Bombings cause concern, anger on campus

Four ASU students experience Balkan conflict first hand

BY CARRIE SEVERSON
STATE PRESS

Gillen

While most ASU students are continents away from the bombing in the Balkan region, Steve Gillen is experiencing it first hand.

The ASU doctoral student has been in Skopje, the Macedonian capital, for two years. He's doing research there under the Fulbright Program.

Gillen, 28, along with three other ASU undergraduates, is stuck in an area of the world where Americans are often despised.

On Friday he spoke to his grandmother, who lives in Mesa, and told her of the recent attack by Serb supporters on the U.S. Embassy where he works.

"Steven was working in the embassy when it was burned," she said of the Thursday assault. "A couple of guards escorted him out of the building. Steven ran down back streets and hid at a friend's house."

She also told of Gillen's need to hide his American roots and avoid speaking English for fear of being attacked.

The three other students are also in Skopje. They are part of ASU's long-standing study abroad program with the University of Sts. Kiril and Metodij in Macedonia.

ASU has asked the four students in the region to return home, a move the U.S. Embassy advised. The airport in Macedonia, however, is only open for departing flights heading east.

"The students are being evacuated to Greece as the most convenient exit point for possible onward travel arrangements," said Steven Batalden, coordinator of the Study Abroad Program at ASU.

Students protest NATO bombings

BY ERLAND AAS
STATE PRESS

As bombs continue to pummel Yugoslavia half a world away, 15 ASU students, mostly from the Balkan region, stood in front of the Engineering Research Center Friday to protest the NATO effort.

"We're gathering here today because we want the bombing to stop immediately," said Rajka Krstic, an aerospace engineering graduate student and research assistant. She is from the Serb province of Vojvodina, north of Belgrade.

"Kosovo is our territory. We don't want any outside aggressors to interfere with our internal politics."

Some demonstrators said the American people have been deceived by the government and media.

"The media didn't present the situation in Kosovo accurately," Krstic said. "And as a consequence, Americans don't know how the conflict started."

Another protester agreed.

"The biggest crime in this conflict is that the people are being lied to," said Stanko Brankovic, a science and engineering materials graduate student.

Krstic said the Kosovo-Albanians, who belong to the Kosovo Liberation Army, are the cause of the problem.

"They're terrorists, not liberators," she said.

All the Yugoslavian protesters said they have families in the war zone and are worried about their safety.

"It's unreal," said Marko Princevac, a mechanical engineering graduate student. "Everyday I talk to my brother back in Belgrade. Now he's hiding underground to be safe from the bombs. It hurts."

Most of the protesting students said the NATO bombing has changed how they feel about Yugoslavian President Slobodan Milosevic.

"As a student (back in Yugoslavia) I was demonstrating against Milosevic because I thought he was not good," Princevac said. "But now I support him. Now the whole nation is behind him."

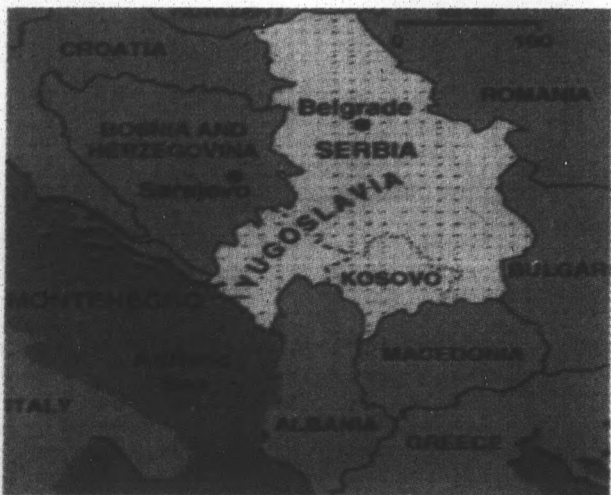

During the two-hour long demonstration several students stopped to talk with the protesters.

Passer-by Ben Monro, an architecture sophomore, said he believes the media is distorting the picture of the war. Monro also said he believes President Clinton was dishonest about his intentions.

"Clinton is distorting the view," Monro said. "He said the bombing was a humanitarian effort, but that's not true. It's all about politics and money."

The demonstrators said they plan to protest every day until the bombing stops.

Voters to decide ASASU grade, enrollment requirements

BY STEPHANIE PATERIK
STATE PRESS

For the first time in two years students will have the chance to amend the Associated Students of ASU constitution during the Tuesday and Wednesday general election on campus.

The student government senate unanimously voted Tuesday to place a referendum on the ballot that would require ASASU officers, senators and supreme court justices to maintain a 2.25 grade point average while in office.

It also requires ASASU undergraduates be enrolled in at least six credit hours and graduate students to be enrolled in a minimum of three credit hours.

The current policy only stipulates that a candidate must fulfill these requirements to run — but once elected they don't have to maintain it.

"We're students first, and we need to set some kind of an example," said Paul Petersen, ASASU executive vice president. "I challenged the senators to come up with a good referendum for voters to look at, and they've come up with a good idea."

Petersen said in the past officers have dropped down to as little as one credit hour and have had incredibly low GPA's to devote all their time to student government. He said this amendment would keep the priorities of elected officers in check.

Since the senate captured the minimum two-thirds vote necessary, the proposed amendment has been reviewed by Student Life and Christine Wilkinson, vice president of Student Affairs.

Petersen said they are currently waiting for ASU President Lattie Coor to sign it. If the referendum is signed, it will appear on the ballot for voters to decide on.

"I don't see any reason why students wouldn't approve this," Petersen said. "We're trying to foster a better image of ourselves (in ASASU) and the ASU community."

"We are disappointed that we have to take these steps," said William Davey, director of ASU's international programs.

As far as the relationship between ASU and the University of Sts. Kiril and Metodij, Batalden said he believes that it will stay the same.

"The 26-year academic exchange will undoubtedly withstand the immediate crisis in the Balkans, as it survived the 1992-95 war in Bosnia."

"Steven has told us what things are like over there," said Gillen's Grandmother. "And I think we're more worried than he is."

She said she hopes her grandson can return home soon.

NATO bolsters forces as charges of genocide in Kosovo abound

BY GEORGE JAHN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Ordering up more firepower, NATO raced against time Sunday to smash Serb military units and head off what it called "genocide" against Kosovo Albanians.

Thousands of ethnic Albanian refugees, accusing Serbs of systematic brutality, fled into neighboring Albania and Macedonia. Officials in both countries pleaded for international help to prevent a humanitarian crisis, and Albania called for NATO ground troops to enter Kosovo — something NATO says it has no plans to do.

Violence in Kosovo has escalated sharply since foreign observers left the province and NATO began its airstrikes against Yugoslavia, which is dominated by Serbs. NATO spokesman Jamie Shea said in Brussels that the airstrikes were no excuse for Serbs to slaughter Kosovo Albanians.

"Genocide is starting," German Defense Minister Rudolf Scharping said in a television interview with station ZDF.

For its part, Yugoslavia's government-controlled news media said Sunday that Serb security forces and civilians were under attack by Kosovo Albanians.

Bratislava Morina, Serbia's commissioner for refugees, denied Serbs were behind the exodus and said ethnic Albanians were leaving because of the NATO attacks. Ethnic Albanians far outnumber Serbs in Kosovo, a province in Serbia, Yugoslavia's dominant republic.

"There is no humanitarian catastrophe in Kosovo whatsoever," she said on state-run Serbian television. "Those manipulations with the number of refugees, carried out by foreign agencies and media, are used to intensify (NATO) attacks on Yugoslavia."

NATO promised to broaden attacks on Serb ground forces in Kosovo, despite the downing of a U.S. stealth bomber Saturday night.

The fifth straight night of airstrikes began late Sunday, with about 50 warplanes taking off from the NATO air base in Aviano, Italy.

"We have to recognize that we are now on the brink of a major humanitarian disaster ... the likes of which we have not seen in Europe since the closing days of World War II," Shea said.

More than 500,000 ethnic Albanians, a quarter of the population of Kosovo, had been driven from their homes, 50,000 of them in just the past few days, he added.

In Belgrade, thousands of defiant Serbs attended an anti-NATO outdoor concert despite air raid sirens that signaled continuing missile attacks. It was the 10th anniversary of the day Milosevic, then Serbian Communist Party chief, stripped Kosovo of much of its autonomy, sowing the seeds of the conflict.

In Albania, 10,000 people held a pro-NATO demonstration in Tirana, the capital.

The NATO raids are intended to force Milosevic to agree to a peace deal that calls for NATO troops to be based in Kosovo to enforce the accord. The deal has already been accepted by the province's ethnic Albanian majority.

But Milosevic, through an official government statement issued Saturday, again rejected the plan.

Salmon's Tibet trip will focus on human rights

BY JAN-ERIK SAUE
STATE PRESS

Matt Salmon (R-Ariz.) left for Tibet Friday as the first U.S. Congressman in years to discuss human rights issues with Chinese leaders.

Salmon, the only U.S. Congressman who speaks Mandarin Chinese, is vice chairman of the International Operations and Human Rights congressional subcommittee.

He lived in Taiwan from 1977-79 and said he is a strong advocate of open, constructive dialogue with the Chinese.

The small Tibetan student body at ASU appreciated Salmon's visit.

"I hope this will put the focus on Tibet and our oppressed people," said Robert Chedhuri, a political science senior. "Tibet's rights have been ignored for so long, so I hope this is the start of more Western involvement."

Chedhuri's family left Tibet 10 years ago.

A 23-year-old business senior from Tibet, who requested that his name be withheld, said he hopes the tyranny of the Chinese government will be exposed.

"The political prisoners in Tibet are jailed just for having an opinion and basic human rights are being ignored," he said. "The USA is not doing enough to help."

Salmon said he hopes that speaking Mandarin Chinese during his visit will help in the discussions.

"The purpose of the trip is three-folded," said Salmon who's going to be in Tibet for 2 days before he continues to Hong Kong. "First of all, I'm going to present a list of prisoners-of-conscience, and secondly I will ask for the release of these prisoners."

He said most of these prisoners are religious leaders, priests and nuns.

The congressman also has a more personal matter to address.

A Tibetan woman living in the United States wants to visit her son — who is currently in a Chinese jail — one last time before she dies. Salmon said he hopes to convince Chinese authorities to grant her the wish.

Chinese students at ASU also appreciate the congressman's trip.

Deng Sengjun, a computer science junior, said he hopes the trip will improve the relationship between both countries.

