Deitchman disqualified from runoffs

BY MONICA J. AGUIRRE
 STATE PRESS

Seth Deitchman, a former student government presidential contender, was disqualified Monday from the runoff election by the elections commission which found him guilty of violating election rules and regulations.

The elections commission's decision slid Damon Pace, a presidential candidate who filed the complaint against Deitchman, into Deitchman's slot for the runoff. Pace placed 3rd in the April 2 election.

"It's what I expected," Pace said about the verdict. "I don't think he is a bad guy, he just made bad mistakes."

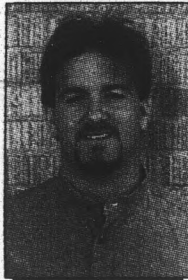

Deitchman filed an appeal to the Associated Students of ASU Supreme Court when he learned of the verdict.

Meredith Taylor, Deitchman's campaign manager, filed an injunction requesting that the elections be postponed until next week.

"I'm disappointed with the decision," Deitchman said. "We need a stronger government to make better decisions; a government that will move the 45,000 students to do something."

Pace filed a complaint last week with numerous allegations that Deitchman failed to report tools, paint, food and other campaign materials.

DEITCHMAN

PACE

In addition, Pace specifically argued that Deitchman used a Spiderman shirt, tablecloth, and balloons for campaigning purposes and did not declare them on his financial statement.

Pace and Deitchman faced the elections commission last Thursday.

In its final decision, the commission ruled for the plaintiff and assessed 20 penalty points against Deitchman.

Each candidate is allowed up to 20 penalty points in the campaigning process.

Once 20 points are accumulated, the candidate is disqualified.

The elections committee is facilitated by Chairman Richard Golden, who was Pace's campaign manager last year.

"I don't think that had any influence on the decision," Pace said. "It's not me that was cheating, it was (Deitchman's) campaign. It's the truth, I just called him on it."

Richard Gans, the candidate who finished last place in the presidential elections, has also filed complaints against both Pace and Deitchman.

Taylor is holding a rally against ASASU at noon today.

"Finally, I want some people's voices to be heard," she said.

Second-year law student and recently-published author Craig Weiss is caught in his home away from home, the John J. Ross-William C. Blakley Law Library. Weiss's book, I Am My Brother's Keeper, is about Americans and Canadians who volunteered in the first Arab-Israeli war.

Brothers' book honors unrecognized war heroes

BY ALLY ASHER
 STATE PRESS

The stories of American war heroes who fought during World War II can be found in almost any history book worldwide.

Heroes like Douglas MacArthur, George S. Patton and Dwight D. Eisenhower are commonly recognized for their intriguing biographies.

In the myriad of war legends, however, some stories go untold and atrocities go unnoticed.

When ASU law student Craig Weiss and his brother, Jeffrey, an ASU law graduate, stumbled upon some of the untold stories of American and Canadian men who fought in the first Arab-Israeli war in 1948, they thought it was time to expose some of history's untold heroes.

In their book, I Am My Brother's Keeper, the brothers document the lives of some of the volunteers, Jews and non-Jews, who left their homes and their families to fight for a free Jewish state.

Craig, a second-year law student, said he and his brother wanted to share their discoveries and educate people on Israel's remembered war heroes.

"It's not a very well-known chapter in the history of America or Israel," Craig said. "(The book is) about amazing people. It talks about the people who went to Israel and fought for this country that was not their own."

I Am My Brother's Keeper, the first book for the brothers, was conceived after Jeffrey read a Hebrew book describing a former Israeli test pilot who fought during Israel's war for independence, Craig said.

In it, the pilot discussed Americans and Canadians who worked in Israel, people of whom both Craig and Jeremy were totally unaware.

Craig, who was working at an investment firm in Israel at the time of Jeff's discovery, said he became fascinated with his brother's findings and immediately began to do research. Because he was already in Israel, he had an advantage which eventually made him co-author of the book.

"I had a few interviews and it just blossomed," Craig said. "I ended up interviewing 90 people in six months, sometimes interviewing two to three people a day. Jeff got me involved, but I was fascinated by the idea."

Craig said the book is coming out at an appropriate time, just a few weeks before the 50th anniversary of modern Israel's birth. He said the book is not on shelves yet, but will eventually be in stores around the country, including the ASU Bookstore.

Although it is his first book, Craig said he aspires to keep writing and hopes the experiences will be just as inspirational.

"I loved the fact that all of the stories were true," he said. "Just to be able to talk to these people, just sitting there, was an amazing thing. If someone told me that I would never make a penny off this book, I would still consider it the greatest thing I have ever done."

Elections coordinator considers calling it quits

BY MONICA J. AGUIRRE
 STATE PRESS

The Associated Students of ASU elections coordinator is considering stepping down if an assistant is not hired to help him oversee the presidential run-off election this week.

"I would seriously consider it," said Chris Zock, adding that he's not giving an ultimatum to the senate. "I cannot and will not run an election without a full staff. I need two people I know will be there when I need them."

The two former assistant election coordinators responsible for facilitating and overseeing the elections process resigned two weeks ago citing personal conflicts. Only one of the two assistants Zock proposed to the senate last week was approved, leaving Zock overloaded.

Zock presented Wyatt Smith and Derek Thompson to the ASASU senate seeking approval to hire them as new assistants.

The senate did not approve Smith because he works with Damon Pace, a presidential candidate, in the ASASU Government Relations offices. Some senators feared this would create a conflict of interest.

"Chris (Zock) is the only one who touches the ballots, but in the bylaws, it doesn't say that the assistants can't," said Sen. Drew Feth, College of Engineering. "Not to say that (Smith) is going to (taint the ballots) but the potential exists."

Zock has earned close to $1,845 since he was chosen as elections commissioner, planning debates, meetings, locating polling sites, counting ballots and facilitating the elections process, said Sen. Andrew Lefberg, College of Business.

"Essentially, (Zock) said you find someone or I'm out of here," Lefberg said. "I don't want anyone running an election that doesn't want to do his job."

TODAY

Campus clubs and organizations may submit written entries to the State Press in the basement of the Matthews Center. Requests will not be taken over the phone or via fax.

Deadline for requests is noon the day before publication and entries will not be accepted more than three working days before publication. Only one entry per organization per day is permitted.

Entries must contain the full name of the club or organization, a description of the event, date, time and the full address of the location. All requests are subject to editing for content, space and clarity. Incomplete or illegible entries will be discarded.

The Today Section is a daily calendar of events printed as a service to the ASU community. Requests are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis and are printed as space permits.

NAU student elected to state board

By KAREN YAMADA
STATE PRESS

As if serving as student body president of NAU is not enough of a challenge, Jennifer Reichelt wants even more.

Reichelt, 22, has been nominated by Gov. Jane Dee Hull as the next student member of the Arizona Board of Regents for the 1998-99 academic year.

The only thing standing in her way before she begins her term on July 1 is a nod of approval from the state Senate.

"The first meeting will probably be intimidating to me, but it's very exciting to represent the students on the Board of Regents," Reichelt said about her nomination.

Reichelt, a business major graduating in May with an emphasis in human resource management, was chosen from among three other candidates by the governor. She will succeed John Platt, the current student regent and a second-year law student at ASU, who will complete his one-year term in June.

Reichelt is a member of the Mortar Board Honor Society and NAU's Delta Delta Delta sorority. She will attend graduate school in the fall and pursue a master's degree in public administration. Her hope for the future is to become a city manager in Arizona or a member of the U.S. Congress.

"The governor was looking for someone who understood that the student regent represents the entire student body across the state," said Francie Noyes, press secretary for Gov. Hull. "At the same time, that person has to be a member of a high-powered and successful group of people, and has to make a strong case on behalf of the students in the midst of people who can highly influence others."

Reichelt said she is up to the task.

She said to be successful she will need to be well-educated about student issues, know the facts, communicate well and know how the students of Arizona feel — all 101,000 of them.

"The greatest challenge I will have is to have a voice and get my points understood," Reichelt said. "And to find out what makes each regent listen and to develop a strategy of how best to convince and/or persuade them."

Reichelt plans to implement focus groups at ASU and UofA to get wider involvement in understanding student issues. She also plans to utilize technology, like teleconferencing, to bring in the perspective of students attending statewide sites like ASU East and West, NAU Yuma and UofA Sierra Vista.

"I have always been active in student government and in the community," Reichelt said. "My experience has made me aware of changes that can be made. I think a lot of students don't understand the process and sit back instead of choosing to be louder about their concerns."

The student regent is a full-voting member of the board and is accountable for governance of the statewide university system as are the others in the 11-member board.

The position rotates annually among NAU, ASU and UofA. Reichelt said she will be the first female student regent in more than six years.

"The governor was especially impressed with Jennifer because she had clearly thought about how she would keep in touch with her constituents," Noyes said. "And she was already aware of the issues and how the board worked since she was already attending ABOR meetings in her student body president capacity. The other candidates were very qualified, but Jennifer had the experience and thoughtfulness that the governor was looking for."

Protestants avoid Catholic area — a sign of compromising times?

By SHAWN POGATCHNIK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Taking their cue from last week's sweeping peace accord for Northern Ireland, Protestant marchers avoided a hostile Catholic neighborhood Monday that has frequently been a sectarian battleground.

This symbolic start to Northern Ireland's always divisive "marching season," which runs from Easter Monday to late August, demonstrated the kind of retreats that will be required for the peace agreement to survive the coming months.

Police blocked the early morning march by 20 Apprentice Boys, one of Northern Ireland's three pro-British Protestant fraternal orders, at a bridge a few hundred yards from the Catholic Lower Ormeau neighborhood of south Belfast.

The marchers handed the police commander a letter of protest. But rather than mounting the kind of lengthy standoff that in past years has ended in violence, they and an accompanying band immediately boarded a bus to join another parade in a mostly Protestant town.

Later, speakers at Apprentice Boys rallies condemned the compromises contained in last Friday's accord — which Northern Ireland's largest Protestant party, David Trimble's Ulster Unionists, supported.

