INTERNET GAMBLING

Know when to hold 'em, know when to fold 'em:
 Computing Commons workers struggling with Internet gamblers

BY ASHLEY DEYING
 SPECIAL TO THE STATE PRESS

Sports betting at ASU is only a computer away. Internet gambling is legal in all states except Florida, Missouri, Minnesota and Wisconsin," said Rodney Barker, a telephone operator at Oasis Casino, a Dutch company operating in the Caribbean that provides its customers the ability to gamble over the Internet or the telephone.

"Local governments for those states have passed laws restricting the use of Internet gambling because they don't want their residents to use our system."

Students working at ASU's Computing Commons don't seem to have any trouble finding the system and are betting, even though the building's policies forbid it.

"The Internet does not know state boundaries. Internet gambling sites can be accessed on any computer, and ASU computers are no exception," said Bill Lewis, vice provost for Information Technology at ASU.

"There is an appropriate use clause that says that students will not use their school account for non-university functions. Every student who opens an account through ASU must agree with this clause before they receive their account."

However, students' activities at ASU's computing sites are not monitored unless a legal case is involved that forces Information Technology to do so, Lewis said.

Internet gambling is "opening up Pandora's box," Lewis said. "Most Internet users are younger people and are not required to prove themselves of age before accessing these gambling sites."

Oasis Casino is among several web addresses that appear when the word "gambling" is typed in a web search. The company has been operating in the Caribbean for almost seven months, Barker said.

"We do not know which types of people are accessing our sites," he added. "We simply require a minimum charge of $200 to open an account, and give incentives to those who deposit more. Funds must be received via either money order or wire transfer."

All of the listed gambling sites require a minimum deposit of $200, and "most require that users bet a minimum of $50 for bets made via telephone, and $1 for bets made over the Internet," Barker said.

Sen. John Kyl, R-Ariz., has introduced a bill titled, "Internet Gambling Prohibition Act" that would penalize any person who knowingly uses a communications service for the transmission or receipt of bets or wagers.

If passed, this bill will authorize the Federal Communication Commission to regulate virtual gambling and to act against Internet service providers that provide interstate or foreign transmission of gambling information.

On these Internet sites, students can bet on events like the NCAA Tournament, or on professional teams like the Suns, Diamondbacks, Coyotes and Cardinals.

There are a variety of bets available, including parlays, which allow the user to select more than one team to win. If all of the teams selected by the user win, the payout is much higher than a straight bet, Barker said.

Oasis Casino also has several proposition bets on most games, such as who will collect more points, Michael Jordan or Shaquille O'Neal, or if Coyotes captain Keith Tkachuk scores against the Chicago Blackhawks.

"Students need to be cautious," said Rob Kubasko, content and design director at the Computer Commons "The Internet is in its infancy, and students need to realize that gambling is not a get-rich-quick scheme."

Bush comes to campus

BY BECKY BEVINS
 STATE PRESS

The Associated Students of ASU are coughing up more than $70,000 to bring former President George Bush to campus for the "Insuring Tomorrow" conference tentatively scheduled for the first week in May.

"We are beating the bushes, so to speak, to come up with sponsors from businesses and private donations," said ASASU President Andy Ortiz, sitting at his desk in front of autographed photos of former President Bush and former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Colin Powell.

ASASU has secured $55,396 toward the $75,000 that it will cost for President Bush to grace the ASU campus with his thoughts on leadership.

This money includes ASASU allocated funds, private donations from corporations such as Pepsi, and donations from deans of several colleges who feel that the Bush visit is worthwhile.

Ortiz is not at all unfamiliar with Bush or his views. As an undergraduate in 1991, Ortiz was recognized as one of George Bush's "Thousand Points of Light" for his volunteer service.

"This is an opportunity for the average everyday student to get a message of leadership from a national figure," Ortiz said. "I mean, student leaders like me get to meet people like this all the time, not all students got an invitation to have breakfast with Henry Kissinger like I did."

Sen. Paul Peterson, College of Public Programs, said Bush was not the first choice for the conference.

Governor appoints McKay new ABOR regent

BY KAREN YAMADA
 STATE PRESS

Gov. Jane Dee Hull announced Wednesday the appointment of Kay McKay as the newest member of the Arizona Board of Regents, replacing the seat vacated by the resignation of Kurt Davis in January.

McKay, 55, is currently executive director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Flagstaff and has been active in the national organization for more than 25 years.

"I am delighted to appoint Kay McKay to the Arizona Board of Regents," Hull said. "Her extensive involvement in the community and commitment to Flagstaff made her an obvious choice."

McKay said she was honored and humbled by the appointment.

"I've been a regent for 22 minutes now," McKay said. "I was asked to submit my resume about six weeks or so ago to the governor, so I knew my name was in the hat. I was really excited to be appointed a regent and I'm already going off to Nashville this weekend to attend a new board member development workshop.

"My role now is to hit the floor running — to listen and inform myself. What I want to bring is a real fair-minded, information-based approach to problem solving."

McKay will serve the six-year term remaining from Davis' appointment.

"I will still go through the confirmation process (by the Legislature) but my understanding is that I'm a regent with the governor's announcement today."

"We contacted Colin Powell and Jimmy Carter as well, but we were unable to get them here, then we contacted Bush's office and he is going to be in Phoenix around that time anyway so it seemed to work out," Peterson said.

Ortiz said that having a speaker of Bush's magnitude and stature will bring publicity to the University and will also allow ASU students to hear thoughts on leadership from a man that was once the most powerful leader in the world.

"We are giving ourselves until Friday, if we don't have the money by then we are going to forget it and try something else," Ortiz said.

Palestinian held without charge in Israel released

BY SAMAR ASSAD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

RAMALLAH, West Bank — A leader of a radical PLO faction held for nearly six years without charge was unexpectedly released from jail Wednesday, and Israeli media said he was freed in exchange for a pledge not to carry out attacks against Israel.

Ahmed Qatamesh, 46, was the longest-held prisoner under what Israel calls "administrative detention," which allows prisoners to be held indefinitely without trial. Thousands of Palestinians were detained this way during the 1987-1993 Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation.

Qatamesh, considered the West Bank leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a radical PLO faction, said after his release that he would "continue to incite against the (Israeli) occupation."

But Israeli media reported that Qatamesh and four other members of the PFLP made a deal with Israel, signing a statement renouncing violence against the Jewish state, in exchange for their release.

Qatamesh, who has never publicly admitted to membership in the PFLP, refused to confirm the reports on state-run Israel TV and Israeli Channel 2 TV.

"I think they got bored and gave up," he told reporters. "I think they realized that prison cannot change and will not change my ideas and thoughts."

The PFLP opposes Israeli-Palestinian peace agreements and has carried out deadly attacks in the past, including a December 1996 killing of an Israeli woman and her 12-year-old son in a drive-by shooting in the West Bank.

A second PFLP activist, Hassan Fafafta, 35, was also released Wednesday after serving four years in administrative detention, said Qatamesh's lawyer, Jawad Boulos. Israel TV said Fafafta and a third man freed last week had also signed the agreement, along with two other PFLP members expected to be released soon.

Qatamesh said he was happy to be home, but also felt "extreme anger and frustration" over the five years and eight months he was in prison.

His mother and father died while he was in prison, and Qatamesh visited their graves Wednesday on his way home to Ramallah.

"Both I and thousands of Palestinian young men have lost part of their lives due to a policy that has proven to be a failure on the level of security," he said.

In all, about 200 Palestinians and Lebanese are currently held without charges. Some of them have been imprisoned for several years.

