ASU space center may lift off by 2001

BY STEPHANIE PATERIK
STATE PRESS

In the year 2001, ASU students could be the first in the nation to control space craft from the University's campus.

Phil Christensen, a professor in the department of geology, submitted a proposal Friday to the NASA-sponsored Jet Propulsion Laboratory at Cal Tech University for an ASU space flight center.

Approval from University administrators has already been secured, and Patrick Burkhardt, director of Research Development at ASU, said he expects a response from JPL by the end of the year.

"This is so unique because it would be the only place where students could learn to function deep space craft," Burkhardt said. "It's a wonderful learning and career opportunity."

Although the satellites and instruments of space craft are designed to last far beyond their actual missions, NASA's budget calls for missions with firm ending dates.

If approved, the proposal would allow ASU students and faculty to resume the responsibility of operating three space crafts until they are no longer functional. The first mission of the proposed space flight center would begin on July 1, 2001, with the Mars Global Surveyor, which is already in orbit.

"Under the arrangement we've proposed, undergraduate and graduate students would have an opportunity to learn to work space craft," Burkhardt said. "They will also work with science teams to make observations. We would monitor the health of the space craft, including all systems and instrumentation."

The department initiated discussions with JPL 18 months ago, and have been working over the past year to plan how a campus space flight center might work.

Another part of the proposal is an exchange program between ASU professors and employees of JPL, enabling JPL to be a part of the educational process at the University. ASU would also work with JPL to resolve any threatening conditions discovered on the craft.

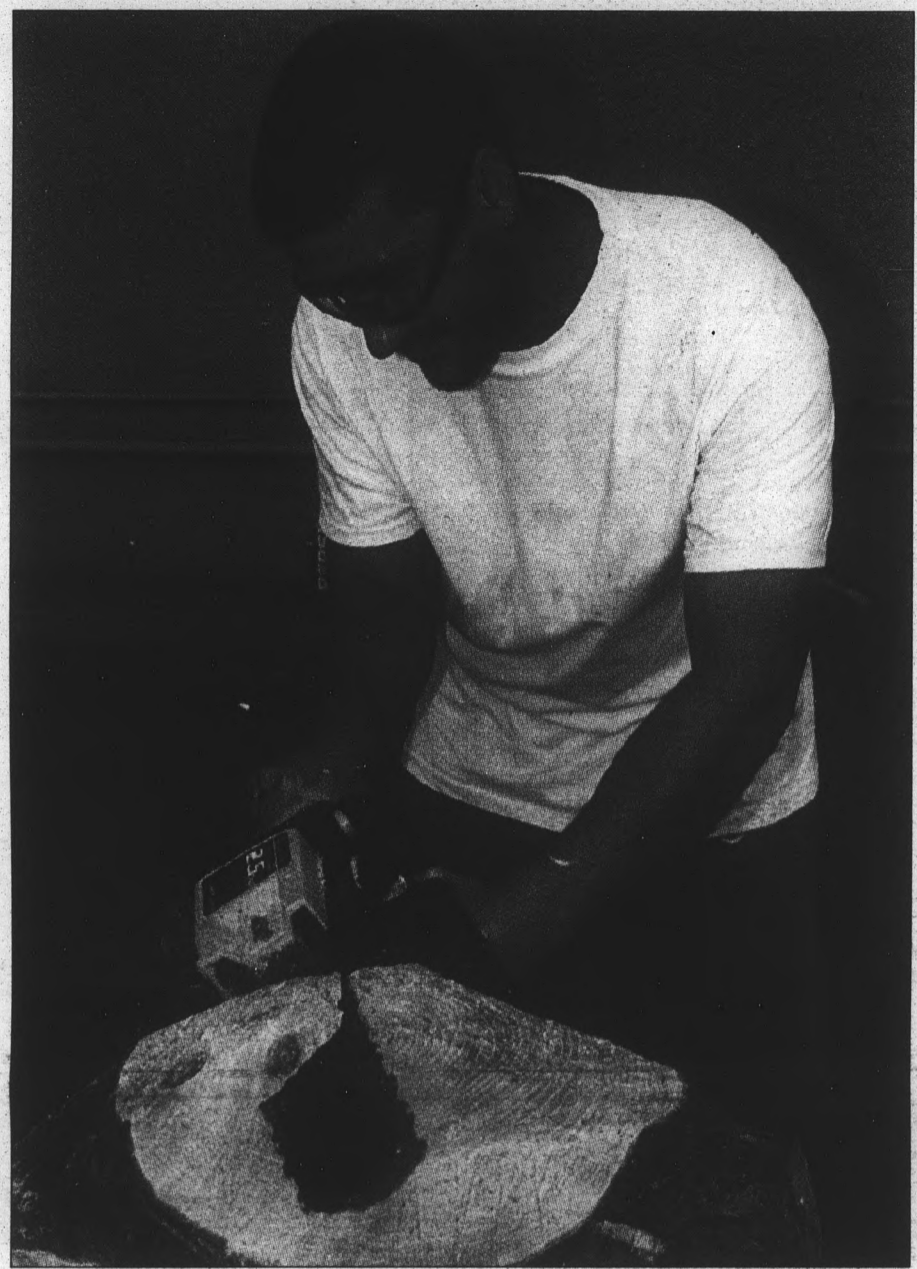

Burkhardt said interdisciplinary and community involvement is also a possibility if the proposal is approved. The college of engineering is supporting the proposal, and the ASU Mars Educational Outreach Program could work with the space flight center to involve the elementary school students in making scientific observations of space craft.

The most exciting aspect of the proposed space flight center would be the advantage ASU students could have in the field of science, said Burkhardt.

"We've spent 18 months working on this idea and are very hopeful that we've put together a proposal that the Jet Propulsion Laboratory will find attractive," Burkhardt said. "We would like to form a long term partnership with them to provide opportunities for students."

New anti-tobacco ads target college-age smokers

BY LIDIA E. KELLY
STATE PRESS

Rick Madderman's life has been filled with cigarette smoke for the last 17 years.

In the beginning, when Madderman was only 15, a cigarette in his mouth was nothing but a pleasure.

Now, the 32-year-old ASU senior in exercise science would like to see the smoke blown away from his life for good.

"It's my last bad habit," Madderman said. "And I'd love to get rid of it."

But he can't, he added. He is addicted.

"All I have been able to do so far is to limit my smoking to 10 cigarettes a day," Madderman said.

The Arizona Department of Health Services (ADHS) launched its new campaign last week to reach adult tobacco users like Madderman in mind.