"For Sale!" read one leaflet, picturing a silhouette of Northern Ireland. It was handed out to some of the more than 10,000 Apprentice Boys rallying at Ballymena, northwest of Belfast. "Estate agent: Mr. David Trimble and the Ulster Unionist Party."

Many Protestants oppose key compromises in the agreement: That several hundred Irish Republican Army prisoners will be released within two years if the IRA's July 1997 truce holds; that the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party can take part in a new Northern Ireland Assembly; and that Assembly must pursue joint policy-making with the Irish Republic.

The agreement accepted by negotiators from the Ulster Unionists, Sinn Fein and six other parties has to be passed in public referendums May 22 in both Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic. Two hard-line Protestant parties that boycotted the talks are already campaigning for a "no" vote.

The accord also has to be approved Saturday by the Ulster Unionists' governing body, the 800-member Ulster Unionist Council. And Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams says his party's support depends on approval by its grassroots members at a Sinn Fein conference this weekend in Dublin.

Both Adams and Trimble have been defending the deal as advancing their mutually exclusive goals: for Adams, to unite the north with the rest of Ireland; for Trimble, to ensure Northern Ireland's continued union with Britain.

"The positives outweigh the problems," Trimble wrote in Monday's Daily Telegraph newspaper. "Despite Gerry Adams' taunts, we have risen from the table with the union stronger than when we first sat down."

Should the accord pass all these electoral tests, Protestants and Catholics trying to work together in the new Assembly will face an immediate challenge unless Protestant marchers and Catholic protesters can resolve their territorial disputes.

Officers of the Royal Ulster Constabulary bar the way of a (Catholic) Apprentice Boys parade on Ormeau Bridge in Belfast, Northern Ireland, Monday. The Apprentice Boys agreed to stop at the bridge then take buses into the city center to avoid walking through the mainly nationalist (Protestant) area of Ormeau.

Since 1995, protest groups led by paroled IRA members have tried to block Protestant parades from passing near Catholic homes in three key confrontation zones: Belfast's Lower Ormeau neighborhood, Londonderry's Bogside district and Portadown's Garvaghy Road.

The Portadown showdown has triggered sustained, widespread violence for the past two Julys — and Northern Ireland's police chief says this year looks no different.

"There's still scope for tremendous disorder. That's the reality of life," said Chief Constable Ronnie Flanagan. "As we sit at the minute,

I don't see much sign yet of people coming together."

Protestant marching groups insist their parades should offend no one since they simply celebrate the strength of their community and its pro-British, evangelical values.

The north's substantial Catholic minority loathes these parades — complete with fife-and-drum groups nicknamed "kick the pope" bands — as demonstrations of dominance.

In Washington on Monday, George Mitchell, the architect of the Northern Ireland peace accord, told President Clinton the deal could not have been achieved without his help.

Mitchell, meeting with Clinton briefly at the White House, said he hopes the president will visit the region in the coming months.

Yankee Stadium structural problems result in three-game postponement

By BEN WALKER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A 500-pound support beam fell in 75-year-old Yankee Stadium on Monday, forcing postponement of the New York Yankees' three-game series against the Anaheim

Ron Frehm/Associated Press

Angels.

There were no fans inside the ballpark — baseball's most storied landmark — when the beam fell from the underside of the upper deck into the mezzanine section and landed on seats between third base and left field about 2 p.m., city officials said.

No injuries were reported at the stadium, known as "the House that Ruth Built" — a reference to Yankee great Babe Ruth.

"Yankee Stadium is crumbling, the series has been canceled. Everybody is in a little disarray right now," said Yankee pitcher David Cone.

The earliest the Yankees can play in the stadium would be Friday night against the Detroit Tigers. If the stadium is not repaired by then, that series would be moved to Shea Stadium, the home of the New York Mets.

"As a Yankee fan, I'd rather that we were playing, but as a mayor we have to make sure it's safe," Mayor Rudy Giuliani said at an impromptu news conference at the stadium.

The announcement was made while the Yankees were taking batting practice. The team began the season on the road and did not have its first home game until last Friday.

"It is sad. You don't want to see that happen like that. It's an old stadium," said pitcher David Wells.

The stadium, owned by the city and leased to the team, will turn 75 Saturday.

It opened on April 18, 1923, underwent renovations in 1974 and 1975, and reopened in 1976. Yankees owner George Steinbrenner has been trying to get a new ballpark, complaining the current stadium doesn't have enough parking and amenities.

One possibility is to construct a stadium near Madison Square Garden in Manhattan. Steinbrenner also has spoken with New Jersey officials about the possibility of that state constructing a ballpark near Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

Yankee Stadium is fourth-oldest ballpark in the majors, behind Detroit's Tiger Stadium (1912), Boston's Fenway Park (1912) and Chicago's Wrigley Field (1914).

State Department moves to prevent inmate execution

By RICHARD CARELLI
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Madeleine Albright asked Virginia's governor to block Tuesday's execution of a death-row inmate from Paraguay, saying she was concerned about the "potential harm" to Americans abroad.

Albright made the request "with great reluctance" Monday in a letter to Gov. James Gilmore. A spokesman, Mark Miner, said the governor was reviewing Albright's request but would wait to see how the Supreme Court rules in the case.

But the Justice Department urged the Supreme Court to allow the execution of Angel Francisco Breard to proceed, despite pleas for a postponement by the government of Paraguay and the World Court.

The high-level split between two federal agencies on whether to stay the execution was outlined in the Justice Department's brief to the Supreme Court and was confirmed by State Department officials.

Albright, in her letter to Gilmore, fully endorsed the U.S. position before the World Court but said she had the "responsibility to bear in mind the safety of Americans overseas."

"I am particularly concerned about the possible negative consequences for the many U.S. citizens who live and travel abroad," Albright wrote. The immediate execution of Breard could be seen as a denial by the United States of international law and the World Court, she said.

The Justice Department, in its brief, noted Albright's request to the governor as a proper exercise of persuasion in a case where a World Court order does not provide a basis for U.S. courts to act.

Breard, a citizen of Paraguay, was convicted of the 1992 stabbing death of Ruth Dickie in her Arlington, Va., apartment.

The World Court said Breard's case violated a treaty with Paraguay because that country's consulate was not notified.

EDITORIAL

ASASU hopefuls start dirty politics young

It seems Spider-Man has been thwarted by the poisonous picante sauce.

Noting that Seth Deitchman did not declare various items used for his campaign, among other charges, Damon Pace hightailed it to the ASASU elections commission, which unanimously decided Thursday to disqualify Deitchman, based on the accumulation of 20 penalty points, the maximum allowed.

As a result, Pace, third-place candidate after the first elections, is now back in the running for ASASU president and will participate in the run-off election with Paul Frost to be held Wednesday and Thursday.

That is, if Deitchman doesn't appeal — which he will, of course. And his appeal, which will go to the supreme court, will postpone the runoff for at least another week.

Confused yet?

Once again, ASASU has managed to make a mockery of itself. These latest developments are simply the most recent in a series of the three-ring circus acts for which our student government is becoming known.

No wonder only 5 percent of the student body voted for ASASU president.

Who wants to take time to vote when the entire system is brimming with junior politicians who bend the rules and backstab each other in order to get ahead?

Hm ... sounds like ASASU is taking lessons from the big guys and gals: The federal government.

This anything-goes attitude goes beyond one candidate's actions and even further beyond the scope of mere "oversights."

Consider, for example, that other presidential candidates face charges with the elections commission.

Such as Richard Gans' complaint against Pace's "oversight" of six campaign posters, which still remain posted on campus despite the post-election take-down requirement. Each poster, if counted against him, will give him six penalty points — not enough to remove him from the runoff, which Pace is now a part of, since his charges removed Deitchman from the race.

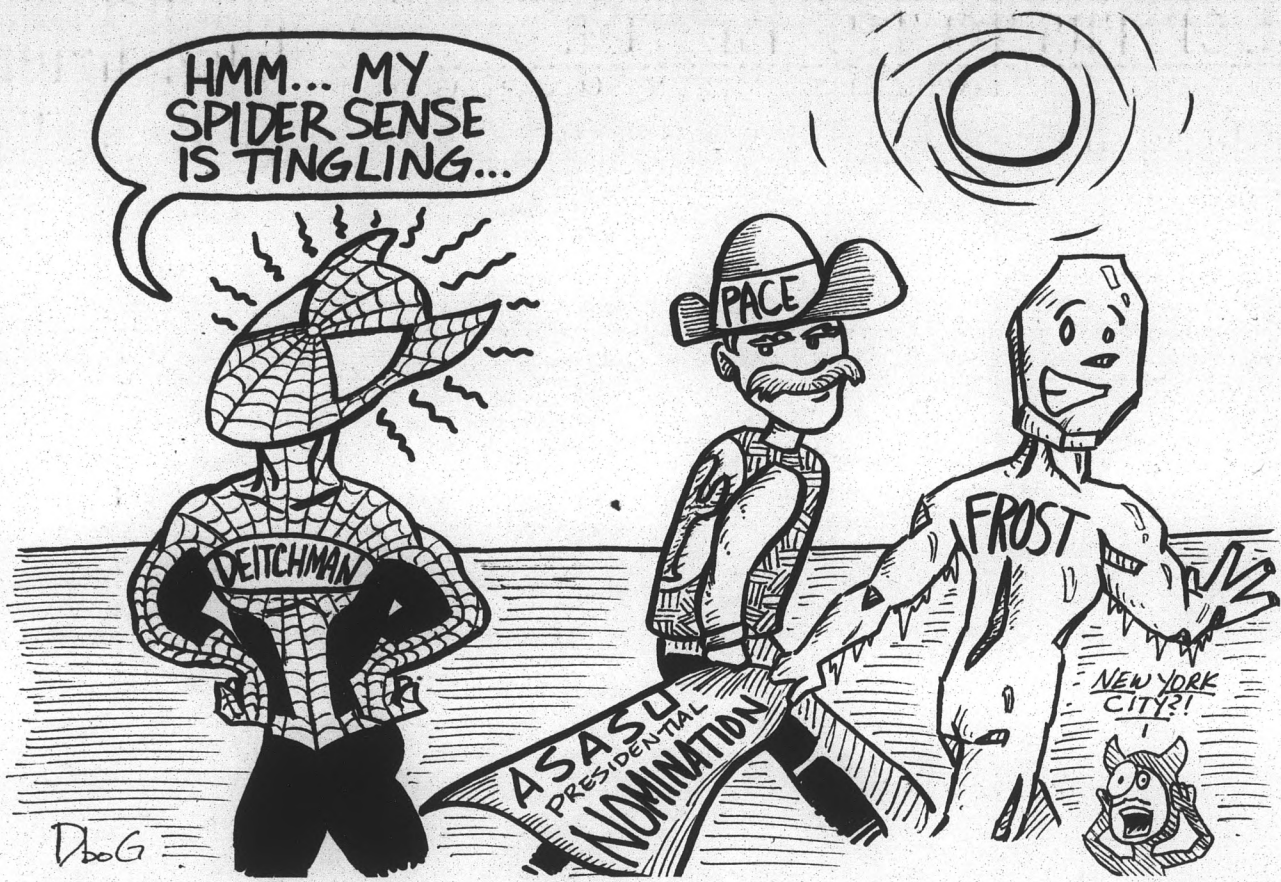

Coincidence? We'll leave that to the election commission to decide.