Ahmed Qatamesh, right, hugs his daughter Haneen, 8, as he is welcomed home in the West Bank town of Ramallah Wednesday. Qatamesh, a senior leader of the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, was imprisoned without charges for nearly six years under administrative detention orders.

Former apartheid leader stands trial

BY PAUL HARRIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

GEORGE, South Africa — South Africa's past confronted its present Wednesday when apartheid-era President P.W. Botha — still defiant in his beliefs — appeared before a black judge on charges of refusing to cooperate with the national Truth and Reconciliation Commission.

At the trial's start Wednesday, Botha learned that some of his defiance was in vain: His court case is going to delve into his actions as South Africa's last hard-line apartheid president — just as a Truth Commission hearing would have done.

Botha, 82, sat stone-faced as prosecutors presented a barrage of evidence that the State Security Council he headed in the 1980s may have authorized the killing of anti-apartheid activists.

But during a break in proceedings, he spoke defiantly to the reporters who took up most of the public gallery.

"Even if they destroy me, they cannot destroy my soul and my convictions," said the man once called the "Big Crocodile" for his inflexible leadership style.

The case before black magistrate Victor Lugaju highlights racial divisions in South Africa after the nation's first all-race election in 1994 ended white minority rule.

The commission was created by President Nelson Mandela's government to uncover apartheid-era crimes. Botha has called it a circus and vowed he would never testify before it in person.

His intransigence has made him a rallying point for right-wingers who consider the commission biased against whites, especially Afrikaners, the Dutch-descended white settlers who ruled during apartheid.

"In his view we have done nothing but humiliate his people," said Desmond Tutu, the retired Anglican archbishop who won the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize for his anti-apartheid activities. "I don't think anything we try to say or do would move him from that position."

Botha's intransigence also has become a crucial test of the Truth Commission's credibility with many blacks, who believe apartheid leaders are getting off easy while black leaders such as Winnie Madikizela-Mandela, Mandela's former wife, had lengthy public hearings.

Botha, 82, was head of state from 1978 to 1989, when Mandela was in prison for his efforts to end racial segregation.

Botha faces contempt charges for ignoring several Truth Commission subpoenas to appear in person at a hearing last year on his role in the State Security Council. If convicted, he could receive up to two years in prison and an unspecified fine.

The council of government and military officials oversaw the campaign against anti-apartheid groups such as Mandela's African National Congress.

Botha appeared jovial as he entered the courtroom Wednesday, giving a mock salute to prosecutor Bruce Morrison and shaking hands with Tutu, the Truth Commission chairman who is his adversary in the trial.

Later, Botha stood up from a chair set up for him outside the witness box.

"I confirm that is correct," Botha said in Afrikaans when asked if he received a subpoena from the commission.

The trial was supposed to begin Tuesday, but Botha's lawyers asked for a postponement to try to work out a deal in which the former president would testify at a private hearing before the commission in exchange for dismissal of the charges.

But Botha scuttled the deal Wednesday, missing a chance to have any incriminating or damaging information about him kept private.

Student alleges bias against hiring Jews at Harvard paper

BY ERICA NOONAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — The editors of the Harvard Crimson recently looked around the newsroom and came to a sudden realization: too many Jews.

Editors of the student newspaper said they wanted more diversity among the editors and columnists, and they added positions to include other ethnic groups.

But Justin Danilewitz, who is Jewish, says the concern was so great that it led to his exclusion from the editorial board. He aired his complaints in a Commentary magazine article titled "Counting Noses at the Harvard Crimson."

Crimson editors say that Danilewitz has the story wrong and that his failure had nothing to do with his faith, but they would not elaborate.

The 125-year-old Crimson, whose alumni include former Presidents Franklin Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy, has about 300 mostly volunteer staffers, about one-fourth of whom work in the news department.

Danilewitz, a junior and frequent guest columnist, applied for the chairmanship of the editorial board, which dictates the paper's editorial policy and is made up of the columnists and top editors. He claims that two other students were selected for the job because they advocated reducing the number of Jewish columnists.

"Officially they say there isn't a quota system," he said. "But the editors have shown their intentions. If their rejection of me wasn't about religion, then I have to think that religion wouldn't have had to be brought up."

Danilewitz said that during the application process last winter he was told by an outgoing Crimson editor that she felt it was a "problem" that eight of the paper's 10 columnists were Jewish. He added that the two Jewish students selected as co-chairmen of the editorial board were chosen because they felt they should recruit columnists from various ethnic backgrounds.

"In their position papers, they specifically said that Jewish columnists from the tri-state area (New York, New Jersey and Connecticut) were overrepresented," said Danilewitz.

Crimson editors admit that there were newsroom discussions about the high ratio of Jewish staffers. Incoming editors wanted to broaden the editorial staff's racial and ethnic makeup, which now includes eight Jewish columnists out of 16. Black and Islamic and students were among the six additional columnists.

"I think the paper is the better for it. Now you can turn to the editorial pages and see opinions expressed that were never expressed before," Crimson President Matthew W. Granade said.

End to point shaving allows fans freedom

New men's basketball coach Rob Evans apparently has a clear path ahead of him next season, now that the point-shaving situation at ASU appears to be over.

Finally, we can have a basketball season without distraction. We can hope for postseason hoop dreams without fear of scandals haunting the team.

The kingpin behind the ASU point-shaving scandal, Benny Silman, is looking at a possible four-year sentence after he pleaded guilty Tuesday to five counts of felony sports bribery.

But U.S. District Judge Robert Broomfield hinted that, despite a deal with the government to drop many of the original counts, Silman is still technically eligible for a maximum 25-year sentence.

A four-year sentence for Silman isn't enough compensation for the three years of mediocrity the program endured since its 1995 Sweet 16 appearance in the NCAA Tournament. Sure, the team made it to the NIT this season, but the NCAA, Final Four and a national championship is always the goal.

Silman's sentence also isn't enough to compensate for the fact that the program wallowed at the bottom of the Pac-10. Whereas ASU is a perennially strong contender in other sports such as baseball, football, wrestling and gymnastics, we haven't yet established ourselves as a powerhouse in hoops.

The 27-year-old Silman, an ASU graduate and the last of six individuals indicted for the scheme, should be forced to publicly apologize to Athletic Director Kevin White. It was White, after all, who had to deal with the brunt of this scandal.

It also was White who had to replace former coach Bill Frieder. White's choice of Evans is a shrewd move — one that, given time, will pay off. Certainly, White has saved face with the hiring of Evans. Twice, Utah's Rick Majerus refused White's offer to coach at ASU.

Karma goes in circles, and perhaps ASU will one day meet — and beat — Utah, thus rubbing success in Majerus' face. But we'll have to wait for the Sun Devils to grow first with Evans. And an editorial on Majerus' refusal to coach at ASU can wait until next season.

Still, Silman also should apologize to ASU students, faculty and alumni for his transgression. We deserve it. His act reflects on the campus community and gave it a black eye and national attention of the unwanted variety.

