Lawsuit looms for Tempe landlord

BY ANGELA YEAGER
STATE PRESS

The Arizona Tenants Association is threatening to file a lawsuit against a Tempe landlord who rents primarily to ASU students — accusing him of withholding security deposits and failing to fix problems within his houses.

"We are preparing to file a group lawsuit against him within the next week," said Ken Volk, counselor of ATA. "We are hoping to come down on him like a ton of bricks, figuratively speaking of course."

In an effort to find and organize tenants for a large group suit against landlord Tim Wright, ATA has been circulating a flyer around campus asking his renters to contact the non-profit organization if they "suffered wrongful security deposit claims."

Wright has filed a libel lawsuit against ATA and former tenant Annalisa Alvrus for posting the flyer.

"We have a suit against them, but I can't say more," he said. "Let me say I have 600 students renting from me and very few have complained."

Wright said he would never take any renter's security deposit without reason.

"I would never take anybody's deposit," he said. "There's a little conspiracy going on here."

Wright said Alvrus, who is one of the students involved in organizing the suit, "is arousing emotions to help her case."

Alvrus, an ASU anthropology graduate student, said she and a roommate were renting a house on Roosevelt Street from Wright.

"The heater was broken and wasn't fixed until we were ready to move out," she said. "The refrigerator was broken for three days and there was a hole in the roof. My roommate eventually got fed up and moved out."

Alvrus said she had Wright served with a notice to repair, which she said was not answered. She also said he did not give her the chance to be present while checking out her house for damages.

"My lease ran out and I sent him a certified letter saying I wanted to be present during the walk out," Alvrus said. "I was never told and then he kept almost all my security deposit."

Wright disagreed with Alvrus' accusations.

"I didn't have anything to do with that," he said. "Annalisa was taken to court by her roommates and evicted, I gave her deposit to her roommates that were on the lease."

Volk said he heard from other disgruntled students who want to take action against Wright.

"I heard from seven people in just one day," he said. "It is important that tenants know their rights."

Volk said he isn't scared of Wright's

Conference focuses on Taiwan-U.S. relations

BY HAYLEY RINGLE
STATE PRESS

The Taiwan Relations Act, in the wake of President Clinton's visit to China and Sen. Barry Goldwater's involvement in U.S.-Taiwan relations, was the main topic of a conference held Tuesday at ASU.

The conference, entitled "The Taiwan Relations Act: The First 20 Years," discussed the security of Taiwan and the economic, social and democratic developments of that country. The conference featured two panels of speakers, and was sponsored by the Barry Goldwater Chair of American Institutions.

"The TRA opens with a clear and succinct statement of purpose, namely, 'to help maintain peace, security, and stability in the Western Pacific and to promote the foreign policy of the United States by authorizing the continuation of commercial, cultural, and other relations between the people of the United States and the people on Taiwan...'" said keynote speaker Chien-jen Chen, director general of the Government Information Office of the Republic of China. "In retrospect, much has been accomplished, and the TRA has undoubtedly played a very important role."

The TRA has a history going back 20 years.

"Congress, in an unprecedented display of bipartisan cooperation, crafted the Taiwan Relations Act, which was signed into law by President Carter on April 10, 1979," said Chen, on his first visit to Arizona. "For the 20 years since then, the Taiwan Relations Act has stood as the law of the land of the United States."

"The act addresses a number of key areas, including security concerns, arms sales, continued substantive ties, the Republic of China's (ROC) status as a foreign country, membership for the ROC in international organizations,

It's a sharp departure from the days when ASU's Main campus barely reached the 40,000-student mark. Currently, ASU Main is just 1,000 students shy of reaching its capacity of 45,300.

ASU's population could reach 75,600 by 2015

BY LIDIA E. KELLY

Troy Péwé remembers the good old times when he could park the car in front of his ASU office for free. Those were also the times when the geology professor, now 80 years old, could drive from Apache Boulevard to University Drive — one end of campus to the other — unobstructed on College Avenue.

That was 33 years ago. It was Péwé's first year as a professor here. Back then, with a mere 15,000 students, ASU was a very different place.

The University has been steadily growing since then. Two new campuses have been added, and the combined population is expected to reach 75,600 by 2015.

This growth has been affecting ASU in ways that aren't always pleasant.

Parking is now permitted in only few areas around the campus and an yearly decal can cost as much as $120.

Still, Péwé likes the way things have changed.

Today for Wednesday

Campus clubs and organizations may submit written entries to the State Press in the basement of the Matthews Center. Requests will not be taken over the phone or via fax.

Deadline for requests is noon the day before publication and entries will not be accepted more than three working days before publication. Only one entry per organization per day is permitted.

Entries must contain the full name of the club or organization, a description of the event, date, time and the full address of the location. All requests are subject to editing for content, space and clarity. Incomplete or illegible entries will be discarded.

The Today Section is a daily calendar of events printed as a service to the ASU community. Requests are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis and are printed as space permits.

lawsuit against him.

"His case is groundless," Volk said.

Dominic Caracappa, an ASU senior interdisciplinary science major, lived in two different houses owned by Wright, along with two roommates. Caracappa said he had difficulties as a tenant of Wright's.

"We were charged $600 to paint the walls, which we did ourselves before we moved out," he said. "We were also charged $250 to replace carpet in one room."

Caracappa and his roommates moved out in July, but he said he went back to the house a week ago and found the carpet had not been replaced.

"He charged us to replace that carpet, which was like that when we moved in," he said. "Then he didn't even fix it."

However, Wright said the three roommates damaged the house and that is why he charged them.

"They damaged the house and the yard so I took some money from their security deposit," he said. "I also refused to renew their lease."

Caracappa disagreed.

"Damaged? We fixed up that house," he said. "He told us we had to decide immediately whether we were going to renew. I mean, shouldn't we have 30 days to decide?"

Volk said a landlord has the right to dictate terms of renewal, depending on the lease agreement. It was legal for Wright to ask for an immediate decision, but he said, "It was probably undue pressure."

Caracappa cited no locks on the door and a leaky roof as some of his problems with the house. However, he said since the incidents happened two years ago, he doesn't think they have any claim.

"We've washed our hands of him," Caracappa said. "I haven't discussed it with my roommates."

Andres Rodriguez, a senior broadcasting major, is also being sued by Wright for damages incurred while he and two other roommates lived in a house. And Rodriguez said he is also part of the group lawsuit planned against Wright.

"We want to make sure this doesn't happen to other students," he said.

Rodriguez said he is being sued for $1,100 in damages and that his $1,400 security deposit was withheld.

"He said we broke a window, which was already broken," he said. "He wants us to replace carpet that the roof leaked on, but we had cleaned it."

Volk said he sees a pattern with the Tempe landlord.

"He is enriching himself at the expense of the others," he said. "Students are easy targets, but being a cohesive community will also be what makes them strong."

Clinton: U.S. military readiness top priority

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The administration and Congress must not “relax our vigilance” to keep American forces in top fighting form even as the accumulated effect of military budget cuts takes its toll, President Clinton told the military chiefs Tuesday.

“Readiness must be our No. 1 priority,” Clinton said in brief remarks to the senior generals and admirals who head the military services and the major regional commanders.

The president said he was satisfied that the units that would be called on first to respond to a military crisis, such as a reinforcement of U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf, are fully ready. Backup units, however, are showing signs of stress and strain.

“Our forward-deployed and first-to-fight units are highly ready, and our overall force is fully capable of carrying out our national military strategy,” Clinton said in his remarks at Fort McNair, along the Potomac River. “But I’m determined that we don’t relax our vigilance to keep our forces ready to protect our security today and well into the 21st century.”

The military chiefs told Clinton there are early signs of excessive strain on the troops, but insisted the problem is “not a replay of the ‘hollow force’ crisis of the 1970s,” said one senior Clinton aide who attended the closed meeting. The aide, who was referring to military breakdowns at the end of the Vietnam War, asked not to be identified.

Clinton urged Congress to approve his request that the projected $1.9 billion cost of U.S. military operations in Bosnia next year be covered by a supplemental funding bill rather than making the Defense Department absorb it in its regular budget.

“I want to call on Congress to support our ongoing engagement for peace in Bosnia in a way that does not force us to take money away from readiness and training,” he said.

