crushed a Tibetan uprising.

The protesters, including a 70-year-old Tibetan, began their hunger strike on March 10, the 39th anniversary of Tibetan National Uprising Day.

TUCSON (AP) — Israel must make concessions to reach peace in the Middle East, says the widow of Yitzhak Rabin.

"It's like a train stuck in the middle of the tracks ... and we ask ourselves why it is not moving," Leah Rabin said Sunday night.

Since her husband's assassination in 1995, Israelis and Palestinians have made no progress in resolving the occupation of several disputed territories Israel captured in 1967, including the West Bank, she said.

"The land was not meant for Israel to own," Rabin said, "and we must give part of the land as a compromise."

She was in Tucson to help celebrate the 50th anniversary of Israel and to accept an award from two Jewish groups.

ABC names Kevin Newman as new 'Good Morning America' co-anchor

By DAVID BAUDER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Newscaster Kevin Newman will replace Charles Gibson as co-anchor of Good Morning America, a show that has struggled in the ratings for years.

The program's executive producer was also relieved in the shakeup, ABC announced Monday.

Gibson, who held the job for 11 years, has made it known for months that he wanted to move on. He plans to stay at ABC News and will probably host a new prime-time newsmagazine expected to begin next fall.

Newman will take over on May 4 as co-anchor with Lisa McRee.

"It's an enormous privilege and it's the kind of broadcasting I like — it's personal, it connects with the audience and it kind of ties together all of the things I've done previous to this," Newman said.

ABC essentially held open auditions for Gibson's job, trying out former Fox After Breakfast host Tom Bergeron and ESPN's Dan Patrick.

But Newman, who has read the news on of Good Morning America since the summer, impressed ABC brass with his cool performance anchoring the network's coverage the night Princess Diana died.

Newman was called in from his suburban New Jersey home that night to handle the anchor desk when the story broke.

Newman, 38, who is married with two children, was a political correspondent and anchor of a daily news and interview show for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. before joining ABC News in 1994.

The network hopes his appointment will provide a boost to of Good Morning America, which has trailed NBC's Today in the ratings for the past few years. The gap grew larger after McRee replaced longtime host Joan Lunden in September.

Willey refuses second interview

NEW YORK (AP) — Kathleen Willey turned down CBS's invitation to come back on 60 Minutes this week to talk about the friendly letters she sent to President Clinton after the incident where she accused him of making an unwanted sexual advance.

60 Minutes on Sunday added a short postscript to last week's Willey interview to mention the letters and Willey's efforts to sell her story to a book publisher.

CBS and correspondent Ed Bradley were criticized for not being tough enough on Willey during the March 15 interview, particularly in light of later revelations about her correspondence with Clinton.

Although she didn't want to be interviewed on the air, Willey was asked about the letters in an off-air conversation, Bradley said. She explained that she believed Clinton represented her best chance of getting a job, and she didn't want to lose that contact.

The newsman also explained on Sunday that Willey's lawyer had assured CBS before the interview that there was no deal to sell her story.

California's high court says Scouts can ban gays, atheists

By BOB EGELKO
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — The Boy Scouts are not covered by California civil rights laws and can exclude gays, agnostics and atheists, the state Supreme Court ruled today.

In a pair of unanimous decisions, the court said the Scouts are not a business and therefore are free, like any private club, to set their own membership policies.

One ruling upheld a decision by a Contra Costa County Scout organization in 1981 to reject Timothy Curran, an 18-year-old former Eagle Scout, as an assistant scoutmaster after he disclosed in an interview that he was gay.

The other ruling involved 9-year-old twin brothers, Michael and William Randall, who were barred by an Orange County Cub Scout den in 1990 after they refused to declare a belief in God.

The twins were allowed into the Scouts by lower-court rulings and recently qualified to become Eagle Scouts, Scouting's highest honor, subject to approval by the national organization. They and their father, James G. Randall, who is also their lawyer, say the boys are agnostics who haven't yet worked out their religious beliefs.