Also consider that the election commission chairman, Richard Golden, was Pace's campaign manager last year. Golden is one of the three who vote to decide on the issuing of penalty points.

Conflict of interest? Maybe. But there appears to be a pattern forming, and it goes a bit beyond the Rorschach test of ink-blot interpretation.

Sure, we're all students here, and students make mistakes. But there comes a point where people need to take responsibility for their actions. The best campaign is one where you keep your hands clean — from mistakes and from the mud(slinging).

We hear El Niño mud is especially messy this year.

ASASU nit-picking ignores student voice

I should have known better than to get my hopes up with the recent ASASU election.

KURT HESSE
Guest Columnist

I was hoping maybe new officers would create a new attitude in our student government to be more user-friendly and to promote new ideas. However, that cannot be further from the truth.

When the results of the election were announced April 3, I was shocked that the winners of each contested race were the candidates with the least ASASU experience.

Unfortunately, it turns out they were also the candidates least prepared to deal with the bureaucracy involved with obtaining and retaining a student government position.

The latest ASASU travesty is perhaps the most disgusting because it takes the voice of the student, ignores it and goes on its merry way, ignoring the needs of this student body.

After this last election, I thought the students of this university could overcome the "I don't care" attitude toward ASASU and follow up on the new officers voted into office.

What the students knew least about was the appeals process. That is where the winning candidates are accused of breaking the campaign rules and have votes deducted from their total for the degree of rule-breaking that takes place. By the time this ridiculous process is over, the candidates whom the students have selected to be their representatives for next year will be eliminated from the run-off election. By winning, they are without the benefit of hunting for petty details to complain about, so they can also try to eliminate their opponents.

Some of the appeals this year are mind boggling in how inappropriate they truly are.

"Spider-Man" Deitchman has been eliminated because he had too many enthused campaign workers who didn't understand which items had to be claimed and which did not. His only "sin" was that he had too many eager volunteers. Now "Spider-Man" has been caught up in his own web of over-motivating students and creative problem solving. Those are the very traits he needs to be a successful president!

The fun is not over yet, folks.

One candidate is accusing the other of not claiming an hour spent as a guest on the air at KZON as a campaign expense. This is another example of brilliant campaigning being discouraged by the ASASU establishment. The best qualities an ASASU officer can have are economic resourcefulness and the ability to find new ways of getting the message out.

The final and most bizarre case comes from outgoing College of Engineering senator Drew Feth.

Feth has accused both elected senators from his own college of making simple mistakes on their financial reports. He says that if they cannot follow the procedures of the campaign, then they are not fit to take his place in the senate.

That's a good idea, Drew.

After all, if they cannot make a simple process as difficult and stressful as possible, they must not be good enough for ASASU.

Kurt Hesse is a senior in supply chain management and can be reached at ledrock@imap2.asu.edu via e-mail.

The latest ASASU travesty is perhaps the most disgusting because it takes the voice of the student, ignores it and goes on its merry way, ignoring the needs of this student body.

Education first step in East Timor situation

Arriving in Dili, the capital city of East Timor, it is obvious that this is like no other part of Indonesia. The plane that I flew in on was a small twin-engine jet, half-full with a few businessmen, but mostly military personnel. I was the only Westerner.

At the terminal, I had to show my passport and answer a lot of questions posed by security. As far as I know, no other "province" of Indonesia has such strenuous requirements for merely passing into a new area (I use quotes around province because, according to the United Nations, East Timor is not a province of Indonesia). I was told which taxi to get in and told which hotel to go to. When the taxi pulled up to the hotel, I told the driver that it was too far from the center of town and that I wanted back toward the center of town. He gave me a worried look, but complied.

I stayed in East Timor for a week. The situation there is still grim, although the widespread killing that occurred in the first years of the occupation (more than 200,000 men, women and children — about one third of the population) has been replaced by a smaller number of murders, tortures and "disappearances," and an atmosphere of repression and fear. Most of the buildings have been rebuilt because of Indonesia's development plan, but the looks in the faces of the older people that I encountered remained hollow, and many bear physical signs of Indonesia's brutality.

When I went to Baucau, I stayed in the city's only hotel, the hotel that doubled as a torture facility in the early years of the war. I met a man who talked with me a little about the situation, but, out of fear, asked that we meet privately in a church after dark. The meeting was risky, but he talked to me for hours about the widespread atrocities committed by the Indonesians, including killings, disappearances and the forced sterilization of women. There is no word as fitting as genocide to describe the situation that continues to this day.

Back in Dili, I met Carlito, a young student activist. He offered to sell me a shirt that commemorated Bishop Belo's return from accepting the Nobel Prize, a shirt that had been banned by the Indonesians. We met at a soccer match and then later at my hotel. He sold me the shirt and asked me to smuggle letters out of Indonesia for him and mail them when I returned to the United States. I agreed.

The last night I was there, I joined some International Red Cross workers and USAID staff for beers and a game of darts. They were the only other Westerners I saw during my stay in East Timor, and they all complained about the lack of freedom and funds to operate efficiently. Because of the nighttime curfew, I walked back to my hotel that night through deserted streets, punctuated only by the roar of the huge military trucks that speed through Dili's narrow streets.

When I returned to the United States, I mailed Carlito's letters to journalists and activists in England, Brazil, Portugal, Australia and Holland. I also enclosed a note asking how they had met Carlito and what information they had about the situation in East Timor. The first response I received was from the Englishman. He enclosed a copy of 'Lito's letter and a note explaining his regret and sorrow. Carlito's head was found at Santa Cruz cemetery two weeks after I had met him, another victim of the war that still smolders in a little-known part of the world, whose cries for help remain mostly unheard.

I joined the East Timor Action Network four years ago when I found out about the situation there and our government's role. Although I don't feel personally guilty for what has occurred there, I do feel a personal responsibility to try to change America's role and relationship (as a major supplier of arms to the Suharto regime) with Indonesia and East Timor. American legislators have, for the most part, been very responsive when they are shown the facts surrounding East Timor, an issue that most know little about. The first step in change is education. If you would like to find out more, please contact the ASU branch of ETAN via e-mail, at desousa@asu.edu. Furthermore, I invite everyone to attend a lecture by Constancio Pinto, the U.N. representative to the ousted government of East Timor, Tuesday, April 14, from 7-9 p.m. in room 212 of the MU. I guarantee you it will be an eye-opening experience.

Mardi Gras thanks

I would like to take the little time that it takes to thank my hard working ASU Mardi Gras committee and acknowledge the success of each event.

Brad Bunton and Toby Roberts helped put up the yellow banners that you saw on the light poles. Christa, Emily, and Rhonda Bell and Sadhana Stone did not get to enjoy the concert/carnival that they put hard work into, because they were at the front entrance for more than 12 hours taking attendance and making sure that students be admitted free. Laura Taft, Gary Taylor and Arwa Elmukhtar are also three very dedicated volunteers. Stephanie Gill joined us in the middle of Mardi Gras and brought over 400 students to Hayden Lawn to enjoy a free barbecue and watch 13 talented students perform and try to win round-trip airline tickets. Terry Hendron, chair for Jesters of the Court, was still smiling and put his heart and every hour he had to help after his event was rained out. Angela Johnston, chair for the carnival, made it possible for student organizations to raise hundreds of dollars at the carnival.

At some of the other events, like Mardi Gras Madness, there were over a 1000 students in attendance throughout the day; at the Chili Cook-Off there were over a 1000 students and at the movie night, the bus was full. There were over 5000 people at the carnival. Autumn Ness and Matt Brough worked harder than anyone I have ever seen, and they put on one of the biggest events that ASU has ever seen.

How can anyone possibly say that Mardi Gras was a flop? I have never been so hurt and let down. I cannot believe the State Press did not cover this event, nor can I believe that people would have the nerve to criticize an event if one, they did not even attend it. Katherine Manke (assistant director) and I know what hard work and countless hours we put into this, and we wish people would stop being so selfish and start realizing that we did this for you, all the students, not for ourselves.

One last issue, APATHY. This year Mardi Gras was publicized to every inch of the campus and surrounding community. Erik Noland and Steve Bast put hours of work to come up with ads, flyers, the cups in the MU and more. It was impossible to not know that it was Mardi Gras week. What more could we have done? It is the students' own will to attend things, and not anyone can do anything about it. Apathy is everywhere and only you can change it.

Documentary addresses rock and roll conspiracy theory

At the four-year anniversary of Kurt Cobain's death (April 8) a new documentary about the lead singer of Nirvana's life and death is out at selected movie theaters.