"We want to encourage them to quit this suicidal procedure," said Brad Christensen, communications director for ADHS.

The campaign, funded by tobacco taxes, includes television and radio spots, as well as billboard and print advertising, Christensen said.

According to a survey conducted by ADHS in 1996 about 750,000 Arizonans 18 or older smoke on daily basis. The largest group of tobacco users was found among people who are college age, between 18 and 24.

More than 27 percent of the 429,361 Arizonans who belong to this group smoke extensively, Christensen said.

The new ADHS campaign is an addition to an already existing one which is geared towards teenagers and is commonly known as the "Tobacco — tumor causing, teeth staining, smelly puking habit" one.

Christensen said there are no numbers on how many teenagers have quit smoking so far because of the campaign.

"But we feel that it has had an impact," he added.

And he said he believes the new campaign for adult smokers will have an impact, too.

But Madderman said he does not think the TV spots will encourage him or other people to give up smoking.

"You won't see these ads while sitting in a bar or hanging out with your friends," he said. "And these are the times when the decisions on smoking are usually made."

Nancy Stephens, an ASU associate professor in marketing, said the campaign is a mistake.

"There is no incentive," Stephens said. "Smoking is very pleasurable and a social campaign is not going to make people give away their pleasure."

Tempe man's kidnapper apprehended by police

BY ALICIA A. CALDWELL
STATE PRESS

A lazy Saturday afternoon turned violent for a Tempe man after he was knocked down, forced into his apartment and held at gunpoint for two hours.

Quick thinking and a handy can of mace helped the man end the dangerous saga and led to the arrest of 33-year-old Harold Wayne Patterson, a homeless man originally from St. Louis, Mo.

Patterson was charged with kidnapping, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and burglary as a result of the incident, police said.

Patterson held the man in the victim's apartment for two hours and assaulted him. According to reports, Patterson held a gun to the man's head, saying, "I'm going to kill you."

After the man sprayed mace in Patterson's face, Patterson reportedly took the victim's dog and fled the apartment.

According to Tempe police Sgt. David Lind, Patterson was arrested after he called the Phoenix Fire Department for help, shortly after 5 p.m. When officers and paramedics arrived to help Patterson, he was taken into custody and transported to Tempe City Jail to appear before a magistrate.

Details of the victim's condition were not reported.

Patterson is facing felony charges in relation to the kidnapping and assault of the Tempe man, Lind said. He was held pending a decision by judge. It is typical for a suspect to be transported the county jail facilities in a case like this.

He added that it is unlikely that Patterson would have been released if it was determined that he would be a flight risk.

Today for Tuesday

Campus clubs and organizations may submit written entries to the State Press in the basement of the Matthews Center. Requests will not be taken over the phone or via fax.

Deadline for requests is noon the day before publication and entries will not be accepted more than three working days before publication. Only one entry per organization per day is permitted.

Entries must contain the full name of the club or organization, a description of the event, date, time and the full address of the location. All requests are subject to editing for content, space and clarity. Incomplete or illegible entries will be discarded.

The Today Section is a daily calendar of events printed as a service to the ASU community. Requests are accepted on a first-come, first-served basis and are printed as space permits.

Stephens also said most of the people already know cigarettes are bad for them and only health problems or social consequences will make them quit.

"I think the campaign is a complete waste of money," Stephens added.

ADHS receives $25 million from tobacco taxes and about half of the money goes into the two campaigns.

And Christensen said he believes the campaign is the right thing to do.

"They (tobacco users) need a little help and encouragement," he said. "And that's what we're giving them."

Man with new hand has 'good weekend', docs say

LYON, France (AP) — A 48-year-old man who got a new right hand and forearm is eating and drinking normally four days after the 13-hour surgery, the hospital reported Monday.

The grafted right hand, the hospital said, was "well colored" — an apparent sign of satisfactory blood circulation.

The five-line hospital statement identified the patient for the first time by name: Clint Hallam. Hospital personnel said Hallam is from New Zealand but lives in Perth, Australia.

"Clint Hallam ... had a very good weekend," the statement said. It added that the dressing was changed and "he will be able to get up today."

Neither the press service for the Lyon public hospital system nor doctors at Edouard Herriot Hospital could confirm whether Hallam did, indeed, leave his bed Monday.

The hospital described his condition simply as "satisfactory."

Dr. Jean-Michel Dubernard, co-leader of the transplant team, was not immediately available for comment.

"It gives hope to all those who are victims of domestic or work accidents, anti-personnel mines, or have congenital deformations," Dubernard told French television after Thursday's surgery.

The surgery was carried out in hopes of giving Hallam a right hand — his own was amputated in 1989 after an accident. An anonymous donor provided the replacement body parts.

In the operation, arteries, veins, nerves, tendons, muscles and skin were attached after the two bones of the forearm were set.

Doctors in Ecuador tried the procedure in the 1960s, but the patient's body rejected the hand after two weeks. The University of Louisville Medical Center in Kentucky plans a donor hand transplant this year.

The surgery involves serious risks. Patients must take anti-rejection medication that suppresses the immune system to keep the body from destroying the foreign tissue. But the suppression of the immune system leaves the patient more vulnerable to other diseases.

Even if the patient doesn't reject the donor hand, he could face other problems, including the failure of nerves to regenerate sufficiently to allow sensation, such as hot and cold

Georges pounds Gulf Coast; Big Easy spared

BY STEPHEN HAWKINS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASCAGOULA, Miss. — Hurricane Georges plowed into the Gulf Coast on Monday and then parked there, weakening to a tropical storm but pouring rain at an inch-an-hour pace for what could be a long and ruinous stay.

Winds dropped to just over 69 mph, six mph below hurricane strength and down from a high of 110. New Orleans was spared the catastrophic direct hit that many in the Big Easy had feared.

But that was little comfort to the thousands who huddled in shelters from Florida to Louisiana and were expected to remain there for days. Outside, all was chaos — trees ripped from the ground, windows sucked from their frames, floods roaring down roads.

"In some areas, there's water to rooftops and 4 to 5 feet of water in many other homes. I've never seen anything like it in more than 50 years," said Jackson County administrator George Touart, after a tour of Pascagoula, where 15 inches of rain fell overnight.

Forecasters said up to 30 inches could fall by the time the storm clears out sometime in the middle of the week.

National Guardsmen waded through chest-deep water to carry children and lead adults to safety from a flooded housing project near downtown Mobile, Ala. In the Florida Panhandle, Guardsmen had to rescue about 200 people from their flooded homes.