“We will continue to monitor readiness, to deal quickly and effectively with any problems that do arise.”

Many military leaders are growing concerned about battlefield readiness.

Reports of pilot and spare parts shortages, maintenance backlogs, recruiting deficits and morale problems have been rife in recent months, particularly as deployments for the 1.4-million member force have lengthened in such places as Bosnia and the Persian Gulf.

In August, the outgoing commander of Army forces in the United States, Gen. David Bramlett, wrote the service’s top officer, Gen. Dennis Reimer, warning that under current budgets “we can no longer train and sustain the force, stop infrastructure degradation, and provide our soldiers (quality of life) programs critical to the long-term readiness of the force.”

In his speech Tuesday, Clinton said it was important to strike a balance between paying what it takes to keep forces ready for battle and making longer-term investments in “cutting edge technology ... to dominate the battlefields of the future.”

In a speech Monday to the Council on Foreign Relations in New York, Defense Secretary William Cohen said “we are facing some strains” in the forces that are earmarked as follow-on troops to support the front lines in an extended conflict abroad.

Cohen said the Navy and Air Force have recruiting shortfalls and problems retaining more senior people, given “attractive job offers” in a booming economy. The Army, he said, “has had to take money out of base operations and infrastructure accounts to pay for readiness.”

The Senate Armed Services Committee plans to hold hearings on military readiness within the next several weeks.

Russian reform: More ruble, regulations?

By Anna Dolgov

MOSCOW — Russia’s new government showed some of its cards Tuesday, proposing to print money to pay back wages and impose some Soviet-style controls over the market — but also making a key appointment to enhance its reform credentials.

The head of the centrist Our Home Is Russia party, Alexander Shokhin, was named deputy prime minister in charge of financial issues — a daunting job as Russia tries to pull itself out of its economic morass. He said he expected another member of his faction to be named to a Cabinet post later.

Shokhin served as Russia’s economics minister at the start of the country’s free-market reforms. He has promised that Russia’s policies will be based on “fundamental market-economy principles.”

Russian liberals and media have been making doomsday predictions that the new government, under Prime Minister Yevgeny Primakov, will represent a retreat to Soviet-era economic policies.

Primakov, who conferred with President Boris Yeltsin on new Cabinet appointments Tuesday, insists he is only trying to create a team that represents all the major political and economic factions, including the Communist Party.

The prime minister also met with an International Monetary Fund delegation on Tuesday. He later issued a statement saying the Russian side was committed to “market reforms, but pointed out the need for some changes in the ways of their implementation to ensure sustainable economic growth and to take into account all the social aspects of the reforms,” according to the ITAR-Tass news agency.

The Interfax news agency said the international lenders supported the strategic goals of the new government.

However, aside from a few preliminary measures, Primakov has not announced any economic program and appears to be seeking political consensus rather than quick economic action. He has asked to be given up to a year before his policies were assessed.

Still, there have been indications that the government intends to play a stronger role in the economy.

Central Bank chairman Viktor Gerashchenko called Tuesday for a return to the Soviet-era practice of requiring exporters to turn in all of their hard currency earnings to the government, in exchange for rubles at a state-determined rate.

GOP urges release of testimony video

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House braced Tuesday for release of damaging new evidence as House Republicans pushed to make public a videotape of President Clinton’s grand jury testimony, said to show a chief executive uncomfortably answering pointed questions about sex.

Lawyers familiar with the testimony, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the videotape shows the president at times angry with graphic questioning from lawyers in independent counsel Kenneth Starr’s office. At one point, these sources said, Clinton accused prosecutors of criminalizing his private life.

These lawyers offered a description of the videotape as the White House labored to shore of Clinton’s standing among congressional Democrats, and as Republicans brushed aside Democratic talk of a mere censure of the president.

Censure is “not an option that holds a lot of attraction,” House Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas told reporters, saying he had talked to rank-and-file GOP House members about the issue. “We believe that committing perjury and obstruction of justice, these are feats of enormous consequence.”

Clinton testified at the White House by closed circuit before the grand jury on Aug. 17. The videotape shows the president appearing to be caught off guard by questions a few times and struggles uncomfortably to answer, the lawyers said. And many times when pressed to give more details, Clinton refers back to the legalistic statement his lawyers prepared to answer questions about the sexual nature of his relationship with former intern Monica Lewinsky.

Laboring to make public as much of Starr’s evidence as possible, House Republicans want the videotape released as early as this week. Democrats are objecting, saying Clinton is being treated unfairly because no other witness’ testimony was taped.

Editorial

Decision on Clinton needed

A message to our elected officials in Washington, D.C.: Hurry up and punish the president, already.

Or at least do something in regard to President Clinton.

Whether it be a slap on the wrist (or a more appropriate body part), censure, impeachment or no punishment at all, Republicans and Democrats need to speed things up and end the situation with Clinton and get on with running the government.

Just give the American people some sign that the sex scandal involving former White House intern Monica Lewinsky and Clinton is coming to a close.

For once, Congress should stop its bipartisan tendencies and swiftly come to a decision. If Congress intends to act upon Clinton and impose a punishment for the president, then the time to do so is now.

Congress' inactivity has given the president the opportunity to begin salvaging his image. It was reported on Tuesday that the president has chosen a clique of clergymen to meet and pray with him weekly in order to keep his cigars to himself.

In addition, the president outlined a financial plan that would ease the current economic turmoil in China, Russia and Brazil.

The opportunity to punish the president also grows dim with the revelation on Tuesday that the evidence gathered so far against Clinton isn't substantial enough to justify impeachment. Some in Congress now want to take the middle path in dealing with the president. The evidence, they feel, isn't warranted for either extreme — impeachment or no punishment at all.

While Congress remains divided on its decision, the president slowly is redeeming himself through his actions.

Not that we mind, of course. The American people have always wanted a president who is swift in policy-making. Never mind that it apparently has taken the threat of impeachment to get the president working.

But one has to wonder why Congress has been so indecisive in dealing with the president. When Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr released his report Friday, Congress was relatively swift in posting the report on the Internet.

So why can't it act swiftly now?

Granted, the decision regarding what to do with the president isn't an easy one to make. Still, the American public has elected the members of Congress to make those difficult decisions. It's what Congress is paid to do.

Stop the bipartisanship. Congress should make the tough decision and deal with the president in some fashion.

It should do something. It should do anything. Even if Congress decides it doesn't want to punish the president, then it should at least let the public know.

As Americans, we've earned the right to receive some sort of closure in this situation.

Water fountain 'guide' a must at ASU

Through countless hours of careful observation, my keen scientific mind has become aware of a hideous plague that seems to be running quite rampant among our freshman population. At least one of my fellow columnists prudently instructed the student body in how to prevent the visible signs of this disease, and I have no doubt everyone appreciated his efforts. I, too, want to assist the afflicted.

brian Policoff
columnist

Freshman — since during your first 18 years of life you haven't managed to accomplish much more than tying your shoes, I would like to provide you with some vital information. This is a desert. It is hot and dry. You will need liquid sustenance. Water is ideal and free at the majority of locations around campus.

Now, you may be thinking, "isn't one water fountain just as good as the next?" Silly freshman, you really don't know your mouth from a hole in the ground, do you? Water fountains aren't just different shapes and sizes; there's much more to refreshment than aesthetics. In a desert such as this, you must strive to become a water connoisseur.

To scientifically assess the various levels of drinking apparatus quality, I have enlisted the aid of environmental resources major and self-proclaimed water fountain expert, Michael Kruse. Through well more than four years of research (and probably several more to come) Kruse has managed to memorize the location of every fountain on campus and its particular attributes. We shall begin this list with some of the better fountains around campus.

If you find yourself in a refreshment emergency on the northwest corner of campus, Architecture South's first-floor fountain features a nice, even flow, cold water and a clean taste. Architecture North also features that steady flow, but the water isn't as cold and one must bend over quite far if one happens to be at or above average height; this may be especially hazardous if one happens to be a hoochie and thus, wearing a frighteningly short skirt.

On average, outside fountains tend to be warmer, but this isn't the case at the Computing Commons. Its outside fountain tastes great and has a cold, steady stream. The only drawback is that one must bend uncomfortably to drink it. The SRC's fountain is a particular enigma; preliminary post-workout tests say good things, but after sweating for several hours, any fountain would appear to be above average. More data is required.