HAYLEY RINGLE
Guest Columnist

Kurt and Courtney was banned at the Sundance Film Festival because Cobain's wife, Courtney Love, and her lawyers are doing everything they can to make sure no one sees it.

Why is the movie so controversial? Nick Broomfield, the maker of this very interesting documentary, interviews a bunch of people who merely suggest that Kurt's death may not have been a suicide after all, but a murder, and Courtney may have had a part in it.

There were many intriguing ideas brought up in the documentary, which make me wonder: If those ideas are in fact true, why this death is still being called a suicide?

Some of the ideas brought up in the movie are that there were no fingerprints on the gun. Cobain had so much heroin in his body that he could not have possibly been able to shoot the gun. He lay dead for four days, although Courtney was desperately trying to find him. He was going to divorce Courtney and change his will. Courtney hired a local singer to whack Kurt for $50,000 and make it look like a suicide. (But of course this man is now dead after being interviewed on film and after a mysterious run-in with a train.)

And Cobain's "suicide" note was merely a good-bye to Nirvana. He was going to break up with the band, not kill himself. The only mention of death was added on at the end and supposedly not in his handwriting.

If all these issues the film cites are in fact true, you have to wonder how many cops Courtney would have had to pay off to keep it quiet.

The truth of the matter is, Courtney is a very manipulative woman who has gone through a lot of bad things in her life that she doesn't want publicized now. She has made a complete turnaround in her appearance and her career since the death of Kurt, and there is speculation she could have orchestrated this to further her career.

Ironically, Love's break-through album with her band Hole, coyly titled Live Through This, came out one week after Kurt's death. She had a major role in the movie about Larry Flynt playing a drug addict — what a stretch — and she is now a "clean cut" woman who wants to put her past behind her.

Love doesn't want to talk about the drugs she did, possibly even when she was pregnant with the baby she had with Kurt (as was publicized in a controversial Vanity Fair article), and she doesn't want to talk about her stripping and years at reform school. She wants to put everything behind her, including the death of Kurt Cobain.

Whether he killed himself or not, he's gone. She only knew him for two years. And in that time she managed to get her hands on all of Kurt's money, the rights to Nirvana's songs, have a child with him, and almost break up his band. Could she have done this to boost her career? Would she be the star she is without him? These speculations, brought to the forefront by this documentary, raise even further questions of her relationship with Kurt. Was it love or a career step?

Now, of course I don't believe Love could have single-handedly shot Kurt (as suggested by the documentary), but I do believe the movie's indication that she may have hired someone is worth looking into. If she felt Kurt was going to divorce her and she would lose all of his money, then she might have been desperate enough to do something about it.

When you are about to lose everything, you may do some really crazy things to keep it. Doesn't that make sense? Especially if you're Courtney Love.

And so she now has his baby, Francis Bean, and all of the rights to Nirvana.

From the start of their relationship, something was awry. As soon as she met Kurt, she married him (the hurried wedding) and immediately had a child with him (the hurried offspring, "I had Kurt Cobain's baby!")

So, if you have any interest in Nirvana, Kurt Cobain, Courtney Love or a good conspiracy theory, see this documentary! You can't see it here yet, but hopefully it will come to the Valley Art Theatre.

Kurt and Courtney is sure to open up plenty of eyes and raise many questions.

And to Courtney Love: You can't live on your husband's fame. You'll have to start relying on your talent, which, unfortunately for you, you have none of.

Revolutionary movements to storm ASU campus this week

BY ALYSON HURT
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

The Black Panthers. The Sierra Club. The Zapatistas. The East Timor independence movement.

They are all revolutionary movements converging on campus this week.

Community activism, environmentalism, human rights and freedom are among the many subjects to be covered during the week-long series "Peanuts for Peace," organized by the ASU Political Education Coalition.

The PEC was established to bring in speakers to discuss a variety of public issues. Different members tried to find speakers that dealt with their specific "pet causes."

Speakers include Bobby Seale, former member of the Black Panthers; Brother Black of the Phoenix chapter of the NAACP; Constancio Pinto from East Timor, near Indonesia; and representatives of the Sierra Club Grand Canyon chapter. A speaker from Chiapas, Mexico is also tentatively scheduled to attend.

Brother Black of the Phoenix chapter of the NAACP spoke Monday afternoon, kicking off the week's activities.

Pinto will speak at 7 p.m. this evening in the Memorial Union, Cochise Room 212.

A woman from Chiapas, Mexico is tentatively scheduled to be Wednesday's speaker on the situation in the war-torn region of Mexico. She will speak from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the Student Services lawn.

On Thursday, a group from the Sierra Club Grand Canyon chapter will give two presentations about environmental issues related to urban expansion. They will speak from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the Student Services lawn and then give a slide show from 2:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the MU, Pima Room 218.

Seale will speak at 5 p.m. Friday in the ASU College of Law. The "Peanuts for Peace Rave" will follow the speech.

All events are free, except for the rave, which will take place in the West Hall courtyard. Admission is a minimum $2 donation and attendees also receive a bag of peanuts.

Suspected stalker of Asian women charged on 6 counts

BY CADONNA PEYTON
STATE PRESS

The man arrested for allegedly stalking Asian women near campus has been charged with six counts of attempted kidnapping.

Thomas Floyd Phelps, 34, is being held at Madison Street Jail in lieu of $250,000 bond. He was arrested Wednesday on one count of attempted kidnapping after being identified in a lineup.

Since then, five other women have come forward and filed charges. Attempted kidnapping is a Class 3 felony, and Phelps faces probation or two to eight years in prison for each count if convicted, said Bill FitzGerald, spokesman for the Maricopa County Attorney's Office.

Since December, several Asian women reported they were approached by a man who first asked them for directions to McClintock Drive, and then threatened he would shoot them if they did not get into his car. No weapon was shown, and all attempts were unsuccessful.

Phelps is scheduled to appear at Tempe Justice Court Monday. A request for an interview was declined.

Fraternity celebrates Easter with local children's charity

BY MICHELLE BARTLETT
SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

The stereotypical beer-drinking, party-going fraternity member with no social responsibilities proved to be untrue Saturday afternoon as members of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity celebrated Easter with 26 needy children.

Children from Valley Big Brothers Big Sisters celebrated the holiday with ASU students at the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house.

"It is so important for these kids to have good role models to look up to," said Laura Capello, public relations manager for Valley Big Brothers Big Sisters. "Many of the kids attending today have been waiting for a big brother or sister for a long time."

Valley Big Brothers Big Sisters works to improve the quality of life for kids 6 to 15 years old by fostering one-on-one relationships between youth from single-parent homes and exceptional adult role models.

Fraternity members spent Friday night cleaning the house and setting up tents in preparation for the festivities. They supplied pizzas, snacks and refreshments for the youths.

"It is important for the kids to have a good time," said Jesse Johnson, Lambda Chi Alpha vice president. "Sometimes it is not enough just to donate money."

Alpha Gamma Delta Sorority members were also on hand to entertain the kids throughout the afternoon.

The kids decorated and hunted for Easter eggs, played musical chairs to the Spice Girls and had a water balloon toss.

Party highlights included decorating bowling pins for table center pieces to be auctioned at the Valley Big Brothers Big Sisters Black Tie Extreme Bowl charity event.

Easter egg hunts have been a tradition in the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity for about 15 years.

"We like to do good things for the kids, and it is a lot of fun to give back to the community," Johnson said.

Poll: 'Yo quiero Taco Bell' dog not offensive to most Hispanics

PHOENIX (AP) — The Rocky Mountain Poll gauges Arizona's mood on the major issues of the day: President Clinton's performance, who would make the best governor, rating the economy, and now, that little dog that just loves Taco Bell.

Some Hispanic leaders are complaining that the "Yo quiero Taco Bell" chihuahua featured in various commercials is downright offensive.

But the latest poll by the Behavior Research Center says very few Hispanics in Arizona feel that way.

Five percent said they find the commercials "very offensive" and 13 percent rated them "somewhat offensive." But 82 percent said they find nothing offensive about them.

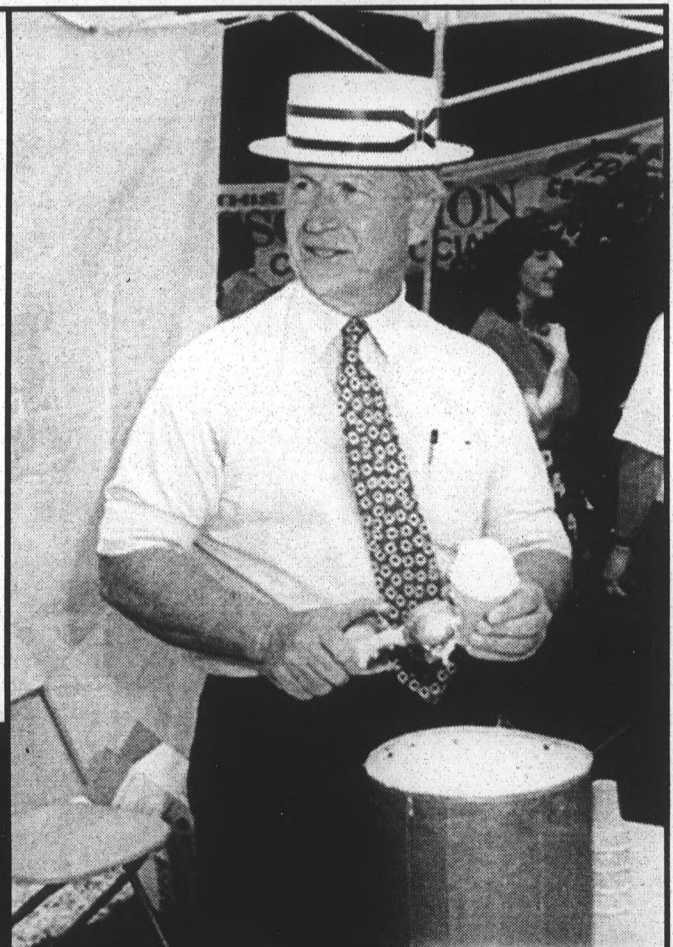

The poll was based on interviews last month with 516 Hispanic adult heads of household throughout Arizona. It has a margin for error of plus or minus 4.4 percentage points.