A man in a wheelchair was rescued in Moss Point, Miss., by emergency workers who found him trapped in his home with floodwater up to his lap.

In New Orleans, where authorities had feared the worst — a sopping rain and huge storm surge that would put the entire city under water — there was a collective sigh of relief. Instead of hitting the Big Easy head on, Georges struck at Ocean Springs, Miss., between Biloxi and Pascagoula, dealing New Orleans rain and wind but no catastrophe.

"We, by taking the brunt at Ocean Springs, saved the city of New Orleans," said Mississippi Gov. Kirk Fordice. "It was spared from the untellable misery that would have occurred."

Two storm-related deaths were reported. A man died Monday in a New Orleans fire started by candles being used for light after the hurricane knocked out electricity. An 86-year-old woman died while she and 250 other nursing home residents waited for beds in a Baton Rouge shelter.

Earlier, in its odyssey across the Caribbean, Georges

Mobile, Ala., residents walk past a flooded car as they try to return to their homes on Monday. The Mobile River escaped its banks when Hurricane Georges made landfall along the Mississippi Coast, causing extensive damage and flooding to four states.

killed more than 300 people.

"We got off pretty lucky," said Derek Pociask, who was walking his dogs through a burst of rain on St. Charles Avenue in New Orleans. "It'd be nice to have electricity, but I'm glad this has turned out to be just a bad rainstorm."

More than 678,000 customers were without power across the Gulf Coast. As the storm moved in, more than 1.5 million people had been told to evacuate along the coast, and hotel rooms were hard to find as far away as Memphis, Tenn., and Dallas.

"Everybody's been sleeping or everybody's been watching the rain," said Becky Chamberlain, 15, at a Gulfport shelter. "Mostly everybody has been waiting for this to go away and wondering when it's going to be through."

Nearly 14,700 people in Mississippi alone were staying in shelters, though their safety was not assured: The roof was ripped off a gymnasium at Mississippi Gulf Coast Community College in Gautier, forcing the evacuation of 404 residents. Ninety others at Trent Lott Middle School in Pascagoula stayed put after the roof was damaged, apparently by a tornado.

In New Orleans, 10,000 spent the night in the Superdome.

Most evacuees were told to put off any plans to return to their homes because it was too dangerous.

President Clinton meets in the Oval Office Monday, with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, left, and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat. A break in the stalemated peace process was announced by the president who said the adversaries would return to Washington in October to resume talks.

Netanyahu, Arafat establish time for West Bank accord

BY BARRY SCHWEID
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat agreed Monday to work toward reaching a West Bank accord at a mid-October White House summit, after Netanyahu reported a breakthrough on how much land Israel will yield.

President Clinton, acting as mediator, set up the October meeting during a session Monday with Netanyahu and Arafat. "I believe that we all agreed that we have made progress on the path to peace," he said.

As he headed back to Israel, Netanyahu expressed optimism that the long-sought accord could be in hand in October — if the Palestinians reciprocated for Israel's promised pullback from the West Bank with stiffer anti-terrorism measures.

"I can't tell you that we agree on everything. That would not be true," Netanyahu said. "But I can tell you that we agreed on quite a few things."

That, he said, was "a good start," and there will be a mid-October summit.

Arafat, meanwhile, hurried back to New York, where in a speech to the U.N. General Assembly he appealed for support for a Palestinian state, but pointedly did not repeat a controversial vow to declare one unilaterally if Israel did not go along.

Arafat urged the General Assembly to "stand by our people," and stressed that the Oslo peace accords expire on May 4. "Our people demand of us to shoulder our responsibilities and they await the establishment of their independent state," he said.

Flooding, mudslides in Mexico City cause 5 deaths, 4 injuries

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Heavy rains swelled rivers in central Mexico and triggered mudslides in Mexico City that killed five people and injured four others Monday.

The rain soaked squatter communities perched on the steep slopes of hillsides south of the city. Television footage showed a stream of mud roaring down gullies and the ruins of two homes that had been swept away.

City officials had predicted the rainy season could bring disaster to the shantytowns that ring the city's hillsides, but most people refused to relocate.

"It's very difficult to convince them. They don't want to leave their houses," said Aurelio Garcia, a spokesman for the Magdalena Contreras precinct, where the deaths happened.

A house made of metal sheeting was swept away, killing a 13-year-old girl. Two boys who suffered head injuries in the collapse were evacuated by helicopter to a hospital in the city's center.

"I heard a loud rumble and I went outside and saw my neighbors buried there," said Pedro Ramirez, 55.

Another family was buried in their home when mud came streaming down on top of it earlier in the day. Two teen-agers were pulled from the house alive by local police, but both their parents died.

Two other people were killed when a muddy hillside collapsed on top of a containment wall, crushing their house. In all, half a dozen houses were destroyed in slides.

Mayor Cuauhtemoc Cardenas declared a state of alert, government news agency Notimex reported. City officials issued evacuation warnings to people living near a dam in the western part of the city that was on the verge of overflowing.

Cardenas said the government would not force squatters from their homes.

Some neighborhoods in a low-lying area east of Mexico City have been flooded for days, and to the west, the Lerma River overflowed its banks and left some villages inundated in sewage.

Mexico City's main highway to the western part of the country also was blocked by a mudslide Monday. Rains are expected to continue, the National Meteorological service said.

Increase in baby deaths shows irresponsibility

At 11 p.m. on Friday, a Salt River Project worker removed a white plastic bag from the Highline Canal and put it aside with the other trash he or she had collected.

What he or she didn't know was the contents of the bag — the body of a newborn girl.

The next morning, at about 11 a.m., a man was walking his dog along the canal when he discovered the girl's body, gruesomely torn from the bag by animals that had feasted upon her leg.

According to Phoenix police, the baby girl was 12 to 24 hours old when she died. They have not determined whether she was alive before she was stuffed in the garbage bag and dumped into the South Phoenix canal.

This is the fourth time in the past year a baby girl has been found abandoned in Phoenix. Unlike this incident however, the other three girls were found alive.

Here's the obvious question on everyone's minds: WHY?

Why would someone dump their baby in a canal? Why would someone kill a baby, period? Why is this becoming a more and more common occurrence?

It's not just Phoenix, it's nationwide. In New Jersey, 19-year-old Melissa Drexler gave birth at the prom, then killed her baby, leaving it in the trash can. Also in New Jersey, two teenagers went to Delaware, delivered their baby in a motel room, then left the baby in the motel dumpster. In Chicago, a mother stopped to get a manicure before taking her underweight, neglected baby to the hospital — causing him to die in the nail salon.