ASU also features its share of fountains to avoid. The Farmer Education building's fountain has a bitter flavor, the water is warm and their incredibly high pressure sends water up your nose if you're not careful. The Life Sciences building is a complete refreshment disaster. The fountains are porcelain and look more like urinals than drinking fountains; furthermore they never work — much like the building's actual urinals.

Whether you call it COB or JWS, this building's copper fountains seem to spray everywhere but in your mouth.

As for the Student Services building, its cylindrical copper fountains are like everything else in Student Services — there to make you miserable.

If you perchance forget which individual sites to frequent, here is a list of general telltale fountain signs. Noisy fountains tend to be better; just follow your ears. Fountains located near restrooms may smell funny, but they tend to have better taste so as to increase consumption and eventually perpetuate bathroom usage. If a fountain doesn't look like it's been used for a while or it's only been used as a gum dispenser, it should be prudently avoided. Be wary of dented fountains; usually dents are left from the vicious side kicks of frustrated and dehydrated students.

I hope this list proves invaluable to all — and not only to the freshman masses who are undeniably ignorant to the ins and outs of ASU.

Football fan speaks up

It seems as though everyone in the Tempe area and around campus seems to think that the football team's season is already over and is a total waste. I think that what everyone is forgetting is that ASU should've won the first game, got every bad bounce possible at BYU and is still a very good team.

I don't think anyone would consider last year's team a failure and they lost to Washington and BYU as well. I just hope that the fan support for the Devils is still great at all home games because they deserve it. They are a great team, regardless of their record right now.

Devil fan fights back

I was extremely disappointed after reading Ed Odeven's article about the Sun Devils' loss to BYU on Saturday.

The last thing the football team needs right now is the sports editor of the University paper bullet-pointing all of the things they did wrong and how bad of a team they are. One would think the sports editor would have a little more confidence and optimism in their team than Odeven has. The other thing that upsets me about this kind of bandwagon fan is that he is spreading the word to all of the other students on campus to be just as critical of the football team as he is.

Ed, if you want to complain to your friends about how bad the team is, then go right ahead. However, don't try to persuade us "rain or shine" fans into your way of thinking. About the only good thing coming out of ASU's 0-2 start is that I know I'll be surrounded by Sun Devil enthusiasts at this weekend's game, whereas all of the bandwagon fans will be at their homes watching it on TV, too embarrassed to attend the game themselves.

Sorority members fight back

We are writing this letter in response to the editorial written on Sept. 14 by Andrea Jennifer Balsky entitled, "Sorority life not always what it seems." As two former members of Andrea's sorority, we would like to speak in behalf of the no longer existent sorority and illustrate a clearer picture.

We admit that sorority life is not for everyone, but why can't people ever take responsibility for their own decisions? Andrea chose to join our sorority; she was not forced. This life is not for everyone. It is not fair of Andrea to publicly criticize and insult the integrity of ourselves and our friends.

It is often said that you only get out of an organization what you put into it. If you sit in your room, like Andrea said she did, obviously you are not putting in a whole lot. I don't need to remind Andrea, but for the better understanding of your readers, this particular sorority was not a strong one on campus (which is apparent due to the fact it is not here anymore).

Andrea knew from the day she took her bid into the sorority that she was not joining a typical sorority. She is unjustly using this unique situation to generalize the entire idea of being in a sorority. This is clearly unfair to the other twelve successful and remaining sororities here at ASU. Joining a sorority is a personal decision and can be a wonderful experience if you are willing to make it that. We both have many friends who have been actively involved in their respective sororities for years and will claim that joining a sorority was the best decision they ever made.

Yes, we agree with what Andrea stated, "if you are not enjoying it or not getting respect — quit." But, if you are blatantly unhappy and not taking control of your own life and doing something about it, get a life! Don't criticize innocent people in a school newspaper!

Just because joining a sorority did not meet Andrea's expectations, this should not deter students from becoming part of the Greek system. We assure all from personal experience that when you join a sorority, there is much fun to be had and many everlasting friendships to be made.

Female Grecker gives her story

I am writing this in response to Andrea Jennifer Balsky's editorial entitled, "Sorority life not always what it seems."

I was disheartened to once again see an extremely negative view of Greek Life in the State Press. Balsky's tale of her newfound "free" life from "sorority hell" disturbed me, not only because I am a sorority member myself, but because I am tired of only seeing the negative side to sorority/fraternity life featured in the State Press. I could list all of the beneficial aspects that anyone could gain from a sorority, but instead would rather tell my own story.

Like Balsky, I too joined a sorority at the beginning of my sophomore year. Despite a negative attitude and general distaste for what I thought a sorority stood for (buying your friends), I was optimistic, hoping to find friends, get involved in my campus and community and facilitate my transition to ASU as a transfer student. These were my goals. Not only have I accomplished all of these, but have learned more about human nature and what it takes to be a true friend than I ever would have without my sorority.

When I first joined my sorority, I felt as though I didn't fit in, either. But instead of "locking myself in my room" like Balsky, I chose to get myself as involved as possible. I did not want to give up on it without putting up a pretty good fight. Now, I am so thankful that I did. I have made some of the best friends I will ever have in my life and have learned countless lessons that I didn't bargain for; like time management, conflict resolution, how to organize events, responsibility, etc.

I know that sorority life is not for everyone and apparently Balsky is one of those people, but her experience in a sorority is not representative of mine or my friends or countless others. Balsky said, "I was constantly put down, gossiped about, ignored and just treated like garbage." I don't blame her at all for being a little bitter about sororities after that experience, but maybe confronting the people offending her sometime during her two years in the sorority might have resolved the situation before it even got out of hand.

Balsky wasn't caged like some wild animal in her sorority. Had she really wanted to, she could have taken steps to improve her experience. Perhaps hiding in her room wasn't the best way to handle the situation.

I guess my experience in a sorority has taught me how to handle situations more effectively. Now I am a happy, active, thriving member of my sorority, with countless opportunities for me to better myself. However, Balsky is now able to drink those fabulous black cherry wine coolers, hang out with her Beanie Babies and not paint her fingernails, all of which are things we sorority women so vehemently oppose. Wow, what a life I've missed!

Scandal interest questioned

In today's State Press (Sept. 14), I saw nine different articles on the Clinton scandal. However, it was an editorial column that struck me the most.

For the past six years, we Americans have been forced into learning all about Clinton and what he did on his off time. Knuth stated in her column ("Nation's 'sex addiction' to blame for scandal interest") that millions of American's are tuning into the Clinton mess because we are obsessed with sex.

I want to know about her sources. Did she look at any of the polls in the last eight months? Does anyone notice that no one cares about this thing? That the majority of the American public would like to move on to other topics? Did anyone notice that the embassy bombings were given a few days then ignored because of what Clinton might or might not do? No, she claims that we only said that for a while until we were able to get the graphic details. And that most people went to go look at the report for that reason. Did she watch the news on ABC this weekend? It reported some of those graphic details she claims America wants. In full detail.

So, I say to her and all the others who feel the need to go on and on and on about this matter: Cease, please and go back to real reporting. Leave the Clinton scandal to the Daily Show and others of its ilk.

Readers' Poll What is your opinion?

• This week's question:

With the release of Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's report, public opinion of the president has run from impeachment to indifference. What do you think should happen next?

- A - He should resign.
- B - He should be impeached.
- C - Nothing.
- D - Who cares?

To vote, visit our website at <http://www.statepress.com>

Answers will be published in next Wednesday's issue of the State Press.

• Last week's question:

Sometime this week, Mark McGwire is expected to hit his 62nd home run ball, breaking the all-time record. The person who catches this ball would most likely want to give it back to McGwire. Even though the Internal Revenue Service has changed its position, it originally wanted to make anyone returning the ball pay a gift tax on it; estimated to be 40 percent of the ball's worth. Do you think this is right?

Grant to improve biology labs, research

BY KIM PRENDERGAST
STATE PRESS

Students studying biology at ASU can look forward to improved labs, enhanced undergraduate research programs and an overall improved science education.