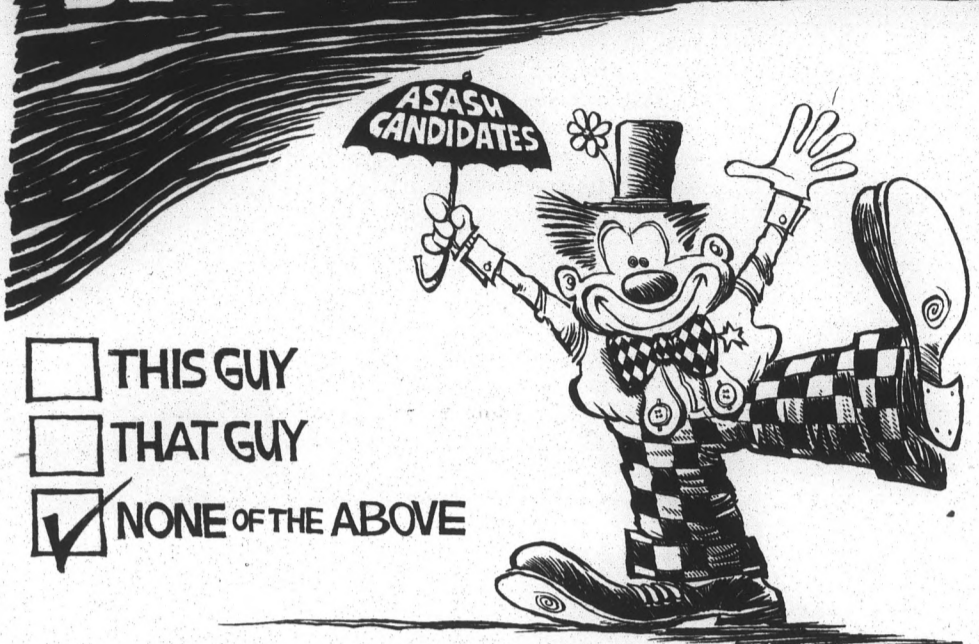

Silman's indiscretion wasn't the only thing holding this team back — recruits with poor character and judgment also deserve some blame for ASU's poor showing of seasons past — but it was the biggest roadblock.

And he wasn't the only member of this point-shaving fiasco. Stevin "Hedake" Smith and Isaac Burton are paying for their participation in the scandal by the sheer fact that their hoop careers haven't blossomed beyond brief stints in the pros.

They may dream to be like Mike, but it will never come to pass.

Any deals Silman made with the government should go out the window. The maximum sentence should be applied. Sun Devils, both past and present, deserve that much.

SEND IN THE CLOWNS

ASASU a bunch of bloodthirsty leeches

A record few students showed up to vote at the ASASU election two weeks ago. Only 2,616 students voted, out of a total main-campus enrollment of 44,255, ASASU officials said. Less than 6 percent of the students at ASU voted, despite the possibility of Diamondback tickets for those who did.

ASASU's reaction was predictable: its members pointed their well-manicured, pink little fingers at their favorite scapegoat, student apathy. The State Press quoted Elections Commissioner Chris Zock: "The bottom line is that the number of students going out to vote are those that want their voices to be heard."

Unfortunately, I must disagree with Zock. On election day, ASU students spoke with a voice powerful enough to shake the heavens. We took a deep, collective breath, tilted back our heads and roared: "ASASU can take a flying leap off a bridge of its choice! And take your vapid little posters with you!"

Or perhaps it was more like, "We don't even know what ASASU does, and now we have these annoying little people trying to get into office by comparing themselves to salsas and comic-book characters? And they want us to vote for them? They can take a leap off a precipice of their choice!"

The members of ASASU will tell us we are wrong. They will tell us how important they are, how vital to the quality of life at ASU. They will tell us how they make each of our lives a little better, through sweat, and struggle and sacrifice. They may even believe it.

Here is the truth: ASASU members care about as much about you as they care about road kill. Well, perhaps a little more, but not much. What they do care about is money.

There are a couple things ASASU does not like to publicize. Like how they spend $668,000 of your tuition dollars every year. Perhaps I should repeat that: $668,000, and it comes from your pockets. So what have you gotten for your money? Not much. As for the candidates — Crybaby salsa man ("Mommy, mommy, I lost! Seth must have cheated! How could anyone beat me without cheating?"), whacked-out Spider-Man and the rest of the brainless leeches — please, do not believe they want to serve ASU out of any sense of altruism or school loyalty. The president and every vice president will each get $4,080. Their campaign managers, who stick by them like loyal little dogs, will become chiefs of staff, at a cost to you of $3,060 a head.

SCOTT BENNETT
Columnist

ASASU is a leech bloated with your money. It sucks, and sucks and sucks, growing fatter and dumber. And it keeps sucking, because it has forgotten it is only a leech. It thinks it can steal our blood forever — this is "Apathetic State University" — without us noticing.

I think it is time to remind the members of ASASU they are nothing more than bloodthirsty little leeches.

ASASU members act like spoiled children who just cannot learn to play nicely with others. Last week, activities vice president Autumn Ness "stormed" out of a meeting, the State Press said, after her playmates accused her of lying about concert costs. Senator Andrew Lefberg, a protégé of the great Joseph McCarthy, said: "From this day on, we need to reevaluate what we do and give students things they want."

Wonderful, Lefberg. Here is what we want: We want you, and all your diaper-clad friends, to go back to your sandboxes and stop spending our money. We do not want to spend $668,000 to fund your collective ranting, whining and fighting. We want you to stop insulting us with trite posters and slogans. We want a student government that does not resemble a herd of kindergartners on crack.

We told you that on election day. Silence is a statement, and it is time all of you heard it.

ASASU charges facts

I want to state the facts addressed in the case in which I brought against Seth Deitchman. Please take these for what they truly are. The first charge is the fact that the shirt company involved with printing the shirts is not a legitimate company. The company, Super Screen printing, randomly decided to charge Seth 6.3 percent sales tax. The fact that Tempe city sales tax is actually 7.2 percent tipped us off to call the Tempe City Licensing department. They told us that the company was not legally registered to do business in the city of Tempe and therefore is illegal in their action of charging any tax. The company was not listed in any telephone directories in the entire state of Arizona, which lead us to conclusion that this company was not accessible. In our analysis of the receipt, we found that the company did not charge for screens, set-up or art work for the shirts or posters that were made for their campaign. A quote from another reputable company stated that the charge for the shirts alone would be $234.36. This is more than twice as much as what the "Spider-Man" campaign was charged, $115.20. We later found out that the "Spider-Man" campaign had softball shirts made along with their baby ringer T-shirts, which they did not claim on their financial statement, and their reasoning was because the owner of the company made a mistake in putting Spider-Man's campaign image on them. Yet, Seth should have claimed them, and his only excuse for not was, "It was a bad choice of wardrobe for election days." We also found that nowhere on their receipt did it state anything about softball shirts, therefore returning us to the notion that they had two receipts and that the receipt they turned in to the elections department was falsified in order to fit under their $400 campaign spending limit.

The next allegation involved the fact that their campaign had balloons, tablecloths and many other Spiderman items out on the mall, bought and used for campaigning purposes. This is in direct violation of the rules, which state that all candidates must claim everything they bought specifically for the expressed use of campaigning. Seth claimed that these items were not used for campaigning purposes and that they were only bought for aesthetics. Which is not a practical argument for this case.

The next allegation involves the fact that he used five colors of paint on his signs, yet he only claimed that he used three cans of paint on his financial statement. He claimed that someone else falsified his financial statement, but the fact still remains the statement he signed, turned in and was not photocopied wrong stated that they only used three cans of paint. I, as well as other individuals, know that five colors must add up to more than three cans of paint. These allegations were substantiated with true and recognizable facts that caused the elections commission to disqualify Seth from the campaign. It is important to keep the elections fair to all other candidates in order for junior politicians to not have the capability of buying votes. It is important to keep all politicians accountable to the rules, and frankly I'm shocked that the State Press, who claims keeping politicians accountable is one of their purposes, attempts to put me on the chopping block for doing the job they should be doing. I have one message for all those out there that are concerned enough to read this. If you're going to play the game, you have to play by the rules, or you don't get to play the game. It's a simple fact of life. Thank you for your time.