These are just a few of the instances of neglect, abandonment and murder of unwanted babies by irresponsible, unbalanced parents. Sadly, these disgusting displays are becoming so common, they all seem to run together in our minds.

And these are the instances we know about. Imagine how many babies are murdered and abandoned, their lifeless bodies never found, their spirits never put to rest.

There is absolutely no excuse for this behavior. Teenage pressure to fit in, feelings of loneliness, an inability to talk to parents, or not having the money to take care of a child aren't excuses. It is a pathetic sign of the times that people have stooped so low, that personal accountability is null and void for so many.

How many couples are unable to have children, and are waiting for years on a list to adopt? And, while some may argue that this is no better, how many clinics offer abortion services?

The point is, there are options. Arguably, anyone who is capable of murdering and/or abandoning a child may not care enough to seek them out. But choosing the irresponsible and morally reprehensible way out will not free them of responsibility, or of their own guilt.

If you have information, contact the Phoenix police department.

If you are responsible, know that you will be found, and you will pay for your actions.

Increase in divorces must be stopped

As a child, I always wondered what it would be like to have a "complete family." The term sounds like one of those ideal, metal tins of dolls which include a father, mother, girl and boy, all with enviously tanned skin and immaculate matching synthetic hair framing their Plaster-of-Paris like grins. Ah, yes. And if one were fortunate enough, perhaps a baby ... no, a set of twins would top the suitably clad bunch.

This was nowhere close to the makeup of my family. In fact, my immediate family, politically speaking, consisted of my mom and myself. I know for a fact that I am not the only one who spent her sunny afternoons locked up in her room wishing her imaginary dad would come rescue her from her "mean" mother who insisted she eat broccoli.

Now I know that many of us aren't married and some of us can't even imagine exchanging vows anytime soon. (I'd say 80 is a good time to get settled down, don't you?) But some have already gotten hitched or intend to sometime within our lives. Divorce is an issue that cannot be dealt with lightly. A healthy marriage leads to a healthy future generation. I was fortunate enough to grow up with a caring mother who provided all the love and attention for two parents, but even so, I can't help wonder what it would have been like to have a father.

Between 50 and 65 percent of marriages fail, according to nationwide statistics. A poll showed that if a couple married within the first stages of a relationship, noted as romantic love, divorce would be highest.

Divorce, in Webster's Dictionary, is defined as "a legal dissolution of marriage." But it's more than the legal mumbo jumbo we are facing here. Divorce is spreading as fast as wings on a bald eagle and I'm convinced that it's only going to get worse. What can we do, as adults, to prevent ourselves from adding to these scary statistics?

First of all, we can work on not being so afraid of those two words most of us run screaming from. Relationship communication. Oxymoron? No. Read on.

Why is it that couples today feverishly attend family counseling sessions? We are obviously a society afraid of trying to communicate with one another and thus turn to manuals and paid professionals who lean back in their comfy chairs as they listen to you and your spouse dramatize something that looks like an episode of Jerry Springer. All joking aside, marriage counselors do in fact give good advice and often help find where the problem is in one's relationship.

Second, there are a few questions that a couple needs to touch base on before serenading down that aisle. Marriages often don't survive because both women and men think they can go into the marriage trying to change the other. When trying to decide if this lifelong issue is for you, take some time to cope with differences. Bring up the important issues in your lives such as religion, children, financial issues. Then work with that adorable person you can't imagine being apart from. Take off those rose-colored spectacles for a second and examine your differences with your naked eyes.

Perhaps these suggestions are ones we need to take seriously. I see them as ways to ascertain healthy spirits and prevent adults from hurting their children.

Student season tickets

I love Sun Devil Football! And I know that there are thousands of ASU students who share my sentiment. Thanks to them, ASU sold out their student season football ticket allotment for yet another season. Nevertheless, there are still students out there that feel that they have not been treated fairly when it comes to attending the games.

I am referring specifically to the complaints voiced by Ami Wright, in the Sept. 23 "Letters to the Editor." I hope that the following information will help those with concerns to better understand the situation regarding ASU student season football tickets.

The student sections on the lower east side of the stadium are the same size that they have been for the past several years. Those "higher paying ticket holders" that you see seated above the student section are dedicated fans who have owned those seats for many years. Some have held those seats for longer than the average ASU junior has been alive!

After the original student season ticket allotment (in the lower level) was sold out, there was still a great demand for student season tickets, so ASU opened additional student season ticket sales in the upper level. These seats were opened in reaction to demand ... not to "shaft" anyone to the rafters. If you were sold a student season ticket in the upper level, it's a valid student ticket. There are designated student season sections outside of the lower level student sections for students only. However, there are also tickets being sold at the student discount throughout the stadium (on a single-game basis) in "non-student" sections. These tickets allow students to attend the games at a discounted price, despite the fact that all of the sections specifically allotted to students are sold out.

Student season tickets are a great value. However, they are sold on a first-come, first-served basis and they sell out quickly. Students are indeed very important when it comes to supporting ASU athletics and ASU does realize this. Unfortunately, there are a limited number of sections in the stadium that are available to accommodate all of those students wanting to purchase student season tickets. There were many students who wanted to purchase season tickets, but were unable to because the allotment had been sold out.

Student Sun Devil fans are very important to ASU athletics. Please continue to come to the games, cheer on the team and be a part of the crowd (even if you are in the upper level). If you have any further questions or comments regarding student season football tickets or any other ASU athletic events, I may be reached by e-mail at moose@asu.edu or by phone at the Sun Devil ticket office, 965-2381. (All opinions contained in this letter are my own, and do not necessarily reflect those of the ASU Athletic Administration). Go Devils!

'Deadbeat' U.S. must catch up on dues

It was reported in the New York Times recently that the United Nations is expected to strip the United States of its General Assembly vote for nonpayment of dues.

If the United States does not pay some of the more than $1.5 billion it owes the United Nations by Dec. 31, then it will fall under Article 19 of the U.N. charter. This requires that a country in debt for an amount equaling or exceeding the amount of its assessments (dues each country pays based on its share of the world economy) for the previous two years, be stripped of its vote.

The United States is responsible for 25 percent of the U.N. budget. The General Accounting Office in Washington recently reported that the U.N.'s financial problems stem mainly from the nonpayment of dues from member states.

The United States is the U.N.'s largest debtor.

What's more, in 1983, Congress decided to tie payment of U.N. dues to the Federal budget cycle, so while the United Nations charges dues in January, U.S. payments are never received before October. This typically causes cash flow problems for the international organization. The United States is the only member state that schedules its payments with this kind of delay.