The Rocky Mountain Poll is an independent and nonpartisan research program sponsored by the Behavior Research Center.

57 votes not added to election results

BY KRISTEN HATCHER
STATE PRESS

The post-election saga continues at the Associated Students of ASU.

Fifty-seven votes were not counted in the final election results and a losing candidate has filed a complaint.

Sadhana Stone, who ran for activities vice president and lost to Chris Reinesch, filed a complaint against Chris Zock, ASASU elections commissioner, to include the 57 uncounted ballots in the final election results.

Stone blames the error on the poll workers. In the complaint, she wrote that workers failed to include students' full identification numbers on 11 of the ballot jackets, or they did not ensure that ballots had jackets at all.

"In both of these cases, students were denied their right to have their vote counted because of poll-worker error," she wrote. "These 57 votes could have altered the outcome of the election."

Stone included a witness statement from a classmate who said when he was done voting, he showed the ballot without the jacket to the poll workers. They instructed him to place the ballot into the ballot box. He had the jacket in his pocket, but no one told him it was necessary.

"I don't think it's really fair to not include votes that don't have ballot jackets," she said.

Using the case of her classmate as an example, Stone said she thinks he was probably not the only student who wasn't instructed how to vote correctly.

"He didn't know that the ballot jacket had to be on it," she said. "I wonder how many students that happened to (that) they just didn't know."

Stone said she knows this complaint will not affect this year's election results.

"I'm not expecting to win by a landslide," she said. "I just think for the fairness for the students that took the time to be voted, they should have their votes be counted. I know this isn't going to win or lose it for me."

According to the Spring 1998 ASASU Election Poll Worker Training Information, poll workers are to "write the voter's ASU ID number, college, polling site and day (legibly) on the ballot jacket." Poll workers are also instructed to "instruct the voter to place the ballot in the ballot jacket. Then the voter places the ballot in the ballot box."

Zock said omitting some votes is a normal occurrence in ASASU elections. If there is a question about the validity of a vote, it is not included to make sure that no one double votes, he said.

"We put fail-safes in place to ensure everyone is a student and that no one votes twice," he said.

The ID number of students, as well as the student's college, polling site and date, are written on the ballot jacket. Votes are only valid if that information is on the jacket, and the jacket is turned in along with the ballot.

"You can't verify the votes come from a student if it's not in the jacket," he said, adding that without ballot jackets it's also impossible to verify if someone voted twice.

The student ID numbers on the ballot jackets are cross-checked against a list of ID numbers in the computer to uncover any duplicate votes, Zock said.

"Each year there are four to five duplicates," he said. "I personally don't want to jeopardize the outcome for all candidates for one candidate."

Final vote nears on bill to require notice about students on probation

BY PAUL DAVENPORT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — The Senate is near a final vote on a bill to require courts to tell schools when a student is on probation for a sex offense or dangerous crime. Parents and teachers could get the information on request.

The Senate gave the bill (SB 1395) preliminary approval on Monday. Passage on a formal vote would send the bill to the House.

Under the bill, courts would be required to notify a school district when a student attending a school in the district has been placed on probation for a sex offense or dangerous crime.

The district then would be required to notify the school, which then would have to make it available upon request to teachers and parents.

Also, a school district could request a student's criminal history from the courts to determine whether a student has been convicted in juvenile or adult court of sex offenses or dangerous crimes.

Sen. Gary Richardson, R-Tempe, said he sponsored the bill after a constituent complained that school officials and parents were not aware that a Tempe High School student already was on probation when charged last September in the rapes of two ASU students.

Lee Comier Jr. was placed on intensive probation in August in the beating of a 77-year-old woman at a Casa Grande health club in December 1996.

"Parents need to have the right to ask if there's anyone dangerous in their (children's) classes," Richardson said. "It's basically a safety issue."

Richardson said a district learning that a student has a criminal record covered by the measure could expel the student, take security precautions "and anything in between."

The bill originally would have permitted both districts and individual schools to request a student's criminal history, but Richardson on Monday won approval of an amendment to specify that such requests must go through its district.

That should limit the requests to a reasonable number, he said. "Instead of having thousands of requests, there may only be dozens or hundreds."

Opposition minimal to new day-use fee in national forest

PRESCOTT (AP) — Kristen Reale of Los Angeles is used to paying $5 to visit California beaches, so shelling out $2 to spend a day at Lynx Lake in the Prescott National Forest was no big deal.

"If they can keep it (money) here within the park and use it, that's great," said Reale, who was feeding ducks with her daughter at the lake just east of Prescott.

U.S. Forest Service officials say the new day-use fee at popular sites in the sprawling forest has met with little opposition since it was imposed on April 2 as part of a national test project. The fees will go toward improvements in the Prescott Basin, rather than be sent off to Washington, D.C.

Some residents grumbled about having to pay to visit the forest and thought the $50 annual pass too costly, but most tourists were understanding.

"Two dollars is an absolutely minuscule amount to pay to enjoy such beauty," said Bob Schafer of Colgate, Wis., a retiree who was enjoying a picnic with his wife at Thumb Butte west of Prescott.

Recreation planner Carol Majeske said other Forest Service fee demonstration projects around the country charge $5 daily fees.

"We decided on $2 because we want to be fair and get acceptance of the program," Majeske said.

Forest officials are already starting to prioritize projects they'll do with the money. There are plenty of needs, such as free small maps of each recreation area, Majeske said.

The Tempe police reported the following incidents Monday:

- A 41-year-old woman was arrested for disorderly conduct after she disturbed her neighbors by playing loud music on her stereo. She was warned two times on separate occasions to turn the music down but she repeatedly turned it back up after police left. Neighbors called a third time and the stereo was loud when police arrived. She was booked and transported to Tempe City Jail.
- A 49-year-old man was arrested for aggravated assault against his wife's ex-husband and son. The man pointed a gun at both victims at 2117 E. Howe Street and threatened to kill them. A few days later, he went to the police station to report witnessing a different assault case. During the investigation, it was discovered that he was the suspect in the aggravated assault case. He was walked downstairs and booked.

Amtrak train crash injures 20

By GEOFF BECKER
 ASSOCIATED PRESS
 CONWAY, Pa. — An Amtrak passenger train crashed today into cars from a freight train that derailed on an adjacent track, injuring 20 people.

Most of the injuries consisted of head, neck and back pain and some cuts and bruises, said William Pasquale Jr., director of operations for Medic Rescue.

"I'm sure they're sore, but they're lucky. It could have been a lot worse," he said.

The 16-car passenger train with 140 people aboard was Amtrak's Number 40 Three Rivers, with service from Chicago to New York.

The collision happened at about 7:45 a.m. in Conrail's Conway yard, a major shipping point about 20 miles west of Pittsburgh.

 A Conrail locomotive was assembling a 113-car freight train when a car derailed and was struck by the passing Amtrak train, Conrail spokesman Robert Lipkind said.

Seven Amtrak cars then derailed, including a dining car, three coaches, two mail cars and a baggage car, Amtrak spokesman Clifford Black said. All of those cars remained upright.

The accident then caused three more Conrail cars to derail, Lipkind said.

Nineteen passengers and one Amtrak crew member were taken to the Medical Center of Beaver. The remaining passengers were bused to Pittsburgh, where they were to resume travel on a later train, Black said.

No one was injured on the Conrail train.

Children find slain baby in pond

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — Three children who thought they spotted a doll wrapped in cellophane in a pond began screaming when they tried to retrieve it and realized it was a dead baby.

Authorities said the 8-pound baby boy was killed soon after he was born. The children discovered the newborn Saturday while fishing in a park near an interstate highway in this northwestern Indiana city.

"We believe the baby was alive and healthy when it was born and that it was born near the pond," Detective Brian Miller said Sunday.

The children saw an object floating near shore, and thought it was a doll. But when the oldest child waded into the shallow water and began retrieving it, the baby's hand popped out of the water, and the 13-year-old realized it wasn't a doll.

The children's screams alerted men playing softball nearby, and they called police.

Lake County Coroner Thomas Philpott said the infant's body showed signs of hemorrhaging around the neck and chest. The baby's umbilical cord was cut and the placenta was found near the bank of the pond.

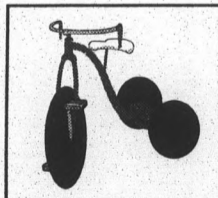

Police were asking residents to report any women who appeared to be pregnant recently but no longer seem pregnant and do not have a newborn child.

Five stories entered in Pulitzer contest received challenges

NEW YORK (AP) — At least five entries for Pulitzer Prizes this year were challenged for accuracy or fairness by outside parties during the judging process, the Pulitzer administrator said Monday.

The number of such lobbying efforts was greater this year than any time since the board decided in 1994 to let Pulitzer juries see outside challenges, according to Seymour Topping, administrator of the prizes in journalism and the arts.

This year's winners are being announced today.

Pulitzer juries consider hundreds of entries submitted by newspapers in 14 categories and nominate three for the coveted prizes. The Pulitzer Prize Board at Columbia University chooses the winners.

Topping said he personally screens the challenges and then passes along those with substance to the juries.

He said the challenges all have been in the newspaper categories, none in arts and letters.

The efforts to influence the outcome, first reported by The New York Times, was described as beneficial by some board members and former jurors.

"I welcome them," said Geneva Overholser, chairwoman of the Pulitzer board and ombudsman of The Washington Post. "It's better to hear about a problem before rather than after."

"Unless an entry's going to be at the top of the list, you don't pay attention to the complaint. If it is, I want to know everything about it," said board member Andrew Barnes, editor, president and CEO of the St. Petersburg Times in Florida.

Matt Storin, editor of The Boston Globe, which entered a series on police misconduct, said: "Challenges are legiti-mate, but should be withheld until an entry makes it to the finals."