"I think it is important that the politicians establish a dialogue and keep communicating," he said. "It is time for politicians to see for themselves the way things are in China, not just the image western media presents."

Other Chinese students agreed with Sengjun, and felt China has been unfairly represented in the media.

"China's government is fair and does not suppress the people like westerners like to think," said Mei Wang, an engineering sophomore. "I hope Salmon's trip can enlighten Americans about China."

Chinese students make up about 10 percent of ASU's total international student enrollment. They account for the second largest international student group on campus.

Police call security guard 'true hero'

PHOENIX (AP) — A security guard is being hailed as a hero for his role in what police called the ambush killing of an officer.

"That individual is one of the true heroes," said Phoenix Police Chief Harold Hurtt. "He realizes the officer is in trouble. Without regard for his own personal safety, he confronted these individuals, engaged in a gunbattle. He put his life on the line for an officer and a fellow human being."

Rory Vertigan, 27, fired at three suspects on Friday night after they fired numerous rounds at Officer Marc Atkinson.

Vertigan fired from his car several shots at the suspects' white Lincoln Continental before they threw the car into reverse and struck Vertigan's front bumper.

They pulled forward and Vertigan continued firing, striking one of the men in the back, said Marilyn Greenwood, Vertigan's sister.

"He said he emptied the clip with 14 shots and all of them went inside the car," she said.

Vertigan saw one of the men fleeing out of the corner of his eye before he tackled the man he shot, she said.

In a prepared statement, Vertigan said he was only reacting to "what I thought was the right thing to do."

On Friday night, 27-year-old Atkinson died after he was ambushed by the three suspects he had tailed from a business known for drug activity, police said.

The suspects jumped out of their vehicle and fired at the five-year veteran as he rounded a corner in his cruiser, police said.

The suspects have been identified as Felipe Petrona-Cabanas, 17, Oscar Garcia-Martinez, 22, and 18-year-old Oberlin Cabanas-Salgado. Petrona-Cabanas was the suspect shot by Vertigan; he was not badly injured.

Investigators found about a pound of cocaine in the glove box of the suspects' vehicle.

Atkinson's death was the fourth police shooting in the Phoenix area in a week.

On March 19, two Tempe officers were shot by a passerby while arresting a suspect, and on March 22, a Phoenix officer was shot during a traffic stop. None of those shootings were fatal.

“He put his life on the line for an officer and a fellow human being.”

Phoenix Police Chief Harold Hurtt

Ex-boys ranch employees face murder charges

PHOENIX (AP) — Five Arizona Boys Ranch employees, once indicted for manslaughter, now face first-degree murder charges in the death of a California teen.

A criminal complaint, filed Thursday in Pinal County Superior Court, also accuses the former employees of child abuse in the March 1998 death of 16-year-old Nicholas Contreras.

"This is absolutely beyond reality," Darrow Soll, a lawyer for defendant Montgomery Hoover, told The Arizona Republic. "No one has ever thought that this was a first-degree murder case."

The indictment says the defendants committed first-degree murder by killing Contreras as they committed, or attempted to commit, child abuse. Under Arizona law, first-degree murder charges may be filed when a death occurs during the commission of a felony.

Hoover, Geoffrey S. Lewis, Michael M. Moreno, Troy M. Jones and Linda Babb were initially indicted Sept. 30 on manslaughter charges. They all pleaded innocent.

The charges were dismissed earlier this year by prosecutors who blamed a technical problem in impaneling the grand jury. Defense lawyers said some jurors admitted being aware of previous abuse at the Boys Ranch and the entire panel was given prejudicial evidence.

Directory assistance had no listing in Florence or Casa Grande for Assistant County Attorney Janna Vanderpool and she couldn't be reached for comment. Charles Ratliff, a spokesman for the Pinal County Attorney's Office, said he wasn't aware murder charges had been filed.

Defense lawyers, meanwhile, blasted Vanderpool. Soll accused the prosecutor of submitting the murder complaint in retaliation for defense efforts to dismiss the indictments and obtain discovery materials.

Joe Chornenky, Lewis' attorney, said he didn't know if the murder charges were vindictive in nature but did say Vanderpool was ill-prepared.

Chornenky said he would seek an immediate dismissal. Contreras, a Sacramento teen with an extensive criminal record, died of severe lung ailments at a Boys Ranch boot camp in Oracle.

Investigators concluded he had been sick for days, but was forced to work, exercise and was ridiculed by employees at the residential program for juvenile offenders.

The medical examiner discovered 2 1/2 quarts of pus in the lining of Contreras' lungs, plus more than 70 cuts, bruises and other wounds.

Because Contreras was constantly vomiting and suffered from diarrhea, he was seen repeatedly by Babb, the Boys Ranch nurse. But he was considered a malingerer, and the infection was never diagnosed.

Witnesses said staffers forced Contreras to do push-ups over a pail of excrement-soiled clothing. Child Protective Services workers documented abuse or neglect on the part of 17 ranch employees, but only five face criminal charges.

Since Contreras' death, ranch operations have dissolved. The Department of Economic Security has refused to renew the organization's license immediately. Five of six campuses are closed, and the resident population has dwindled from about 600 to 40.

Editorial

Salmon's visit to China a nice change of pace

We can deride him for the sometimes-laughable legislation he introduces — Reagan's face on Mount Rushmore, anyone? — but it seems that Matt Salmon, R-Ariz., has more than overblown Reaganophile hero-worship up his sleeve.

He's concerned with human rights — specifically in China and Tibet.

Salmon, who is Vice Chairman of the House subcommittee on International Relations and Human Rights and the only member of Congress who speaks Mandarin Chinese, left for Tibet Friday with the mission of addressing human rights issues with Chinese leaders.

After President Clinton's recent visit to China, we think Salmon's visit and its intended objective — addressing the dubious actions of the Chinese in Tibet — is very apropos. We're glad someone's calling China on their not-exactly-pristine record.

Salmon's trip has a few main objectives: requesting the release of prisoners of conscience — mainly religious leaders, priests and nuns, and making a request on behalf of a Tibetan woman living in the United States whose son is in a Chinese jail, asking that they be allowed to see each other before the woman passes away.

As the expanding global economy continues to widen in the face of the much-heralded Information Age, it is becoming increasingly easy for borders to be blurred and political ideals like basic human rights issues to fall by the wayside.

It's sometimes too easy for these ideals to shift out of focus when profit is involved.

China, as the most populous country in the history of the world, stands as a quite-tempting opportunity as a potential marketplace. While there are other complex issues involved in the mix — trade issues and the threat of nuclear proliferation, it's reassuring to know that Salmon is on top of it.

The congressman expressed his concern over the absence of basic human rights in China, such as freedoms of speech and the press.

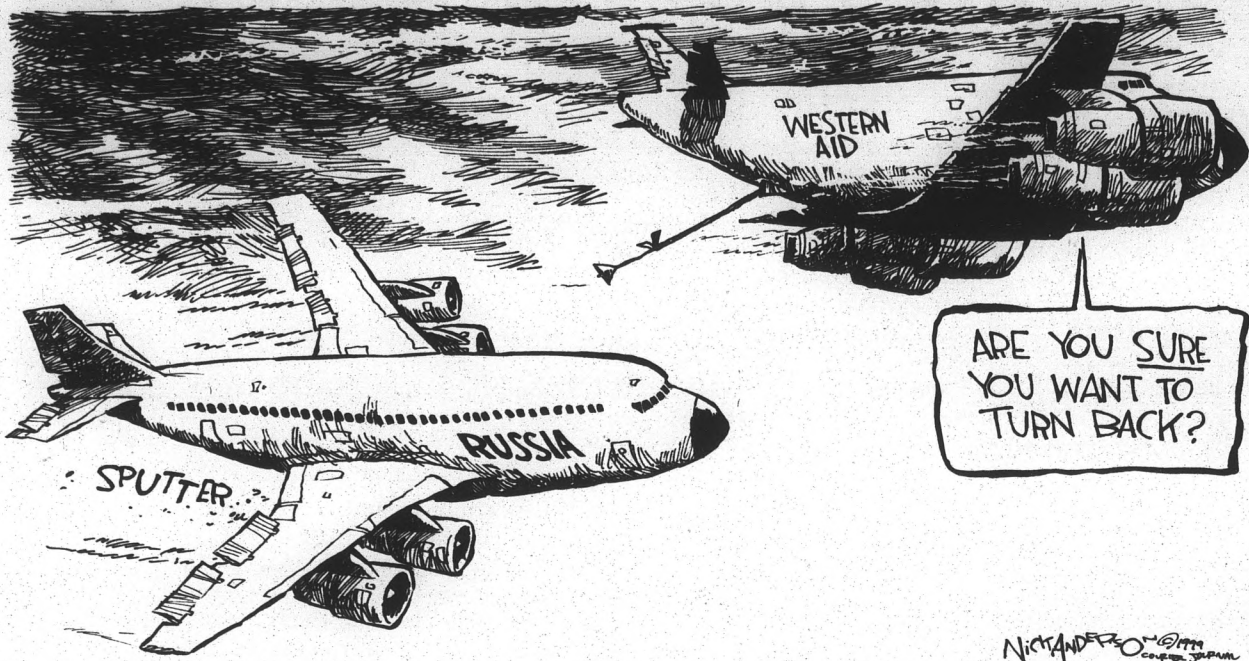

China needs to be held accountable for its actions and its complete dearth of human rights guarantees.

How refreshing to know that sometimes our elected representatives are motivated by something bigger than interest groups or lobbyists or "beautifying" our national parks.

Sometimes it's just the right thing that comes out on top — the right thing and the right intentions and the slim hope that on some days we don't have to be quite so cynical in our thoughts of our elected officials.

Well, maybe.

There isn't anything like Mount Rushmore in China is there?

High court decision abandons art

Director Oliver Stone has built his career by vilifying American media, business and government. His films attempt to dissect American institutions, as if they were cancerous organisms within our society. Now, the Supreme Court has pointed back at Stone and suggested that perhaps he's the one spreading the disease.

On March 8, the Supreme Court decided Stone and the Time Warner Entertainment Co. could be sued for liability in the 1995 Louisiana shooting of Patsy Ann Byers. The 38-year-old clerk was left paralyzed, after being shot while working in a convenience store. Byers recently died of cancer. The lawsuit was filed by her husband.