Damon D. Pace
Presidential Candidate

Pace followed rules

I am writing in response to the editor's comments on Tuesday, which accused Damon Pace of engaging in "dirty politics" based on his submission of a complaint against Seth "Spider-Man" Deitchman.

The rules regarding the point system for campaign supplies are designed to promote equity in campaigning, increasing the quality of the race for all candidates and students. In a race that depends heavily upon effective visual campaigning and name recognition, the campaign policies established in the ASASU bylaws help preserve the integrity of the race, ensuring that no candidate has the unfair advantage of disproportionate resources.

But these rules serve another, deeper purpose that is at least as valid. The ASASU student body president is the most visible student official on this campus, subject to a wide variety of rules, deadlines and other imposed responsibilities. If a candidate is negligent or incompetent in operating a campaign within the constraints of the ASASU regulations, how much assurance can the students have that he will be an effective and responsible leader during his term? Deitchman is an experienced member of RHA; would this organization be expected to ignore serious oversights?

If anything, Pace should be lauded for his desire to ensure that the integrity of the ASASU elections is maintained. To ignore violations of campaigning policy is not fair to the other candidates or the students who care about their student government. The decision of the ASASU election commission is undoubtedly a disappointment to Deitchman and those who support him, such as Meredith Taylor, his campaign manager and the organizer of Tuesday's protest. The frustration they feel is understandable and appropriate, but criticism of Pace is not. Pace used the appropriate channel for voicing a legitimate complaint, and for the State Press to accuse him of anything else borders on libel.

Goody-goody rules ruining fun in two ASU organizations

There are two groups on this campus pulling college hijinks and loopdy-loop antics. One is, the Memorial Union Activities Board Comedy Committee, the other, the Associated Students of ASU's insiders.

ADRIAN FONTES
Guest Columnist

First, I must make a distinction between the two groups. The professional group does things they are supposed to do, continues friendly rivalries with the scumbags who live south of here and makes us laugh — a lot. The other is an overly ambitious group of childlike misfits led by a whining crybaby who can't accept the fact he is not wanted.

For those of you not familiar with the REAL comedians, let me fill you in on some of their more traditional pranks.

Every year, for many years, our representatives from MUAB make the trek to Tucson to show the un-funny people down there how to put on a show. And every year, they return with some treasure. Usually it's a picture of some dead former UofA president or a little piece of Red and Blue pride. It's a fun thing, meant in the best taste.

Besides, nobody can get to their "A" mountain, so our comedy heroes settle for stealing some memorabilia and proudly displaying it during their performances (every Thursday at 12:15 p.m. and Friday at 12:40 p.m. in the Programming Lounge, Lower Level, MU).

What's so bad about that? It's illegal, and the UofA can't take a joke. Currently, our humor-impaired sister school is threatening to press charges against these guys. Apparently, the photos are so valuable that the UofA is willing to waste legal time and effort (not to mention money) to bring these college pranksters to justice. Now that's funny.

Speaking of un-funny people taking things too seriously and personally, let's hear it for the Pacemeister and his noble crew of stuffed shirts. I endorsed Damon a few weeks ago. I thought he could bring some of his political savvy to the continuing battle between the evil forces of the administration and the rebel alliance we fondly call our student body.

The day I found out he lost, I was disappointed, but I figured he and his mindless followers would continue to work at ASASU, without complaint, for the betterment of the students. After all, that's what they did last year after Damon lost his first bid for the presidency, right?

Wrong. He spent the last year positioning himself for this run with his own interests in mind. I was wrong to endorse him. Besides, I thought Republicans like Pace hated spending limits and government intervention when it comes to the voice of the people. Doesn't the nature of his complaint contradict his political standards?

Damon Pace is a hypocrite. There, I said it.

Why did I write about the U of A vs. MUAB comedy guys and the ASASU insiders in the same column? Simple. One situation involves a bunch of prudes using the rules to screw up a bunch of good-natured college activity, and the other involves a bunch of rules forcing some prudes to screw-up some other good-natured college activity.

Today, I will go down to the Programming Lounge and have me a good laugh. Friday, I'll watch silly goofiness and giggle myself to the verge of self-urination. This entertainment will be provided by a bunch of volunteers dedicated to making this campus a better place. These people are the comedians of MUAB.

For the rest of the year, I'll keep being put off by the empty-headed, malicious bickering of a student government that can't get rid of the insiders who are choking it to death. I'll continue to try to get you, my Sun Devil family, to get involved in making a positive difference on this campus. I want my degree from ASU to mean more, just like all of you do.

Where do we go from here? I recommend, as I have before, that we get the Snowdevils to run ASASU. At least those guys can make a decision about what they want to do and follow it through successfully.

By the way, I'll ask the same question Ross Eide did yesterday. Does Pace really believe he got beat by a balloon and a tablecloth? Or could it have been that his army of supporters were as ineffective in a campaign (two years running) as they would have been under his presidency?

Laugh, ASU; it's a funny story about lame-oids hiding behind the rules. The UofA or Damon Pace and his ASASU insiders — you pick which crew is worse.

Immediate action, education key to preventing domestic violence

In light of the most recent public murders of two battered women, more attention is being brought to the causes of domestic violence.

The first woman, in an effort to escape a violent husband, was turned out by over-filled shelters. Soon after, she was found dead (The Arizona Republic).

In the next highly publicized case, a mother of three children was leaving the mall when her estranged husband accosted her, beat her severely and then stabbed her repeatedly in front of a crowd of horrified onlookers (The Arizona Republic).

Why a woman has to be found dead to incite lawmakers to take action is beyond any logic. They have decided to give more money but can't decide how much, where it should go or how it should be used. While they are squabbling more women run in desperation.

ANGELA YEAGER
Columnist

These are real-life situations that happened in our own backyard. I don't need to tell you that physical abuse of women results in more injuries to women than rape, muggings and automobile accidents combined (National Women Abuse Prevention Project). I also don't need to mention that 21,000 domestic crimes are reported against women every week (Feminist Majority Foundation).

I don't need to mention these things, because we have two dead women to prove it.

And recently a young woman in the West Valley was killed by her boyfriend because he saw her dancing with a rival gang member.

These are cases that could have, should have been prevented. Violence against a partner is never acceptable — in any situation. While extra money for shelters and domestic violence groups will help, it isn't enough. Someone doesn't just become a batterer overnight. There are important signs, such as emotional and verbal abuse, that lead up to physical abuse.

According to Boston University's Community Outreach Health Information System Web page, those in relationships should look for signs such as:

- Name-calling, mocking, accusing and blaming.
- Pressure tactics like intimidation, threatening to withhold money and manipulating the children.
- Isolation — not letting you call your friends, monitoring your phone calls.
- Abusing drugs or alcohol and threatening to commit suicide.

It is important to seek help. Waiting for lawmakers is a case of too little, too late. If you are being abused or know someone in a violent relationship, take steps to save yourself or someone's life. The deaths of two women should not be in vain. Learn from their experience, and do something before it's too late. If you or someone you know needs help, call the Domestic Violence hotline at: 1-800-288-3854.

Henry Kissinger to speak at ASU next Tuesday

BY KAREN YAMADA
STATE PRESS

Henry Kissinger served under two presidents as Secretary of State, won the Nobel Peace Prize and is on the board of some of America's largest and most influential corporations.

Next week, he will turn his attention to ASU.