Both suits were brought under California's Unruh Civil Rights Act, which forbids discrimination by business establishments on various grounds, including sexual orientation and religion.

The justices said today that the Boy Scouts are a private, selective organization, not a business.

"Scouts meet regularly in small groups (often in private homes) that are intended to foster close friendship, trust and loyalty," said the lead opinion by Chief Justice Ronald George.

"The Boy Scouts is an expressive social organization whose primary function is the inculcation of values in its youth members."

Although the Scouts sell goods to members of the public, George said, "nonmembers cannot purchase entry to pack or troop meetings, overnight hikes, the national jamboree or any portion of the Boy Scouts' extended training and educational process."

Greg Shields, spokesman for the Boy Scouts of America, said the organization was pleased the court recognized it as a "voluntary association," not a business.

"For 88 years, we've taught the moral values of the Scout oath and law to American boys," he said. "Those who meet the standards of this membership organization are welcome to belong."

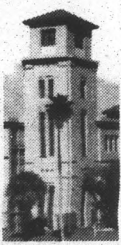

The ruling contrasts with a decision March 2 by an appellate court in New Jersey that said the Boy Scouts and their local councils were "places of accommodation" with open membership and were covered by the state's civil rights law. That ruling, in favor of a gay scoutmaster, was the first by any appellate court in the nation against the Scouts' anti-gay policy.

The Boy Scouts say homosexuality violates their concept of traditional moral values, embodied in a provision of the Scout oath in which members pledge to be "morally straight."

"For 88 years, we've taught the moral values of the Scout oath and law to American boys. Those who meet the standards of this membership organization are welcome to belong."

— Greg Shields, spokesman for the Boy Scouts of America.

Students in our new School of Law will be surrounded by commitment, dedication and 137 years of university tradition.

In the heart of Southern California lies the nation's newest ABA provisionally-approved School of Law.

And, as you might expect with a new, elite program, students at Chapman have access to the best of all that's new: new technology, a new law library, and very soon, a new building in which to house it all.

As part of an established university campus, though, Chapman law students also have the benefit of being part of a century-long tradition of excellence and ethics. It's a tradition that's alive and evident in our faculty, as well as in our students.

If that's something you'd like to be a part of, call Chapman University's School of Law today. When you come to Chapman, you'll surround yourself with all the things you need to become the kind of lawyer our society needs.

ASU looks to extend winning streak vs. Antelopes

Sophomore Dustin Delucchi and the ASU baseball team will travel across town tonight at 7 to play Grand Canyon University at Brazell Stadium. Jeremy Hein/State Press

By Lori Haro
State Press

Coming off a three-win weekend, the ASU baseball team will try to keep its streak going at 7 tonight against Grand Canyon University at Brazell Stadium.

The Sun Devils are currently 19-12 overall and 8-6 in the Pac-10 Southern Division. ASU is third in the Six-Pac conference behind Stanford and USC.

The Antelopes are 17-11 overall and 5-4 in the WAC Northern Division. Grand Canyon is second in its conference.

Last season the Sun Devils swept the Antelopes with two W's at home and one on the road. Two of the wins were high-scoring affairs with ASU winning 26-14 and 13-3 over Grand Canyon, while the third game went down to the wire, as the Sun Devils edged past the Antelopes 7-6 in 10 innings.

ASU leads the all-time series with their across town foes 76-20.

Sun Devil head coach Pat Murphy said that Richy Leon or Aaron Kramer will start the game.

Leon started Sunday's game against Cal and was hit pretty hard in the two innings he pitched, giving up four runs on five hits. He has an ERA of 5.16 with nine walks and 18 strikeouts in six appearances. Kramer is 2-2 with a 2.75 ERA with five walks and 25 strikeouts. Kramer got Friday night's save after pitching three innings giving up only one walk and striking out five.

Antelope head coach Gil Stafford will tentatively start either Ben Menke or Mike Torres. Menke (0-1) has an 11.25 ERA with three walks and four strikeouts in four appearances. Torres (0-1) has an 11.85 ERA with eight walks and six strikeouts in 13.2 innings pitched.