The shooter, Sarah Edmondson, an Oklahoma judge's daughter who was 18 at the time of the incident, claimed she and her boyfriend, Ben Darras, 18, were inspired to commit the shooting after watching the 1994 film Natural Born Killers, which was co-written and directed by Stone and distributed by Time Warner.

Blaming entertainment for violence in society is not uncommon. Yet, the Supreme Court's willful ignorance of the First Amendment is becoming all too common. This case, and any greedy lawyer involved, should have been thrown out like a pair of old tennis shoes. The idea that Hollywood is responsible for the moral decay of society is worn out, falling apart and stinks of foul hypocrisy.

Natural Born Killers is certainly disturbing and often distasteful, but the violent satire is best described as downright silly. Anyone fool enough to imitate the two mass murderers in the film would have to be on drugs.

In fact, Darras and Edmondson took 23 doses of LSD over two days before watching the video repeatedly, according to Edmondson's defense lawyer, in a 1997 article from the Journal of the American Bar Association. Darras and Edmondson are said to have watched the film more than 20 times.

Last Monday, Byers' family attorney Joseph Simpson told NBC's Today show he feels they have a case because Natural Born Killers has been linked to 14 different murders around the world.

Simpson also told NBC that, according to Louisiana law, the Byers family need only demonstrate that the violence in the film was one factor leading to the shooting. If Stone and Time Warner are found even slightly at fault, they still pay 50 percent of the damages, due to the disproportionate wealth of the defendants.

The Supreme Court has set a frightening precedent by saying citizens can sue filmmakers for depicting violence in their work. If this legal standard were applied to all directors accused of glorifying violence, lawsuits would be filed against artists like Alfred Hitchcock, Stanley Kubrick and Martin Scorsese.

Scorsese's film, Taxi Driver, was said to be an inspiration to John Hinckley when he shot President Reagan; Mark David Chapman was said to have read J.D. Salinger's novel, The Catcher in the Rye, before killing John Lennon. The Bible is often used as justification for violence like bombing abortion clinics, murdering anyone inside. Should bookstores, libraries and churches be open to lawsuits too?

Furthermore, the Supreme Court's decision to let the Byers' suit go forward provides classic irony. On the same day, March 8, they also upheld the conviction and death sentence of Timothy McVeigh. McVeigh was the man found responsible for the 1995 bombing of a federal building in Oklahoma City. He reportedly got the idea for the bombing from a book called The Turner Diaries by William L. Pierce.

If the Supreme Court is willing to let the producers of Natural Born Killers bear responsibility for a senseless act of violence, what about the responsibility Pierce has for detailing an atrocious crime in his book that McVeigh would eventually act out in real life? Shouldn't Pierce also pay damages to the families of those 168 victims?

This inconsistency betrays a conservative bias against popular culture that's older than Bob Dole. If there were only one film that portrayed the government's treatment of commercial entertainment, the title would be Political Whipping Boy.

Still, in the five years since Natural Born Killers was released, America has managed to survive the rise of gangster rap, teenage slasher movies and violent talk shows. We've learned to tolerate, if not admire, the artistic expressions of controversial icons like Quentin Tarantino, Marilyn Manson and the creators of South Park.

Oliver Stone's excessive manifesto on the moral bankruptcy of our society will never be everyone's idea of great art. That said, Natural Born Killers should still be protected speech under the First Amendment. Just because a few people misinterpret the message doesn't mean we should shoot the messenger.

Letters Editor

Kosovo comments

In the Mar. 26 State Press, there appeared two opinion pieces on the Kosovo crisis. They were of differential persuasive effect, but nonetheless, too interesting in themselves and in relation to each other to ignore or treat in isolation.

In the first, Brad Whisler admonishes that "there exist a number of economic and political tools that have not been thoroughly explored." But, without examples, how do we know he's not really proposing something like those economic sanctions on Iraq, which he himself urged the retraction of a few weeks back? He does not make the alternatives clear at all — aside from NATO vs. U.N. handling — yet, he is quite vehement as to the unacceptability of the status quo.

Never mind, as well, that U.N. effectiveness could be compromised at the outset by the strong pre-disposition of Russia to render assistance to Serbia. (The other columnist shows the good sense not to write Russia off.) Whisler's main concern is with the practice of U.S. internationalism. "If stability is to remain, it must be an international effort and not left in the hands of elitist world powers." But what constitutes elitism to Whisler, might just constitute, to the rest of us, the only position from which to work an effective solution.

More than that, of course, it is rank distortion to view NATO action as essentially unilateral. If anything, NATO should be more multilateral now than it has ever been. I suppose that NATO air strikes are less "fully" multilateral than U.N. sanctions. I can also accept that this NATO offensive is a first. But, all in all, this volatile climate requires extraordinary steps, and it can be argued that the U.N. was not completely and assuredly able and willing to take them.

Frank Sackton, meanwhile, argues more convincingly for pacifism simply by offering Caspar Weinberger's six tests of the viability of U.S. intervention. The answers to three — lack of clearly defined objectives, potentially insufficient commitment and unclear expectations of public and Congressional support — all point to ambiguous if not negative results for NATO. Whisler, in mentioning "economic and political tools" without specification, in effect, attempts to answer a fourth.

Yet, there is no intrinsic reason for the United States to remain so inert, if indeed it is. Plus, the situation meets one of Weinberger's tests: the vital interest. Although even this is ambiguous, as of now the United States is committed to intervention in Serbia to exactly the extent that reigning in Milosevic is vital to its interests. This will guarantee that deployment will not cease until the United States either definitely passes or definitely fails all of the tests.

Dangerous statements

I am writing in response to the article "Playboy visit isn't 'dangerous,'" in the March 25 edition. I, personally, am ashamed for Ms. Johnson and feel that her education at ASU has been a total waste of time and money. It seems that her pleas that the upcoming Playboy interviews of ASU women do not 'objectify' nor 'degrade' women and in fact, is a good idea for all 'able bodied' ASU coeds to sign right up.

Ms. Johnson could not be more wrong.
"If society wants to blame these magazines for violent crimes, such as rape and abuse, then society can play the fool." When I first read this quote, enlarged in the center of the article, I believed it to be taken from Mr. Hefner's own lips. I was shocked to hear it from a woman, especially a college student.

Those magazines are, in fact, the institutional agents that promote such cruel acts toward women. These magazines display women as solely sexual objects that men can control and disrespect, rape and abuse. There is no honor nor glory in these magazines or for the women who pose for them.

As for Ms. Johnson's assumption that "jealousy" is the contributing factor that powers the feminist movement; I am sure that the reason that women have the right to vote, right to equal promotion in the workplace and even the right to attend the same university that I, a man, attend, is singly due to the fact that one of them was jealous of 'Mrs. Jones' new boob job.

I suggest that Ms. Johnson open her tightly shut eyes to the fact it is an insult to women to say that they all share such shallow views.

If women in this society expect to gain the equality that they deserve, both men and women need to understand that magazines like Playboy cater to the objectification and degradation of women, because all they show are dehumanized breasts and ass.

I say to all women that are thinking about trying out for this 'Girls of the PAC-10' — Is this what you want people to see when they think about all the time and energy that went into your education at ASU? Also, to all people who feel that Playboy hinders the women's movement, protest! They are going to run it no matter what, but that doesn't mean that they can't have some bad PR ...

In Stephanie Johnson's column regarding Playboy visiting campus (March 25), the columnist explains how she has changed her opinion from objecting to the nudity in Playboy and the skimpy swimsuit calendars, to accepting it and encouraging it. She claims that jealousy is the motivation behind these objections. However, she is forgetting an entirely different perspective that accounts for many people objecting to nudity and the implied "objectification of women." Many people who are practicing Christians or of other practicing religious [persuasion], view this issue as one of right and wrong.

It is an issue about the values of modesty and purity, which are pleasing to God. For them, it is not about jealousy, money or the vain pursuit of self. I object to being classified as jealous or as one who is not "... comfortably accepting of my sexuality ..." and I am offended at this being considered the basis for my disapproval of Playboy.

Also, Johnson claims that "A woman who chooses to exercise her constitutional right to freely express herself through nude pictures should do so, and should not be subjected to ridicule."

I have two comments on this statement. First, if people are ridiculing women for posing in Playboy, they also have a constitutional right to free speech to do so. Second, there is not only a difference between 'ridicule' and 'criticize,' but there is also a difference between criticizing a person and criticizing a person's behavior. I may criticize a behavior as wrong, but I am not criticizing the woman.

Please remember, that professional writing, even in opinion columns, should strive to represent all views accurately, if the journalist wants to be persuasive to all readers.

On wrong track

Hello State Press and welcome to the wonderful world of metrics! First lesson: 1500 meters does not equal 1 mile. In fact, 1 mile is 109 meters longer than 1500m. Recent articles have implied otherwise, however.

In two State Press articles last week on the ASU track team, the writer stated that ASU athletes were competing at the distance of 1 mile. This is not correct. Priscilla Hein did not run 1 mile in 4:12. She ran 1500m in 4:12. Priscilla Hein is very talented, but not yet ready to vie for a world record in the mile. Brandon Strong is also a good runner, but he does not have a personal record of 3:47 in the mile. He normally runs the 1500m distance, and did so on Friday at the Baldy Castillo Invitational, contrary to what was stated in ASU's popular newspaper.

Perhaps in the future the State Press could have someone who has actually been to a track meet write the track and field articles.

Recycling clarification

I am writing in regards to an ASASU campaign poster I saw on campus the other day. The poster, reading "Want recycling in the dorms," asked College of Liberal Arts and Sciences students to vote for ASASU senate candidates Darin Wisheart and Greg Ensell.

Unfortunately, these two candidates are deliberately misleading the students of ASU and trying to win their election by any means necessary. ASASU and the ASASU senate have absolutely nothing to do with recycling programs in Arizona State's residence halls. Oversight and implementation of recycling programs in the halls is the responsibility of the associate director of campus affairs for the Residence Hall Association, or RHA. The current occupant of that office is myself and last time I checked, I did not share it with Darin Wisheart, Greg Ensell or any member of the ASASU senate.

Currently, aluminum cans and newspapers are recycled in ASU's residence halls. RHA is currently testing methods to expand the recycling program, but it is limited in its capacity to do so due to a contract Residential Life has with Weyerhaeuser.

Mr. Wisheart and Mr. Ensell should immediately take down these campaign posters.

Additionally, Mr. Wisheart and Mr. Ensell need to apologize to the students of ASU for trying to win votes by deliberately misleading them. If, however, Mr. Wisheart and Mr. Ensell find their true passion is improving the recycling program in our residence halls, they should not be running for the ASASU senate, but for an office in RHA.