Kissinger will visit main campus Tuesday to inaugurate the John J. Rhodes Chair in Public Policy and American Institutions. The chair and endowment were established in 1984 to honor former Arizona Congressman John J. Rhodes and are housed in the Honors College.

"Henry Kissinger is coming for the purposes of making the fact that the chair exists known and honoring Congressman Rhodes' service to Arizona," said Dean Ted Humphrey of the Honors College. "The mission of the chair is to help stimulate discussion on issues of public policy and the nature of democratic institutions among students and people of the community."

Kissinger will share his foreign policy outlook for the 21st century with students and the public at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the University Activity Center. Tickets are free to students with an ID and can be obtained at Gammage or at the door.

"Kissinger will speak for 25 to 30 minutes, and then will take questions from Honors College students who will be seated at floor level closest to the speaker," said Melissa Werner, development officer for the college.

Mark Kokanovich, a senior studying history, said he is anxious to hear what Kissinger has to say.

"The era during which he was in office is quickly becoming what history is made of, in the sense of looking back on actions we took during the Cold War with the current foreign policy situation," Kokanovich said. "I haven't studied too much on Kissinger specifically, or about his policy decisions, but I plan to have my questions ready before he comes."

Humphrey said the vast majority of the Rhodes Chair $1 million permanent endowments were received from a wide range of donors, including corporations and private persons. He said Kissinger would receive a $45,000 honorarium for his visit.

"People who have great affection for Rhodes mostly gave to his endowment," Werner said. "Rhodes was House Minority Leader who served in Congress for over 30 years. He was, like Kissinger, a conservative Republican who was instrumental in establishing Arizona's place in history."

Kissinger, Werner said, is a long-time friend of Rhodes, who was essential to Kissinger accepting ASU's invitation.

Rhodes said, "I believe in the personal investment as a way to enrich the community and provide ongoing educational opportunities for students that, otherwise, wouldn't be available. Having Dr. Kissinger as the inaugural speaker is an honor."

Humphrey said he was enormously proud of the chair and of having Kissinger inaugurate it for ASU.

"Rhodes stands for all that is best in American politics and public life," Humphrey said. "He served with dignity and principles throughout his career. Getting to know Mr. Rhodes has been one of the real joys in my life."

"Being able to bring people of the stature of Henry Kissinger to this campus is ASU's good fortune. It is the sort of thing great universities do for their community."

Kolbe pledges action on UofA information release

TUCSON (AP) — The University of Arizona's release of thousands of Social Security numbers to two businesses could prompt action from Congress, U.S. Rep. Jim Kolbe said.

A university employee began delving into federal laws and regulations last month when he learned the school had released the Social Security numbers of all students and employees to MCI Telecommunications Corp. and Saguaro Credit Union. It was part of a new identification card system called CatCards.

On Tuesday, Kolbe told students during a forum on campus that he would seek a legislative solution to clarify federal law on the issue and to ensure it doesn't happen again, his spokesman, Ron Foreman, said after the meeting.

Kolbe, R-Ariz., was reacting to information presented by Terrence Bressi, an engineer at the UofA Lunar and Planetary Laboratory who called attention to the problem.

The new IDs, called CatCards, carry a microchip and can be used as telephone calling cards and debit-ATM cards.

The release of the numbers has caused an uproar on campus, and UofA President Peter Likins has said the release violated federal privacy laws, in particular the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act. That act prohibits the release of "personally identifiable" student information, including Social Security numbers, for non-educational purposes.

New information Bressi shared with Kolbe on Tuesday, however, outlined two opinions issued by the federal Family Policy Compliance Office in which such releases were deemed legal.

Kolbe hopes to address the apparent discrepancy this session through separate legislation or as part of an appropriations bill, Foreman said.

Mexican resort town attempting to raise legal drinking age to 21

ROSARITO BEACH, Mexico (AP) — Eager to calm the party that comes with a drinking age three years younger than California's, leaders in this beach town have launched a campaign to raise the legal age to 21.

The measure would have to be enacted throughout Baja California and approved by the state legislature, Mayor Hugo Torres Chabert said.

Rosarito Beach's seven-member council has voted unanimously to endorse a change in the state law — one of a set of measures in this city of 80,000 to crack down on American troublemakers.

Last week, 13 U.S. residents involved in disturbances in Rosarito Beach were expelled from Mexico by federal immigration authorities at the city's request. The Mexican Constitution permits the expulsion of foreigners who break Mexican laws.

U.S. officials say that although Americans are periodically kicked out of Mexico for violating Mexican laws, they do not recall seeing such a high number at the San Diego-Tijuana border.

Across Baja California, 630 Americans were arrested between Thursday and Sunday, most on misdemeanor charges, according to the U.S. Consulate in Tijuana.

Parents, community leaders fill theater for violence forum

PHOENIX (AP) — Lola Satoe knows it's not other people's children who wind up subject to violence in school.

Her 13-year-old son, T.J., was stabbed in the back with a ballpoint pen by a classmate in the Scottsdale school he attends. "It's everywhere," she said of such violence. "Even at nice schools."

She was among several hundred people attending a Town Hall as a panel headed by CBS News anchor Dan Rather examined the issue Tuesday night.

"Too often we fool ourselves into thinking this is someone else's problem, these are someone else's kids," Rather said.

Experts agreed families are the first line of defense against child violence, with government, schools, churches and other institutions playing key roles as helpers.

Crowd members and panelists spread the blame for child violence to sports figures, the media and most of all, parents.

One key, several of them said, is making it clear to children that there are options short of violence for dealing with disputes.

"Kids need to learn that there are other ways of resolving conflict than violence," Satoe said.

Jim Barrett, an education instructor at Paradise Valley Community College, agreed.

"We need to decide as a society that children should be taught that violence is not an option," Barrett said.

Even families aren't adequate as a hedge, several speakers said.

"We know that for a fact that 90 percent of violence against children comes from within a relationship (such as parents or friends)," said Stephanie Orr of the Center Against Sexual Abuse.

"We have children that are being unprotected, unwatched," Orr added. "The underlying bottom line has got to be that things are not good and they have got to change."

Gov. Jane Hull, noting in effect that society is unlikely ever to return to a Leave It to Beaver type of family, said society needs to learn to deal with parents as they are rather than bemoaning the loss of a simpler time.

"We will learn to cope better with working parents, because ... we're not going to go back — as much as we would like,"

Hull said.

The governor added that families need to be safe places for children and that churches and government should be the safety net when families fail.

Neither schools nor families can solve the problem alone, Barrett said: "A school is a great place to get a community dialogue going, but that's just the first step."

Sports — and especially hockey — came under criticism for the violence of some of its athletes, but several sports representatives said the whole shouldn't be found wanting because of the misbehavior of some individuals.

Michael Bidwill, general counsel for the Arizona Cardinals, and Jerry Colangelo, president and CEO of the Phoenix Suns as well as managing partner of the Arizona Diamondbacks, told the crowd at the Orpheum Theater that sports clubs look to recruit players of good character.

"We are looking for high-quality character people," said Bidwill while deploring some of the problems among athletes that gather headlines. "It's just a few bad apples that spoil the reputation of the rest of the batch."

Paula Jones and lawyers hold last-minute meeting about appeal

By CHRIS NEWTON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — As Paula Jones contemplated the future of her sexual harassment suit against President Clinton, one of her legal advisers and top financial backers said Wednesday "the case is alive and vibrant."

Jones and her lawyers, in a series of meetings Wednesday, were discussing the odds of winning an appeal of the April 1 decision by Judge Susan Webber Wright in Little Rock, Ark., which found that the suit did not merit a trial. Factoring into the talks were concerns about how much of a toll continuing the fight would take on Jones, both emotionally and financially, her adviser said.