ASU was awarded $1.4 million Tuesday from the Howard Hughes Medical Institute, as part of a national HHMI grant awarding $91.1 million to 58 research and doctoral universities to strengthen undergraduate biological science programs.

"Our goal is to enhance science education," said David Jarmul, an HHMI spokesman. "The proposals were reviewed by our panels on how likely the universities were to meet the goals of the programs."

The grant awarded to ASU will also fund physical renovations, faculty workshops and educational outreach programs to Arizona schools and community colleges.

Each of the three state universities was awarded four-year grants. UofA will receive $2.2 million and NAU will receive $1.2 million.

And in a unique effort, the three schools will collaborate in initiating and expanding undergraduate opportunities to join faculty in cutting-edge research, Jarmul said.

Joint projects between the universities are being planned for the next few years, such as a biology career day and a bioethics weekend at Biosphere II in Oracle, Ariz.

ASU will also apply over a half-million dollars to its Biology Research Experience for Undergraduates program.

"In general the grants (will) put undergraduates in labs," said Heather Cate, BREU program manager.

"Moneys will be used to revamp undergraduate education," she said. "We need to teach science as science is done. Science is about critical thinking, asking questions and having those questions answered — not textbooks."

Steve Rissing, an ASU biology professor, said, "We've been tremendously fortunate to get recognition from HHMI. It shows something about the strength of the program."

ASU has also been a recipient of HHMI awards in 1992 and 1994.

Cop suspended in racist-float flap sues city for his job

NEW YORK (AP) — A police officer has sued the city after being suspended for appearing on a Labor Day parade float whose participants mocked black people and reenacted a racist killing.

In the federal suit filed Monday, Joseph Locurto claims he was exercising his right to free speech by participating in the parade and that city officials deprived him of his job without due process.

About a dozen men wearing blackface makeup appeared on the float during the Sept. 7 parade in a predominantly white section of Queens.

The float featured a banner reading, "Black to the Future 2098," and some participants performed a reenactment of the June killing of a black man who was chained to a pickup in rural Texas and dragged to his death.

A police officer since February 1994, Locurto was suspended without pay for "off-the-job, private, expressive activity without any charges, and no hearing," said his attorney, Norman Siegel of the New York Civil Liberties Union.

Meanwhile, an attorney for suspended firefighter Robert Steiner showed tapes from past parades that included appearances by Rep. Charles Schumer, now a Democratic Senate candidate, and Gov. George Pataki.

Spokesmen for Schumer and Pataki said the men were unaware of parody floats in those parades.

City officials did not immediately return calls for comment today.

Candidates applaud Hull's new campaign-ethics code

By JAYSON PETERS
STATE PRESS

As the general election draws ever nearer, candidates for state office pledged their support Tuesday for a new code of ethics regarding issue-oriented campaigns.

"I believe that we will not get our electorate involved until they honestly, truly feel that there are people standing before them who want to be elected on the basis of merit, not sleaze," Gov. Jane Hull said at the unveiling of the 1998 Arizona Code of Election Ethics.

The code, presented at the state capitol by the Arizona Alliance for Better Campaigns, asks voters to rate candidates based on standards of honesty, fairness, respect and responsibility. Although not a formal contract, it is an agreement among the candidates present. Elections will be held Nov. 3.

David Howell, moderator of the forum and vice president of corporate communications for Bank of America, said the purpose is to encourage "substantive, issue-oriented dialogue" on public policy issues and, in the process, "decrease voter apathy and improve voter turnout."

"It's a challenge to be engaging and entertaining and informing in covering campaigns," said Howell, who has worked in Valley broadcasting. "Length is not the issue. All of this doesn't have to happen within a 30-minute newscast. There are other ways to go about this, somewhere between that hour-long debate and the 10-second sound bite."

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Paul Johnson said the alliance was a step in the right direction.

"We are different individuals," he said of Hull and himself. "We come from very different backgrounds. The public has a right to know and understand where those differences exist."

Although the alliance was originally intended to involve only the candidates for governor, Howell said it grew to include the candidates for other offices as well. That is important, especially in light of mudslinging in the Republican campaigns to nominate a candidate for attorney general, he said.

In that race, Tom McGovern defeated John Kaites to win the nomination after Kaites made a televised spot revealing that McGovern was arrested and later released on charges of possessing drugs and a firearm.

A spokeswoman for attorney general candidate McGovern, who did not attend the meeting, said he has every intention of running a positive campaign for the general election.

Janet Napolitano, the Democratic candidate for the state attorney general's office, said this code was needed to help reduce rhetoric in campaigns and get down to the issues.

"When fewer than 15 percent of the voters turn out for a primary, even when there are some hotly contested races, you've got a problem," she said.

Holdup man improves his demand-note penmanship

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — A man wanted in several holdups appears to be working on his penmanship.

Police have been looking for the man since Sept. 9, when he handed a note to the clerk at a convenience store. The clerk said he could not make out the words. The man threatened to shoot the clerk and got away with $50.

Capt. Dave Heesch said the man's handwriting apparently has improved because clerks in three more holdups over the next five days had no problem reading his note.

ASU police reported the following incidents Monday:

- A woman not affiliated with ASU was arrested, cited and released for criminal speeding on the 200 block of East Apache Boulevard.
 - A student reported his bicycle missing from the Goldwater Building, where it was secured with a lock.
 - A student reported her bicycle missing from the Psychology building, where it was secured with a lock.
 - A student reported that his textbooks were taken from Hayden Library.
 - A student reported his bicycle missing from Physical Science H-wing, where it was secured with a lock.
 - A man not affiliated with ASU was arrested, cited and released for driving with a suspended license. Officers reportedly arrested him at 1000 E. University Drive.
- Tempe police reported the following incidents Tuesday:
- A 23-year-old Tempe man was hit by a 1998 Chevy S-10 truck while walking across the 3400 block of South McClintock Drive early Tuesday morning. The driver, a 22-year-old Mesa man, was reportedly headed southbound on the inside lane when the accident occurred.

The pedestrian was air lifted to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital where he remains in critical condition. The driver was not injured, and investigators do not believe alcohol was involved.

Officers arrested a 23-year-old Tempe woman Sunday on charges of misdemeanor assault after she reportedly slapped her roommate across the face with an open hand. Officers read the woman her rights. She said she understood them and reportedly admitted to slapping her roommate. She was taken to Tempe City Jail, where she was held to see a judge.

An 18-year-old Tempe man was arrested late Sunday night for aggravated driving under the influence of alcohol. Officers contacted the man at 5038 S. Hardy Drive where it was discovered the man was driving his car while intoxicated. A records check reportedly revealed the man had two prior convictions for DUI in the past 60 months. The first conviction was in Oregon in July 1995 and the second in New Mexico in November 1997. He also had an outstanding felony warrant in New Mexico for a probation violation. He was taken to Tempe City Jail.

human rights, and mechanisms for handling affairs between the ROC and the U.S."

Along with these assurances passed by Congress for the TRA, Clinton re-asserted the "Three No's" that China had enacted toward its relations with Taiwan. The United States would not recognize the individual countries as separately as China and Taiwan. It would not recognize or support Taiwan's independence movement from China. And the United States would not recognize China and Taiwan as two Chinas.

Chen said he felt that the TRA has served his country well.

"The Taiwan Relations Act has served both the U.S. and the ROC admirably for the past 20 years," Chen said. "During this period of time, the ROC has pushed forward with economic development and emerged as a full-fledged democracy. Today, the ROC, sharing similar values and ideals with the U.S., stands as a prosperous and democratic nation, recognized worldwide for its outstanding achievements."

Chen said he hopes the "TRA will continue to serve as the foundation upon which we can build a better tomorrow."

The benefits of the TRA will not only affect the future of Taiwan, but the world, he said.

"The benefits of such a strategy are clear: security and prosperity for Taiwan, peace and stability in the Asia-Pacific region, and as a result, a brighter future for the world as a whole," Chen said.

Another topic discussed was whether Taiwan should remain independent from China.

Dr. Fernando Tesón, professor of international law of the ASU College of Law, said he felt Taiwan should be able to gain its independence, since it is a democratic society and its citizens have a right to the island.