Readers' Poll

What is your opinion?

The senate Governmental Affairs Committee recently held a hearing regarding the independent counsel law (PL103-207), set to expire on June 30, unless renewed. Proponents claim that the law, initially created after Nixon dismissed the special prosecutor investigating Watergate, is needed to avoid conflicts of interest between the attorney general and the president. Critics argue the law gives the independent counsel too much power.

Should the law be renewed?

- A. Yes
- B. No
- C. Don't know; don't care

Arizona Secretary of State Betsey Bayless discusses women's issues with Scottsdale Mayor Sam Campana as she leaves the Women's Coalition's breakfast meeting at the University Club on Friday.

Bayless to Women's Coalition breakfasters: 'Help other women'

BY ERLEND AAS
STATE PRESS

Women have come a long way, but there's still another milestone to go before they will have the same opportunities as men, said Arizona Secretary of State Betsey Bayless at the University Club on Friday morning.

Bayless was invited to the ASU Women's Coalition breakfast meeting to speak about her career and educational background to a group of about 60 ASU and local high school students and faculty.

Bayless had a clear message for the women who attended the breakfast.

"One thing you need to do, that I feel very strongly about, is help other women," Bayless said.

Members said Bayless' message hit home.

"The Women's Coalition's main purpose is to help fund and assist existing and future women's organizations," said Marlina Perotte, a bioengineering junior and public relations chair for the coalition.

At the meeting, the coalition presented its first Outstanding Woman of the Year Award to Nonnie Shivers, program coordinator for student advocacy and assistance. Gerri Green, the coalition's treasurer and museum studies graduate student, said Shivers was honored because of her extensive work on behalf of the coalition.

"I'm touched," Shivers said after receiving the award. "It will definitely encourage me to work even harder."

Bayless said she was impressed with the Women's Coalition's work.

"When I was younger, this organization would not have been possible," Bayless said. "In fact, people would have laughed if I said I wanted to form a women's coalition."

Bayless told the audience about herself and the history of a society in which women had limited opportunities.

"I was raised to get married," she said. "A woman was not supposed to have a career back then. When I came out of college in 1966, I was very interested in international banking."

"What I didn't know was that women were not welcomed in professional fields," she said. Bayless experienced this when she worked as a clerk in a local bank in Arizona. Her boss told her the bank was not allowed to promote women and if she wanted a career, she would have to move on, she recollected.

Bayless said she saw other women in government, so she went to ASU to get a master's degree in public administration. That was the springboard to a 17-year-long career with the state of Arizona.

"I moved all the way from the total bottom of the barrel — minimum wage — to be the director of the Department of Administration," Bayless said.

She was elected for two four-year terms to the Maricopa County Board of Supervisors in 1992 and 1996. She resigned in 1998, when she was appointed Secretary of State by Gov. Jane Dee Hull.

Students 'get jiggy' at charity dance marathon

By FAITH MARIN HEIDTKE
STATE PRESS

Dancing the day away is how 60 ASU students spent their Saturday.

From 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. in the Memorial Union Grand Ballroom, about 200 people participated in Dance Marathon, an event to benefit Phoenix Children's Hospital's charity program, Children's Miracle Network.

Dance Marathon was organized by the hospital and several ASU students and raised $7,375, said Michele Perillo, Children's Miracle Network coordinator. The dancers each needed to raise $75 in donations to participate, said Samantha Alper, ASU Dance Marathon chair.

"The event was open to all ASU students, but we worked closely with the Greek system because it was the first year," Perillo said.

She said the hospital proposed the idea to ASU's Panhellenic Council to find volunteers, but she hopes more students will get involved next year.

In addition to dancing, the 12-hour event included raffles, aerobics, games, coloring and food. Every hour was given a different theme, ranging from Disney to '50s and hip-hop to swing. Every 45 minutes, various patients and families told personal stories about their medical experiences and showed videos. About seven to eight families attended the marathon.

"I think the most touching part of the day was hearing the families' stories," said Candida Jacobs, an undecided sophomore. "Especially hearing the kids tell their own stories. It really helped you know how they feel."

The money raised at the event will pay for medical equipment and services used by patients who can't afford health care, Perillo said.

"The money will be used where it is needed most," she said. "The medical administration may decide a new piece of equipment is needed right now and all $7,000 could be used on that, so it's hard to tell how many families the money will help."

Alper said she hopes the event sent out a message to the community about the children's needs.

"These kids have become my inspiration, my heroes," Alper said. "They have more strength at 12 than we (college students) do at 20. These kids fight for their lives every day and events like this will hopefully raise community awareness."

Summit focus: sunnier 'climate for diversity'

By JUNE D. WILHITE
STATE PRESS

ASU students and faculty agreed that the bright sun and cool breeze Saturday morning made for great weather, but much more is necessary for a great cultural climate. More than 200 students and faculty attended workshops at the Campus Climate for Diversity summit. The workshops held in classrooms of the Business College focused on faculty and staff contributions to campus climate, diversity in the ASU curriculum and the unity of student organizations.

"The summit is a unique opportunity for students to address specific issues that are of concern, such as the lack of minority professors," said Kathya N. Hidalgo, a training assistant in the ASU Intergroup Relations Center. "We want to recognize how diversity will play a role in the University's future."

Sylvia Hurtado, an associate professor at the University of Michigan, opened the forum by sharing findings from her research on college campus climates for diversity.

"We now know the costs of institutional neglect and how racism and sexism have an impact on students, inside and outside of the classroom," Hurtado said. "And representation is the beginning of the work that needs to be done — the first step to creating a diverse community."

Changing the behavior of students and faculty will be her next step.

"We have to train our students to survive in a complex of diversity," she said. "They must know how to interact amongst people with social differences."

One student said she enjoyed Hurtado's insight, but her incentive for attending the summit was to break down the walls between ASU and the community outside of it.

"A lot of people see ASU as its own community and we need to change that," said Carmen Rodriguez, a business freshman. "It's important to tear down these walls of isolation and find a connection between all people. We need to be one community."

The summit was sponsored by the Campus Environment Team, Intergroup Relations Center, University Career Women, Ubiquity and the School of Social Work. It was the first of its kind and Hidalgo said the unexpectedly big turnout is a sign that more will be held in the future.

"Our goal will continue to be to bring together students to inform faculty of their needs and their concerns about the climate for diversity on campus," Hidalgo said.

PoliceBeat

for Sunday, March 28

Tempe police reported the following incidents Sunday:

- Police arrested a 32-year-old Chandler man Wednesday at South Hardy Drive and East Guadalupe Road on charges of possession of a stolen vehicle. Officers contacted the man about a hit-and-run accident in Chandler. The man reportedly admitted to his involvement in the accident, but denied any knowledge the car was stolen. After receiving medical treatment related to the accident, he was booked into the Tempe City Jail.
- A 39-year-old transient man was arrested Wednesday at 922 E. Apache Blvd. on charges of criminal trespassing. Police said an officer was present when the man refused an employee's requests that he leave the store. The man was booked into the Tempe City Jail.
- Police arrested a 29-year-old Tempe man Wednesday at 3408 S. Mill Ave. on charges of theft. He reportedly stole a ring from the owner of a residence where he had been staying and pawned it for $42. He was booked into the Tempe City Jail.
- A 25-year-old Glendale man was arrested Wednesday at 417 W. Riviera Drive on charges of theft of a motor vehicle and criminal trespassing. Police said he was hiding at a residence at that location after fleeing a residence in the 400 block of West Laguna Drive, where he was reportedly seen with the stolen vehicle. He was booked into the Tempe City Jail and held to see a judge. Also in the 400 block of West Laguna Drive Wednesday, a 36-year-old Tempe man was arrested on charges of forgery and possession of stolen property. Police said he was in possession of a forged check for $1,455.11. He was booked into the Tempe City Jail.

- Two women, one from Phoenix and the other of undisclosed residence, were robbed at gunpoint late Saturday night at 1000 E. University Drive. The women gave their purses and keys to a heavyset Hispanic male, age 20-30, with short-shaved hair, a mustache and possibly a goatee. The suspect was driving a white Toyota or Nissan early '90s compact car.
- Gumby's Pizza, 2107 S. Rural Road, was robbed early Sunday afternoon by a white male, 5'10" tall, age 20-21, with blond hair and fair skin and wearing a navy-colored sweatshirt and sweat pants. The man showed the manager a butcher's knife and yelled, "Give me all the money!" The manager reportedly recognized the suspect as someone who may have robbed the store on March 22. She told him she would not give him the money as he advanced on her, then he fled and was not found by police and K-9 units.

State Press Guide to ASASU

CANDIDATES

Pages 12 and 13 are devoted to informing you and other readers about candidates campaigning in the Associated Students of ASU elections. All ASASU hopefuls are listed alphabetically within each category. Profiles compiled by State Press reporter Stephanie Paterik.

PRESIDENT

Jenny Holsman

Age: 21

Major: political science

Class level: junior

Years at ASU: 3

Making sure this year's plans are followed through to completion is Holsman's biggest objective if elected. She currently serves as the ASASU government relations director and said implementing teacher evaluations and streamlining graduation requirements are student government programs that must be carried out next year.

"Students should be able to graduate in four years and make educated choices when signing up for classes," she said.

She also wants to attend the Arizona Board of Regents meetings to discover what really concerns students.

"I've met a lot of students who want things done that go unnoticed," she said. "I want to be the student voice and listen to all of their concerns."

Her platform includes creating a longer drop/add period and more academic advising to assist students in registering. She said a safer campus is feasible through additional blue-light phones, lighting and police officers. Benefits for teaching assistants is an issue she said she will work on for graduate students.

Current president of the Panhellenic Council and member of the Student Alumni Association, Holsman has also been a Devil's Advocate, founder of the Women's Coalition, a residential assistant and an ASU cheerleader.

She has lobbied in Washington, D.C., for student issues and helped organize this semester's "Don't Pull the Plug on Higher Education" campaign to support university funding. She has also worked on the student privacy and tuition cap bills currently in the state legislature.

"I pride myself in being a professional in everything I do," she said. "I want to work with as many people as I can, and I'm excited and confident that I can do the things I say I will."

Mike Sosso

Age: 19

Major: political science/economics

Class level: junior

Years at ASU: 2

"I want students to be better represented than they are," Sosso, the current ASASU senator for College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, said.