While Jones' camp has suggested in recent days that an appeal was "90 percent sure," her spokeswoman sounded less definite. Jones plans to announce her decision at a Thursday afternoon news conference.

"We have a lot of things to look at, what's the human toll, what's the financial toll," said Susan Carpenter McMillan, Jones' adviser and spokeswoman.

Attorney John Whitehead, head of the Charlottesville, Va.-based Rutherford Institute, the conservative foundation that has been paying expenses in Jones' civil suit, said he came to Dallas prepared to finance an appeal.

"There are some really optimistic signs. You can't guarantee a win on appeal, but we are saying it could be a partial reversal," Whitehead said in a brief telephone interview. "Do I think the case is alive and vibrant? Yes, it's alive and vibrant. It's going to hang in there and the White House is probably going to be sorry."

Whitehead said he felt confident Jones' other attorneys — in the law firm of Rader, Campbell, Fisher & Pyke — were also recommending that she appeal.

"Everybody's poised. The legal team is poised," he said. Jones and her husband, Stephen, ducked into and out of the law offices without comment to reporters.

Jones, 31, has waged a drawn-out fight against Clinton since she filed a civil suit claiming he asked her to perform a sex act in an Arkansas hotel room when he was governor and she was a state employee.

Clinton has said he does not recall such a meeting and has denied doing anything improper.

In dismissing Jones' suit, Wright said there wasn't sufficient merit to her allegations to take the case to trial.

Wright noted that Jones continued to work at the Arkansas Industrial Development Commission for an additional 19 months and never filed a formal complaint or told her supervisors of the incident.

Georgia early favorite to capture gymnastics title

BY RANDY JONES
STATE PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Give anyone and inch, and they may take the championship.

On the dawn of the 17th women's NCAA Championship the coaches made it clear that a slip here, or a stumble there, would mean good bye title hops.

Even with all the talk of parity and the variety of squads comprising the field of today's first round at Pauley Pavilion, still everyone kept their eyes focused on the No. 1 ranked Georgia Gymdogs squad — easily the favorite to take their fourth national title.

"I think a lot of teams have a chance to do well," Utah head coach Greg Marsden said. "But we will probably agree that Georgia is the favorite. But we've been through enough championships that anything can happen on a given night."

"So I guess we'll go ahead and have the meet."

The 12 teams competing including NC State, who are making their first appearance ever, along with powerhouses Alabama, Georgia, Utah and UCLA, who own all 16 NCAA titles combined.

Georgia comes into the competition sporting an overall record of 25-0, including a NCAA record 189.575 at their regional two weeks ago. Leading the Gymdogs will be all-around title contenders Kim Arnold and Karin Lichey.

Arnold won last year's all-around title, while Lichey has done the unimaginable — scoring a perfect 40.0 in 1996.

Georgia head coach Suzanne Yoculan said the meet will come down to basics.

"I think this competition is going to be decided by two things — steps and falls," she said. "There are too many good teams, everyone with 10.0 starting values that those one or two things could determine the outcome."

The Gymdogs know that all too well. At last year's Super Six, Georgia fell three times on the balance beam, it's first event, and never recovered.

ASU head coach John Spini said that while "on paper" Georgia is the team to beat, he feels his squad can give the Gymdogs a challenge.

"I really believe that if we do what we are capable of doing we will give Georgia a run ... in the first session," said Spini, who has finished runner up four times while head coach at ASU.

Today's first round of competition is divided into two sessions of six teams each. In each session, the top three teams advance to the Super Six on Friday night.

ASU, which comes in as the No. 11 seed, is in the afternoon session. Competing along with the Sun Devils are Georgia, Alabama, Michigan, BYU and NC State.

In the evening session, Florida, Washington, Utah, Louisiana State, UCLA and Penn State will square off.

To advance, ASU senior Carie Courtney said she knows the team must hit everything.

"I think the teams that are consistent will advance to the Super Six," she said.

Key for success for ASU will be a much improved performance from its uneven bars team. At regionals, ASU's season low 46.9 score nearly kept it from the NCAAs.

However, that came with sophomore Amy Shelton, Courtney and sophomore Elizabeth Reid not practicing the week leading up to competition. This week, all three were in the gym training at full speed.

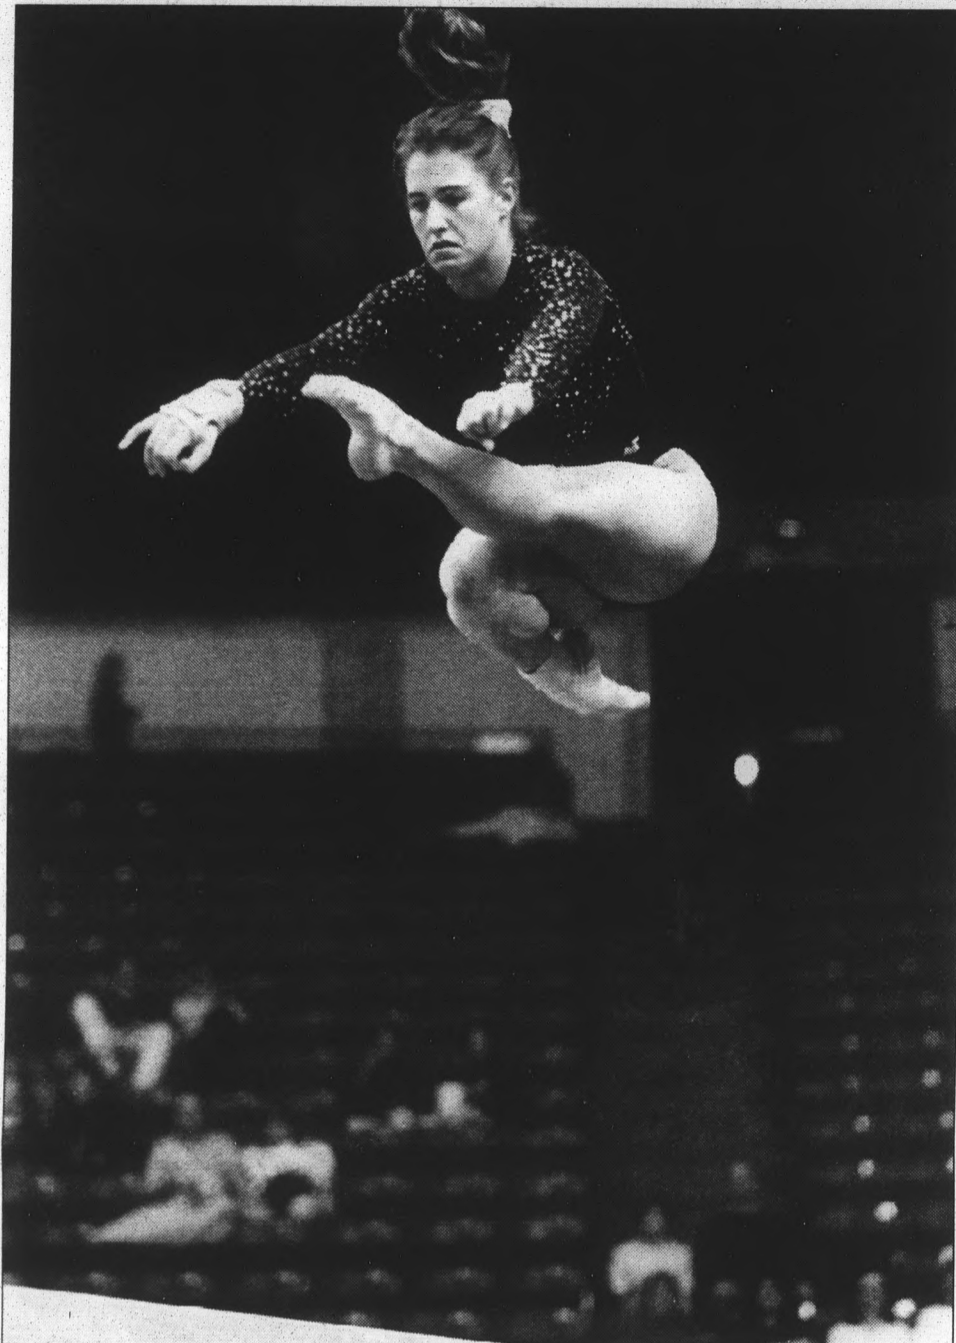

"Right now we are trying to figure out who can go where," Spini said. "We have to plan on hitting five strong routines (on bars) to have a shot at the Super Six. I think confidence wise, we are very confident on bars right now."