The Globe stories prompted a complaining letter from the police department to the entire Pulitzer board and attracted national attention after the newspaper reported the police had obtained a copy of the newspaper's entry, which Storin called a private document.

Storin said five-member juries burdened with judging as many as 150 entries don't have time to consider a challenge in detail and might use it as a way to pare the list.

William German, editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, said he wouldn't want to encourage complaining letters.

"But part of the rules should be that whoever's accused is given a chance to respond. Then trust the jurors and the board to be just," German said.

The Chronicle submission of a series on the way disabled children are assigned to foster care was the target of a complaint.

The other entries challenged by letter writers were The Seattle Times stories on reprocessing of hazardous materials into fertilizer, The Philadelphia Inquirer series on financial operations of the board of Girard College and The Tennessean of Nashville's stories on environmental danger around Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Topping and others familiar with the Pulitzers said they thought the challenges came because people assumed certain types of stories were being put up for prizes.

"I've been a juror and you welcome information," said Tennessean editor and vice president Frank Sutherland. "Good investigative stories make somebody mad."

Sexual harassment insurance raises red flags

By MAGGIE JACKSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

For years, executives at Astra USA pressured women workers for sex and punished those who objected. Yet in the midst of its troubles, the drugmaker was able to buy sexual harassment insurance.

The company recently agreed to pay a record $10 million to settle a harassment lawsuit, restructured its personnel department and implemented sexual harassment training. But the case highlights serious questions raised by the recent corporate drive to buy harassment insurance.

Are insurers looking closely enough at the companies they sell to? Will companies — which spend up to $500,000 a year on the insurance — relax once their coffers are protected?

"There's a danger that sexual harassment can become just a cost of doing business for those who've invested in insurance coverage," said Jonathan Turley, a law professor at George Washington University.

Companies insured for sexual harassment will have less incentive to avoid lawsuits because their legal costs won't come out of their own pockets, he said. "Corporate cultures respond to the bottom line."

Insurer David Sterling, meanwhile, believes the industry is lowering its standards of risk assessment in order to sell more policies. "There are so many insurance companies competing, those (pre-sale) demands have dropped," he said. Other insurers disagree.

Michael Furgueson, vice president of Chubb Insurance, said most insurers check a company's programs carefully. But he said he "can't say every underwriting process is flawless in uncovering what goes on in a company."

Before selling a policy, insurers typically check company rules on sexual harassment, financial statements and past lawsuits or allegations. After a policy is sold, some insurers offer more in-depth advice on a com-ny's risk of being sued.

It's not hard to see why companies are shopping for coverage. Sexual harassment charges filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission rose to 15,889 last year from 6,883 in 1991, while monetary settlements paid to victims leaped to nearly $50 million last year from $7 million seven years ago.

"We're not even chasing people to buy this coverage," said Sterling, co-owner of Sterling & Sterling insurance brokers in Great Neck, N.Y.

Sterling has been selling four policies a week for the last few months — a period when Paula Jones' sex harassment lawsuit against President Clinton made headlines before being thrown out of court. A year ago, he sold two policies a month.

Companies don't buy a specific harassment policy. Rather, they purchase Employment Practices Liability Insurance, created in the early 1990s to cover harassment, wrongful termination and discrimination. Still, insurers say fears of harassment suits are driving sales — and the increasing size of the coverage.

Midsize companies that wanted $2.5 million in coverage last year now are asking for $10 million limits, said Lisa DeSimone, vice president of employment practices liability at Reliance National insurers. Companies pay up to $500,000 for $25 million in coverage, she said.

At Astra, harassment of women began at least as far back as 1993, according to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. A year later, the Westborough, Mass., company purchased Employment Practices Liability Insurance. The EEOC began investigating complaints from women employees in 1996.

"Our insurance brokers advised us that this was a trend in the industry and it was an investment we would want to consider," said Astra spokeswoman Ann Gillespie, who refused to name the insurer or the size of the policy.

Police investigating alleged hazing injuries that landed pledges in hospital

By TODD SPANGLER
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

PRINCESS ANNE, Md. — Five college students were beaten so severely with wooden paddles and canes during a two-month fraternity initiation they had to be hospitalized, state police said Monday.

Some of the pledges of Kappa Alpha Psi at the University of Maryland, Eastern Shore underwent surgery last week for cuts and infections on their buttocks from being spanked daily from Feb. 8 to April 4, according to police and family members.

"Anyone who would do this to someone else is a vicious animal," said Cynthia Pinkney, whose son, Andre Smith Clemensia, a 19-year-old from Clinton, was among those injured.

No arrests have been made.

The university on Monday suspended Kappa Alpha Psi, canceling all the fraternity's activities at the small, historically black college until the investigation is complete.

The chapter president of Kappa Alpha Psi told university officials the injuries occurred at a function in Baltimore and were not related to the fraternity's initiation, according to a release issued by UMES.

Police said one student was released from the hospital during the weekend. Hospital officials would not provide any information on the other students' conditions nor say whether they were still hospitalized.

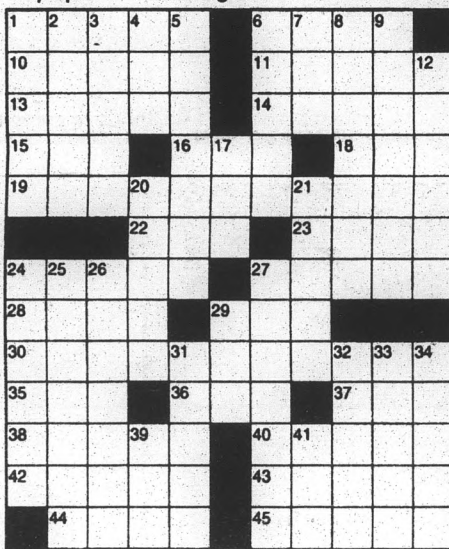

Richard Snow, executive director of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity Inc., based in Philadelphia, said the fraternity takes hazing very seriously.

"We prosecute anyone, or assist in prosecuting anyone, who participates in an illegal act under name of Kappa Alpha Psi," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sean Lennon believes the government was behind the slaying of his father, John Lennon.

"He was a countercultural revolutionary, and the government takes that kind of (stuff) really seriously historically," the 22-year-old Lennon said in the latest New Yorker.

Mark Chapman is in prison after pleading guilty to shooting the ex-Beatle in front of his Manhattan apartment house in 1980. Chapman said he was influenced by Catcher in the Rye and a voice in his head that told him "Do it! Do it! Do it!"

Lennon, a singer himself, said anyone who believes Chapman was "just some crazy guy who killed my dad for his personal interests is insane, I think, or very naive, or hasn't thought about it clearly."

Why would the government want his father dead?

"He was dangerous to the government. If he had said, 'Bomb the White House tomorrow,' there would have been 10,000 people who would have done it," Lennon said. "These pacifist revolutionaries are historically killed by the government."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bonnie Raitt experiments so much with her sound on her latest album that even one of her producers fretted she might lose some fans.

Mitchell Froom was surprised Raitt was willing to tinker with her bluesy sound on Fundamental, which incorporates African and Celtic elements for a more vintage sound.

"He said, 'Are you going to alienate fans you finally got on board? Are they going to get it?' My answer is that the ones who actually do understand me will applaud that I'm stretching," the Grammy-award winner said in Monday's USA Today.

"If people don't get it, I don't think anybody is going to begrudge me," she said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Aretha Franklin says she wasn't trying to prove her versatility when she filled in for Luciano Pavarotti at the Grammys.

"I'm sure many people were surprised; but I'm not there to prove anything," the queen of soul told The Associated Press on Thursday. "Not necessary."

Franklin drew rave reviews for her performance of "Nessun Dorma" from Puccini's Turandot. She filled in for an ailing Pavarotti with only a few minutes notice.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After ending her ten-season run as hard-boiled journalist "Murphy Brown," Candice Bergen did something unlike her character — she sobbed uncontrollably.

"We were fine up until Friday morning (March 13, the day they taped the last show), and then it hit," she said in Monday's Los Angeles Times. "I burst into tears in front of George Clooney."

Clooney was making a guest appearance on the final episode of the CBS show.

"Afterwards, I went to thank him and he said, 'Are you OK?' and ... I couldn't stop crying. I just had to walk away. But we're fine now. We had a great time, a great ride."

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is giving up his habit of handing out $30 cigars.

Last week, the Yediot Ahronot newspaper reported that his office spent about $3,000 a month on cigars.

As an opposition leader, Netanyahu preferred Cuban cigars. As prime minister, he switched to a brand from the Dominican Republic so as not to anger U.S. officials, the newspaper said.

Former Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said when he was in office, he would offer his guests a cup of tea.

No. 16 ASU embarrasses No. 6 USC, heads to Oklahoma

Infielder Mike Collins slides safely into third base Saturday during ASU's 24-4 shacking of USC. The Sun Devils will be in Oklahoma tonight at 7 Arizona time to battle the No. 11 Sooners.

By LORI HARO
STATE PRESS

When the ASU baseball team beat USC 18-3 Thursday night it was USC's most devastating loss in years and its lowest run total of the season.

However, the No. 16 Sun Devils (27-14, 14-6 Pac-10 Southern Division) must have felt the loss wasn't embarrassing enough as they proceeded to destroy whatever Trojan pride was left Saturday when they shellacked USC 24-4.

It was the worst loss in the history of Trojan baseball. No. 6 USC (29-11, 14-7 Six-Pac) has dropped six of their last eight games.

The win however, moved ASU into second place of the Six-Pac, clinched a sweep of USC and extended its win streak to seven. It was the Sun Devils' third consecutive Six-Pac sweep.

ASU will try to continue its win streak tonight when it takes on No. 11 Oklahoma (29-8) in Oklahoma. Earlier this season, the Sun Devils split a two-game series with the Sooners. Lefty Drew Friedberg is slated to start for ASU.

The wind was a definite factor in the game moving out to left at about 35 miles per hour the entire game.