He said that getting the entire campus to work together, including minorities and international students, will be one of his biggest goals, if elected.

Implementing an ASASU-sponsored scholarship fund would also be one of his priorities, he said, along with creating and a shuttle bus that would take students to and from the airport.

Organizing a book co-op, similar to the bike co-op, is another goal Sosso said he would like to start working on.

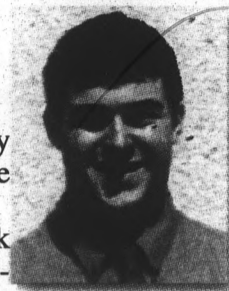

"With this, students could trade books back and forth instead of selling them to the bookstore and paying high prices to get new ones," he said.

He said the co-op would be a huge undertaking, but could be completed within three years.

Another platform idea he has is holding ASASU officers accountable by running ads in the State Press to let students know what they are doing and where money is being spent. He said students can then provide ASASU with feedback.

Sosso is a Freshman Year Experience tutor, Devils Advocate, leadership scholar and member of Colin Powell's National Youth Advisory Board, for which he evaluates Congress' youth-related legislation. Sosso added he has "a lot to offer in terms of leadership."

"I have a true desire to lead the campus," he said. "It is my caring nature that will allow me to succeed."

EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT

Robert Sistak

Age: 21

Major: civil engineering

Class level: junior

Years at ASU: 4

Sistak said he's most concerned about "saving all students' pocketbooks."

As current ASASU senator for the College of Engineering, he has been working with the state Legislature to ensure that the University is adequately funded. He said he also wants to ensure that ASU's organizations are better funded.

"As a senator and the appropriations chairman, I have worked extensively with campus groups," he said. "Simply, we just don't have enough money to give. I want to get extra funding to allow them to do what they want to do on and for the campus."

He said he plans to do this by talking with administrators about the clubs' budget demands and by shifting money from other areas of the ASASU budget.

He said he is an advocate of the tuition cap bill that is currently in the state Legislature, which would limit the amount that the Arizona Board of Regents could increase tuition each year. He is also currently working on university privacy issues with the state and said he will continue until ASU stops using Social Security numbers as student ID numbers.

"The (executive vice president) position is definitely one that requires past experience," he said. "You have to know the budget and how to run a meeting inside out. That's something I've already had to learn."

Susan Webb

Age: 19

Major: English

Class level: sophomore

Years at ASU: 2

"I'd love to be involved in the issues of our campus and listen to what students' concerns are," Webb said. "I am always talking to people."

She said her main goal, if elected, would be to create more scholarships for students.

"Finances can be one of the biggest hindrances," she said. "It can be the biggest problem for those who don't graduate. They simply don't have enough money to stay in school."

She said she believes students learn the most from campus clubs and organizations, which is why she would like to see more money allotted for their activities.

"Clubs are such a nice opportunity to get leadership experience. It is a really easy way for (students) to get involved, and I want to support that in any way I can," she said.

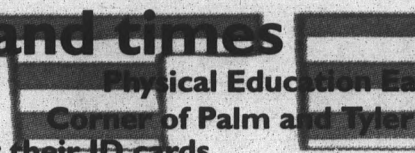

Although she's never been involved in any campus clubs, Webb said she doesn't consider this a hindrance.

"I'm committed to the job," she said. "That's really why I'm running."

CAMPUS AFFAIRS VICE PRESIDENT

John Chase

Age: 19
Major: political science/broadcasting
Class level: sophomore
Year at ASU: 2

"The Campus Affairs Office does the most advocacy and meaningful programs for students," Chase said, giving that as the reason he wants to make the transition from ASASU senator to an executive officer.

He currently represents the Honors College in ASASU and founded the Political Education Coalition. He's participated in Leadership 2000 and is a member of Allies in Action, which both aim to promote diversity on campus.

"I want to hire a diverse staff," he said. "I am going to target people who are not just ethnically diverse, but in perspectives and experiences."

He said he would like to make the department more advocacy focused through new programming and existing services.

"I want to create critical issues programming that is not only entertaining but focused on issues that affect our lives," he said. "And we can build up partnerships through these events."

His best qualification is his "ability to think outside the book, not just to look for the same solutions over and over again as ASASU has a tendency to do," he said.

"I like to get to know people and I'm proactive. This job is not one of maintaining the same programs, but it's one of growth and having a vision of what it could be."

James Hadeed

Age: 20
Major: business
Class level: junior
Years at ASU: 3

Hadeed said his experience in campus clubs and business make him most qualified for the position.

He's been the vice president of campus affairs for Hall Council, which serves the residence halls, and has also run his own lawn mowing business.

"My numerous years of experience have taught me about working with groups, setting goals and being realistic in how to achieve them," he said

Interning in Washington, D.C., for a political consulting group and serving as vice president of fundraising for Habitat for Humanity have also added to his management and interpersonal skills, he said.

He wants the opportunity to work on expanding the use of the Sun Card to provide students with discounts at stores along Mill Avenue, which could give students more options and create competition for Sodexo-Marriott — ASU's food service provider.

He said he would also like to increase Internet access around campus and implement a gift certificate program that students could use towards campus services.

"I would also like to, in some way, have voting tied to registration so that you would vote for ASASU officers when you register for classes," he said. "It would make voting more accessible and it would increase participation."

ACTIVITIES VICE PRESIDENT

Courtney Quinn

Age: 18
Major: political science
Class level: freshman
Years at ASU: 1

Quinn said considering ASU's size, the campus should produce the best events in the state and if elected, her goal will be to draw crowds to campus

"We spent thousands of dollars on homecoming and Brother Jed the mall preacher draws a bigger crowd than we do by hurling insults," she said.

She added that UofA produces the largest student-run Spring carnival in the nation, but "according to our demographics, we should be doing that."

She currently works for the Activities Office and is helping organize Mardi Gras.

"I want to see someone who's actually going to work for the position," she said. "I'm not just going for the namesake."

Expanding the Student Advisory Board is her biggest goal. She said it would consist of representatives from all 400 clubs on campus that could meet regularly to exchange ideas and organize programs.

"The more people we have involved, pooling their resources, the bigger our events will become," she said.

She said she would like to hire a coordinator to work with the multicultural director under the umbrella of the Activities Office. The coordinator, she said, would act as a liaison between the student government and international students and help promote diverse events.

Mario DeLaCruz

Age: 19
Major: broadcasting
Class level: sophomore
Years at ASU: 2
 (write-in candidate)

Diversity is something DeLaCruz thinks ASU thrives on — and he said the leadership should, too.

"I feel that with as diverse of a student population as we have, we should have much more diverse representation," he said. "Because I've been involved in many different groups and activities, I would be able to represent a number of interest groups on campus."

He is a residential assistant, president of the Lambda Theta Phi Latin Fraternity, a member of the ASU gospel choir, a tutor for America Reads and founder of SPEAK, Students Pursuing Equality And Knowledge.

He said he would better represent the University's many cultures by sponsoring programs that address issues of diversity and culture.

"Although we have a diverse population here, we don't utilize it," he said. "Our learning experience should not just be in the classroom, but outside as well."

Among his qualifications, he said his involvement in so many organizations is the strongest.

"By being so close to the students, I've heard a lot of their concerns," he said. "I have the leadership skills to really make an impact on the student's lives as an executive officer."

GRADUATE STUDENT AFFAIRS VICE PRESIDENT

Ken-ichi Maruyama

Age: 26
Major: public administration
Class level: graduate student
Years at ASU: 3

As the current GSAVP, Maruyama is the third student to hold the position since its creation in 1996 and is running unopposed.

His main goal is to represent the needs of graduate students and continue to make them aware of services ASASU provides. This year, he has organized a mass e-mail for 7,000 graduate students to send them frequent updates about what the student government is doing.

"I want them to know what's going on in ASASU," he said. "It's very helpful for students who can't pick up the paper because they're not on campus every day."

In the fall he said he wants to meet and work with more of the students he represents.

He said he believes that not all students understand the importance of his office.

"I want to prove the importance," he said. "I want to focus on what graduate students contribute to the campus and be the best voice for them."

Boilermakers win 1st national title

By DOUG FLANAGAN
STATE PRESS

Purdue knew at halftime of Monday's championship game against Duke that beating the Blue Devils would not be an easy task, especially considering the Boilermakers had just put up some of the worst first-half offensive numbers in NCAA title game history.

But for Purdue seniors Stephanie White-McCarty and Ukari Figgs, responding to adversity and sticking through tough times to achieve glory is nothing new.

The All-American pair, which both stayed at West Lafayette, Ind., amongst three coaching changes in their four years while other prominent teammates to transfer, carried the Boilermakers' second-half run to their first ever national championship, 62-45.

Figgs, who scored 24 points in Friday's semifinal victory over Louisiana Tech, struggled badly in the first half on Monday, going 0-7 from the field as Purdue as a team scored just 17 points, a championship game record-low for one half.

But Figgs scored 18 points in the second half, six coming in a 12-1 run that pulled the Boilermakers from behind and put them ahead to stay. Figgs made five her eight second-half shots and was named the outstanding player of the Final Four.

"Again, Ukari Figgs showed the great leader that she is," Purdue head coach Carolyn Peck said to ESPN after the game. "She stepped up big for this team, and the rest followed suit."

"I knew I came out and let my team down in the first half," Figgs said. "I wasn't being aggressive to the basket. I was settling for some outside shots, and they weren't falling for me. I knew I had 20 minutes to be a winner or loser, and I wanted us to go out winners."

White-McCarty, until spraining her ankle with four minutes to play, was also steady, scoring 12 points.

"I think we're really excited," she said. "I'm just so happy for this team. We've come so far, and everybody just stepped up and played great. Ukari carried us. It means a lot. This is what we stayed for — the opportunity (to win a title)."

After Lin Dunn's resignation after the 1995-96 season, guard Michelle Erickson and center Michelle Van Gorp, among others, elected to switch schools rather than adjust to another coaching change. Erickson and Van Gorp elected to transfer to Duke, which entered the tourney as a three seed, defeated three-time defending national champion Tennessee in the East Regional final and was attempting to win a title in the same year that its male counterparts are going for a ring.

The Blue Devils took a 22-17 halftime lead after a first half filled with turnovers and missed shots and was up 30-28 when Purdue started clicking by driving the ball to the basket instead of settling for jump shots, as the Boilermakers had done previously.