At this point, what keeps the United Nations going is that Japan (now the U.N.'s largest financial supporter, despite its recession economy), some European countries and several developing nations have not been compensated for supplying peacekeeping troops.

Anger over the situation is reportedly starting to have an effect on support for U.S. issues in the organization.

The problem? Congress is wrangling over the details of the situation. It remains in a confrontation with the president over a condition it wants attached to approval of payments, which would put anti-abortion restrictions on international family planning groups. Congress wants the United Nations to write off back dues. It wants the United Nations to cut its budget and staff and refrain from creating a standby peacekeeping force.

To be fair, some say the argument isn't just about money and budget issues for Congress, but more about differing opinions about the direction of the United Nations and the U.S.'s role in that direction.

But shouldn't these discussions happen in a more responsible way, without having the United States look like a bully that talks the talk, but fails to walk the walk? How are we supposed to be taken seriously in the world when we are regularly delinquent on payments to an organization we helped create and that has its headquarters on our soil?

It's not just about the embarrassment the situation causes — it's the idea that having integrity requires things like paying dues and having discussions that engender solutions, not just more gridlock.

It means that if we like to think of ourselves as No. 1 then we should act No. 1. Paying our bills is only the first step in that direction.

People say the 'darndest' things; sometimes on purpose

You know, people can say the darndest things sometimes. Take the game show The Family Feud, for example. In the final round, contestants are given a survey question and then have to guess the most common answer given in the survey, all within a short period of time. Here are some answers provided by the contestants:

- Something a blind person would use — a sword.
- An animal you might see at the zoo — a dog.
- A number you have to memorize — seven.
- Something you do before you go to bed — sleep.
- Something that flies that doesn't have an engine — a bike with wings.
- Something you do in the bathroom — decorate.

Sometimes people say things they probably do not mean — particularly if they are speaking a language in which they are not fluent. The following translated titles from films produced in Hong Kong perfectly illustrate this point:

- Take my advice or I'll spank you without pants.
- Beware! Your bones are about to be disconnected!

- Quiet or I'll blow your throat up.
- Damn, I'll burn you into a BBQ chicken!
- I'll fire aimlessly if you don't come out!

And here's the most introspective remark in this bunch:

- The bullets inside are very hot. Why do I feel so cold?

Sometimes people say less-than-charitable things about other people. So let's take a look at actual quotes from federal employee performance evaluations:

- This employee is not so much a has-been, but more of a definite won't-be.
- Since my last report, he has reached rock bottom and has started to dig.
- This young lady has delusions of adequacy.
- Not the sharpest knife in the drawer.
- If brains were taxed, he'd get a rebate.
- Got into the gene pool while the lifeguard wasn't watching.
- Fell out of the family tree.
- This employee should go far — and the sooner he starts, the better.
- This employee is depriving a village somewhere of an idiot.

The fascinating things people say also apply to the world of commerce. Here are some actual advertisements placed in the classifieds of newspapers:

- Tickle Me Elmo. New in box. Hardly tickled. $700.
- Snow blower for sale. Only used on snowy days.
- One-man, seven-women hot tub — $850 offer.
- Full-sized mattress. 20-year warranty. Like new. Slight urine smell.
- President's choice — cow manure — 2/33 lb. bags — $5.
- Kittens eight weeks old — seeking good Christian home.
- Do something special for your Valentine — have your septic tank pumped.
- Joining nudist colony, must sell washer and dryer — $300.
- For rent — vibrator — well-used.
- Hands for Health — Heidi Hoar — Registered massage therapist.
- Notice: to person or persons who took the large pumpkin on Highway 87 near Southridge Storage. Please return the pumpkin and be checked. Pumpkin may be radioactive. All other plants in the vicinity are dead.

Finally, people can say the darndest things in their music. Here's a sample of some titles of country songs that you may not have heard the first time around. Nobody makes this stuff up.

- "I Wouldn't Take Her to a Dog-Fight,

Cause I'm Afraid She'd Win"

- "Please Bypass This Heart"
- "I'll Marry You Tomorrow, But Let's Honeymoon Tonight"
- "Mama Get a Hammer (There's A Fly On Papa's Head)"
- "I Still Miss You Baby, But My Aim's Getting Better"
- "She Got The Ring, And I Got The Finger"
- "I Can't Get Over You, So Why Don't You Get Under Me?"
- "My Wife Ran Off With My Best Friend, And I Sure Do Miss Him"
- "I Hate Every Bone In Your Body Except For Mine"
- "Get Your Tongue Outta My Mouth 'Cause I'm Kissing You Good-bye"

And my favorite:

- "I Just Bought A Car From A Guy That Stole My Girl, But The Car Don't Run, So I Figure We Got An Even Deal."

People do say the darndest things. So what better way to end this ditty than by leaving you with Yogi Berra's timeless and common sense advice: "When you hit a fork in the road, take it."

Writer started young, early, reading her muse

Editor's note: UNESCO's 22nd annual International Literacy Day was celebrated this month. The Associated Press marked the day with staffers' stories about their own reading — vignettes the State Press is running as a daily series that concludes tomorrow.

Still something about books

A book of her own

My first book coincided with my debut as a writer, at age 7.

My family offered great acclaim for that early display of talent — a story about Michael, my first crush artistically disguised as a leprechaun, and the horse he grew in a flower pot. To really become a writer, however, I needed to read other writers. With a stash of birthday cash and weeks of 25-cents' allowance, my mother took me and my younger sister to buy our first books. Carol could satisfy herself with Dr.

Seuss' The Cat in the Hat, but I wanted Howard R. Garis' The Adventures of Uncle Wiggily.

The cherished volume was thick with many pages and few pictures. This was no children's bedtime story: Uncle Wiggily was a serious grown-up rabbit with a complicated life. I can still taste the unexpected pleasure of claiming that book as mine.

I acquired a library card and for many years bought no more books. College changed that. There I began my own library, filled with stacks of required reading. After college, I moved often and crossed far distances, acquiring atlases and road maps. And more library cards.

Today, I am settled. And not only do I buy books again, but I know the joy of seeing my own book on a shelf. Yet when Penguin Books published An Addict in the Family? in Australia, my editor's note on the opening page is only partly right: "This is her first book."

Upcoming ASASU bill seeks to safeguard students' identity, privacy

By JESSICA WOLF
STATE PRESS

Associated Students of ASU is taking the first step in protecting student Social Security numbers.

At next Tuesday's senate meeting, senators will introduce a bill that will restrict the use of these numbers for student IDs. This coincides with federal and state legislation already in motion.