"I did not predict the fall of the Berlin Wall, so I can't predict the independence of our country," Chen said. "However, the Chinese people are more patient. We'll have to wait and see what happens."

However, Tesón said he doesn't believe there would ever be a possibility for reunification "because of differences in political regime those would be enough to prevent reunification."

Tradewise, Arizona's history with Taiwan goes back a long way.

Many speakers praised former U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater, who was a major supporter of Taiwan relations and encouraged Arizona to trade with Taiwan — a policy that proved very successful.

"Our trade with Taiwan generates more jobs than Motorola," said Dorothy Bigg, director of the international trade and investment division of the Arizona Department of Commerce.

"One of the true things about the Act refers to trade," said J. Terry Emerson, senior fellow of the Barry Goldwater Chair. "This is an act to authorize continued commercial trade which gave a tremendous boost of Arizona's exports."

Clinton's trip to China in July brought different opinions as to the impact of what he said.

Richard Bush, chairman of the board and managing director of the American Institute in Taiwan, argued that Clinton really did not say anything new.

"The Three No's are part of a package, and (Henry) Kissinger re-affirmed those principles in the 1970s," Bush said.

Tesón said, "We should protect Taiwan's liberty, human rights and democracy. It's important we don't yield to China's demands."

Pastors advising Clinton aren't strangers to controversy

BY ALISON FITZGERALD
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — The ministers President Clinton has asked to serve as his spiritual advisers include a clergyman who wrote a book about his own extramarital affair and quest for forgiveness.

"I am in a position to talk the language of repentance and what it takes to find a deeper and more purposeful walk with God in the midst of a personal tragedy," the Rev. Gordon MacDonald of Grace Chapel in Lexington, Mass., said in a sermon Sunday.

Another of Clinton's spiritual advisers, the Rev. Tony Campolo, is a liberal Baptist minister from Pennsylvania who has gone against many in his faith by advocating Christian acceptance of homosexuality.

The two men have called the request from the president a "calling they could not refuse." They said they will pray weekly with Clinton and help him seek forgiveness from God after his affair with Monica Lewinsky.

"I believe we are doing the right thing and that the president is doing the right thing," Campolo said.

MacDonald was pastor at Grace Chapel for more than 12 years until he left in 1984 for World Vision, a Christian relief agency. He later became president of InterVarsity, a mission organization of college students.

He resigned from InterVarsity in 1987 after admitting to an extramarital affair.

Two years later, after publicly seeking forgiveness, completing a "restoration" and writing a book about the process called Rebuilding Your Broken World, he joined Trinity Baptist Church in New York. He returned to Grace Chapel in 1993.

It was at Trinity that Rick Dennler, 44, found MacDonald. He said he became a Christian because of MacDonald.

"He's an awesome teaching pastor," Dennler said. "If there's anybody out there who can effectively come along side the president at a time like this, it's Gordon MacDonald."

"He's a man who had fallen. Even though he's a pastor, he's an approachable pastor. He has a story that shows he made some mistakes."

Campolo is a professor of sociology at Eastern College, a small Christian school outside Philadelphia, who has often challenged the Christian Coalition's role in politics. He is author of more than 25 books, including Is Jesus a Republican or a Democrat?

"With the rise of the Christian Coalition, evangelism has been reduced to the Republican Party. What they worship is not the biblical Jesus, but a Jesus of their own values — a Jesus who is white, Anglo-Saxon, Republican," he said in 1996.

He is also founder of an ecumenical Christian organization called Urban Promise that gives financial assistance and sends volunteers to schools in the poorest sections of Philadelphia and Camden, N.J.

Both ministers have talked about the possibility of being used for Clinton's political purposes — and both have dismissed such speculation.

"There are those who will say that Gordon and I are being used and manipulated," Campolo said. "Should this be true, it would not be the first time that Christians have been taken in."

"But we would rather be men of faith who believe that God is working in the life of the president than to join that army of cynics ... who cannot accept a plea for forgiveness at face value."

Lewinsky's rabbi lashes out at Clinton as 'source of shame'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Monica Lewinsky's rabbi lashed out at President Clinton, accusing him of shaming the nation and paralyzing the government with his immature sexual behavior.

"He was a brilliant, talented, extraordinary child, and for the leader of the United States we need an adult," Rabbi David Wolpe, senior rabbi of Sinai Temple in the city's Westwood section, said Tuesday in recalling his 20-minute message to his congregation on Saturday.

The Lewinsky family didn't attend, and Wolpe didn't criticize Ms. Lewinsky.

Wolpe, author of such books as Teaching Your Children About God, Why Be Jewish? and The Healer of Shattered Hearts, said: "The leader of her nation is a source of shame."

"I think that people who are serious and thoughtful are heartbroken," Wolpe said. "What about people around the world who depend on American action and now there's a paralyzed administration? The government is in a half nelson."

He noted that the season of repentance in the Jewish calendar is coming, offering

Clinton an opportunity to "cleanse his soul."

"Even if his political life is over, and I really don't know if it is, his moral life isn't over," Wolpe said. "Judaism excuses sin but not emptiness. From his flinty, legalistic apology at first we got a sense this wasn't a person who takes responsibility for his sin."

"A leader doesn't have to be sinless, but a leader has to be repentant."

Woman shoots triplets, then self

By MICHAEL RUBINKAM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Miguellina Estevez had been alone with her 2-year-old triplet sons since the boys' father moved out, apparently returning to the Dominican Republic and another woman. She was 19, had no job and spoke little English.

On Monday, after trying to buy rat poison to kill herself and the boys, police say she shot each of her sons in the head with a semiautomatic pistol and then turned the gun on herself. Police found her body in the second-floor bedroom of her rowhouse and two of her sons dead nearby. The third boy was hospitalized in critical condition.

The boys were identified as Franklin, Frankelly and Fabian, or "Franky." Fabian survived the shooting but was declared brain dead by doctors at St. Christopher's Hospital Tuesday afternoon. Hospital officials said he remains on life support.

The tall, thin woman had come here three years ago from the Dominican Republic with her boyfriend, Franklin Sanchez.

About two months ago, recalled a friend, Joselyn Perez, Estevez became despondent after finding another woman's underwear in Sanchez's suitcase. Confronted with the evidence, Sanchez said he was leaving her to marry the other woman in the Dominican Republic, Perez said.

Estevez was devastated. She went to Perez's hair salon almost every afternoon to commiserate. "It's difficult when you're 19," said Perez, 32. "She just needed to talk to us." Earlier this month, her mood brightened a little after Sanchez called and said he wanted to work things out.

On Saturday, however, Estevez went to Paulina's Grocery and asked for rat poison, saying she wanted to kill herself. The storekeepers, Lauro Paulina and his wife Marguerita Diaz, told her they didn't have any.

"Then she said she wanted to go to Roosevelt Boulevard and throw herself in front of the cars, take her children with her," Marguerita Diaz said in Spanish. Diaz told her to seek help.

The next day, Estevez went back to the hair salon, but instead of discussing her problems, she talked about remodeling her house.

A family friend, Francisco Rodriguez, said Estevez called Sanchez's relatives early Monday, begging them to make her an appointment with a psychiatrist. He said she apparently got an appointment for Wednesday, but he didn't know any details.

National exposure from ASU's football team and other athletic programs have added to the University's population increase by attracting more prospective students.

"The girls are more beautiful and the men are more handsome," jokes P  w  , who still teaches one class on Grand Canyon geology. "But seriously, we have right now a bigger and better university than when I came here."

Dealing with ASU's growth

Although this year's enrollment will probably be lower than last year's, ASU officials said the population will continue to rise. As it grows, ASU will have to learn to deal with its size.

Last year, the influx of students overloaded dormitories, the Memorial Union and parking structures.

The 1997 Fall enrollment reached an all time high of 49,243, an increase of 2,192 students. This rapid jump was caused mostly by a 20% increase in freshmen, said Tim Desch, director of the undergraduate admissions.

"Some things, like sports events, gave us a lot of exposure across the nation," Desch said.

On all three of its campuses, ASU could support at least 20,000 more students, Desch said.

"We have every reason to believe that within 10 to 25 years ASU's population will increase substantially," Desch added.

"ASU is the only university in the state that's been continuously growing, while the other two universities (UofA in Tucson and NAU in Flagstaff) have leveled off a bit," said Regent Rudy Campbell.