Chalk Dust

•ASU senior Meagan Wright, an 8 time All-American, may get the green light to compete in the all-around for only the second time this season. Wright, whose knee has been a constant source of pain this season, was on the floor during Wednesday warm-ups on each event. Spini said the coaches "are looking at the possibility very hard."

•Georgia has had the most individual champions all time with 20, while Utah is second with 18. ASU owns 9, including last year's balance beam champion Reid.

•CBS will televise the NCAA Championship on a tape delayed basis May 3.

Carie Courtney and the ASU women's gymnastics team will be looking to advance to the Super Six of the NCAA Championships today at Pauley Pavilion in Los Angeles.

Evans adds Pennell to staff; Benford expected to be next

FROM STAFF REPORTS

ASU men's head basketball coach Rob Evans officially added the second assistant to his coaching staff Wednesday and is expected to round out his bench today.

Russ Pennell joins Evans and assistant Dan O'Dowd, who was named Tuesday, in making the job switch from Mississippi to ASU. Pennell worked under Evans for the past six seasons and helped out in areas of scouting, recruiting and developing practice schedules.

"Russ is one of the top assistant coaches in the game and he adds an incredible amount of knowledge to our staff," Evans said. "He is an excellent tactician and is one of the rising stars in the coaching profession."

Before Ole Miss, Pennell served with Evans as an assistant at Oklahoma State (1990-92). In 1990-91, OSU shared the Big Eight Conference championship with Kansas after compiling a 24-8 mark. In 1991-92, the Cowboys were runner-up to the Jayhawks in the Big Eight and posted a 28-8 record. OSU advanced to the Sweet 16 both seasons and in 1992 were ranked as high as No. 2 in the Associated Press poll.

Pennell earned his undergraduate degree in physical education (1989) and masters (1990) in the same field from Pittsburgh (Kan.) State University.

The 37-year-old played college basketball under Eddie Sutton at Arkansas in 1979-80 then transferred to Central Arkansas and was a three-year starting point guard. His senior season, he led the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference in assists (8.2 per game) and was a teammate of Scottie Pippen. Pennell then played for the Spirit Express, a traveling exhibition team from Memphis, Tenn., from 1984-88.

New Mexico assistant Tony Benford will reportedly be the final piece in Evans's staff. Benford, 33, has been a member of Dave Bliss' staff at UNM since 1992 working as the chief recruiter.

The six seasons that Benford served at UNM were the most successful in school history. The Lobos made five NCAA Tournament appearances, winning the WAC regular-season championship in 1994 and the postseason tournament in 1993 and '96.

Like Evans, Benford is a native of Hobbs, N.M. He played at Texas Tech from 1982-86 while Evans was an assistant there.

Reed pitches, hits Mets past Cubs

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Reed pitched seven scoreless innings and hit a two-run homer as the New York Mets defeated the Chicago Cubs 2-1 Wednesday night, completing a unique day of baseball at Shea Stadium.

Earlier, the New York Yankees beat the Anaheim Angels 6-3 in a game moved to Shea because of structural problems at Yankee Stadium. It was the first time this century two regular-season games involving four major league teams were played in the same stadium on the same day.

The Yankees game had an attendance of 40,743, while the Mets drew a crowd of 16,012.

The Mets won their fourth straight game and the Cubs lost their fourth in a row.

Reed (1-1) walked two and struck out two, and supplied all the runs the Mets needed with the second home run of his career.

The homer came against Steve Trachsel (2-1) after Tim Spehr was hit by a pitch with two out in the second inning. Reed hit the next pitch into the Cubs bullpen in left field.

Reed's start was in sharp contrast to his last outing April 9 when he lasted just 3 2-3 innings against the Cubs, allowing 10 hits and seven runs.

The Cubs' best shot at him came in the fifth inning when Jeff Blauser and Kevin Orle opened with singles. Scott Servais flied out and Trachsel forced Blauser at third on an attempted sacrifice.

After Brant Brown walked, loading the bases, Mickey Morandini grounded out.

Reed left for a pinch-hitter in the seventh. Dennis Cook came on and surrendered Sammy Sosa's third home run of the season with two out in the eighth. It was the first run Cook has allowed in eight games this season.

ASU on 4 day, 8 game trip

By DOUG FLANAGAN
STATE PRESS

The 12th-ranked ASU softball team will take a break from its Pac-10 schedule tonight as they travel to Moraga, Calif., to take on the St. Mary's Gaels.

The matchup with the Gaels will be the first of four doubleheaders the Sun Devils will play in the next four days. After St. Mary's, ASU will play Santa Clara Friday, Stanford Saturday and California Sunday.

Head coach Linda Wells pointed to this road trip as her team's most critical.

"We need to play as well as we can ... and put good games on the field against Stanford and Cal because that's where our (postseason) berth is coming from," she said.

ASU (27-11, 3-7 Pac-10) slid from ninth to 12th in the USA Today/NFCA Coaches Poll this week after dropping both ends of a doubleheader last Friday against No. 1 UofA. Despite the loss, Wells drew numerous positive elements from her team's play.

One such aspect is freshman Devyn Braga. An exclusive second baseman until the UofA games, Wells shifted her to right field and later center, with positive results.

"I have to think I'd just have to find out who's playing by the day, but I do feel comfortable that I'd think nothing of putting Devyn in the outfield. We found something (there). And she's played very, very well. She's stepped up and played very, very well."

St. Mary's went 16-45 last year, but went 6-2 in Western Intercollegiate Softball League tournament to take the championship. Infielders Chrissy Johnson and Gina Javier were named to the All-Tournament team.

Around the Horn

•By hitting two home runs last weekend in Tucson, third baseman Chris Gill now has six this season and seven in her career. ASU's records in both categories are seven in a season (Suzie Gaw, 1979, and Jodie Rathbun, 1987) and 16 in a career (Gaw, 1979-1982).

•Leftfielder Raja Woods leads the team in batting average (.328), runs (25), and hits (38). Gill is tops in home runs, RBI, doubles, and slugging percentage (.509).

•Both pitchers continue to post sub-2.00 ERA. Carrie Breedlove (10-9) is at 1.76, and Roxanne Tsosie (17-4) possesses a 1.22 ERA.

•The Sun Devils are 5-0 all-time against St. Mary's.

Brad Lang/State Press
Co-captain Erin Hull and the the 12th-ranked Sun Devil softball squad will head to California this weekend for a crucial eight game road trip, starting tonight against St. Mary's.