"We've been working on this since before school began," said Robert Sistik, ASASU senator for the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences. "This is at the top of our list because it affects all students."

Social Security number theft can lead to identity and credit fraud and affects communities beyond ASU.

In March, hackers broke into the computer system of the University of Utah and stole 23,000 Social Security numbers. That same month, 50,000 numbers were released from the UofA to two local businesses.

The state of Wisconsin has already passed statewide student privacy legislation. In January 2000, all Wisconsin public and private school boards are prohibited from incorporating a student's Social Security number in their ID number.

"We are totally serious about this," said Brian Campbell, ASASU senator for the College of Public Programs. "The University of Wisconsin took it to the state Legislature to ensure that it was done," he said. "So will we."

Members of ASASU also spoke with Gov. Jane Dee Hull and members of the state Legislature. Hull said she supports student privacy measures.

ASASU plans to take the issue to the Arizona State Legislature in the January session, said Robert Stryk, ASASU chief of staff.

There is also a bill in the U.S. House of Representatives regarding student privacy, stating: "This bill ... prohibits any federal, state or local government agency or instrumentalities from using a Social Security number, or any derivative, as the means of identifying any individual, except for specified Social Security and tax purposes."

U.S. Representative Bob Stump, R-Ariz., co-sponsored this bill, which has been assigned to committee. So far, it has had no floor debate.

But using a different number for a student ID does not necessarily mean there will never be access to Social Security numbers.

"If we get all non-Social Security numbers at ASU, I would hope it can be accompanied by the construction of what has been termed a 'computer firewall' between that number and Social Security number-related information," said David Burstein, an ASU professor of physics and astronomy and chair-elect of ASU's faculty senate.

A computer firewall is a device that is set up to protect a local network from hackers and viruses.

"I would encourage efforts on all levels to limit the use of Social Security numbers," Burstein said. "When I teach a large lecture class, I try to be as careful as I can be with the Social Security numbers."

"At the same time, I think we all need to realize we have to keep any ID number secure to which our personal information is attached, such as a new ASU ID number, charge card numbers or drivers license."

Loop 101 to extend to Warner Road

BY ANGELA YEAGER
STATE PRESS

Life for those living near Price Road is about to get easier — at least by the year 2001.

The Arizona Department of Transportation awarded $61.5 million to Pulice Construction last week to extend the Price Freeway from Southern Avenue to Warner Road in Chandler. In order to get to that point, an extension will be built from Baseline Road to Guadalupe Road by early 1999.

ADOT spokesman Doug Nintzel said construction on the Price Freeway should start soon and will be accelerated to keep on schedule. "No exact date has been set, but usually it takes a month after a contract is awarded for construction to start," Nintzel said. "In this case, we could start within days."

ADOT is able to accelerate the construction schedule by receiving a loan from the federal government instead of waiting for tax dollars to be made available, he said.

The reason for the hurry is to minimize the inconvenience to those living and driving in the area, and to quickly address the Valley's growing population. "With the East Valley growing as much as it has, we made it a priority to construct as many freeways as possible," Nintzel said. "We really have to start building out towards the outlying communities."

Nintzel said the work on the Price Freeway won't stop at Warner Road. Included in ADOT's plans is construction to extend the freeway to Frye Road, which is south of Chandler Boulevard. The city of Chandler offered to pay to accelerate the project.

"Chandler is going to pay the interest on the federal loan so we can reach our completion date," Nintzel said.

That project is also set to be completed in early 2001, and is projected to cost $30 million. In order to limit any inconvenience for drivers and people living in the area, Nintzel said the state is going to build frontage roads north and south along the path of the construction.

"Our goal is always to limit any disturbance to businesses and residents," he said. "We need traffic to get through, but in a way so construction can be allowed to go on."

Partnership pairs ASU faculty, Valley high school students

BY GANGA SUBRAMANIAN
STATE PRESS

What are a butterfly's mating preferences? How does one conduct a census of the Valley bird population? What are the volcanic channels on Venus made of?

Valley high school students will answer these questions with the help of ASU faculty, under the Science Connections program, sponsored by the Southwest Center for Education and the Natural Environment. Arizona Community Foundation gave SCENE a $20,000 grant to develop research interests in high school students.

Thirty students from Corona Del Sol, Desert Vista, North Canyon and Tempe High Schools will participate in projects ranging from ecology, chemistry, plant biology and planetary geology. The first three projects are part of the Central-Arizona Phoenix Long Term Ecological Project, which has been partly funded by the National Science Foundation.

For the planetary geology projects, students will study volcanic channels on the Moon, Venus and Mars. The students will come in once a week for the next year, and work closely with ASU faculty on research projects, SCENE director Kathy Kyle said.

Kimberly Homan, research specialist with the Planetary Geology Group, said the ASU Planetary Geology Group initially got involved in the research interests of high school students after four North Canyon students began observing ASU research activities this spring, encouraged by their teacher Lynn Fraiser.

The students worked on the Galileo project, which studies Jupiter's moons — Callisto and Europa, she added. Kyle said the success of this effort was noted by SCENE and the program was extended to cover more schools in the Valley.

Christina Haigh, 17, an ASU freshman, was part of the North Canyon High School team last spring. "I did learn a lot," she said. The program helped her secure an internship in the space photography lab this semester, said Haigh, who plans to major in planetary geology.

- A student reported her bicycle missing from the Art

Building, where it was secured with a lock.

• A student reported her vehicle stolen from Parking Structure 1.

• Two students were arrested, cited and released for underage possession of alcohol at Manzanita Hall.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Monday:

- Officers arrested a 23-year-old Tempe man on charges of indecent exposure Saturday. The man was arrested after a female customer told officers the man exposed his penis to her at Peter Piper Pizza, 19 E. Broadway Road. The woman told officers she saw the man in all his glory as he came out of the bathroom. He was taken to Tempe City Jail, where he was held on a $500 cash bond.
- A 26-year-old transient man was arrested Saturday on charges of possession of drug paraphernalia and providing false information to police. He was contacted in the parking lot of a closed business at South McClintock Drive and Don Carlos Drive, where he gave officers a false name. A records check revealed a Mesa city court warrant for the man and he was arrested. While frisking the man, officers found a glass pipe used to smoke crack cocaine. He was taken and booked into Tempe City Jail.
- Police were called to Tempe St. Joe's Saturday where they arrested a 29-year-old Chandler man on charges of disorderly conduct. The man was arrested after an investigation revealed he disturbed the peace by yelling at a woman at the hospital. According to reports, he threatened to hurt the woman and then urinated on a wall in his room at the hospital. The man was taken to Tempe City Jail and released due to a medical condition.