And with Phill Lowery pitching for the Sun Devils, the wind was not just a factor, but a concern, as Lowery had already given up 19 home runs on the season.

But the Trojans only got one homer off Lowery who earned his seventh win (7-4) of the year. In five innings Lowery only gave up two runs on five hits with three walks and five strikeouts. Freshman Chad Pennington got his first save allowing only two runs on four hits with three walks and five strikeouts in four innings.

"I've (surrendered) 19 home runs already. I wasn't really excited about the wind factor at all," Lowery said. "This is how we can play all the time. Granted 24 runs, that's unbelievable. But the way we hit the ball and threw the ball, that's the way we're capable of playing."

The Sun Devils however, came away with five home runs by left fielder Willie Bloomquist (3), second baseman Richy Leon (3), shortstop Michael Collins (3), third baseman Andrew Beinbrink (9) and first baseman Jeff Phelps (3).

ASU got nine runs on only three hits in a third inning that was helped by three Trojan errors and four consecutive walks. USC's starter Rik Currier was relieved in the third after giving up a single, walking two and throwing two wild pitches, one of which designated hitter Casey Myers came home on.

Currier received his first loss (3-1) after giving up six runs on five hits with five walks and one strikeout in only two innings.

The Sun Devils exploded again in the fifth inning for eight runs on seven hits, including three home runs with Leon's solo, Beinbrink's three-run shot and Collins' two-run round-tripper.

"I knew if I got it up in the air, it would go out," Collins said. "I'll take it though."

Bloomquist hit ASU's first home run in the fourth, while Phelps hit the last in the sixth.

"When it's real windy like this everybody's thinking, 'Boy if he gets a ball up I can hit one in the gap or hit one out of here,'" ASU head coach Pat Murphy said. "It's a real testament to them and to their discipline to stay off bad pitches and to take what they give you."

"And to understand that even though we got ahead 12-2 only in the third inning you've got to stay with it and to put up 12

Gill's homers not enough as No. 1 UofA sweeps Sun Devils

By DOUG FLANAGAN
STATE PRESS

TUCSON — Third baseman Chris Gill hit two home runs — including a dramatic, three-run fifth inning blast that momentarily tied the second game at three — at Hillenbrand Stadium Friday night against top-ranked UofA.

That was the good news for ASU. The bad news was no other player was able to back up Gill offensively.

The ninth-ranked Sun Devils' inability to support its cleanup hitter, in part, resulted in a Wildcat doubleheader sweep witnessed by a packed house of 2,237 fans — 7-2 in the first contest and 5-3 in the nightcap.

"Gill brings us back, you know, puts it out," ASU head coach Linda Wells said about Gill's second home run, which came off of Becky Lemke. "She's just awesome, but we gotta help her a little more. (Jennifer) Gall helped her from in front of her, (but) we didn't have much behind her tonight."

ASU (27-13, 3-7 Pac-10) could muster just five hits in the first game off of Wildcat ace Nancy Evans (22-1). In the second inning, Gill's leadoff home run and a run-scoring double by first baseman Lesley-Ann Murphy gave the Sun Devils a 2-0 lead. However, UofA (43-3, 9-1 Pac-10) responded with two runs of their own in their half of the second, including a leadoff home run by third baseman Leticia Pineda, and added three more in the next inning to cushion the lead.

Carrie Breedlove (10-9) took the loss for ASU, giving up seven runs on 11 hits.

UofA got out to a 3-0 lead in the second game and carried it into the fourth inning, when centerfielder Devyn Braga led off with a single to left field. Two batters later, Gall walked and Gill followed with her second home run of the night.

Gill now has seven career home runs, with three of them coming at Hillenbrand.

"I know the fence (at Hillenbrand) is shorter than ours," Gill said. "I like the high pitch, (and) they're going to throw me there." UofA responded in the bottom of the fifth off ASU pitcher Roxanne Tsosie (17-4), scoring two runs to take a 5-3 lead. ASU had an opportunity to once again come back in the top of the sixth, but was unable to capitalize. Right fielder Jennifer Langenhuizen led off with a walk, and Gall proceeded with a single to left.

A wild pitch by Lemke allowed Langenhuizen and Gall to advance a base, but with runners on second and third, no outs, and the four-five-six batters coming up, ASU was unable to score. Gill struck out, and second baseman Holly Smith and Murphy grounded out to Evans at shortstop.

The Sun Devils also put together a threat in the seventh, but once again were stifled by Lemke (15-2). Leftfielder Melissa Miller drew a two-out walk, and Braga struck out, but the ball got by catcher Leah Braatz and Braga was able to scamper to first. Langenhuizen then ended the game by grounding out to Lemke.

Wells expressed displeasure with her team's lackadaisical attitude, but still reiterated the fact that her squad is still among the nation's best.

"We got 13 and we need 13 playing. We got 13, and we got about nine playing," she said. "We don't have everyone playing with the same intensity that we do our pitchers. If everybody had to go out and pitch and play every single pitch like our pitchers, they would, like, wake up and smell the roses."

"But, you know, I definitely think we've got a good team ... I think there was less of a gap from one to nine (in the polls) than there might have been. They've lost three games all year. They're very good, (a) very excellent team, but are they eight spots better? Well, I don't know. We played pretty close."

AROUND THE HORN

Despite the fact that Langenhuizen went 0-2 with a walk and a sacrifice in the second game doesn't mean she didn't have a memorable experience. For the first time ever, she went up to bat against Lemke, a former teammate at Horizon High School.

Langenhuizen and Lemke led Horizon to the Arizona state 5A title in 1997 as seniors.

"It was really cool because I've never faced her before," Langenhuizen said. "I've always been on the same team as her, so it was really interesting. I was more anxious than anything."

RED HOT SUN DEVILS

JEREMY JONES
BASEBALL

Jones had an 8-for-10 weekend in ASU's three wins over USC. The Sun Devil catcher had two singles and one double in both Thursday's and Friday's games and three doubles in ASU's 24-4 blow out Saturday. Jones scored seven runs and had three RBI total in the series.

MIKA LAIHO
TRACK & FIELD

Laiho broke the school's record in the hammer throw — again. The senior threw a personal-best 72.26 meters (237 feet, one inch) to capture the event by over 40 feet at this weekend's Sun Angel Classic. Laiho also won this event at last year's Sun Angel Classic.

CHRISTINE GILL
SOFTBALL

Gill, a sophomore, continued her assault of ASU's all-time lead in home runs this weekend in Tucson. The third baseman smashed a homer in both games of the doubleheader, which UofA swept, giving her six on the year and seven in her career. The Sun Devil record is seven in a season and 16 in a career.

DANNY FELIX
WRESTLING

Felix won his second University Freestyle Nationals title last weekend in Evanston, Ill., with a 6-0 victory over Oklahoma's Dang Valdez in the 127.5 pound finals. It is the sixth national title for Felix, a senior, who was a 1995 All-American and three-time Pac-10 Champion for ASU.

Sun Devils look to be No. 1 in state

By CARLO MERCALDO
STATE PRESS

The 35th-ranked ASU men's tennis team (8-10, 3-8 Pac-10) will stake its claim as the best team in Arizona this week, as it closes out the regular season against in-state rivals NAU today and UofA on Saturday.

Both matches will be played at 1:30 p.m. at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

Over the weekend, the Sun Devils continued the streaky play that has marked their season all year by following up a sweep of Washington and Oregon last week with losses to No. 1 Stanford (19-0, 9-0 Pac-10) and No. 28 Cal (14-4, 7-3 Pac-10). ASU has not won or lost more than two consecutive matches in over two months.

The team was shutout, 7-0, by Stanford on Friday in a match where the Cardinal may have been exacting some pay back.

ASU became the first team in over a year to win the doubles point against Stanford, during the Tempe meeting between the two schools, March 28. That fact had apparently not escaped the memory of the Cardinal, who came out determined not to let that happen again, dropping only one set (No. 2 singles) to the shell-shocked Sun Devils.

ASU fared a little better in the Cal match on Saturday, where Gustavo Marcaccio and Peter Dani won matches at the No. 1 and 5 singles positions, respectively. Cal's depth was too much in the end, though, and the final result was the same, another loss for the Sun Devils.

The team is hopeful that this season of ups and downs will end on another upswing, and that the true ASU tennis team will show up this week and stick around for the NCAA Regionals, May 15-17.

"At times we've played well but we still haven't really shown how good we are yet," junior Casey Was said after the Washington match. "We have so much potential and it's gonna come out soon, everyone is really starting to come together right now, these matches coming up are huge for us."

Gustavo Marcaccio agreed that the team is just now starting to come together but added that doing well in Regionals is the most important thing.

"The most important part of the season is still coming up and that is Regionals," Marcaccio said before the Stanford match. "The regular season is really just a preparation to do well in Regionals."

Even though the team has struggled somewhat recently, the 1998 season is proving to be one of the most successful the program has seen in years. ASU's top three singles players have all posted at least 20 wins this year.

It marks the first time since the 1994-95 squad made it to the NCAA National Championship that that has happened. Gustavo Marcaccio leads the team with a 24-10 mark, followed by Alex Osterrieth at 20-12 and Ed Carter at 20-15.

Jeremy Hein/State Press
Sophomore Alex Osterrieth and the rest of the ASU men's tennis team will go for a sweep of the state this week, hosting NAU today at 1:30 p.m. at the Whiteman Tennis Center and UofA on Saturday.

more runs in the next three innings ... That's one thing about this team you can always be assured — they're always going to play hard."

The Trojans got their first two runs in the third when third baseman Morgan Ensberg hit a two-run homer. Their third and fourth runs were scored in the sixth off of center fielder Rod Perry's triple to right.

All Sun Devil starters reached base and three had three-hit days. Catcher

Jeremy Jones was 3-for-3, all doubles, with three RBI and four runs scored. Beinbrink was 3-for-4 with three RBI and three runs scored. Collins also knocked in three runs going 2-for-3. Bloomquist was 3-for-6 with two RBI and two runs scored.