Benes gets into verbal exchange with Cardinals coach

ST. LOUIS (AP) — In his first day back in St. Louis since signing a free-agent deal with the Arizona Diamondbacks, Andy Benes got into it with a Cardinals coach.

Benes and Rene Lachemann, the Cardinals' third-base coach, had words before Tuesday night's series opener, which was rained out.

"Hey, it's Andy Benes," Lachemann yelled at a group of reporters that were talking to Benes near the Arizona dugout.

Benes excused himself, looked over, and yelled back: "Hey, Lach, you managed once, right? Now you just follow Skip (manager Tony La Russa) around and (expletive)."

Benes' young son was standing nearby when he made the remarks.

Benes and Lachemann had a falling out last season. He accused Lachemann of riding former Cardinals player Mark Sweeney during one game soon after Sweeney had been traded to the Padres.

"Lach was on him so hard," Benes said. "It was embarrassing to me as one of the Cardinals to have a coach get on an opposing player. It's just not right."

Benes later apologized. "I probably shouldn't have said what I said," Benes said. "But that's better than grabbing him around the neck and dropping him."

Cardinals manager Tony La Russa said he was surprised.

"I thought Andy was a Christian," La Russa said. "Rene Lachemann's got more friends in baseball than Andy has innings pitched."

Benes was scheduled to start Wednesday night, but the game was rained out. It will be made up as part of a doubleheader Thursday afternoon, and Benes will start the second game.

Benes said he didn't know whether fans would boo him for turning down a five-year, $30 million deal with St. Louis and ending up with a three-year, $18 million contract with Arizona.

"If they boo me, they boo me," he said. "That's their prerogative when they pay money to come to the ballpark."

Mariners 5, Indians 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Randy Johnson's ejection produced an unexpected result for the Seattle Mariners: a comeback against the other team's bullpen.

David Segui doubled in the go-ahead run off Paul Assenmacher in the eighth as the Mariners avoided the worst start in franchise history with a 5-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians on Wednesday night.

After Paul Spoljaric (1-0) issued a leadoff walk to Brian Giles in the ninth, Bobby Ayala got three outs for Seattle's first save of the season in five chances. Ayala retired Travis Fryman and pinch-hitters Jim Thome and David Justice.

Johnson, Kenny Lofton and Sandy Alomar were ejected in the third after Johnson threw at Lofton's head on consecutive pitches, causing both benches to clear.

Giles, who replaced Lofton in center field, hit a two-run homer off reliever Bob Wells in the sixth to make it 3-0 and spoil a rare strong outing by a Seattle reliever.

The defending AL West champions have started 4-10 for the fourth time, but avoided their first 3-11 start by beating up on another team's bullpen for a change.

Seattle relievers blew leads twice in Boston last weekend and in the first two games of this series. They came in 0-4 with an 8.84 ERA.

The tense game included an inside-the-park homer, the ejection of three All-Stars, two injured pitchers and malfunctioning bullpen phones.

Suns notch 10th in a row

PHOENIX (AP) — Antonio McDyess scored 25 points, Steve Nash had 24 and Jason Kidd had a triple-double as the Phoenix Suns beat Denver 96-89 Wednesday night for their 10th consecutive victory.

The win put the Suns 1 1/2 games ahead of idle San Antonio in the race for fourth place and the first-round home-court advantage in the Western Conference playoffs.

The Nuggets, mired in the second-worst season in NBA history, went to their 70th defeat grudgingly.

LaPhonso Ellis had 23 points, including a 3-pointer that pulled Denver to 87-84 with 4:35 to play. But Kidd, who had 14 points, 11 rebounds and 11 assists, made a free throw and layup, and McDyess dunked to open a 92-84 lead with 1:09 remaining.

Ellis also had 11 rebounds before he fouled out with 28 seconds left.

Anthony Goldwire had 16 points for the Nuggets, and Johnny Newman scored 15 off the bench.

The game's seven lead changes and three ties all took place in the third quarter.

The Nuggets led by as many as 19 points in the second quarter and were still ahead 56-49 at halftime. But Phoenix stopped Denver with a 9-0 run to start the third period.

McDyess banked in a 7-footer with three minutes gone to give Phoenix a 57-56 lead, its first of the game. He was fouled and made the free throw.

The Nuggets held three one-point leads after that — two after baskets by Ellis, who also dunked to tie it 73-73 with 1:37 left in the quarter.

McDyess had a three-point play and a dunk in the remaining time and started the fourth with a layup.

Kidd made a layup and then reached his triple-double with an assist on a jumper by McDyess with 10:14 left in the game. Phoenix led 84-73 at that point after an 11-0 run.

Denver was up 27-22 after one quarter and went on a 15-1 run in the first 3:44 of the second. Bryant Stith made an 8-foot runner and a jump shot 31 seconds apart before Newman made it 42-23 with a pair of free throws.

Kevin Johnson broke the spell with a three-point play with 8:05 left in the period and Nash made back-to-back 3-pointers as the Suns came back.

Notes: The Suns matched the fourth-longest win streak in franchise history — first done in 1989-90 — and won their sixth straight over Denver. ... Kidd had his 19th career triple-double and fourth this season.

Pistons hand Bulls 2nd consecutive loss

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Brian Williams had 25 points and 17 rebounds as the Detroit Pistons beat Chicago 87-79 Wednesday night, giving the Bulls their first two-game losing streak since early December.

The Bulls played without Scottie Pippen, who stayed behind in Chicago because of kidney stones. Scott Burrell started in his place and scored 16 points.

The Bulls, locked in a battle with Utah and Seattle for best overall record and home court advantage throughout the playoffs, scored the first basket but never led again as the Pistons raced out to a 26-6 lead.

Chicago's record dropped to 60-20, leaving the Bulls a half-game behind Utah and tied with Seattle.

The game was tied 63-63 after three, but Grant Hill scored five points of his 17 points, including a three-point play, as the Pistons opened the fourth quarter with a 7-2 burst and then held off the Bulls down the stretch.

Michael Jordan, who finished with 19 points despite going scoreless in the first quarter, narrowed the deficit to 72-71 on a basket with 6:31 remaining. The Pistons responded with an 8-0 burst and the Bulls were forced to foul in the waning minutes.

Jerry Stackhouse had 20 points off the bench for Detroit, which avoided being swept in the four-game season series.

It was the third straight home game in which the Pistons blew a lead of at least 18 points. In the first two, they lost to Boston and Los Angeles.

The Bulls, shooting just 4-of-22, trailed 26-9 after the first 12 minutes, Chicago's lowest-scoring quarter of the season. Joe Dumars hit his first four shots — all from 3-point range — despite fighting a case of the flu.

Dumars, who finished with 17 points, sat out the entire second quarter during which the Bulls — getting 10 points from Jordan — closed the gap to 48-35.

Dumars was back for the start of the third quarter, but the Bulls had their "A" game back and stormed back with a 12-2 run to start the second half. Burrell had eight points in the burst, including two 3-point baskets.

A 3-pointer by Toni Kukoc tied it 57-all with 4:31 left in the third quarter.

Notes: Chicago hadn't lost two straight since Dec. 10 against Orlando and Dec. 12 against Charlotte. ... Bulls trainer Chip Schaefer resigned, effective July 1. Schaefer, whose family is moving to California, has been with the Bulls since 1990. ... The Bulls activated Kukoc before the game and placed Keith Booth on the injured list with a recurring lower back problem. Kukoc had been out with planter fasciitis in his left foot. ... Chicago dropped to 6-6 on Wednesdays.