Van Gorp's layup drew Duke to 42-38 with 7:48 left, but Purdue guard Katie Douglas sank a trey to widen the lead again, and the Blue Devils would not get closer than five again.

I tell you what, it's the highest," said Peck, whose brief two-year stint at Purdue is now finished as she will join the expansion Orlando franchise in the WNBA. "This team has done this all year long. They stood behind their teammates. They play hard for each other."

"I still don't know (to feel) yet," Purdue center Camille Cooper said. "I'm trying to take it all in. It's something we worked for. I'm just so proud for our team. It was a great win."

Long ball kills Sun Devils in Pac-10 openers

By CHRIS CARLOCK
STATE PRESS

The ASU softball team was hoping to get off to a good start in the Pac-10 season. They did just that by winning its first game against Oregon State 3-0.

But it was all down hill from there.

"It was pretty brutal," head coach Linda Wells said after her Sun Devils (30-7) lost three games in a row to go to 1-3 in the Pac-10.

Coming into the weekend ranked third in the nation, ASU had relied on timely hitting and dominating pitching in climbing to its highest national ranking in school history. Neither was evident against Oregon on Saturday as the Sun Devils were crushed 8-1 and 7-2. Pitchers Kirsten Voak, Erica Beach and Kathy Ponce combined to surrender 26 hits and seven home runs in two games.

"Home run balls killed us," Wells said.

Voak (17-4) was rocked for seven earned runs in five innings, including four home runs in the first game against Oregon (27-10, 2-2 Pac-10) on Saturday. To Voak's credit, she was not feeling well, but the four home runs given up bring her season total to 13, a number that shows the freshman sensation is human after all.

The Ducks came into the game having launched 37 bombs in 35 games, but the Sun Devils weren't planning on having to get their necks examined after watching so many balls fly out of the yard.

"I don't know (if) we were surprised that they would hit it out," Wells said. "We were more surprised with how often they hit it out."

The Sun Devil offense didn't help matters. The potent lineup, which came into the weekend batting over .300, scored only eight runs in four games.

"I'm more used to this team putting up eight runs in a game. So to put up eight runs in four games? Ouch," she said. "Our offense was really disappointing all weekend."

ASU started off on the right foot with an opening 3-0 win over Oregon State Friday night. Beach hit her fourth home run of the season, a two-run shot in the first inning to give the Sun Devils all they would need. Voak took care of the rest as she fanned seven batters en route to winning her 17th game of the season.

In the nightcap, Oregon State capitalized on four Sun Devil errors and held off a late ASU rally for a 3-2 win. Run scoring ground-rule doubles by Voak and Andrea Rodgers brought the Sun Devils within one run in the bottom of the seventh, but Rodgers was left stranded at second as ASU fell to 1-1 in the conference.

After the 8-1 pounding the Sun Devils took from Oregon in the first game Saturday, hopes were high for gaining a weekend split. But hope alone doesn't win ball games and the Sun Devils fell 7-2. After tying the score at two in the second inning, the Ducks scored a run in the fourth and four runs over the next three innings off of Beach to sweep ASU. Beach (12-4) allowed 14 hits, including two home runs and the Sun Devil offense could only plate two runs despite collecting nine hits.

Things won't get any easier for ASU as second-ranked UofA comes to town next Saturday. The Wildcats swept Oregon and split with Oregon State.

"As a team (that's) struggling with pitching, (UofA is) probably as easy as we're going to face," Wells said. "There's 24 (games left in the Pac-10) and every one will be this hard or harder."

Notes

Nichole Thompson extended her hitting streak to 14 games with hits in each of the four weekend games. The three consecutive losses are the first time the Sun Devils have lost consecutive games all season. The loss to Oregon State saw an eight-game ASU winning streak snapped.

ASU whips Bears in emotionally-charged contest

BY PERCY EDNALINO JR.
STATE PRESS

It's a typical formality after every sporting event for players on both teams to meet midway and exchange handshakes. The postgame handshake is typically viewed as both a sign of good sportsmanship and that no hard feelings exist.

But that wasn't entirely the case Sunday afternoon, when the No. 20 ASU baseball team handed California a 19-11 whipping in front of 2,919 fans at Packard Stadium. That's not to say Cal acted like a poor sport, but hard feelings definitely exist between the two clubs.

After the game, Cal assistant coach Scott Murray was the team's lone representative to exchange handshakes with ASU's players.

"They didn't want to shake hands," ASU head coach Pat Murphy simply said of Cal's players and coaches. "Sometimes when emotions are running high, it's better not to shake hands."

And how. All weekend long, ASU had given Cal plenty of fits. The Sun Devils opened the series with a 12-10 win, followed by a 25-0 shellacking on Saturday night. Saturday's win was ASU's sixth shutout win of the season, which is four shy of the school record of 10 set in 1976.

But for Cal, the 25-0 loss translated into bad feelings toward ASU on Sunday.

In the fifth inning, ASU pitcher Chad Pennington hit Cal's Jason Williams with a pitch after Williams had called for a time out. The beaming, which ASU designated hitter Casey Myers said was unintentional, prompted heated words from Cal's players and coaches.

Later that inning, Cal pitcher Jason Dennis retaliated and plunked Willie Bloomquist in the back with his first pitch. The act resulted in ejections for both Dennis and Cal head coach Bob Milano.

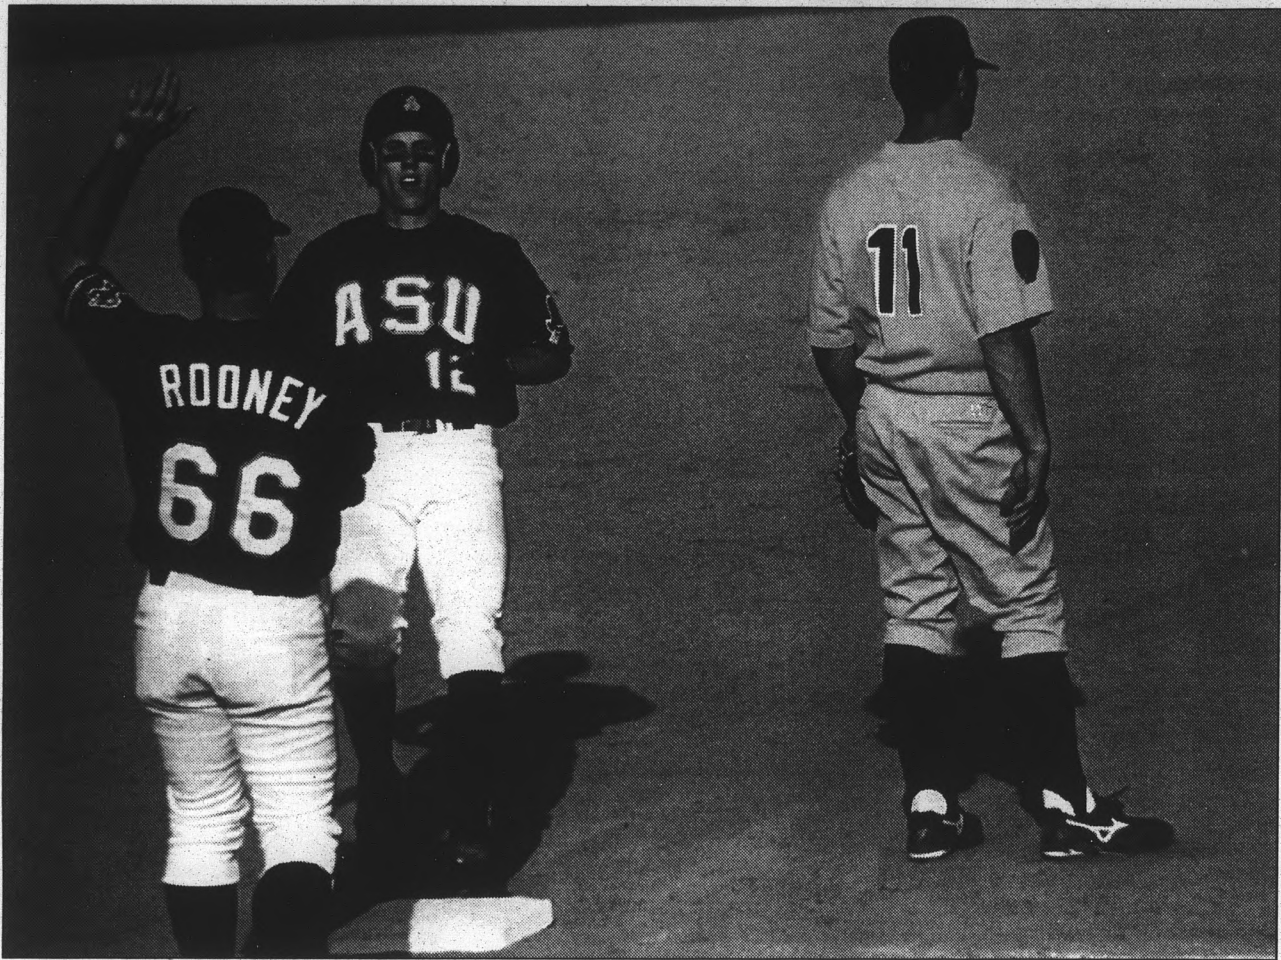

Myers said the Sun Devils tend to play confidently against Cal, which may have added to the high emotions. For the past three seasons, ASU has notched a 13-1 record against the Bears.

"Because we have been doing so well, we can come out and expect to win (against Cal)," Myers said. "Against Stanford, it's just the opposite where you think you can win, but you don't know it."

With the series sweep, the Sun Devils (27-11, 3-3 Pac-10) pulled back into the middle of the conference. Murphy said he was pleased with the way his team played, especially since Cal entered the weekend having defeated No. 17 Long Beach St. on the road.

Myers said ASU's three losses at Stanford earlier this month in the conference opener had put the Sun Devils toward the bottom of the Pac-10 standings. But with the wins, Myers said the team is now poised and confident enough to claw to the top.

"We're in a lot better position now than from where we

ASU leftfielder Jay Sitzman pulls into third base with a triple in the ninth inning of ASU's 19-11 win over Cal on Sunday.

Leah Fasten of the State Press were," Myers said. "It was really good for us to shine and get these three wins."

But Murphy said he's not going to start celebrating just yet.

"This league is so tough that you just play it one day at a time," Murphy said. "We scored a lot of runs (Saturday) and we came back out focused again today and kept the pressure on them."