And the growth is a good sign, officials said.

"We are able to serve more students," said Milton Glick, ASU provost. "That's a good thing."

Quantity won't affect quality

Increased numbers of students on campus could mean an increased number in the classroom. However, administrators said people shouldn't worry about growth affecting the quality of education.

"The quality of whatever we offer is not diminished when the population increases," Desch said.

P  w   agreed.

"We still can focus on individuals, especially in the upper division classes," he said. "And the only classes that are really overcrowded are classes that everyone has to take, like some math classes or courses with labs."

Still, some argue, the growth in students may cause problems.

"It will be a problem to make the Main campus available to the large number of students that will be coming here," Campbell said. "We don't have the money to expand the campus."

A campus too crowded?

The Main campus is about 1,000 students short from reaching its capacity, Desch said.

As for the money, ASU's budget reached $352.8 million this year. In an Arizona Board of Regents proposal for the next academic year, ASU requested $378.1 million, a 7.2 percent increase.

But while asking for more money is one way to think about the University's future, the administration needs to look also for other solutions, Campbell said.

Trying to spread the growth over to ASU West and ASU East is one major option, he added.

That's what Provost Glick also has in mind.

"I think ASU Main will grow modestly while the other two campuses will grow more quickly," Glick said.

And ASU West Provost Elaine Maimon has an idea how to speed up the growth.

"We need to get the message out to the students that you can get an ASU degree from ASU West," she said. "You don't have to be at the main campus to get a degree from this university."

As of Sept. 10, the West campus had close to 5,000 students, 3,463 of whom were full-time, a 4.1 percent increase

"I think ASU Main will grow modestly, while the other two campuses will grow more quickly.

Mike Curran for the State Press
Troy P  w  , an 80-year-old geology professor at ASU, came to the University in 1965 when parking was still free and available throughout campus.

from the previous year, Maimon said. The campus has a capacity for 5,000 full-time students.

The growth is possible because of the new programs the campus has launched, Glick said, using programs in education and business as an example.

"Students have more reasons to go there," he added.

But what the campus fails to offer are lower-division courses and there are no plans to initiate them in the near future, Maimon said. Instead, the campus is focusing on community colleges and students who could transfer to upper division classes from there.

Offering more options

ASU East, which had 1,052 students enrolled for the fall of 1997 and has a goal to reach 10,000 students by the year 2015, has also been pushed by ASU Main to extend the number of programs offered, especially in engineering and agriculture.

If the University can attract more students to these two campuses, that would avoid some problems that may be facing the Main campus, Campbell said.

Some of those problems include parking.

Even though Glick argued that parking has always been a problem on this campus, Péwé remembers times when it wasn't.

"When I came here, parking was really not a problem," he said.

And Linda Riegel, director of the ASU Parking & Transit Services, said the University doesn't currently face a problem with parking, either.

Riegel said only 90 percent of the available 19,700 parking spots are filled on a daily basis.

"We have a problem with convenience, though," Riegel said. "Students would like to park closer to the University than, for example, on lot 59."

Lot 59 is located north of Fifth Street, behind the Sun Devil Stadium.

Glick said in the year 2000, the University is anticipating opening new parking areas which would be built in the Tempe Center area.

The housing dilemma

ASU's administration is also in process of developing new facilities for student housing, which is an already existing problem on the Main campus.

"Yes, we definitely need more housing," said Kevin Cook, director of ASU's residential life.

Right now ASU has 4,880 beds to offer and that is not enough, he added.

Through developing new buildings and remodeling old ones, the University hopes to add about 600 extra beds within a year.

But the problem with housing is not only quantity, it is also quality, Glick said.

"We need to look at possibilities to add new beds on the campus that would be in smaller buildings," Glick added. "Most of the ones we offer now are located in very large houses."

Still, there is no hope for housing for married couples in the near future.

"This kind of housing just involves other issues to face, like children and daycare services for them," Cook said.

What there seems to be hope for, though, is that students at the Main campus will not see problems in terms of the catering and retail services the University offers.

Food for thought

Barbara Dickerson, director of the Memorial Union, said the facility's management would need to focus on opening new food services as ASU's population keeps increasing. Dickerson also added that there is no need to panic — yet.

According to Marriott, about 8,000 students are served in the Memorial Union each day.

And despite the long lines during lunchtime, the average time a customer spends waiting to get lunch is one minute, Marriott's officials said.

Dickerson said the time a student needs to spend before getting lunch at the MU — which was calculated at approximately seven minutes — is acceptable.

"During peak hours that is not unreasonable," she added.

The MU may not to experience too much pressure if the Main campus sticks to its projections, which call for only about 1,000 more students by the year 2015, officials said.

Overall, if the growth is directed toward the available facilities, ASU should be fine, Campbell said.

On top of that, the administration is also examining possibilities of weekend programs that would be offered at the main campus, Glick said.

If everything goes smoothly, the first of those proposed weekend classes may be offered as soon as the 1999 fall semester.

"It will be a very exciting experiment," Glick said.

Phonics opened the library doors to unread mysteries

Editor's note:
UNESCO's 22nd annual International Literacy Day was celebrated this month. The Associated Press marked the day with staffers' stories about their own reading — about the worlds that have been opened to them by words. The State Press will be running these vignettes as a daily series through the end of September.

read fast.

I went to the public library, even though I lived outside city limits and couldn't take books out. But I could read them there. So, after school I took books off the shelves and read, sitting in one of the big wooden chairs at one of the long black tables.

One day the librarian offered the name John Dickson Carr, and I was hooked for life on mysteries. From Carr, who solved locked-room mysteries, where murder was seemingly impossible, I discovered my favorites: those books that present the murder as a puzzle to be solved.

For years, I read a mystery followed by a "good" book, something considered real literature. I felt guilty about my glee when it was time to read a mystery. Then, one day long after college, I asked, "Why am I sticking to this rule?"

So I started reading one mystery after another, with only an occasional "good" book. It's as much fun as stretching out on that little pink rug in kindergarten.

Miss Rich, my second-grade teacher nearing retirement, believed in phonics and brought us up to speed on those matters.

This method didn't work for everybody, but it worked for me. I could read — and

Wallace mourners view open casket at Capitol

By KENDAL WEAVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Hundreds of black and white Alabamians on Tuesday filed past the open casket of former Gov. George Wallace at the Civil War-era Capitol where he once vowed, "Segregation now, segregation tomorrow, segregation forever!"

"I loved Governor Wallace," said Karen Lott, a white woman from Birmingham who was one of the mourners filing through the Capitol where Jefferson Davis was sworn in as president of the Confederacy in 1861.

"I believed in what he stood for — honesty, decency, and he didn't believe in drinking. He had family values."

Malia Ragan, a white woman and one of many state workers filing through the rotunda, said: "It's a real sad day. I think it's the end of an era."

Wallace, who died Sunday of cardiac arrest at age 79, was elected governor four times — in 1962, 1970, 1974 and 1982 — with his first wife, Lurleen, winning in 1966 as his stand-in.

During his years in Montgomery, Wallace attracted national attention for his fiery rhetoric on race. In 1963, when he was sworn into office, he declared: "In the name of the greatest people that have ever trod this earth, I draw the line in the dust and toss the gauntlet before the feet of tyranny. And I say ... segregation now, segregation tomorrow, segregation forever!"

That same year, he made his "stand in the schoolhouse door" to try to prevent blacks from enrolling at the University of Alabama. He tried, again without success, to block the Selma-to-Montgomery voting rights march in 1965.

Wallace was shot by a would-be assassin as he campaigned for president in 1972 — his third bid for the presidency. The gunman, Arthur Bremer, remains in prison in Maryland. Bremer argued in a letter written last year and released Tuesday that he should be freed because shooting "segregationist dinosaurs" is not as bad as hurting mainstream politicians.

But by his fourth term, Wallace courted and received black support, and he appointed blacks to Cabinet-level posts and judgeships.

Many remembered him Tuesday as a friendly, caring man. "He was a straight man," said Joe Rudolph, a black man hired to work in the governor's office mail room in 1967. "He had respect for me as a black person. A lot of people had a misconception about him. ... I could go to him and talk to him."

campaigned on a flatbed truck, was among the first in line to walk past the casket.