Stafford said that pitching for tonight's game will be somewhat shaky after a rough weekend conference series with New Mexico.

"We've just come off a pretty tough conference series with New Mexico and we have another conference series with Utah this weekend so our pitching is a concern," Stafford said.

Stafford is, however, pleased with his team's progress from last year's performance.

"Last year we only won 13 games and this season we have already won 17, so we're off to a good start," Stafford said.

Stafford said that this season's team has "been able to swing that bat pretty well and score some runs", but claims that while

Majerus remains ASU's No. 1 choice

BY MATT PAULSON
STATE PRESS

Despite the fact that Utah head coach Rick Majerus' price tag seemingly doubles with every win his Utes pull off in the NCAA Tournament, it appears he is still the top candidate to be the ASU men's head basketball coach next season.

"It's pretty obvious who we're going after," a source in the ASU Sports Information Office told the State Press Monday, referring to Majerus.

Majerus has guided Utah to a 29-3 record this season and its first Final Four appearance since 1966.

However, whether or not Majerus remains as interested in ASU now as he once was remains to be seen.

Majerus has said in the past that he would like to coach at ASU. Having now reached the Final Four at Utah, a feat he previously said he didn't think possible, though, Majerus might not be so adamant about leaving Salt Lake City.

Majerus was unavailable for comment Monday, but he did tell the Tribune Saturday after Utah defeated UofA, "The last thing on my mind right now is whether I'm staying or leaving."

He did add, though, "I listen to anyone that would have something to say to me."

ASU Sports Information Director Mark Brand said Majerus hadn't been contacted about the job and "if he is contacted, we would wait until after the season because we wouldn't want to serve as a distraction to his team."

Murray State head coach Mark Gottfried, who conferred he was contacted by ASU Athletic Director Kevin White about the position, appears to be the university's No. 2 choice.

While there has been no official statement from the athletic department which has removed ASU interim head coach Don Newman from consideration for the full time post, he is not believed to be on the proverbial list.

Newman, who was unavailable for comment, led the Sun Devils to an 18-14 record and NIT Tournament berth this season.

Other rumored candidates include Mississippi's Rob Evans, George Washington's Mike Jarvis, Xavier's Skip Prosser and North Carolina-Charlotte's Melvin Watkins.

8 Sun Devils named to All-Academic team

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The Pac-10 Conference announced the All-Academic teams for women's gymnastics and men's and women's basketball.

Sun Devil gymnasts sophomore Amy Shelton and junior Lisa Vincijanovic made first-team.

Vincijanovic owns a 4.00 grade-point average, studying Zoology/Pre-medicine. Shelton has a 3.58 GPA in political science.

Sophomore Elizabeth McNabb, with a 3.47 GPA in Zoology, was named second team, while sophomore Elizabeth Reid earned honorable mention status.

In men's basketball, junior forward Bobby Lazor earned first-team honors. Lazor possesses a 3.61 GPA in business marketing.

On the women's side, senior Spring Steed achieved second-team status with a 3.45 GPA in chemistry.

Sophomore Rachel Holt and Kristine Sand were named honorable mention.

RED HOT SUNI DEVILS

Hein was a major contributor to the ASU women track team's first victory in three years. At Saturday's ASU/NSTCA Invitational, she won the 1500-meter race with a time of 4 minutes, 33.43 seconds and scored points as one of ASU's seven individual champions.

PRISCILLA HEIN
TRACK & FIELD

Gill, a sophomore, showed why she is the ASU softball team's cleanup hitter during last weekend's Diamond Devil Classic. The third baseman slugged six hits in 13 at bats, including a home run, her third on the season. Gill also drove in seven runs to lead ASU to a 5-0 record.

CHRISTINE GILL
SOFTBALL

Laiho has proven to be the best hammer thrower in ASU history. By throwing 70.92 meters (232-7) at Saturday's ASU/NSTCA Invitational, the senior became the first Sun Devil to eclipse the 70-meter mark. The throw also broke his own school record and automatically qualified for the NCAA Championship meet.