In Friday night's game, ASU beat USC by a 7-5 score. With the game tied at the bottom of the eighth inning, Bloomquist cleared the bases with a double to left to give the Sun Devils the lead and the win. Leon started the game going 5 1/3 innings allowing three runs on three hits with four walks and five strikeouts.

Aaron Kramer got the win (5-2) giving up only two runs on three hits with two walks and two strikeouts in three 2/3 innings.

Mike Penney and Jason Lane combined to give up seven runs on eight hits, walking seven and striking out three. Lane received the loss (4-1).

FROM THE BACKSTOP

•Ryan Mills was named as a Collegiate Baseball National Player of the Week for his efforts in Thursday's 18-3 win over USC. Mills went eight innings giving up only two runs on three hits with five walks while striking out a season-high 15. The last time a pitcher struck out 15 Trojan batters was 1992.

•Beinbrink and Mills were named Pac-10 Southern Division Player and Pitcher of the Week, respectively, for their efforts against USC.

Laiho breaks school record again

By DOUG FLANAGAN
STATE PRESS

ASU senior hammer thrower Mika Laiho has a theory: records are made to be broken.

Especially when it's your own record.

Laiho continued his domination in the event on Saturday at the windswept 19th annual Sun Angel Classic, posting a personal-best and school record toss of 237-feet, 1 inch (72.26 meters) to easily capture victory. Peter Lindstrahl, who came in second, was nearly 40 feet back (198').

The throw was a result of a new, more rigorous training program instilled by Laiho the week leading up to the meet.

"Mika busted open a can of whoop ass tonight," said Jared Schrieber, who placed third in the javelin with a throw of 214-3.

Also in the winner's circle for ASU was the women's 4x400 relay team. By placing first with a time of 3 minutes, 37.79 seconds, they provisionally qualified for the NCAA Championships.

Arlaina Davis ran the opening leg in a time of 54.7, handing the baton off to Dawnyell Linder in second place. However, Linder was able to overtake the competition and pull ASU ahead with a time of 53.4. She gave way to Christie Winkle, who held the Sun Devils' standing with a time of 56.4. Joronda White (No. 237) sprinted home in a time of 52.8 to claim victory.

According to ASU head coach Greg Kraft, Winkle's ability to keep ASU in the lead was crucial.

"That was a tremendous breakthrough for Christie Winkle on the quarter," he said. "I was like, ohhhhhhh, then uhhhh, and then she finished, and it's like, OK. She did it. Now she needs to do it again."

According to members of the team, the main goal was a spot at the NCAA meet, not a championship.

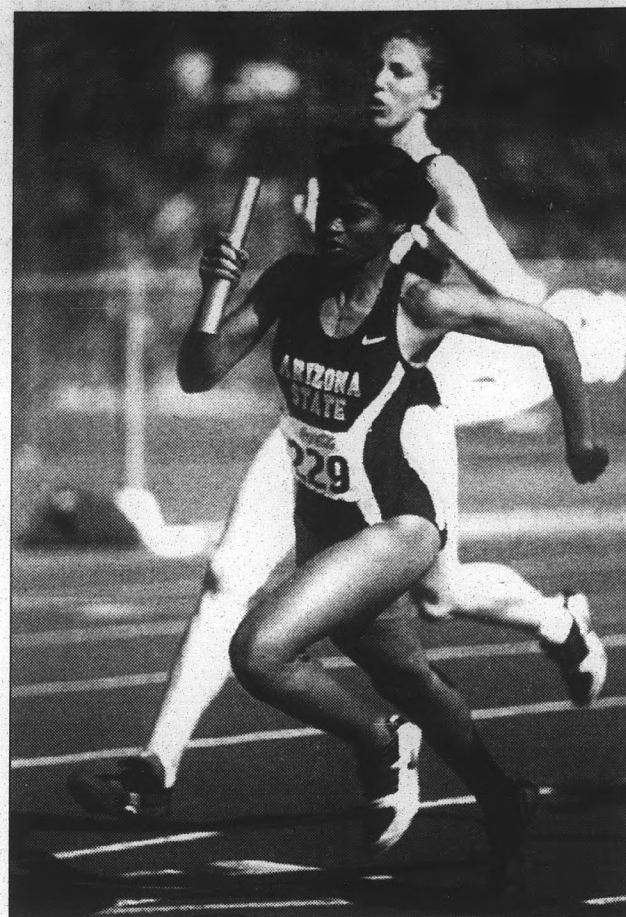

"Winning is not the issue," Linder said. "Qualifying is the issue."

"We need to put the relay higher on the list, because 3:37 is a provisional qualifier, it's not automatic," White said. "We don't know how many teams will qualify automatic, so we want to get as close to, if not qualifying automatic, as possible."

Other Sun Devils in the top three included Charity Amama, second in the javelin (156-6); Tony Hazard, second in the long jump (23-5 1/2); the women's 4x100 relay team, second (45.42); Linder, second in the 200 (24.30); and Fiona Daly, third in the high jump (5-7).

Kraft said he was pleased with his team's performance at the high-profile meet, and is starting to see the improvement he needs to see as the season heads towards the Pac-10 and NCAA Championships.

"The main thing for us is learning to compete each and every day," he said. "And I think we're starting to do that ... We're young, we're thin and we need everybody to hit on the same day. But I think they're starting to understand, I think they're getting some confidence, and I think we're making some definite growth. It's not where we want to be, but we're definitely going in the direction that we want to go."

Scott Samplin/State Press
Arlaina Davis (#229) receives the baton from Christie Winkle in the 4x100 event at Saturday's Sun Angel Classic. The two helped ASU claim second in the 4x100 and a first place finish in the 4x400.

Felix captures 2nd UFN title

By SCOTT LEWIS
STATE PRESS

ASU senior Danny Felix is no stranger to being a champion.

Entering the 1997-98 wrestling season, the 1995 All-American had won three Pac-10 Championships and five national titles.

Last weekend at the University Freestyle Nationals in Evanston, Ill., Felix took home his sixth national title with a 6-0 victory over Oklahoma's Dane Valdez in the 127.5-pound finals. Felix did not give up a point during the tournament, which also included a 3-0 semifinal victory over Valdez's twin brother Shane.

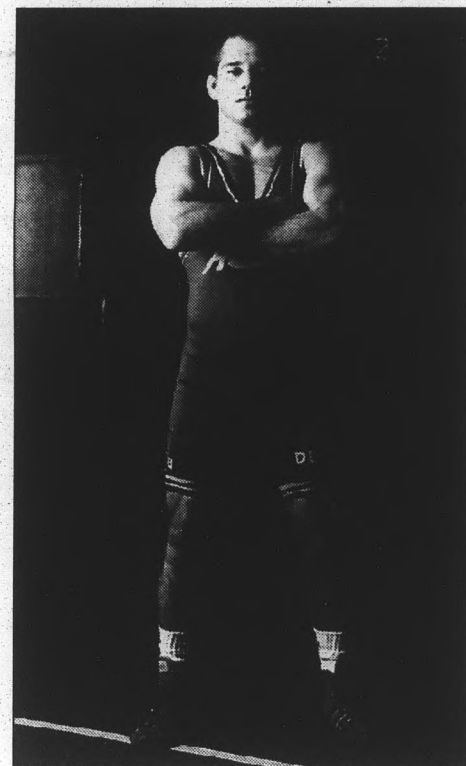

"I just felt unbeatable," Felix said. "I was hungry."

For Felix, who was fifth at 126 pounds in the NCAA pre-season rankings, his appetite was fueled by a season-long suspension that cost him his senior year. Felix owns up to his past run-ins with the law, but he feels that ASU "drug out" his suspension.

This championship, Felix's second University Nationals title, gives him a little vindication after a season that could have been.

"I wanted to cry after I won," Felix said. "I was so happy, mad, sad. Everything was built up inside of me from not being able to compete this year."

Felix, a two-time Cadet Champion, as well as a Junior Nationals and Esquire Champion, will now prepare for the prestigious U.S. Open in Orlando, Fla. He will graduate in May with a Studio Arts degree. From there, Felix will go into full-time training as he attempts to compete in the 2000 Olympics.

ASU Media Relations
Senior Danny Felix won his sixth national championship last weekend at the University Freestyle Nationals in Evanston, Ill.

As his accomplishments show — and as the national titles build up — there is no one who can stop Felix from achieving his goals on the mat.

"It is inevitable," Felix said. "I will be an Olympic Champion."

Women's tennis downed 5-4 twice

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The No. 8 ASU women's tennis team was edged 5-4 in weekend matches to No. 1 Stanford on Friday and No. 10 Cal on Saturday.

The losses dropped the Sun Devils to 12-6 on the season and 4-5 in the Pac-10 Southern Division.

Saturday's match came down to the No. 1 doubles match, Sun Devils Stephanie Lansdorp and Katy Propstra against Amanda Augustus and Amy Jensen. The team score was at 4-4 before Augustus and Jensen defeated Lansdorp and Propstra 8-6 for the Golden Bears' win.

Three Sun Devils won their singles matches. ASU upset the Nos. 1 and 2 positions. No. 29 Reka Cseresnyes beat No. 6 Augustus 6-3, 6-2 and No. 39 Karin Palme upset No. 34 Esther Knox 6-4, 6-3. Propstra won her match 6-2, 6-3 against Anita Kurimay.

Cseresnyes and Palme were the only doubles team to win. ASU's No. 3 doubles duo beat Francesca La'O and Jenny Lee 8-5.

In Friday's contest, the Sun Devils swept the doubles matches, but could only muster one singles win, Palme's impressive three-set upset over No. 4 Julie Scott 6-2, 0-6, 6-4.

Lansdorp and Propstra defeated Anne Kremer and Teryn Ashley 8-1. Alison Nash and Celena McCoury beat Scott and Ania Bleszynski 8-4 and Cseresnyes and Palme beat Jennifer Herser and Sarah Pestieau 8-3.

The Sun Devils travel to Tucson to take on in-state rival UofA Saturday. The meeting between Wildcats and Sun Devils marks ASU's last regular season and conference game.