ASU pitcher Eric Doble (1-1) was credited with the win. Doble gave up only one run and one hit in the fourth. Cal's Jason Ball (2-2) absorbed the loss.

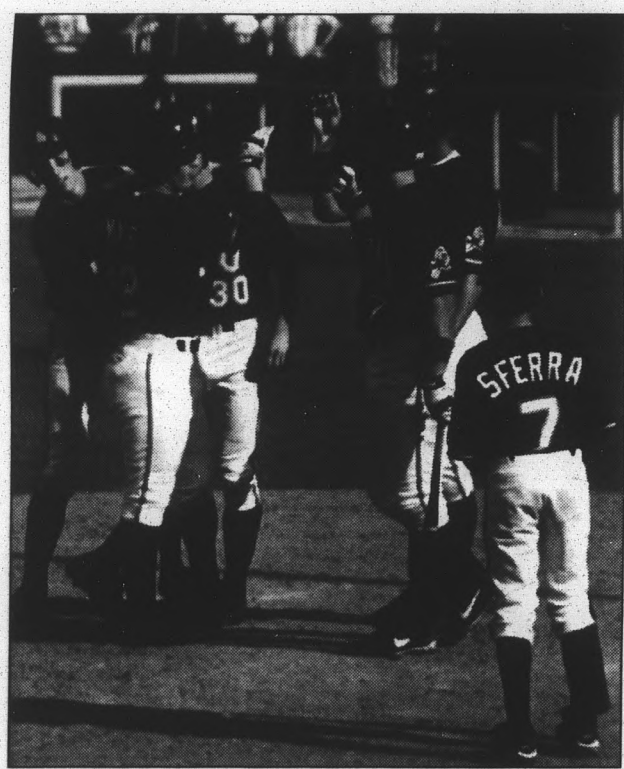

Sunday's game was a breakthrough for Myers (see sidebar, who was a Sporting News first-team freshman All-American. Previously this season, Myers had been struggling, but not to a point where Murphy was worried.

"It's been coming," Murphy said. "He struggled a little bit early but it's been coming, there's no question about it. We stuck with him. He knows how to hit but when he's going bad, he can look pretty bad. Some people probably look out there and say, 'Wow, there's the (No. 4) hitter at Arizona State?'"

Myers said he doesn't bear any hard feeling toward Cal.

"I'm kind of anti-confrontational," he said. "When you get a team down like that — and this is my thought — you don't really want to get into a confrontation because you might spur them on. If you're beating them bad, you keep beating them. But you don't want to rub their noses into it and we never try to rub anyone's noses into it."

"Penny" comes through in relief

BY NICK PIECORO
STATE PRESS

It turned out to be a pretty productive weekend for ASU pitcher Chad Pennington.

Suffering from a nagging abdominal injury for about five weeks now, Pennington was considered a question mark by ASU coach Pat Murphy.

But Murphy went to Pennington in the ninth to record the final out of ASU's 12-10 win over Cal and also had him pitch four innings in Sunday's 19-11 win.

Pennington struck out the only batter he faced on Friday to earn his second save of the year.

Then on Sunday, Murphy decided against starting Pennington and instead gave the ball to Jon Switzer. After three innings from Switzer and short stints by Charlie Williamson and Eric Doble (who picked up his first career win), Murphy brought in Pennington with the score 9-6 in ASU's favor.

The reason for not starting Pennington was simple.

"We wanted to have somebody for the end," Murphy said. "We knew he couldn't go nine, so we'd rather have him the last five."

Pennington allowed an unearned run in the sixth, blanking Cal in the fifth, seventh and eighth innings. Pennington had a rough ninth inning, facing four batters without recording an out. He did strike out Cal first baseman Clint Hoover for what would have been the first out of the ninth, but Hoover took first on a wild pitch.

Pennington, who said he felt fine after both outings, finished with seven strikeouts in four innings and allowed four earned runs.

Mighty Casey

Casey Myers' third inning single on Sunday extended his hitting streak to 12 consecutive games. But that's a footnote to what he did in his last two at bats.

The score was 10-7 in the bottom of the sixth inning and the bases were loaded when Myers came to the plate. Myers took a 2-1 fastball deep to right-center field for a grand slam.

"I was sitting fastball," Myers said. "I just got it up into the jet streams. I didn't hit it all that great. I got enough of it."

The bomb came after Cal shortstop Jason Williams booted a routine grounder that would have been the third out. Cal was never even close after Myers' homer.

"It was a real turning point," Murphy said. "That definitely changed the game."

Myers, the designated hitter on Sunday, also connected in the ninth inning for a homer. This one was a two-run shot that landed in nearly the same spot as his other home run. The sophomore finished the day 3 for 5 with seven RBI.

Myers is starting to swing the bat more like he did last season, when he hit .386 with eight homers and 56 RBI. That could mean a lot to ASU's success.

"He struggled a little bit early, but it was coming, there's no question about it," Murphy said.

Myers came in hitting .327 and he's now hitting .351 with four homers and 34 RBI.

"It's a real plus for our ballclub to have our four-hole hitter swinging the bat the way he can," Murphy said.

Gymnasts' lofty score not enough as ASU falls to Wildcats

BY CHRIS CARLOCK
STATE PRESS

By no means is it the end of the world, but it would have been nice for the ASU gymnastics team to end its regular season with a victory over its rival. Don't expect the Sun Devils to lose any sleep over it, though, as their 195.950 score would have won a meet on most nights.

It took the Wildcats greatest gymnastics performance in school history to out-distance the Sun Devils 196.300-195.950 in front of 1,175 fans at the McKale Center in Tucson Friday night. The UofA score was a school record and may have kept its slim postseason hopes alive.

"It was senior night and the gymnasts wanted to do well," UofA head coach Bill Rayden said. "At this point, I feel very good about our prospects for postseason action."

The Sun Devils know they are already in one of the eight NCAA Regionals. The question now is which one. Before the meet it looked as if ASU would travel to Penn State, and its score on Friday did nothing to hurt its standing. The regional pairings will be announced today and they will take place April 9-10. The top two teams from each regional will advance to the NCAA Championships in Salt Lake City, Utah on April 22.

Last season, under a different format, the Sun Devils earned the final spot in the NCAA Championships before finishing sixth in the nation.

Against the Wildcats on Friday, ASU (10-5, 4-3 Pac-10) never led after falling behind 48.7-48.375 after the first rotation. UofA (11-8-1, 6-5-1) used season highs in the vault (48.7), bars (49.375) and beam (49.175) to defeat ASU. The Sun Devils won the beam with an impressive 49.450 and floor exercise (49.475).

Freshman Rhonda Robinette shattered her previous career high in the beam by scoring a second-place 9.900, a great sign for the Sun Devils as the post season looms. Elizabeth McNabb tied Robinette's 9.9 in one of her strongest beam performances of the season. Elizabeth Reid landed a season best 9.95 in the floor exercise to win that event while McNabb finished second with a 9.925. Wendy Ellsberry led the Sun Devils in the uneven bars by tying her career high of 9.9 in a second place finish. Kelly Christensen led the Sun Devils in the vault with a third place 9.800.

The Sun Devils have next weekend off before traveling to their yet-to-be-determined site for the NCAA Regionals.

Singles matches fatal to men's tennis team

By ROBERT DEAL
STATE PRESS

A glorious weekend turned disappointing when the Sun Devil men's tennis team followed a 6-1 blowout over No. 31 Cal to a heartbreaking 4-3 loss to No. 4 Stanford.

For the second time in two weeks, the ASU team managed to win more matches than its opponents, but due to the doubles point rule, drop the dual. After winning all three doubles matches, the singles proved to be the Sun Devils' demise as they were unable to finish the job against the high-ranked Cardinal team.

"This was a tough one to swallow," senior Casey Was said. "We're going to win the next one."

The match started out well for the Sun Devils as they dominated the doubles courts. It looked promising when the Sun Devils seemed to have the dual in hand, winning three straight matches.

"We got blown out in doubles," Stanford head coach Dick Gould said. "What I saw on the doubles courts here today is better than I've seen in a long time. This could have been a clinic on how to play doubles tennis as far as I'm concerned."

On the front court, ASU's nationally 27th-ranked doubles team of senior Jeff Williams and junior Ed Carter held nothing back from their nationally second-ranked opponents K.J. Hippensteel and Ryan Wolters as they upset the Cardinal duo 8-6.

The second and third courts proved even more despairing for Stanford as the Sun Devils took break after break to tear down their opponents.

On court No. 2, ASU's senior Gustavo Marcaccio and junior Alex Osterrieth upset the country's No. 13 doubles-team of Geoff Abrams and Alex Kim 8-2.

The same results were found on court No. 3, where the Sun Devil team of Was and senior Tim Hammond managed to quickly defeat the Cardinal's Ali Ansari and Scotty Scott 8-2.

"We played as well as I've seen us play on the doubles courts this afternoon," ASU head Coach Lou Belken said.

ASU followed its promising start strong as most players found early leads on the singles courts. Lack of enthusiasm, mixed with intense competition, got the better of the players as they were only able to pull out two of the six matches.

With the dual match tied at 3-3, the fate of the two teams once again came down upon the shoulders of Osterrieth. Osterrieth, who had previously clinched a third-set victory to give ASU its historic first win over UCLA in January, was unable to repeat the incident against the nation's 40th-ranked Abrams, who dominated the third set, winning 4-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Following the doubles, Stanford managed to strike quickly on the fourth and sixth courts to take a 2-1 lead in the dual. On court No. 4, Stanford's 47th-ranked Kim broke early to finish off Carter in straight sets 6-3, 6-2. The case was much the same on court No. 6 where Ansari defeated Hammond in similar manner, 6-1, 6-4.

ASU holds 1st scrimmage, shakes off rust

By JOE MANTONE
STATE PRESS

Rusty is the word ASU safety Willie Daniel used to describe his team's performance at Saturday's scrimmage.

"We got a long way to go," Daniel said. "We're making a lot of physical mistakes that need to be corrected."

Daniel added that some of the miscues at the scrimmage — which was witnessed by about 400 people — could have been caused by fatigue.

"We were little wore down from the week," he said. The Sun Devils practiced last Monday, Tuesday and Thursday.

Head coach Bruce Snyder noticed his team lost some of its edge as the day progressed.

"Early on they had a lot of enthusiasm, and they hit each other," Snyder said. "But the longer it went we started to get some guys banged up, and it got a little more difficult."