MIKA LAIHO
TRACK & FIELD

Mills improved to a 4-3 record with ASU's 7-2 win over Cal Saturday night. The junior pitched six solid innings giving up the two runs on four hits with three walks and a season-high 13 strikeouts. The win was Mills' first since Feb. 13.

What do you think?

The ASU men's basketball season has been over for nearly two weeks now, and a head coach for next season has yet to be named. An announcement from the university isn't expected until after the NCAA Tournament, which ends next Monday.

Several candidates have been rumored for the job but apparently interim head coach Don Newman isn't among them. Newman led the Sun Devils, who were picked to finish last in the Pac-10, to an 18-14 overall mark, a tie for fifth place in the Pac-10 at 8-10 and an NIT Tournament berth this season.

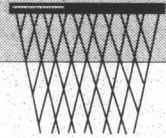

The job appears to be Rick Majerus' to take or leave. Majerus, the current Utah head coach, has hinted in the past that he would like to coach at ASU, but with his team now in the Final Four, the price tag for him has skyrocketed.

Other coaches reported to be candidates include George Washington's Mike Jarvis, Xavier's Skip Prosser, North Carolina-Charlotte's Melvin Watkins and Mark Gottfried of Murray State.

The State Press would like to know who you — the fans, students, faculty and staff of ASU — think should be head coach of the men's basketball team.

Men's tennis looks for upswing against New Mexico

BY CARLO MERCALDO
STATE PRESS

The roller coaster ride that is the 1998 ASU men's tennis season will make another pass through the Whiteman Tennis Center today, as the Sun Devils host the New Mexico State Lobos at 1:30 p.m.

The team has played some great tennis so far this year, but has not been able to get on that roll that players and coaches have anticipated.

Over spring break, ASU bottomed out in its match against No. 10 UCLA, losing its first doubles point of the season en route to a 6-1 spanking at the hands of the Bruins.

The next day, however, the Sun Devils peaked, coming up with an improbable 4-3 victory over No. 6 USC, capturing their first Pac-10 win of the season. ASU's victory over the Trojans, only the fifth ever, ranks as one of the biggest wins in the program's history and served notice to the rest of the Pac-10 that the Sun Devils are for real.

In the next match, though, the roller coaster took another severe dip as ASU lost a heartbreaker to No. 55 UC Santa Barbara, 4-3 on Saturday, in a match where the Sun Devils had a match point but were unable to capitalize.

Now at the mid-point of the season, the team will try to regroup, as it makes a run for the Pac-10 and NCAA Championships at the end of the year.

One thing which bodes well for ASU in the near future is its distinct home-court advantage. In the past two years, ASU has compiled a 25-9 record at home, including a 5-1 record this year. The Sun Devils will play three straight at home before heading out on the road April 3.

"We are a great team at home," junior Gustavo Marcaccio said. "I think we have a chance of beating anybody at home, but on the road we still need to work on it." Marcaccio also said that the win against USC proved ASU can play with the great teams, which has both good and bad by-products.