ASU freshman Stephen Baker has emerged as the best punter in the Pac-10. He leads the conference with a 48.2 yards per punt average.

Sun Devils' shaky special teams provide bright spot

By Doug Flanagan
STATE PRESS

There hasn't been much positive talk about the ASU special team's shaky, inconsistent performance this season.

But head coach Bruce Snyder found a bright spot during Monday's weekly press conference.

"The combination of people not wanting to punt to J.R. Redmond, and on our side, having Stephen Baker, there's clearly a first-down difference between what's happening there," Snyder said. "So that's been a real weapon for us on both ends of it. People are aiming for out of bounds against J.R. right now. They're aiming out of bounds and take their 30 yards or 35 yards, and Stephen is netting 45. So we're gaining a first down every time there's an exchange in punts."

In Saturday's game against Oregon State, Redmond had the opportunity to return only two punts out of eight. His long was 13 yards.

For the season, Redmond ranks second in the Pac-10 in punt return average (13.7) and Baker is second in the nation with a 48.2 yards per punt average.

News and notes

•Linebacker Adam Archuleta was named Pac-10 Defensive Player of the Week for his performance against Oregon State. He recorded 11 tackles (four unassisted), including five tackles for losses, a quarterback sack, and a fumble recovery.

•ASU's penchant for penalties continued against the Beavers as they were flagged 12 times for 128 yards, both season highs. The total marked the third straight game in which ASU has racked up more than 100 yards in penalties. Cornerback J'Juan Cherry picked up four penalties in the first half.

•Lenzie Jackson's first quarter reception in Saturday's game marked the 29th consecutive game in which he has caught a pass, dating back to the 1995 UofA contest. Jackson is on pace to tie USC's John Jackson's Pac-10 record of 37 straight games with a catch.

•Redmond passed the 3,000 yard mark Saturday in all-purpose yards. He tallied 83 rushing yards, 61 return yards and 24 receiving yards to bring his total to 3,116 all-purpose yards for his career.

•The 19-yard touchdown pass from Ryan Kealy to Jackson in the fourth quarter was ASU's first points off a turnover this season. The score was set up by cornerback Courtney Jackson's fumble recovery off a punt.

•The last time ASU held a Pac-10 opponent to three points or less was on Nov. 13, 1993, when the Sun Devils defeated UCLA 9-3.

Trachsel, Gaetti lift Cubs into playoffs

CHICAGO (AP) — Now, Steve Trachsel will be remembered for more than giving up a historic home run. He's pitched those lovable losers, the Chicago Cubs, into the playoffs.

With a home run boost from castoff Gary Gaetti and two key singles by Sammy Sosa, the Cubs beat the San Francisco Giants 5-3 Monday night to win the frenetic one-game playoff for the NL wild-card spot.

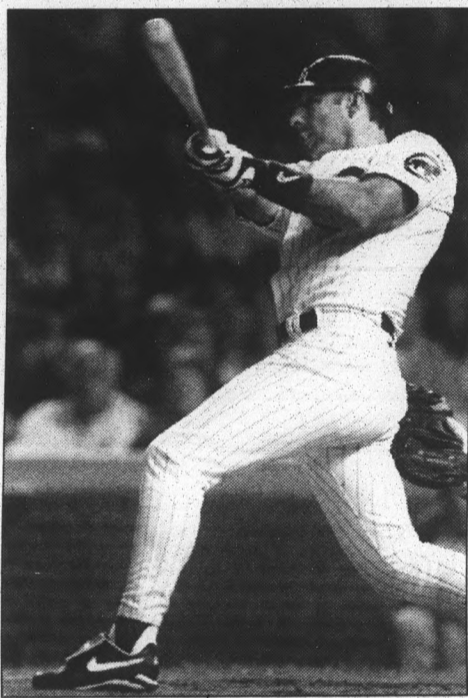

They survived despite a three-run rally in the ninth by the Giants. Barry Bonds, who grounded out with the bases loaded to end the seventh, came up again with the bases loaded but managed only a sacrifice fly.

The Cubs haven't been to a World Series since 1945 and haven't won one in 90 years, yet they're going to the postseason for the first time since 1989.

And now it's on to Atlanta, an extension of one of the most exciting seasons in their storied, sometimes laughable, always eventful, history. The Cubs, who won six of nine from the Braves, play Game 1 Wednesday.

Trachsel (15-8), who surrendered Mark McGwire's 62nd home run, didn't give up a hit until pinch-hitter Brent Mayne singled with one out in the seventh.

Trailing 4-0, the Giants went on to load the bases with two outs and brought Bonds to the plate. But the three-time MVP, who has struggled in the postseason, grounded out against reliever Felix Heredia and slammed his helmet to the ground.

Chicago Cubs third baseman Gary Gaetti slugs a two-run, game-winning home run off San Francisco Giants starter Mark Gardner.

In the ninth, reliever Kevin Tapani gave up a pair of leadoff singles. That brought on Terry Mulholland, who went eight innings and threw 121 pitches Sunday.

Stan Javier hit an RBI single and pinch-hitter Ellis Burks walked, loaded the bases with no outs and the score 5-1. But Bonds flied out, and then Rod Beck earned his 51st save, getting Jeff Kent on an RBI forceout and retiring Joe Carter on a popup.

It was Carter's final at-bat in the majors. At 38, the hero of the 1993 World Series is retiring.

The Cubs nearly did not get this far, losing six of their previous eight games, including Sunday's finale in Houston. But they were saved when Colorado rallied from a 7-0 deficit to beat the Giants 9-8, forcing the first one-game playoff in the NL since 1980.

Trachsel and Giants starter Mark Gardner kept it scoreless until the fifth inning.

Henry Rodriguez singled and then the balding Gaetti lifted a two-run homer to left, his 19th of the season and eighth since joining the Cubs on Aug. 19 — his 40th birthday — after his release by St. Louis.

Gaetti raised his arms in triumph as the ball landed in the left-field seats and after a delay as fans littered the field, he emerged from the dugout for a Sosa-like curtain call.

Singles by Lance Johnson and Sosa drove out Gardner (13-6) in the sixth. Rich Rodriguez relieved and after Grace walked to load the bases, Matt Mieske, called up from the minors earlier this month, lined a two-run single to right for a 4-0 lead.

Sosa went 2-for-4 with a pair of singles, scoring in the eighth on Jose Mesa's wild pitch.