Sophomore linebacker Mason Unck hurt his shoulder and senior cornerback Jamel Ready hurt his ankle. Both did not finish the scrimmage.

Ready is the second cornerback to be forced to the sidelines this week with an injury. During Wednesday's practice junior Christon Rance hurt his knee.

"We got a couple of guys down in the secondary," Daniel said. "But it's only spring. Hopefully, they'll be ready for the fall."

Although it is still early, Snyder said ASU could use more depth at corner.

"We're really shallow at that position," Snyder said. "And we were thin to start with. It's really difficult to judge the corner right now."

Although nothing has been confirmed, Rance's injury looks to be the most serious.

"It wasn't a hit or anything," Snyder said about Rance's knee. "He was just running and it gave out on him. We held him out of the scrimmage completely."

Perry Edinger, director of the ASU's trainers, said Rance was being evaluated and his status would be known this morning.

But no matter what the results are, don't expect to see Rance in pads until at least the summer.

"We're going to plan not to practice him the rest of the spring," Snyder said. "I think they're going to have to go in and take care of it."

Against the depleted secondary, junior quarterback Ryan Kealy impressed Snyder.

"Kealy did a nice job of managing his team," Snyder said. "(Junior) Gerald Green also made some nice runs. He fumbled once, but he hit the hole nicely."

The play of sophomore tight end Todd Heap also pleased Snyder.

On the other side of the ball, junior defensive end Quincy Yancy intercepted a pass from sophomore quarterback Matt Cooper. The Sun Devils' defense also received some strong play from its safeties.

"(Sophomore) Alfred Williams made some nice tackles," Snyder said. "Willie Daniel missed some, but he did make some nice tackles too."

"Overall the scrimmage went fine. But it's certainly not a standard by which you what to play next season."

Scheduling for 2000
The Sun Devils have added Colorado State to their 2000 schedule. The Rams are slated to visit Sun Devil Stadium on Sept. 16, 2000.

Colorado State and ASU used to play against each other every year when both schools were members of the Western Athletic Conference.

ASU beat the Rams 31-20 the last time these two teams played in 1990. The Sun Devils have won 19 of the last 20 meetings.

Sun Devil swimmers finish 16th at national championships

FROM STAFF REPORTS

The ASU's men's swimming and diving team finished 16th at the NCAA Championships in Indianapolis.

The Auburn men's swim team scored 467.5 points and won its second NCAA title in three years. Tiger head coach David Marsh was named Coach of the Year.

"I was like a cat on a hot stove Saturday night," Marsh said. "The relays played a crucial role. The fun thing about it was that there were different heroes on each different relay."

Auburn won a total of seven events, including four of the five relays and three individual events.

Auburn, who won the men's crown in 1997, placed an exclamation point on the meet by winning the final event, the 400-yard freestyle relay, in NCAA and U.S. Open record time. The team of Brock Newman, Brett Hawke, Aaron Ciarla and Romain Barnier swam a 2:50.90 to break the 1994 record of 2:51.07 by Texas.

"This is such an unbelievable feeling," said Newman, a senior. "Everyone of our guys were so motivated and focused this was our goal all year. When I came to Auburn, I thought we'd have a shot at winning the national title before I was done, but never in a million years would I have believed that we would win two national titles and finish second the other two years."

Four Pac-10 teams finished in the top six. Stanford, the defending champion, finished second with 467.5. Cal was third 356.5. UofA finished fourth (296) and USC placed sixth with 286.5.

ASU senior Francisco Sanchez finished seventh in the 50-yard freestyle and 12th in the 100-yard free. Sun Devil sophomore Travis Leyenhorst, who transferred from Auburn, tied for 15th in the 100-yard breastroke.

Senior Fiona Daly bends over and eventually clears the bar during the high jump at the Baldy Castillo Invitational. With this jump, Daly won the event and posted an NCAA provisional mark with a 5 feet 10.75 inches and won the competition. Samaruddin Stewart of the State Press

Newly-found depth put to test at Baldy

BY JOE MANTONE
STATE PRESS

The two-day Baldy Castillo Invitational tested the depth of the ASU track and field team.

With the distance races on Friday night and the rest of the events on Saturday, several of the runners from the 12 schools ran on the Sun Angel Stadium track both days. Sun Devil sophomore David Burke was one of them.

The media guide describes Burke as a distance runner that "adds depth to the team." And that's just what he did this weekend.

The sophomore didn't win a race. He finished fifth in the 1500 meters and the 800. But in both events he ran on the heels of his teammates.

In the 1500, ASU's Brandon Strong's 3:49.70 placed him fourth, and the time edged Burke's 3:50.20. In the 800, Strong, Sun Devil senior Vondre Armour and Burke ran in a tight pack and finished three, four and five, respectively.

Once again Burke (1:51.86) was a less than a second behind Strong (1:51.20), and Armour was sandwiched between them with a 1:51.44.

"Burke had an outstanding meet," head coach Greg Kraft said.

By Burke's standards that could be an understatement.

The sophomore bettered his 1998 personal record in the 800 (1:55.70) by almost four seconds, and he beat his '98 PR in the 1500 (3:54.86) by more than four seconds.

"Those are the type of people who really help you score points at the Pac-10 (Championship)," Kraft said.

Burke would have given the Sun Devils some points at the Baldy, but team scores weren't kept. Nevertheless, Kraft said people like Burke deserve more credit.

"The Marcus Brunsons, the Tony Berrians, the Dawnyell Linders, they're all known quantities," the coach said. "You really need those other runners."

However, the Sun Devils' known qualities made themselves a little more know this weekend.

Running in his first 100 in an outdoor competition, the sophomore, Brunson, won with a 10.20. This ties him for second with Dwayne Evens on ASU's all-time list. Ron Brown owns the fastest time with a 10.15.

Berrian was also a victorious sophomore sprinter. He was first in the 200m (21.19) and 400m (45.92).

On the women's side, sophomore

Christie Winkle captured the women's 100 with a 11.79. Senior Dawnyell Linder clocked a 23.65 and finished first in the 200. Linder was second in the 400 (54.06).

"I haven't run the 400 in about two years," Linder said. "I was disappointed my time could have been better."

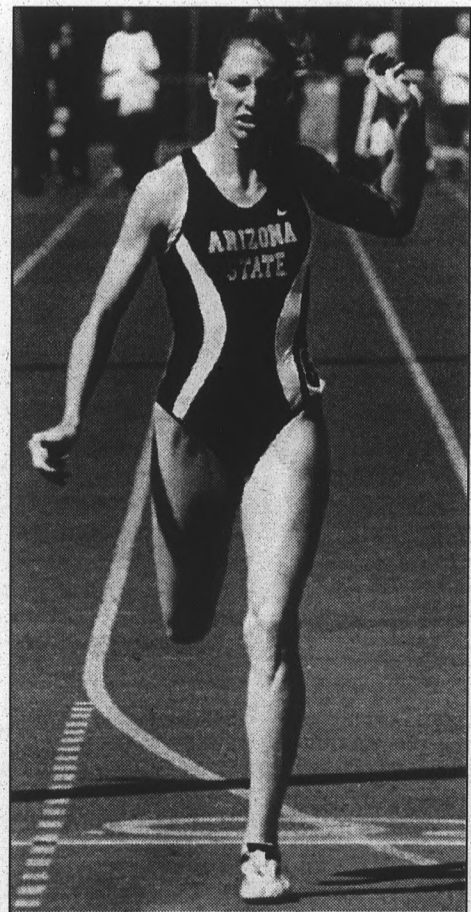

In the field events, senior Fiona Daly posted an NCAA provisional mark with a jump of five feet 10.75 inches in the high jump. Freshman Olivia Mazzaglia won the women's pole vault, clearing 10 feet eight inches.

Also for the women senior Priscilla Hein held off Michigan's Katie McGregor in back-to-back days.

Hein won the 1500 with a 4:22.9. McGregor was second with a 4:27.5. In the 800, Hein's 2:09.93 was good enough for fifth while McGregor's 2:10.06 placed her sixth.

"Priscilla ran well against good competition," said Kraft, who added that this meet saw some talented athletes.

"The Michigans and Indianas like to come to the nice weather," Kraft said. "And the format (of the meet) really shows teams what they need to do for the NCAA and conference championships."

Samaruddin Stewart of the State Press
Sophomore Christie Winkle crosses the finish first in the 100-meters. Winkle ran a 11.79 at the Baldy Castillo Invitational.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by Sidney Omarr

Monday, March 29, 1999

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Wait and listen — it is not necessary to rush to judgment. Your Mars ruler assures you are not afraid, will fight when cause is right. Pisces person claims, "I have your number."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You'll state, "There is no substitute for writing." Moon position coincides with display of passion. People comment, "When you feel it is right, you really do take action." Do so.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Reach beyond the immediate, blend humor with sarcasm. Those who belittled you in past will now seek your favor. You will be invited to join international organization. Libra involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Toss aside preconceived notions — you're entering new cycle, act in independent manner. You'll be told, "You are dynamic, original and sexy." Leo, Aquarius persons play major roles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Elements of timing, luck ride with you. Sense of direction restored, you know where you want to go and how to reach destination. Marital status figures prominently, involves Cancer, Capricorn persons.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Diversify, experiment, explore — you'll be encouraged to travel by Sagittarian. You could start a diary, you could write article and it probably will be accepted by leading journal. Gemini involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Tear down in order to rebuild — some consider you avant-garde, others say you are very lucky. Moon position relates to secrets, industrial spying. Taurus, Leo, Scorpio persons play roles. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New events are somehow related to you. Don't be afraid to speak up, all of us want to hear your views. Read, write, teach, disseminate information. Trip out of town relates to flirtation, romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Concern over family safety is commendable — there is a long way to go, you did right thing in taking first step. Domestic adjustment featured, could include marital status. Libra involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid heavy-handed methods — gentle treatment brings out best in others. You'll be dealing with sensitive Pisces who will cry if you so much as raise your voice. You could present master illusion show.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Show gratitude to one who helped when most needed. Don't be shy about saying, "I will never forget how you came through for me." Earning power increases, love power also is in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Finish what your start, check legal aspects of enterprise. You receive proposals, career, partnership, marriage. Look beyond the immediate, participate in political-charitable campaigns.

IF MARCH 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are a puzzle to many - some admire you for your ability while others denigrate you. Your intuitive intellect is honed to razor-sharpness. You are fascinated by mantic arts and sciences, including astrology. Current cycle relates to where you live, increased earnings, marital status.