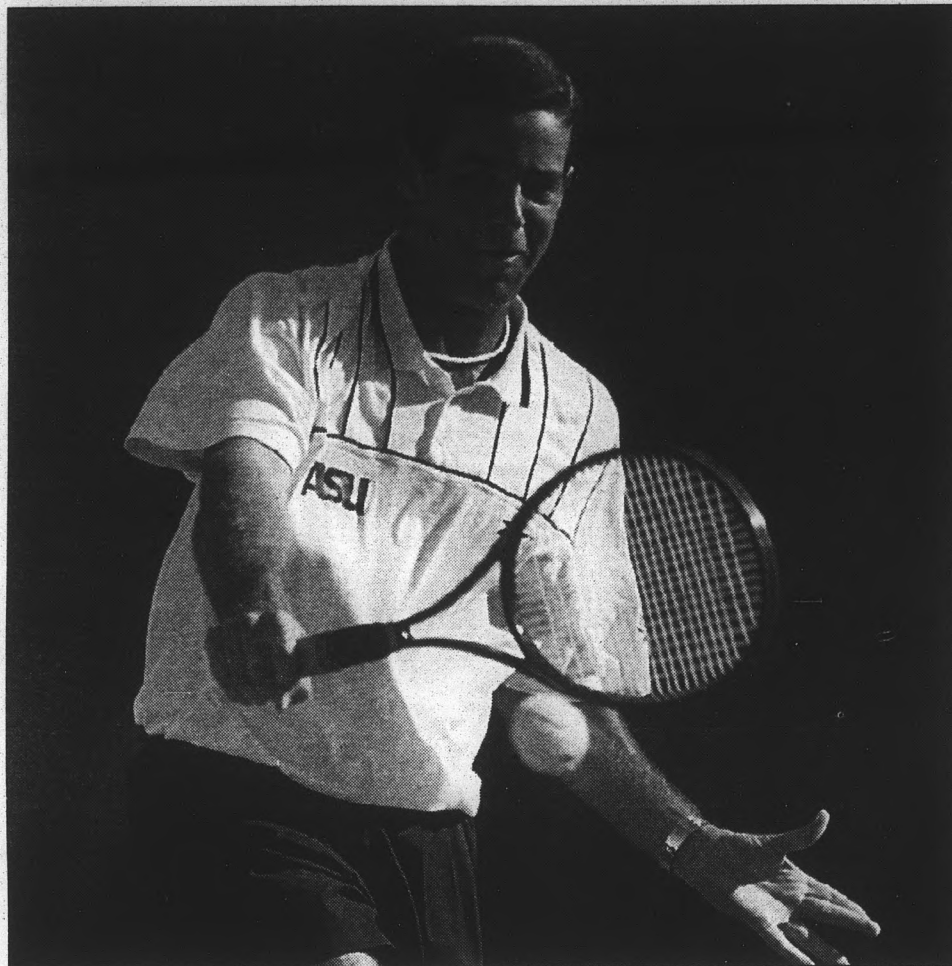

"We proved to ourselves that we can win a big match," Marcaccio said. "So it's great for our confidence, but it also means every team we play will be more motivated to play us, so we just have to be ready for every match, and stay mentally tough."

While the team has been playing very well at the friendly confines of Whiteman, the players also understand that they cannot afford to take anyone lightly.

"You can never under-estimate any team," sophomore Alex Osterrieth said. "We just need to get out there (today) and do what we are capable of."

While the team did play a couple of home matches during spring break, it was an admittedly different experience without the student support.

"I think the whole team is excited for (today's) match against New Mexico State," sophomore Ed Carter said. "It's the first time in a while that we'll be able to have a full match during school, because during the Spring

Grand Canyon

they can hit the line drives and doubles they "don't hit a lot of home runs."

Grand Canyon does have 34 home runs on the year. ASU's count stands at 15.

The Antelopes are led by Cody Ransom who is batting .374 with 46 hits, five home runs and 24 RBI. Blake Woods is hitting .359 with a team leading 29 RBI.

The Sun Devils are still being led offensively by left fielder Willie Bloomquist who is hitting .409 with 47 hits and 29 RBI. Third baseman Andrew Beinbrink is batting .327 and leads the team in doubles (13) and RBI (43).

This season marks Grand Canyon's last at the Division I level. Next season the Antelopes will join the Division II rankings instead of going back to being an independent Division I team, as they were before they joined the WAC.

"Being a Division I independent team is like being in no man's land, there is no hope and you play the worst schedule, always on the road," Stafford said. "We'll still continue to play ASU and Arizona. They have assured us we'll be able to continue to play with them."

From the backstop

Bloomquist was recently invited to USA Baseball's summer camp for the 1998 USA Baseball National Team. Bloomquist attended the team trials in November. Approximately 40 players will be invited to the summer training camp that opens June 1 at Hi Corbett Field in Tucson. The team will be comprised of 22 players, beginning play in mid-June.

Troubles again for Tark's team

Associated Press — Jerry Tarkanian called a player's mother after the latest arrests a week ago, and felt the shock and bewilderment and helplessness in her soft, sobbing voice.