"I thought he was a courageous man," she said. "If he had been president, he would

Man convicted of strangling grandchild for licking cupcake icing

HOUSTON (AP) — A man has been convicted of strangling his 3-year-old granddaughter because she licked icing off cupcakes.

David Andrew Douglas, 49, a restaurant dish washer, faces either a death sentence or life in prison following Monday's conviction in the Jan. 10, 1997, murder of Shelby Lynne Barrackman.

Douglas acknowledged drinking at his daughter's house, where he was supposed to care for Shelby, and claimed he blacked out and did not remember anything about the rest of the day.

His attorneys claimed that a confession he gave police was coerced.

Prosecutors said Douglas became angry when he found Shelby had eaten the icing off cupcakes she found in the kitchen, and became angrier when his scolding made her cry.

"He squeezed the life out of a 3-year-old girl," prosecutor Casey O'Brien said.

The child's body was found later that day in a nearby field.

Poised Elliott pleased with Sun Devil debut

BY DOUG FLANAGAN
STATE PRESS

At the conclusion of Camp Tontozona, senior Steve Campbell and redshirt freshman Chad Elliott were listed as co-backup quarterbacks to Ryan Kealy on ASU's depth chart.

However, it was Elliott who received the call to relieve Kealy in the fourth quarter of Saturday's 26-6 loss to Brigham Young University in Provo, the first time he saw game action since his senior year at Grant High School in Sacramento, Calif.

"Actually, I wasn't nervous," he said. "I had a lot of adrenaline going through my body, though, because I haven't played since high school. It was good to get in there, feel the hits again and get back in the swing of things."

Elliott looked sharp, completing four of seven passes for 47 yards.

"I feel like I did all right," he said. "I wish I would've got in there earlier so I could've got more rhythm, but I got some time, and that's what I need."

Offensive coordinator Dan Cozzetto said the decision to play Elliott was made well in advance, and it had no negative reflections on the performance of Campbell, who filled in for an injured Kealy in last season's Sun Bowl victory.

"We decided early in the week that if (we had the opportunity), we'd get Chad into the game and see what he could do," he said. "It just felt like the right decision at the right time. Ryan was struggling a little bit, he was taking enough hits and we weren't protecting him real well. So we felt (let's) see what Chad can do. We know what Steve can do, so let's take a look at Chad.

"It just depends upon the situation of the game. If it's late in the game and we need someone to manage the game, we'd put Steve in because he's been there, done that. But we wanted to take a look at Chad and see what he could do and that's why the decision was made."

•To many, BYU's victory over ASU was a surprise. But to Sun Devil running back J.R. Redmond, it was not a shock at all.

"I'm shocked about the first game, but the second game? No. Not really," he said. "You can really tell going into the week what's going to happen. If guys don't take things seriously or don't practice hard, you're going to lose. You can't expect to go four or five days without preparation and then just turn it on. You have to practice perfect in order to play perfect."

According to head coach Bruce Snyder, Tuesday's practice was a small step in that direction.

"Today was about 10 times better than last Tuesday, but not good enough," he said. "We are setting our standards really high. (Last Tuesday) was a terrible practice."

Kealy added, "I don't think we were pushing each other as much as we should've (last Tuesday), and maybe not encouraging each other."

Bears, Ducks predicted to battle for Pac-10 volleyball cellar

BY DAVID MYERS
STATE PRESS

Editor's note: This is part one of a two-part series previewing the 1998 Pac-10 volleyball season. Part two will run in Thursday's edition.

10. California Golden Bears (8-19, 3-15). Head coach: Sue Woodstra.

Key players: The Bears return a nucleus of players from last year's squad, including junior outside hitter Brook Coulter, sophomore outside hitter Alicia Perry and junior middle blocker Kellie Alva. Coulter is one of the best passers in the conference and was also fourth in the Pac-10 in ace average.

Perry is an explosive player who is now fully recovered from a broken leg suffered in 1996. Last season as a redshirt freshman, she ranked second on the team in both dig (2.56) and kill average (2.61). Alva is a steady middle blocker who is currently 10th on Cal's all-time list with a .204 career hitting percentage.

Top newcomers: If the Bears want to compete this year, they will need a contribution from the incoming class of players. The class is led by freshman blue-chipper Candace McNamee. McNamee, a 6-0 setter from Washington, D.C., was named an All-American as a senior and was a member of the USA Junior National Team.

"We are real excited about Candace's athletic ability and she has an opportunity to make a huge impact on our volleyball program," Woodstra said. "She will be put into the fire right away as our starting setter, but I think getting the experience will be positive and she will respond well to the situation."

Outlook: Unless they can get an outstanding performance from their new players, this could be a very long season for the Golden Bears.

9. Oregon Ducks (9-21, 1-17). Head coach: Cathy Nelson.

Key players: The Ducks return their most valuable player from last year in senior Madeline Ernst. She lead the team in kills in 22 of the Ducks games last year and has the highest single-game output in Ducks history with 29.

"Madeline is our go-to player, our workhorse," Nelson said. "She has really come a long way this spring and that is going to make her a premier player in this conference."

With two years of Division I play under her belt, Shellie Nisle is also expected to make a big impact for the Ducks.

Top newcomers: Freshmen Monique Tobaggi and Julie Gerlach are looking to make an immediate impact this year for the Ducks. With her 6-foot frame, she will be a big addition to the Ducks blocking game.

Outlook: With all the new additions this year, it should be the season of hard knocks this season for the Ducks, but next year could be a whole new ballgame.

8. Oregon State Beavers (14-17, 5-13). Head coach: Jeff Mozzochi.

Key players: This year's edition of the Beavers may be young, but the talent is there. The roster is filled with five sophomores, five freshmen, three juniors and no seniors.

Among those sophomores returning are Angie Shirley and Krista Kinsman, who both earned Pac-10 All-Freshman Team last season. Shirley finished her first season with a 1.31 block-per-game average to rank seventh in the conference.

"Angie showed she's got great potential," Mozzochi said. "As she gains more experience, she'll be a major factor for our team."

Top newcomers: The Beavers have two new players that should be able to help the team immediately. Gina Schmidt, from Alberta, comes to Oregon State as one of the top female athletes out of Canada and should be a key factor for OSU.

"Gina is a very solid, all-around player," Mozzochi said. "She could play a number of positions, including some setting, and she has very good all-around skills."

Outlook: The Beavers gave themselves a tough schedule in the preseason to prepare themselves for tough conference play, but it still won't be enough to get into the postseason.

7. UofA Wildcats (20-7, 12-6). Head coach: David Rubio.

Key players: The Wildcats only return one starter from last year's squad that finished the season with 20 wins — junior outside hitter Raelene Elam, who finished third in the conference in service aces last year with 0.35 per game.

"(Elam) worked hard and got a lot stronger," Rubio said. "She's become one of our best all-around players and she's one of our few players who really brings some experience to the program."

Top newcomers: The Wildcats boast one of the strongest group of recruits in the nation, which should balance the loss of their upperclassmen. Leading this highly touted group is high school All-American Dana Burkholder from Bakersfield, Calif. Burkholder has already been named the starting setter for the Wildcats and the coach seems to be confident about it.

"Dana, without question, is the top setter in the class," Rubio said. "Her leadership skills are unmatched and I know she'll be able to make the adjustment to the Pac-10. She may take this team where it's never been before."

Outlook: The Wildcats have no real experience to help them during the latter portion of their schedule, and unless somebody can step up, the Wildcats could have a real tough time this season.

6. Washington State Cougars (26-7, 12-6). Head coach: Cindy Fredrick.

Key players: The Cougars lost four starters from last year's team, but still have enough talent coming back to compete for the postseason. WSU is led by senior All Pac-10 middle blocker Jennifer Stinson. Stinson's 3.45 kills and 1.56 blocks per game averages were tops on the team and her blocking was among the top 10 in the nation.

"Jennifer is an incredible blocker," Fredrick said. "She reads so well and she reaches and penetrates very well also. She has really improved her game."

Senior Wendy Rouse came on strong last season as a right side hitter, but had her season cut short because of injury. With 2.51 kills a game to go along with 0.97 blocks a game, she follows Stinson with the best statistics among Cougar returnees.