Sosa finished the regular season, because this game's numbers counted, with 66 home runs, trailing McGwire's 70. But Sosa gets something McGwire doesn't — a chance to play into October.

ASU golfers lead tourney

From Staff and Wire Reports

The ASU men's golf team leads the Ping/Golfweek NCAA Preview by two strokes after Monday's two rounds of play at the Hazeltine Golf Club in Chaska, Minn.

The host Minnesota Golden Gophers are two shots behind the Sun Devils, who shot a nine-over par 585 (316-293), in the 15-team tournament. Rounding out the top five are Oklahoma State 587 (297-290), Houston 589 (291-298), UNLV 590 (294-296).

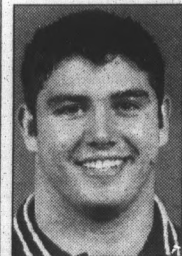

ASU sophomore Jeff Quinney owns a share of the individual lead with a two-round total of three-under par 141.

UNLV's Jeff Kirk is tied with Quinney after the day's best 68 in the first round, followed by a one-over par 73 in the second 18 holes of the day.

Sun Devil Jonas Runnquist shot a two-round 147, followed by teammates Paul Casey (148), Greg Padilla (149) and Darren Angel (157).

The final 18 holes will be played Tuesday morning.

Red Hot Sun Devils

Cesta was one of the main factors in ASU's dominating defensive performance in Saturday's 24-3 win over Oregon State. The senior linebacker recorded five tackles and made the most of them — three for losses.

Joe Cesta
Football

Coughlin, a freshman outside hitter, registered a team-high 19 digs on Friday evening as the Sun Devils defeated the visiting Cal Golden Bears 19-17, 15-5, 15-5 at Wells Fargo Arena (formerly known as the University Activity Center).

Jamie Coughlin
Volleyball

Coming into Saturday's contest, Oregon State tailback Ken Simonton, a 5-foot-8 sparkplug, was leading the conference in rushing. However, Green, all 5-foot-8 himself, made Simonton's numbers look downright puny.

Gerald Green
Football

The redshirt freshman transfer from Notre Dame used her creative offensive skills and fired in two goals in Sunday's 3-0 road victory over Old Dominion. The shutout put an end to the Sun Devils' six-game losing streak.

For every hero, there's a goat

By CHRIS CARLOCK
STATE PRESS

Chris Carlock
sports columnist

It's the most wonderful time of the year.

And it's a time for rekindling horrible memories for some people.

The baseball playoffs are upon us and soon we will see who this year's Mr. October is. But for every clutch performer in playoff history, there's a goat to go along with him. So let's take a few minutes to recognize these players without whom there would be no "shot heard around the world" or no announcer yelling, "Go crazy! Go crazy!"

I have compiled a list of nine players during my lifetime (22 years) who will forever live in infamy for playoff blunders, gopher balls or just lack of production. Why only nine? Well, because only nine stick out in my mind so deal with it.

9. Barry Bonds

I'll get Bonds out of the way first because I want to see him do something in the playoffs one of these days for my Giants.

Bonds always tears it up in September and then forgets how to hit when the playoffs roll around. One of the greatest statistical players in the history of baseball hit a whopping .167 in the 1990 NLCS, .148 in the '91 series and then he finally cracked the Mendoza line in '92 against the Braves hitting .261 but couldn't throw out the slowest runner in baseball, Sid Bream at home plate in game seven.

Bonds is always complaining about lack of respect.

Do something in the playoffs Barry and people will stop ragging on you.

8. Charlie Leibrandt

Good old uncle Charlie.

Leibrandt gave up the memorable 11th inning, game winning homer to Kirby Puckett in game 6 of the 1991 World Series. When they brought in the slow-moving left hander to start off the 11th you could hear a collective groan from Braves fans all the way in Atlanta. Leibrandt couldn't prove them wrong.

7. Leon Durham

As if the Cubs hadn't had enough heartache going almost a century without winning a World Series, Leon Durham made it almost unbearable to be a Cubs fan.

After blowing a two game lead in the best of five NLCS with the Padres in 1984, the Cubbies took an early three run lead. But Durham let a ball roll through his legs to tie the score late in the game and the Padres tacked on three more runs in the inning.

The agony continued.

6. Lonnie Smith

Only the true baseball fans may have caught this one but Smith may have cost the Braves the 1991 World Series against the Twins.

Smith was on first base in the ninth inning of a scoreless game 7 when Terry Pendleton lined a ball toward the gap. Smith was looking at the shortstop who fooled him into thinking the ball was hit straight into the air. Smith only reached third on the double and was stranded there. The Twins went on to win 1-0 in extra innings.

5. Mitch "Wild Thing" Williams

The "Wild Thing" gave up a two-out, two-run single to Will "The Thrill" Clark in the deciding game 5 of the 1989 NLCS. It was Williams' only appearance of the series and the only batter he faced.

And then in 1993 Williams served up Joe Carter's World Series winning, three-run homer in the ninth.

The egging of his home just won't stop.

4. Donnie Moore

I hate to kick a guy when he's down (or not around anymore in Moore's case) but the Angels were one strike away from the World Series when Dave Henderson ripped a two-run homer off Moore to propel the BoSox to the World Series in 1986.

3. Dennis Eckersley

Eck.

He gave up maybe the most dramatic home run in World Series history in Kirk Gibson's only at-bat of the 1988 World Series. Gibson might as well have been in a wheel-chair.

And then in 1992, he gave up a two-run game-tying homer to Roberto Alomar of the Blue Jays in game 4 of the ALCS.

Eck. The best regular season closer in history.

2. Tom Niedenfuer

What a couple of days it was for Niedenfuer in 1985.

First he gave up a game winning, ninth-inning homer to the powerful Ozzie Smith in game 5 of the NLCS (it was Ozzie's first ever left-handed home run). And then, as if that wasn't bad enough, he gave up a two-out, three-run bomb to Jack Clark in the ninth inning of game 6.

No word as to whether Niedenfuer received any playoff bonus from the Cardinals.

1. Bill Buckner

Enough said.

Oh awed by Mac's 70 round-trippers

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's greatest home run hitter was amazed with Mark McGwire's feat.

"There's no other way to say it but that it's astonishing that he hit the 70th homer with the world's attention focused on him," Sadaharu Oh told Kyodo News. "The world takes its hat off in respect."

Oh hit 868 home runs over his 22-year career — 113 more than Hank Aaron, America's all-time home run leader. Oh also holds Japan's single season home run record, with 55 in a 140-game 1964 season.

Oh manages the Pacific League's Fukuoka Daiei Hawks.