Here was another kid Tarkanian had given a second, third and fourth chance, another of his reclamation projects gone bad, and now he had to tell the mother that her son, center Avondre Jones, had been arrested and kicked off the Fresno State team.

"She was all shook up, heartsick," Tarkanian said. "She still can't believe it. Avondre would have graduated. He made the honor roll last spring. He just screwed himself all up."

Even by Tarkanian's turbulent standards, the Fresno State team he brings into the NIT semifinals Tuesday night at Madison Square Garden has gone through a hellish season.

Assaults and arrests. Fists, guns and samurai swords. Booze, drugs and rehab. Six suspensions, one dismissal, and lingering suspicions of point-shaving.

"It's been the most difficult year, by far," Tarkanian said, weariness in his scratchy voice, rings around his raccoon eyes, lids droopy as ever as he boarded a jet for New York.

Tarkanian knew tough times at Long Beach State and UNLV, each placed on probation during his reign, and he survived a long legal joust with the NCAA. He also knew his share of triumph, capturing the Final Four at UNLV in 1990 and coming into this season with the best winning percentage among active coaches at 667-145.

But nothing in all his years — not even the infamous photos of former Rebel players in a hot tub with a convicted gambler that led to his exit from UNLV in 1991 — compared to this 21-11 season of utter chaos and surprising success.

"I don't plan on doing this very long," said the towel-chomping 67-year-old, who is in his third year at his alma mater (all with at least 20 wins and NIT berths) and has a contract through next season. "I would just like to turn this thing around. I thought we could have done it by now. I'm disappointed we didn't."

Tarkanian's recruiting style wherever he has coached has been to place talent ahead of character and brains, to take kids who have had problems with alcohol or drugs or the law and give them a way out through basketball. He'll take kids from obscure junior colleges, or transfers who were unhappy at major universities. Anyone who has The Game.

Unlike coaches at schools such as Stanford and North Carolina, who are in the Final Four, Tarkanian hasn't been restricted to students who must have high Scholastic Aptitude Test scores and good grades to be accepted. This shark is a bottom fisher.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST
by Frances Drake
Tuesday, March 24, 1998

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
Avoid a tendency to push too hard in a romantic relationship. A lighter touch is needed. On the job, you're efficient and quick.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Money is very much on your mind, particularly those credit-card debts. It's a good time to set priorities budget-wise. Later, a family outing is both pleasurable and inexpensive.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Someone is really baiting you, but you don't have to bite. Instead, tap into your inner self and deal with this calmly. An evening of card-playing or board games is fun.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Your appetite for fun is whetted. However, you need to get on with what must be done at work. Some find themselves working later than planned.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22)
You're a bit groggy and tired as the day begins. Try not to push yourself too hard. You could be run-down and susceptible to a cold or flu.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
Kindness is a better weapon than a sharp tongue. In fact, you'll be quite pleased with how well everything goes. A child reaches a scholastic milestone.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
You find yourself in a somewhat uncomfortable situation early in the day. However, you can handle yourself admirably. Don't let that off color joke you hear put you in a snit during evening hours.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)

You are taken by surprise when someone returns a kindness you did long ago. This helps to reinforce your belief in people's goodness. In general, your outlook is sunny.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
Taking the phone off the hook and rolling over in bed isn't going to help. You just have to face the day, no matter how boring a particular assignment is.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
An extra burst of energy comes to your aid. You can accomplish much during your work day. This carries forward into the evening hours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
There's some trouble brewing with a particular friend. However, avoid confrontational tactics. Wait to see what this person has to say before you fly off the handle.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20)
Just when you were ready to give up, someone comes through for you in a big way. Be sure you express your gratitude. A short trip could be in store for afternoon hours.

YOU BORN TODAY possess a wisdom and understanding of humankind that is uncommon. Even from a very young age, you seem wise beyond your years. Extremely sensitive of other people's feelings, you are always the peacemaker. However, you have the courage of a lion and are not afraid to defend the downtrodden. Fields of interest are medicine, social work, teaching and counseling.