Top newcomers: The new Cougars are led by freshman, Missy Blackshire. Blackshire, a 5-11 outside hitter, was named the Washington Gatorade Player of the Year and was one of the Fab 50 recruits last season.

"Missy is going to have an affect on this team right away," Fredrick said. "I really like her style of play and her attitude about the game."

Outlook: Fans in Pullman have begun to expect nothing short of a postseason berth from the Cougars and this year shouldn't be any different. Look for the Cougars to be among the teams chasing a conference championship and a tournament berth.

Pinch-hitter McGwire slugs 63rd home run

ST. LOUIS (AP) — It took Mark McGwire only one at-bat to take back sole possession of the home run record.

McGwire, pinch-hitting in the ninth inning, hit his 63rd home run Tuesday night to move ahead of Sammy Sosa in the great race.

McGwire ended a six-game homer drought with his solo shot off Pittsburgh reliever Jason Christiansen in St. Louis' 8-6 loss to the Pirates in the first game of a doubleheader.

The Cardinals slugger did not start the opener as a precaution for his ailing back, and to allow more fans a chance to see him play. The games were sold out, but only about 10,000 fans were watching when the first game began at 5:10 p.m. CDT.

The ballpark was filled by the time McGwire, batting for leadoff hitter Delino DeShields, made his third pinch-hit appearance of the season with one out and nobody on in the ninth. On a 1-0 pitch, he hit a long drive measured at 385 feet into the bleachers in left-center field. It was his sixth career pinch-hit homer.

The homer was McGwire's first since he broke Roger Maris' record with No. 62 on Sept. 8, and restored his lead over Sosa, whose Chicago Cubs played at San Diego later Tuesday.

McGwire had been 3-for-18 since breaking the record.

Kevin Young's three-run home run snapped a fifth-inning tie in a game that featured six homers, two by Cardinals rookie J.D. Drew.

Young's homer off Donovan Osborne (4-4) snapped a 2-for-35 slump. Drew connected twice, including a 421-foot drive to center in the fifth, and hit into two double plays.

Drew's two-homer game was the first by a Cardinals rookie since Bernard Gilkey on Oct. 5, 1991.

Jose Guillen added a two-run homer in the third for the Pirates, who snapped a three-game losing streak and won for only the fourth time in 18 games. Ray Lankford had a two-run homer for the Cardinals.

Sean Lawrence (2-1), the third Pittsburgh pitcher, allowed a run in 2 1-3 innings. Rich Loiselle got two outs for his 19th save.

Both starters struggled. Jon Lieber lasted three innings for Pittsburgh, allowing four runs on five hits. Osborne went four innings for St. Louis and gave up seven runs on six hits.

Astros win on Bell's 12th-inning homer

HOUSTON (AP) — For the second straight night, the New York Mets overcame a two-run deficit in the ninth inning. This time, the Houston Astros came back to win.

Derek Bell hit a leadoff home run in the 12th off Jeff Tam, and the Astros dampened the Mets' wild-card run with a 6-5 victory Tuesday in the first game of a doubleheader.

New York, which began the day tied with Chicago for the NL wild-card lead, tied it in the ninth on Carlos Baerga's two-run homer off Scott Elarton. Then Mets left fielder Jay Payton threw out the potential winning run in the bottom half.

Rey Ordonez, who earlier hit his third career home run, put the Mets ahead 5-4 in the 11th with an RBI double off Elarton. But John Franco could not hold the edge, giving up Jeff Bagwell's 33rd home run leading off the bottom half.

Jay Powell (7-5) pitched a scoreless 12th, striking out Brian McRae with runners on second and third to end the inning. Tam (1-1) took the loss.

On Monday night, the Mets also trailed 4-2 in the ninth when McRae hit a two-run homer off Billy Wagner. New York went on to win 7-4 in 13 innings and tied Chicago in the NL wild-card race.

The Astros wound up clinching the NL Central title late Monday night when the Cubs lost. Bell, who entered the game in the eighth, Bagwell, Moises Alou and Craig

Mary Butkus of the Associated Press
Mark McGwire didn't start the first game of Tuesday's doubleheader against Pittsburgh, but he had plenty of reasons to smile after blasting his 63rd home run of the season in a rare pinch-hitting appearance.

Biggio did not start for Houston.

Baerga's tying homer followed McRae's walk and a groundout. It was the seventh home run of the season for Baerga, who has just two homers and 15 RBIs since the All-Star break.

Houston had a chance to win in the ninth when Tim Bogar doubled off Rigo Beltran leading off. Mitch Meluskey followed with a single to left, but Payton — who has come back from elbow surgery — easily threw Bogar out at home. Meluskey tried to bowl over catcher Todd Hundley, who had the ball with the runner still about 15 feet from the plate.

Japanese typhoon swamps Sun Devil golf teams

From Staff and Wire Reports

The ASU women's golf team, which has won an unprecedented sixth NCAA championships in eight years, had its season delayed by one day.

Damage caused by a typhoon led to the cancellation of the first round of the 18-team TOPY Cup in Tanaguara, Japan.

ASU's men's and women's golf teams both missed the season-opening tourney's first round due to the unexpected harsh weather. First-round action was called off at 10:30 a.m. (Japan time) on Sept. 16 (5:30 p.m. on Sept. 15 Arizona time).

Bunkers on the Tanaguara Country Club Golf Course were filled with water and several trees fell down, according to ASU assistant women's coach Ashley Adleta.

Participants will attempt to play a second round on Sept. 17, and third-round action will continue on Sept. 18. The men's field features ASU, UofA, UCLA, UNLV and eight Japanese university teams. The women's side includes ASU, UofA and four Japanese teams.

ASU swept the long-drive competition, with sophomores Paul Casey and Grace Park winning the men's and women's contests, respectively.

Women's golf preview

Head coach Linda Vollstedt sent an experienced and talented team, anchored by sophomore and reigning U.S. Amateur champion Park, into action against a field consisting of MasterCard preseason No. 2 UofA and four Japanese collegiate teams.

Park is accompanied by fellow sophomore Michaela Friberg, seniors Tui Selvaratnam, Keri Cornelius and Jody Niemann and sophomore Michaela Friberg.

Park is currently ranked second individually in the preseason MasterCard rankings. She had a 73.12 stroke per round average last year which was second best in the nation, and she finished third overall in last year's national championship after her first round score tied the tournament record.

Over the summer Park received the 1998 Rolex/Eleanor Dudley College

Player of the Year Award and became the first player in 60 years to sweep the major U.S. women's amateur events, claiming top honors at the U.S. Amateur, the Western Amateur and the Trans National Championship.

In addition to Park, the Sun Devils will rely on three upperclassmen with experience.

Cornelius had five top 20-finishes, played in all 11 tournaments for the Sun Devils a year ago and finished the 1997 season with a 27th-place finish at the NCAAs. Selvaratnam had two top-10 performances for ASU last year and played in all but one event for the Sun Devils. Niemann was hampered by a nagging shoulder injury during the 1997 campaign and saw limited action, but she is 100 percent this year and will be counted on by Vollstedt to be a solid contributor.

Friberg is coming off a redshirt season last year after playing in four tournaments for the Sun Devils as a freshman two years ago when her best finish (a 24th-place tie) came at the GolfWorld Collegiate tournament.

You can bank on us!
 Earn up to $192 a month by donating potentially life-saving plasma! Visit our friendly, modern center and find out more about the opportunity to earn cash while helping others. As part of a Company research program, an experimental test will be performed on your plasma which could potentially benefit plasma product recipients in the years to come! Your research participation is entirely voluntary; however, it is required if you want to donate plasma.

TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.

When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.

Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower—Raytheon Systems Company, composed of four major technological giants: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems, Raytheon TI Systems and Hughes Aircraft. The new Raytheon Systems Company is driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.

At Raytheon, you'll take technology—and your career—to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth. We'll be visiting your campus soon. Contact your career placement office now to schedule an interview, or check out our website at www.rayjobs.com. If you are unable to meet with us, please send your resume to: Raytheon Resume Processing Center, P.O. Box 660246, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75266. We have many exciting opportunities available and we would like to talk to you.
